BIG NAVY FLEET SAILS THROUGH PANAMA CANAL

Against a background of beauty, the U. S. S. Maryland is shown passing through Gaillard cut in the Panama canal when the navy fleet sailed from the Pacific to the Atlantic for spring and summer maneuvers off the eastern coast. An attempt was made to bring the entire fleet through the canal in 24 hours, but it required several hours longer for the movement. (Associated Press Photo)

Rains Reach Cloudburst Proportions

AMARILLO (AP)—Rains, reaching near cloudburst proportions in many localities, drenched the north twenty-six counties of the Panhandle Tuesday night. Highway bridges were washed out and railroad and highway traffic were delayed. Dirt highways south of Amarillo and to the south were impassable. Streams and lakes were filled. The death of Pleas Pool, driller, during an electric storm near Shamrock, was attributed to lightning.

President Works On Bimetallic Standard

William Tompkins' ability to master and teach the Indian Sign language won him the title of Wambali Wi Yuta or Sign Talking Eagle among the Sioux Indians. He learned some of the Sioux tongue but his greatest interest is in the sign language. This interest led him to a careful investigation of signs of other tribes including the Blackfoot, Cheyenne, Arapahoe, Crow and others. Tompkins will appear before scouts, scouters, and the general public today 8 p. m. in the Municipal auditorium.

WHITE HOUSE MAINTAINS SILENCE

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt is working on his announced policy for a bimetallic money standard, but the White House maintained a silence Wednesday on the next moves in this direction. Questions on prospects of early action brought a White House response that there is hope. Meanwhile there was no indication of any change in the Roosevelt monetary policy or sanction for legislation.

Will Give Name Of Man Who Killed Hillsboro Station Operator

DALLAS (AP)—Raymond Hamilton has agreed to name a man who, on April 26th, 1932, shot and killed J. N. Bucher during the robbery of Bucher's filling station in Hillsboro, provided the Hill county authorities consent not to demand the death penalty upon the trial of the guilty man. Hamilton said Hill county authorities, who talked to him several hours Wednesday would let him know in a few days.

French Police Fight Reds In Bad Quarter

PARIS (AP)—Police fought a pitched battle with communists in a "tough" quarter of Paris Wednesday as a climax to "Red May Day." Four policemen were wounded. Communists, entrenched behind flaming barricades in a blind alley and windows of a municipally-owned apartment, poured a stream of pistol fire into the ranks of the police. After a four-hour siege the police stormed the communists' citadel.

Mrs. Conway, Missing Since March 27, Found Near Victoria Home

VICTORIA (AP)—Mrs. Ernest W. Conway, 45, whose disappearance on March 27, caused fears that she was drowned in the Guadalupe river, was found alive Wednesday near her home dressed in night clothes she was wearing when she disappeared. She said she had been in river bottoms above Victoria the past week, subsisting on grass and water. She was weak and emaciated. This is the fourth time Mrs. Conway has disappeared. Once she was rescued from Galveston Bay. Another time she was found wandering in the woods near Bloomingington.

Bureau Head's Wife Returns To Her Home

E. W. Conway, manager of the federal transient bureau here, was given first knowledge of his wife's safety Wednesday by Associated Press dispatches furnished by The Herald. He expressed great relief when notified that she had been found alive. Conway, after directing an exhaustive search weeks ago had given her up for lost. Mrs. Conway suffered a nervous breakdown little more than a year ago. On March 27 as a storm raged, she arose from her bed and wandered away, said Conway. Her husband rushed to Victoria and directed a search through the river bottoms of that section. He was successful in having a plane from Fort Crockett fly over the area in hopes of sighting her from the air. Mrs. Conway is in the care of a sister, he said Wednesday.

Huge 'German Spy' Ring In Paris Bared

PARIS (AP)—The police announced Wednesday a huge "German spy organization" was uncovered with the arrest of an agent in Paris, and that warrants were issued for the arrest of other members of the group. A prisoner was described as "an officer of a foreign power." The organization was uncovered, authorities said, as a result of investigation charges against the French army officer, Captain Froga, taken into custody in connection with the disappearance of plans for the defense of the city of Belfort.

