'Sweetheart' deals lure doctors to move around

EDITOR'S NOTE - Imagine free rent and equipment for your business, a guaranteed income and interest-free loans. These are some of the enticements hospitals give doctors to win their patients. The deals are good for hospitals, but they can violate the law, contribute to bad care and drive up medical costs.

By FRED BAYLES and DANIEL Q. HANEY Associated Press Writers

MONROE, La. (AP) - Across the United States, hospitals without enough sick people to fill their beds are plying doctors with money, cheap loans, free offices and other gifts in return for patients.

A physician willing to move his practice across country - or even across town - can pick up tens of thousands of dollars in income guarantees, equipment and plain cold doctors for its new North Monroe reprehensible." Hospital here, for example, it agreed to pay eight specialists $1 million over three years to ease their move fortunes to those of a hospital injects from the long-established downtown medical center.

In return for such generosity, hospitals typically expect one thing above all: the doctors' patients. Or what they euphemistically call "loyalty."

While the deals make doctors richer and hospitals healthier, they may skirt the law and sometimes break it. Federal rules prohibit doctors from taking kickbacks for putting Medicare or Medicaid patients in hospitals. Most states have similar laws.

The American Medical Association's ethical policy states: "Payments to or by a physician for the referral of patients are improper."

"If now it turns out that the doctor is in bed with the hospital and they are both interested in the bottom line, the patient becomes the victim," said Dr. Arnold Relman, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Medicare and other insurers have changed the rules of medicine by shortening, and often eliminating, patients' stays in the hospital. As a result, many hospitals are half-empty and eager to woo doctors, their most important source of business.

The deals also increase medical spending by tacitly, sometimes directly, pressuring doctors to do more tests and procedures.

"Medical decisions on whether you take action or not are difficult enough when all you have to consider is the patient's welfare," said Dr. Henry Jones, a Monroe family practitioner. "At the very least, you're going to think more about putting someone in the hospital when it holds your mortgage or is giving resources. you help that makes up a healthy part of your income."

Louisiana's Maverick Governor bucks popular trends

EDITOR'S NOTE - When the Louisiana legislature passed the nation's most restrictive anti-abortion bill, the whole country took notice. Buddy Roemer vetoed it. When the legislature modified the bill only slightly, he vetoed it again. Here's a look at a maverick Southern governor who put his political career on the line in a heavily Roman Catholic

LOUISIANA GOV. CHARLES 'BUDDY' ROEMER .Announcing veto of anti-abortion bill.

But as many wrote him off, Roemer pushed on with a basic theme: If elected governor, he said, the rest of the United States would stop laughing at Louisiana.

Louisiana politics, he said, would no longer be dominated by money and back-room maneuvering. He would crase the blighted image of a once oil-rich state now derided by members of its own legislature as a Third World nation.

Since then, with Roemer in the governor's mansion, Louisiana has continued to make national news, with a former Ku Klux Klan leader running for the U.S. Senate, a bitter fight over abortion and an explosion of other legislation that made outsiders wonder aloud if the Pelican State wasn't a blight on the New South.

And Roemer concedes that his dream of a "new Louisiana" - with improved schools and colleges, a new highway system and an economy turned away from the feast-or-starve oil business - can't be fulfilled until after he leaves office, even if he wins a second term next year.

"By the end of this decade, this place will be a winner," the governor says. "I'm setting up somebody to be governor in five or six years who's going to be a hero.'

In the meantime, Roemer has been in the center of national controversy. a spot that he says he has hated and relished at the same time. He vetoed two abortion bills that backers hoped to use to challenge the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 decision legalizing most abortions.

With parent groups and the national music industry pushing from different directions, Roemer also vetoed a bill that would have required warning labels on recordings with objectionable topics and barred their sale to minors.

During his 2{ years in office, Roemer has had victories and setbacks - both politically and would vote for him. The following year personally. He is divorced from his (See ROEMER, Page 3A) second wife and his attempts at changing his approach to politics and his private life have been greeted with outright derision from some quarters.

Roemer says he's trying to be more than a governor. Over the past year, he's visibly reduced his once-overpowering stance on state issues. Backers still say he's doing as good a job as any governor could. Detractors still call him a Johnny-come-lately who will go the route of other Southern "reform governors."

If it all works out, Roemer could find himself in a position for national office.

If it works out.

Who is he?

A native of northwest Louisiana, where the terrain and the people are much more like eastern Texas, he rose early in the morning to work on the family's farm. He attended public school and argued politics around the dinner table. He was a Harvard freshman at 16.

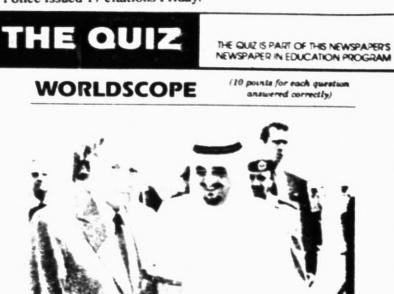

Roemer served on the 1973 Louisiana constitutional convention, lost his initial race for Congress and won two years later after the incumbent became embroiled in a vote-buying scandal. Even as he was elected in 1980, his father - who worked for former Gov. Edwin Edwards, now Roemer's arch political nemesis - was convicted of conspiring to take a bribe. The conviction was later overturned.

Upon reaching Washington, Roemer openly questioned the leadership of House Speaker Tip O'Neill and became aligned with a group of Democratic congressmen known as the "Boll Weevils" for their support of President Ronald Reagan's economic policies.

Roemer has never been accused of being a Democratic Party regular. After his congressional seat became open in 1987, he tacitly endorsed Jim McCrery, a Republican, by saying he would vote for him. The following year,

Festival is Sunday

San Jose Catholic Church will be hosting a fall festival fundraiser with a different twist Sunday(Oct. 14). It's called "Otonofest" and the theme for the event is "where South meets West."

Otonofest is envisoned as multicultural celebration which brings together the different traditions of the Hereford community to celebrate the fall season of harvest, explains Stella Fluhman, one of the coordinators of the event.

Otonofest '90 will be held on the church parking lot from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday and will feature a variety of good and games, plus live music.

The public is invited to "come out and celebrate the harvest time of year with different cultures where we can appreciate each other's gifts and recognize all the unity and possibilities for growth that exist," said Fluhman. She explained that the theme, "where South meets West" further describes the Hereford community where the south-based Mexican culture intertwines with a west-based Anglo culture.

Music for the day will include mariachi, western swing, country, bluegrass and gospel. Groups scheduled to perform include Los Mariachis de Amarillo, the Melody Six from Nazareth, Deacon Domingo Castillo from St. Anthony's Church, and the Walker Sisters from Hereford's Country Opry.

Fluhman explained that "Otono-fest" is a combination word--"Otono(oh-tone-yo) which is Spanish for autumn, and "fest," the English word with German roots which means festival.

ROEMER-

Roemer's mother, Adeline, ran for the spot as a Democrat. The governor's major campaign effort was to say that he was proud of her.

Roemer is a politician who by all accounts is not getting rich being one. His oldest son is following his footsteps to Harvard, and Roemer is financing his education by talking with bankers about loans to finance the journey.

He's coaching his youngest son's baseball and soccer teams. He now talks of going to Linda Ronstadt concerts and Louisiana State University's football team.

A lifelong friend and ordained Baptist minister, Danny Walker, had a lot to do with Roemer's style. Walker held classes for Roemer's staff in which he instructed his students to pop themselves with a rubber band every time they had a "negative" thought about someone.

No doubt, Roemer's political flame is still burning, but it's been turned down a few degrees.

"It was family," Roemer said in an interview at the governor's mansion after finishing a casual breakfast of French toast, light syrup (he's a diabetic) and bacon. "It was my marriage...I was not happy. I was getting things done and I'm proud of what we've done. But I was avoiding my friends...

"What kind of way is that to live?" For more than two years, Roemer lived that way. On his first day on the job, he decided to allow the execution of a condemned murderer, a welcome-to-office gift from Edwards, who conceded a runoff to him in 1987 and virtually turned the near-bankrupt state over to him immediately.

He declined to address the Legislature on opening day in 1988 and instead participated in the hiring of a state education superintendent. Lawmakers considered it a snub. Roemer said he didn't care what they thought and uttered a barnyard epithet in response to the criticism.

He was impatient. Former staff members said he often was impossible to deal with. Legislators said he listened to them, but didn't hear what he had to say. It was Roemer's way or no way at all.

The governor often prevailed. The state's $800 million deficit was refinanced, teachers were given a large pay raise in exchange for giving up their lifetime certificates, a trust fund to rebuild the state's highway system was approved by voters and a tougher campaign finance law was enacted.

Sometimes, Roemer didn't get his of the mothers. Where America or Louisiana will come down on the issue, 1 feel will be on middle ground "I have never seen an issue more personal and more difficult for conscientious people...There are a number of people who are re-examining their position conscien-, tiously and I think that is healthy."

The governor also put himself squarely in a national controversy surrounding Dalton Prejean, convicted and sentenced to die for killing a state police trooper in 1977 as a teen-ager. Defense attorneys also ordered by doctors. questioned Prejean's mental competence.

Roemer went against his own Pardon Board, which recommended that Prejean's sentence be commuted shortly before he was electrocuted.

