Talk it over

Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown, right, and David Castillo, jail administrator, pause to look over a report on the number of inmates in custody in the jail.

County alternative work program may ease over-crowded jail here

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

While the state wrestles with the problem of crowded prisons, Deaf Smith County is addressing a similar situation. The only difference is in the scale.

The story of crowded state prisons translates to crowded county jails, in part because persons convicted of felonies and sentenced to prison are held in the county until space opens in prisons.

At a recent meeting of county commissioners, more than one official referred to what was called the "bottom line -- build more jail space."

Deaf Smith jail administrator David Castillo told commissioners that only one prisoner could be taken from the county to a state prison this month.

In the meantime, the county is housing 27 persons who should be in a state institution.

The county is paid $20 per day per inmate up to a specified number of days. Then the rate rises to $30 per day but officials said that even the maximum does not cover the cost of holding the prisoner.

To relieve the jail of the burden of too many men and women, a new program will be put into service in a very few weeks: Non-violent inmates will be assigned to SPAW, identified as Supervised Prisoner Alternative Work program.

Persons placed in SPAW will stay in their own homes but report daily for nine hours of work on county or other community projects.

Deaf Smith County Judge Tom Simons at the April 12 meeting of Commissioners' Court outlined the program, calling it "a small thing we can do" to relieve the jail situation.

Jail population has escalated in the last nine years from an average of 40.2 inmates per day in 1984 to an average of 83.9 inmates in 1992.

With jail expansion in the 1980s, at a cost of $1.5 million, the number of beds was almost doubled, from 48 to 93. But, Castillo finds daily cause for concern about numbers because the Texas Jail Standards Commission has criteria that must be met.

"We're not supposed to be at more than 75 percent capacity for proper classifying of prisoners," said Castillo.

So far, the Jail Standards Commission has not withdrawn certification because of crowded conditions, but officials privately admit they are holding their breath.

In addition to the new program being installed, Castillo has taken advantage of a state program called Parole in Absentia which allows prisoners to be paroled from county jail when they have successfully completed a portion of their prison sentence.

Besides inmates serving sentences from county and district courts and those awaiting transfer to a state penitentiary, the jail is impacted by persons who have been arrested but have not been able to post bond while awaiting disposition of their cases.

The Deaf Smith County jail represents an investment of considerably more than $2 million.

The first phase was completed and occupied in 1960. Records indicate it cost about $200,000. An expansion later increased the physical facilities. Then, a $1.5 million addition was made to the jail in the mid-1980s. The county issued bonds for the job and paid off the debt in 1991.

Now, there's talk that another jail expansion may not be too far off -- a year or two, at most, some officials believe.

If history is a guide for the future, county commissioners, sheriff, criminal district attorney and others involved in the criminal justice system can look at the increase in jail average census since 1984:

-- 1986: 48.6
-- 1988: 55.8
-- 1989: 59.5
-- 1990: 57.1
-- 1991: 63.0
-- 1992: 83.9

Talking about adding jail space causes some stress for authorities for two main reasons: money and location.

Judge Simons said the county owns some property in the vicinity of the courthouse, but he isn't sure the lots would be an appropriate location for a jail.

Richards signs bill requiring young people get vaccinated

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards signed into law Friday a bill that aims to ensure all Texas children are immunized against disease during a ceremony before those who will be most affected by the legislation.

Surrounded by children at the Creative World Capitol Complex Child Care Center, Richards said the measure is an example of the state's growing interest in improving health care programs.

"The effort here is where the effort should have been and will be in the future - on the prevention side of medicine," she said. "What we're trying to do is treat kids while they're well, to try to keep them from getting sick."

The bill requires hospitals and physicians to immunize a child under age 18 who is not current on vaccinations for such diseases as measles and polio. It is estimated to cost $56 million over the next two years.

The bill exempts children from immunizations if they have a religious conflict.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, a sponsor of the measure, noted that children will now be guaranteed immunizations for diseases that, if not prevented, can cause death.

"It is so important to recognize

Examiners near ID of Koresh body

WACO, Texas (AP) - Medical examiners said Friday they may be closing in on the identification of Branch Davidian cult leader David Koresh, who is believed to be among 86 who died when his sprawling religious compound became engulfed in flames.

Dr. Rodney Crow, a forensic dentist assisting in the case, said he was expecting to receive some dental records that may help identify the body of Koresh.

"I can't say yet because I don't have it, but we are very hopeful we are going to have some very significant evidence coming in some time today that will be pertinent in a very important identification possibly," Crow said.

Medical examiners have found at least 48 bodies, 40 of which have been removed from the charred graveyard where Koresh once commanded his religious followers, Dr. Nizam Peerwani, head medical examiner for the case, said Friday.

"At least half of the bodies that I recall have only fragments of torso or extremities left," Peerwani said. "They have sustained very high-intensity fire damage."

that this bill will save lives. With immunizations, we are talking about protecting our little ones, little ones like we see here today," said Ms. Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

Funding for the bill is on hold until a legislative conference committee hammers out differences in the House and Senate versions of the state budget.

However, Richards said she is confident the measure will be properly funded, and that once the program is in place, it will save the state money.

"Immunizations my cost $20, but complications to a sick child can cost $20,000," she said. "The lives of human beings depend on us to make certain the funding is available for those who need us most."

State Health Commissioner David Smith said the state has already begun providing immunizations at clinics statewide, using federal dollars.

He said once the state money is available, additional clinics will be set up in public schools, where most children are expected to receive the shots.

A recent Texas Department of Health survey showed that only 10 percent of kindergarten children in Houston, 30 percent in Dallas, and 40 percent in El Paso had received their recommended number of doses of vaccine by age 2.

In 1989, Texas reported the highest number of measles cases in the United States, with 3,313. It had the second highest number in 1992, with 4,409.

Negotiator relives horror of Branch Davidian holocaust

WACO, Texas (AP) - Byron Sage couldn't watch. After 51 days of pleading with the Branch Davidians to leave their compound, they now were being forced out by fire and he was hoping to use his voice as their guide.

But Sage, the FBI's lead negotiator, couldn't face it. To do his job, he had to stay calm. Looking out the window or at the television screen wouldn't work.

Facing a corner of his tiny office, he clutched a microphone and began pleading.

"Those of you remaining inside the compound, attempt to exit by any means possible," he said 25 minutes into the blaze. "Walk toward the voices. Exit in any fashion that you can..."

"Get in a position of safety and the agents will attend to you. Exit the compound as readily as you can."

Sage looked back in time to see the second story collapse and the watchtower tip over.

He turned off his machines and walked outside to view the horrible destruction. He believes cult leader David Koresh murdered 85 of his followers, including 17 young children.

The heat burning his face, Sage felt it all: anguish, anger, frustration, pain and, especially, disbelief.

"I knew those people were dying," Sage said. "You just wish there was something you could do. You felt so helpless."

Four days after the deaths, Sage's hands still tremble and his eyes redden when talking about the scene.

"I can remember saying a prayer," he said Friday, reliving the frustrations he felt during more than seven weeks of round-the-clock discussions.

"I guess it represented everything that I have always set my career to oppose - the senseless loss of lives, the needless destruction of innocents."

Sage, a 24-year bureau veteran and the agency's Austin-based supervisory senior resident agent, was the first FBI negotiator on the scene Feb. 28 and was the last person to speak with the cult.

Days after the stalemate's tragic ending, he's still trying to sort out the pieces of one of the toughest cases in FBI history.

"We were faced with a very unique challenge," said Sage, a member of the FBI's Critical Incident Negotiation Team.

"How do we talk him out of a situation where he has everything that he possibly needs inside that structure and everything that he doesn't want is waiting for him outside?"

Most of their tactics failed, all because Koresh - whom negotiators called by his given name Vernon when they wanted to tweak him - never really planned to give up, Sage said.

"We're not dealing with a messiah here, we're dealing with a con man," Sage said. "This guy is an absolute master of deceit and delay."

Their first lesson in his wickedness came March 2, when Koresh broke a promise to surrender following a 58-minute radio broadcast of his preachings. Koresh claimed a "message from God" stopped him.

After that disappointment, negotiations slowed until March 12 when Oliver Gyrfas and Kathryn Schroeder, both considered part of Koresh's inner-circle, left the compound.

The FBI promised to let both report back to the cult on what life was like outside. When they sent word that they were being treated well, it infuriated Koresh, Sage said.

"They're getting it from their own people that they're being treated properly," he said. "This really bothered David. Here, all of a sudden, he makes comments like, 'Well, they've obviously gone over to the other side.'"

Three days later, Sage and McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell had a face-to-face meeting with cultists Schneider and Wayne Martin, a Harvard-educated lawyer.

Another meeting was planned for March 17, but Sage and Harwell were stood up, causing a new tone to be set for the negotiations.

"I chewed him (Koresh) out," Sage said, adding that he "threw back in his face" a list of broken promises.

"He was not used to anyone challenging his authority. In his realm, he was the messiah. Who in the world talks to the messiah like this? He eventually could not handle it."

Sage's hourlong scolding may have earned new respect from Koresh, who from then on referred to the negotiator (See NEGOTIATOR, Page 2A)

Unique tabloid debuts today

A farm tabloid, "West Texas Country Trader," makes its debut in today's Hereford Brand. The special section is designed to put agribusiness buyers and sellers together.

The weekly two-color section starts with 12 area newspapers and a circulation of more than 33,000. Ads and farm news and features will be included. A business or farmer around Hereford will be featured about once a month. The first issue has a story on Merrick Pet Food, focusing on value-added products.

Hereford ads will start appearing next week. Interested advertisers can call Mauri Montgomery or Julius Bodner at The Brand.

Fire scene

Firefighters pull siding away from a trailer house in an effort to root out the last bits of fire that damaged the structure on Friday. The fire was located in a trailer house on 13th Street between Avenues H and I. No injuries were reported in the blaze.

County Commissioners to meet

The Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court will meet in regular session at 9 a.m., Monday in the county courthouse. Agenda items for the meeting include discussions of the work program and roads in Precinct 1, as well as consideration of hiring a summer assistant in the Extension Office. The meeting is open to the public.

Extension Homemakers meet set

The Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers will hold their Spring Luncheon on Monday. Reports will be given by district delegates to the TEHA meeting. The Extension Homemakers Council will meet immediately following the luncheon. All extension homemakers and their guests are invited.

Immunization schedule noted

The Texas Department of Health will hold its final April immunization clinic in Hereford on Thursday. Vaccines against polio, diphtheria, lockjaw (tetanus), whooping cough (pertussis), measles, rubella, mumps and HIB (hemophilus influenzae type B) will be offered. Charges are based on family income and size and ability to pay. Funds are used to help keep the clinic open. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the Health Department offices, 205 W. Fourth St., Suite B.

Shuttle launch put off due to problem

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - NASA canceled Saturday's launch of the space shuttle Columbia because of a problem with its navigation system, the second time the mission has been postponed in the final hours before liftoff.

The launch was rescheduled for Monday at 9:50 a.m. CDT.

NASA spokesman George Diller said the problem concerned equipment critical to maneuvering while in orbit and during re-entry.

This was NASA's second attempt to launch Columbia with seven astronauts on a laboratory research mission chartered by Germany. The attempt last month ended abruptly three seconds before liftoff when the main engines shut down.

This time, the astronauts had not yet boarded Columbia and NASA had not yet begun to fuel the shuttle.

Saturday's liftoff would have followed the last shuttle flight by just seven days. That would have been the shortest interval between missions in 32 years of U.S. human space flight.

If Columbia lifts off Monday, NASA still would set a record for the shortest gap between flights - nine days. The present record of 10 days was set in 1985.

Discovery returned April 17 from the year's second shuttle flight.

Columbia's No. 2 inertial measurement device, which acts like a gyroscope, was operating intermittently because of a problem with the power supply, Diller said. The shuttle is equipped with three of the devices, including two backups.

"If we launched ... we could not assure a normal nine-day mission, and we want that," Diller said. "So we decided to replace the unit completely. We will put a brand new one in and fly in 48 hours."

Meteorologists had issued a rare launch-day forecast of a 100 percent chance of good weather for the 9:52 a.m. liftoff.

Germany has been waiting for years for this mission, which features mostly German experiments and two German astronauts. The flight originally was targeted for 1988, three years after the first German Spacelab flight on Challenger, but was put on hold along with everything else after Challenger exploded in 1986.

A late February launch date had to be scrapped because of uncertainty over critical engine pump parts, and then a hydraulic hose ruptured. The biggest setback occurred March 22 when Columbia's main engines shut down seconds after firing because of a stuck valve. All three engines were replaced.

Hermann Kurscheid, Germany's deputy mission manager, said the latest two-month delay has cost Germany nearly $9 million. That's on top of an estimated $560 million Germany already had spent on the mission, including $150 million paid to NASA.

Rudolf Teuwsen, a spokesman for Germany's space agency, said the latest delays coincided with debate in Germany over whether the country can afford such projects while it faces high costs of unification.

German physicists Ulrich Walter and Hans Schlegel had planned to board with electrodes on their heads and catheters in their veins so doctors could monitor the pair's reactions to takeoff.

The American crew members were commander Steven Nagel, pilot Terence "Tom" Henricks, Jerry Ross, Bernard Harris Jr. and Charles Precourt.

attached is to lease units, he continued.

No one in the courthouse is ready to build or lease, at least for now, although Simons and the precinct commissioners, who administer the county budget, admit that the situation could become critical.

Over a weekend, the jail census commonly climbs above 100 inmates. Discussing the situation, Castillo admits that "tensions" develop because of the high number of prisoners and diverse personalities.

An experienced jailer, Tom Flood, will direct SPAW. In a letter to community leaders recently, he listed three phases of the program:

- Construction of a building to house equipment and supplies (work to be done by SPAW participants);
- Purchase such hand tools and other equipment as may be necessary; and
- Undertaking and completing assigned tasks and work in the community.

Types of work Flood expects the crew to perform are yard mowing and edging, painting, clean-up as well as indoor jobs as may come along.

While SPAW gets going, the community corrections department is looking for alternatives that may be effective in reducing jail census.

Law enforcement officers can testify to an increase in the number of misdemeanor and felony incidents during a year, even though the county's population has not increased.

Authorities hope to find solutions to the problem but admit there may be only one: add jail space.

Cesar Chavez, labor leader, dies Friday

SAN LUIS, Ariz. (AP) - Cesar Chavez, son of a migrant farm worker who organized itinerant laborers into a union and led a nationwide grape boycott in the 1960s, was found dead Friday, apparently of natural causes. He was 66.

President Clinton issued a statement calling Chavez "an inspiring fighter for the cause to which he dedicated his life."

Shots to be offered here as part of immunization week

"Hands Across the Nation For Preschool Immunization" is the theme for National Preschool Immunization Week, which began Saturday and will run through April 30.

Several local agencies are working together to improve immunization levels among preschool children, particularly those under two years of age.

South Plains Health Provider Organization, located at 603 Park Ave., is helping by offering free immunizations during the week.

During immunization clinics, children do not need an appointment. They are served on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Any immunization records need to be brought to the clinic for each child. If someone other than a parent or guardian brings the child in, a consent form will need to be signed by that parent or guardian giving permission for the child to receive immunizations.

The immunization clinic will be held each day during regular clinic hours: 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday; noon to 8 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. to noon Friday.

For more information call 364-7688.

The South Plains Health Providers also is working with the Hereford Independent School District, the Texas Department of Health and local private schools to reach more children with immunizations.

New EMS director at DSGH has strong health-care background

Ed McGinley, formerly of Arlington, is the new director of the Hereford Emergency Medical System, it was announced this week by Ron Rives, CEO at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

"A proven leader in the field of emergency medicine, Ed brings vast experience in EMS administration, teaching and field experience," Rives said. "We're pleased that we were able to bring a health care practitioner of Ed's level to Hereford."

Ed and his wife, Paula, will be moving from Arlington. When school is out, they will be joined by their two children—Amber, 14, and Stacie, 12. "My wife and I both grew up in towns the size of Hereford, so we're excited about bringing our family back to a community this size," said McGinley.

Another reason McGinley chose Hereford is the quality of the EMS. With eight paramedics, one EMT intermediate and four EMT basics, the department has a higher-than-average level of experience and high degree of competency, McGinley pointed out. DSGH has three mobile intensive care units and is a member of the Lubbock Methodist Hospital

AeroCare network.

Hereford is also a member of the PEMSS (Panhandle Emergency Medical Service System), which is an organization that was formed to standardize the care in the Panhandle and establish standards of protocol.

"When I interviewed here in Hereford, it was the only place where all the personnel came up and introduced themselves to me—even part-timers came in to meet me. I

Craig Nieman named HB circulation chief

Craig Nieman, former publisher of The Lamb County Leader-News, has been named circulation manager for The Hereford Brand, it was announced this week.

Nieman replaces Charlene Brownlow, longtime Brand circulation manager who retired last week after 30 years with the newspaper.

Nieman recently moved here from Austin, where he had been employed as a salesman with a car and truck agency. Besides managing the Littlefield newspaper, he had also worked as a sports editor with The Brownfield News and as an advertising representative for The Brand.

Nieman graduated from Hereford High School in 1975. He worked on the yearbook staff at school and was a letterman in basketball and baseball. He attended Texas Tech University and West Texas State University. He is the son of O.G. and Lavon Nieman of Hereford.

as "Mr. Byron," a formality not used for anyone else.

The conversation also made inroads into another important aspect of the negotiations - strengthening Sage's rapport with Schneider.

Schneider has been known as Koresh's right-hand man, but he only assumed that position when the cult leader's primary deputy, father-in-law Perry Jones, was killed in the initial raid, Sage said.

Sage said he tried using Schneider's ties with group members, especially foreigners he helped recruit, to cause a fraction within the cult, but he said Schneider was too caught up in Koresh's spell to pull it off.

"I don't think Steve commanded the respect to lead those people out of there. They were so committed to David Koresh. But we tried incessantly," Sage said.

There was another chance for a split, hopefully involving United Kingdom citizens, but it failed when Briton Livingston Fagan left the compound March 23 and rudely responded to federal officials, Sage said.

"Who's going to clean these boots and who's going to get the mud off my trousers?" Fagan asked FBI agents upon leaving.

"His reluctance, his flat-out refusal to call back in there or to make a tape, was, I'm sure, portrayed by David that we abused him. Therefore, there was no way the Brits were coming out," Sage said.

In the next few weeks, Koresh continued playing games with negotiators, using several stalling tactics to keep federal agents at bay, Sage said.

Finally, enough was enough. Top FBI officials asked for Sage's advice and he agreed with their plans to try forcing the Davidians out.

He made his final phone call at 5:55 a.m. Monday, then spent the rest of the morning trying to talk them out over the loud speaker while tear gas-spraying tanks rammed their home.

Then, the fire broke out and Sage felt helpless. He had done all he could to force a peaceful resolution, and now his goal was just to save a few lives.

Hours after the destruction, the memory was still fresh in his mind. A surprise visit from his wife helped him cope, but the hammer came the next day.

His youngest son, a 10-year-old, had brought his dad a present. It was a computer drawing of the compound with flames erupting from it.