Dems And GOP At Odds Over Wirt Reports

WASHINGTON (AP)—Divergent democratic and republican views were submitted to the house Wednesday to wind up the investigation of Dr. William A. Wirt's allegations that the administration "brain trusters" were seeking to overthrow the existing social order. A majority report signed by these democrats on the special house committee said: "The committee is of the opinion no further action will be taken, therefore the reports are without recommendation." Two republican committee members, in separate opinions, held that a thorough investigation was not made. It is not necessary for the house to act on the reports.

Richardson Life Sentence Is Reversed

AUSTIN (AP)—The court of criminal appeals Wednesday reversed and remanded the life imprisonment sentence given to Charles S. Richardson of Olney, by a Young county jury in connection with the slaying of his son, Elgie, January 1st. The court found Richardson's case had been prejudiced in the county where the homicide occurred.

New Chemical Tanks Being Placed On Fire Truck Of Big Spring

Chemical tanks for soda and acid on the city chemical truck are being placed with water and air pressure units for fire fighting purposes. The water, with strong air pressure, renders the truck as efficient for combating flames and obviates the damage usually done by chemical reaction.

Cotton Groups Meet Monday

With copies of the Bankhead bill, which makes cotton production control compulsory, now on hand together with additional explanatory information, the joint meeting of chamber of commerce and county control committees will be held at 1 p. m. Saturday in the county court room. The meeting was originally scheduled for last week, but copies of the bill had not been received here and the meeting had to be adjourned until arrival of the needed information.

Indian Sign Language To Be Heard Tonight

Not another man in the entire world possesses the knowledge of Indian sign language and the ability to teach it to others as William Tompkins, who will address a large gathering of scouts, scouters, and the general public this evening 8 o'clock in the Municipal Auditorium. Tompkins, who grew up in Dakota among the Sioux Indians, has mastered the "wonderful" historic language of American antiquity and is preserving it in the minds of hundreds of thousands of boys both here and abroad. One of his outstanding accomplishments in teaching the world's only instinctive language occurred at a world jamboree for scouts when he taught the language to boys from 42 different countries where 23 different tongues were spoken. Such a situation existed when the sign language came into vogue. America borrowed from England the language which it speaks even though 600 years ago there were 76 different languages spoken in this country by the original inhabitants. America now returns the compliment by giving, not only to England but to all the world, a universal language, the world's only instinctive language, the historic

Car Of Pastor Is Made Into Black Maria

Rev. R. E. Day, pastor of the First Baptist Church, turned his sedan into a Black Maria Wednesday. For years he has preached of the close tie between the law and the gospel. Wednesday morning he showed it. Driving toward the Gregg street viaduct, Rev. Day noticed a young man pursuing two Mexicans. Day wheeled his car to the curb and gave the young man a lift. Across the tracks, the Baptist preacher drove his car across vacant lots, ditches and the worst bumps. He cornered one of the culprits and the young man took after the other. "He's not the law," chirped a bystander when the preacher seized the Mexican abductor who had with him three shirts taken from Montgomery Ward & Company. "I'm the law and the gospel," retorted the Right Reverend Mr. Day. And without further ado he shoved the Mexican into his car and took him to the police station. The Mexican gave the name of Lopez. Officers are seeking his companion, who escaped into the Mexican section. Deputy Sheriff Bob Wolf and Special Deputy L. A. Eubanks were seeking the two at the same time in Mexican town in connection with thefts committed earlier in the morning. "In the old days," mused an officer Wednesday afternoon, "it used to be Judge Roy Bean, law west of the Pecos. Now, I guess, it's Bob Day, law east of the Pecos."

Two Cars Are Burned Tuesday

Automobiles belonging to Sam Davis and Sam White were destroyed by fire Monday evening while parked on scenic drive. Fireman John Hildreth made a run but flames had badly damaged the machines when he arrived to direct two tanks of chemicals upon them. The cars were parked about 200 yards apart. No cause for the blazes could be ascertained.