"The reason I called was the contention that perhaps the prisoner our medical staff, and one of the side did not meet legal standards of mental results of that is that you do get competency," he said. "The record looked clear to me in reading that he was in control. Only one real way to confirm that - so I called him. We had 15 to 18 minutes, which to honor him I will not disclose any details of. But it was lucid, it was give and take. We were close for that period of time. We were man to man. He talked about his guilt, his remorse. I talked about my difficult decision and why I made it. I settled in my mind whether this man knew what he was doing."

Clemency for prisoners has been a touchy point throughout Roemer's administration. Roemer has refused to free Wilbert Rideau, a convicted murderer who has become a nationally prominent prison journalist during nearly three decades behind bars.

The 1991 governor's race has the promise of drawing a large field. Already Edwards and Louis Lambert, who narrowly missed the governor's mansion in 1979, have announced. National eyes also are on David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader now running for the Senate.

Roemer says he will be there for a second term, although at one time he was convinced that he would not run again. To him, the job of changing Louisiana is unfinished.

DOCTORS

Documents and depositions in his suit open a rare window on the usually hush-hush deals between hospitals and doctors. They show hospital offers of discounted real estate and loans, as well as outright cash.

Such largess did not come without strings. Some recipients got notes from the hospital's administrator prodding them to admit patients. One doctor said he was told loan payments could be deferred if enough patients were admitted. Others spoke of unnecessary, and potentially risky, tests

HCA officials deny rewarding doctors for patients but declined to discuss the deals, as did Arlen Reynolds, the North Monroe administrator at the time. But in a to life imprisonment, and talked with deposition, Reynolds explained the the condemned man by telephone philosophy behind the arrangements.

"We assist them in relocating so that we can increase the breadth ... of results of that is that you do get additional admissions," he said.

However, Dr. Lee Roy Joyner, a founder of the group practice that received $1 million, goes further: "They wanted the gynecologists who did the most hysterectomies, not the ones who were the best doctors. They would make us aware of which admissions and procedures were where they made their money."

The Monroe case may represent an extreme, but such deals are far from unique. Hospitals of all types, from profit-making chains to facilities with religious affiliations, offer incentives to bring in doctors, and with them, their patients.

"You give me any major metropolitan area and I can guarantee you there is dirt going on," said Steve Hirschtick, a Los Angeles lawyer who represents doctors around the country in contractual dealings with hospitals. "Anybody who looks at these deals is going to conclude they are illegal arrangements."

"From attending conferences and listening to lawyers, it is something that is a growing trend," said Harvey Yamplosky, former chief lawyer of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' inspector general's office. "Everybody seems to agree that if the government doesn't do something more, it is going to take over the way people do business." Among the most common deals:

-Doctors receive cut-rate or free space in hospital-owned office buildings or have their rent paid.

-When doctors join the staff, the hospital guarantees them a minimum income for a few years.

-Many get "signing bonuses" of $20,000, $50,000 or more.

-Hospitals outfit doctors' offices with equipment ranging from photocopying to X-ray machines.

-Hospitals pay doctors thousands for sham administrative positions that require no work.

-Doctors are given loans with little or no interest payments. Sometimes, awfully good way to win loyalty," the loans are written off if the doctor said Sue Cejka, a St. Louis recruiter.

remains a loyal admitter. A 1987 survey of 114 hospitals by the Atlanta recruiting firm of Jackson and Coker found 95 percent used income guarantees to lure doctors. Eighty-eight percent said they gave physicians unspecified assistance to start a practice, 52 percent provided free office space, and 36 percent gave interest-free loans.

"Hospitals have to be aggressive to maintain the level of admissions, and doctors are important to that," said Jackson and Coker President Bill Dismuke.

Hospitals long have recruited doctors to ensure their communities good medical care, but the stakes have escalated. Instead of seeking doctors from across the country, many hospitals are recruiting from across town.

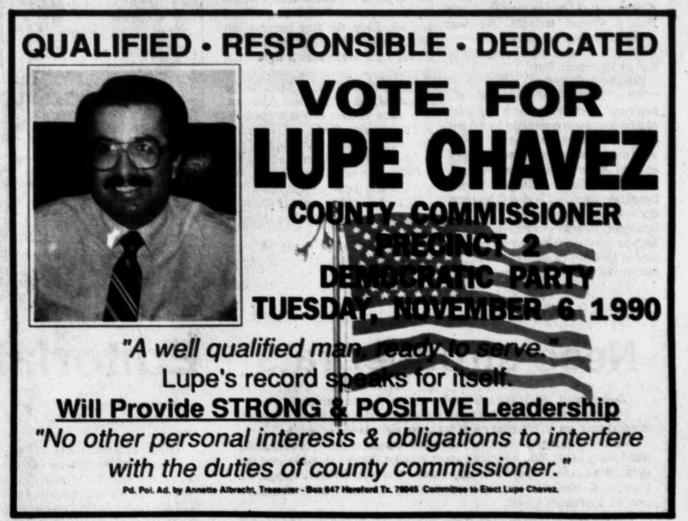

"Setting them up in practice is an "It's a way for the hospital to engage doctors to admit to only the one hospital."

Physician loyalty is important in large part because tightfisted insurers require hospitals to send patients home sooner or treat them as outpatients.

In 1983, U.S. hospitals were 72 percent full, according to the American Hospital Association. By last year, occupancy had fallen to 65 percent, even though 250 hospitals closed during the seven years.

All this has left many of the nation's 5,537 hospitals scrambling for patients. And the best source is doctors. Steve Renn of Health Care Investment Analysts in Baltimore notes that three out of four people pick a hospital on their doctors' recommendation.

"One of the top two or three ways of getting patients into your hospital is to get the strong allegiance of the doctor," he said. "To do that, some hospitals tie the physicians' fortunes into the fortunes of the hospital."

way. Voters rejected a plan to revamp the state's tax system and the legislators criticized his leadership on budget issues the following two lawmaking sessions. This year, he gave a low-key speech calling for "campfires of cooperation" with the Legislature.

Then he backed off.

Why? There's a political reason, he says.

'There is an over-reliance on the governor in this state," he says. "I think we should have good men and women serve as governor. I think the chief executive ought to be strong and clear. But we must mature politically. That includes, in my mind, a balance between the Legislature and the governor."

There's also a practical reason.

"The first two years, I was exhausted," he says. "I was just like a zombie. This year, I don't feel that way ... I've tried to change. I've tried to keep my values, but change my attitude ... People see it in me now. I'm calmer. I'm happier. I don't have to dot every 'i' and cross every 't' and run everything in the state." Even though Roemer was not visible in the day-to-day fights of the Legislature this year, he put himself on center stage when an explosion of bills described by some as extremist brought Louisiana into an international spotlight. When he vetoed the record-labeling bill, Roemer brought Tipper Gore, wife of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore and a labeling activist, to Baton Rouge to back his stance that a voluntary industry code was adequate to protect young listeners. But his veto of two anti-abortion bills was this year's treading-on-thin-iceact. With a large Catholic population, a vocal right-wing political base and a critical nation watching, Roemer put himself squarely in the middle of a fight recognized as a no-win situation.

recognized as a no-win situation. One bill would have provided only exceptions for the mother's life. The other would have included rape and incest provisions. Roemer, who describes himself as pro-life, said the first bill was insensitive to women. The second, hastily assembled in the closing hours of the legislative would not have passed court uster, he said.

Anti-abortion activists suggested that the governor talked out of both corners of his mouth. As a congress-man, he opposed any exceptions for abortion other than for the mother's life, they said.

Vinton knew all of the words. He such. did not know them in the order in different keys.

What compounded his crime was that it was on national, prime time television, right before the Cincinnati vs. Pittsburgh National League playoff game.

If it had not been for Roseanne Barr, middle-aged women across the country would be burning those old Bobby Vinton records. He was terrible. He was atrocious.

But he wasn't anywhere near as bad as Roseanne Barr.

But he was close.

One of the problems with the National Anthem is that it is harder to sing than most operas. In its natural key, it is too high for most persons to sing unless they are trained enough to drop down an octave or three.

It's hard to play. Didja hear the Levelland band last Friday? Our band does pretty good, but The Star Spangled Banner is a tough song to sing or play or, for most folks who sing it in front of a large crowd, to memorize. They get the bombs

Most folks don't know what The Roseanne far and away holds not Star Spangled Banner relates to. It only this season's record for worst was the Battle of Fort McHenry, rendition of The Star Spangled down by Baltimore, in that famous Banner. Now in second place is War of 1812. There are other songs that would which they appear in the song, be better suited, easier to sing, less though, and sang the song in several militaristic and much easier to memorize.

> What about God Bless America? That's a great song, written by the master, Irving Berlin. It was made most famous by Kate Smith. Hockey fans in Philadelphia knew the fat lady had sung when Kate waddled out on the carpeted ice and belted it out. It has an easy lilt and can hardly offend anyone. Even the flag burners can like it, with the part of guiding her through the night with a light from above.

> Another good one is America the Beautiful. Like God Bless America, in evokes visions of the mountains and the prairies, the fruited plains and the oceans. All of that appeals to meat-eaters and vegetarians, peace activists and arms dealers, men and women and those who aren't sure.