Some gift. Some reminder. Some memory.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"Parents must be involved to make a difference in their children's education. Parent-school cooperation will help to assure student achievement." These were statements made by Judy Hiramoto at a Waimalu Elementary School workshop for parents and teachers, according to an article in the Leeward Current, a newspaper from Hawaii. Strangely enough, all of the HISD school board candidates that were at the "Meet The Candidates" forum expressed the same thoughts.

Several students enjoyed a cultural experience recently as they attended the Amarillo Symphony, joined by the Dallas Brass, in the last symphony performance of the season. Ray Jenkins, orchestra director for HJH and HHS, is a nineteen year member of the Amarillo Symphony. This multi-talented teacher who plays several instruments, also plays violin for the Roswell Symphony and for the past three to four years has played with the Southwest Symphony at Plainview and at times with the Hobbs Symphony. In his "spare time" he sings with the Chamber Singers! Those attending the symphony were Candice Campbell, Leslie Poarch, Tyson Foerster and Jim Moudy and sponsors Sharla Moudy and Carolyn Waters.

Leading the Pledge to the Flag April 19-April 30 are the following HJH students: Christie Barrera, Kari Barrett, Stephanie Bixler, Marie Crox, Jennifer Garth, Annie Jackson, Michelle Ochoa, Andrea Scott, Wesley Blackwell and Russell Manning.

Congratulations again to Marivel Gomez and Anna Witkowski on their achievements in the Spelling Bee. These spelling skills are of a lifetime value. Their sponsors, Catherine Cortez and Myrna Buckley are to be congratulated, also.

History Fair participants will travel to Austin Friday for competition there. There will be eight students taking four projects. Students making the trip will be Deanna Redelsperger, Rebecca Gutierrez, Nicole McWhorter, Holly Weishaar, Jim Moudy, Andrew Carr, Andrew DelToro and Ryan Manning. Thanks to all of you who have allowed these students to have interviews, and take pictures and to those who have shared your time to help in these projects.

"Parent involvement plus developing a love for reading combine to solve many of the problems in school," says Hiramoto. Limiting the time students watch TV or play video games, encouraging reading and monitoring homework can ensure academic success! If it works in Hawaii, it will work in Hereford! Actually, this is good advice for anyone, anywhere!

10 percent figure being questioned Gays' security in numbers fading with study results

By KIM I. MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - For more than 40 years, gay Americans have taken refuge in one small statistic: 10 percent - the proportion of the population many believe to be homosexual.

But that number has come under attack recently - by researchers who question its source, and conservatives who say homosexuals are padding their numbers to promote a gay civil rights agenda.

Last week, the Battelle Human Affairs Research Centers in Seattle released a survey on male sexual habits that found only 2.3 percent of men age 20 to 39 reporting any homosexual activity in the past decade and just 1.1 percent reporting they had exclusively homosexual relations.

Other studies put the gay population in the neighborhood of 5 percent.

With a major gay rights march slated for Washington on April 25, 10 percent is a figure that's bound to be trumpeted as well as trampled.

"Politically, it's a very sensitive subject," said Robert Bray, spokesman for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, which lobbies on gay issues and is sponsoring several events surrounding the march.

"Our opponents would like to say there are 39 of us and we all live in the Castro in San Francisco or Greenwich Village in New York," Bray said. "We know that there are millions and millions of gay people, and people whose lives are touched by gays."

The task force uses the figure 20 million - slightly less than 10 percent - to describe the size of the U.S. gay population, although Bray said he can't prove it.

Robert Knight, director of cultural studies for the conservative Family Research Council, said the 10 percent figure "has been used with great effect by the gay rights lobby to press for political power and extra civil rights protections."

"It's been used to tell businessmen that 10 percent of their work force is gay and that they should accommodate them like they do African Americans," Knight said. "And it's been known for years that the figure's been off, even by gay activists who use it."

The figure came from the first large-scale survey of sexual behavior among American men, conducted by Alfred C. Kinsey in 1948. It has been repeated so long within the gay community that many accept it as fact.

What Kinsey concluded was that 10 percent of American males were "more or less exclusively homosexual" for at least three years between the ages of 16 and 55.

However, Kinsey also found that 8 percent of men were "exclusively homosexual" for at least three years between those ages, and that 4 percent of males were "exclusively homosexual throughout their lives after the onset of adolescence."

There was no comparable breakdown for women, although researchers believe lesbianism is significantly less prevalent.

In recent years, social scientists have conducted what they say are better surveys, all of which tend to indicate that less than 10 percent of the population is homosexual.

"When you look at the basis for the 10 percent expectation, you find there is no scientific basis for it," said Tom W. Smith, a statistician at the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago.

Smith led a study of sexual behavior in 1988 and 1989 that found about 2 percent of sexually active adults reported being exclusively homosexual or bisexual during the year preceding the survey.

It also found that from 5 percent to 6 percent said they were exclusively homosexual or bisexual since age 18.

Aikman's top Abbots

These students were selected as Top Abbots for the fifth six-week grading period at Aikman Elementary School. Abbots are selected from among students who earn all A's and B's in their class work, plus show good attitudes and stay out of trouble at school. The top students are: back, from left, Brianna Finley, Lance Miriles, Vector Delgado, Telina Jackson, Renae Alaniz, Maggie Hernandez, Jesus Nunez and Amanda Marquez; middle, from left, Elizabeth Zepeda, Eliana Ortega Whitney Walker, Noemy Rodriguez, Esther Avila, Dane Cash and Mike Grajeda; and front, from left, Jessica Sotelo, Hanna Williams, Yvonne Garcia, Carolina Barrientos, Daphne Munoz and Elizabeth Claudio.

Farm Aid concerts have not only raised money, but also awareness

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - After almost eight years, Willie Nelson's fund-raising concerts for needy farmers still have as much to do with raising awareness about rural America as they do with raising money.

The farm economy no longer is on its knees, as it was in 1985 when Farm Aid was born. Yet an estimated one in 10 farmers remains overwhelmed by debt and times are getting tougher for many others. Some economists believe the farm recovery peaked in 1989.

"The proportion of farmers in a crisis situation is less today than in 1985, but it's still a problem," said Don Ralston, administrator of the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill, Neb. "The more public awareness of this, the better."

Among the dozens of performers lined up with Nelson to get that point across are Johnny Cash, Merle Haggard, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson, Neil Young and John Mellencamp. Hosts include Roseanne and Tom Arnold, Yakov Smirnoff, Lou Diamond Phillips and Williams & Rec.

Farm Aid VI begins at noon Saturday at the 50,000-seat Cyclone Stadium at Iowa State University. The 2,000 choice reserved seats have already sold out at $46 each.

Concertgoers also were asked to bring canned goods and other non-perishables that will be donated to Feed the Children.

Music won't be the only medium for the save-the-farm message.

On the eve of the concert, a congressional subcommittee will convene in Ames at Nelson's invitation to hear suggestions on how the U.S. Department of Agriculture can respond better to family farmers' needs.

Farm Aid is roundly applauded for the attention it brings to rural issues and the more than $14 million it has raised through concerts in 1985, '86, '87, '90 and '92, as well as TV programs and donations.

"Without (Farm Aid dollars) it would have been impossible - not only for us but for others - to provide support," said Ralph Paige, executive director of the Atlanta-based Federation of Southern Cooperatives and Land Assistance Fund.

Farm Aid also helped support the Oklahoma Ag-Link Farm Crisis Hotline, stocked emergency food pantries across rural America, financed legal services and rural rights organizations - even bought eyeglasses for two Iowa schoolgirls.

It has spent close to $500,000 for education, such as a mass mailing alerting more than 80,000 farmers of their rights in foreclosure proceedings.

Nelson says that while his group has not attracted many new donors, the same people give each year.

"Agriculture is just the bottom rung on the economic ladder," Nelson said.

But, "once you get so far away from the farm and you're in Detroit or you're somewhere in New York City and you have your own problems, you're not aware of the farmers' problems."

Education equity?

As you should be aware, voters will make choices on three Texas Constitutional amendments on May 1 and they should study the ramifications of their votes on these issues.

The Texas Association of School Boards supports all three amendments. The Texas State Teachers Association supports Propositions 1 and 3, but is opposed to No. 2 (which exempts districts from the obligation to comply with unfunded mandates.)

I will vote against Proposition 1, the so-called Robin Hood plan. Without enabling legislation, I cannot support this amendment. I believe if the actual effects of enabling legislation were available to the voters, this proposition would have NO chance. We are being asked to have faith. In this case, I can't muster that much faith.

The children of Texas deserve a quality education, and the taxpayers deserve a fair shake. The amendment does not address the real problem in our schools—declining standards. Spending, and taxes, on education have risen dramatically in recent years, but Texas still ranks below the national average on SAT scores.

The essence of "Robin Hood" tax plan is the politics of envy. Two years ago, State Rep. Paul Moreno of El Paso, a supporter of the plan, best summed up the school finance fight. In response to a question asking what the rich districts have that the poor ones don't, Rep. Moreno replied: "Swimming pools, AstroTurf, beautiful cafeterias, drama stages." At least he's honest.

Monte Hassie of Lubbock, State Board of Education, says if Prop 1 passes, the legislature could, in effect, set local property taxes. Who has the majority of votes in the Legislature? Do you want Dallas, Houston and San Antonio setting property taxes in your community?

There is no evidence that "equalized" funding will make our schools better. If the amendment is voted down, the legislature will simply be forced to pass a different plan in 30 days. To keep the schools from closing, lawmakers need to find $400 million. Some of the alternatives suggested include:

- *We could dedicate the first money received from existing taxes to an education fund and prevent a crisis like this from happening again.
- *We could dedicate the money from the lottery to education.
- *We could divert 10 cents of every dollar from existing state gasoline taxes to education.
- *We could pool tax revenues within counties.

Proposition 2 would exempt a school district from the obligation to comply with unfunded state education mandates. Local taxpayers have been hurt by the legislature passing laws and requiring local school boards to pay for them with local taxes. TSTA says this would imperil school reforms (such as reduced class sizes) and would open the door to endless arguments over what aspects of education are fully funded—including teachers' salary increases. The teacher group also points out that costs are never fully funded by the state.

On the other hand, passage of the amendment would strengthen local control. It would force lawmakers to examine the merits of the mandates they are requiring and help share in the cost of implementing them. If the legislature determines an educational mandate must be enacted but it does not have the funds to do so, it still has the option of enacting the requirement through a two-thirds vote. That sounds reasonable, I will vote for Proposition 2.

Amendment 3 allows the legislature to issue $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bonds to assist school districts in partially funding facilities. This will assist poor school districts in the state in improving facilities and, by providing needed classrooms, would reduce the need for waivers of class size. We will vote for this amendment. Opponents argue that, unlike other bond programs, the debtors would not necessarily have to pay back the bondholders. State taxpayers then would be left holding the bag.

Hospital advances

BY RON RIVES, CEO
Deaf Smith General Hospital

A recently released audit report for Deaf Smith County Hospital shows the growing utilization of the hospital by our community.

Our bottom line profit from all revenue sources as reflected in our audit was $894,818. That compares to a $575,000 loss last year. We did have a $216,066 operating loss in 1992, but that is still a favorable number since the loss in 1991 was $1,266,749.

We feel that the growing number of services is an important factor for the rise in revenue. The hospital has made several changes in the last 12 to 18 months, including refurbishing patient rooms, adding an occupational medicine program, and setting up a Strategic Planning Committee. Our average daily census is up from last year, which is a prime indicator to us that the community is responding to our improvement in quality.

We now have a strategic plan in place that will help us continue to grow and improve medical services in Hereford in the future. Part of that plan calls for us to bring in more specialists to the community.

Solid evidence that the plan is working is that an Amarillo cardiologist recently began seeing patients in Hereford on alternate Wednesdays. Although our population base is not large enough to justify a fulltime cardiologist, this arrangement with a visiting specialist will make visiting a heart specialist more convenient for the residents of the area.

An increase in tax revenues and an increase in state disproportionate share funds for Medicaid account for a portion of the increase. Overall, the numbers look so much better than they did last year that we know that our hard work is paying off.

We are pleased to report to our community that Deaf Smith General Hospital is very sound financially and that financial resources are being aggressively managed.

We're proud of the work that the dedicated medical staff and the employees of DSGH are doing to bring quality health care to the community. With the community's support, we will continue to work together toward the goal of achieving the quality of medical care our community expects from the professionals at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

What's your name? I'm not trying to get personal, I'm just wondering how your name stacks up against the top 10 names given to babies in Texas during 1991.

The Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Vital Statistics sent out a news release this past week ranking the state's most popular names based on birth certificates.

Reflecting the broad ethnic background of the state, the report not only goes into the top 10 names overall, but the top names by race for Anglos, Hispanics and African-Americans.

Overall, the top 10 boy names in 1992 were: Michael, Christopher, Joshua, Jose, Matthew, David, John, Justin, Daniel and James.

Top girl names were: Ashley, Jessica, Amanda, Sarah, Stephanie, Brittany, Elizabeth, Samantha, Lauren and Jennifer.

Black parents most chose Christopher, Joshua, Michael, Brandon, Anthony, James, Jordan, Justin, Jeremy and Robert; and Jasmine, Ashley, Brittany, Jessica, Courtney, Mariah, Raven, Crystal, Tiffany and Ebony.

Top Hispanic names were: Jose, Juan, Michael, Daniel, David, Jesus, Christopher, Luis, Joshua and Jonathan; and Jessica, Ashley, Stephanie, Amanda, Samantha, Elizabeth, Jennifer, Crystal, Vanessa and Victoria.

Anyway, if you had a baby (or grandchild, great-grandchild, niece, nephew, etc.) in 1991 and named him or her one of these names, don't be surprised in a few years if, when you call, several heads turn.

I don't know if you saw it or not, but we published a story a couple of weeks ago about the sexual habits of men.

There were two interesting things I saw in this study.

First, the federal government through one of its health agencies saw fit to spend $1.8 million to find out information that by all rights should be left behind the bedroom doors.

I don't think it's anybody's business when a man loses his virginity. It's certainly not something I'm going to go running around town asking.

And while a man's wife might want to know how many sex partners he's had, I don't think we needed to know.

Still, now that the study has been done (since they didn't ask my permission before they did it), there is one statistic that has certainly caused a stir.

The study, in which 3,321 men were surveyed, found that just 2.3 percent had reported any homosexual activity in the past decade and just 1.1 percent claimed to be exclusively homosexual.

That means that President Clinton has, with his stand on gays in the military, gay rights and all the other stuff that goes along with those people, has sold his political credibility to a group of people who number far less than most other politically active groups.

Consider, for instance, the pro-life forces.

Studies have shown that considerably more than 1.1 percent of the population opposes abortion, yet the Presidents Clinton continue pushing through efforts to kill as many babies as possible.

Fundamental Christians number well more than 1.1 percent of the population, yet government interference in the rights of Christians to pray, meet and evangelize in public is at an all-time high.

It's amazing how such a small group can have such a major impact on the policy and morals of a nation.

Makes you wonder, doesn't it.

Another political note: You remember that the special U.S. Senate election is coming up this Saturday (May 1).

Well, among the 24 candidates vying for the right to represent Texas is one guy, C. Sonny "Crazy Cajun" Payne, who is upset that he is not allowed to put his nickname on the ballot.

In fact, he has threatened to sue someone, saying he is better known as "Crazy Cajun."

So, when filling out your ballot, you now know which is the crazy person running.

By the way, his campaign slogan is "No Payne, No Gain."

Don't forget to get out and vote on Saturday. There are a lot of important decisions to be made, including school finance, U.S. Senate, City Commission, Mayor, School Board and Hospital Board.

Take some time to study the issues, make an informed decision then vote.

If you don't vote, you have no right to complain if you don't like what the person is doing.

Well, I guess that's it for this week. Have a good week and remember, let's be careful out there.

Texas Second? Look before you leap

A couple of years ago, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. lobbied hard for relaxed regulation by the Texas Public Utility Commission.

The plan was called Texas First, and the telephone company said that if it got the help it wanted, it could provide the telecommunications infrastructure that Texas needed for economic growth. Give us Texas First, they said, and we'll also freeze our residential rates. Bell got a lot of support, and Texas First was adopted with a signed agreement that runs until near the end of 1994.

Now Bell is back, with other telephone companies, even though the Texas First agreement has two years to run. Same song, new verse. Give us more relaxed regulation, they say, and we'll give you the kind of infrastructure Texas needs for economic growth. If you do, they say, we'll freeze local residential telephone rates (which already are frozen.)

Bell liked Texas First at first, but now wants "Texas Second," an even better deal, even though its profits are at record levels, its return on investment is double that of other regional Bell companies and even though it has billions to invest in Mexico, Israel, Great Britain and Washington D.C.

The Public Utility Commission is the place monopoly utilities are supposed to go when they want more money, or relaxed regulation.

In cases where real competition can be proven to exist, there is a procedure to grant them relief. The Commission has pursued a deliberate, careful course in these matters, as it should.

In an effort to bypass the regulation experts at the Commission, the telephone industry has come at the last minute to the Legislature, hoping, perhaps, that it won't have to explain quite as much to lawmakers as to commissioners.

The "Texas Second" plan is couched in language that rages from the arcane terminology of telecommunications to the seductive themes of jobs, fiber-optic links for schools and hospitals, infrastructure of the '90s. Cut through the jargon, though, and what remains is a scheme to extract hundreds of millions of dollars a year in additional rates from Texans, with regulation weakened to a point where there virtually would be no oversight or enforcement.

The telephone company has employed shrill and misleading rhetoric in its half-million-dollar-a-week advertising campaign to railroad "Texas Second" through the Legislature. Their opposition is not just publishers, as they claim. It includes the largest consumer organizations in Texas, the American Association of Retired Persons as well as many other businesses who, like publishers, are forced to use the local telephone exchange monopoly in order to do business.

We and others have recognized the possibility that some limited regulatory relief may be appropriate for telephone companies, particularly the small companies that don't have the massive resources of Southwestern Bell or GTE, who together control 93 percent of the telephone business in Texas.

But we also recognize that the issues concerning the setting of prices and the appropriate level of profits for a monopoly are very complex, and that many groups have an important stake in seeing that such decisions are made fairly and equitably.

It is clear that as the Texas Legislature sets telecommunications policy for the future, it will have to seek answers to these very complicated questions. That cannot be done in the dark, accepting unquestioned the wishes of those who stand to gain the most, without hearing from those who stand to lose the most.

The immediate choice for the Legislature is not so complex;

Should the Legislature give the telephone companies carte blanche to use their monopolies to punish competitors and to charge Texas customers hundreds of millions of dollars in additional rates?

Or, should the Legislature take a reasonable amount of time to study the telephone companies' proposals to see what makes sense and what doesn't, and to ensure that customers and other businesses and competitors have their say and don't get ripped off or put out of business?

Many Texans, including Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the Texas Senate leadership, consumer groups, business competitors—and publishers—believe that such an enormous rate raid ought to undergo some serious study.

Mr. Bullock has proposed, and the Legislature is considering, a two-year, blue-ribbon study of Texas telecommunications policy. This study would permit all sides to be heard, and would include full discussion of the merits of the telephone company proposals.

We endorse the study and urge its approval by the Legislature. The best course is to look before we leap.

