R. & R. THEATRES SUED FOR $175 "BANK NIGHT" PRIZE BY COAHOMA MAN

R. & R. Theatres Friday became defendants in suit filed in justice court and involving the payment of a "bank night" fund.

W. H. Hagler, of Coahoma, filed suit through his attorney, Wilburn Barcus, asking payment of $175, accumulated from five previous "bank nights" when the winners did not appear to claim the $35 to be given each week.

On the night of August 9, Hagler alleges he bought a ticket to the Queen Theatre, owned and operated by the R. & R. Theatre, Inc., and that he had previously "registered" in accordance with terms under which "bank night" was to be operated.

Hagler further alleges that he was present at the time the ticket for that night was drawn and that the Queen theatre was crowded on the occasion to the extent he had to stand at the entrance of the building when employees of the theatre "announced" that one "Hans" was the holder of the ticket drawn; that shortly thereafter the said agents, servants and employees of the R. & R. Theatre, Inc., announced that one "Payne" was the holder of the ticket drawn.

The plaintiff says that he then left the theatre "having been let to believe... that the ticket assigned to him had not been drawn" and that in "about three minutes thereafter he was informed that the ticket which had been drawn was the ticket bearing his number."

He immediately went to the Ritz Theatre, the petition continues, and demanded payment of the $175 fund held in account with the State National Bank and that his demand was refused.

Hagler alleged that the $35 for each of the preceding four Thursdays (bank night) was not paid to any holder of a ticket and that persons whose tickets were drawn were not present to make claim, so that the entire $175, if the suit is settled in his favor, belongs to him.

He asked that the bank, as "a stake holder," be required to retain possession of said funds until the title thereof is determined in this cause.

No answer to the plaintiff's original petition had been filed Friday afternoon.

1934 - 35 School Budget Is Set

Budget for the Big Spring Independent school district was set Thursday evening by the Board of Trustees following a public hearing held from the high school building.

Seven people attended the hearing, but they were interested only in petitioning the board to put on a bus to transport schoolchildren from the Wright and Settles Additions to town. They expressed no other interest in the budget. The board took their petition under advisement for further investigation.

The appropriated budget for 1934-35 totaled $133,659.48, an increase over the 1933-34 budget which amounted to $117,292.66.

The increase was made to carry for the $10,200 balance on maintenance warrants and $9,644 scrip held by teachers since 1932.

Tax rate for the district will remain at the $1 rate, maximum fixed by state law. The board of equalization is now in session and it is likely that valuations will show another decline as has been the trend in the past few years.

Total amount of estimated receipts for 1934-35 were fixed at $124,694.46 against the budget figure of $133,659.48. Estimated increases in revenues is occasioned mostly by an increased number of schoolchildren plus a fifty cent hike in the apportionment rate and also the collection of delinquent taxes.

There was no provision made in the budget for an increase in teacher or administration salaries. Provision for the retirement of the maintenance warrants will clear the district of all obligations except bonded indebtedness.

Requirements for bonded indebtedness for 1934-35 will be $25,440, according to the budget estimate. The figure is approximately the same as for the past year. Total bonded indebtedness for the district is $389,000.

The budget provided for the addition of a librarian and a teacher in the high school and the addition of three more teachers in the grade schools. A librarian is a requirement of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for accrediting. Loss of accrediting would necessitate students taking examinations for college entrance except in Texas schools. None of the other teachers will be put on unless the demand is sufficient to warrant such.

In a meeting Tuesday evening the board studied the budget and set it for the hearing Thursday evening. All trustees except S. P. Jones and Mrs. W. J. McAdams were present for the Tuesday evening session. Mrs. McAdams being on a visit with her parents in Celina, Texas and unable to attend either of the meetings. Thursday with full attendance there was no change in the budget from the figures fixed Thursday.

Ransom Not Paid; Lebatt Held 65 Hours

Released Shortly Before Dawn On Outskirts Of Toronto

VICTIM UNHARMED; IN NERVOUS STATE

Police, Aided By Mounted, Move Tenaciously To Get Their Men

TORONTO, (AP)—An authoritative source declared Friday; "Less than $50,000 was paid for the release of John Labatt." The statement was made a few hours after the brewer was released by the abductors and followed one declaration "that not a cent of ransom was paid," and another that the full $150,000 was paid.

TORONTO (AP)—John S. Labatt, wealthy brewer, returned to his home at London, Ontario, Friday after sixty-two hours in the hands of kidnapers.

He was released shortly before dawn on the outskirts of Toronto. The $150,000 ransom the kidnapers demanded was not paid.

The abductors released the victim as Canadian police, including the famous Royal Mounted, moved tenaciously to get "their men."

"Cold feet," an authority commented. Labatt was unharmed but was in a highly nervous state.

Police surrounded his home where he reunited with his wife and children. Visitors were not admitted. His brother, Hugh, who drew $150,000 from a bank in an effort to meet the abductors' demands had pleaded with police to be given an opportunity to pay. But a cordon of police around his hotel stood between the frantic family and criminals. Labatt was taken from his automobile Tuesday morning enroute from Sarnia to London. Hugh was named intermediary and came to the Toronto hotel immediately. Kidnapers said they would kill Labatt in twenty-four hours unless the ransom was paid.

It was indicated police efforts would be directed toward identification of "Three-Fingered Abe," who signed the ransom note found in Labatt's car and his partners, and the location of the hide-away where Labatt was kept captive.

Absentee Voting Gains Momentum

Absentee voting, retarded by delayed printing of ballots, was Friday beginning to approach the rapid pace set before the first primary.

At noon Friday 107 persons had cast an absentee ballot. Absentee voting will continue until three days before the election. More than 300 such votes were cast before the first primary.

Construction Not Planned Before Winter

Loan Not To Be Repaid By Taxation; Is $2,000 More Than Asked

WASHINGTON (AP)—The public works administration Friday allotted $24,549,379 for 215 non-federal projects.

The $100,000,000 allotted to PWA by President Roosevelt from the deficiency appropriation provided by last congress was virtually depleted by Friday's allocations, which brought the total of non-federal projects to 4023.

Allotments included: Big Spring, swimming pool, loan and grant of $32,000.

Granting of a $32,000 self-liquidating loan Friday by P. W. A. to Big Spring for construction of a natatorium successfully culminated a year's effort toward securing the loan.

The grant was for $2,000 more than Big Spring applied for.

Next step to be taken in the project will be the awarding of contracts and beginning of actual construction.

The loan is to be repaid entirely out of revenues derived from operation of the natatorium. It was plainly stipulated in the application that the loan was not desired if it was dependent upon being repaid by taxation.

It is, as the name implies, strictly a self-liquidating project.

City manager E. V. Spence said Friday that the pool would probably be constructed as a winter project to furnish labor to people in need.

The natatorium will be erected on the slope south of the city park so that water used in the pool may be utilized again in watering all vegetation in the park. It will require no more water than is now required to water the park property.

There is no intention of having the natatorium ready for use before the 1935 swimming season.

Big Spring was well informed Friday that the loan had been approved.