Come to think of it, that's an even better reason to have either one as soon as possible.

Need stronger rats

Oh-h-h boy! What goes around eventually comes around. Remember here awhile back that we suggested that what this country needed was not a five-cent cigar but a stronger breed of rats?

Since laboratory rats, injected with massive doses of different chemicals, had a nasty habit of developing cancer to prove that we shouldn't eat red meat, drink colas of any kind, sugar, and a half-million other things, we suggested--tongue in cheek--that perhaps the rats were too weak and we needed a stronger breed.

For the past 10 years, those weak-livered rats, injected with 10 cases of soft drinks daily, invariably came down with something or other.

In other words, laboratory rats have more or less dictated the diet of the American people for the past decade. No more!

Recently the Wall Street Journal reported that two different groups of prestigious scientists reported that "animal-cancer tests in which rodents are fed massive doses of checicals may be useless for calulating the cancer

The Brazosport Facts on limiting legislators' terms:

Citizens of three states - Oklahoma, Colorado and California - have, or soon will have, voted on limiting the terms of office of their state legislators. The most far-reaching of the proposals is in Colorado, where voters will determine not only the limitation of terms for their state lawmakers but those of their U.S. representatives and senators. ...

As you might expect, there is a movement in Texas. One advocate of limited legislative terms is state Rep. Bill Hammond, a Dallas Republican. He wants a Constitution Convention to amend the U.S. Constitution to limit congressional terms. ... We like the idea of limited congressional terms. We have seen how long years of service can corrupt the legislative system. We have seen our congressional leaders sidesten issues of ethics. We have seen some of them become unresponsive to the people and arrogant in their actions.

with team owners, players, and sports writers to come up with a fair and equitable way to conduct post-game interviews without requiring women sports reporters to interview naked men. ...

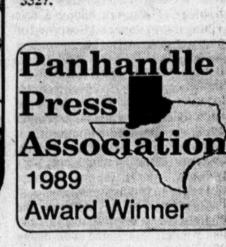

Equal treatment of men and women sports writers has most often been solved by giving women sports writers the same access to men's dressing rooms, showers or anywhere else men reporters can go. ...

Equal treatment, however, does not have to mean that women reporters must be allowed into a dressing room with 50 naked men. Conversely, equal treatment under the law does not mean that men reporters must be allowed into the dressing rooms of naked women athletes, although currently there are no analogous situations involving women's teams.

Many reporters have pressing deadlines and must conduct speedy post-game

One solution could be to give all reporters access to players in a room separate from the dressing room. ...

The NFL should also consider a set time for all reporters to conduct post-game, locker-room interviews with non-naked players. After the players finish showering and dressing, all reporters again would be allowed in for interviews. ...

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

SEIZING THE OPPORTUNITY

by Dr. Richard L. Lesher, President U.S. Chamber of Commerce

been told that the Chinese character for crisis is a combination of two other characters for danger and opportunity. It makes sense, for within every crisis an astute observer can detect both danger and opportunity

The current crisis in the Mideast is a case in point. To be sure, there is great danger. A tiny spark could set off a deadly shooting war. A diplomatic gaffe could deprive us of support at a critical moment. Of course, any major disruption of Mideast oil supplies could quickly throw the Western World into economic chaos

But this challenge also offers us opportunity, and not only in terms of projecting U.S. power and influence. It is altogether possible the Mideast crisis will shock Congress from complacency to bring about some badly needed policy change

First and foremost, Congress needs to recognize how dangerously dependent upon foreign oil we have become. To reduce our peril, it should authorize exploration and drilling for oil on the Outer Continental Shelf and the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska. Also, Congress should act aggressively to pump new life into our safest and environmentally cleanest source of electricity -- nuclear power. Of course,

WASHINGTON -- I have action on either front will provoke the usual hysterical reaction from environmental extremists, but the Mideast crisis just might provide Congress with the impetus to overcome it.

At the same time, Congress can seize this opportunity to take a long, hard look at the perilous state of our economy, now teetering on the brink of recession. A massive oil price hike could push us over the edge. Is this really the best time to impose upon our economy hundreds of billions worth of new environmental requirements? Is this really a good time to experiment with expensive new ndatory labor benefit laws?

I don't think so. Rather, Congress might consider things to stimulate the economy. A likely candidate is a cut in the capital gains tax. That would enhance the value of real assets overnight, ease the cost of the S&L bailout and promote economic growth at the same time. Likewise, the cut in the Social Security phyroll tax proposed by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, (D-N.Y.), would put more money in workers' pockets and raise economic growth an additional 0.3 percent.

President Harry Truman once complained that a President had to spend most of his time persuading people to do what they should do anyway. Perhaps this crisis in the Mideast will have the same persuasive influence Truman referred to.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Our Centennial Plate project was a great success! All 500 plates of the limited edition are spoken for but, in the event some are not claimed, we are taking a waiting list.

Ted Walling did an excellent job at the auction. We auctioned off the first 10 of the numbered plates. A big thanks to Don Graham, president of First National Bank, who paid $500 for plate No. 1. We appreciate the buyers of the other nine plates, also. They were: The Hereford Brand, Messer family, Palacios family, Charles Schlabs, Deaf Smith REC, Gerald Marnell, Donna Morton, Jim Conkwright and John Stribling. And thanks to all who bought plates before the auction.

We also want to thank KPAN

Part of the proceeds from this project will help pay the cost of the bronze bust of Erastus "Deaf" Smith. We designed the Centennial Plates so the townspeople could have a commemorative souvenir to treasure through the years.

Thank you, Hereford and Deaf Smith County for making this project enjoyable and successful at the same time. It takes all of us working together to make it work.

Houston Post on gubernatorial debate:

Dear Ann Richards and Clayton Williams: It's high time you two quit playing hide-and-seek with each other on the campaign trail. Get together and give us some real insight into yourselves and how you would serve as Texas' next governor.

Our state faces grave problems in the next four years. It is running out of money for welfare, public health, mental health and retardation programs. It needs to spend much more on prisons and other criminal-justice programs, as well as on the drug problem.

Our school-financing system has again been declared unconstitutional and probably will require even more money to fix it. Add everything up and we will probably need $3 billion and $5 billion in new revenue from a tax system that's a mess and must be overhauled.

Yet after months of your televised peekaboo with negative commercials, we know very little about what you would do about these and other urgent problems. Texans are sick of this. Neither of you has yet given voter much reason to go to the polls and vote for you.

So drop the conditions and hemming and hawing, and let's have some real debates - no pre-approved questions, no fancy formats, just some honest give and take. We'd like to see how much you both know about the state's problems and what solutions you propose. We're desperate to hear some good reasons to vote for either of you.

Voters getting tired of smoke, mirrors

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

ATLANTA (AP) - The voters, President Bush was telling a group of them, are frustrated, outraged by what's going on in Washington, sick and tired of smoke and mirrors that hide congressional spending habits.

It sounded like an often tested, seldom successful Republican formula: campaign against Congress, where the Democratic majorities are. This would seem to be a promising season for that message, with signs of rising wrath about the government's inability to manage its own budget. But the Bush message is tempered

He'd like more Republicans elected to Congress on Nov. 6, but he also needs Democratic support there, before election day, to get the government out of its tax, spending and budget maze.

"Believe me, when you don't control either house of the United States Congress, it ain't easy," the president told a Republican fund-raising reception in Atlanta Wednesday night.

And it gets worse for a White House that can't hold the Republican minority together for a tax and spending settlement to cut the deficit. Bush held a White House reception Thursday night for "select Republi-can House members," meaning the 71 who stuck with him on a budget settlement. They were a minority of the House minority - 105 Republicans bolted and helped kill the budget Bush favored. No reception for them.

"It is an outrage what's happening up there," Bush said. "Sucking up tax dollars on one end and turning them into spending programs without end. And frankly, if we had more Republicans in Congress, we wouldn't be in this mess.

"But I've got to work with the Democrats in Congress because I was sent there to govern, not to give speeches about it . . . ," he said. "We're outnumbered. We've got to get the Democrats to come with us .

In Bush's limited political warfare, denunciation of "the do-nothing 80th he tells his off-year campaign crowds 'Congress'' in 1948, when Republithat Congress is responsible for cans were in control. solving the problem, and ought to get on with it to "bring this ghastly federal budget deficit to its knees." "I didn't come down here to assign blame," he said in St. Petersburg, Fla., "but you know . . . the American people are pretty smart. They know where the action is. And they know that Congress has the responsibility to pass a budget. And it's about time that they met that responsibility."

That's tame stuff, matched against Ronald Reagan's first six years.

Dwight D. Eisenhower said congressional Democrats were gloom merchants, "men of little faith," bent on obstruction of programs the people wanted. Reagan said if he couldn't make liberal Democrats in Congress see the light, he would make them feel the heat from the voters. "Here's a flash from the Gipper - they're not the traditions of presidential campaigns against Congress. The classic was Harry S. Truman's daily Every Republican president since his time has had occasion to campaign against Democratic Congresses, interrupted only by GOP majorities in the Senate during going to win," he said.

Bush came to office pledging bipartisanship, saying he and Congress weren't elected to bicker. That's still part of his message, even at campaign rallies, and despite the confrontation that is built into divided government.