Sheriff brings life to town of Barditch

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
PANHANDLE, Texas (AP) — Welcome to Barditch.

Everyone knows everyone else's business in this fictitious Texas Panhandle town, pop. 1,536.

There's Rooster Parmley, the town philosopher who on a moment's notice pulls out an estimated 728 photos of his young grandson.

There's Father "Roamin' Catholic" Hollis, who suffers continual scolding from the nuns about his "Hot Stuff" ball cap won in a chili cookoff.

And there's Sheriff Durwood Partain, who thwarts hen thieves and takes home the sleepwalking plumber loose on a nighttime toilet-flushing excursion.

Nostalgia and homespun humor run thick as molasses in the tales written by real-life Carson County Sheriff Loren Brand. Brand's yarns of small-town life have generated a popular following in each week's editions of the Panhandle and White Deer newspapers.

Betty Biggs, editor of the Panhandle Herald, says she gets complaint calls when the tales don't run for lack of space.

"I like the fact that people get something out of it," said Brand, who cites Mark Twain as a model. "How can you ask for something more in life than to make someone laugh or remember a happy time?"

Brand, 40, is more likely to be found with his portable computer than with the gun that goes with his job. He acknowledges his hobby may be an unusual diversion for a sheriff.

But he's happy in this "magical place" he creates from his living room recliner.

"Big guys, especially cops, aren't supposed to be emotional - not anything but tough guys," Brand said. "People look at me like something other than a sheriff. It opens up conversations to me that normally would be limited to law enforcement questions."

Brand said Barditch is a composite of every small town he's ever visited. The name comes from a word Brand thought sounded very Texan.

An introduction to the tales warns the reader of the ensuing "anecdotes, gossip and stories of questionable repute."

The local pessimist wins $1,000 in the Texas Lottery and promptly buys a funeral plot.

The incumbent state representative campaigns on the motto "If no one else wants it, I'll take it."

Hot dogs cost just 50 cents at the drive-in theater, and that Carpenter boy always throws the newspaper in the shrubs.

Everyone pitches in at the annual Barditch Follies.

"The folks in Amarillo and bigger towns in the area probably wouldn't think much of our little program, but it's not meant for them," the story

DALLAS (AP) - Actor Chuck Norris, who has captured parts that involve the strong, silent tough guy with a conscience, says he got involved in show business through the late Steve McQueen.

Norris had been teaching karate to the stars when he lost his chain of 32 studios "in a business transaction."

McQueen, a student of the karate master, asked what Norris was going to do without his schools.

"I said I wasn't really sure what course of action I was going to take. He said, 'Have you ever thought about acting?'" Norris said.

goes. "City folks don't know the family feeling that you get from gathering together for an evening to watch your local butcher tap dancing for your amusement."

Brand says he plugs plenty of heroes and exaggeration into his writing. Never, he emphasizes, will he include "gratuitous sex or violence."

He hopes the stories someday will be published in book form. Until then, he said, he will continue writing.

"I don't know how to end it because it just keeps going."

It took a while for Norris, who has filmed "The Hitman," "The Delta Force," and "Firewalker," to break into the business. He said box-office success eventually came but critical approval was elusive. Norris didn't begin receiving positive reviews until he filmed "Code of Silence."

Now, nearly 20 years later, the 53-year-old actor has been concentrating on "Walker, Texas Ranger," a television series shooting in and around Dallas.

But that has developed trouble. The series' production company ran out of money after shooting only three episodes and production was suspended by Cannon Television.

Texas children need support

Approximately 690,000 Texas children were owed child support payments in 1992 from absent parents who legally are required to provide for their financial needs. More than half, 58 percent, never received the payments or received them sporadically.

BLUE CHIP INVESTMENT

Despite all the talk these days about protecting your dollar, sound investments and hedges against inflation, the purchase of a home is seldom mentioned. Yet, a well built home in a good neighborhood is one of the best hedges against inflation that your money can buy. In the recent years of inflation for example, home and land values have more than kept abreast of the general rise in prices. This means your home investment puts you considerably ahead of the financial game. Not to mention the pride and pleasure that home ownership can bring. And there is no reason to believe that this situation will change any time in the near future. Add to this the tax benefit of home ownership which allows you to keep more of what you earn. Look for the best home your money can buy and enjoy your inflation hedge. If you read our column, we appreciate your comments.

"Do you want a strong and stable local economy?"

The answer to having one is not complicated. What it takes is a thing called local investment and reinvestment - your willingness to keep your savings dollars invested locally, and our willingness to reinvest your savings dollars in backing our High Plains economy. An excellent formula for economic health.

Hereford and the High Plains were built on local money, local money reinvested in our community by local financial institutions like ours, and local money provided by the savings deposits of people like you. Money that did not flow back into our community from the Wall Street stockbrokers, the eastern insurance companies, or the mutual funds!

Everyone wants a strong and stable local economy that all of us can count on now, and that our children can count on for the future.

The concept of "hometown economics" is far from new. It's the foundation we've been building on for a lot of good years, and still the answer to our community's future.

We ask you to always think about investing locally first...and count on us for local reinvestment.

We're "The Bank That Banks With You."

Experience should help Herd at region tourneys

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

As the Region 1-4A tennis tournament and golf tournament are played Monday and Tuesday in San Angelo, experience could be a big help for the Hereford contingent.

Hereford sends both the girls' and boys' golf teams to the golf tournament, which will be played at Riverside Golf Club. Hereford put three singles players in the tennis tournament, to be played at Angelo State University.

All three of the tennis players have regional experience. Greg Coplen, this year's champion in District 1-4A, went to regionals in singles last year and in doubles two years ago. Jamie Kapka, the runner-up to Coplen this year, went in doubles last year and in singles two years ago. Bri Reinauer, runner-up to Borger's Dawna Denny in girls' singles, advanced as a singles player last year. All three have also played in regional team tennis tournaments in the fall.

"They'll already be familiar with the courts, the weather, the mental stuff," coach Natalie Sims said. "Mentally, they'll be prepared because they already know what to expect."

The girls' golf team has experience by the truckload. Most of the girls who will play at this regional tournament have played at the last two regional tournaments and at the last two state tournaments. Cecelia Albracht and Jennifer Prater even played at regionals three years ago as freshmen.

This year's team lacks one girl--Paula Britten--from the team that finished fourth in all of Class 4A last year.

The boys' golf team is making its first trip to regionals since 1985, but coach Stacey Bixler says they're not shy on experience.

"Obviously, when you've been in that situation, under that pressure, in those circumstances, that's got to help you some, but all the boys and girls play in a lot of (those situations)," Bixler said. "Our kids have played enough invitational tournaments. If they weren't competitive, they wouldn't have gotten out of district in the first place."

Cinco de Mayo softball touney set for weekend

The 4th Annual Cinco de Mayo Softball Tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday in Hereford.

The tournament is a D/C equalizer with a 3-2 pitch rule. All games will be played at the VFW field in Hereford.

The entry fee is $110, and the entry deadline is Thursday. For more information call Rick Castaneda at 364-8383, or call Pete Vargas at 364-1170.

"Any time you send a team from our district on to regionals, you've got a chance to play well," Bixler said. "They're used to competing in district, and that carries over from district to regionals. Whether you're one or two (out of district) doesn't make any difference at all: it's the team that plays best down there."

Hereford's girls' team finished second in district both of the last two years, and they advanced to the state

—YOUR EYES—

IS IT TIME FOR AN EYE EXAM?

Regular optometric examinations are important to guard your vision and your eye health. How often should you see the eye doctor? It depends on your age and your general health though vision changes or eye strain signal an immediate visit.

Unless parents note problems earlier, it's advisable to bring a youngster in for preliminary testing by age 3. Conditions such as amblyopia (or "lazy eye") are best corrected if treatment starts early. Children and teenagers should be seen every year, because their visual acuity may change rapidly as they grow.

For those between 20 and 35, who are in good health and have no history of eye problems, checkups every two years are probably adequate. After 35, eyes should be checked every year, because vision changes quickly at this time. Reading glasses or bifocals may be appropriate. Regular examinations for the over-35s will also include tests for glaucoma and other eye diseases.

Tech coach Sharp stayed close to her roots

By RAY GLASS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - To the youngster, a promising junior high player, it was just about the best that basketball had to offer during the mid-1960s in Tulia.

Twice a week, on summer evenings when the high school gym was opened to the town's young players, the youngster had an opportunity to play on the same court as her idol. And, more often than not, the two players wound up at the same basket, the idol shooting and the youngster rebounding.

"She shot it, and I rebounded it for her. I stood under the basket and rebounded, rebounded, rebounded it," Marsha Sharp said. "And we'd count how many shots she'd make, and she wouldn't count it if there was anything involved with the rim. Nothing but net is all we counted."

"I remember how awesome that felt to me for her to be able to do that. She was my hero when I was little."

Now, nearly 30 years later, Sharp is somewhat of a hero on the South Plains after molding primarily West Texas talent into a Division I national women's basketball championship at Texas Tech.

"Just knowing her and knowing how determined she was and how smart she was, I'm not a bit surprised at her success," said Freda Rousseau Altman, the childhood hero who still lives in Tulia.

Altman, who helped Tulia win state championships in 1965 and 1966 and still holds several state scoring records, was reminded of those shoot-and-rebound sessions so many summers ago.

"Now that I look back at it, I hate that I made her rebound it," she said before quickly adding, "But I didn't make her do it."

No, no one has made Sharp do anything when it comes to basketball - except Sharp herself.

On a recent weekday, Sharp's office at the south end of Jones

Stadium was a mess. But, oh what a glorious mess.

Sharp had gone straight from coaching Tech to the national championship on April 4, to a triumphant homecoming in front of some 40,000 Lady Raiders-crazed fans, to the recruiting trail, with a flurry of other activities squeezed in the few free moments.

In the meantime, the congratulatory cards, flowers, plants and balloons piled up in her office. The growing stacks of phone messages and mail on her desk seemingly took on lives of their own.

She was asked about the perfect vacation. Would it be one with absolutely no mention of basketball, the driving force in Sharp's life?

"I guess the perfect vacation at this point would be going someplace the telephone is not," she said. "Wherever that might be in this world, that would be OK."

But you can bet Sharp will always come back to West Texas, to the fertile South Plains that produce crop after crop of basketball players, to the area that has shaped and nourished her personal and professional lives. She will always come home.

"In my mind, I get everything I need here as far as the whole package - personally, professionally - straight down the line," said Sharp, who has had offers from other schools to leave Tech, but none this season. "This is home, and I can't imagine picking up and going for a little more money or a little better recruiting situation or whatever people might tell you that they might offer somewhere else."

"It's given me a lot of pride to take basically West Texas kids and do things with them. They're the kinds of kids I love to coach. It's a perfect fit for me."

A perfect fit, in part, because Sharp's experience is in many ways typical of many area players. An undersized player, Sharp landed in Tulia after attending school for five years in Lubbock and two in Roswell,

N.M.

"I was very fortunate that I grew up in a town where they played girls basketball, because their weren't many of those around," she said. "Any of the others that I'd lived in, I wouldn't have even had an opportunity to play."

She thrived in Tulia's basketball-rich tradition, surviving with an intense work ethic that is the constant thread in her basketball life. She was a defensive player in the six-girl high school game, "a big, ol' mean guard," before playing on the offensive end as a senior.

Sharp then went to Wayland Baptist and was one of 28 freshmen battling for two spots on the Flying Queens, the nation's best women's basketball team.

"She was a pretty good shooter and ball handler, and she played pretty good defense," said Janice Beach Hardwick, her roommate at Wayland. "But her size ... Her nickname was 'bird' because she was so skinny."

The 5-foot-4 Sharp never did take the floor for the Flying Queens, playing instead for the junior varsity Queen Bees for two years. She and head coach Harley Redin soon arrived at the same conclusion - Sharp wasn't destined to play on the varsity.

"It was pretty obvious to me after a while," Sharp said. "I was slow, short, not a very good jumper - that is not a very good combination when there's 28 players going for two spots."

But Redin did want the 20-year-old Sharp to remain in the program - as the Queen Bees' coach.

"I really felt like it was a great opportunity," Sharp said. "I was pumped. I was fired up because there comes a point when you're either going to get to do something like that ... or you're through - you're not going to get to do anything. That was really exciting for me, to be able to stay a part of it."

It may have been the pivotal point in her basketball life. Sharp coached the Queen Bees as a junior and senior and for one year as a graduate assistant. Dean Weese replaced Redin as head coach in 1973, and Sharp began learning the game from Weese's perspective during the season and by working his summer camps as well.

"There's no question about the Xs and Os - I think Dean Weese was by far the biggest influence ever as far as what I know about trying to put together a team or a program and those kinds of things," she said.

But the overall influence of the Wayland Baptist program on Sharp cannot be overemphasized.

"I look at that as sort of destiny, to be honest with you," she said. "There's not any place in the world I could have gone and gotten a background to coach the way that I did."

"I didn't really even know that at that point, how much difference there would have been, for instance, being around a program like Wayland's compared to being at, that time, Texas Tech or West Texas State, which probably were going to be my choices because I wasn't going to go very far away."

The third step in Sharp's basketball journey was a stint as head coach at Lockney, where her teams won 126 games and three district titles in six seasons. Weese gave her a strong recommendation for the job.

"We had called him looking for names, and he recommended Marsha to us very, very strongly," former Lockney athletic director Jim Warren said. "She had no (high school) experience and had worked for him as a graduate assistant, and he couldn't think of anybody he'd rather have."

Warren credits Sharp with turning the program around within one season. Sharp credits the Lockney experience with introducing her to the public-relations side of coaching.

Sharp has spent the past 12 years at Texas Tech, the first year as an assistant coach and the past 11 in charge of a program that was produced 243 victories, two Southwest Conference championships and, of course, one national title.

The 40-year-old Sharp is definitely in her comfort zone. One hour, 90 minutes at the most from her basketball roots, surrounded by her family - parents Charles and Mary Nell, brother David and his wife Emily, sister Pam, her husband Paul Martin and their two sons, Jeremy and Bradley.

"Obviously, I have special ties here because my whole family is here," she said. "Since I was a seventh grader, I've never been any further away than a 75-mile radius of Tulia to live."

"Everybody I've known my whole adult life is here, and that's been really special for me to have such a loyal group of people behind me going through this with me together. They're people I've known ever since I was 12 years old in one way or another."

Sharp is definitely a people person. She relates well to her players off as well as on the court. She has loyal followers across the South Plains. And when she needs a break, well, she can always be Aunt Marsha.

"They've been such a big part of this for me," she said of her nephews. "We have dates. We go out from time to time, and when it's been too long, they call me and say, 'We need to go have a date.' I'm in trouble then because we're fixing to go to the video arcade and drop some bucks or go to the toy store and see what's new."

And Sharp will become an aunt for the third time this summer, when Emily and David are expecting their first child.

"The highlight of my year obviously has been winning the national championship," she said. "But the greatest thing that will happen in the Sharp family this year is that in July we're going to have a new one. That will be the biggest event in our family this year. I'm really thrilled about that ... another one to spoil."

And another reason for Sharp to always return home.

Bulls' loss makes Knicks tops in East

By The Associated Press

It was the best of teams and the worst of teams, and a trio of teams in the middle.

The New York Knicks clinched the best record in the NBA's Eastern Conference when they won at Philadelphia 99-84 and Charlotte defeated second-place Chicago 104-103 Friday night.

At the other end of the victory spectrum, Dallas avoided a spot in the record book with their 10th win of the season, 103-100 over the second-worst team, the Minnesota Timberwolves. The Mavericks, 10-71 with one game remaining, just missed sharing the title of worst team in NBA history, still held by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers, who finished 9-73.

Caught in the middle are Indiana, Orlando and Detroit, who each have a chance for the final NBA playoff spot with one game remaining. The Pistons' 109-104 decision over the Pacers and the Magic's 119-116 victory at New Jersey left Detroit one game behind Orlando and Indiana.

The Pacers can earn the berth with a victory at home against Miami tonight. Orlando needs a win at home against Atlanta and an Indiana loss. Detroit needs Orlando and Indiana to lose and a win of its own at home tournament both years.

Riverside is not the same course that the past regional tournaments have been played on, but the Hereford girls did play in an invitational tournament at Riverside in February.

"We do get to play a practice round," Bixler said. "That's something you don't get at invitational tournaments."

Besides knowing the pressure involved in regional tournaments, the Whitefaces don't know much else. At both tournaments, coaches and players won't find out who they're up against until after a coaches meeting Sunday night.

Bixler isn't sure about all the teams that will play in the golf tournament--Region I-4A goes all the way to Fort Worth--and Sims only knows one name: Zach Gibson, a player from Plainview who has beaten both Coplen and Kakpa this season.

"The main people we'll be looking out for is Wichita Falls," Sims said. "They won it all last year, and I'm guessing they'll be back."

They're experienced. Just like the Hereford players.

against the Nets on Sunday.

Elsewhere in the NBA on Friday, it was Boston 107, Cleveland 99; Miami 121, Washington 120 in overtime; Utah 105, Golden State 91; Seattle 122, the Los Angeles Lakers 93; and Portland 112, Sacramento 108.

Knicks 99, 76ers 84

Patrick Ewing had 26 points and 24 rebounds as New York found its Sunday showdown with the Bulls rendered meaningless.

"It's nice to get it over with, but the game Sunday still means a lot to us," Knicks point guard Doc Rivers said. "We achieved homecourt advantage and we're happy about that. The road to the championship goes through Chicago."

Trailing 52-46 at halftime, the Knicks held Philadelphia to five points in the first 8:27 of the second half and outscored the Sixers 32-7 for a 78-59 lead late in the third period.

Mavericks 103, Timberwolves 100

Rookie Jim Jackson, active for just 27 games but in uniform for six of Dallas' 10 victories, scored a career-high 32 points against Minnesota, which lost its 12th straight game.

Michael Williams scored 31 points and was 11 for 11 from the free-throw line.

Jazz 105, Warriors 91

Utah used a 16-4 fourth-quarter run to win at home.

New sugarcane varieties are sweeter, stronger, says USDA

WASHINGTON (AP) - New sugarcane varieties discovered by the Agriculture Department are sweeter, stronger and more productive than a popular strain grown now in Florida.

Four new varieties have been developed at the Agricultural Research Service's Sugarcane Field Station in Canal Point, Fla.

Jimmy Miller, an ARS plant geneticist, said the new strands either have a higher yield per acre, more sucrose per ton or are more millable than CP 70-1133, a leading variety in the state.

"A cane crop's value to growers is determined mainly by the combination of those three traits," Miller noted.

The new Canal Point canes are resistant to destructive diseases such as eye spot, smut, leaf scald, rust and sugarcane mosaic virus, Miller said.

And the strains are almost impervious to the sugarcane borer, a serious insect threat to crops.

University of Florida data shows that one-fourth of the nation's total raw sugar, nearly 2 million tons, was harvested in Florida in the 1991-1992 season.

The new strains will be also be test-planted in Louisiana and Texas, though the varieties were primarily developed for the soil and subtropical climate around Florida's Lake Okeechobee.

Canal Point scientists breed new varieties in conjunction with the University of Florida and the Florida Sugarcane League, Inc. They use the state's best strands combined with some from other states and Central American countries to "broaden the genetic base of Florida's commercial varieties," Miller said.

