Democrats prepared to fight for deficit bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democrats are ready to muscle President Clinton's deficit-reduction bill through the Senate Finance Committee after replacing an unpopular energy tax with a gasoline tax hike and new Medicare cuts.

Like the measure the Democratic-controlled House narrowly approved last month, the Senate bill is dominated by higher taxes on the well-to-do, companies and some Social Security recipients.

"We mean to see it gets all the way through" the Senate, Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Wednesday after the Finance panel's 11 Democrats ended a month-long standoff and crafted a compromise measure.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen hailed the agreement, which increased the bill's reliance on spending cuts, as "an important step along the path to enactment."

The Finance Committee planned to vote today on the legislation, which would add 4.3 cents to the 14.1 cent-per-gallon tax already on gasoline. It seemed all but certain that the panel's nine Republicans, eager to kill the bill because of taxes they call excessive, would not succeed. Mitchell said debate by the full Senate would begin next week.

Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said people earning more than $100,000 a year would bear 80 percent of the bill's tax burden. Families under $20,000 would actually pay less taxes, he said.

When combined with spending cuts planned in later measures and reduced interest payments on federal borrowing, the legislation would shave $508 billion off budget deficits over the next five years - a bit higher than the House total.

Continuing construction

Work is nearing completion on the new Little Caesars Pizza restaurant, being built at the corner of U.S. 385 and Park Avenue. Co-owner Lyle Hotchkiss, standing on ground, is helping Hereford resident Henry Garcia, on ladder, build a sign for the front of the building. In the bucket above, Jerry Ramirez of Granado Electric checks the wiring on the store's outdoor signs. Hotchkiss owns the store with his brother, Lee Hotchkiss. Grand opening is set for June 28, with opening day set for 11 a.m. June 29. It will employ 20 to 22 people.

50-somethings facing retirement without pensions, survey says

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Substantial numbers of Americans are nearing retirement without a pension, assets or health insurance, according to early results from one of the largest studies on how people fare as they age.

The emerging portrait of the 50-something generation, released today by the National Institute on Aging, also finds many middle-age Americans sandwiched between obligations to frail, aging parents and their own adult children and grandchildren.

Conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, the study is based on interviews last year and early this year with nearly 13,000 middle-age Americans in 7,600 households.

"People nearing retirement are mostly in pretty good shape physically, mentally and economically," says F. Thomas Juster, who directed the study.

"But behind the averages are large proportions of people falling into some category - ill or disabled, without pensions, insurance or assets, or lacking family support - that may rob them of a satisfying and successful retirement," said Juster, an economics professor.

The study began in 1990 and researchers plan to continue their work for the next 12 years. The research is designed to provide reliable information on the labor force activity, health status and family responsibilities of Americans nearing retirement.

"As we move through the turn of the century, the U.S. population will be aging rapidly, thanks to the baby boom generation. The magnitude of this age shift will present major new challenges to the nation's health and economic institutions."

Among the study's findings:

-Almost half of those surveyed believe that there is some likelihood they could lose their job in the next year and that they have less than a 50-50 chance of finding a new job in a few months. "Overall, there is a good deal of job insecurity ... possibly a good deal more than existed in the past," the report said.

-The median income among households surveyed was about $37,500, with median assets about $80,000. About 20 percent of couples reported virtually no assets.

-One out of every seven people surveyed is not covered by any kind of health insurance. Substantially higher numbers of black and Hispanic households don't have a health plan.

-Two in five will have no pension income at all, other than Social Security.

-About two-thirds of the participants say they're in excellent or very good health. About 20 percent reported a health condition that limits work.

-Almost three-fourths of participants would prefer to go from a fulltime job to part-time work when they retire, rather than leave the work force abruptly.

-About one in five are afraid to leave their current jobs because they might lose pensions or health insurance benefits if they switched employers.

-About 70 percent of the married couples are members of four-generation families.

-Two-thirds of those surveyed have living parents or parents-in-law. About one-third have older parents who need personal care or supervision.

The National Institute on Aging says the study is one of the largest and most innovative ever launched to better understand how people fare as they age.

Researchers plan to track the study's 7,600 households into retirement and in 1998 will add a new group of Americans age 51-56 to the sample.

Activities set Friday, Saturday

Cowgirl Hall readying for annual Roundup weekend

The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center will hold its annual Rhinestone Roundup Weekend this weekend, with music, dancing and food on tap to welcome the three newest members of the Hall.

When the annual induction ceremony is held on Saturday morning, two women will be inducted as Cowgirl Honorees -- Dorothy Tomlinson Satterfield of Tucson, Ariz., and Janet "Jan" Alley Youren of Garden Valley, Idaho.

Rounding out the 1993 slate of inductees is Western Heritage Honoree Gertrude Maxwell of Elk City, Idaho.

The induction ceremony will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Hereford Senior Center, 426 Ranger.

On tap at the start will be punch and coffee, followed by breakfast at 9:30 a.m. The meal is catered by MaryBeth Messer of Hereford.

The ceremony will begin at 10:30 a.m. Master of Ceremonies will be 1977 Cowgirl Honoree Rhonda Sedgwick Stearns.

Stearns is a free-lance writer/photographer, professional musician, historian and horse-woman.

She lives on a ranch near where she grew up in Newcastle, Wyo. Also on tap for the induction will be the introduction of past inductees.

Admission is $15 per person and reservations may be made by calling the Hall at 364-5252.

Weekend events technically begin on Friday, when the Hall of Fame holds an open house.

The doors will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Refreshments will be served. Art by Virginia Carlson of Apache Junction, Ariz., and Western artist Keith Avery of Roswell, N.M., will be featured. Among Avery's works will be portraits of honorees Gretchen Sammis and Fern Sawyer. A portrait of a surprise past honoree will be on display.

Also on tap Friday night during the private Honoree Reunion Supper will be a performance by Debora Charles, a member of Ride Into History, a historical re-enactment company formed by Joyce Thierer of Admire, Kan.

Charles will act the part of Ernie Prentiss, a female Civil War cavalry soldier who disguised herself as a man in order to take part in battle.

The re-enactment troupe will also perform two other times. Lisa Miles will portray Caroline Penelope Allen, the "proper woman" of the pioneering West. That performance will be held during the induction breakfast Saturday.

Thierer will portray Calamity Jane on Saturday night.

Rounding out the weekend will be a Saturday night shindig at the B Bar S Arena.

Activities will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a ranch supper and silent auction.

The menu for the supper will be barbecue brisket, sausage, beans, potato salad, sole slaw, relishes/condiments, apricots, tea and coffee, which is sponsored by K-Bob's Steakhouse.

At 7:30 p.m., the Calamity Jane performance will begin, followed at 8 p.m. by the introduction of new and past Hall honorees.

At 8:15 p.m. the Dixie Chicks will take to the stage for a concert, followed at 11 p.m. by dancing to Texas Country until 1 a.m.

Information about tickets to any event is available by calling the Hall of Fame at 364-5252.

City gets sales tax rebate check of $48,266 from state

Monthly sales tax rebates of $109.4 million were delivered to 917 cities and 108 counties this week, according to State Comptroller John Sharp. This was a 3.5 percent increase over payments of a year ago.

The City of Hereford is receiving $48,266 on its 1 percent sales tax collected in April and reported in May. This total was about 2.5 percent below the payment one year ago. Total 1993 payments, however, of $336,892 are up 1.5 percent over a year ago.

Deaf Smith County one-half cent sales tax delivered a June payment of $25,303. This was about $2,000 below last year's payment, but the 1993 total of $171,774 is 1.2 percent ahead of last year's payment.

As usual, Houston led the way in rebate payments with $14.2 million, while Dallas was next at $8.9 million, followed by San Antonio, $5.8 million; Austin, $4.6 million; and Fort Worth, $2.6 million.

Amarillo's rebate climbed over the $2 million mark with its 2 percent sales tax rate. Lubbock, still with a 1 percent tax, raised $1.2 million. Pampa, which now has a 2-cent tax, got a check for $172,189--up 82 percent from one year ago. Borger, also with a 2-cent tax, got a check for $144,415 but it was down 11.9 percent from a year ago.

Dumas collected $54,859 on its 1-cent sales tax, up 13 percent from a year ago. Perryton's check was $37,250, and Canyon received $33,719.