Bush has vetoed 14 bills this year, and hasn't been overridden once. He's threatened a budget veto if he doesn't get satisfactory terms by Friday, a move that could lead to a government shutdown. "I have tried to negotiate in good faith with the liberals in the Congress," he said at one southern campaign stop. "And I believe the American people didn't send me as president to play cheap politics. They sent me up there to govern.'

Essays detail county's early hist

During Deaf Smith County's Centennial Celebration, the Hereford Cattlewomen sponsored an essay contest on early county history for 7th and 8th graders at Hereford Junior High.

The top three winners received cash awards from Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, and the winners were announced at the courthouse celebration Oct. 6.

First-place winner was Christi Wallace; second went to John Wayne Messer, and third was Brent Marnell. The essays are reprinted below.

DEAF SMITH COUNTY--NOT ALWAYS A DESERT

BY CHRISTI WALLACE Hereford Junior High

Can you imagine not one lake, but two lakes in the city of Hereford? Well, believe it or not, Dameron Park used to be the place to be on cold, icy winter days. During the summer, people would go to "Junk Smith Lake" west of town to swim, boat and fish.

Not only were there lakes, but there were two main creeks: Tierra Blanca Creek and Palo Duro Creek. These creeks were two sources of above-ground water.

Dameron Lake drained into Tierra Blanca Creek. Before 1921, the shores of the lake would reach the location of the present-day Hereford High School. In Bessie Patterson's book, A History of Deaf Smith County, she wrote: "It may have been with mixed emotions that young people saw the city begin the draining of the lake(which is now Dameron Park) in October of 1921. It would be a skating rink in the winter; and the young people had done some once abundant in Deaf Smith County boating on the lake in earlier days. Plans are to turn it into a playground."

about solar energy."

Roark said the building only has a solar space heater and a hot water heater. "We're shooting for complete solar power for the building."

Solar energy has its part to play in the energy field, according to Roark. "It can never replace petroleum power, but it can decrease our dependency on petro power from 10 to 20 percent. "Solar energy is very cost effective. The system we design will pay for itself in four to seven years," Roark said.

When comparing solar energy to just cost, said Koark. There is reduced air pollution with solar power, which decreases health care cost and it makes us less dependent on foreign oil resources.

La Verne Posey Longbottom McMinn, a longtime resident of Deaf Smith County, recalls ice skating in the winter and swimming in the summer at Dameron Lake and Junk Smith Lake.

Junk Smith Lake was at the end of Lake Street and south of what is now West Central School. Mrs. McMinn remembers driving down Lake Street right to the boundary of the lake. The kids called it Junk Smith Lake because there was a junkyard by it and the Smiths owned the junkyard.

The lake was fed by a spring from the Ogallalah Aquifier and by rainfall. When farming and agriculture began to boom, the irrigation wells drained the underground springs. Also, when people began to move to town, the city dug a well for the city to use. Rainfall each year is not enough to keep the lake full.

Tierra Blanca Creek, which is in the southern part of Deaf Smith County, feeds into Buffalo Lake in Randall County. Palo Duro Creek, which is in the northern part of the county, joins with Tierra Blanca Creek east of Canyon. From there they form Prairie Dog Town fork of the Red River, which flows through Palo Duro Canyon and on to the Red River.

During the first 50 years of Deaf Smith County, Tierra Blanca Creek was the site for picnics, week-long camping trips and leisurely boat rides down the creek. Ice skating was enjoyed in the winter. Before the city had built bridges, people would ford their wagons across.

Because of the increase of population and the decrease of rainfall, the playa lakes that were have now dried up. In fact, geologists in the 1970s predicted that by the year

Roark said his company installs most of the solar heating systems in the Panhandle. "People are coming to us because we know how to build the heating system," he said.

According to Roark, people like the solar heating as compared to convectional air heating. "We warm the floor instead of the air which keeps the feet warm and because heat rises, the entire room stays warm," he said.

Roark said buildings can be cooled by solar power as well. "Last year we tried to cool houses with solar power, fossil fuels, there is more to consider but we're not sure how well it worked. It's suil experi there is a future for it." Roark is pleased with the presence of solar power in the Panhandle. Out of five grants given to solar research in Texas, two were in the Panhandle (in addition to Vega, West Texas State University Killgore Research Center was awarded a similar grant). Some of the grant money will be spent in Hereford. Solar Associates plan to do a seminar in Hereford next year to educate Hereford residents and businesses of the benefits of solar power. Another seminar is set this year in Vega. Monies for the $130,880 grant are provided from oil overcharge settlements of 1987 state lawsuits with two major oil companies and require 30 percent cost-sharing by Solar Associates.

THE COUNTY'S COURTHOUSE

BY JOHN WAYNE MESSER Hereford Junior High

Deaf Smith County was estabcreated as an unincorporated county produced 16 bushels per acre and was with Oldham County as county seat. On Oct. 10, 1890 in a town named La Plata, the first commissioners court was put together by appointed sheriff J.M. Cook. The next day, the court The year before, Irish potatoes, with consisted of County Judge Dean and or without irrigation, grew well and commissioners Miner, Powers and produced high yields. Alfalfa and Skeins. During this meeting, they decided to advertise for bids on the construction of a courthouse. On Oct. 20, the location for the courthouse was chosen.

On March 21, 1891, a bid was accepted from John H. White for $41,900. In this contract, it stated that the courthouse was to be a single story frame building and that it should have two heavy double doors three feet by eight feet with transoms. There were to be two windows in each of the doors. The courthouse was also to have two rooms in the rear of the building with a five-foot wide hall in between. The commissioners wanted all of the work to be done with superior quality. All of the lumber used was transported from M.T. Jones Lumber Co. in Amarillo.

This courthouse was to be moved on Sept. 27, 1898 to the intersection of "La Plate to Dimmitt" and "La Plate to Canyon" city roads. This spot was near the railroad. The people of La Plata moved the courthouse by wagons and horses. A town named Hereford was established where the courthouse was located. This building soon became inadequate and was considered a fire hazard. So, talk of the construction of a new courthouse began.

In 1907, the county put up $50,000 in bonds to pay for the new courthouse. Then, contractors started making bids. The commissioners received a proposal of $118,000 from Falls City Construction Co. The $118,000 was exceptionally more than the proposed $50,000. Yet, after much debate, they decided to start construction and work began on March 10, 1910.

Many special details were included in the construction. It was to be a brick building with veeners of Georgian white marble both inside and out. The building was to be fireproof, and they put a fire hose inside just in case the fireproofing failed.

Also, the building had steam heating

2000 this area would be a desert. It crops. Soon after that prediction, the a 50-acre field. early settlers proved them wrong. They grew large amounts of vegetables and field crops such as alfalfa, maize, peanuts, wheat, cotton and some corn.

in 1903, the first carload of wheat was shipped by train from a farm lished on Aug. 21, 1876, and was northeast of Hereford. The wheat grown on a dryland farm. In 1904, 500 acres of cotton was planted. That same yer a cotton gin was built for a total cost of $2,500. produced high yields. Alfalfa and grain sorghum also grew well that same year. In February 1905, G.R. Jowell dug

Deaf Smith County's first test well for irrigation purposes. The well was 10 inches wide and 100 feet deep. It pumped from between 188 to 280 gallons per minute. Corn was grown using this test well to water it on the J.R. Robinson farm in 1906. The corn produced 40 bushels per acre on an average of 10 bushels per acre on dryland farms. A plan for a flour mill in Hereford was underway. The implements used to plow, plant and harvest the land were very insufficient. One man developed a system with a bucket and holes in it.

The bucket ws filled with seed and fastened to a plow. When the plow moved down the field, the see fell out onto the ground.

The prices of crops decreased in a 50-acre field. By 1907, Deaf Smith County had 81 wheat garmers who were growing by 1907, Deaf Smith County had by 1907, De acres planted was 357,206 and the amount of crops harvested was 48,155 acres. The wheat crop failed with 2,000 acres harvested and there were 200,000 acres expected to be harvested.

Recovery from the drought was very hard and slow for the area's famrerss. A good lesson was taught to the farmers, that they needed to improve the methods they used for farming.

Solar Associates also installed a heating system in the Precinct Four barn in Deaf Smith County.

Roark said that solar heating works well in the Panhandle because of the unique situation of a cold winter's day with plenty of sunshine.

"The system needs plenty of sunshine to work during the winter we have plenty of sunny days, even when it's cold," Roark said. "However, we do have several overcast days which limits the ability

This floor traps heat that keeps the floor warm, keeping the room warm. The solar heater can effectively heat a building for up to six cloudy days.

By SAM WALLER Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces needed a win in their District 1-4A opener Friday at Pampa if hopes of a district title were to remain alive and they sorta, kinda got what they needed.

The Whitefaces came from behind twice against the Harvesters to pull out a 24-24 tie when Chris Blair came off the bench to replace starter T.J. Head and hit Leo Brown with a 20yard touchdown pass with 29 seconds left in the game and kicker Jesus Gonzales was true on the allimportant PAT.

The teams were also tied at 4-4 in 20-yard line penetrations, the first tiebreaker, but the Herd held a 22-13 edge in first downs to prompt Coach Don Cumpton to settle for the deadlock.