Of the four new varieties, CP 81-1238 and CP 84-1198 averaged the highest sucrose contents.

On sandy soils, CP 81-1238 also produced about 8 percent more sugar per acre than the currently used variety, compared over three harvests. Miller said CP 81-1238 could increase a grower's return by about 14 percent due to the combination of the two factors.

CP 84-1198 yielded about the same per acre as the popular variety in nitrogen-rich muck, also common in Florida, but will still increase returns to growers by about 8 percent because of its higher sucrose content, Miller said.

The other new varieties, all tagged for Canal Point where they were bred, are CP 85-1432 and CP 85-1492.

WASHINGTON (AP) - For as little as one-third the cost and one-tenth the time, a process used to decaffeinate coffee and extract hops for beer-making may provide a new way to remove pesticides from food. The process - called supercritical fluid extraction or SFE - is also safer for the environment than chemical solvents, said Jerry King, a chemist with the Agricultural Research Service.

The Environmental Protection Agency has ordered many regulatory agencies, such as the Agriculture Department's Food Safety Inspection Service, and federal labs to cut their use of chemical solvents in food analysis by as much as half by 1995.

Richard Ellis, director of the FSIS' chemistry division in Washington, said scientists are interested in the new method, particularly for use with low-fat processed meat and poultry where chemicals have not been as effective.

A Kansas City scientist working with King said the cost for using chemicals to extract pesticides from non-fat foods is about $3 per sample; for fatty foods, the cost is about $1.50 each. SFE runs about 95 cents per sample, said Marvin Hopper of the FDA's Total Diet Research Center.

Also, King said the chemicals take three to five hours to do their work, while SFE takes about 30 minutes.

The process uses carbon dioxide, held at certain pressure and temperature levels, to remove substances from food.

Cap on freight for FFP program urged by NAWG

WASHINGTON--The National Association of Wheat Growers (NAWG), is urging President Clinton to request the Congress to quickly raise or otherwise modify the cap on freight expenditures under the Food for Progress program (FFP).

The FFP will be the principal conduit for near-term assistance to Russia under the aid terms announced earlier this month at the Vancouver Summit. Presently, a Congressionally-imposed ceiling of $30 million exists on the shipment of U.S. commodities under the program. The ceiling has been reached, and it will have to be lifted before new assistance can be programmed.

NAWG President Jeff Lundberg emphasized the importance of the Russian market to the U.S. wheat growers in his letter to the president. He observed that U.S. wheat exports to Russia are lagging by two million tons, compared to a year ago.

He also noted the harvest of U.S. wheat is only weeks away, and the timing of new trade initiatives is critical to avoiding serious supply backlogs.

GLENN BOOZER

Holly Sugar names Boozer as factory personnel manager

SUGAR LAND -- Holly Sugar Corp., a subsidiary of Imperial Holly Corp., has announced the promotion of Glenn Boozer to the position of factory personnel manager at its beet sugar factory in Hereford.

Boozer, a native of Dimmitt, is son of Merle Boozer of Hereford and the late H.M. Boozer. He has a bachelor of science degree in agricultural economics from Texas Tech University.

Boozer joined Holly Sugar in 1980 and has been a welder and sugar boiler. His background also includes work as an insurance adjuster with the Farm Bureau and work in Anchorage, Alaska, on the Alaska Pipeline. He managed Boozer Produce in Hereford before going to work for Holly Sugar.

He and his wife, Tilli, live in Hereford, and have a son, Douglas, who lives in Ponca City, Okla.

Wheat estimate down 21 percent on High Plains

AUSTIN--Texas wheat producers expect to harvest 122 million bushels this year, down six percent from the 1992 crop but 45 percent more than 1991.

According to an April 1 survey conducted by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, planted acreage for the 1993 crop is estimated at 6.2 million acres, up three percent from last year but down two percent from 1991.

Production on the Northern High Plains is expected to total 53.3 million bushels, down 21 percent from a year ago. Irrigated fields across the region are in good condition; dryland fields are in fair to good condition. Insect populations are increasing in some fields.

Producers in the Blacklands expect to harvest 22.2 million bushels, nearly double the weather-plagued crop of last year. Showers and warmer temperatures have helped the Central Texas crop.

Texas is the only state that made an April 1 winter wheat production estimate. The first national forecast will be released May 11.

Donnell, Reynolds married April 17

Wedding vows were exchanged by Tammy Donnell and Gary Reynolds, both of Canyon, Saturday afternoon, April 17, in Trinity Fellowship Church in Amarillo. Officiating was Tom Lane of the church.

The bride is the daughter of W.C. and Christene Donnell of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Joann Reynolds of Amarillo and Earl and Edith Reynolds of Canyon.

The sanctuary was surrounded in Easter lilies placed in pots accented with gold foil and bows. Also, used as decorations were white pew bows and a 72-lighted gold candelabrum.

The bride's sister, Katrina Kimble of Phoenix, Ariz., served as matron of honor and best man was Jerry Fritts of Amarillo.

Bridesmaids included the bride's niece, Ambyr Donnell of Lubbock, and Ronda Clark, also of Lubbock.

Groomsmen were Kelly Cook of Lubbock and John Pipkin of Boyd.

Guests were escorted by Wade Donnell of Lubbock, Joshua Kimble of Phoenix, Ariz., and Eric Thomas and David Dye, both of Amarillo.

The groom's niece, Cierra Geer, daughter of Perry and Terry Geer, was flower girl. Ring bearer was Jeremy Kimble, son of David and Katrina Kimble.

Candles were lit by Joshua Kimble and Wade Donnell.

Steve Simpson, pianist, performed "Only God Could Love You More" and "Forever In Love."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white Southern belle satin dress fashioned with a fitted bodice which was covered in pearls and beadwork, potato chip ruffles at the shoulders and a full train accented with potato chip ruffles. She also wore satin gauntlets adorned with pearls and beadwork.

The Southern belle bridal hat was designed with potato chip ruffles.

The bride carried a bouquet of bright pink, coral pink, royal blue and white roses, carnations, baby's breath, pearls and lace.

To complete her ensemble, she wore pearls and carried a pearl Bible.

Bridal attendants wore black with white polkadot "pretty woman" styled dresses and white hats accented with black bows. They carried floral bouquets in bright pink, royal blue and white.

Kimberly Fritts invited guests to the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Cake, punch and coffee were served by Cookie Taylor, Clara Dye and LuAnne Waldrop.

The four-tiered white cake with white icing was decorated with pink, blue and white roses. The main refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a pink, blue and white floral arrangement accented with pink, blue and white balloons.

The couple will live in Canyon.

The bride graduated from Canyon High School and previously owned Hi-Tech Video and Tanning in Hereford. She received her B.A. degree in political science from West Texas State University and is actively involved in the quarter horse industry.

The groom received a B.S. degree in animal business from Texas Tech University. He is currently employed by the American Quarter Horse Association and is also involved in the quarter horse industry.

Founder's Day to be observed by sorority

Three local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will be celebrating the organization's 62nd Founder's Day anniversary at 7 p.m. Tuesday at K-Bob's.

Chapters participating in the observance will include Alpha Iota Mu, Xi Epsilon Alpha and Alpha Alpha Preceptor. Teresa Hopping is this year's chairman of the Founder's Day activities.

Some of the local Beta Sigma Phi projects include assisting the Rape Crises/ Domestic Violence Center, the annual Christmas Stocking Fund, the Good Shepherd Program and the Lifeline Program.

The annual local Founder's Day observance, in concert with 12,500 chapters of 250,000 members throughout the world, is held each year to honor Walter W. Ross. Ross, who during the depression, saw a need among the young women he met in his work as a traveling encyclopedia salesman. He believed they needed more in their lives than work, responsibility and hardship and decided to devote his life to providing them with a social and cultural outlet.

Ross's efforts brought seven young women in Abilene, Kan. together in 1931 to form that sort of organization. Beta Sigma Phi met their needs and continues to meet the needs of hundreds of thousands of women today. Ross will be remembered on this anniversary by the largest Greek letter sorority in the world.

During the local observance, awards will be presented to outstanding chapter members, recognizing them for their sorority and community work.

NEW YORK (AP) - Lionel Hampton celebrated his 85th birthday doing what he's done for 65 years, playing vibes to an audience of delighted jazz fans.

Among those at the Wednesday night party at Club USA were model Naomi Campbell, jazz trumpeter Clark Terry and bandleader Cab Calloway.

Hampton, who still goes on the road with his 17-piece band, attributed his longevity to reading the Bible, frequent prayer and playing jazz.

"I remember meeting Louis Armstrong for the first time and I asked him about jazz and what it meant to him," Hampton said. "He said, 'Son, don't mess with it.' And I've been messing with it ever since."

NEW YORK (AP) - You've already heard the big names - Dana Carvey, Dennis Miller and Garry Shandling - bandied about as replacements for David Letterman.

Now get ready for the names Drew Carey, Wayne Cotter, Allan Havey, Paul Provenza, Rick Reynolds or Jon Stewart.

With Letterman leaving for CBS at the end of June, NBC isn't saying who his replacement might be.

Carvey, Miller and Shandling have been prominently mentioned by various media. Now, the trade journals Media Week and The Hollywood Reporter say NBC is looking for a lesser-known standup comedian.

Provenza and Havey have had their own shows on cable's Comedy Central, and Reynolds had a one-man show off-Broadway, "Only the Truth Is Funny."

Cotter is the host of a comedy showcase on television.

But all six are relatively unknown outside the comedy circuit.

Thanks

I offer friends & neighbors for love & support, prayers, cards & kindness shown & given to me during my recent illness.

PHOENIX (AP) - Basketball star Charles Barkley dumped beer on a woman who tore up his autograph. And he had no apologies to make.

"If she'd been really upset, don't you think she would have sued me?" he said Wednesday.

Debbie Hartel said the confrontation occurred after the Phoenix Suns star refused to give her a second autograph at a restaurant Sunday. The woman said she wanted the extra signature for patients at a nursing home where she works.

When Barkley refused, Hartel said, she tore up the first autograph, they exchanged words and he poured beer on her.

Thank You

We wish to express our deepest appreciation to all who so kindly remembered our loved one at his passing. The visits, calls, food, flowers & memorials are deeply appreciated. Thanks to all who remembered us in prayer. A special thanks to Rev. Joe Wood and The Hereford Masonic Lodge for their loving tributes. Thanks to all who cared. We are truly blessed!

Wied, Simnacher wed in afternoon ceremony

Karen Wied of Lubbock became the bride of John Simnacher of Ardmore, Okla. during an afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday, April 17, in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

The ceremony was officiated by Msgr. Orville Blum of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Wied of Friona and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Simnacher of Hereford.

The bride's sister, Kelly Mann of San Antonio, served as matron of honor and best men were Larry Backus of Amarillo and Drue Gault of Lubbock.

Bridesmaids included Bena Glasscock of Stephenville, Jill Herring of Lubbock and the groom's sister, Danielle Bartels.

Groomsmen were Kent Simnacher of Lubbock and Keith Simnacher of Roswell, N.M.

Serving as ushers were Mike Mann of San Antonio, the bride's brother-in-law; Bennett Lee of Lubbock, the bride's cousin; Randy Hochstein of Amarillo; and Rick Bartels, the groom's brother-in-law.

Candles were lit by Randy Hochstein and Rick Bartels.

Denise Detten accompanied Heather Griffin and Michael Griffin as they sang, "One Friend," "Household of Faith" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white satin designer's gown fashioned with a modified scalloped sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice, basque waistline and bishop sleeves which extended fitted to the wrists. Lace appliques, beads, pearls and sequins further adorned the gown and the sleeves which were accented with white bows. The full skirt was styled with a sheer illusion overlay with lace appliques, pearls, beads and sequins and marked at the back with a white bow. The hemline was edged with scalloped lace and extended into a chapel-length train.

The fingertip veil, adorned with hand-beaded pearls, was attached to a tiara headpiece of lace flowers and sprays of pearls.

The bride carried a cascading arrangement of white roses and baby's breath accented with white satin ribbons.

Her jewelry included a pearl necklace given to the bride by her grandmother and pearl earrings.

Bridal attendants wore emerald green tea-length sheath gowns with sweetheart necklines and bishop sleeves that extended to the elbows. The sleeves were fashioned from emerald organza. Each carried nosegay bouquets of white roses.

Jackie Spinhearn and Leslie Whitman invited guests to register at the reception held at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Cake was served by Lory Hochstein, Stephanie Dolle and Angela Ferry. Punch and coffee were poured by Leslie Whitman.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., the bride wore a navy and white shorts jumpsuit with navy shoes.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Friona High School and plans to graduate from Texas Tech University in May with a bachelor of science degree in dietetics.

The groom, a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School, is a 1990 graduate of Texas Tech University. He is currently employed as a supervisor for Bluebonnet Mills.

Out of town guests included Leona Wied of Wilson, Ida Simnacher of Pep, and Wesley Menzer of Alaska. Other guests represented San Antonio, Dallas, Weatherford, Albuquerque, N.M., Amarillo and Lubbock.

Bridal showers were held in the home of Linda Griffin of Friona and the E.B. Black House. A lingerie shower was hosted by Jennifer Ogle of Lubbock.

Jeanette Niznik feted with bridal shower

Jeanette Niznik, May 22 bride-elect of Chet Bunch, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday, April 17, in Ward Parlor of First United Methodist Church.

Greeting guests with the honoree were her mother, Peggy Larsen; the prospective bridegroom's mother, Joy Bunch; and his grandmother, Joyce Smith.

Cathy Bunch, the prospective groom's sister-in-law, invited guests to register.

Refreshments included miniature cinnamon rolls, fresh fruit trays, nuts, coffee and punch.

The table was covered with a white cloth and white lace overlay. The centerpiece consisted of an arrangement of peach lilies, spider mums and greenery accented by a forest green bow. Further enhancing the table setting were crystal and silver appointments including a silver coffee service.

The honoree was presented with a comforter in the bride-elect's chosen colors of forest green and peach.

Hostesses included Kee Ruland, Marilyn Watson, Jayne Euler, Marilyn Bell, Lois Jones, Zula Arney, Joan Bookout, Nicky Walser, Pat Scott, Carolyn McDonald, Tricia Sims, Christine Evans, Juanita Potec and Mary Jones.

On January 20, 1993, Bill Clinton's salary increased by $165,000.

Know the facts about plastic

Doing the right thing for the environment has never been more important or more confusing. Conventional attitudes toward various packaging materials are changing as new information becomes available and solid waste priorities are redefined.

The plastic versus paper bag debate offers a case in point. Test your knowledge of the facts in the brief quiz below, using these answers:

- plastic bags
- paper bags
- both
- neither

1) Which can be recycled, paper or plastic bags?

2) Which is biodegradable in a landfill?

3) Which type of bag takes up less space in landfills?

4) Which bag creates less pollution?

5) Which bag consumes more energy?

Answers

- C - both
- D - Neither
- A - plastic bags
- A - Plastic bags
- B - Paper bags

"Despite its well-accepted advantages for convenience and ease of carrying, the plastic bag initially was viewed to be at a disadvantage environmentally," according to Len Levy, president of the Plastic Bag Association.

"Beginning in 1990, however, independent studies by such respected groups as the National Audubon Society, Franklin Associates and the German Office of the Environment found that plastic bags offer a number of important environmental advantages."

Medications discussed at meeting

Rita Chamberland presented a program concerning medications when members of the La Afflatus Estudio Club met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Marie Harris.

The speaker stressed that it is important to learn how medications react to other medications as well as over-the-counter drugs.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to the speaker, and members: Virginia Beasley, Opal Elliston, Annie Delozier, Alberta Higgins, Lydia Hopson, Pet Ott, Mary Williamson, Della Stagner and Emily Suggs.

The LAE club members will meet for a spring luncheon at 12:30 p.m. May 4 with Something Special catering the meal.

DREs nab drivers on drugs

What's bad news for some motorists is very good news for the many more who care about highway safety.

Drivers who get behind the wheel while under the influence of:

- stimulants such as cocaine
- depressants such as barbiturates
- inhalants such as gasoline or glue
- marijuana
- hallucinogens such as LSD
- PCP

-and narcotic analgesics such as heroin, run a high risk of getting caught by one of the many Drug Recognition Experts (DREs). Police officers who have undergone a lengthy training program, supported by the U.S. Department of Transportation, that enables them to detect if a driver is under the influence of drugs - and if it's found that you are, you can go to jail. What's more, if you're involved in an accident, even if you weren't at fault, and it's determined that you've been taking illegal drugs, you could still go to jail.

Keep in mind that drug use greatly impairs your driving ability - and if you've been drinking as well as taking drugs, the impairment is even greater. The DRE observes and records five categories of reactions that demonstrate signs of drug use:

1. Vital signs (pulse, temperature and blood pressure).
2. Psychophysical reactions (coordination of mind and body).
3. Signs of administration of drugs (injection sites, etc.)
4. Eye response (horizontal/vertical gaze nystagmus; eye convergence; pupil size under varying light intensities).
5. Physical and behavioral characteristics (muscle rigidity or flaccidity, hyperactivity, etc.).

Studies have shown that DRE examinations are more than 90 percent accurate in determining what category of drug a driver has been abusing. To determine the specific drug, toxicology tests are then conducted by a chemist.

Harvard University is named for John Harvard, a Massachusetts clergyman who donated money and about 400 books to create the university's library in 1639. Today, Harvard University Library is the oldest U.S. library.

By JOE WEAVER

Spring is certainly in evidence in Hereford. The trees are budding and the lilacs are in bloom like I haven't seen in a long time. I've spent a little time this week getting the lawnmower going, and doing some other stuff associated with that four letter word "work." Some of the days lately have been a little cool, some have been too windy and some have been too...ahem stinky. (In Hereford?? Surely not!) But once in a great while we get one of those perfect days when all work is to be ignored in favor of a little hammock testing combined with a book from the library.

You might be surprised to know how often we receive books as gifts. Most of these are to be put in the annual sale, some are to do with as we wish, but there are a few given with the implication that we will add them to our collection. The library reserves the right of selection, of course, over what we put in the stacks, but generally these are a real asset and we are glad to accept them. Thanks to patron Nancy Last, we now have the "Cat Who" books needed to complete our collection. This week we're putting out The Cat Who Played Post Office and The Cat Who Played Brahms. (Fans of Calvin and Hobbes can also thank Nancy).

Some time ago we received Malooof: The Chassani Legacy, a beautifully bound comprehensive work about the Malouf generations compiled by George Malouf and presented by George and Yiota. This is a welcomed addition to our non-circulating genealogy collection.

Recently we, along with the local school libraries, were presented copies of The Finishing Touch, a history of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and cattle feeding in the Southwest. As might be expected, Hereford figures prominently in the work. Autographed by author Charles E. Ball, our copies are gifts from AZTx Cattle Company, and surprisingly, one of the few books we have on cattle feeding.

Some of our gift books are from people who have an axe to grind. L. Ron Hubbard comes immediately to mind, but this week's offering is from Lyndon LaRouche: Dope, Inc., billed as "the book that drove Kissinger crazy." This book purports to reveal "the most deeply held secrets of the big names behind the world's illegal narcotics trade."