Whirligig

Written by a group of the best informed newspapermen of Washington and New York. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

WASHINGTON By George Duane A. T. & T. A neat black book has been swung over the head of the American Telephone and Telegraph company—and the pesky thing may land no matter what they do. Senator Dill's resolution calling for a thorough investigation into the ways and means of the phone monopoly has A. T. & T. guessing. The hello trust would rather see the Dill-Rayburn bill and its new Federal Communications Commission go through this session than be probed into by a Senate Committee. The question remains—"If the Communications bill does pass will Dill insist on his inquiry anyhow?" Dill says he will. With all due respect for the Washington Senator's motives some of the sideliners think the investigation was proposed largely to club A. T. & T. into stepping aside and letting the new regulatory legislation go through. For some time the dial-and-busy signal industry has been quietly imploring Congress its desire not to be legislated under the wing of a new federal agency along with radio and telegraph. Nevertheless Congressional leaders got a White House tip the other day to put the creating act on the preferred calendar. So Tel & Tel has its choice submitting to a presidentially-appointed commission or answering all the questions a group of Senators can think up during a summer investigation. Both may occur but it's a reasonable guess that if the big bill goes through Dill's resolution will get lost in the hopper.

Rev. W. H. Martin, Episcopal Vicar, Is Granted Leave

Martin plans to spend his time studying and taking pleasure trips. Sometimes this summer he will attend a special training school for ministers of the Episcopal church, in Evergreen, Colo. The first of September Rev. Martin will enter Seabury Western Theological Seminary Chicago, Ill. for nine months of study to better equip himself for his work. Rev. Martin will not return to Big Spring until June, 1935.

Frank Buck's Wild Animal Show in New Fair

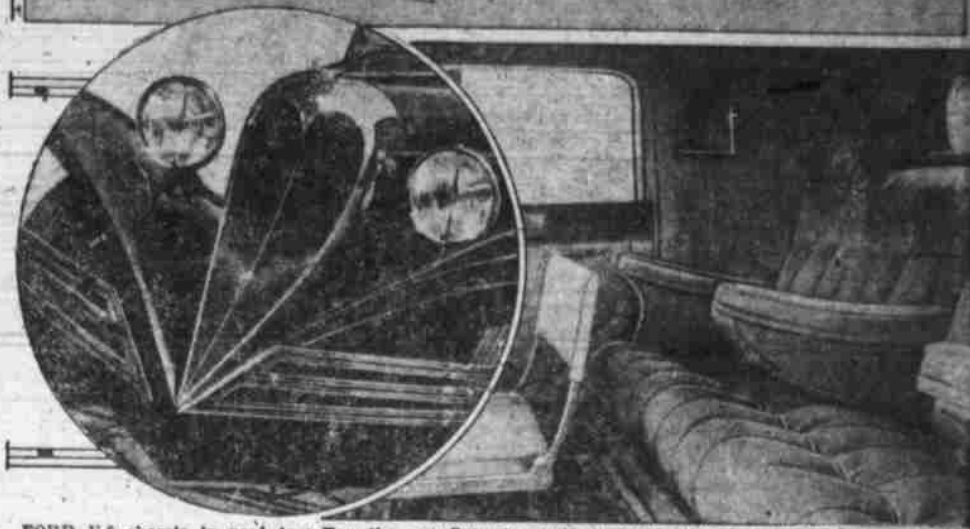

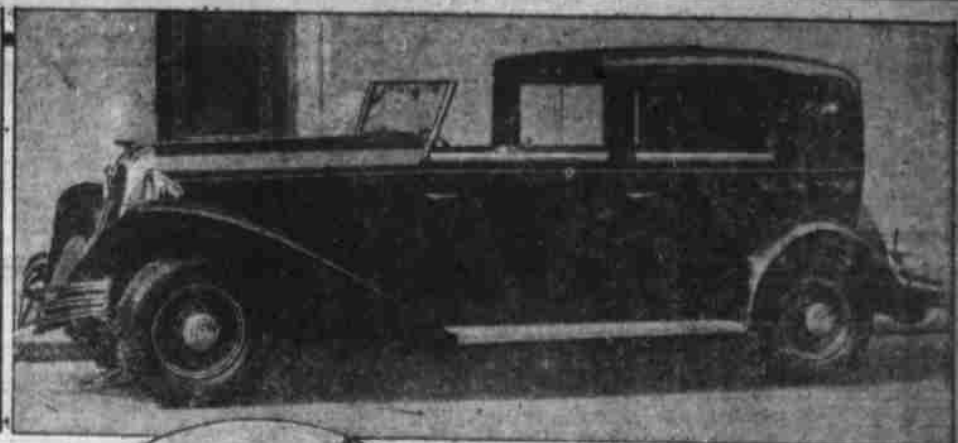

Frank Buck, explorer of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" fame, will personally exhibit more than 1,000 animals, many of them rare species seldom seen even in zoos, in this zoological garden now being built for the new World's Fair which opens in Chicago May 28. At the left Buck may be seen with a huge python captured in Africa. Low railroad rates, low hotel rates and many more free features make the Fair easier on the visitor's pocketbook this year.