Man held in shooting of state trooper

STRATFORD, Texas (AP) - An unidentified man was in custody today at the Sherman County Jail facing capital murder charges for shooting a state trooper.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Bobby Steve Booth, 28, died Wednesday afternoon after being shot numerous times on U.S. Highway 287 near this north Panhandle city.

Jerry Burgdorf, public information officer for the DPS in Amarillo, said Booth had been dispatched to a disturbance call north of Stratford. The caller reported a man waving a gun, Burgdorf said.

"The next information we had was that the trooper had been shot," he said.

Mike Cox, a spokesman for the DPS in Austin, said a passing motorist saw Booth struggling with the suspect and reported the shooting.

Witnesses say the gunman left the scene in a 1977 GMC pickup truck. About one hour later, Cox said, the suspect was arrested on foot inside the city.

Cox said the suspect is 48 years old and was carrying a Florida driver's license. No name was immediately available.

Galen Knight, who works at a Conoco service station near the Dairy Queen on U.S. Highway 54, told The Dallas Morning News the suspect came into his business just moments before he was arrested.

"He was asking if Stratford had a bus depot and where it was," Knight said. "I told him how to get there, he walked out, went to the end of the driveway and came right back."

Knight said the man then asked if Stratford had a motel and left again. He was arrested moments later.

Cox said the case is under investigation by the Texas Rangers. Booth was the first DPS trooper to be killed in the line of duty this year, Cox said. He is the 70th trooper to die in the line of duty since Jan. 18, 1932.

Booth had joined the department in 1987 and was stationed in Stratford, 80 miles north of Amarillo.

Job-for-endorsement allegation knocked by Hutchison assistant

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - A Houston man's claims that he helped U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison arrange a state job and other benefits for a Democratic state treasurer candidate in exchange for a political endorsement are lies worthy of a perjury indictment, the senator's campaign spokesman said.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram, in a copyright story, reported Wednesday that Mike Graham, former vice president of N-Group Securities, had given the Travis County district attorney's office written testimony that he negotiated the arrangement in a series of telephone conversations with Mrs. Hutchison.

Graham said Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, promised a job, a car and a state expense account to Tom Bowden, the San Saba County judge who ran for the treasurer's office in the 1990 Democratic primary and lost, according to the Star-Telegram.

"This is a phony document chocked full of lies," David Beckwith, Mrs. Hutchison's campaign spokesman, told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "If he has sworn to this, he is in for a serious perjury indictment."

The Star-Telegram said a written document attributed to Graham, reveals that Mrs. Hutchison and husband, Ray, contacted Graham after Bowden's loss and asked him to persuade Bowden to switch parties and endorse Hutchison.

In exchange, Bowden wanted his campaign debt paid off and a Treasury job that would give him a car and expense account and would allow him to live in San Saba with no specific duties, the Star-Telegram reported.

Bowden endorsed Mrs. Hutchison in the 1990 general election for treasurer against Democrat Nikki Van Hightower. After Mrs. Hutchison won, he took a $31,000-a-year job with the treasurer's office.

Beckwith said that Graham is trying to tarnish Mrs. Hutchison and "soften her up" for a Democratic challenge in 1994, when she is scheduled to run for re-election to a full Senate term.

"If the DA doesn't have him under oath, all this is a repeat of... the same scurrilous stuff they (Democrats) tried to peddle before the (June 5 runoff) election," Beckwith said.

Beckwith said that the Hutchisons have never spoken to Graham about Bowden's endorsement and that Mrs. Hutchison has never met Graham.

He said the assertion that the Hutchisons wanted Bowden to switch political parties and then endorse Mrs. Hutchison is ludicrous because the endorsement of a former opponent who is a Democrat is worth more politically than that of a party turncoat.

Clinton criticized for stand on abortion, gay rights

HOUSTON (AP) - Southern Baptists have formally chided President Clinton for supporting abortion and gay rights.

But the delegates at the annual Southern Baptist Convention meeting in Houston, stopped short of passing a resolution to ask the nation's commander-in-chief to repent.

A day after numerous resolutions were proposed criticizing Clinton, delegates overwhelmingly passed on Wednesday a mildly worded resolution pointing out the group's differences with Clinton. They then prayed for the president to change his mind on those issues.

More than half of the 41 resolutions introduced at the annual meeting have dealt with Clinton's positions on homosexuality and abortion.

Clinton and Vice President Al Gore are members of the denomination's moderate wing. Neither was asked to speak at the convention, which is led by conservative Baptists.

Before the vote on the repent motion, one messenger said the resolution set a "dangerous precedent."

"I don't think we need to put his name in this thing. It to me smacks of partisan politics," said Don Wilkey, of Onalaska, Texas. "This smacks of a personal attack."

"I think there's a lack of class on the part this convention" by mentioning Clinton's name, he said, adding he didn't want to have to explain the convention's action to angry Democrats back home.

The Rev. Ronnie Floyd, of Springdale, Ark., denied that the resolution is a personal attack.

"We respect his position as the president of the United States of America," Floyd said. "However, the intent of this resolution is to separate ourselves as a body from the president's policies on the critical moral issues which we believe are in contradiction to the word of God and what is best for America."

Also on Wednesday, a convention committee unanimously rejected a motion proposed the day before requesting that the messengers from Clinton's church, Immanuel Baptist Church in Little Rock, Ark., be unseated because the church reportedly had not taken action against the president for his views.

Immanuel's pastor, the Rev. Rex Horne, said the church has never endorsed Clinton's stands and has publicly said so.

"The charge was groundless," said Horne, who also said he was angered by the allegation. "I'm just saddened the messengers had to be a part of that."

Efforts to expel Clinton from the denomination were ruled out of order on Tuesday, but the motion to oust Clinton's church was referred to the credentials committee, which oversees the seating of delegates.

It was the first time the committee has investigated a church under a new constitutional provision allowing the convention to expel any church supporting homosexuality.

Lee Porter, registration secretary of the convention, asked each individual delegate if their church supported homosexuality. All stated their opposition.

The Rev. Bo Hammock of Lake Butler, Fla. said he didn't realize when he made the proposal that Horne had publicly voiced his disapproval. Hammock, who arrived late at the meeting, said he did not regret making the motion to unseat the delegates, but said he should have called Horne first.

Hammock said he still feels Clinton should be taken off the church membership rolls because of his stands, and said he would have done so if Clinton were a member of his congregation.

"The church should disfellowship President Clinton," he said.

Horne, who appeared with Hammock at a press conference, said it is not his or the church's style to expel the president. "Every member of (Immanuel) is a sinner, a saved sinner, but a sinner still," he said.

The resolution passed earlier by all the delegates says the denomination will distance itself from various actions and positions Clinton has taken regarding abortion rights and gays in the military.

The resolution urges the president "to affirm biblical morality in exercising his public office, recognizing that to do so is not inappropriate nor is it a violation of the separation of the institutions of church and state."

It also asks the more than 15 million Southern Baptists to pray for Clinton and to use their influence to try to convince him to "stand for biblical morality and to reverse his stands..."

Earlier Wednesday, delegates approved a recommendation regarding Southern Baptists who also are Freemasons. Some Southern Baptists consider Freemasonry a cult, a claim vehemently denied by Masons.

The recommendation that passed says some of the tenets and teachings of some Mason lodges are incompatible with Christian beliefs, but it said membership in a Mason Order should "be a matter of personal conscience."

Prosecutor claims girl carried drug

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) - A government prosecutor asked a court Wednesday to dismiss a plea of innocence by an American teen-ager caught with heroin strapped to her body.

"The very fact that heroin was found hidden on her body is enough to prove her guilty," Public Prosecutor Abdur Razzak Khan told the court hearing the case of Eliadah McCord, of Houston, Texas.

McCord, 18, is charged with possessing 3.27 kilograms of heroin taped to her thighs and abdomen. She was arrested as she was about to board a flight to Zurich in February 1992.

At her last court appearance, McCord pleaded not guilty and said she was "a victim of circumstances."

If convicted, she faces a possible death penalty. However, if she is sentenced to life imprisonment, she could be released in 12 years.

The hearing was adjourned until Thursday after the prosecution argued for two hours.

"There is physical evidence that she was possessing the heroin," said Khan. "How can you call a girl innocent and ignorant after she allows a man to tape something in the private parts of her body?"

Ms. McCord sat through the hearing, her chin supported on a wooden railing.