Mention "Urban Legends," and most folks won't know what you're talking about, although you can bet that they have repeated one or two. Urban legends are those stories that make the rounds every now and then about an incident that happened to "somebody's cousin's girlfriend" but nobody can actually document the case. (The old story about the hook on the car door is a classic). Jan Harold Brunvand is the ace of urban legends, author of a number of collections of such stories, the latest being The Baby Train and Other Lusty Legends, going out this week.

Ingmar Bergman, renowned director of works for stage, screen and tube, presents The Best Intentions, a loosely biographical novel set in the decade 1908-1918. It is a story about love in the Old World in the years surrounding the First World War.

If at Faust You Don't Succeed is the title of the new sci-fi-fantasy by Roger Zelazny and Robert Shekley. Mephistopheles, Michael, and Dr. Johann Faust tangle as the forces of Good and Evil vie for control of the universe in this diabolical comedy about life, death, Heaven, Hell...and eternal bureaucracy.

To The Friends of Jewel Smith

We will never be able to adequately express our thanks for the many acts of kindness extended to our mother, Jewel Smith, during her lengthy illness. We are also grateful for the prayers, cards, flowers, food and memorials received following her death. So many people were loving and caring to our family during this time.

We wish to extend a special thanks to Ron Cook, The First Baptist Church, Melba Patton, the nurses and staff of Deaf Smith General Hospital, and to our wonderful Christian doctor, Howard Johnson. We are so thankful for Christian friends and a wonderful caring church and community.

BRIAN THOMAS, MELINDA WILSON

Couple to wed

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Wilson of Hart announce the engagement of their daughter, Melinda, to Brian Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Thomas of Hereford. The couple plans to wed June 12 at First Baptist Church in Hart.

The bride-elect's grandfather is Jim Brooks of Clovis, N.M. and the prospective bridegroom's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Thomas and Mrs. Winnie Tyler, all of Hereford.

The bride-elect is a 1988 graduate of Hart High School. She received a bachelor of arts degree in English in 1992 from Texas Tech University. She is currently teaching seventh grade English in the Bryan Independent School District.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School. He will graduate from Texas A&M University in August with a bachelor of science degree in animal science.

Public invited to join Hereford CCA

The Hereford Community Concert Association invites the public to join the organization during its current annual membership and renewal campaign which will conclude May 1.

Through the association with Columbia Artists management, three outstanding professional musical attractions will be available to local CCA members.

Performing in Hereford during the 1993-94 concert season will be the Americus Brass Band, Famous People Players and the Hungarian Virtuosi Orchestra.

Those interested in joining the CCA may sign up at campaign headquarters located at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main St., or by calling the CCA main office at 364-3333.

Ann Meyer, 578-4486, or Marjorie Mims, 364-1803.

Membership dues are $15 for adults; $7.50 for students through grade 12; and $40 for family membership. The association stresses that there will be no individual performance tickets sold, one must purchase a membership during the designated time. Attendance at the concerts is by membership card only and if a member cannot attend a concert, he may lend his card to another person.

Besides the advantage of being able to attend a series of live, professional concerts at the lowest possible cost to members, a CCA card holder may also attend concerts in area towns including Plainview, Pampa, Borger, Dumas and Dalhart.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent-H.E. ANSWERING CONSUMER QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD ADDITIVES

Food additives help provide an abundant food supply that is convenient for consumers. They also make a coast-to-coast distribution system work in the United States. Yet, publicity surrounding certain food additives raises questions regarding the safety of food additives.

Why use food additives? Food additives are substances added to food in some phase of production, processing, storing or packaging. They help provide an abundant and convenient food supply by serving four major functions.

-They improve the nutritional value of foods. For example, through enrichment and fortification, products such as cereals and grain products have added vitamins and minerals. Many deficiency diseases occurring in this country in the first part of the century have been eliminated through the process of adding these nutrients to foods.

-They maintain freshness. Additives help prevent spoilage from bacteria, mold, fungi, yeast or chemical agents. This means that foods "last" longer.

-They help with processing or preparation of foods so that they are desirable and maintain qualities that consumers like. They keep: ice cream from crystallizing; salad dressings from separating; breads light.

-They make food more appealing. Flavors such as spices and sweeteners compliment the taste and aroma of food. Colors make a food look more desirable.

How are food additives regulated? Food additives are regulated by the Food and Drug Administration. Before a new food additive can be approved for its intended use, extensive testing must be done and evidence must be presented that the additive is safe. This often requires much money and many years.

What about the GRAS LIST? Substances on the GRAS (Generally Recognized as Safe) list are those that were in use before laws enacted in 1958 and 1960. These laws required proof of safety before a new additive could be marketed. However, GRAS substances could continue to be used without prior approval. (Salt, sugar, vitamins, minerals were on this list). This has been a source of concern because some of these substances have since been shown to be dangerous and have been removed from the GRAS list (i.e. cyclamates). A systematic review of these substances is on-going, but is lengthy.

What can concerned consumers do to reduce exposure to additives? While most consumers benefit from the use of food additives, a small part of the population may be sensitive to some substances, such as sulfite and MSG (monosodium glutamate). Concerned consumers can control the presence of food additives in the diet by:

1. Eating a varied, balanced diet, avoiding extreme consumption of processed foods.
2. Reading labels to avoid additives that may present problems.
3. Being informed - call manufacturers of products when there are questions.

15 MINUTES

On the average, that's how long it takes to VOTE. As a candidate for Mayor of Hereford, I ask for your support, but more importantly, I ask for your participation in the process. Take stock in your local government and invest 15 MINUTES to make your voice heard during the May 1st elections.

Sincerely,

Bob Josseland

CITY PROBLEMS

- LANDFILL
- TAXES
- WATER
- POOL
- SEWER
- ETC, ETC.

We all gripe about these problems and their solutions but, why would anyone want to get mixed up in this mess?

I decided I wanted to find out what is really going on in our city, and what better way than just to jump right in the middle of it.

Can I find any better answers? I don't know. But I can apply my experience and vote my opinions on how to run our city as efficiently as possible.

With your support, I will do my best to see that Hereford is headed in the right direction.

Thank You

Hospital tour taken by sorority chapter

Renee Hammock, director of nursing at Deaf Smith General Hospital, recently gave a guided tour of the facilities for members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.
 Members noted the new hospital decor in the entrance, halls, waiting rooms and patient areas. New equipment such as the fetal monitors and pacemaker implanters were shown to the group. The numerous improvements have been implemented since the hospital's affiliation with Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.
 Following the repeating of the opening ritual, led by President Kay Williams, and the tour, members met in the hospital's dining room for a business meeting.
 The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and a communication listing the suggested recipients for the state service project were read by President Williams. Also, the chapter decided to endorse the West Texas Rehabilitation Center located in Abilene.
 Thank yous were extended for Easter gifts by Melinda Henson, Dalene Burns, Peggy Hyer, Connie Matthews, Marge Bell, Brenda Ramey, Linda Arellano, Kay Williams and Ruby Sanders. Susan Cardinal also thanked her secret sister and the president extended appreciation to the members who assisted at Beta Nite.
 It was announced that the chapter's adopted sister, Billie Brown, was sent an Easter card which was signed by chapter members.
 The next chapter meeting will be held May 4 with Linda Arellano presenting a program on "Diet: Generalities for Healthful Diet." Ruby Sanders will serve as co-hostess. Also, during the meeting, new officers will be installed.

 Deann Harris, who reported for membership, announced that Susan Cardinal, Sharon Bodner and Marge Bell will be moving up to the Alpha Alpha Chapter.
 The nominations committee, chaired by Denise Halliger, presented their list of nominees for chapter officers. New officers for 1993-94 include: President, Linda Arellano; vice president, Connie Matthews; treasurer, Ruby Lee; recording secretary, Gaye Reily; and corresponding secretary, Susan Shaw.

Nance Ranch toured by study club

Members of the Valeda Study Club were given a recent tour of the Nance Ranch.
 While dining in the Nance home, a program was given by Miss Wilson who told of the part West Texas University played in restoring the home. She also pointed out various art work and antiques.
 Those in attendance included Juanita Brown, Marcella Bradley, Frances Crum, Bettie Dickson, Mary Dziuk, Ruth Fish, Della Hutto, Ellen Wade, Betty Olson, Joyce Ritter, Theda Seiver, De' Aun Sisson, Norma Walden and Carolyn Waters.

CARYN HUBNER, NOAH GARCIA

Marriage planned

Caryn M. Hubner and Noah Garcia, both of Hereford, plan to wed June 12 in the chapel of Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.
 The bride-elect is the daughter of Gloria S. Hubner of Route 1, Hereford, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Ofelia and Frank Jose Garcia of 122 La Villa St.
 Miss Hubner is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School and is presently attending Amarillo College night classes at Hereford High School.
 Garcia is co-owner of Garcia Brothers Cement Contractors.

NEW YORK (AP) - LaToya Jackson's husband, charged with hitting her with a chair, says he was defending himself when she came at him with a knife.
 The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "South Pacific" opened on Broadway in 1949.

Jack Gordon, 54, was arrested Wednesday on assault and weapons charges and freed without bail. Jackson, the 36-year-old singing sister of Michael Jackson, was treated at a hospital for a cut lip and bruises on her legs, arms and back.
 Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Loewy quoted Gordon as saying: "The only reason I hit her was because she came at me with a knife."

The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "South Pacific" opened on Broadway in 1949.

Thank You

Wesley United Methodist Church members would like to thank our friends and the community for helping to make our stew supper a great success. Thanks also to the Hereford Brand and KPAN.

Thank You

I cannot begin to thank all the people who have stood by me and loved me throughout this surgery ordeal. I am amazed and truly overwhelmed by the tremendous amount of kindness shown to me including the visits, cards, calls, food, gifts & flowers. I never dreamed so many people cared so much about me. I could never thank my family, Mary Ruth, Janell & Joe Don enough for the sacrifices they and their families have made for me. You have all touched my life beyond words. My cup runneth over.

NEW YORK (AP) - Ivan Boesky wants millions from his ex-wife, plus $20,000 a week in alimony - money her lawyers say he made by stealing and cheating.

The wife of the fallen Wall Street trader wept in court Wednesday as she told of becoming a "social outcast" because of her husband's crimes.
 "Overnight," Seema Boesky testified at a trial to divide up the couple's assets, "I went from being someone who was socially acceptable and who felt proud of who she was to a social outcast. I saw my name removed from buildings. Charities returned my checks. Country clubs requested our resignations."

Farmer's stories give a feel for six decades on the plains

By RAY WESTBROOK
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
SHALLOWATER, Texas (AP) - Gale Ballard has lived on the same farm near Shallowater for 63 of his 80 years, and he isn't planning to move to town now.

A master at the art of understatement, Ballard said, "I guess we will stay here for a while since we are just about to get used to this place by now."

Ballard also has a down-home way of turning a phrase.

"Back in 1932-35 there were bad sandstorms here. Some of them just got dark right in the middle of the day - and you didn't turn the light on either because there wasn't any electricity," he explained.

A kerosene lamp provided some light, but not much. "You would just light the lamp, and then you would have to strike a match to see if the lamp was burning," he said.

Ballard has kept some memorabilia from the past, including a rare Model-T Ford. "It's a closed-in sedan," he said. "Back yonder in the '20s, they didn't make very many of those closed-in cars; they were all open-top cars. Most cars had a canvas top, and you could let the top down, but this is a four-door sedan. It has glasses that roll up and down, and even has locks on the doors."

Ballard still drives that car in some local parades; in other parades, he drives a 1929 Model-A Ford fire truck that is painted red.

He has reduced his collection of antique automobiles in recent years, however. "I have sold three in the past two years," he said. "I don't know how come me to do it, but I just decided I would."

Ballard has an eyewitness's perspective on the history of the Lubbock area. "Shallowater wasn't very big," he remembers. "I guess there was one filling station in Shallowater. It was right there where Virgil Bets' (service station) is now, and Uncle Pate Hardy ran it."

He remembers the picturesque scene this way: "We came through Shallowater in 1926, moving to Sudan. They had a horse trough there and a windmill, and we watered our horses at the horse trough right in the middle of Shallowater."

Ballard and his parents moved in 1930 to the farm where he now resides with his wife, Florence and where his children, Tommy and Alice, grew up.

He remembers the "rough times" of the Depression. "It was all dry land farming then, and all with horses. I will guarantee you farming has changed a lot. We just used horsepower then."

He doesn't do any crop farming now and has no plans to start again. "I don't guess I will farm anymore. I have my tractor in the museum down at Shallowater," he said.

The tractor to which he refers is a 1937 John Deere that he bought used in 1942.

"We made a living with it," he remembers.

Ballard thinks farming would be difficult to break into the 1990s. "It's pretty hard for the farmers to make any money now the way things are. I was talking to a man the other day - a good farmer - who lives over at county line. Me and him were talking, and he said, 'Gale, it's just a little bit odd because I can remember back in '50 that I bought a brand new John Deere tractor, planter and cultivator and gave $3,000 for it. Cotton was 50 cents a pound. Now, cotton is 50 cents a pound and a tractor will cost you $50,000.'"

"It's hard to operate and make any money farming now."

Ballard does maintain an active interest in animals, however. "I still raise some mules," he said. "I sell them - I sold two pair of mules in the past year. People just use them to hook to wagons in parades."

His chicken collection has fallen on hard times this year. "I did have a good many, real pretty, different chickens. But I had some bad luck with my chickens the past four months of something catching them. A badger killed 64 hens for me in three nights."

Those remaining, he said, include Plymouth Rocks, Dominickers (Dominiques), Rhode Island Reds, Leghorns and Banties (Bantams). "I also have got some fighting game hens - just for the fun of it."

Ballard's farm is approximately 8 miles northwest of Shallowater. He believes the community has a bright future. "I think it's just going to keep coming right along. Lots of people like to live in Shallowater and work in Lubbock. They have good schools in Shallowater, and lots of people would rather be there than be in a pretty good-sized town like Lubbock."

Like some who look back over a lifetime, Ballard would change a few things, among them the inconveniences of country living in the days before technology made things easier.

"Back yonder when we first lived here, we had four rooms and a path (to the outhouse). It was a little different then. You would go to the windmill and take your bucket of water in just before suppertime in the winter; then the dipper would freeze in the bucket and you couldn't get a drink the next morning - and that was inside the house!"

He remembers better times, too. "We got up in high cotton there for a while. We got us a coal oil heater and put it in the living room. It was a pretty, brown color, and, man, we just sat there and enjoyed that. We were in high cotton, boy."

And he would do it all again.

"In June, Florence and me will be married 59 years. We have got this good house, so I guess we will just stay here for ... maybe for ... I don't know if we will stay here another 60 years or not, but we might."

The Nazarene Christian Academy is sponsoring its annual dinner theatre, "A View From the Pew", at 7 p.m. April 30 and May 1 in the Nazarene gym. The public is invited to purchase tickets, priced at $10 per person, at the N.C.A. office or by calling the school at 364-1697 for reservations. All proceeds will benefit the school. Rehearsing for the presentation are, from left, Priscilla Power and Keith Ann Gearn.

Small business survey pinpoints big need

If you work for a small business, you have a lot of company. Over 100 million Americans do. If you own a small business, you and your workers will be interested in the results of a new survey which shows that the proper use of computers can help a small business succeed. It also shows that you can become a better manager.

Knowing just what computers can do for you can mean a big deal. For example, the survey shows that:

- Computers can help you become more responsive to customer needs
- They can help you understand cash flow.

- They can even play a big role in increasing profits by helping you manage your resources better. A spokesman for IBM, which commissioned the survey, said increased productivity and efficiency are the primary reasons for choosing a system, along with cost saving.

How Some Use Computers

Computers, for example, were the strategic weapon a Texas-based watch distributor used to double its revenue to $25 million in two years.

In Illinois, an IBM RISC System/6000, allowed a lock company to handle a 25 percent jump in sales two weeks after its new catalog was mailed. It was able to respond quickly to customers and handle the orders easily.

A growing number of small businesses are learning from these examples. As a result, they are quickly becoming better managed.

By being able to gather information more easily and use it better, small companies are getting a big edge on their competition.

Unless They're Stopped, Southwestern Bell Will Know More About You Than Even The IRS.

By keeping track of who you call, how often you call and how long your conversations last, Southwestern Bell and other Texas telephone companies can create an alarmingly detailed profile of your life.

Fortunately, they have never had any reason to do this.

Until now. The telephone companies are no longer satisfied with owning a monopoly over local telephone lines. They now want to own and control the information services that flow through those lines.

By using their file on you, these companies could make you the target for all kinds of sales messages involving your business, your health, your finances, your family life and more.

Call an obstetrician and you could be hounded by diaper services and daycare centers. Call for stock quotes and the telephone company could try to sell you their stock selection service. Call a dating service and the next thing you know the telephone company could try to arrange your social life.

The Texas legislature can go a long way towards preventing this abuse by supporting a two-year study that will provide the true facts behind the telephone companies' desires to be deregulated and free to set their own policies and rates.

Urge your legislator to vote in favor of a two-year, fact-revealing study that will protect Texans from the monopolistic whims of Texas telephone companies. Because if you remain silent now, everything you say later can, and just might, be used against you. Support the two-year study and protect your pocketbook.

Tell your legislator that you want to be protected from powerful Texas telephone company monopolies.

Benefit planned Thursday

The Texas Band will be performing during a benefit social planned at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 29, in the Lamar Room of King's Manor Retirement Home. The public is invited to attend the event free of charge.

During the evening, refreshments will be served and two hand-crafted porcelain dolls made by Rosalee McGowen will be given away. Tickets will be sold for $2.50 each, giving the purchaser two chances to win a doll. Tickets may be purchased at King's Manor, First National Bank, the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce office, and from members of the Women's Division, King's Manor Auxiliary and Hereford Pilot Club.

All proceeds from ticket sales will be used to help purchase a security system for King's Manor.

Camp applications available

Members of the Hereford Camp Fire Council are accepting applications for local youths to attend Camp Makiuiwa scheduled June 13-19 near Taos, N.M.

The camp is open to all school-age children, first through 12 grades. Cost is $200 for Camp Fire members and $210 for non-members.

Camp activities will include nature study, Indian lore, swimming, canoeing, rafting, handmade arts and crafts, sports and games, dance, archery, fishing, horseback riding, and ropesphere.

Those planning to attend camp must register no later than May 1 with a deposit of $185.

For additional information, call the council at 364-0395. Forms are available at the Camp Fire office or from any Camp Fire member.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read your column in which a reader declares that American men are "lousy lovers" compared with European men. I have seen a number of similar complaints in the past and believe it's high time we demanded to see some evidence.

How many women have had a sufficient sampling of foreign and domestic sex to make a statistically valid comparison? To be fair, they would have had to experience intimacy with men from all walks of life on both continents. This sounds to me like a full-time job.

After all, maybe it is only tall, middle-aged, good-looking European men who are hot stuff, compared to Joe Six-Pack who works in an office and likes baseball.—Will in Salem, Ore.

DEAR WILL: It is said that distance lends enchantment. Often that which is farthest away is most appealing.

The next letter explores the comparison and offers a healthy, sensible conclusion. Keep reading.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why are most American men lousy lovers as compared with their European brothers? Can it be that American women have been taught that the male ego is fragile when it comes to sex and to express dissatisfaction is threatening?