Newest Luxury Car Uses Ford V-8 Engine, Chassis

A FORD V-8 chassis is used to mount a luxurious custom-built body in producing the Brewster, newest arrival in the fine-car field. The new car is the product of Brewster & Co., a subsidiary of Rolls-Royce in the United States and manufacturer of its bodies.

Top, the new Brewster, with custom-built body mounted on a Ford V-8 chassis, which has just been introduced in the fine-car field. Below (left) a view of the strikingly-designed front end, and (right) a glimpse of the passenger compartment which seats five persons.

This is twenty inches longer than the Ford V-8 chassis as lengthened by Brewster to accommodate the custom-built body. The makers found, however, that the compact design of the Ford V-8 engine allowed the use of the unusually long body on the shorter wheelbase, and, in fact, allowed two inches more leg room in the front seat.

In altering the Ford V-8 chassis to accommodate the new body its fundamental features all were retained, including the famous Ford transverse springs. Additionally, included dual mufflers and booster brakes. No change was made in the engine. Engineers reported that use of the heavier body apparently resulted in no diminution of the well-known Ford speed and accelerative ability.

The twin cabriolet body is unusually luxurious. It is designed to seat five passengers, with the driver in a front compartment enclosed with a heavy canopy. Two of the passenger seats are of the auxiliary type, folding forward into the compartment wall when not in use.

HORSE AND BUGGY DAYS

Remember the Maine? And The Original Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil?

Many old-timers swear this is the greatest fighting machine ever to enter the squared circle. It's the original Nonpareil Jack Dempsey. He won the middleweight championship in 1884 and was never fairly beaten until Bob Fitzsimmons knocked him out in 1891. This photo was made in 1886, at the height of his career.

Remember the Maine? On the night of Feb. 15, 1898, quiet Havana harbor resounded to a muffled roar, and the battleship Maine, Captain Sigsbee, sank to the bottom of the harbor taking with it the lives of 266 bluejackets. Here lies the hulk only a day or so later, the U. S. flag still flying at her masthead, and a larger flag half-masted in honor of her dead. A few weeks later, war came.

"For She's Got Rings on Her Fingers, Bells on Her Toes." Or at least if she hasn't, Pauline Markham seems to have everything else on but the kitchen stove (and perhaps that's the lid beside her). Pauline was a great stage favorite of the gay '90s.

Two British kings and their heir. This is one of the last pictures of King Edward VII, center, before his death in 1910. At left, the then Prince of Wales, now King George V, and at right is Albert Edward, the present Prince of Wales and heir to the throne. The naval uniforms conform to the strong sea tradition of England's rulers.

In 1868, Tammany Hall in New York was actually the scene of a Democratic National convention. The man in the foreground seems to be explaining all about politics to the lady, who wasn't supposed to know about such things in those days.

If Buffalo Bill ever had a rival, it was his friend, Pawnee Bill, shown with him here. Col. G. W. Little (Pawnee Bill) is at the left, Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) at the right, at the time when both were stellar attractions in the wild west show field.

Judith Lane

By JEANNE BOWMAN

CHAPTER 28 - NORMAN AGAIN

Similar proprietor of the Elms Dining Room, had been a top sergeant in the Marine Corps during the war. Judith went directly to him, told him what she would need and appointed him "Major" of the commissary department. He was to organize the other restaurant men, one to swing lumber into long tables, another to see about coffee, a third to organize the women into small groups.

Judith divided one of these groups. She cut bread, spread it, slipped slices of ham, of Bologna, of slices of pressed meat, of chicken, of roasts, between the bread.

Excited voices were constantly plying her with questions and she was constantly answering.

These were times when her weary muscles rebelled and she wished she were a thin slice of something to be slipped between sheets. She began to look upon her bed as a sandwich, herself as a filling, laughed at herself for thinking it, and then found Delphy at her side with a cup of coffee.

"Mr. Larson, he say he's back with one truck load and you're to come along over next trip."

Judith agreed warily. She left the big tent with its makeshift tables, piles of sandwiches and wash-bolsters of coffee, its laughing women, its returning truck loads of excited men talking "Oil-oil-oil."