"I've nothing to say," Ms. McCord told an Associated Press reporter later in Bengali, a language she has learned during her 15 months in prison.

Her co-defendants in the case, Robert Blankson and Goddy Ochendu who are both Nigerians, stood handcuffed in the courtroom. Women defendants are allowed to sit unshackled.

Ms. McCord told police earlier that she met Blankson in Dhaka and was offered $1,000 to carry the packets to Zurich. The street value of the heroin in Bangladesh is estimated at $1 million. She said she had come to Bangladesh on a study tour.

A policeman who escorted her from jail to the courtroom said she has lost weight during her confinement. She spends her time reading books supplied by the U.S. Embassy and sometimes joins Muslim prayers, although her family is Roman Catholic.

"She would often ask us, 'Will I be hanged?' We tell her, 'You will be freed because you are a teen-age girl,'" said the guard, who did not give his name.

SENATE-----

generally more conservative than their House counterparts, refashioned parts of the package.

Overall, the changes reshaped Clinton's deficit-reduction plan into one relying on spending cuts for $260 billion and tax increases for $248 billion - a ratio that conservatives said was important.

"It keeps faith with a Democratic Party being on a new course, a centrist course," said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who led efforts to kill Clinton's energy tax and add spending cuts.

The senators' most prominent change: killing Clinton's tax on the heat content of fuels, electricity and other forms of energy. The so-called Btu tax was designed to raise $72 billion over five years.

They replaced it with the new levy on each gallon of gasoline, diesel and aviation fuels. The new tax, which would take effect Oct. 1, would bring the government about $25 billion over the five-year period.

To find extra savings, senators added $19 billion in Medicare cuts to the $50 billion in reductions already in the bill. The extra cuts would affect reimbursements to hospitals and doctors who treat the program's elderly and disabled beneficiaries; patients would not be hit directly.

Democrats also decided to cut Clinton's planned $28 billion increase in the tax credit for poor people by $11 billion. And they trimmed an assortment of tax breaks for companies that Clinton hoped would spark the economy, including one aimed at luring businesses to inner cities and another helping the real-estate industry.

Some taxes, however, were eased. Only couples with total incomes above $40,000 and singles over $32,000 would be affected by Clinton's plan to raise taxes on Social Security benefits. As originally proposed by the president, individuals making $25,000 and couples earning $32,000 would have been hit.

The Senate bill also would scale back Clinton's proposal to sharply reduce tax benefits U.S. companies enjoy on profits from Puerto Rican subsidiaries.

In addition, the new plan would delay until July 1 the tax increases on upper-income individuals that Clinton wanted to impose retroactively to Jan. 1.

Like the House, the Senate would boost the tax rate for the most profitable companies by a point to 35 percent, instead of the 2 points Clinton proposed. The increase would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing about the reader whose husband asked her to bring him a soft drink and she cheerfully obliged. Her friend needed her for "waiting on the jerk." The friend said, "Today's woman doesn't do that anymore."

Now that women have won the right to be in combat units with me, everything will be different. Women are going to insist on being treated as equals across the board. They will no longer wait on their husbands as their mothers did, and I say, "Hallelujah, it's about time."--Victory for the Equal Rights Amendment.

DEAR ERA: There's a big difference between "waiting on a husband" and doing some small thing out of genuine love for the guy. This has nothing to do with equal rights. It has to do with caring. The next letter says it best:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In response to the letter about the wife "waiting on" her husband because she got him a soft drink, just listen to this:

A young couple in Missouri got married in 1937. "Mike worked the third shift for the railroad. He'd come home at 7 a.m. do odd jobs around the house, fix the old car, do everything but go to bed.

Finally, about 4 p.m., he'd crawl into the sack, and then it took an atomic bomb to wake him up so he could go to work. "Rosie" would plead, "Honey, give me your feet, I'll put your socks on for you."

By now it was 1947 and four children later. Rosie never told anyone about how she put on Mike's socks, because they would think she was some kind of nut.

This went on for 46 years. In 1983, Mike died. Rosie tried to figure out how many times she had put on Mike's socks. The number came to about 15,000.

Ann, that wife was me. I'll soon be 75. Mike has been dead for 10 years. I would give anything if I could put on his socks just one more time.--Rosie

DEAR ROSIE: What a beautiful love story! People who care about each other enjoy doing things for one another. They don't consider it servitude. Your poignant letter spoke volumes.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two people were never more different than my husband and I. I don't know how we ever got together.

I am a psychologist, and the man I married is an engineer. He is a perfectionist when it comes to sewers, walls, air conditioning and roofs and can solve any kind of building problem, but the man is a total idiot about exploring or attempting to solve personal problems.

This is a second marriage for both of us. I am 59, and he is 64. We have been married for two years.

Will you please ask the engineers' wives who read your column how they live with this breed? My husband's friends and business associates are clones. They look alike, dress alike and think alike. Are engineers a special species or what?

Any input regarding this problem would be greatly appreciated.--At Wit's End in Miami

DEAR MIAMI: My hunch is that your marriage was a mismatch from the start and the problem has nothing to do with your husband being an engineer. Whatever it is that bothers you about this man would be present if he were a plumber, a zoo keeper or an encyclopedia salesman.

If there are any women out there who are married to engineers and have any ideas on this subject, please write. I could be wrong. Maybe engineers ARE different.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems" is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Volunteer hours reported by hospital auxiliary members

Members of the Deaf Smith General Hospital Auxiliary met recently at the hospital for their regular business meeting.

Bonnie Sublett reported that auxiliary members had volunteered 167 hours for May bringing the total for the year at 1,606 hours. Also, it was announced that 18 baby books had been distributed to new mothers.

Mary Williamson read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved.

It was reported that Irene Reinart and Lupe Cerda are attending the state convention for hospital auxiliaries.

The next regular meeting is set for July 12.

Those present were Ruth Lueb, Baxter London, Mary Williamson, Margaret Daniels, Anna Stindt, Nell Culpepper, Grace Covington, Bonnie Sublett and Mary Jane Burrus.

Travel guide for baby

Whether visiting parks or out-of-town grandparents, American families love to travel. Still, it does require a lot of planning to keep babies healthy and comfortable while taking them on a trip.

Some of the things you shouldn't leave home without:

-A supply of baby food and diapers sufficient to get you where you're going and then some extra in case of delays.

-First aid essentials such as basic wound care (antibiotic ointment, gauze, adhesive tape, etc.), first aid instructions, baby scissors, disposable ice pack.

-Your pediatrician's phone number. (Ask your host or hotel manager for local emergency numbers.)

-Sun protection (hats and coverups; babies over six months can use sunscreen also).

-A bottle and/or pacifier to help ease ear discomfort during takeoffs and landings. An extra sweater or light blanket for warding off airplane chill.

Ask friends or relatives with whom you plan to stay to safety-proof their homes ahead of time and to help you maintain the baby's schedule and diet as closely as possible. No strange foods, or treats that can cause choking, such as popcorn, peanuts, hot dogs, raw carrots should be offered.

All Scandinavian flags have the same pattern, using different colors. No other country's flag uses this pattern.

When traveling, don't forget to pack something to take care of those small cuts and scrapes.

California's state flower is the Golden Poppy. The state tree is the California Redwood.

Are they good bargains?

Summertime is full of gift-giving occasions like birthdays, anniversaries, weddings and graduations. With so many demands on your pocketbook, you may be tempted by various ads and promotions claiming so-called discount of 40, 60 and even 80 percent off on jewelry to try to get a bargain. It's important to remember that there are true sales, and then again there are sales that are not sales at all.

According to Jewelers of America (JA) the national trade association dedicated to consumer information and education about fine jewelry, discounts should always be questioned.

To find out if a discount is really a discount, ask yourself these simple questions:

-Was the merchandise ever really sold at the high "regular" price quoted in the promotion?

-Was the merchandise fictitiously priced to lure you into thinking you're getting a bargain?

Twenty-one percent of all Canadians are under 14.

Grapefruit prices sweeter for consumers

Thanks to an ideal growing season in Florida, the nation's grapefruit season extends through June, with sweeter fruit expected for consumers at favorable prices, according to the Florida Department of Citrus (FDOC).

Says Dr. Mohamed Ismail, the FDOC's Assistant Scientific Research Director and Fresh Fruit Specialist, "Grapefruit is unique in that the longer it stays on the tree, the sweeter it gets. This season, the Florida grapefruit crop has a high level of natural sugars and low acidity, great for those who prefer sweeter grapefruit."