The chamber of commerce and Mayor C. E. Talbot were informed of the action in telegram from Senator Tom Connally, City Manager E. V. Spence was told of the grant by Senator Morris Sheppard and D. J. Shaw, acting secretary for the PWA review board. Both senators and Congressman R. E. Thomason cooperated in seeking the self liquidating loan for construction of the natatorium.

Admiral Byrd Prepared For Lonely Death

Commander Became So Ill In June He Thought End Was Near

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard Byrd prepared himself for a lonely death in Antarctica, yet sent no appeal for aid, the world learned Friday.

A message from the advance weather base where Byrd spent nearly five months in isolation said the commander became so ill in June from stove fumes he thought the end was near.

Says President Only Can Stop General Strike

NEW YORK, (AP)—Thomas F. McMahon, re-elected Friday as president of the United Textile Workers of America, declared only President Roosevelt could avert a general strike in cotton textile industry. He said under a mandate of the convention issued Thursday there is no doubt of the strike being called unless the President forces leaders of the textile industry to sit down at a conference table with representative of the United Textile Workers.

U.S. Wheat Export Quota Set By Board

LONDON, (AP)—The United States was tentatively allocated the 1934-35 wheat export quota of ten million bushels by the International Wheat conference Friday, the Associated Press was informed by an official source. Argentina's export quota was fixed at 150,000,000 bushels.

This source added it was extremely doubtful if these figures would be altered, he said.

Japan Considers Sending Protest To Moscow Soon

TOKYO, (AP)—The Japanese government is "considering the possibility of sending a general warning" to Moscow as the next step in their gravely strained relationship, a foreign office spokesman said today.

Mrs. J. T. Allen left at noon Friday for Fort Worth, where she will be guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ragdale.

Big Spring has added 1,865 persons since the 1930 census and now has a population of 15,400, according to estimates of the Bureau of the Census at Washington. This estimate compares with 13,735 given in the actual count announced in 1930.

The estimate accords Texas 6,073,000 persons, a gain of 248,250 over the official count of 1930. The estimated population of the continental United States is given as 126,425,000, a gain of 3,649,954 since 1930.

The estimate accords Abilene 25,300 persons; now as compared to 23,175 in 1930, a gain of 2,125. Brownwood's gain is 811, Del Rio's 207, Lubbock's 2,780, Sweetwater's 1,152.

The Texas increase, compared with 1930, is about half of that of the state of New York. Texas has been above the 6,000,000 mark beginning with the estimate for 1933, and compared with that year the estimated figure for 1934 shows the state gained 50,000 in that period.

Texas has doubled its population since 1900 when the official enumeration gave it slightly in excess of 2,000,000. It gained more than 800,000 during the next ten years, about

Ickes Okehs Suit Against Gulf Company

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Secretary Ickes Friday approved the recommendation of the petroleum labor policy board that the Gulf Refining company be prosecuted on charges of violating the oil code labor provisions.

Charges, Ickes said, grew out of a strike called by employees of the company's Girard Point, Penn., plant in June. The board told Ickes the company won the strike, but in order to do so resorted to violation of the code.

Mrs. J. T. Allen left at noon Friday for Fort Worth, where she will be guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ragdale.

Wheat—One angle seems to have been overlooked entirely in all the talk about crop shortages resultant from the drought and AAA curtailment.

Folks everywhere are viewing with alarm the Agriculture Department's most recent estimate of this year's total food production—but they are missing one factor that may make the outlook even less gay.

A sizable percentage of many crops will NOT be available for domestic consumption. It will be needed for seed purposes to make possible next year's harvests.

What is a prime example. August 1 estimates indicated a total crop this year of only 41,000,000 bushels. The 1927-31 average was 586,000,000 bushels. Planted acreage in 1934 was 44,000,000 as against the normal 60,000,000.

New Deal farm regulations, as a result of the drought toll, are getting ready to go back to normal production next year. It takes roughly a bushel and a quarter of wheat to seed an acre.

Thus, of this year's yield of 491,000,000 bushels, approximately 42,000,000 bushels will have to be set aside to re-seed. The drought area farmers must get their seed from the crops raised in more fortunate districts—which also, of course, have to be replaced.

Whisky—Eye is a minor crop—unless one wants to remember that rye whisky is legal again—but a similar situation exists.

Normal production is 40,000,000 bushels. This year's yield is down to 17,000,000 bushels. Nearly 4,000,000 bushels will be needed to ger-

WOODUL, FRIEND TO WEST TEXAS
When the Small river-bed bill—a measure vital to the interests of West Texas landowners and home-owners—was up for consideration in the senate one of its staunchest supporters and most eloquent advocates was Walter Woodul of Houston, while one of its bitterest opponents was Joe Moore of Greenville.

Today Senator Woodul and Senator Moore find themselves in the runoff for lieutenant governor of Texas, with Woodul 112,000 votes ahead of his nearest rival. Nothing but a miracle would enable Senator Moore to overcome a lead like that, and the sensible thing for him to do would be to refuse to enter the runoff.

Senator Woodul is not a sectional candidate; he carried probably 60 per cent of the counties of the state, receiving a magnificent vote in West Texas as well as in other sections. But West Texas should remember that Walter Woodul has long been their friend, not only in the matter of the river-bed bill, but in many another instance. In a time of crisis West Texas found Woodul on its side.

Walter Woodul is a solid, substantial able and dependable Texan. He should be given an overwhelming majority on August 25. His home people of Harris county gave him a two-to-one majority over all his opponents in the first primary.

PEOPLE WILL NOT WAIT FOR TIME TO HEAL
Long after recovery from the depression has been completed, we shall probably be arguing earnestly about what caused the recovery.

Was it due to this, that or the other specific measure adopted at Washington? Or did it come of itself, in spite of what Washington did?

This argument has begun already. On one side you have the theory that our cyclical swing from prosperity to depression and back again has been steadily increasing in velocity for half a century, and that this last time it carried our economy down so far that our whole social organization would have collapsed if a remedy had not been applied.

On the other, there is a belief that this depression differed little from its predecessors, and that recovery would have proceeded just as fast—if not, in fact, a little faster—if Washington had kept its hands off entirely.

This latter viewpoint is ably expressed by Neil Carothers director of the College of Business Administration at Lehigh University.

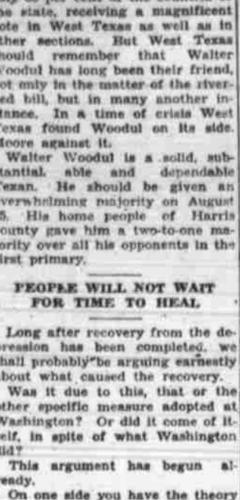

Economists, says Professor Carothers, realize that the causes of a depression "spring from our system of capitalistic production, in which goods are made far in advance of the market by means of borrowed credit and invested funds. It seems to be established that depression comes when this credit-securities-investment system of production becomes overstimulated." Now, this, says Professor Carothers, is a system which inevitably rights itself. It never quite collapses. Economists he adds, "know that the only cure is that one remedy for all human ills—time."

The chief trouble with this theory seems to be its relief that human affairs are carried on in a vacuum.

When an economist talks of producers, consumers, investors, and so on he is not speaking of units in an academic chess game; he is speaking of human beings who have a naive way of getting angry when they lose their money and their jobs, and who will stand privately only about so long before they go out to bust something. A depression like the last one might right itself, if given plenty of time; but the people who are living through it are apt to tear the house down while they are waiting.