"Normally, we would not go for a tie in that situation," Cumpton said of the decision to kick. "But there were two factors involved. Number one is by our tying and being ahead on first downs, we still control our own destiny from here on in.

"Number two, our kids played to hard to get beat. They played their hearts out and I felt like they deserved better.

"I don't like to tie, but I feel good about it because all we have to do is take care of business every Friday night for the next four weeks. If we play like that and get better every Friday night, we've got a chance to win the district."

Cumpton added he had no idea if the Herd would be declared 1-4A champions if Pampa (2-2-1 overall, 0-0-1 in district) and Hereford (1-4-1, 0-0-1) both finish atop the league "and I really don't care.

"I know this: If us and Pampa tie in any way - for first or second or third or fifth - we are ahead of Pampa. It's exactly like Estacado in '88."

Chad Brummett got the final drive started when he returned Todd McCavit's kickoff to the Herd 19.

From there, Head directed a march to the Pampa 16 in nine plays. Greg Urbanczyk bolted for 13 yards on the first play and Head found Brown on a slant for 19 more before the Herd bogged down.

A procedure penalty left the Herd with third-and-8 at the Pampa 41 and Head was stopped after 2 yards to bring up fourth down. Head kept the Herd alive when he connected with. Art Allemand for 23 yards on a play that almost went the distance.

Pampa's Phil Sexton sacked Head on a rollout for a 4-yard loss with a crunching blow that left the quarterback more than slightly dazed. Head managed to throw the next pass out of bounds to stop the clock and Blair came on for the touchdown.

"We did it with execution and a little luck," Blair said of the score. "Coach (Cumpton) wanted to run a 64, but Pampa called time out, so he changed the play. What we did was fake a 36 and float it into the corner for Leo. He made a great catch."

Brown outjumped three Pampa defenders at the goal line to come down with the ball and fell across for the score.

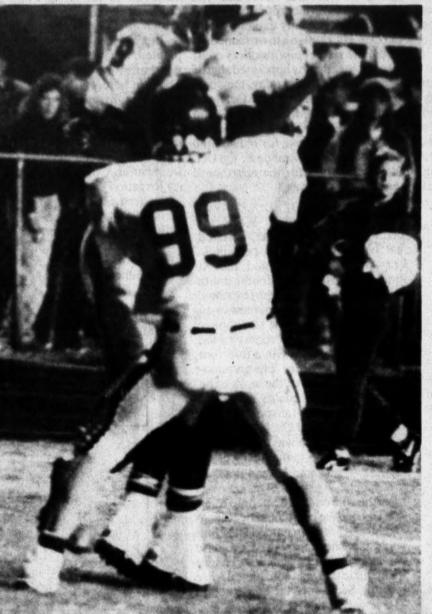

"It's great," he said of the play's outcome. "It's the best feeling I've had in a long time. I mean it's perfect.

Oddly enough, Cumpton never saw the how things went from the far side of the field, but that didn't dampen his excitement over the result.

"I'm so proud of Chris," he said. "He came in off the bench cold and made a great throw and Leo made a fantastic catch. I didn't see the catch from where I was, but from what I understand it was a great individual effort by both of them. And of course the line did a good job. They blocked good tonight."

All that was left was for Gonzales to add the conversion for Hereford to gain the advantage.

"I was just worried that I'd let the team down," Gonzales said. "You've got to do it for the team and not think about anything else. I knew I had to make it or we would have lost our position in the district to make the playoffs." Hereford came out with a more diverse attack than what was shown in non-district play. The Herd totaled 328 yards with 208 coming on the ground and a season-high 120 through the air.

Tailback Matt Bromlow led the rushing attack with 74 yards on 18 carries while Urbanczyk added 68 on 10 tries.

"I'm all for it," Urbanczyk said of his increased work load. They'd been keying on Bromlow and we just counteracted that and burned 'em. We'd fake to Bromlow and give to me on the misdirection. The line did a great job. It was just a matter of seeing the hole and getting through it."

Head completed seven of 15 passes for 100 yards with a touchdown and two interceptions while Blair finished 2-for-3 for 20 yards and a score.

Three Herd receivers had two catches each with Brown gaining 39 yards while Allemand picked up 29 and Urbanczyk 10. Brummett, Sean Smith and Brad Mason each caught one pass with Mason getting a touchdown on his reception.

The Harvesters held a slight edge in rushing yards, finishing with 223, but quarterback Logan Hudson completed only two of six passes for 6 yards.

Hudson was the games leading rusher with 75 yards on 13 carries. Hudson's bread-and-butter play was a quarterback sweep to the strong side with all three running backs providing blocking.

Herd defensive back Chris Steward said the play gave the Herd fits in the first half, but the necessary adjustments were made at intermission to slow it down.

"(Defensive coordinator) Coach (Mike) Purcell told me to start attacking the lead blocker's outside shoulder hard," Steward said. "If I couldn't tackle the quarterback I had to at least take out the lead blocker. They ran that on us so much in the first half, we went over it on the chalk board at halftime, and it (the adjustment) worked."

Fullback Zach Thomas added 58 yards on nine carries while tailback Quincy Williams toted 15 times for 53 yards and halfback Wayne Cavanaugh had eight runs for 47 yards.

The Herd spotted Pampa two quick touchdowns after first-quarter interceptions and the Harvesters wasted no time in converting either opportunity. Wayne Cavanaugh broke loose for a 27-yard score on the first play after Tony Bybee picked off a Head aerial and Zach Thomas set sail for 39 yards two plays after Sammy Laury stole another pass.

Pampa had another golden opportunity sandwiched between the two scores when Cavanaugh broke through to block Chris Tardy's punt and Mike Jones fell on the ball at the Herd 26. The Herd defense allowed a pair of short runs before separating Thomas from the ball on third down with Chris Steward coming up with the recovery.

Hereford finally got rolling after the second TD, ripping off 17 straight points in the second quarter to move into the lead.

Bromlow capped an 11-play drive covering 52 yards with a 1-yard scoring run. The Herd tailback accounted for 23 yards on the drive, which was helped along when Sean Smith hauled in a pass for 15 yards on second-and-15 from the Pampa 34.

After forcing the Harvesters to punt, Hereford started from its own 43 and used 10 plays to move in for the tying score. Brown, Urbanczyk and Head each ripped off 11-yard runs to get the Herd close before Mason made his first catch of the year standing in the endzone.

"It was a Y drag (pattern)," said Mason, who was the primary receiver on the play, "and it's usually open all the time. We just got it done this time.

Mason added that the Herd players

Here's how the tie unbinds;

By JOHN BROOKS Managing Editor

Well, the Herd just drove down the field Friday night and tied the heck out of the Pampa Harvesters, didn't they?

There might have been a few folks fit to be, well, tied when Hereford coach Don Cumpton decided to have Jesus Gonzales kick the extra point. A try for two points, if successful, would have won the game.

A try for two points, if unsuccessful, would likely have seen a petition circulated Saturday morning to legalize lynching for just a few minutes.

As it is, the tie is almost as good for the Herd as a win. Should Hereford and Pampa tie for first or second at the end of the District 1-4A season, the Whitefaces get the higher seed in the playoffs.

"It lets us control our own destiny," said Cumpton after the game. "It put us in the driver's seat, and that's just fine. I don't have a real big ego, and since we control our own destiny that's just fine.

"We played to hard to get beat. We played our heart out the whole game and especially in the fourth quarter. We deserved better than to go down there and score, go for two and not make it. I don't like to tie but all we have to do is take care of business the next four weeks."

A great baseball team has at least one great relief pitcher.

The Herd has a pretty good relief pitcher in quarterback Chris Blair. Blair has almost as many touchdown passes this season, three, as he does playing minutes. He tossed the pass to Leo Brown from 20 yards out in the last minute of Friday's game to forge the 24-24 tie.

Blair had to come in, cold from the bench, and lofted the pass to Brown along the west sidelines at Harvester Field.

"I was going to him all the way," Blair admitted after the game. "I saw him come open a little bit and I just him come open a little bit and I just hoped it would go in. I prayed about what I was going to do before I ran out there and it happened." Of the three touchdown passes, this one feels the best to Blair. "It feels great. It's the best feeling I've ver felt."

Blair was in because T.J: Head had been leveled by Pampa defenders on the play before ("It was the hardest I've ever been hit," Head said). Head was still groggy 15 minutes after the game, but kind of knew what was going on.

"Chris comes in cold from the bench and throws him the pass for the films. touchdown," said Head. "It's a Cinderella deal. We moved the ball all night when we had to, and Chris came in the game and he made the pass and Leo made the catch. Pretty great, isn't it?"

Cumpton was surrounded by the usual huge crowd of players, coaches and others on the Hereford sideline. His first look at the catch came Saturday morning, watching the game

"I'm so proud of Chris for making great throw, and Leo made a a fantastic catch from what I understand," Cumpton said Friday night. "This game is going to make us better, not because we tied or won it on first down but because of the way it happened. We came back two or three times, and to drive 80 yards with a little over four minutes left, no timeouts, that all shows the character of this team. We can start working toward being a good football team now, and there's still work to do."

Arlington High. Walters broke a city record by rushing for 278 yards in 39 carries as Lamar's Vikings defeated Arlington's Colts, 26-14, before a capacity crowd of 9,000.