Fresh grapefruit and grapefruit juice retail prices are declining. Retail prices for fresh grapefruit continue to be competitive and grapefruit juice prices are lower than last year due to this season's large crop.

Florida grapefruit can help more than the pocketbook; it's an excellent source of vitamin C and provides other essential nutrients. In fact, Florida grapefruit juice contains about ten times the potassium of most sport drinks. It's fat-free, cholesterol-free and sodium-free.

The easiest test for a driver's license is given in Egypt where the ability to drive six meters forward and in reverse has been deemed sufficient.

Brave few play in Scramble despite threatening weather

Two teams carded three-under scores of 33 on the back nine at Pitman Municipal Golf Course in the Wednesday Scramble yesterday. Scores and the number of entrants were affected by the high wind and threat of rain.

A team composed of Sha Gearn, John Robinson, Dewayne Robbins and Bobby Burrus shot one of the 33s and took first on a scorecard playoff. Placing second was the team of Keith Kelso, Speedy Nieman and Lillie Shipman.

There was also a tie for third at 34, with the team of Dave Workman, Dean Herring, Valda West and Perry Ray taking the gift certificates on a card playoff. The other 34 was recorded by the team of Rick Hopping, Hugh Blakey, Bartley Dowell and Charlotte Clark.

Individual leaders for the season standings were announced by golf pro Dave Kaesheimer. The top six are Paul Hubbard and Steve Stevens with 15 points; Sinky Scott, 14; and Speedy Nieman, Charles Hoover and Dean Herring with 13.

Jordan blisters Suns with 55 points

CHICAGO (AP) - The Phoenix Suns tried one defender after another before Michael Jordan finally showed them who could stop him.

Nobody. There may be just one person who can stop the Chicago Bulls from winning the NBA title, perhaps as early as Friday night.

Michael Jordan. Unless he self-destructs for three straight games - and his will, wisdom and wonderful offensive skills virtually guarantee he won't - Chicago should become the third NBA team to win three straight championships.

Using a "subpar" 44-point performance as motivation, Jordan played without limit, finally stopping when he reached 55 and the Bulls had secured a 111-105 victory Wednesday night.

"The big difference in the game was they had Michael and we didn't," Suns coach Paul Westphal said.

After the first victory by a home team in six games between the clubs this season, the Bulls lead the best-of-7 series 3-1 and can win it at home. If the Bulls lose Friday night, Phoenix goes home for a game Sunday night.

"All we wanted was the opportunity to win and we still have that opportunity," said Charles Barkley, whose triple-double was lost in the glare of Jordan's electrifying show. "I like their chances, being up 3-1, but we're not going to give up."

Jordan saw that in Game 3. The Suns went three overtimes but finally won 129-121. Jordan did score 44 points, but missed 24 of 43 shots.

"It's one game away and we don't want to botch up this opportunity to make history," he said.

The third game provided him with another lesson - take the ball inside - and gave him an extra spark.

"I'm very disappointed with the way I played the last game," Jordan said. "I wanted to do my part in this game. I was a little nervous at the beginning."

In Game 3, he missed 14 of his last 20 shots and struggled down the stretch. In Game 4, he made 14 of his first 20 and was spectacular from start to finish.

He had 11 points in the first quarter, 22 in the second, 10 in the third and 12 in the fourth. There were graceful jumpers, twisting layups and trademark dunks. They came against quick Kevin Johnson, strong Dan Majerle and tall Richard Dumas.

His 55 points tied him with Rick Barry for the second most in an NBA Finals, behind only Elgin Baylor's 61. His 43-point average in the series is better than Barry's record of 40.8.

Barkley led Phoenix with 32 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists despite an injured right elbow that was bandaged for the second straight game. Johnson added 19 and Dumas 17.

For Chicago, Horace Grant had 17 points and 16 rebounds, and Scottie Pippen added 14 points and 10 assists.

But it was Jordan's game. "You can't say enough about Michael's effort," said John Paxson, his teammate for eight seasons.

Jordan's first five baskets came on jumpers, helping Chicago to a 31-27 lead after one quarter. He scored his team's first 16 points of the second period.

He hit 21 of 37 shots, with 12 baskets coming inside. The last started a three-point play with 13 seconds left that gave Chicago a 109-104 lead. It followed B.J. Armstrong's steal after Johnson bobbled Danny Ainge's accurate inbounds pass.

"The wing penetration was open all night long," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "Michael saw the opening and took it, demanded it. He saw in the tapes of the last game that he hadn't gone to the basket hard enough to finish the plays."

His aggressiveness also gave him 18 free throws. He made 13.

Majerle hit three 3-pointers in the final two minutes of the first half to cut Chicago's lead to 61-58 at intermission. The Suns got the last six points of the third quarter and first four of the fourth, drawing within 86-85.

Jordan's 3-point play and Armstrong's layup gave the Bulls a 102-94 lead. But the Suns closed to 106-104 with 1:01 left on two baskets by Johnson and three by Barkley.

With 44 seconds to go, Barkley stole Pippen's pass, and Majerle went in for a layup, but Pippen blocked the ball out of bounds. Then Pippen knocked the ball away from Barkley in the low post, setting up the inbounds pass that Johnson misplayed.

It led to Jordan's final fallaway one-handed shot in the lane with Barkley in front of him that resulted in a three-point play and a 109-104 lead.

Shark Attack may hit Baltusrol

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) - About this time last year, Greg Norman was in the Bahamas, relaxing, skin diving and pretending he didn't care.

"I never even watched the U.S. Open on television," Norman said. "Well, actually that's a lie. I did get back to my room in time to watch the last nine holes."

Norman wasn't playing well enough to qualify for the Open at Pebble Beach. Hadn't done much on the course for quite some time, hadn't won a tournament in a year. The Great White Shark was just a little fish in a big pond.

"I was very disappointed, because I love Pebble Beach," Norman said.

One year later, Norman has quit fussing with his natural swing and is reaping the fruits of a newfound determination and dedication to golf. He is the second-leading money winner on the U.S. tour, the winner of the Doral and a favorite going into today's first round of the U.S. Open at Baltusrol.

"Since the British Open last year, I feel my rededication has started to show," Norman said. "All I really had to do was get the ducks back in line."

Whether that's an expression of his native Australia or his adopted Florida, it translates roughly to: He's got his head back on straight and his priorities right.

Norman's best run at the U.S. Open championship was 1984, when he lost an 18-hole playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller at Winged Foot. He shot consecutive rounds of 69 on the weekend to forge the tie, then shot 75 in the playoff to Zoeller's 67. It was a Reagan-Mondale type landslide.

In 1986, Norman led after the third round of all four majors, only to lose all but the British Open, his only major championship. The next year, he came oh so close to winning the Masters, bowing to Larry Mize's chip-in birdie on the second hole of sudden death.

Many of his peers on the tour think this is the perfect spot for Norman to break through in a major again. Tom Watson says Baltusrol, with its sparse rough and fairways open to the greens, will play a lot like a British Open, and he ought to know -

Watson's won five of them.

Baltusrol will play right into the hands of golfers who hit the ball a long ways, even if they occasionally miss a fairway.

"I've always felt I could win this championship," Norman said. "I do like the golf course, and if you feel comfortable, you can forget your mistakes more easily. I feel very good about my chances to win here."

Also among the favorites will be defending Open champion Tom Kite, who has won twice this year; Paul Azinger, the leading money-winner on the tour, who won the Memorial Tournament two weeks ago; Vijay Singh of Fiji, who won last week's Buick Classic; and Payne Stewart, who won the Open in '91 and has eight top 10 finishes this year.

Baltusrol will play at either 7,152 or 7,084 yards, depending on where the pins are set on two par-3 holes, the fourth and 16th, and is a par-70 layout. There are only two par-5s, the 17th and 18th holes, and the 17th is 630 yards long, the longest hole ever played in the Open.

Cap is important to rugby players

By KELVIN C. BIAS
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) - Brian Monaghan was used to seeing the color red as a five-year starter for the Dallas Reds, a club team in the Texas Rugby Union. But now the reserve prop doesn't want to see it Saturday when the U.S. Eagles national rugby team faces Canada in the CANAM game in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

That's because Monaghan wants to earn his first cap, which is given to players when they compete internationally, in the role of a

Bates inks deal with Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) - Bill Bates, forced to watch most of last year's Dallas Cowboys championship season from the sidelines with a knee injury, has gotten another chance.