Depending on time to effect a cure is like depending on time to relieve an attack of acute appendicitis; it may work—and, on the other hand, the patient may die.

In a highly organized country like ours, which happens also to be a democracy, it is impossible to let nature take its course in an acute depression. The strain on the social fabric is too great.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, former residents of Big Spring, who have been residing in Midland for the past year, have moved back to Big Spring to make their home.

Under The Dome At Austin

AUSTIN, (UP)—Highway patrolmen no longer will suffer indignity of being asked "When does the next bus leave?" Chief L. G. Phares has picked new uniforms for his staff of 110. Early in September they will ride forth in a swanky combination that features both the blue of the French infantry and the tan of Uncle Sam's soldiers. Their heads will be cocky with a Pershing cap, minus the wire expander, so that the top will flop in the breeze. The caps will combine the colors of the shirt and breeches. Its black patent leather peak will harmonize with the black shoes and leggings.

The trousers will have side stripes in the same material used for the blouses. The stripe will be piped in red. Red piping also will set off the pockets of the blouses. Shiny brass buttons with the Texas as long stay insignia will be used.

Chief Phares says frankly the uniform has been changed in order to be distinctive. The present gray uniform is just what the law says a city motorcop, a sheriff or deputy sheriff must wear to make traffic arrests. It also is remarkably like that used by the bus drivers for most motor lines. But when the patrolmen come out in the new uniforms they will look like nobody else.

Figures for the southern Texas division of the U. S. Internal Revenue Department show nearly twice as many federal permits issued for sale of hard liquor as were issued for beer sales. This, though hard liquor sales are legal under Texas law, except for a few specified purposes.

John F. Wallace, Teague, member of the state board of control, is likely to become a long-time Austin resident. He has purchased the home of Presiding Judge W. C. Morrow in Enfield. It is only a short distance from the home of the Governors Ferguson. Wallace has still two years from next January to serve on his present term. A reappointment would be for six years more. Regardless of that, he has a son, soon to enter the University of Texas, so some of the family will continue to live in Austin. Wallace has been a resident of Austin for many years. He was a member of the state legislature and secretary of the state highway commission before former Governor Ross Sterling appointed him member of the board of control.

Advocates of a big army to prevent war might cite the experience of the state relief commission. Twice there was trouble at Travis county relief headquarters, which, like state headquarters, is in Austin. Relief Director Adm. Johnson, who had employed former Ranger Captain Frank Hamer as a relief investigator, stationed him at county headquarters. Since then, there has been no trouble.

An office may be a place to conduct business according to the dictionary but Texas highway commissioner have found it just the opposite. They find they have to leave their offices in the state highway building to get work done. Recently they met in a San Antonio hotel so they might do business without interruption. They considered, with Highway Engineer Gibb Gilchrist, the utilization of $12,000,000 road-relief funds provided by the federal government. Before allotments became final they will go to the branch office of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads at Fort Worth, then to Washington.

Judge Eph M. Davis, Brownwood, scheduled to become a state senator to succeed Senator Walter Woodward, formerly was a member of the house of the Texas legislature. There he sponsored the original boxing bill. That bill, which failed to pass, differed from the present one. It was drafted to permit amateur bouts at schools and colleges, and permit prizes, awards of titles and a gate charge. Davis staged a free boxing show at Austin and demonstrate to his fellow legislators. University of Texas boxers took part. A colleague suggested that Davis put oil on the gloves. He did. Unknown to him, his opponent's gloves were liberally covered with camp black. Everytime Davis was tapped on the face or nose, a dark spot was left.

How To Lose Weight
 The famous diet is usually pursued first as a strict diet, is followed for ten days to two weeks and then replaced after that period with a moderate diet. The strict diet consists of four to six bananas daily, together with three to four glasses of skimmed milk and one fairly large head of lettuce or two to two and a half cups of shredded cabbage, served with a mineral oil dressing if desired, but without salt. In addition 6 to 8 glasses of liquid, besides the milk, should be taken daily—water, tea or coffee (without cream or sugar). The bananas and milk are taken together or separately and only fully ripe bananas, those with brown-flecked skin, are used. The two foods together supply an almost fat-free diet, which provides protein in reasonable amount, and sufficient minerals and valuable vitamins to keep the body well.

Dieters Feel "Fed"
 In addition, this new diet gives the "dieter" a feeling of being well-fed, satisfied, so often lacking in reducing diets. No other food except the bananas, milk and lettuce (which provides bulk) is taken, but remember that about six large glasses of water or other liquid should be drunk every day. This strict diet is then replaced, after ten days to two weeks, with a moderate diet, after which the banana and milk diet is resumed. The two diets are then alternated until the desired weight-loss is taken. Regular daily exercise is suggested, and only persons in normal health are advised to try this regimen.

Menus Show the Way
 The menus for one day of moderate diet give the prospective dieter an idea of the type of good food you can eat and enjoy and still keep the desired loss you have already sustained.

Silhouette-Watchers Hail Ned Diet For Controlling That "Surplus"

Silhouette-watchers who quote Shakespeare's "oh that this too solid flesh would melt" and those who opine that "nobody loves a fat man" find summer the worst time of all, according to the designers. Slim frocks, huge-revealing bathing suits and mid-season styles bring realization and inspire the overweights to approve the new deal methods and "reduce the surplus" immediately!

Just in time comes news of a new, safe and sane way to reduce. Dr. George A. Harrop of Baltimore designed the new scientific diet which consists of bananas and skimmed milk, characterized as a "simple, palatable diet which gives a feeling of satisfaction and results in a weight-loss of from four to nine pounds in two weeks." News of the diet catapulted it into immediate fame and dozens of only partially-informed people tried it, but detailed directions for following it have just now been given out for the first time.

Since a recent test supervised by Dr. Herman N. Bundeson, health commissioner for Chicago resulted in three girls emerging from a thirty-day trial of the diet, healthier, happier and a total of thirty-two pounds lighter, the diet is now available to all those who find their shadows too wide!

HYDE PARK TO BE NATION'S SUMMER CAPITAL

The Krum Elbow estate of President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N.Y., will become the summer capital of the nation late in August. The President will go there from Washington soon and establish working quarters. The estate forms a long parallelogram, with one end bordering on the Hudson river. It covers 1,000 acres. A winding, tree-bordered drive leads to the great, rambling house with its cluster of adjacent buildings. The house was built about 100 years ago. (Associated Press Photos)

Giants Win See-Saw Battle From Coahoma Sinclairs

Ebbs Scores Winning Tally

Big Boys Hop On Hutto, Coahoma Twirler, Early In Game

The Giants Thursday won a see-saw battle from the Coahoma Sinclairs when Ebbs smashed a sharp drive to center and circled the bases for the winning run when the Coahoma center-fielder let the ball get away.

Both sides went out in order in the first frame, but the Sinclairs opened with a two run barrage in the second, only to have the Giants grab one of the tallest back on McMahon's smash down the left field foul line.

Hutto In Trouble
The Big Boys then started making trouble steadily for Hutto, Coahoma twirler, and mounted their total to five runs.