Arlington Lamar, ranked No. 2 among the state's Class 5A teams, improved to 6-0 while handing AHS its first loss of the season.

Walters, the No. 2 rusher in 5A at mid-season, now has 1,332 yards on 171 carries - an average of almost 8 yards per carry.

"I have to say this was my best game this year - so far," said Walters, a junior. "I don't know about my career."

He broke the Arlington Independent School District rushing record for a game by two yards.

Class 5A's No. 1-ranked team Aldine was scheduled to play Houston Westbury on Saturday night. In other high school games around the state, A&M Consolidated kept its No. 1 ranking in Class 4A secure by beating Magnolia, 30-14, while Vernon, the Class 3A kingpin, knocked off Bowie, 36-6. Groveton, No. 1 in 2A, steamrolled by Centerville, 73-6, while Munday, ranked No. 1 in 1A, beat Knox City, 21-0.

Elsewhere in 5A, defending state champ Odessa Permian, ranked No. 10, was upset by longtime rival Midland Lee, 17-7, and No. 9-ranked San Antonio Jay was upset 23-20 by San Antonio Southwest.

All other 5A ranked teams won. Longview beat Lufkin 27-7, Waco beat Copperas Cove 41-0, Dallas Carter embarrassed Dallas Sunset 78-8 and Tyler John Tyler beat Nacogdoches 34-12.

There were no upsets among the 4A ranked teams. Second-ranked Lubbock Estacado beat Snyder 10-3. No. 3 Bay City beat West Columbia 27-0, No. 4 McKinney beat The colony 27-10 and No. 5 West Orange Stark beat Port Neches Groves 35-14.

Junior quarterback Ken Collums led Vernon to its rout of Bowie. He threw three touchdown passes and ran for another touchdown, all in the first half.

Collums and other Vernon starters gave way to the reserves early in the third quarter. By then, he already was 10 of 13 for 196 yareds passing. Aaron Williams, who caught a 58-yard touchdown pass from Collums, played quarterback in the second half and threw a 53-yard TD pass to David Garza.

Vernon lost six fumbles in the game, including five in the second half after the substitutes took over.

In other 3A games, No. 2-ranked Southlake Carroll beat Decatur 30-0, No. 3 Ballinger beat Abilene Wylie 22-9, fourth-ranked Gladewater overwhelmed Spring Hill 42-3, and No. 5 Atlanta beat Pittsburg 44-0.

In 2A, Pilot Point stayed on Groveton's heels with a 27-20 victory over Bells. No. 3 Schulenburg beat Lexington 26-15, No. 4 Farmersville shut out Community 63-0, and No. 5 Grand Saline blanked Quitman 23-0. Italy, ranked No. 2 in 1A, beat Wortham 17-0. Third-ranked Farwell beat Bovina 36-0, No. 4 Spur beat Crowell 69-12, and No. 5 Bartlett defeated Jarrell 53-10.

IRVING (AP) - It won't be remembered as one of the greatest moments in NFL history.

But it might be recalled by historians decades hence as one of the benchmarks in Jimmy Johnson's stumbling start as an NFL coach.

The Dallas Cowboys 14-10 victory over Tampa Bay was a morale injection Johnson had to have because some players were losing faith in his way of doing business.

No team - ice hockey, rugby, or lacrosse - ever needed a confidence-boosting victory like those hard scrabble 'Pokes at Valley Ranch.

After defeating San Diego in the opener thanks to Chargers Coach Dan Henning's mistaken decision to try a fake punt, the Cowboys played three games where they had no chance of winning: twice against the New York Giants and once against the Washington Redskins.

The Cowboys didn't look good losing, either, although they had their moments against the Redskins.

Johnson was becoming impatient with his team and even challenged them to start doing what they were sacked Aikman three times with blindside blitzes. There were several other occasions where Thomas decked Aikman after the pass was thrown. Running back Emmitt Smith's continued progress should help, but the Cowboys will have to spend some of their numerous draft picks on help in the offensive line. Johnson has vowed the next draft will be dedicated to finding defensive players. Smith is going to be worth every dollar Jerry Jones pays him. He's as fast and as shifty as Tony Dorsett in the 1970s and much tougher. Smith runs north-south. Sometimes Dorsett ran east-to-west then west-to-east.

Wannstedt has the Cowboys playing a full day's play for a full day's pay? Anyway, the Tampa Bay victory was what the guys in the white coats call "positive reinforcement."

After the game, which also doubled Dallas victory total last year, Johnson could say: See. Stick with me. I know the answers. Work hard and I'll eventually put a world championship ring on your finger.

The Tampa Bay victory won't buy a diamond, but it buys Johnson some time for his theories, formulas, and philosophy.

And even Vince Lombardi and Tom Landry needed time.

Cowboys ready to take on Phoenix

That's the way the Cowboys are talking heading into Sunday's NFL determined." game here against the Phoenix Cardinals, Dallas, 1-15 last year, is off to a surprising 2-3 start this season.

Several Cowboys were quoted this week as saying there's no reason why they shouldn't make the playoffs.

"I really think those statements were made tongue-in-check," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "I don't think it hurts our guys to have high expectations. But in the situation we're in, I'm looking from week to week.

"I think, more than anything else, we have a chance to be a little more in order to get rid of the ball consistent than a year ago. We had so many players coming in and out last year, we did not have any continuity. for things to develop. The last two

Last week, Dallas upset Tampa Bay 14-10 as rookie Emmitt Smith rushed for 121 yards on 23 carries and scored the game-winning touchdown on a 14-yard run early in the fourth quarter.

Smith has 225 yards and three TDs on 60 carries so far while Troy Aikman has completed 84 of 140 passes for 915 yards and three touchdowns despite seven interceptions and 18 sacks.

Aikman has been sacked only three times and thrown two interceptions in the last two games, however.

We've changed up some things quicker," Aikman said. "I'm making the reads guicker instead of waiting season, I was pretty banged up. I got sacked eight times against Washington (in a 19-15 loss Sept. 23).

"But up until Emmitt got here, we really had no running game to speak of. It held us down offensively because teams knew we had to throw the football and they put a lot of pressure on our passing game. With Emmitt now, we're a lot more balanced attack and things are opening up better."

Things aren't opening up for the Cardinals, who have been outscored 52-7 in the combined second halves of their last two games - losses to New Orleans (28-7) and Washington (38-10).

"We got to block and tackle better. It's all technique," he said. "The guys are playing hard. But we got to play mistake-free. Our mistakes are magnified. We make a couple and we're down 14-0.

"For us to win, we got to be relentless and play with great enthusiasm. All three phases offense, defense and special teams have to play with reckless abandon. We got to be completely focused for 60 minutes.

"We'd be remiss to think we can beat the Cowboys easily. They're a completely different team than last year and they're winning games by running the football and having a good defensive formula. It should be an interesting game."

Dallas leads the series 32-21-1 with 27 wins in the past 36 games. last three meetings with last year's season sweep being their first since 1970.

ouston remem rs rout

HOUSTON (AP) - This is "Remember the Rout" week for the Houston Oilers and amnesia time for Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche.

The Oilers are keenly aware of the 61-7 embarrassment they received from the Bengals last December. They aren't too vocal about saying so, but they are looking for payback time Sunday in the Astrodome, where the Bengals haven't won since 1984.

The Oilers memory of Cincinnati in December is crystal clear.

They can see the Bengals succeeding with an onsides kick (Wyche called it a pooch kick) after taking a 45-0 lead; quarterback Boomer Esiasion still chunking until the score went to 52-0 late in the third quarter and finally Jim Breech's 30-yard field goal with 12 seconds left in the game.

Wyche's post-game comments also are embedded in Oiler memories. He called the Oilers the most undisciplined team he'd ever seen and wished there could have been a fifth quarter so his team could score more points.

Wyche flatly denies running up the score against the Oilers and former coach Jerry Glanville, with whom explained. "I guess you don't Wyche feuded throughout last season. understand the difference. A pooch

'We didn't try to run the score up on them," Wyche said. "There is no such thing in the NFL as running up the score. That's a nice little by-line for you guys (sports writers). But people in the business understand that's not the case."

Oilers quarterback Warren Moon is in the business and he thinks the Bengals ran up the score.

There were a lot of indications that he did (run up the score)," Moon said. "From talking to some of his players, he did. But I don't think a coach would ever admit that he did run up a score."

Wyche lectured a writer during a midweck conference call on the difference between an onsides kick and a pooch kick. He said the Bengals used the pooch kick as an offensive strategy to get the linemen on the Oilers' kick receiving team to handle the ball.

"The Oilers put four offensive linemen in the wedge so we said we were going to pooch kick and that's Angeles. They had 21 points before not an onsides kick," Wyche the Rams knew what happened."

"They are the type of team that if they get on you early and get rolling, they can blow it open in a hurry, Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "That's what happened in Los keep the score down.

Pardee is concerned about Cincinnati's no-huddle tactics that kick is where you pooch it over the keep the Oilers from making situational substitutions. Wyche viewed Breech's field goal

'The only time you can situational substitute is when they are doing it,' Pardee said, "We've got to be able to play a whole series with the people we've got on the field."

Esiason completed 30 of 44 passes for 471 yards against the Rams, the 10th highest total in NFL history.