The Cowboys signed Bates on Tuesday to a one-year contract that will pay him a base salary of $200,000, with an additional $250,000 possible if he stays healthy.

"I'm ready to put the pads on and hit somebody," said Bates, about to start his 11th season. "I know I'll be given a chance to win a spot on the roster, and that's all I need."

Bates, 32, will compete for a spot as a linebacker in the Cowboys' third-down defense and as a member of the special teams.

Bates' contract leaves running backs Emmitt Smith and Daryl Johnston and safety Ray Horton as the team's last unsigned veterans.

starting prop, and not because one of his teammates is reddened by the blood of an injury.

"I'm real eager to get one, but in the same respect, I don't want that to happen because I don't want to see anyone get hurt," Monaghan said. "I'm going to have to beat them out."

Monaghan, who is 6-0, 245 pounds and lives in Carrollton, was selected as a reserve for the national team by a panel comprised mostly of former Eagles after his play at the Interterritorial All-Star tournament in Denver during Memorial Day weekend. The event included 25 top players from each Rugby Union - Pacific, West, Midwest, and East.

But not earning a starting role was of little importance to Monaghan.

"It's an incredible honor. It's one of the high points of my career to represent my country and be recognized that you're in an elite group of athletes," Monaghan said.

Jack Clark, who was named national coach in March and has led the University of California to 12 of the past 15 NCAA rugby titles, said rugby status is based on one question.

Spurs' Robinson has surgery

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Spurs center David Robinson underwent arthroscopic surgery Wednesday to repair an ailment in his right knee that had bothered him all season, team officials said.

San Antonio Spurs physician Dr. Jack Henry performed the surgery Wednesday morning at Humana Hospital on an outpatient basis.

"Were you capped or were you not?" Clark said. "It's a very special thing. It's something you frame and put on the wall, but Brian's going to get capped sooner or later."

Besides talent, Clark said Monaghan was selected to the team primarily because of his age.

"Brian is one of seven or eight guys (on the team) who is 25 years old, so he'll peak in a few years and stay there for two or three years," Clark said. "My job as coach is to find guys like him. Not just based on talent, but on age. We're making an investment in him now."

Clark said he hopes the investment will pay off with a berth in the 1995 World Cup in South Africa. To qualify, the United States must defeat Argentina twice in 1994 or win on total points if they split the home and away series.

"We will be something to reckon with in the late '90s," Clark said.

Said Monaghan: "The more experience I get, it is just going to work to my advantage."

"The first time I carried the ball in rugby I was sold on the game. I never got to touch it in high school," he said.

The surgery was to remove a small tear of the lateral meniscus and the associated cyst on Robinson's right knee, according to a statement issued by the team.

Robinson was released after the surgery and was expected to be on crutches about two days before resuming normal activities and conditioning.

Bonds shocks Dibble, Reds with homer in 9th

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

There comes a time when you just know it's somebody's year - see Orel Hersher, circa 1988. This is Barry Bonds' year.

Against intimidating reliever Rob Dibble with the San Francisco Giants down to their final out Wednesday night, Bonds did guess what? If you said he homered to tie the game, and that the Giants won 6-5 in the 10th inning, you're right.

He shoed reporters away in the clubhouse, saying he wanted to read a magazine. As for Dibble, he was nowhere to be found.

"Barry takes Dibble deep the other way - you're not going to see that too many times," said Will Clark, who singled home the go-ahead run in the 10th.

Dibble got the first two outs in the ninth as he tried to protect a 4-3 lead.

His first pitch to Bonds was outside. The next was a fastball over the plate. Bonds lined it to left-center for his 19th homer.

Giants manager Dusty Baker was delighted, but not shocked.

"Boy, that was sweet," Baker said. "I'm not amazed. You tend to expect him to get a hit."

Cincinnati manager Davey Johnson said Dibble remains a key for the Reds.

"The big guy is going to have to do it," Johnson said.

The Giants hit four solo homers, including Bonds' game-tying shot off Dibble, who has blown saves in his last two appearances. The other three homers came off starter Jose Rijo - two by Dave Martinez and one by Matt Williams.

Clark and Williams had two-out, run-scoring singles off Bobby Ayala (1-3).

Rod Beck pitched the 10th and allowed a run, but got his 20th save.

Kevin Mitchell and Reggie Sanders hit solo homers for Cincinnati.

Astros 5, Padres 4
Scott Servais hit a homer and an

RBI single, and Mark Portugal (5-2) homered and won his fourth straight game.

Fred McGriff had a two-run homer and three RBIs for San Diego.

Expos 4, Phillies 3
Mike Lansing drove home the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning. The Phillies tied the game 3-3 in the ninth on Lenny Dykstra's two-out solo homer.

David West (1-2) walked Lou Frazier to open the 10th and Tim Laker sacrificed. Laker reached safely and both runners advanced when West's throw to first was wild.

Wil Cordero was intentionally walked to load the bases. Delino DeShields struck out before Lansing hit a 3-2 pitch into center field.

Mel Rojas (2-5) got the victory with three innings of relief.

Pete Schourek walked Otis Nixon to open the inning.

Schourek (2-9) took his sixth loss in a row. Maddux (6-5) struck out six, walked one and hit one.

Cardinals 3, Pirates 2
Torrid Bernard Gilkey had three hits and an RBI, and Joe Magrane won his third straight start.

Gilkey singled twice, doubled home the tie-breaking run in the fifth off Zane Smith (0-1) and stole a base.

Magrane (5-6) allowed five hits in six innings, and scored the run that broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth after doubling for his first hit in 24 at-bats.

Rockies 7, Dodgers 6
Charlie Hayes and Daryl Boston hit solo home runs and Colorado beat

Los Angeles for the first time in six games.

The Dodgers rallied for four runs in the ninth inning, capped by Cory Snyder's three-run homer off Keith Shepherd. Mark Grant got two outs for his first save.

Cubs 6, Marlins 4
Ryne Sandberg drove in three runs and reliever Jim Bullinger won.

Sandberg's sixth-inning double off Luis Aquino (4-4) broke a 2-2 deadlock and drove in Jose Vizcaino, who also scored on Sandberg's RBI single in the fourth.

Bullinger (1-0), one of three Class AAA pitchers called up Tuesday to replace three injured starters, relieved Jose Bautista in the sixth.

Real Jack Morris stands up

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Jack Morris watched himself pitching one of the greatest games ever. Then, he went out and provided a real-life replay.

Morris, who took a 9.91 ERA into Wednesday's game at the Metrodome, blanked Minnesota on five hits and led the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-0 victory.

Last week, Morris reviewed a videotape of his 10-inning, 1-0 win over Atlanta in Game 7 of the 1991 World Series in Minnesota.

"Watching that tape, I wanted it to give me that mental approach," Morris said. "It reassured me and reminded me where I was mentally in probably one of the most important games of my career."

Morris (4-7) struck out a season-high seven, walked none and did not permit a runner past second base.

John Olerud, who extended his hitting streak to 21 games with a single in the fourth, broke a scoreless tie in the ninth with a sacrifice fly off Scott Erickson (3-7).

"Jack's been struggling. We wanted to get him a run," Olerud said.

Morris, who tied for the major-league lead with 21 wins last season, had not lasted more than seven innings in any start this year.

Erickson (3-7) struck out a career-high nine and allowed only three hits until the Blue Jays broke through in the ninth.

Indians 8, Tigers 2
Paul Sorrento hit a two-run homer, highlighting a six-run third inning that sent Cleveland over Detroit. The Indians are 10-26 on the road, the worst mark in the majors.

The Tigers managed only two runs on five hits in six innings against Tom Kramer (2-2). Jeremy Hernandez pitched three innings for his first save.

Bill Gullickson (4-3) lasted only 2 1-3 innings.

Royals 5, Mariners 1
David Cone pitched eight shutout innings and Kansas City won at the Kingdom.

Cone (4-7) gave up four hits, struck out four and walked three.

Greg Gagne, who started the day in an 0-for-15 rut, went 4 for 4. He singled during a two-run fourth and singled again in a three-run ninth.

Erik Hanson (5-5) lost. He allowed 12 hits in eight innings.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 1
Mike Greenwell, who began the game in a 4-for-35 slump, hit a three-run homer in the first inning as Boston won at Yankee Stadium.