Coahoma entered the seventh trailing one run after Hutto had cracked an easy home run to right-center.

They visited every large city in Florida and mingled with a Huey Long mob in New Orleans. The trip completed for Vickers a series of pre-determined educational tours which have included all states except the two Dakotas. Debnam spent a week taking intensive agricultural work at Texas A. & M. college prior to starting the trip.

Hotel Team Wins Tilt 7-6

Settles Scores Three Runs In Seventh After Two Out

The Settles Hotel soft ball team jarred the Herald Type Lice from the championship running in league No. 1 Thursday night 7 to 6. Both teams played a ragged game and the numerous errors were costly.

The Hotelmen took the lead in the third inning when Cantrell and H. Swatzie scored, but the Lice tied the count in the fifth when Ebbs blasted one over the left fielder for a home run and Redding scored on hits by Anderson and Wilson.

Swatzie and Fowler added two for the Hotelmen in the last of the fifth, however, to lead 4-2.

Redding Cleans Sacks
Hart, M. Kinman and Ebbs loaded the bases for the Newsies in the sixth and Redding cleaned the sacks with a hit into the cars in center field that put the Herald in the lead 5 to 4.

T. Kinman gave the Lice a two first National run lead with a tally in the seventh. In their last time at bat the Settles boys rallied after two were out and scored three runs to clinch the game. Fowler, Townsend and Smith crossed the plate.

Gianners Take Stanton 15-6

Bishop, Long And Treadway Hitting Stars For Locals

The Co-Op Gianners took a fast game from Stanton Wednesday 15 to 6.

The US Eighty boys were stopped completely after the second inning.

Bishop, Long and Treadway were the hitting stars for the Gianners and Brown for the Stantonites. Bishop had three singles and a triple for a perfect day at bat, and Long had a double and a mighty home run.

Brown laid out a hard one in the ninth to deep center that was good for four bases.

Sneed, hustling little Gianner short-stop, had a good day both at bat and in the field.

Monk (Hall Pini) Prichard, twirled a good game for the Co-Op contingent until the seventh when he let up on a long lead and coasted to an easy victory.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

It was a very nice gesture on the part of his old home town, Rochester, N. Y., to pay tribute to Walter Hagen with a golf tournament, even though the visiting professionals and his comrades-in-arms were by no means courteous about the way they gave the "Tisig" a shelling.

Hagen has lost the consistency that carried him to so many championships, at home and abroad, but he is still the most colorful personality in golf, one of the best-liked and at times one of the most spectacular of all the top-ranking shot-makers. Sir Walter is, as he says "still a kid" alongside old Mike Scott, who won the British amateur championship at 35 last year, but he has now been playing "major league" golf for upwards of 23 years, which entitles him to rank with Ty Cobb or Devereux Milburn for long-term competition.

Hagen has had his ups and downs. When he was in the chips Sir Walter traveled high, wide and handsome, enjoying life to the utmost. Like Babe Ruth when the home run king was in his prime, the bright lights never seemed to affect Hagen's hitting eye. He might be late at the first tee on the morning after the night before but he would still be dangerous. Times have changed and Hagen has experienced reversals but you wouldn't suspect it, if you met him on or off the links. He still carries one of the finest competitive temperaments in any sport.

WON NATIONAL OPEN AT 39

Hagen's first athletic love was baseball. He was well known on the diamonds around Rochester in his youth and earned to make the big league grade but his first taste of tournament blood, in the Canadian open championship of 1911, satisfied him it was worth while to concentrate on golf. He finished in a tie with the famous Alex Smith, former U. S. open champion, in 11th place in the Canadian event and was as happy as though he had won the tournament.

Hagen was only a kid of 20 when he won his first American open in 1914, the year after Francis Ouimet had electrified the homebreds with his victory over Ted Ray and Harry Vardon. He repeated in 1919 and since then has won the British open four times and the national P. G. A. crown five times. The only contemporary who tops the "Hag" is Bob Jones, who won 13 major national tournaments.

SOUTHWEST SCRABBLING

"Yourself and friends are cordially invited to attend the Fifth Annual Hardscrabble Invitation Golf tournament, to be held at Fort Smith, Ark., Sept. 21, 22, 23. . . . Banquet and auction of players Friday night at 7:30. . . . Entrance fee $2.00."

So read the notice accompanying a letter from Johnnie Porter of the Southwest Times - Record, Fort Smith. We had heard a lot about the University of Arkansas Razorbacks, football pride of that section of the country, but the Hardscrabble golf party seems to have been scrabbling all these years in relative obscurity, albeit in good company.

"This tournament," says Porter, "is an infant in comparison with some of the more established invitation features, but in four years the winners include Fred Lamprecht, the former Tulane grinner and int-collegiate champion; Edwin McClure, the Shreveport star who topped the Southwest four years running; Jack Murphy, an 'unknown' of our own section; and Billy Bridwell, the Texan who won the Arkansas state title three straight years."

"Chastain Harris and Emmet Spicer of Memphis and Reuben Bush of New Orleans, former southern champions, have found the going rough, as has Larry Moore, the former Notre Dame luminary, who, I believe, once won the intercollegiate. (Ed's note—he was a runner-up)."

"Gus Moreland, now recuperating from an operation to relieve water inning gave the Indians the victory.

BUFFS, TULSA SPLIT

TULSA—Houston split a doubleheader with the Tulsa Oilers here Thursday night by rallying to win the nightcap, 10 to 5. The Oilers came from behind in the first game to shove over ten runs in the eighth inning, winning 10 to 5.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Pitching his first game for Oklahoma City, Tom McPhaul Thursday held Beaumont to three hits, got three hits out of four times to the plate and won the game, 6-4. Two runs in the sixth on the knee, expects to start his comeback on the local layout. With him will be Leland Hamman, the Trans-Mississippi champion; Spoo Goldman of Dallas and Zell Estom of Oklahoma City, the runnerup and winner, respectively of the Western this year; Walter Emery, former king of the collegians; McClure and Fred Hans Jr. of New Orleans, southern champion.

"P. B. And have your Southwest operative watch the Arkansas Hardscrabblers again this fall. They won the honor last year after much debate behind closed doors, but are apt to repeat on the field again this year."

SPITE MARRIAGE

by Katherine Hamilton Taylor

CHAPTER 36 MARSHA'S GREETING

"My Dear!" Bob heard Marsha call, and suddenly his world was reeling. He had not dreamed that she would kiss him, press close to him and cling.

Bartholomew had tip-toed away. She had not made the scene for Bartholomew. He found he could not loose her hands and that he could not speak. He saw she was pitifully weary, more uncertain and younger than he had thought she could seem, and obviously smitten by the blow he had thought would be his alone.

"You're tired," he heard himself say after some interval, "criminally tired. Have you been quite done in by this?"

She could not respond; she shook her head vehemently and tried to smile. The wry twist of her lips made his eyes smart.

"We'll fix you up!" he promised, sounding angry. He had left too much to her; he had abused her in thinking her to be the fabric that would be untouched by tragedy that was not hers alone. He felt her hand upon his arm and patting it nervously, absently.

"You must be tired," she stated, "and you must eat some luncheon. It's waiting you."

"I don't seem" (again the numbness that slowed his speech was gripping him) "to be hungry."