The Bengals blew a 21-0 lead before winning in overtime following a disruptive week in which Wyche was fined $28,000 by NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue for barring a female reporter from the Bengals' locker room.

You couldn't have more odds stacked up against you than we had last week against a good team like the Rams," Wyche said. "Somehow we fought through it and I give all the credit to our players."

The Oilers and Bengals offenses are both rolling. Houston ranked No. 6 in total offense and third in passing offense in the NFL and Cincinnati is No. 7 in total offense and fifth in passing.

The Whiteface defense came through on Pampa's second play following the kickoff to knock the ball loose from Hudson and Tardy made the recovery on the Harvester 30. Head scampered for 21 yards on an option keeper on the next play to set up Gonzales' field goal.

The Harvesters responded with a 14-play drive to go back in front just before halftime. Pampa caught a break on the kickoff, an arcing pooch kick that Blake Buckley picked out of the air at the Harvester 40. The play was nullified when Hereford was flagged for interfering with a fair catch, giving Pampa the ball on its own 46.

Hudson went to work, picking up 37 yards on the student body sweep. The Harvester signal caller kept the drive going with his only completion of the half, a 4-yarder to Cavanaugh on fourth-and-1 at the Herd 31.

After Hudson carried to the 4, Williams picked up the final yards on two tries, scoring from a yard out with 23 seconds left in the half when he just crossed the goal line on fourth down.

But this time we Head was forced to the sidelines two overcame it, other than the two plays later with leg cramps. Blair came on but had his fourth-down pass dropped to end the possession.

The Harvesters then moved to put the game away with a 15-play drive that consumed nearly eight minutes. Pampa converted a pair of third downs in the drive, but the Herd defense stiffened once the ball crossed the 10-yard line. The Harvesters moved to Hereford's 5 in the next three plays before McCavit booted a 22-yard field goal to make the score 24-17 with 4:53 remaining in the game.

NEW TESTING METHOD

Remember the old-fashioned eye chart with a big E on top and lines of letters that get smaller and smaller? It's still in effective use around the world, but now optometrists have some additional tests that may give more accurate results. One of the latest -- the Preferential Looking technique -- is a system of grid differentiation. Instead of letters, the test stimulus consists of groups of black and white stripes. The finer the grid of stripes, the harder to see. The advantage of this technique is that it can be utilized to test the visual acuity of non-verbal and/or nonliterate patients, including infants, as well as others with multiple handicaps or development delays.

YOUR EYES

Testing for visual acuity, however important, is just one part of a complete optometric examination. Your eye professional will also perform tests of a patient's depth perception, peripheral ision, coordination, and general eye health. Brought to you as a community service by

Great Plains program helps farming, wildlife

From November through May each year, powerful, sustained windstorms technical assistance and cost-sharing are almost sure to sweep across the 10 states that make up the Great Plains. If the year has been dry or worse yet one of a succession of dry years, the wind will pick up any loose soil and move it...sometimes short distances, sometimes for hundreds of miles.

The agricultural hazards of the region, dramatized by the Dust Bowl days of the 30s and another severe drought in the 50's, led Congress to create the Great Plains Conservation Program in 1956.

through the USDA's Soil Conservation Service. So far, each federal dollar invested in GPCP has yielded nearly $4 in increased agricultural income.

The GPCP works with the landowner signing a contract with the USDA, agreeing to install the conservation practices on a 3 to 10 year schedule. The USDA pays the landowner from 50-75% of the cost of each approved practice as it is completed. The landowner pays the their yields have been shaved by dry to meet domestic and export demands weather, but farmers nationally are now projected. harvesting a bumper corn crop this fall, according to new estimates by the Agriculture Department.

Production was estimated Thursday at 8.02 billion bushels, up 7 percent from last year's crop. That's the most since the 1986 harvest of 8.23 billion bushels.

However, the new estimate by the department's Agricultural Statistics Board was down 1 percent from last month's forecast of 8.12 billion bushels.

"Early in September, lack of moisture in the western Corn Belt caused deteriorating crop conditions," the board's report said. "Crop conditions lagged furthest behind in Illinois, Indiana and Missouri.'

Farmers harvested 7.53 billion bushels in 1989, and the department in its initial 1990 forecast on Aug. 9 put this fall's harvest at 7.85 billion bushels before raising it last month.

John A. Schnittker of Schnittker Associates, a Washington-based consulting firm, said the forecast is "almost equal to the amount of corn

But the bad news, he said, is that "this corn crop coincides with a glut in wheat, especially." Big wheat producers, including the United States, are subsidizing exports in an effort to unload surpluses.

The big wheat crop glutting the world market and the subsidization of wheat, pushing it below corn prices, is the real problem," Schnittker said.

Based on Oct. 1 surveys, corn ields were estimated at a record 120.3 bushels per acre harvested, compared with 116.2 bushels last year and 121.7 bushels indicated last month. The old record was 119.4 bushels in 1987.

As livestock feed, corn is the largest and most important U.S. farm crop and is essential for the production of meat, poultry and dairy products.

Consumer food prices, which rose an average of 5.8 percent in 1989, the sharpest year-to-year increase since 1981, are expected to climb an

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some of we will need in the next 12 months" additional 5 percent to 7 percent in 1990

> Soybean production, a source of high-protein meal and vegetable oil, was estimated at 1.82 billion bushels, down 5 percent from last year's harvest of 1.93 billion bushels and 1 percent below the September forecast of 1.83 billion bushels.

> Cotton production was indicated at 14.5 million bales, up 19 percent from last year's output of 12.2 million bales but down 1 percent from the September forecast.

> The revised estimates showed total wheat production at 2.74 billion bushels, up 35 percent from the 1989 harvest but down slightly from last month.

> The department's all-crops production index was reported at 111 percent of its 1977 average used for comparison, down one percentage point from September but still the highest reading since the index averaged 116 percent in 1985.

> In a related report on supply and demand for major commodities, analysts said total corn use in the 1990-91 marketing year that began Sept. 1 is expected to be about 8.095 billion bushels, including domestic and export requirements.

> With demand slightly exceeding 1990 corn production, that will mean a decrease in U.S. corn stockpiles to about 1.273 billion bushels left over by Sept. 1, 1991. But the downturn would be modest compared with 1989, when the corn stockpile plummeted from 4.26 billion bushels on Sept. 1, 1988 to 1.93 billion bushels on hand last Sept.

No significant changes were reported in the U.S. wheat supply and demand situation, and prices at the farm are expected to average $2.55 to $2.85 per bushel this marketing year from $3.72 in 1989-90.

Soybean prices at the farm were forecast at $5.70 to $7 per bushel in 1990-91, compared with $5.70 the past marketing year. That was up 20 cents on the lower end of the range in September.

Other 1990 crop estimates based on Oct. 1 indications, compared with 1989 output, included:

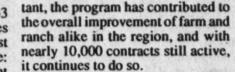

-Sorghum, 561.9 million bushels and an average yield of 60.7 bushels per acre, compared with 617.9 million and 55.4 in 1989.

-Rice, 158 million hundredweight and a yield of 5,629 pounds per acre, compared with 154.5 million and 5,749. -Peanuts, 3.36 billion pounds and yield of 1,917 pounds per acre, compared with 3.99 billion and 2,426. -Tobacco, 1.58 billion pounds and yield of 2,166 pounds per acre, compared with 1.37 billion and 2,016. -Sugar beets, 27.1 million tons and a yield of 19.89 tons per acre, compared with 25.1 million and 19.4.

Q. - My existing concrete patio is cracked badly, and I plan to replace it. How far apart should control joints be spaced?

A. - Control joints - that is, space between one section of concrete and the adjacent sections - relieve stresses in concrete that result from expansion and contraction with changing temperature. They should be spaced a maximum of 10 feet apart. You can make control joints in three ways: 1. Cut them into partially set concrete with a hand groover masonry tool. 2. Cut them into concrete, after it has been hardened, with a concrete saw. 3. Build forms with 1-by-4 or 2-by-4 strips at joint

La Madre Mia Study Club met The next meeting, scheduled for crystal organza ruffing accented by Thursday, Oct. 25, has been changed a satin bow at the waist. Susan Robbins with members to the Hereford State Bank. Carolyn bringing items and participating in a silent auction.

During a candlelight wedding ceremony, April Jeannine Haseloff became the bride of Jason Herbert Andrews Saturday evening in St. John Lutheran Church in Lariat.

Pastor Don Kirkland of Immanuel Lutheran Church of Hereford officiated at the marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Haseloff of Farwell and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Edd Andrews of Hereford.

The church altar was adorned with two brass spiral candelabra flanked by silk greenery, royal blue satin and iridescent ribbon. The altar railing was embellished with a garland of silk greenery and white stephanotis. Sonya Curtis served as maid of honor and James Andrews served his brother as best man.

Bridesmaids were Kara Camp, Leslie Monk, and Angie White. Serving as groomsmen were the groom's brother-in-law, Audie Baca and Michael Diller, and Taylor Fox.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brothers, Brian and Shawn Haseloff of Farwell.

Hanna Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Stephens of Abilene, served as flower girl. Daniel Kaltwasser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Kaltwasser, served as ring bearer. Chelsi Kaltwasser and Suzanne Baca served as candlelighters.