John Doherty and Greg Harris teamed on a three-hitter. Doherty (4-5) won for the first time in eight road starts, allowing three hits in seven innings.

Greenwell hit his third home run of the season. The Red Sox missed a chance for even more runs, leaving the bases loaded against Melido Perez (4-6) in each of the first two innings.

Angels 5, Rangers 2
Chuck Finley outpitched Kevin Brown and California won at home.

Gary DiSarcina drove in three runs with three singles. Torey Lovullo's solo homer started the Angels' three-run, fourth inning.

Finley (6-4) gave up two runs in 6 2-3 innings and struck out seven, and Gene Nelson closed for his third save.

Brown (6-6) allowed four runs on eight hits and four walks in 4 1-3 innings.

White Sox 4, Athletics 0
Jack McDowell pitched a three-hitter and became the first 10-game winner in the majors, leading Chicago over Oakland.

A day after Wilson Alvarez blanked the A's on three hits at the Coliseum, McDowell (10-4) struck out a season-high eight and walked two. He pitched his second shutout and fifth complete game of the season.

George Bell hit a sacrifice fly in the first inning off Ron Darling (1-4). In the seventh, Ozzie Guillen had an RBI single and Frank Thomas hit a two-run double.

Brewers 7, Orioles 2
Greg Vaughn drove in three runs with two hits as Milwaukee beat Baltimore ace Mike Mussina. The visiting Orioles lost for only the second time in 14 games.

Mussina (9-3) was tagged for three runs on four hits in the first inning.

Jamie Navarro (5-3) won his fifth consecutive decision.

Braves 5, Mets 2
Jeff Blauser's two-run homer keyed a four-run first inning, and Greg Maddux had a three-hitter as Atlanta handed New York its 11th loss in 13 games.

Blauser's fifth homer came after

Sheffield plays after jail stay

HOUSTON (AP) - A few hours after being released by the police, Gary Sheffield was back at a place where he felt a lot more comfortable, playing third base for the San Diego Padres.

"I was just a little tired, but I was able to get some sleep and something to eat before I came to the park," he said.

Sheffield spent about 13 hours in custody Wednesday after a scuffle with a Houston officer in the parking lot of an all-night restaurant. Sheffield was charged with assault with bodily injury, a Class A misdemeanor punishable by a fine up to $3,000 and a year in jail.

Houston attorney Christopher Tritico, accompanied by San Diego manager Jim Riggleman and general manager Randy Smith, posted Sheffield's $500 bond. He was released at 4 p.m., three hours before the Padres were to play the Astros.

Sheffield arrived at the Astrodome just as the game was starting. Riggleman had made out two lineups, one with Sheffield and one without him, and decided to leave out last year's National League batting champion.

Instead, Riggleman sent him back to the hotel for a nap.

Sheffield returned to the stadium later and got into the game in the seventh inning. He went 1-for-2 in a 5-4 loss to Houston.

"Sometimes you don't really need it (batting practice) and sometimes you do. This is just one of those times. I'm swinging the bat real well," Sheffield said.

"I was kind of worried about how the crowd would react. I'm just glad we got that over with. It was a lot better than I expected," said Sheffield, who was met with some scattered boos.

Several witnesses said the altercation started inside the restaurant, where Sheffield was sitting with teammates Fred McGriff and Derek Bell and three women.

One of the women, Demetra Arceneaux, said the altercation started when Sheffield pushed a restaurant booth into an officer sitting behind him and the two argued. Arceneaux said after Sheffield paid his tab, he argued with the officer again outside.

Waitress Nancy Magluilo confirmed Arceneaux's version of the events, and said it appeared Shiver and the three other officers provoked the confrontation.

"I think the cops had no reason to do anything to them," she said. "They were just having a good time. I don't think they knew who they had until it was too late."

Hartley said the officer was walking to his car to get his wallet when Sheffield provoked him.

"Sheffield made some type of comment and then made a threatening comment," Hartley said. "He (the officer) then went to arrest him and the other officers went to assist."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was X-rayed in connection with recent fractures. The X-ray technician reported evidence of osteoporosis. Should I be evaluated further because of the osteoporosis? If so, what tests should be done? What specialist should I be seeing, if that is necessary?

DEAR READER: You should be under the care of a physician. Although I don't know the circumstances of your fractures, if you have osteoporosis, that is probably why they occurred.

Depending on the rest of your health status, you may need hormone-replacement therapy. Estrogen helps to prevent bone loss. Calcium intake is also important, but it does not have the same effect as estrogen and is most effective for the wrist and hips, but not the vertebrae. Your calcium intake is important. There are other medicines as well that may be needed in your case to stop any progression of osteoporosis. There are mixed reports on a newer medicine called Didronel (etidronate), which does decrease loss of bone from the vertebrae. But it is now questioned whether the resulting bone is strong and good bone.

You should start with your family doctor to determine what needs to be done in your case. I am sending you Special Report 98, Understanding Osteoporosis (Dissolving Bones) for information on the many different medicines now used in treating it. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/98, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

It is important that you consider the various lifestyle factors that also have a role in developing osteoporosis. Tobacco and alcohol both contribute to bone loss. In fact, if a relatively young man, below 50, has osteoporosis, he is usually an alcoholic. Exercise is essential, but you need to be careful to do it right and not strain from lifting or you could fracture bones. Women with more severe osteoporosis have been known to fracture a vertebra simply by stepping off the curb.

It is important to realize that much can be done to prevent osteoporosis, beginning with a proper diet containing adequate calcium in the first 30 years of life when the skeleton is still developing, and avoiding habits that may cause it.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Is it better to sleep on the right side, left side, back or chest? Which position is easier on the heart if you do have to lie in bed?

DEAR READER: If you happen to have a tendency to esophageal regurgitation, you will be better off lying on your left side. That puts most of the stomach below the junction of the esophagus and the stomach and helps to limit the amount of gastric contents that can reflux into the lower esophagus. It is also better to have the head of the bed elevated. If you don't have an esophageal reflux problem, there is nothing wrong with the right side.

Lying on your back is fine, but it may increase a person's tendency to sleep with the mouth open, leading to a dry mouth and snoring. Most people have trouble lying on their abdomen/chest because of the need to turn the head so far. That is particularly bothersome as you get older.

Patients with congestive heart failure often can breathe better sitting up. That decreases the amount of blood in the lungs and promotes better breathing. Because of the pressure effects of the upright column of blood above the heart, that also increases the pressure to increase filling the coronary arteries and a modest increase in circulation to the heart. Sitting up results in less work for the heart than lying flat.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Do estrogen supplements deplete calcium? I am having serious problems with my nails. I have read that protein makes for healthy hair, skin and nails. I eat the proper foods and in sufficient amounts.

I have been on estrogen since the menopause about 27 years ago. I'll be 69 this year, and my gynecologist insists I stay on it indefinitely. I also take calcium supplements, a multiple vitamin and a cod-liver-oil capsule daily.

My fingernails have serious layering and ridges and are dry and brittle. My toenails have thickened badly and are very hard to cut. I know the change in toenails takes place as we grow older, but it is my fingernails I am most concerned about.

DEAR READER: Estrogen helps you absorb calcium. The changes in your nails are unrelated to your hormone replacement. Protein is necessary for skin and appendages, but enough is enough and extra protein after that point doesn't help.

Fingernail polish and polish remover are frequent causes of poor nails. Lack of moisture is another. You may need to moisturize your fingernails with something like Vaseline at night and wear gloves until the next morning every so often for moisture.

Strategies offered for treating strokes

Every year, more than 500,000 Americans suffer a stroke, causing varying degrees of neurological impairment and 150,000 fatalities. MRI and CT scanning technologies cannot confirm that a stroke occurred until between eight and 24 hours after the event. Treatment focuses on trying to prevent a subsequent stroke and attempting to compensate for any residual mental or physical disability. Recently, however, researchers using rats as test animals have developed promising new methods of diagnosing a stroke and preventing much of its damage.

Most strokes are caused by a clot that blocks an artery in the brain. Nerve cells begin to die approximately three minutes later. The assumption had been that nerve cells killed by strokes all died within minutes of an attack. However, researchers using a newly developed, improved form of MRI called DWI, are changing this common belief. DWI can detect and follow the resultant brain damage almost immediately. Studies using rats showed that although the area immediately affected by the clot dies rather rapidly, areas a bit further away may survive for another two days. This finding opened the possibility of preventing the death of these surrounding cells by administering an effective treatment in time.