"I know. But you'll try to eat!" she questioned and she raised an anxious face to him after her words. He promised he would try to eat and an hour later she sat opposite him at a small table she had set before the drawing-room fire.

The arrangement had been thoughtful of Marsha, he realized. She had known how the empty place at the dining-room table would affect him. He found himself eating more heartily than he had in days and even tasting the food. Up to that moment all foods had been the same; flavorless and yet apt to nauseate as one chewed methodically.

"What has wrecked you so?" he asked abruptly.

She laughed, but her eyes filled; "How delightfully courtly," she murmured.

"Oh," he murmured flatly, "you're prettier than ever, if you want that, but you're ill. I tried to touch you."

"No!" she contradicted violently; "I would not have been denied doing anything I did!"

She reached quickly for a glass of water; he saw the shaking of her hand as she drank. Then, a trifle steadied, she smiled almost naturally at him. Bartholomew entered with the coffee tray which he set upon a low table by Marsha's side. He disappeared, closing the door after himself.

"I'm ready to talk of anything any time you want to," she said.

Marsha told Bob, quite evenly, but in a voice that now and again grew a trifle faint, of the funeral, of the beautiful flowers, of how quite everyone Mrs. Powers had known had sent them. She had a list of people who had sent the flowers, Marsha stated and of what sorts they had sent.

She felt Bob would have liked the simple service; she had arranged it with thought of his taste, and of his mother's liking for simplicity. She told of notes that had come and of how she had answered them.

He realized, sitting sagged in his chair, that she had, with great care, collected every bit of information that she felt would help him. There was a gentle, every-day steadiness about her narration that steadied him.

He thought, "After all, she is not so deeply touched, and there is something about remoteness, callousness, that helps others at times—like these. If she had cried—where would I have been?"

She thought, "I am doing this! It is helping him!" She had rehearsed it again and again, and again, but she had never once quite finished the rehearsal without a stiffening of throat and that shaking which forewarns of going to pieces.

"Did—did she suffer?" he managed to ask.

"No, Bob! Really no, not at the last. It was entirely peaceful." She paused a moment to sip her coffee; he was staring sardonically at the rug at his feet. He did not see her trembling, she realized with a covert, testing glance. And the fact that she was doing it rather well, gave her new strength.

She told Bob next of what his mother had said of him; of all that had happened. He seemed to listen suddenly, but she understood his suffering.

"Was it reasonable or fair?" he questioned abruptly. She knew Bob spoke of his failure to reach home in time.

"No," she answered. "I don't think it was. But it is one of those facts that can curdle a life if you'll let it. You'd better talk all you can of your resentment. I think it rather helps."

He said, frowning, moving uneasily. "I'd so wanted to come; I'd thought so continually of it. And there was no getting away. I'm not the world's marvel, but I was the only man they could get now who could swing that job. And my pausing meant stopping the work of others. They couldn't stand the financial strain of any pause."

"I thought of it, weighed it. I couldn't see how I could leave—" "I know," he heard "and so did your mother; she understood perfectly. She spoke again and again in a way that made me know she did, and I'd written you, that her life would be longer. You must not reproach yourself."

He ran his hands through his stiff, sandy hair; "for the sake of the workers and the company the work had to go on," he said jerkily,

DISCHARGED EMPLOYEE BATTLES NRA

Donovan is shown conferring with Margaret Stabler, union secretary, while waiting for his case heard by the labor relations board. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said Donovan was "fired" for inefficiency. (Associated Press Photo)

"but it wasn't reasonable for God, or whatever it is who runs things, to make me the one man fitted to the job. I thought—"

"I know," Marsha murmured. "Bob thought dully, 'You have the most beautiful eyes—' they were filled with sympathy and feeling; and they seemed to caress him."

"You see, I wanted to come every second. But I kept thinking of what my betrayed trust would mean to workers, stockholders, to the men who head the firm."

"I know," Marsha murmured yet again. Once more he saw, and acutely, her eyes; her wonderfully kind and beautiful eyes. For a moment he was silent, looking into them; he saw her flush slightly and realized how pale she had been.

"It wasn't reasonable, was it?" he probed as would a child who is punished unjustly.

"It does not seem so, Bob," she conceded, "but it is a fact you can't change."

"Am I a weak whiner?" "No, oh no! Talk it out all you can; your resentment, but remember that your measure must be, now, a little small."

He poured himself another cup of coffee; she leaned across the table to drop a half lump of sugar into the cup.

"You remember well," he said, and he saw her eyes veiled by hurt. "I do remember rather too well, sometimes," she agreed. He would never know how she remembered, of course, she reasoned, nor of how the lean "feed on foods the fat of heavy" depletes.

Rather stupidly he brought forth his cigarette and held a lighter to hers and then to his. As the smoke curled and rose to make a faint blue haze in the stately room he found himself talking of things that had troubled him all the way home.

There were other things that bothered him; little neglects that had grown disproportionately because of the finality of death. One year he'd forgotten her birthday until it was well past. On another occasion he had laughed over those standing ash trays and it seemed she got him one for a surprise. He stopped speaking, and Marsha leaned forward to cover his hand with hers.

"You are morbid," she said. "You won't be able to help being so, I am afraid, but you can help yourself a little by realizing that you are morbid, and unfair to yourself. You were always so fine to her! So dear. Please believe me!"

He was afraid to move his hand, for fear that hers might be taken from it. After a few seconds, she slipped her other hand beneath Bob's, and so clasped it between both of hers. It seemed as if she understood his needs and much he could not say.

Seeds— With corn the situation is somewhat different. Although the current crop is down to a billion, six hundred million bushels as against a normal yield of 2,000,000,000, it takes a bushel of corn to plant six or seven acres. That means only sixteen or seventeen million bushels will have to stay in the bins for next year's planting. Chair, barley, buckwheat, flaxseed and rice are way off this year and the '35 crop will have to be taken into consideration. Seed loans in recent years have been voted by congress in such persistent manner as to indicate they are chronic.

Meat— Secretary Wallace has warned city dwellers that they may have to do with less steaks and chops next year as a consequence of the drought. Impartial observers are pointing out, on this premise, that the only way to bring meat prices back within the reach of retail purchasers will be to loan stock raisers enough money to replace their drought-slaughtered herds. Official Washington is preaching earnestly that there will be no shortage of food. Urban by-standers are wondering two things—first, how much retail prices will soar, and second, how much government money will have to be loaned out to start the agricultural ball rolling again.

Outsiders— AAA officials are sympathizing with the North Carolina preacher who let rattlesnakes bite him to prove his faith. Wallace-Tugwell, Inc. are also about to let nature take its course. American manufacturers heed disturbing reports that the Japs are getting set to hit them another blow beneath the belt. If you catch the idea, Japan can establish factories in Mexico or other Latin American countries and label her low-cost products with the technical truth that they are "Made in America". Tourists with Washington on their future schedules may be pleased to learn that still more plans are afoot to make it the world's truly "City Beautiful". Arrangements are being made to remove the car tracks from Pennsylvania Avenue and route them through adjacent side streets and tunnels.