In America, men are pressured to believe they must be experts on everything. My experience has been that when a man doesn't know something, he won't admit it for fear it might diminish him. So he plows ahead as if he knows what he is doing, and this includes his behavior in the bedroom.

The solution? Communication. Men must be taught that sex is best when it is a mutually enjoyable act between people who really care about one another. Both parties must TALK to each other and be honest about their needs. Please TELL THEM — Beantown Prescription

DEAR BEANTOWN: I have. Often But I'll do it again. Thanks for the Rx.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Not long ago, my husband and I experienced a parent's worst nightmare. We were told that one of our children has a medical condition for which there is no treatment and we should anticipate her death.

The pain we are feeling is indescribable. Although we are pursuing every avenue, hoping to find someone in the medical field who knows more, we must face the possibility of losing our little angel. Although she is still with us, we are already grieving. There is such a cloud hanging over our heads, it is difficult to get through the day without breaking down. We walk around with tears in our eyes.

Please, Ann, help us. How do we plan to give up a child? Although we have always been strong in faith, we are finding it particularly hard to pray.

May we ask your readers, many of whom have been in our shoes, what we should do? Do we pull our children out of school and take a dream trip? Or is every day living the best gift for her? What about our other children? How do we prepare them for the loss? Can we avoid any traps that may scar them forever? Is there any way we can prepare for what lies ahead? We are heartbroken. Can you help us?—Arrow Through Our Hearts in New England

DEAR PARENTS: My heart goes out to you. Every parent who reads your letter is sure to feel your pain. Life has certainly dealt you a cruel blow.

You give no clue as to your daughter's age, the nature of her illness or how much time she may have left.

In spite of the scant background, if any of my readers have some suggestions, I will pass them along. Please let me hear from you. Over the years, my readers have become like family, and we must help one another.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am so angry I can barely see to write this letter. Several months ago, I was having a medical problem. My husband "George" suggested that we talk to a friend about it. I am a very private person and told him that never, under any circumstances, would I discuss this matter with anyone.

The other night, George slipped and said something that made me aware our neighbors knew about my problem. Ann, there were only three people who knew about it—me, George and my doctor.

I know George talks too much, especially when he's had a few drinks. What burns me up is that he refuses to admit he broke this confidence.

This is not the first time something like this has happened. If George doesn't think he did anything wrong, how can I prevent this from happening again? What should I do?—Wife of a Big Mouth

DEAR WIFE: When you learn that a person has a loose lip, whether friend, colleague, neighbor or spouse, you don't tell that person anything you would not like to see on Page One of your newspaper.

The complete works of Johann Sebastian Bach fill about 60 volumes, but only nine or ten of his compositions were published during his lifetime.

Lawmakers will be faced with one month to act if voters turn down Proposition 1

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — If Texans don't pass the school finance proposal on the May 1 ballot, lawmakers will have a month to find another way to meet a court order for a constitutional education funding system.

Supporters of Proposition 1 say meeting the June 1 deadline won't be easy without the constitutional amendment, which would allow redistribution of some local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts.

But opponents say there's enough time to pass an alternative plan. They note that even if Proposition 1 passes, lawmakers must approve a separate spending plan that would put the constitutional amendment into effect.

If lawmakers don't meet the deadline, Texas faces a court-ordered cutoff of state spending on education. That would directly affect schools starting June 25, when the next monthly state aid payment would be scheduled to go out. Schools rely on state aid and local taxes.

School districts with money in reserve or the ability to borrow might be able to operate for a while without state money, according to the Equity Center, a group of poor school districts backing Proposition 1.

But the group said others — generally poor districts — could not.

"I don't know what the possibilities are of passing something else in that 30 days.... Anybody who is not too crazy about the solutions that are available with a constitutional amendment are certainly not going to like the ones available without it," said Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, a sponsor of Proposition 1.

But Karen Hughes of the state GOP, whose leaders oppose the amendment, said, "I think the Legislature will pass something. They have done major bills in far less time than that."

Ratliff and Rep. Libby Lineberger, D-Manchaca, said that without a constitutional amendment, there are only two potential ways to meet a court order to even out funding available to property-rich and poor school districts: consolidation of school districts, or local elections to authorize the current county education district tax or a similar levy.

Money currently is redistributed from wealthier to poorer school districts within 188 single-county or multi-county districts. But the Texas Supreme Court said that method of equalizing school funding violates the state constitution.

Ms. Lineberger suggested that local elections would be "an exercise in futility" if Proposition 1 fails, because it would be asking voters to vote again on something that's been rejected statewide.

Such a plan could include a "hammer" to try to force approval of a county tax — such as consolidation for school districts that vote no.

Another potential answer could be an infusion of state money. But a number of education representatives have said that would be a multi-billion dollar solution, perhaps requiring a state income tax. State leaders say there won't be a state tax increase this session.

Some other proposals would require separate constitutional amendments, including one by Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, to restrict court intervention in school funding. Such a plan, if approved by lawmakers, couldn't go to voters before June 1.

But Culberson said he thinks lawmakers could pass virtually any measure, then put his proposal on the ballot later this year.

He noted that State District Judge F. Scott McCown, who is overseeing the case, has said he will presume a school plan is constitutional until it is challenged.

"It's a zero chance the schools will close, because the deadline is removed when the Legislature passes a separate school finance bill," Culberson said.

But Ms. Lineberger said that if an inequitable bill is passed, "it'll probably take about two days for them to declare it unconstitutional."

The House Public Education Committee, which Ms. Lineberger heads, is likely to approve a school consolidation plan this month "just to have it ready in case the amendment goes down," she said.

"We don't have another choice," Ms. Lineberger said. "It's not something we want to do, but neither am I willing to do nothing and let the courts cut off the money."

HOUSTON (AP) — Indigent patient bills are choking many of Houston's emergency rooms forcing taxpayers to pick up the tab rendered by the city's violence.

A typical day in the nation's fourth-largest city sends about two dozen patients to Ben Taub General Hospital's emergency room, one of the area's busiest.

Although indigent victims accounted for less than 10 percent of Ben Taub's emergency room patients last year, they ran up more than $23 million in charges, based on one month's billings, The Houston Post reported Sunday.

That month, November 1992, was typically bloody at the hospital police officers refer to as "The Tub."

Doctors treated 226 severely wounded people in shock-trauma rooms: 124 shot, 60 beaten, 41 stabbed, one sexually assaulted.

The bill for November's violence totaled $1.92 million.

"Unbelievable," says Dr. Kamal Itani, a surgeon who operated on many of those patients. "Unbelievable. You know, we never think of it that way."

Ben Taub charged the average victim of November's violence more than $8,500.

One of the November victims was Tony Pesina, an uninsured teen-ager stabbed through the heart.

Pesina was the first of 27 casualties of violence to come through Ben Taub's emergency center Nov. 21. Their bills that day totaled almost $450,000.

The charges to repair Pesina's wounds began to mount moments after he crumpled to his driveway. In six days, they totaled $31,532.05, a tab Pesina's family can't pay.

"There's no way I can pay it," says Pesina's mother, Alice Alva, 35. Her solution: "Tear it up."

But the bill does get paid — by taxpayers.

Fewer than 10 percent of Ben Taub's patients wounded by violent acts carry medical insurance, says hospital district spokesman Roger Widmeyer, who calls emergency centers "bigtime losers."

"Charges become meaningless," says Robert Barbier, the district's chief of finance.

Unpaid bills have crippled emergency rooms across America. Among the wounded, Hermann Hospital, Ben Taub's neighbor in the Texas Medical Center.

In October 1989, Hermann officials determined they could no longer afford to treat indigent patients. So they began to turn away ambulances bearing the city's severely wounded.

Ben Taub, known as the county's "free hospital," caught the bulk of Hermann's rejected patients. In three years, it nearly doubled its trauma-patient load. The hospital's trauma budget, meanwhile, climbed to $83.5 million for the year ending Mar. 31, 1992.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The One-Minute Column

I was excited when I bought the book. Although it was several years ago, I still remember hurrying home to read it. The book was becoming very popular and had been on the "best seller" list for several weeks.

The jacket covering the book made some pretty strong recommendations for purchase. "The quickest way to increase your own prosperity," the front cover promised. "Three easy-to-master management techniques guaranteed to change your life," the back cover stated in bold print. "The most important book you will buy this year!" the cover vowed.

As a struggling entrepreneur, those words were a balm to my troubled soul. I needed to increase my prosperity, and easy-to-master techniques would fit my busy schedule. So, I bought the book and set out to become a "One-Minute Manager."

I read the entire book that evening. Let me explain that this was not a big deal because the book contains less than 100 pages of copy. In addition, the type is large and doubled spaced. Nearly 10 percent of the pages contain fewer than 20 words.

When I finished the book, I tried to understand what I had just read. How exactly could I apply those easy-to-read principles and change my life. I realized that in my haste I must have missed the prosperity part altogether. I sighed as I turned out the light. This was going to take some time.

A quick fix

I was looking for a quick fix for my business problems. Unfortunately, "The One-Minute Manager" did not deliver on its quick fix promise. Nor have any of the books that followed. Subsequent titles include: "The One-Minute Teacher," "Mother," "Father," "Salesperson" and "Executive."

I'm certain all of these books contain useful information. I'm also quite sure that none of them will deliver a "one-minute fix."

Please take a minute to consider the following possibilities. How would you like to fly with a "one-minute pilot?" Would you care to have your brain surgery done by a "one-minute doctor?" How about having your income taxes prepared by a "one-minute CPA?" When the IRS decides you're guilty of income tax evasion, do you want a "one-minute trial lawyer" as your defender in court? Obviously, we would not accept these situations. We want those who provide important services to us to be well trained and thoroughly experienced.

Why then do books like the "One-Minute Somethings" sell by the millions. Perhaps it is because we all desire success and we want it right now. Like the sign I saw once that said, "Lord grant me patience - right now."

How it really works

You cannot achieve management skills, teaching techniques or medical expertise in one minute or even overnight. When our educational system works, we learn the basics. We build excellence and sharpen our skills as we specialize in our professions.

If we desire to be great, we must keep up with new concepts and techniques. Life is a process of learning, trying, mastering, achieving and then learning more.

There are no quick fixes and no one-minute solutions to life's complex problems. However, there are few problems that perseverance, education, experience and prayer won't overcome.

Now, about this one-minute column. It took several hours to write and edit. If you're an average reader you will spend about four minutes reading it. It isn't really a one-minute column. I'm sorry about the headline.

However, I do encourage you to keep reading Minding Your Own Business. In itself it isn't a quick fix. However, I believe the wisdom we've gleaned from others experience, will help you find the right road to prosperity. I'll guarantee it - in just one minute.

You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," PO Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

CLASSIFIED ADS
 Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60
5 days per word	.59	11.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
 Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines--those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS
 Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
 Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON CITY PAVING ASSESSMENTS

CITY OF HEREFORD DEAF SMITH COUNTY, TEXAS

NOTICE is hereby given to all abutting property owners and persons interested in property abutting upon Knight Street and Lafayette Street, within the limits herein defined, in the City of Hereford, Texas, and all persons owning or claiming any such abutting property, or any interest therein, and to all others claiming or interested in any of said property, or in any other proceedings, contracts and matters herein mentioned, that: The City Commission of the City of Hereford, Texas, by duly enacted Ordinance, has determined the necessity for, and ordered the permanent improvement of, the following described streets within the following limits, in the City of Hereford, Texas: (a) KNIGHT STREET: From the North property line of Higgins Street to the South Property line of Kibbe Street; (b) LAFAYETTE STREET: From the East property line of Avenue H to the West property line of Avenue I.

By said Ordinance, the City Commission of the City of Hereford, Texas, has ordered said streets, within the limits indicated, to be improved by constructing, paving, curbs and gutters, and by widening, narrowing and straightening, and by constructing appurtenances and incidentals thereto; and the cost of the improvements on such portions thereof with the amount per front foot proposed to be assessed for such improvements against abutting property and the owners thereof of each such portion in manner herein defined.

That the City Commission of the City of Hereford, Texas has received estimates of the cost of such improvements and estimates of the amount per front foot to be assessed against the abutting property and the real and true owners thereof, will be in accordance with the Front Foot Rule or Plan.

A hearing will be held by and before the City Commission of the City of Hereford, Texas, on the 3rd day of May, 1993, at 7:30 p.m. o'clock in the City Commission Chamber in the City Hall in the City of Hereford, Texas, to the real and true owners, whether named or correctly named herein or not, of all property abutting upon said streets within the limits above defined, and to all persons owning or claiming any such abutting property, or interest therein, and to all others owning, claiming or interested in said abutting property or any other proceedings, or matters herein mentioned incident to said improvements herein described.

At said time and place all such owners and persons interested in such paving shall have the right, at such hearing, to appear and make objections thereto, if any there be, and to contest the amounts of the proposed assessments, the special benefits to the abutting property and the validity of the proceedings in connection with such improvements and proposed assessments, if it is so desired; and this notice is given as is provided in Section 9 of Article 1105(b) of Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes of the State of Texas, as amended.

Said streets so improved and the cost of the improvements on such streets thereof with the amount per front foot proposed to be assessed for such improvements against abutting property and the owners thereof for each such portion is as follows: (a) Knight Street: From the North property line of Higgins Street to the South property line of Kibbe Street; the total amount per front foot proposed to be assessed against abutting property and the owners thereof is $23.155 and the estimated cost of the improvements is $49,388.58.

(b) Lafayette Street: From the East property line of Avenue H to the West property line of Avenue I; the total amount per front foot proposed to be assessed against abutting property and the owners thereof is $19.709 and the estimated cost of the improvements is $19,709.14.

HEREFORD'S

SENIOR SCENE

Supplement to The Hereford Brand

MAY 1993

Margie's Notes

We have had a beautiful spring, and summer is just around the corner. Things have really been busy at the Center. This month, as always, we've had several people from the surrounding area visiting our Center. They always want to know how our Center was built and how we keep things going.

Looking back through the years, it is good to remember how hard we all worked together to become such a strong organization and to build our beautiful Center here in Hereford with the help of so many people. Many have given so much!

I want to take this opportunity to say "thank you" to all of the volunteers who make it possible for us to keep going at the Center.

Every day, folks are willing and ready to help serve and deliver meals, answer the phone, quilt for the Center, assist with special projects, and to do anything else that needs to be done. During the snows this winter, people from the community were right there with four-wheel drive vehicles to help us deliver meals to the homebound elderly. We could never express our deep appreciation for the hours you spend helping the Center serve others.

We have truly been blessed. It is really great to be able to say, "See you at the Center!"

Proper diet important for kidney patients

If you have been diagnosed with chronic kidney disease, you should be working closely with your doctor and dietitian to find the right diet. This diet, according to medical scientists, may be based on all or some of the following guidelines:

- Control protein and electrolytes (salt and potassium)
- Limit mineral (phosphorus)
- Get extra calcium, vitamin B6 and Folic acid
- Eat enough calories for energy needs

Maintain good heart health

Move over health clubs and fad diets, it's back to basics for cardiovascular health, says a leading cardiologist.

"Maintaining good heart health doesn't necessarily require drastic lifestyle modifications or expensive, high tech medical care," says Marvin Moser, M.D., cardiologist, Yale University professor, and author of the recently released Week by Week to a Strong Heart: An Action Plan for Preventing or Treating Heart Disease and Other Circulatory Problems (Rodale Press).

Here are just a few of the simple heart-healthy practices featured in Dr. Moser's book:

-No need to jog or run to reduce your risk for cardiovascular disease.

-Using certain vitamins, such as A, C and E, taking aspirin, or spicing up your low-fat diet with garlic may also help.

Many people who are unable to eat well because of kidney problems have found that medical nutritional products are a pleasant addition to their diets. These are specially formulated products, based on the above guidelines. Consult your physician about incorporating medical nutritional products into your diet as a meal supplement in the amount that is right for you. Depending upon your prescribed diet, there are two products from Ross Products Division, Abbott Laboratories (makers of Ensure) that may be used to help you better manage your special dietary needs:

Suplena, a specialized liquid nutritional for non-dialyzed renal patients, on low-protein, low electrolyte (salt and potassium) and fluid restricted diets; and Nepro, a specialized liquid nutritional for dialyzed renal patients requiring electrolyte and fluid restrictions. It is high in calories and has a protein level appropriate for dialysis patients.

Food labeling regulations are outlined by Hereford dietitian

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD

March was National Nutrition Month as observed by the American Dietitian association. We as dietitians are stressing "Eat Right America" and hope to successfully promote the idea of putting healthy eating on America's menu.

"Eat Right America" encompasses the many aspects of food consumption starting with menu planning, selection of products, preparation of food, and service of food.

As has been reported earlier this year, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the US Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) had worked together to produce regulations on food labeling. On Jan. 6, 1993 the proposals from the two agencies were published in the Federal Register (Vol. 58, No. 3).

FDA-May 8, 1994 is the date manufacturers must comply with the new rules. Congress under the NLEA-Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990-extended the date from May 1993 to May 1994 for mandatory nutrition labeling and nutrition descriptors because of "undue economic hardship."

FSIS-July 6, 1994 is the date by which manufacturers must comply with the rules for meat and poultry products. Food products under the jurisdiction of FSIS were not included in NLEA and so could have a different implementation date.

Nutrition labeling will be available for almost all foods.

The FDA rules call mandatory labeling of processed foods under their jurisdiction. In addition, nutrition information is currently voluntary for fresh fruits and vegetables and raw fish at point of purchase.

The FSIS rules require mandatory labeling for most meat and poultry products except raw, single-ingredient products such as raw chicken breasts. The information is based on products "as packaged" (it does not include additional consumer preparation such as frying in oil). A label may also include information "as consumed."

Labeling is voluntary for raw, single-ingredient meat and poultry products. Labeling information may be given for product "as packaged" or "as consumed." Point-of purchase materials may be used to provide the voluntary information. Although the labeling for raw produce and raw meat, fish, and poultry is voluntary, the regulations carry strong incentives for retailers to participate. If voluntary compliance is not adequate, nutrition information for such raw foods will become mandatory.

EXEMPTIONS

FDA and FSIS have exemptions for certain products:

1. Food produced by small businesses;
2. Food served for immediate consumption (eg, in restaurants, institutions, and hospital cafeterias unless nutrient content or health claims are made);
3. Food in small packages; and
4. Food shipped in bulk

NUTRITION PANEL CONTENT

The new food label will have a new title on the nutrition panel-"Nutrition Facts"--which replaces "Nutrition Information Per Serving." A new set of dietary components will be provided on the nutrition panel.

The mandatory and voluntary (Underlined) components and in order in which they must appear on FDA-regulated foods are as follows:

1. Total calories; 2. calories from fat; 3. calories from saturated fat; 4. total fat; 5. saturated fat; 6. polyunsaturated fat; 7. monounsaturated fat;
- Also 8. cholesterol; 9. sodium; 10. potassium; 11. total carbohydrate; 12. dietary fiber; 13. soluble fiber; 14. insoluble fiber; 15. sugars; 16. sugar alcohols (eg, xylitol, mannitol, and sorbitol); 17. other carbohydrate; 18. protein;

- Also 19. vitamin A; 20. vitamin C; 21. calcium; 22. iron; 23. other essential vitamins and minerals

If a claim is made about any of the optional components, or if a food is fortified or enriched with any of them, nutrition information for these components then become mandatory.