She climbed into the high seat of a gravel truck, sat between the driver and Larson. "Sandwich" she thought sleepily.

The shout of men in the truck awakened her after a long lapse of semi-sleep. This time her eyes saw twinkling lights, saw the skeleton derrick, looming ahead, saw men running like pygmies about a roped off enclosure.

"There she is!"

Larson helped her down, steadied her a moment, then they walked over to the lighted area. Judith stepped in something that squashed under her feet. Oil... the place was drenched with it.

"She came in so fast we couldn't cap her," one man was saying excitedly.

Judith looked at him and then at the man to whom he was speaking, an oil-field worker, evidently, from his stained clothes. She started, leaned forward, peering intently, then closed her eyes and clutched at Larson's sleeve. The man was her husband, Norman Dale.

Judith Dale opened her eyes slowly. Larson intent upon the scene before him, had not noticed. She looked past him to the man who had been talking to Norman Dale.

He was still there but Norman had vanished.

Perhaps she was wrong. Perhaps she had longed so to see him that she fancied some person similar to him was he. This man had looked at her and his eyes had seemed to widen in surprise. Of course she hadn't seen him clearly, his hat brim was tipped forward, his face concealed with sprayed days' growth of beard. Norman shaved every day.

"That man, the one you were talking to when I came up, whose did he go?" She had leaned across Larson addressing the man on the other side.

"He just saw a fellow he wanted to catch before he got away."

"He reminded me so much of a friend of mine, would you mind telling me his name?"

"Let's see, now what do they call him. Of course, his nickname's Professor, because he talks so booky, and I think his other name is Jackson."

"Has he been in camp long?"

"Not so very long, 'bout a month or so, like fellow." The man turned away.

Judith didn't sleep on the return trip. Perhaps Norman was there within a few miles of her, had been there right along and hadn't come near.

So he'd left Lampere, she thought in despair. Perhaps he'd left Lampere's office. Could he have been the man who had talked to Scoggins, his oil man? But no, Scoggins would have remembered him as being her husband, Professor Jackson. Was he saying there for Lampere?

No use thinking about it, her weary mind protested. A sleep and tomorrow she would go back and look for him.

But when she awakened she did not call for a horse and ride over as she had intended. What could she say if she located him? If he had wanted to see her, he'd had a month in which to visit Big Tom Town.

She stuck, literally and figuratively. It seemed as the summer progressed that she was glued to the high stool over her drawing board, checking progress with Big Tom's specifications. The heat burned down through the boards of her shack until even Delphy, who usually congealed in the winter and thawed into comfort at midsummer, admitted it "am quite wa'm."

Cusard sent insulating board up from Laredo, which helped a little. Awnings at the windows, made by some of the engineers from old canvas and daubed with var-colored paint, added to the comfort. Delphy's window boxes with their profusion of petunias and nasturtiums broke the drabness of the outlook.

Down in Big Tom Town, tents and motor houses were graced with coffee, tin, sprouting blossoms, gifts of seed from Delphy.

And then the storm season announced its approach with brassy sky and sultry heat. For days it seemed the air was filled with flinty bits of bronze. Judith watched the sky with apprehension, held long consultations with Scoggins and Scofield. The dust town had grown to a dangerous size, if one seemed strangely charming on his fat, frocked face.

Judith smiled back, tears behind her smile. Last year how different it had been. Big Tom had been there and she had sat snugly in the curve of Norman's arm. She wondered where he was now.

"Know what it makes me think of, Miss Judy?" inquired Tommy, pointing to black clouds which had separated from the moon and were blowing forward, washed with red-forked lightning. "Wishes, black ones, ridin' brooms. Say, Miss Judy, I reckon you could talk Pop into buyin' me an airplane 'stead of a car? Gee there ain't no place here a fellow can drive a car."

Judith looked from the storm-swept sky. "Would you be terribly disappointed if you didn't get either one?"

"You mean, maybe there won't be no... I guess any, all?"

"How far down are they now?"

"Fast two thousand," he admitted. Then, with bravado, "Gee, I could get along with a horse just as well if I could have two guns to go with it."

The near cannonade of thunder sent them back down hill and a few moments later the storm struck Daylight this time, excepting for the weight of greenish-black clouds. They could see the blue-white flame of lightning, singing down in snaky darts, crashing with brittle force.