NEW YORK By JAMES McMULLIN

Miracle— The National Steel Labor Relations Board pulled a Babe Ruth when it induced Tom Girdler of Republic Steel to shake hands again with the Amalgamated. It wasn't exactly a fraternal grip but it will serve just as well.

Consider the background. With the possible exception of E. T. Weir, Girdler has been the most vigorous opponent of organized labor in the whole steel industry. He led the fight for the company unions which nearly precipitated a strike two months ago. He hurried the gauntlet squarely at the Federation of Labor by refusing to allow Republic to renew its contract with the Amalgamated. So his willingness to have his managers write letters now is a major event in labor relations.

The groundwork is already being laid in the South. A bitter battle is brewing behind the scenes for control of the Southern Democratic party. Primary fights for Congressional seats this fall will be Jim Farley will have a knotty problem on their hands if the financial strength of the South sends men to Washington who will work with Republicans.

Similar attempts to promote a split in Democratic ranks are under way on a smaller scale in other parts of the country. Those who should know say that the undercurrent struggle is most intense in sections where the utilities have the strongest friends.

The utilities are an important backwater. Many leaders in the industry feel they are getting—and will continue to get—the roughest edge of the New Deal and that their only hope of a comeback lies in a vigorous drive to upset it politically. Some of them rate it a matter of life and death.

The stakes are big enough to justify their most strenuous efforts. The fact that Republic was permitted to save face by using letters rather than formal contracts to reestablish relations with Amalgamated doesn't detract from the union victory. The main point is that relations were reestablished—however informally—and labor isn't bothered about details. The chances for an amicable adjustment of the whole steel labor dispute are immensely improved. The Board has established its good faith with the unions—which strengthens the conservative labor heads who don't want trouble and scotches the radical argument that mediation always favors the employer.

Rep. Tom Blanton, of Texas, flushed with a recent primary victory for reelection, has served notice on the City Fathers that he wants Maurice V. Books, of Abilene, Texas, appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel for the D. C. Roaring Tawm, who has blocked more District of Columbia bills almost any other man in congress, made his desire of three sources. He notified the District Commissioner, the Corporation Counsel—and the Chairman of the District Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

City officials got the idea immediately when they learned the ABC Board Chairman also received the ultimatum. The District liquor board has nothing whatever to do with appointing assistant Corporation Counsel but the fact remains that Blanton was a ring-leader in prying ABC appropriations drastically last session. Congress meets again in January and he'll be back.

Blanton is only one of many eyeing patronage crumbs in the Washington setup with a magnifying glass. Any number of congressmen failed to get what they considered their just due in federal patronage from Jim Farley. It has been embarrassing to explain in disappointed constituents.

But over voteless Washington each U. S. Representative has a potential whip hand. A single member can kill or hamstring a D. C. bill. District plums are the size of grapes—until it becomes necessary to put 'em under the microscope.

Out— Talk of President Roosevelt calling another special session of congress this fall appears to have died a-borning. Some of his advisers think it first was inspired by the political opposition. They can think of three immediate reasons why FDR wouldn't call the boys back. In the first place congress already has invested the president with enough power to do almost anything he thinks necessary. Secondly, the President went to extreme lengths to get congress out of Washington last June. Finally, a special session "lame duck" congress immediately after the Norris Constitutional Amendment designed to stop them had gone into effect.

The only reason to justify a special session in the heat of a congressional election would be a desire on the administration's part to palm off on the Hill responsibility for further delay in balancing the budget. The New Dealers can now blame this safely on the drought.

Notes— AAA officials are sympathizing with the North Carolina preacher who let rattlesnakes bite him to prove his faith. Wallace-Tugwell, Inc. are also about to let nature take its course. American manufacturers heed disturbing reports that the Japs are getting set to mayor and the Comptrollerhip is the logical stepping-stone. The knowing remark that Christy Bohmack—Whalen's personal publicity man—appears to have been working overtime lately.

The mouse in the marmalade is that Frank Prial declines to feel honored by Whalen's offer to name him Deputy Comptroller if he gets the job. Despite inspired reports to the contrary the informed believe that Prial would sweep the civil service vote in a primary contest with Whalen.

Jim Farley's position was delicate. He agreed to Whalen's selection as the best bet in sight. If Whalen is beaten flowers will be omitted. If he wins he'll make the run against LaGuardia a hot one.

Meanwhile the mayor's non-political chickens are coming home to roost. City Republicans—sore at the absence of patronage—plan to run a candidate of their own to make things harder for McDierrick. A few weeks ago as if he would win in a walk—but no longer.

Stakes— New York observers would not be surprised to see a conservative Democrat ticket put into the field in 1936 in an effort to defeat Roosevelt. It would closely parallel the Palmer-Buckner candidacy of 1936 which had no chance of winning but helped to kill off Bryan.

The groundwork is already being laid in the South. A bitter battle is brewing behind the scenes for control of the Southern Democratic party. Primary fights for Congressional seats this fall will be Jim Farley will have a knotty problem on their hands if the financial strength of the South sends men to Washington who will work with Republicans.

Similar attempts to promote a split in Democratic ranks are under way on a smaller scale in other parts of the country. Those who should know say that the undercurrent struggle is most intense in sections where the utilities have the strongest friends.

The utilities are an important backwater. Many leaders in the industry feel they are getting—and will continue to get—the roughest edge of the New Deal and that their only hope of a comeback lies in a vigorous drive to upset it politically. Some of them rate it a matter of life and death.

The stakes are big enough to justify their most strenuous efforts. The fact that Republic was permitted to save face by using letters rather than formal contracts to reestablish relations with Amalgamated doesn't detract from the union victory. The main point is that relations were reestablished—however informally—and labor isn't bothered about details. The chances for an amicable adjustment of the whole steel labor dispute are immensely improved. The Board has established its good faith with the unions—which strengthens the conservative labor heads who don't want trouble and scotches the radical argument that mediation always favors the employer.

Rep. Tom Blanton, of Texas, flushed with a recent primary victory for reelection, has served notice on the City Fathers that he wants Maurice V. Books, of Abilene, Texas, appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel for the D. C. Roaring Tawm, who has blocked more District of Columbia bills almost any other man in congress, made his desire of three sources. He notified the District Commissioner, the Corporation Counsel—and the Chairman of the District Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

City officials got the idea immediately when they learned the ABC Board Chairman also received the ultimatum. The District liquor board has nothing whatever to do with appointing assistant Corporation Counsel but the fact remains that Blanton was a ring-leader in prying ABC appropriations drastically last session. Congress meets again in January and he'll be back.

Blanton is only one of many eyeing patronage crumbs in the Washington setup with a magnifying glass. Any number of congressmen failed to get what they considered their just due in federal patronage from Jim Farley. It has been embarrassing to explain in disappointed constituents.

But over voteless Washington each U. S. Representative has a potential whip hand. A single member can kill or hamstring a D. C. bill. District plums are the size of grapes—until it becomes necessary to put 'em under the microscope.

Out— Talk of President Roosevelt calling another special session of congress this fall appears to have died a-borning. Some of his advisers think it first was inspired by the political opposition. They can think of three immediate reasons why FDR wouldn't call the boys back. In the first place congress already has invested the president with enough power to do almost anything he thinks necessary. Secondly, the President went to extreme lengths to get congress out of Washington last June. Finally, a special session "lame duck" congress immediately after the Norris Constitutional Amendment designed to stop them had gone into effect.