Unfortunately, no effective treatment existed. Physicians used clot-dissolving compounds like heparin with disappointing results. Instead, researchers investigated what made the cells die long after the initial blockage. They found that the mineral calcium, which is toxic at improper levels, leaks into the damaged nerve cells. Moreover, the resupply of oxygen upon resumption of blood flow activates self-destructive enzymes. Eventually this one-two punch leads to cell death.

Researchers are using this knowledge to develop novel therapeutic approaches. The first method plugs the calcium leaks, while the second neutralizes the destructive form of oxygen that forms after a stroke. Researchers have demonstrated that a calcium plugger called Cerastat reduced stroke tissue damage in rats by as much as 66 percent. Based on these experiments and promising results with human volunteers, clinical trials are beginning at six medical centers. An oxygen scavenger called Freeox is also being tested in humans for its ability to limit stroke damage.

It appears that through the combination of better diagnostic technology and a new understanding of stroke biology, physicians and patients may no longer need to sit helplessly while a stroke wreaks its damage.

FAST FACTS
Dear Heloise: I use my kitchen alarm clock as a reminder on so many occasions that I would never even dream of buying another radio clock for the kitchen without the alarm feature. I always place a small note on the radio to remind me what the alarm is for. I have set this clock to remind me of:

- a special television show
- the time I need to turn off the oven
- a certain time to make a telephone call
- the time I need to leave the house for a scheduled appointment.

Maybe someday we'll even see an alarm clock able to record a short reminder message much like our answering machines. I never miss an appointment anymore. — George E. Thatcher, Staten Island, N.Y.

VOTIVE CANDLES
Dear Heloise: After years of trying to pry used votive candles out of their holders, I discovered that if you put the holder in the freezer and chill it, the candle will pop out easily. — Carrie Hudetz, Moline, Ill.

SOUND OFF
Dear Heloise: I would like to suggest that companies be required to give a full address on product labels or boxes.

It is discouraging to write to a company using the address on the container, usually just the name of the company, town, state and ZIP code, only to have your letter returned by the post office stamped "insufficient address." Then I'm forced to go to the library or someplace else to get a mailing address.

It certainly cannot be a matter of cost — what would one more line of small print be? — Mary F. Johnson, Hendersonville, N.C.

I know what you mean! We spend a lot of time tracking down phone numbers and addresses. Hope manufacturers are listening. — Heloise

Dear Readers: I know you've been hearing a lot about lead lately. But with summer here, especially in Texas, many of us are shopping at flea markets and garage sales for unusual and inexpensive items. So before bringing it home, why not test the glassware, pottery, or even the paint on an old desk that catches your eye?

Almost anything can be checked for lead, and it's a good idea to make sure what you're about to buy is safe. There's a way to find out if high amounts of lead are present.

There are lead test kits that can be carried right in your purse. These two- and four-pack kits can be found at discount, hardware and home-improvement stores and they cost from $5 to $8. If you need more tests, there are kits containing 16 to 60 tests, and the prices range from $20 to $35.

For a six-page comprehensive report on the different lead kits available as well as a Shopper's Guide to Low-Lead China, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to:

Environmental Defense Fund
257 Park Avenue South, 16th Floor
New York NY 10010.

Or you can call the Environmental Protection Agency's National Lead Information Center 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 800-LEAD-FYI. You will be asked to leave your name and address and they'll send you information concerning lead poisoning. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: Over the past several years I have saved shoulder pads that I just couldn't seem to throw out or wear. Finally, I decided to stuff them in one of my zippered satin pillow covers.

Some of the more colorful pads show through, making an attractive, flexible, snugly toss cushion. And, if I should ever decide to use them again, all I have to do is unzip and make my selection! — Dottie Sears, Louisville, Ky.

Pointers for parents

It may come as a surprise to some, but in the second half of her first year, your baby needs more iron in her daily diet than her Daddy does.

In fact, she may need twice as much as he, to fuel all the growth that occurs during that first important year. During that time, a baby's birth weight generally triples and brain size doubles. Babies are born with a store of iron which lasts about the first four to six months. After that, they need iron in their diet.

The idea food for babies is breast milk. If you stop breast feeding before your baby's first birthday or if you chose not to breast feed, you should feed your baby an iron fortified formula. Whole milk or low-iron formula should not be given to your infant because it does not supply enough iron.

Lack of iron can lead to anemia or some other form of iron deficiency. This can cause a range of problems including irritability, fatigue, shortness of breath, slower growth, lower learning ability and even learning and behavior problems in later life.

Iron deficiency problems are more widespread than many suppose. One study found 27.3 percent of nine-to-12 month-old infants had iron deficiency without anemia.

What's more, some studies have suggested babies don't adequately absorb the iron added to infant cereals and may not eat enough to get the necessary iron. During the first year, even babies who eat infant cereals and other foods still need breast milk or iron-fortified formula for most of their calories and iron.

You can avoid glaring errors

A growing number of Americans are avoiding some glaring errors when selecting lenses for their sunglasses by choosing real glass and photochromic glass lenses.

Eye care experts report that glass lenses actually absorb up to 85 percent of sunlight while preventing glare and blocking out potentially dangerous ultraviolet and infrared rays. Experts add that plastic-type lenses may reduce some glare but cannot match the protective properties of real glass sunglasses lenses.

In the prescription sunglass area, consumers have a choice of photochromic lenses or fixed tint lenses. Most photochromic lenses, which change color from light to dark when you go out into the sunlight, are made from glass. In the fixed tint, you would have to request they be made from glass.

ASU student doesn't let height handicap him

By RICK SMITH
San Angelo Standard-Times
SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - About the time he entered elementary school, John Thomas began to realize he was different from his classmates. "Everybody started outgrowing me," he said. "At first, I didn't notice. Then it got to the point where it was ridiculous. The boys all outgrew me, then the girls all outgrew me." "I mean, I knew I was short. But, because no one had ever treated me differently, it didn't bother me up until then." Thomas, an Angelo State University sophomore from Bronte, still refuses to say that he's not "normal-sized." "Who's to say what's normal?" he said, cracking his sly, trademark grin. "I just say that I'm shorter than average. And, at 4-7, I'm actually pretty tall - for a dwarf." Thomas, 20, curls his right hand around a javelin, takes several steps, and hurls it at the opposite end of the field at ASU's Multipurpose Sports Complex. It's 1 p.m. on a spring afternoon, and he's the only athlete on the field. "I like working out alone," Thomas says, watching the javelin as it arcs 20 yards down the field. "I basically know what I'm doing. I just need to get better at it." Since he was a teen-ager, sports have been an important part of his life. He modestly admits that his athletic talents range from Ping-Pong to the shot put, from golf to bowling. He played basketball at Bronte until the eighth grade, then began managing the basketball team and serving as the coach's statistician. "I loved playing basketball, but the team outgrew me," he says, smiling. "And my parents always encouraged me to participate in anything - no matter what it was. They never said, 'John, you can't do this because you're disabled. You can't do that because you're a dwarf.' They said, 'If you want to do it, find a way to do it. Find a way to be on the team, even if it's only carrying water bottles.'" He hasn't settled for that, however. At ASU, he plays for an intramural softball team, pitching against players who are easily twice his weight and more than a foot taller. During a recent game, the big, beefy batters practically knocked him off the pitcher's mound. Several smirked at the small size of the pitcher. That seemed only to make Thomas try harder. "Watch out!" he shouted to a refrigerator-sized batter, as he drew back his arm to pitch. "I'm dangerous!" After competing against "average-sized" athletes all his life, Thomas experienced a revelation when he was about 16 years old: he participated in the Olympic-style games for dwarfs and handicapped youths. "For the first time in my life, I was actually bigger than someone," he said, laughing. "I did very well. And I thought, 'Wow! I can finally compete with someone on my own level!'" Throughout high school, Thomas won various medals in youth divisions at the games. In June, he will travel to Chicago to compete for the first time in the adult division of the World Dwarf Games. He is trying to raise the money he needs to make the trip and pay his expenses - about $1,000. Raising the money is proving a challenge, he admitted. "If we had the money, I'd love to just give it to him," said his mother, Roenna Thomas, a medical transcriptionist at Concho Valley Regional Hospital. "I'd love to have a rich relative I could call, but I don't. So I told him, 'John, you'll just have to raise the money yourself.' And he is. He's a people person who couldn't be shy if he tried." "From the time his dwarfism was first diagnosed, we've worked to help make him independent so that he could grow up and live his own life. It's working. He's paying his own way through school. He works summers to make his own money. He's growing up fine." "For the first years of her son's life, however, she didn't know if her baby would grow up at all. "I remember after John was born, the doctor came in and said, 'He's got problems. We think he has water on the brain, he has a cleft palate, his esophagus is not formed, he has heart murmurs and something is wrong with his stomach.'" "He told us that John probably wouldn't make it through the first night, and if he lived, he would be a vegetable. "But John lived. He still had problems. He still wasn't out of the woods, but he was alive." Thomas faced years of operations to correct everything from his cleft palate to a spinal problem. But the biggest surprise was yet to come. "They didn't diagnose his dwarfism correctly until he was about 4 years old," Roenna Thomas said. She admitted she didn't know quite what to do.