The river was rising. Judith, Larson and the engineers watched it with interest and apprehension. It flooded the low basin, lapped the base of Scoggins No. 1. They saw it lapping the lowest tank and then with one great roar Scoggins No. 1 burst into flame, a flame that seemed to rise to meet a red dart hurled from the clouds.

"She's gone..." she struck the derrick.

Judith stood white-lipped, silent. She had no more reserve funds to rebuild.

Indian Sign

 language of American antiquity. All this has been brought about by one man, William Tomkins, an old western cowboy, who after many years of work and study and research of primitive communication of gesture and symbol, which he pursued as a hobby, has produced a remarkable book on the Indian Sign Language, of which the Smithsonian Institute has said, "Easily the greatest work of a practical nature that has ever been written on the subject."

This work has been introduced to the Boy Scouts of the World as the universal or common language of Scouting, because it is largely instinctive and is 50 times more readily learned than any other language. It has not only great beauty of expression and an appealing background of romantic interest, but it is also of great fascination to all young people.

Mr. Tomkins was invited to England to the World Jamboree, by Lord Robert Baden-Powell, and taught the language to 50,000 Boy Scouts assembled from 42 countries, and who otherwise spoke 32 different languages. The Prince of Wales was much interested in the work, he having been the first time that a genuine American language was taught in England. Tomkins grew up in Dakota, in the Sioux Indian country, as a cowboy, trapper, hunter and scout. He learned much of the spoken and silent ways of communication, but his hobby for many years was sign language and pictography, in which he is now considered an authority. He has taught the language to hundreds of thousands of Boy Scouts in many countries and in most of the United States. He teaches about 150 signs an hour, and 300 of these natural base signs will enable anyone to carry on quite a conversation.

Colts Have New Players

Revamped Line-Up To Make It Tough For Cosden Boys

Spike Henninger and his Cosden Oilers, U. S. Eighty league entrants, meet the Midland Colts here tomorrow for a practice game.

In an early season encounter the Midlanders bested the Oilers, 18 to 17.

The Cosden line-up will be practically the same as that used in defeating the Giants Sunday, Henninger stated. Pap Payne, former Tiger hurler, will probably take the mound with Patton behind the bat.

The Colts, in the past week or two, have bolstered their team considerably. Four new men were used the past week in defeating the Combaos Bulldogs.

Heaton, New Pitches

Heaton, a classy pitcher, imported from Stanton; Wynne, infielder from Palestine; Salmon, outfielder from Palestine, and Williams, an infielder from Lamesa, are the new recruits.

The Oilers, while having shown much better form in the last couple of games, will have an uphill climb against the visitors. The team got a rather slow start and it is doubtful whether or not they have the polish, speed and all-around top performance necessary to topple the Permian Basin boys.

The game will be played on the West Third diamond, starting at 4 o'clock.

Fairness

Continued study of the problem of 800,000 farm families on relief rolls has convinced administration experts a "planned" agricultural program must be evolved looking years into the future.

Since the Wirt episode New Dealers have shied away from that word "planned" but by any other name they are coming to the same end.

Relief administrator Hopkins believes these 800,000 families must continue close to the land if they're to share in that "more abundant life" the President has promised. With this in mind he's about to take off his coat and attempt to put these hapless people on farms for keeps.

The outcome is expected to comprise planned long-range public works with the substitute home-stead idea. Yet Hopkins and his colleagues don't like that name "substantiated homestead." They'd thank you for a title less like a first cousin to the poorhouse.

As previously announced Hopkins intends to place these needy families on 4- or 5-acre plots of land in rural areas. He expects them to raise garden trucks, chickens, etc., and otherwise get as much of a living as they can from the land.

That's where the planned public works must come in. The Relief Administrator points out it's ridiculous to have such farmers working on roads in the spring-time instead of working their own pieces of land.

But they must have that additional income. Hopkins thinks he can arrange it so they can do work in off-seasons.

Mrs. Theron Hicks was winner of the driving, approaching and putting contest. She received a vanity case and two golf balls for her triumph.

Golfers of Big Spring showed considerable concern as eighteen lady golfers motored to Midland for the occasion. Those attending were: Mesdames Ellington, Hicks, Bowe, Bennett, Robb, Rush, Elmsfield, R. Rix, Spence, Liberty, Browning, Mason, Carter, Pistole, Bristow, Latson, Stalcup, and Reed.