The only reason to justify a special session in the heat of a congressional election would be a desire on the administration's part to palm off on the Hill responsibility for further delay in balancing the budget. The New Dealers can now blame this safely on the drought.

Notes— AAA officials are sympathizing with the North Carolina preacher who let rattlesnakes bite him to prove his faith. Wallace-Tugwell, Inc. are also about to let nature take its course. American manufacturers heed disturbing reports that the Japs are getting set to hit them another blow beneath the belt. If you catch the idea, Japan can establish factories in Mexico or other Latin American countries and label her low-cost products with the technical truth that they are "Made in America". Tourists with Washington on their future schedules may be pleased to learn that still more plans are afoot to make it the world's truly "City Beautiful". Arrangements are being made to remove the car tracks from Pennsylvania Avenue and route them through adjacent side streets and tunnels.

NEW YORK By JAMES McMULLIN

Miracle— The National Steel Labor Relations Board pulled a Babe Ruth when it induced Tom Girdler of Republic Steel to shake hands again with the Amalgamated. It wasn't exactly a fraternal grip but it will serve just as well.

Consider the background. With the possible exception of E. T. Weir, Girdler has been the most vigorous opponent of organized labor in the whole steel industry. He led the fight for the company unions which nearly precipitated a strike two months ago. He hurried the gauntlet squarely at the Federation of Labor by refusing to allow Republic to renew its contract with the Amalgamated. So his willingness to have his managers write letters now is a major event in labor relations.

The groundwork is already being laid in the South. A bitter battle is brewing behind the scenes for control of the Southern Democratic party. Primary fights for Congressional seats this fall will be Jim Farley will have a knotty problem on their hands if the financial strength of the South sends men to Washington who will work with Republicans.

the same between 1910 and 1920, and 1,160,000 between 1920, 1930. Population estimates are figured on a ratio of increase or decrease during the preceding decade with allowance for unusual conditions. The basis has proved a fairly accurate index pointing to the subsequent official enumeration.

The Bureau also has prepared estimates of population for all places of 10,000 or more as of July 1, 1933, for general information, but has not brought the figures up to the same date in 1934. However, upon request of any community the population estimate will be worked out.

The Dallas population as of July 1, 1933, was 278,000, a gain of 17,525 over 1930. Dallas holds its rank of second among Texas cities in point of population, being exceeded only by Houston, which was shown to have an estimated population of 317,000, or a gain of 25,548 over the 1930 census. The estimated population of San Antonio was 243,500, a gain of 11,558 and Fort Worth 169,200, a gain of 5,573. The estimated population of other Texas cities, compared with the 1930 of enumeration follow.

County Budget Provides 15c Slash In Rate

Commissioners Court Adopts 1935 Budget Without Change

The proposed 1935 budget for Howard county was adopted without change Thursday by the county commissioners court, thus insuring a rate of 15 cents in the county tax rate.

The cut will leave the rate at 50 cents, one of the lowest for Texas counties.

The tax reduction was voted in the face of anticipated reductions in valuations to approximately $12,000,000, although these valuation reductions will not be definitely known until the tax assessor completes his rolls.

A Commissioners court conducted a public hearing Thursday which was unattended except for a single reporter. They took action on the budget Thursday afternoon.

Abolition of demands for purchase of new highway right of way and consolidation of offices were the principal reasons for the reductions, Judge H. R. Debenport, who compiled the budget, said.

The budget, however, he said, was not his work, but the "reflection" of many discussions of the commissioners court, over which he presided. This was the reason that the document was adopted without change, he believed.

Estimates of expenditures and revenues were sufficiently conservative to care for any emergencies which may arise, predicted Judge Debenport.

Expenditures for charity, he acknowledged, may exceed the estimates since new obligations are arising.

One of these new obligations is the furnishing of the federal canner with gas and electricity for operation in order that hundreds of persons can be given relief work. This amounts to approximately $200 per month.

Cooperation with the city on a 30-50 basis on charity cases cost the county $551.42 the past two months and strictly county cases cost $59.25 during July.

Should an emergency arise in the charity or other departments, the court can curtail expenditures in the road and bridge fund in order that salaries may be paid out of that fund, leaving more monies to meet the emergency in the general fund.

During the past seven years Howard county has experienced five cuts in the tax rate, slicing it from more than $1.40 to 50 cents.

Newer Type Of Cotton Seed Bring Results

W. H. Cardwell Shows Two Large Stalks Of Cotton Grown On His Farm

W. H. Cardwell, well-known farmer residing three miles northeast of Big Spring, brought to The Herald office Friday morning two large stalks of cotton, taken from his farm early Friday. Mr. Cardwell said that he planted fifty-five acres in cotton this year, and one of the stalks, larger than the other, bore twenty-two bolls, while the other bore 14. "The stalk which has the 22 bolls," said Mr. Cardwell, "was from first-year Mebane seed, while the one with 14 bolls was three-year Mebane seed. It goes to show that the newer type of seed brings the best yield," said Mr. Cardwell.

The stalks are on display at The Herald office, where they have been the object of much comment. Mr. Cardwell is anxious that the stalks be seen by the farmers that they might see the results he obtained by using the newer type of cotton seed.

Line Troubles To Bother Froggies

FORT WORTH—What of the Horned Frogs in the 1934 Southwest Conference football race? The answer to that question depends upon what Coach "Dutch" Meyer can do to develop sophomores to plug holes left at guards and ends. Tracy Kellow, junior, is the only letterman left for the guard position, and Melvin Diggs, another junior, is the only experienced wingman.

Backfield material the Frogs should have a plenty but much of it will be inexperienced. Capt. Joe Coleman, Jimmy Lawrence, Dutch Kline and Dan Hartman are a strong quartet of returning lettermen. The remaining backfield power will have to be developed from graduates of the fresh squad. Most promising are Sam Baugh of Sweetwater, Wilbert Harrison of Temple and Scott McCall and Bob Jordan of Fort Worth.

Coach Meyer will have more than 20 sophomores candidates for the varsity and, with only 15 lettermen back, he will have to lean heavily upon this group. What they can do under conference fire is the answer to the question, "What of the Horned Frogs?"

Young Eagles No. 1 Ruth Etting in "Song of Fame"

Kathryn Anderson, Lamesa, Weds Jack Young of Crane

LAMESA.—In a twilight ceremony, Friday, August 10, at 7:30 p. m. Miss Kathryn Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Anderson of this city became the bride of Mr. Jack Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Young of Crane. Rev. Eugene Surface, pastor of the Presbyterian church officiated in the impressive ring service.

The ceremony took place in the home of the bride's parents before an improvised altar formed by an arch covered with vine and white flowers. Flanking on either side of the arch were baskets filled with white gladioli and behind these stood tall candelabra with white tapers which were lighted immediately before the ceremony by Misses Rhoda Lou Clark and Ethel Iris Simpson.

Gowned in a strikingly simple model of white mousseline de soie and wearing a veil of illusion held in place by a coronet of pearls, the bride entered on the arm of her father who gave her away. Her wedding gown was fashioned on slim princess lines falling full below the knees. She wore quaint cutouts of the same material and white satin slippers. For something old she carried a handkerchief made by her grandmother. For something borrowed and something blue she wore a bracelet with a blue enamel encircled with diamonds.