The aforementioned mandatory and voluntary components are the only ones allowed on the nutrition panel. The required nutrients were selected because they address today's health concerns. The order in which they must appear reflects the priority of current dietary recommendations.

In addition to the aforementioned food components, FSIS will also allow stearic acid to be listed voluntarily.

NUTRITION FORMAT

All labels will have the same format, except where variations in format are allowed. All nutrients must be declared as a percent of their Daily Value-the new label reference value.

Social Security

"If your answer to these three questions is 'Yes', Social Security has important information for you," according to Jim Talbot, District Manager of the Amarillo office.

- (1) Are you age 70 or older?
- (2) Did you enroll for Medicare when you were 65?
- (3) Did you continue working when you were eligible for Social Security retirement benefits and therefore never collect them?

"If so, there's a good chance that you were one of the more than 12,000 people who got a letter from Social Security in November," Talbot said. It reminded potential beneficiaries that when they are 70 years old, they can work, earn any amount of money, and still receive full Social Security benefits. "After age 70, there's no limit on your earnings for Social Security purposes," Talbot explained. "Nothing is deducted from your monthly check even though you continue to work."

Social Security has launched a major effort to contact people 3 months before their 70th birthday. letters will be mailed each month to potential beneficiaries reminding them that no matter how much they're earning now, they should get in touch with Social Security if they want to begin collecting benefits.

"Too often people who continue to work don't realize they can collect their Social Security benefits," says Talbot. "We need to be sure they know that they're entitled to monthly benefits even if they are still working."

That's why we're sending them letters urging them to come into the office and check with us about their eligibility. We want to make sure that all workers who paid into Social Security get the benefits they've earned."

If you think you're eligible, you can arrange for an appointment by calling Social Security's toll-free telephone number, 1-800-772-1213, any business day between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., or you can call or visit the local office.

How much energy does the sun give off? Imagine that gasoline flowed over Niagara Falls at the rate of five billion gallons per hour. If all the gasoline that flowed over the falls for more than 200 million years could be collected and burned, it would equal the energy that the sun gives off in one hour!

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: How does Medicare determine its approved amounts for physician services?
A: Medicare's approved amount, also called the reasonable or allowable charge, is usually determined in the following manner: When a doctor submits a claim, the Medicare carrier compares the amount submitted with the doctor's usual charge for the service and with the amounts other physicians in the community usually charge for the same service. The lowest of the 3 becomes the approved amount.

Q: I just called my doctor and was told that she wouldn't accept assignment of a Medicare claim. What does this mean?

A: Physicians who don't accept assignment of Medicare claims may charge more (but not more than 115 percent more) than the Medicare approved amount and collect full payment directly from you. Medicare then pays you 80 percent of the approved amount for the covered service, minus any unmet portion of the annual deductible. You are liable for all permissible charges in excess of Medicare's approved amount.

Q: My parents, who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and who've lived in a mobile home for 15 years, are considering moving to a Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) rent-subsidized apartment. Will their eligibility for SSI be affected?

A: No. The HUD subsidy won't affect your parent's eligibility for SSI, as long as all of their other living conditions remain unchanged. As soon as your parents move, they should report their new living arrangements to Social Security.

Q: My husband and I are leaving on a 3 month motor home trip around the country in July. It occurred to us that 3 months of Social Security benefits will be mailed to us while we're on the road--and we don't have direct deposit. Is it too late for us to change to direct deposit?

A: No. It usually takes about 2 months for a direct deposit request to be processed, depending upon when during the month you call Social Security. To request direct deposit, call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, any business day between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. When you call, the Social Security representative will ask for your Social Security number, your address, and the name of your bank, and your account number, so have the information handy.

Q: My brother was turned down for Social Security Income (SSI) benefits a couple of years ago. They said his disability wasn't severe enough to qualify for benefits. His condition has slowly deteriorated. I keep telling him he should apply again but he doesn't think it will do any good. Can people reapply?

A: Yes they can. Your brother should contact the nearest Social Security office or call SSA's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 workdays between 7:00 am and 7 pm, and ask about reapplying for SSI. Often conditions change and the change may mean the person will now qualify for benefits.

Our Best Friends Are Cutting Us To Pieces.

Our best friends don't always give us the best treatment. Typically, they invite us into their homes, read us like a book, take what they need from us, and put us aside to use again at their convenience.

It's a tough existence, but we don't mind. In fact, we like it. The news, editorials, and advertising coupons clipped from our pages provide our readers with knowledge, enlightenment, even an occasional 30¢ off on breakfast cereal. We're kind of flattered that people enjoy hanging onto bits and pieces of us - sometimes for years. That's something no other local advertising medium can offer.

So, although our friends keep cutting us to pieces, we'll keep showing up at their homes. Our only request: sharp scissors and a steady hand.

Widows being sought

The General and Mrs. Curtis H. LeMay Foundation is launching a nationwide search for indigent widows of active duty or retired Air Force officers.

Many widows live at or below poverty. The LeMay Foundation wants to help provide financial assistance to them.

To facilitate this search, the LeMay Foundation, located in Riverside, Cal., has installed a toll free number (1-800-554-5510) which is manned between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. PST.

Caring for Alzheimer's patients frustrating, hard

NEW YORK (AP) - Kitty Rivera ended up cramped in one room because her husband was afraid of their house; Susan Merrick considered killing herself and her mother; Geraldine Misrach endured tale after graphic tale of her husband's pre-marital sex life.

With Alzheimer's disease, no day is predictable.

About 4 million Americans have the disease, and more than 70 percent of them are cared for at home, according to the Alzheimer's Association, a national nonprofit group.

"Only when people break down do you really glimpse the true despair that all caregivers face," said Jean Marks, associate executive director of the association's New York chapter.

Of the recent extreme cases of an 82-year-old patient who was abandoned at an Idaho racetrack and a New Jersey man who killed himself and his Alzheimer's-stricken wife, Marks said: "The great surprise is that it happens so rarely."

The degenerative brain disorder may begin subtly, causing memory lapses, impaired judgment and disorientation. As it makes its fatal progression - sometimes over two decades - victims slide inexorably into dementia and leave this world as they entered it - utterly helpless.

The cause is unknown. There is no cure. Most patients - whether in nursing homes, day care centers or at home - get supervision rather than medical treatment, and that's rarely covered by insurance.

The recession only makes things worse.

"It's a myth that most people quit their jobs to take care of family members at home," said Marks. "On the contrary, a daughter or daughter-in-law who had been staying home with the kids often is forced to get a job" to feed, clothe and care for the extra person.

"It's worse when the economy's bad. You've got people who are watching their loved ones die, they get no respite and they're going broke. That's when suicide, abandonment and killing start to look like solutions."

Besides the financial and emotional burden of watching the dynamic mother she loved deteriorate, Susan Merrick had to cope with an abusive husband.

"I got to the point more than once where I thought about killing myself and I knew I would have to take her with me," said Merrick, who lives in Beaverton, Ore.

The thought of her three children always stopped her.

Merrick's mother, Gladys Steves, died last May at age 75. She'd had Alzheimer's since 1978 and ran out of money before she died, Merrick said.

"It's such a demeaning, isolating disease," said Merrick, 37, who is now divorced and planning to attend law school this fall.

"No one wants to be around someone who's losing their mind. On holidays, my own in-laws said 'Don't bring her.'"

Awareness of the disease has risen dramatically in the past few years. But Merrick and other caregivers said they and their stricken loved ones were still so misunderstood that they would share the most intimate details of their lives to help build support for Alzheimer's funding and research.

Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., whose mother has Alzheimer's, co-sponsored a bill this month that would provide long-term care insurance for disabled people of all ages at a cost of $45 billion. It would pay for some nursing home and respite care and would protect the life savings of patients.

About 100,000 people die of Alzheimer's disease every year; it is the fourth-leading cause of death for adults. The incidence will increase as the population ages.

Now, there are about 25 million Americans over 65. By the year 2050, the government estimates there will be 67 million.

But Alzheimer's does not strike only the elderly. Andre Rivera was 53 when he was diagnosed in 1984.

His wife, Kitty, already was caring for her 92-year-old father-in-law, who was confined to a wheelchair.

Mrs. Rivera, 57, of Denville, N.J., sold their electronics business and cared for her husband at home for eight years. He's been in a nursing home for the last three years.

"My life got so small. We were living in one back room because he was afraid of the house, he didn't recognize anything.

"He had no sense of reality. Watching police shows on TV, he would duck the bullets."

Today, Rivera, 62, cannot talk or feed himself. He wears a helmet because he walks into walls. He's incontinent.

"How do you describe heartbreak? The watching and knowing it's only going to get worse," she said.

Geraldine Misrach gets strange comfort knowing that her husband, Robert - once a world traveler, marathon runner and real estate wizard - seems oblivious to his decline.

Grandparents' roles important

Tales and experiences, pieces of family history, and glimpses into a parent's childhood are the true gifts a grandparent can give a grandchild.

Tell them about your school days and what you did for fun, what their parents did for fun and how they got into trouble.

Not to be taken lightly, your role as a grandparent is one of responsibility.

Good nutrition needed

After retirement, you may look forward to years of new experiences that your well-earned leisure brings. A well balanced, nutritious diet can help you maintain a healthy and active lifestyle as you grow older and can help keep you feeling fit. Good nutrition is also important in recovery from illnesses when they happen to occur.

However, psychologic and physiologic changes which take place as we age can affect appetite and enjoyment of food, and may lead to insufficient intake of nutrients and even malnutrition.

Those whom we support hold us up in life.

More than just buying gifts, a grandparent can be a positive role model for their grandchildren and provide support and assurance to the parents.

The grandparenting experience is most unique. Best of all, it can be nourishing and fulfilling at absolutely no cost. A grandparent seldom administers harsh discipline; grandchildren only remember love, caring and tenderness associated with Grandma or Grandpa.

Speak truthfully, listen carefully and share your lifetime of experiences. Support the parents' authority, discussing differences of opinion with the parents in private.

Simple ideas to consider: 1. Browse through family albums together. Write down memories of your life. 2. Before they visit, list activities you would like to do with them and let them select their favorites. 3. Keep in touch with frequent notes, postcards, phone calls or stories recorded in your own voice. 4. Send them a book and a tape of your reading that same book so you may still share the reading experience together. 5. If there is a divorce or tragedy, be sensitive towards your grandchildren's emotional needs.

These cherished experiences will live on for decades in your grandchildren's memories. Remember...you've already given the gift of life, pass on a gift of love.

Eye Openers

BY HUGH CURRIE, M.D.

Currie Eye Institute

Did you know that if you have diabetes mellitus, some physician or eye care professional should be looking into your eyes at least once a year?

Diabetes mellitus complications are one of the leading causes of blindness in the world today. Diabetes causes abnormalities in the small blood vessels in the back of the eye and the retina. These blood vessels may not carry an adequate amount of blood to oxygenate the retina.

When this happens, small abnormal blood vessels tend to proliferate to try to "fill in the gap." Not only does this not work, but it is very dangerous because these new blood vessels, or neovascularization, are very fragile. They tend to bleed and cause the inside of the eye to fill with blood. This whole process causes permanent damage to the vision and may result in blindness.

Diabetes not only causes serious problems with the retina, but it may also lead to an increased incidence of cataracts. It can cause a particularly severe kind of glaucoma, which is unresponsive to most of the treatments normally used for glaucoma.

Many of these problems can be prevented now with laser treatment applied at the appropriate time. If you have any changes in the retinal vasculature you should be followed by an ophthalmologist.

Until retinal vascular changes begin to take place, a physician or eye specialist should look into your eyes once a year. Don't allow diabetes mellitus to rob you of your vision.

Health hints

Don't ignore things that hurt you! See a doctor or do something to ease your discomfort, perhaps with the help of over-the-counter remedies your pharmacist may recommend.

Ignoring pain can make you a grump and your symptoms may just get worse.

The Persian Gulf has had the same name since ancient Greek and Roman times. Persia formally became Iran in 1935. At one time, the Shah of Iran wanted to rename the gulf the Iranian Gulf. In 1958, Iran protested an Iraqi Cabinet decision to call it the Gulf of Arabi. But on Saudi Arabian maps, it's been the Arabian Gulf for years.

Nutrition Notes

The amount in grams, of components (such as fat, cholesterol, sodium, carbohydrates, and protein) still must be listed to the immediate right of each of the names of each of these nutrients. For the first time a column headed % Daily Value will appear, as will a footnote to help consumer place their individual nutrient needs with respect to the Daily Values used on the label. Requiring nutrients to be declared as a percent of the Daily Value is intended to prevent misinterpretations that arise with qualitative values.

Variations in format will be allowed in several instances. Some variations are mandatory:

1. labels of foods for children under 2 years old; 2. infant formula has special labeling rules; 3. simplified labels format if food contains insignificant amounts of seven or more of the mandatory nutrients and total calories;

Also 4. if simplified format is used, information on total calories, total fat, total carbohydrate, protein, and sodium must be listed even if they are present only in insignificant amounts

5. small and medium sized packages with limited space on their label has specific exemptions.

SERVING SIZES

Serving sizes are defined as the amount of food customarily consumed. Nutrient content values are based on the standardized serving sizes.

FDA has identified 139 food-product categories and established a standard serving sizes. FSIS has established 23 food-product categories for meat and 22 food-product categories for poultry. There are specific rules for individual-size containers, meal-type products, and products that come in discrete units such as slices of bread or cookies.

DAILY REFERENCE VALUES

Energy-producing nutrients are based on a daily intake of 2,000 kcal and are as follows:

1. fat based on 30% of calories; 2. saturated fat based on 10% calories; 3. carbohydrate based on 60% of calories; 4. protein based on 10% of calories-adults and children over 4 years old; 5. fiber based on 11.5 g of fiber per 1,000 kcal.

DRV's for other food components represent the uppermost limit that is considered desirable when considering public health concerns:

1. total fat; less than 65 g.; 2. saturated fat; less than 20%; 3. cholesterol; less than 300 mg.; 4. sodium; less than 2,400 mg. (2.4 grams)

OTHER DESCRIPTIONS

The new regulations spell out what terms may be used to describe the level of a nutrient in a food and how they can be used. Following is a list of core terms:

Free: Product contains no amount of, or only trivial amounts of one or more of these components: fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, sugars, and calories. Synonyms for "free" include "without," "no," and "zero."

LOW: Term used on foods that could be eaten frequently without exceeding dietary guidelines for one or more of these components: fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, and calories. The descriptors are defined as follows:

1. Low fat; 3 g or less per serving; 2. low saturated fat; 1 g or less per serving; 3. low sodium; 140 mg or less per serving; 4. very low sodium; 35 mg or less per serving; 5. low cholesterol; less than 20 mg per serving; 6. low calories; 40 kcal or less per serving;

Synonyms for low include "little," "few," and "low source of."

LEAN AND EXTRA LEAN

Term to describe the fat content of meat, poultry, seafood, and game meats. Descriptors are defined:

1. lean: less than 10 g of fat, less than 4 g of saturated fat, less than 95 mg of cholesterol per serving and per 100g.

2. extra lean: less than 5 g of fat, less than 2 g of saturated fat, less than 95 mg of cholesterol per serving and per 100g.

HIGH! Term used if food contains 20% or more of Daily Value for a particular nutrient in a serving.

GOOD SOURCE: Term means that one serving of a food contains 10% to 19% of the Daily Value for a particular nutrient.

Reduced: Term means that a nutritionally altered product contains 25% less of nutrient or calories than the regular, or reference, product. A reduced claim cannot be made on a product if its reference food already meets the requirement for a "low" claim.

Less Term means the food contains 25% less of nutrient or of calories than the reference food. i.e. Pretzels that have 25% less fat than potato chips could carry a "less" claims. "Fewer" is an acceptable synonym.

Light or Lite: Term can mean two (2) things: a. nutritionally altered product contains one-third fewer calories or half of fat of the reference food; b. sodium content of a low-calorie, low-fat food has been reduced by 50%.

In addition, "light in sodium" may be used on food in which the sodium content has been reduced by at least 50%. The term "light" may still be used to describe such properties as texture and color, so long as the label explains the intent; for example, "light brown sugar" and "light and fluffy."

More: Term means that a serving of food, whether altered or not, contains a nutrient that is at least 10% of the Daily Value more than the reference food. The 10% should also apply to "fortified," "enriched", and "added" claims, but in those cases, the food must be altered.

Percent Fat Free: A product bearing the claim "percent fat free" must be a low-fat or a fat-free product. In addition, the claim must accurately reflect the amount of fat present in 100g of the food. Thus, if a food contains 2.5 g of fat per 50 g, the claim must be "95% fat free."

Healthy: Both FDA and FSIS issued proposed regulations regarding the term "healthy" and other derivatives of the term "health" that are appropriate for foods under their jurisdiction. Each agency requires products to meet limits on fat, saturated fat, and sodium in order to use the term.

Fresh: The regulation defines "fresh" when it is used to suggest that a food is raw or unprocessed." Fresh "may only be used on a food that is raw, has never been frozen or heated, and contains no preservatives. (Blanching and irradiation at low levels are allowed). The term "fresh frozen," "frozen fresh," and "freshly frozen" may be used for foods that are quickly frozen while still fresh. Other uses of the term "fresh" such as in "fresh Milk" or "freshly baked bread," are not affected.

Health claims: FDA Claims for severe relationship between a nutrient or a food and the risk of a disease or health-related condition will be allowed for the first time. They can be made in several ways: through third-part references, such as National Cancer Institute; through statements; through symbols, such as heart; and through vignettes or descriptions. The claims must meet the requirements for authorized health claims and must state that other factors play a role in that disease.

Following is a list of the nutrient-disease relationship claims that will be allowed on food labels:

1. calcium and osteoporosis; 2. fat and cancer; 3. saturated fat and cholesterol and coronary heart disease; 4. fiber-containing fruits, vegetables, and grain products and cancer; 5. fiber-containing fruits, vegetables, and grain products and risk of coronary heart disease; 6. sodium and hypertension; 7. fruits and vegetables and cancer.

Ingredient labeling: The new regulations require full ingredient labeling on "standardized foods," which previously were exempt. An ingredient declaration will now have to be on all foods with more than one ingredient. This requirement will make it easier for people with allergies to avoid allergens. The ingredient list will include, when appropriate, the following:

1. FDA-certified color additives by name; 2. sources of protein hydrolysates; 3. a declaration of caseinate as a milk derivative in the ingredient list of foods that claim to be nondairy, eg, coffee whiteners; 4. the total percentage of juice on the nutrition panel of beverages that contain juice.

FDA and FSIS are in the process of a multiyear food labeling education campaign. Local FDA and FSIS officials may be contacted for additional information. The ADA National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics a fee-based service may be contacted for individual questions or documentation on labeling. Call 800-877-1600 ext. 4653.

'Born Too Soon' a sensitive look at the toll of premature birth

Sunday on NBC, Emmy winner Michael Moriarty and Pamela Reed play the parents of a baby born three months prematurely in Born Too Soon. Based on the book by journalist Elizabeth Mehren, the film documents the couple's painful ordeal and the pressures the experience put on their marriage.