"I didn't know any dwarfs," she said. "So I started finding out about them." Her first decision was not to over-protect her son. "People said, 'Why don't you put him in a private school where they will protect him?'" "I told them that he's got to live in the real world. I put him in public school and treated him according to his age, not his size. People thought I was hard on him because I made him do his chores, made him work for his money. "You want to take them in your arms and hold them and be around to take care of them forever. But you can't. "Oh, I made some stupid mistakes. Kids would pick on him, and I'd stand up for him. That was wrong. Kids don't want Mommy standing up to protect them. "But, for the most part, I think we've done OK. If we hadn't, John would tell us about it." Growing up in small towns in Texas and Mississippi was a plus, Thomas said. "I think people care more in small towns. They helped me fit in. "Oh, it's always hard at first when you're new. Kids want to know, 'What's wrong?' 'Why are you shorter than everyone else?' 'Why do you walk a little bit funny?'" "I'd just explain and most would accept it." Over the years, Thomas learned to cope with most of his physical problems: he wears thick glasses to correct his vision, he uses an electric cart to get around the ASU campus because too much walking aggravates his arthritis - plus he has no sockets or ball joints in his hips. He drives his own truck, lives in his own apartment, leads his own active social life.

"I love to dance," he said, grinning. "The only problem is that, sometimes, girls look at me funny when I ask them because they aren't used to dancing with someone shorter than they are. "Doesn't bother me, though. I've danced with someone taller all my life." Living life as the only dwarf in San Angelo can be lonely at times, he admitted. "As far as dating, sometimes it's awful hard always being shorter than the girl. "But I've found that, after people get to know me, they look at what's inside. "I really believe that God made me this way for a reason. Maybe I'm supposed to be president. Maybe I'm just supposed to make people smile. "I could have been just average. "Instead, I'm one in a million."

UN unleashes might against Somalia chief

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) - Advancing under sniper fire, American and Pakistani soldiers stormed the homes of Mohamed Farrah Aidid and two of his chief allies today as the United Nations unleashed its might against the recalcitrant warlord.
Aidid was not found in his two-story, stucco villa and troops launched a house-to-house search.
The Mogadishu neighborhood in which Aidid and his henchmen live was pounded through the night and early morning by American AC-130 aerial gunships and Cobra helicopters firing 105mm howitzers and air-to-ground missiles to soften it up for the ground assault.
An Associated Press photographer accompanying the assault, Hansi Krauss, said Aidid's house was badly damaged by the aerial attack that began nine hours earlier and continued unabated until shortly before dawn.
Several Somali gunmen were found huddled inside the walls surrounding Aidid's house, Krauss said, but appeared stunned and offered no resistance.
Snipers, however, fired on the U.N. troops from other positions in the area, pinning many behind cars and other areas where they could be protected.
Joelle Tanguy, the head of Doctors Without Borders in Somalia, said two Tow missiles fired by Cobra helicopters hit the compound of International Action Against Famine, killing one Somali aid worker and injuring seven others.
Tanguy and other members of Doctors Without Borders were staying at the French aid agency because its compound was felt to be safer than their own. Both agencies quartered near the neighborhood occupied by Aidid.
Italian, Pakistani, Moroccan and American soldiers encircled the neighborhood before dawn, exchanging heavy gunfire with Aidid's supporters in the sandy, rubbish-strewn streets.
Reporters saw at least two wounded Somalis being carried from the neighborhood, but the full extent of casualties could not be determined.
U.N. tanks and armored personnel carriers blocked many of the narrow streets leading to the compounds of Aidid, his ally Col. Omar Jess and their principal financial backer, Osman Atta.
The fighting marked a new, more violent phase in the U.N.'s weeklong attempt to crush the military capability of Aidid, accused of masterminding a June 5 ambush that killed 23 Pakistani peacekeepers.

Pepsi tampering may be mostly fraudulent

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer
Some experts on the criminal mind suspect the rash of reported Pepsi tamperings is mostly a hoax perpetrated by people out for money, attention or thrills.
Investigators likewise cautioned that many of the claims could be fraudulent. And Pepsi-Cola Co. said it would be virtually impossible for a saboteur at a bottling plant to insert the objects reported found in cans of soda: syringes, needles, a bullet, even a mysterious gob of goo.
"Things aren't always what they seem, but it seems obvious that some of these tamperings are faked - and in the dumbest of ways. It won't be a surprise to me if all of them turn out to be faked," said Dr. Park Dietz, a forensic psychiatrist in Newport Beach, Calif.
On Wednesday, a man in Williamsport, Pa., was arrested and accused of taking a hypodermic needle out of the trash and claiming he had found it in a Pepsi can. Christopher J. Burnette could get five years in prison if convicted on the federal charge of making a false report.
Dietz, a consultant to the FBI in product-tampering cases, said the reported Pepsi tamperings follow a familiar pattern - an isolated claim of tampering is widely publicized, and a wave of similar reports follows.
The first report came June 9, when an 82-year-old man in Tacoma, Wash., said he peered into a can of Diet Pepsi to find out if he'd won a prize and found a syringe. That incident made the TV news in Seattle last Thursday, and the next day another area resident reported that she, too, had found a syringe in a Pepsi can.
On Sunday, the Food and Drug Administration warned Pepsi drinkers in the Northwest to examine their soda cans before taking a sip. After the announcement was reported nationwide, the calls to Pepsi's consumer hot line began to multiply.
FDA and Pepsi-Cola officials would not release numbers, but local media accounts compiled by The Associated Press indicate at least 52 reports of tampering in at least 23 states had been made by Wednesday night.
In New York City, a 30-year-old man reported finding a crack vial in a bottle of Pepsi. In Nashville, a woman said a bullet fell out of her Pepsi can. And in Arkansas, a couple turned in a Pepsi can oozing a glob of dark brown goo; officials thought it might be fungus or mold that grew after the can was punctured.
Pepsi-Cola Co. officials insisted it would be nearly impossible for objects to be slipped into cans during the automated bottling process. Cans are turned upside down, blasted with hot air and water, then flipped, filled and sealed - all within a few seconds.
Some stores pulled Pepsi from their shelves after customers reported finding syringes in cans. But Pepsi-Cola has said it has no plans for a recall, and the FDA has agreed one is not needed.
By Wednesday, officials had confirmed just two reports of foreign objects in sealed soda cans - a screw found inside a Diet Pepsi can in Jacksonville, Fla., and a piece of machinery in a Coca-Cola can in Litchfield, Conn. In both cases authorities said the objects apparently fell off machinery.
The hoax theory was rejected by Peggy Syndergaard, a Rock Springs, Wyo., woman who said she found a syringe in a can of Pepsi she bought last week. "Who would put a hole in their lip for fun?" she asked.
If every tampering reported were genuine, it would have required a cabal of "deranged, clever tamperers" infiltrating Pepsi bottling plants around the country, said Sidney Wolf, health research director for Public Citizen, a consumer group.
Much more likely, he said, is that most of this week's reported tamperings were fraudulent.
"Greed is the most obvious motivation, and we see it often," Dietz said. Consumers may hope to wring money out of the manufacturer with a complaint of a faulty product, he said.
Some people may falsely report a tampering because of a psychological need to play the victim, Dietz said. Others may enjoy the power of manipulating a major corporation. Still others just want to get on the evening news, he said.