Her bouquet was a bridal shower of white gladioli and baby's breath. As the strains of the wedding march began the ushers, Dr. T. G. McCormick and Mr. R. E. Simpson, Jr., preceded the bridesmaids, Misses Enid Averitt and Nell Brown, of Big Spring. The groom and his best man, Mr. Milton Boyd of Crane were followed by the maid of honor Miss Audrey Faye Bailey. Mrs. Matt McCall played bridal selections from Lohengrin for the professional. She accompanied Mrs. A. G. Barnard who sang "O Promise Me" and "At Dawning."

Miss Audrey Faye Bailey wore a pink organdy model made on tight fitting lines full below the knees. She wore a pink taffeta shepherdess hat and carried a colonial bouquet in shades of pink. Miss Averitt wore yellow organdy in a similar model with shepherdess hat and colonial bouquet of lavender and yellow. Miss Brown's dress was white with blue embroidered flowers. Her hat was blue and she carried a colonial bouquet of pink.

Mrs. McCall was gowned in a peach organdy with full ruffled skirt. Mrs. Barnard wore a flesh chiffon. Both wore shoulder corsages.

An informal reception was held on the lawn after the ceremony. The three tiered wedding cake formed the center piece of the table. Punch was served from a lovely hand painted bowl by Misses Thelma Lee Norman and Grace Weaver. Friends and relatives signed the bride's book presided over by the bride's aunt, Miss Mat-

Name Nine "Coldest Things"—Then Freeze Yourself Some Of Them!

Icebergs. Twenty-below. Chills down your spine. The cold shoulder. Ice cream. The stars of an enemy. Sherbet. Commander Byrd. Frozen Water. These comprised the list which won the prize for naming the nine "coldest things" at a recent party! They should be, therefore, guaranteed to make your blood run cold when the thermometer starts reaching for the sun.

Not all of them are attainable—icebergs, for instance, being a trifle hard to borrow in August. But sherbet and ice cream, those chilly aids to comfort, are very easily obtained. You can make them right in your own kitchen, have them "on tap" all the time!

The New Method for Sherbet—Sherbet, and its "near-religion" water ice, used to be difficult to make at home. Made by the ice-and-salt method they were apt to be gritty and granular; made in the mechanical refrigerator they also required too much stirring. But now the home economists have discovered a new, easy, and fool-proof method that gives you a product smooth as silk. It was found that too generous a use of sugar not only gave an over-sweet product but required a long freezing period and constant stirring. The new method uses a different "density agent"; to follow it, simply cook water, sugar and karo together to make a syrup; then blend in the fruit juices and freeze. For most recipes one cup of sugar, a half cup of the white karo and two cups of water are used for the syrup; and about two cups of fruit juice and pulp. This amount makes two quarts of ice and requires about five hours freezing in the mechanical refrigerator or in a mixture of eight parts ice to one of salt. In modernizing old recipes, add a half-cup of white karo syrup for each cup of sugar called for; cook the syrup to the soft ball stage (240 F.) and note the new ease, the new smooth flavor! Here's a recipe to start on:

Grapefruit Ice
1-2 cups water, 2-4 cup white karo, 1-2 cups water, 1 No. 2 can grapefruit (pulp and juice), 6 tablespoons lemon juice.

Cook sugar, water and karo to soft ball stage (240 F.) Add lemon juice and water. Cool. Cut grapefruit segments into small pieces with scissors, add to cooled syrup; freeze. Serve with meat, as first course, or dessert.

1 cup water, 1 cup Imperial su-

Allred And Hunter Both Have Progressive-Type Platforms

By RAYMOND BROOKS

Candidates for governor are measured by their platforms as to what they propose to be willing to do for the state, by their personalities and public and private records as to their probable performance, their success at leadership, their weight with the legislature and ability to hold the people.

Platforms are important. In that the winning candidate's promises, under the archaic Texas election system, are converted in party demands for legislation.

James V. Allred and Tom F. Hunter, in the governor's second primary race, each has a progressive-type platform.

One-Man Platform

Hunter's in many ways is regarded as the most advanced set of social melioration, proposals get offered by any major candidate for governor; one that goes back to the basic principles that Tom Campbell tried with a slight degree of success to write into Texas organic law, and one that goes far beyond in economics, such as the redistribution of the tax burden, and in effect, the redistribution of wealth.

It is a one-man platform in many respects. Hunter spent most of his boyhood among the Chickasha Indians, and there gained a love of solitude and stoic silence which expresses itself now in that when he sets out to write a campaign platform, or to launch a decisive course of action, he goes away "in solitude" and, alone, communes with his inner feelings and brings forth his decision. He did that with respect to his platform this year, and his platform two years ago.

His Proposals

Since two years ago, when his opponents say in the campaign he was advocating a general sales tax, and later, when he opposed the Ferguson pyramid sales tax to favor only a modified one, if any were to be adopted, Hunter has moved on now to oppose a sales tax of any form, and has offered other taxing plans to raise state revenues, and to take at least 75 per cent of the tax load off farmers' homes and real estate generally.

Hunter, a successful—some may say big-league—oil operator, and a lawyer, proposes these things, in the platform of his present race.

He proposes a "blended tax" system that would indicate a tax on luxuries, a high graduated net profits or income tax, with liberal exemptions in the lower brackets; a natural resources tax, including enough additional money from the sulphur lobby to pay off the $20,000,000 relief bonds.

As both tax and reform measures, he proposes to abolish the poll tax and to reduce the automobile license fee from $3 or $5 a year, instead of from $4 to $23 a year. He proposes to tax chain stores, particularly for revenue, but chiefly to break up the great groups. He proposes to heavily tax the utilities here, anti-price discrimination laws upon competitive business.

Proposes Pensions

He proposes, as do many other candidates, to set up an old-age pension system; but Hunter said he would put it on a self-supporting basis and a levy no tax for its operation—whatever that may mean.

He would totally exempt a $30,000, homesteaded for every family from property taxation.

Hunter's platform centers chiefly on two things: The blended tax system, including its power to break monopolies, chain store centralization and too-high utility rates, and upon his "cabinet" plan of reorganizing the state government.

He would substitute for the long list of elective state offices an appointive cabinet of seven departmental heads, named by and answerable to the governor. He would reorganize the government functionally to bring all its work under the supervision of the governor and these seven department heads, and advisers to the governor.

For Recall System

Hunter claims this plan would permit a 60 per cent reduction in state appropriations. He favors reform of court procedure and a recall system by which the centralized government would be still further strengthened in ability to get rid of unfit judicial officers.

Hunter promises nothing about county home rule, the reduction of local governmental units, consolidation of overlapping city-county functions at taxpayer cost. He does promise adequate support of state institutions, an adequate state school appropriation, and the power of his office to uphold the rights of labor. Recently, he had pledged his efforts toward working out a progressive program of conserving the waters and water and power resources of Texas streams for the state's benefit.

He favors submission and repeal of state prohibition and regulating the liquor industry in such way that the tax treasury, rather than the bootlegger, should derive the profits from the liquor industry.