Treats Difficult Subject With Grace
By Scott White

There's no easy way to deal with the illness and loss of a child, yet NBC manages to address the issue of premature birth gracefully in its fact-based TV movie Born Too Soon, airing Sunday, April 25.

More than 275,000 babies are born prematurely in the United States each year, largely to parents who find themselves unprepared for the varied and pressing issues they will face. One such couple was Elizabeth Mehren and Fox Butterfield, noted journalists looking forward to the birth of their first child.

However, the family faced unexpected crises when their daughter, Emily, was born three months early, weighing less than two pounds.

"Like so many other people, I thought they put (premature babies) somewhere in the hospital and they got fat and you took them home...There was no manual, nothing to help us understand the process," Mehren says of the frightening experience. She describes their situation as a "textbook case" of an average family that must suddenly deal with issues ranging from the technical aspects of prenatal care to mounting medical bills to the inarticulate questions and faux pas of well-meaning friends.

The greatest pressure, though, was the strain on their marriage. Frustrated, the couple dealt with their problem in different ways. Mehren spent her days waiting at the hospital, while Butterfield, fearing the possibility of loss which would come with attachment, immersed himself in his career.

"I had experience in Vietnam for three years as a correspondent," says Butterfield. "I had learned to try to distance myself a bit from death and to be careful about it."

Despite the hardships, Mehren and Butterfield were able to save their marriage through understanding and hard work. In an effort to help others comprehend the complex, heartbreaking experience of premature birth, Mehren wrote a book entitled Born Too Soon.

"I wrote this book as a tribute to my daughter," she says. "I realized that our story was a much bigger story than Fox, Elizabeth and Emily...this was a way to broaden the audience and to help educate people about an issue that (they) don't know much about."

Though apprehensive about the television adaptation of her book, Mehren and her husband feel the story is well served in the teleplay by Academy Award-winning writer Susan Baskin, who also had a premature baby.

"There are certain universal aspects to this story...it was a distillation," says Baskin, who strove to develop composite characters whose experience crossed cultural boundaries in an effort to shed light on a tragedy that affects people from all walks of life.

Actress Pamela Reed, known for her work in Kindergarten Cop and NBC's Grand, gives the role of Elizabeth Mehren an intensity that would be almost overdone in another context. However, the subject matter does lend itself to a very emotional approach.

Emmy winner Michael Moriarty of NBC's Law & Order provides a more subdued, if not a more believable performance as Fox Butterfield.

Though the issues associated with premature birth are too numerous, deep and varied to be given a genuinely satisfying treatment within the constraints of a two-hour TV movie, Born Too Soon does an admirable job of opening up many aspects of a sensitive subject without creating an atmosphere of exploitation.

"It does happen to be my story," Mehren says, "but it happens over and over."

TIME OUT

Draft picture uncertain for Georgia's Hearst

By Michael Scogin

Many anxious collegians will be sitting around waiting for the phone to ring on Sunday, April 25, when ESPN presents its annual marathon coverage of the 1993 NFL draft.

ESPN features a familiar cast and crew to provide six and a half hours of draft day wheelings and dealings from New York City's Marriott Marquis Hotel. Host Chris Berman will be joined by analysts Tom Jackson, Joe Theismann and resident draft guru Mel Kiper Jr. to track all the day's action.

Kiper predicts the New England Patriots will select Washington State quarterback Drew Bledsoe with the first pick. Other top choices include Florida State linebacker Marvin Jones, Notre Dame quarterback Rick Mirer and Alabama defensive end Eric Curry.

One of the draft's biggest question marks concerns the fate of Georgia running back Garrison Hearst. Doctors discovered at the scouting combines that Hearst, a leading Heisman Trophy candidate last year, had been playing with a torn anterior cruciate ligament, similar to the injury Thurman Thomas had when coming out of college.

While it obviously didn't affect Hearst's performance last year, doctors can't predict if, or when, the knee could give out. Hearst could play on it for years without trouble, or it could tear on the next hit he sustains. Such is the dilemma facing NFL general managers searching for a top-notch running back.

'Knot's Landing' taking a final bow

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - After 14 years as television's most famous and libidinous cul-de-sac, CBS' "Knots Landing" is leaving the air.

The show, which is currently in reruns, bows out with a two-hour finale on Thursday, May 13. Producer-creator David Jacobs promises it will have "a few surprises."

It's no secret, however, that Donna Mills is returning as vixen Abby Cunningham Ewing Sumner. She joins Ted Shackelford as Gary Ewing, and Michele Lee as Karen Fairgate MacKenzie, the only stars who remained with the show continuously since December 1979.

"Without giving too much away, there'll be no gimmicks," says Jacobs, who also created "Dallas." "We'll wrap up this year's stories. The feeling is that the curtain comes down and life goes on in 'Knots Landing.'"

"So far, ending 'Knots' feels good. I'm waiting. I know at some point I'm going to miss it. I'm still doing post-production work, so I haven't gotten completely away from it."

Only "Gunsmoke" and "Bonanza" ran longer than "Knots Landing," although its sister show, "Dallas," had more episodes.

"I thought 'Knots Landing' was going to be an American 'Scenes From a Marriage,'" Jacobs says, referring to the Ingmar Bergman Swedish drama that was first a limited TV series and then a movie in 1973. That was a painfully honest look at the disintegration of a marriage.

"I took it to CBS, but they said they were looking for a saga. As soon as they said saga I thought of Texas. My partner, Michael Filerman, and I sat down and came up with 'Dallas.'"

"I approach my shows like novels. I start with the characters. I want to know their history and see why they are like they are."

The success of "Dallas" cleared the way for "Knots Landing," particularly when it was changed to make Shackelford's character a Ewing from Dallas.

"'Knots' has changed throughout its time on the air," says Jacobs, who previously had been a writer for Aaron Spelling's "Family."

"'Knots' was always more a reflection of my own juices. I like to keep things changing. 'Dallas' was always the fight for Ewing Oil every year. 'Knots' flowed with the times. I didn't want to duplicate 'Dallas.' I wanted a different scale. We didn't have a villain the first year."

In 1980, Abby Cunningham arrived. She was quite a different villain from the flamboyant J.R. Ewing, played by Larry Hagman.

"Abby drove up in a Volvo station wagon with two kids," Jacobs says. "J.R.'s power came from his wealth. Hers came from her beauty and sexuality. She shook things up. When Don Murray wanted to leave the show we needed another male lead. In a way, Kevin Dobson was the best break we got, not that Don wasn't terrific. Kevin was a man's man.

"Bill Devane came the year after that, and 'Knots' developed a strong male audience. Devane, like Abby, was my kind of villain, which means he's not all bad. He was a good man going bad."

Jacobs says he believes the greatest contribution to television by "Knots Landing" was the evolving character.

"The changing character has become the rule of television," he says. "Before that, television characters were cast in stone. They did change on 'Family,' 'The Waltons,' 'Eight Is Enough' and 'Dallas,' but 'Knots' was the show that opened the door."

"Devane was an evolving character. When Nicolette Sheridan arrived, her character was spoiled, insecure and inept. She used nothing but her beauty to get along. Now, she has evolved into a real mature person."

Jacobs says he wanted to end 'Knots Landing' before CBS pulled the plug.

"We could have been renewed if we'd take a few hundred thousand dollars off the license fee," he says.

"We got renewed this year because we took a big cut in the fee. That made it hard to tell good stories. We'd get the momentum going and we'd have to leave Kevin Dobson out for a few episodes because we didn't have the money to pay him for every show."

"Bill Devane and Nicolette Sheridan said this was their last year. I didn't want to continue the show without a full cast. I didn't want to see the show diminished. This year was very, very hard."

Jacobs, whose shows also include ABC's "Homefront" and CBS' "Bodies of Evidence," has some new creations in the wings.

One is "Lois and Clark" for ABC, which looks more at the relationship between Lois Lane and Clark Kent than at Superman's exploits. Another is "Profiles," a talk show with actors that is partly written and partly improvised.

Jacobs' favorite all-time show? "Dallas: The Early Years," which examined the feud between Jock Ewing and Digger Barnes that set the tone for the series.

"That was fun to write," he says. "It was a personal story. It was a period you could get lost in."

Halami taking over CBS?

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Conspiracy theorists take note: Producer Robert Halmi Sr. may be taking over CBS. Or maybe it just seems that way. Consider the evidence:

-Halmi's four-hour miniseries "The Fire Next Time" concluded Tuesday. A drama about the threat of global warming, it starred Craig T. Nelson ("Coach").

-Halmi's adaptation of the Jack London classic "Call of the Wild" airs Sunday night. It stars Rick Schroder as the young man who leaves home and family for adventure in the Yukon wilderness.

-The Sunday after that, May 2, Halmi's "Blind Spot" is the next Hallmark Hall of Fame. Joanne Woodward portrays an ambitious congresswoman whose family is thrown into turmoil when a daughter's cocaine addiction comes to light.

And there's much more in the pipeline from Halmi's RHI Entertainment, which boasts some 200 motion pictures and television films to date, including "Lonesome Dove," "Mayflower Madam" and the feature

"Mr. and Mrs. Bridge."

By next month "Lonesome Dove II" (with Jon Voight) will be in front of the cameras in Texas, "Sudden Fury" and "Family Secret" (with Walter Matthau) will be filming in Atlanta, and "The Black Fox Trilogy" will be in production in Spain.

And TV projects in development include a remake of the musical "Gypsy" (with Bette Midler), "My Life: The Magic Johnson Story" and the much-anticipated film version of "Scarlett," Alexandra Ripley's sequel to "Gone With the Wind."

Speaking with an accent that befits his birth in Hungary 68 years ago, Halmi defends his TV "Scarlett." It is not a rip-off of the world's most beloved movie, but "an eight-hour study in American history," he says.

"Some will say it's about nothing but money," he says softly, "but it's obviously not about money: Nobody in his right mind interested only in money would have paid $9 million for that stupid, bad book, which 'Scarlett' was."

SUNDAY

Sunday on CBS, Rick Schroder stars in a new dramatization of Jack London's Call of the Wild, playing John Thornton, a wealthy youth seeking gold and adventure in the Yukon.

HALAMI

Maybe, maybe not. But Halmi presents himself - and convincingly - as a throwback to the old-fashioned impresarios whose films were as attuned to the bottom of the heart as to the bottom line.

"Today's producers are just money people who have X number of dollars and with them they buy people, mostly on the phone," he says. "I'm somebody with pretty good taste who goes one step further. With the creative process, everything has to be nurtured. I know on every project, every day, where it stands dollars-and-cents-wise, but I also know did someone have a cold."

A former still photographer for Life magazine, Halmi moved into moving pictures in the mid-'60s and found television a receptive venue for his product - something he takes pains to characterize as wholesome family entertainment.

"The American public is so underestimated," he sighs. "They're NOT all 10 years old and sex maniacs!"

Now with his son, Robert Halmi Jr., on the team, RHI Entertainment plays its hearty game based not in Hollywood, but in an office suite in midtown Manhattan.

The game starts early and goes late.

"You know, people are shocked in Los Angeles when they find out that we are here before eight o'clock in the morning," Halmi says. "We don't have swimming pools. We don't have power meetings. We read a lot. We maybe don't read Variety that much. We have lots of books. Every book is a potential movie."

Will the tensions exacerbated by last year's Los Angeles riots ever be quelled? Tuesday on PBS, Frontline examines the issues through the eyes of five different residents in L.A. Is Burning.

'Frontline' finds little change since L.A. riots

City even more divided since 1992 uprising

By Michael Scogin

The fires may all have been extinguished, but the fear and resentment that caused Los Angeles to erupt for three violent days in April last year still remain, as viewers who tune in to PBS' Frontline: L.A. Is Burning on Tuesday, April 27, will discover.

Frontline sent five citizens — a novelist, a poet, a community activist, a reporter and a professor — all of various ethnic backgrounds into the streets of their respective communities to uncover the problems that led to the worst civil unrest in American history and what has and hasn't occurred there since.

"What happened here was about two things — one of which Americans don't want to deal with and one which they refuse to recognize," says Tim Rutten, editorial writer for the Los Angeles Times. "The thing they don't want to deal with is race. The thing we refuse to recognize is the issue of class."

L.A. Is Burning shows a city that has actually taken a step backward since the riots claimed the lives of 53 people and destroyed at least $800 million worth of property. The city's racial lines are drawn even bolder and more violently since 1992.

"Unfortunately, after the riots, the African-American community, Latino community, Korean-American community, all different communities in Los Angeles, are simply trying to protect their own interests, self-interests, rather than learning the lessons of working together," says professor Edward Chang.

As part of protecting their interests, Frontline reports, people are arming themselves in anticipation of renewed disturbance in the event of unpopular verdicts in the federal civil-rights case of the officers accused in the beating of Rodney King and in the attempted-murder case of the men accused of beating truck driver Reginald Denny.

"If you were to go into a gun store here this afternoon, you would find African-American people, Asian people, Latin Americans, Chicano people, whites, all buying guns," says Rutten. "I mean this is the one unambiguous, communal response to the events of last spring and that is this kind of private arms race."

SOAP TALK

Reader berates surrogate mom

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I am disgusted with the surrogate mother story line on General Hospital. I personally don't have a problem with a couple choosing a surrogate mother in real life. I just can't see how Dominique and Scotty could agree to let Lucy carry their baby. Lucy is such an awful person, and no one knows that better than Scotty. I know it is just a soap, but the whole thing is so unbelievable. Can you give me one good reason why the writers chose to go with this story?

I'm also upset about them taking Dominique off the show. She is such a wonderful character, and I've enjoyed watching her and Scotty together. Thanks for letting me say my piece. -G.L. Spader in Illinois.

Dear Reader: Lynn Herring, who plays Lucy, is pregnant, and the writers wanted to include it in the story line. It is much easier for the actress and often the writers if the characters don't have to hide behind big purses and tables in order to cover a growing belly.

Dear Candace: I wanted to comment on how much I enjoy the character Billie on Days of Our Lives. She can make me laugh, and it helps relieve some of the frustrations I feel about the other characters. Billie and Bo are so good together and their squabbles are hilarious; not to mention what she and Jack go through together.

I also have faith that Austin and Carrie will get back together. Roman is being a real pain.

Where can I write to convey this message to the producers of the show? -Marilyn Long, Farmington, Mich.

Dear Reader: You can write to Days at NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Dear Candace: I have enjoyed watching Guiding Light, and I especially liked the girl who used to play Blake. She had a wonderful voice, and I wondered if there was any chance she might come back to the show. -Mona Lencar, Noble, Ill.

Dear Reader: Sherry Stringfield left the role of Blake several months ago of her own accord. She decided she wanted to pursue other interests. There are no plans for her to return to the show at this time, but you never know what might happen on a soap.

LET'S TALK

Just the facts: Joe Friday had more than one partner

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I was watching Dragnet the other night and happened to mention to my wife that Jack Webb, who plays Joe Friday, was also on a show called Badge 714 prior to Dragnet. I also said he had a younger, much heavier partner before Harry Morgan, who played Gannon. My wife disagrees. Please fill us in, as one owes the other a candlelit dinner. -H.W. Phillippe, McMinnville, Tenn.

Jack Webb as Joe Friday

A: You are correct in your contention that oft-parodied policeman Joe Friday had a different partner before Bill Gannon (Morgan) made the scene. In fact, he had three previous partners, played by actors Barton Yarborough (who died after filming only three episodes), Barney Phillips and Ben Alexander. But before you elbow up to the table, I'm afraid you're wife has reason to doubt that Badge 714 came before Dragnet - because they're both the same show. Badge 714 was used as the syndicated title for the re-release of the 1951-1959 Dragnet episodes. The Webb-Morgan pairing began when Dragnet shot new shows from 1967-1970.

Q: I attended a filming of Groucho Marx's show in 1962. A very attractive young blond female danced barefoot and was straightman for some of his jokes. Who was she? My wife thinks she was a young Loni Anderson. -O.J. Kiser, Warner Robins, Ga.

A: If you were lucky enough to catch Groucho live in 1962, it would have been at the filming of his short-lived series Tell It to Groucho. In such a case, the young blonde with the hotfoot would have been Patty Harmon, who, along with Jack Wheeler, served as sidekicks to Marx on the show. Marx discovered Wheeler and Harmon on his longer-running You Bet Your Life.

Q: I hope you can help me locate an episode from The Big Story, an old TV series. It was produced on NBC for Pall Mall cigarettes. It was called "The Kathryn Steffan Story" and ran on Friday, April 28, 1950, at 9:30 p.m. EST. -Kate Steffan, Reserve, N.M.

A: The Big Story, an acclaimed series that ran from 1949-1957, dramatized the intriguing and often-dangerous exploits of real-life reporters, one of whom was obviously yourself. With luck, you'll be able to obtain a nostalgic piece of personal history by contacting the series' current distributor, ICE, at 3575 Cahuenga Blvd. West, Suite 475, Los Angeles, Calif., 90068. The phone number is (213) 850-8080.

Q: I was going to watch the last episode of Knots Landing the other night and saw a basketball game instead. What happened on the last show? -I.B., Red Wing, Minn.

A: "Day of the Assassin," the episode you had planned to watch on March 11, was not the last episode but the last episode until the grand finale on Thursday, May 13. Its title is "Sayonara." That show will mark the end of the program's 13-plus years on the air.

Q: I keep insisting to my parents that when I was younger we watched a movie called Snowfire. If I remember correctly, it was about a horse and a boy who claims the horse talks to him. My parents insist I'm thinking of the song "Wildfire." -Donna Balwierz, Orland Hills, Ill.

A: Congratulations on the thorough vindication of your memory in the eyes of your parents. Snowfire was indeed a 1958 movie of that particular plot line, but the young lead was a girl (Molly McGowan), not a boy.

Q: My wife says William Holden was Stephanie Powers' father. I say they were a twosome. Who's right? -Jack Smith, Phoenix, Ariz.

A: You are. Though old enough to be her father, Holden was romantically linked to Powers until his death in 1981. Send questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. Please send no return envelopes; questions will only be answered with-in this column.

'South Central' kids welcome ABC guests

By Chris Carpenter

"The social unrest that raged in Los Angeles last year was born out of a video event," says Tom Avitabile, executive producer of an original ABC Saturday Morning Special providing a retrospective look at the L.A. riots. "And one year later, six teams of youths, armed only with video cameras, go out and become part of the healing process."

As Los Angeles heals, children and their parents are invited on an hourlong video tour of the ongoing reconstruction in South Central: Kid to Kid, debuting Saturday, May 1.

Avitabile says the utmost pains were taken to give the young South Central residents "a clear channel, with minimal editorial guidance."

The results, he says, were astounding. University of Southern California media professors, who volunteered "hundreds and hundreds of hours" to help the kids with video instruction, watched in disbelief as the young videographers screened effective, eloquent tapes for their approval.

Avitabile, half-jokingly, says "The professors and chief administrators at USC were thinking, 'Hey, scholarship bait.'"

"In the first generation of television, stars like Danny Thomas took the proceeds of television and did good with them," Avitabile says. "In the second generation, we have to make television itself do good."