Margaret Aycock accompanied Molly Miller as she sang "The Twelfth of Never," and "You Light Up My Life.'

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown featuring a satin fitted bodice, overlaid with silk venice beaded sequined lace and a sweetheart neckline. The scoop back was accented with a satin bow, pearl buttons and pearl drops. The short crystal organza sleeves were accented with lace and pearl motifs and multiruffling. The cathedral length skirt extended into a train of multi-layered

A new form of processed seafoods, pseudo-shellfish, imitates the taste, texture and appearance of real shellfish, but costs a third to a half less than the real counterparts.

Imitation crab, shrimp, scallops and lobsters, found in supermarkets across the country, are actually quite nutritious as well as economical, providing a new incentive to include more low-fat, high-protein fish in your diet.

These shellfish look-alikes are made from Pacific white fish, primarily pollock. The fish is washed repeatedly to remove any color and odor and is then processed into products with the shapes, colors, taste and texture of a variety of different kinds of shellfish. Jesko, Hodge united in marriage Karen Kay Jesko and Jay Hodge, both of Albuequerque, N.M., were married during an evening ceremony Oct. 6 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The groom's father, Rev. Jesse Hodge, and Monsignor Orville Blum of St. Anthony's Catholic Church officiated for the marriage. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Jesko of Clayton, N.M. and the bridegroom is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Jesse Hodge of Raton, N.M.

The church altar was decorated by two spiral candelabra holding white tapers and entwined with pink and white roses, lilies, and greenery. Fresh flowers bouquets decorated the church.

The bride's cousin, Traci Jesko, served as maid of honor and the groom's brother, Thaddaeus Hodge served as best man.

Bridesmaids included Sheryl Cates, Bernadette James, Jamie Jesko, and Liz Ann Rivera. Serving as groomsmen were Paul Sullivan, Rodger Hodges, Robbie Christie, and Kirk Jesko, brother of the bride.

Guests were escorted by Blake Jesko, the bride's cousin, Richy Hidalgo, Adam McCrady and Tim Martin.

The groom's niece, Ashley Northness, daughter of Shawn and Radonda Northness, and Rachel Petrofes, daughter of Nancy Faulk, served as flower girls. Ring bearer was Brandon Butler, son of Mr. and

When it comes to doing things better for less, nothing works like gas. Naturally. Nothing heats your home, heats your water, cooks your food, or dries your clothes as efficiently. Or as cost-effectively. Or as cleanly.

What's more, no other form of energy helps to protect our environment - or our economy - quite like natural gas. Leading scientists state that the use of natural gas can guard against many of the environmental problems facing us today. And, virtually all of the natural gas we consume in the United States is produced right here in North America.

Clare, Borman named artists of the month

Fame and Western Heritage Center, located in Hereford, selects original art work each month for the "Feature Artist of the Month" recognition. October's art exhibit will focus on the cowgirl. The western art show will display the original cowgirl of the authentic old west and today's contemporary cowgirl.

October's exhibit will be a unique display featuring two artists: Dixie Clare of Cripple Creek, Colo. and her longtime friend, cowboy artist Phil

Bob Borman of Alpine. Clare combines both ranch life and the content of art to deliver a slightly different style than the traditional western art. Her strong art influence comes from growing up in the mountains of Colorado where she studied fine art and Gunnison and commercial art at Pikes Peak College. Her paintings depict a variety of mediums including acrylic, pencil and scratchboard.

The National Cowgirl Hall of Clare is a full time artist whose hobbies include them roping at rodeos and performing as a musician with her guitar.

Clare's work is displayed at Gambles Fame and Art in Canyon and The Crucible in Cripple Creek, Colo. Her art has received many awards and has increased in popularity. Later this year she has been scheduled to. A cowboy by trade, he has roped, ridden fences, branded and worked cattle. NEW YORK (AP) - Celebrate October as National Pizza Month with homemade pizza. For your own California Pizza, follow these tips from Larry Flax and Rick Rosenfield, founders of California Pizza Kitchen:

- No pizza is too creative. Try your favorite flavors and combinations including peanut butter and jelly, or bacon, lettuce and tomato.

Always balance your toppings. Never have one flavor stand out more than another.

- Use fresh, not dried herbs. - When making the crust, roll out the dough so it is evenly round. Build the crust by pushing one hand in to the other edge of the dough. - Keep the crust thin. Let the toppings be the pizza's main feature.

Not all ingredients need to be baked. Try topping your pizza with additional items after it comes out of the oven.

Greenhouses for people

Sunshine. It's good for you and your plants but, do you know the difference between a greenhouse and a solarium? If you want to exercise your green thumb, don't confuse a growing space with a space to grow. A solarium and a horticultural greenhouse may look similar but, they are designed to meet entirely different needs.

As a growing space, a greenhouse provides an environment ideally suited for nurturing plants. Look for circulation of air for plant respiration. Make sure that the glass is durable and of high quality, with the insulation necessary for your climate. Further, humidity control devices should be included to suit your varieties of flowers or vegetables.

For a space to grow, a solarium is ideal for expanding family living space. It affords bright, year-round exposure to the outside, plus spaciousness, elegance and style to your home.Its heat and temperature controls however, are for people-not plants.

The degree of warmth and percentage of humidity do not provide the ideal setting for plants. This is the most common mistake made when making a choice between a solarium and a horticultural greenhouse.

Greenhouse sizes range from the small, low-budget styles for town homes and limited spaces, to larger, free standing models.

NEW YORK (AP) - Ugly giants and unsteady bridges are preying on Whitney Houston's mind these days.

The 25-year-old singer said she has spent the time since two consecutive No. 1 albums making new friends, learning about business and trying to decipher her recurring dreams.

In one, a statue turns into an ugly giant "8 or 9 feet tall, kind of discolored," she said in the October issue of Life magazine. "He's always running after me but never gets me."

Another dream has her crossing the George Washington Bridge between her home state of New Jersey and New York City.

"The bridge starts swinging," Ms. Houston said. "It's raining and snowing and sleeting. It's so windy the bridge turns upside down. But I'm making it, I'm making it across. "And when I'm almost there, a career in Europe. While in military service with the Belgian Air Force, Tony recorded his first hit, "The Song of the Sea." With the success of this song in Europe, his career expanded to include singing engagements on the Riviera and starring roles in German/Italian musicals and movies, along with his own television show in Munich.

Along with Gregorian training, he received a well-rounded musical education. In College his studies included medicine, higher mathematics, Latin, Greek, French, German, Flemish and English. His fluency in Italian and Spanish developed later during his singing

Over the past 28 years Tony Sandler has developed an easy, relaxed charm which has endeared him to audiences around the world.

DEAR READERS: I want to apologize in advance to the 6,500 folks who wrote to say they do not care for the Gems at the foot of my column. Sorry, folks, you are stuck with them.

More than 56,000 readers have voted to keep the Gems. I won't bore you with the positive responses because they all said approximately the same thing the opinion of a great many readers when she wrote, "The Gems give us a lift, especially after a letter that is depressing and sad. Please don't discontinue them." Mr. please, Ann. They are corny, dumb L.D., Lorain, Ohio, was somewhat more combative. He wrote, "I think the Gems are terrific. If C.C. of Chicago doesn't like them he can pass them over and go straight to whatever turns him on.'

The comments from those opposed to the Gems ranged from hilarious to humbling. Take a peak over my shoulder and see what I've been getting.

BY REBECCA WALLS On the surface, Glenn Michael Souther appeared to be a typical midwesterner from Indiana, a choirboy, an all American kid. But the facts reveal Souther as a cruel trickster, who resented his father with a passion.

Leading a double life Souther became a Soviet mole capable of betraying America's most highly classified secrets. Souther, a U.S. Navy photographer despite clear cut warning signs, was assigned to a highly classified intelligence center where he was privy to the "Black Vault" containing actual war plans. As early as 1980 Souther's own wife confessed to knowing Glenn was a spy. In 1988 Souther created a sensation by suddenly emerging on Soviet Union's national security.

What would make an American want to become a Soviet mole capable of betraying America's Hbomb plans? What is an American traitor like? What would his wife be like after defecting to the Soviet Union? The answer to these and many other questions can be found in The Spy In The Russian Club by Ronald Kessler.

The Amazon basin is the home of over 15 million species of plants and animals such as; the seven inch Blue Morpho butterfly; the type of rubber tree that bears exploding fruit which shoots its seeds at a distance of 20 yards; and the three-toed-sloth that carries dozens of species of insects and algae in its matted fur.

In the Amazon Rain Forest the burning season is the time of year when the region's wealthy ranchers set their world on fire in an effort to gain more land.

and Annabell are married in the cathedral's lovely Bethlehem Chapel, and soon thereafter a violent murder shatters the tranquility of the church community.

Trying to avoid outside entanglements Mac and Annabell adjust to marriage, devoted to each other and their work. But soon they find themselves drawn into the harsh and unholy realities of murder. In Double Wedding by William Katz, Bret and Sarah Lewis, the model Washington couple, are celebrating their wedding anniversary. As part of the celebration they have decided to renew their marital vows in a double ceremony with dearest friends Shel and Ramy Jordon, commemorating their double wedding twenty years earlier. Trouble disrupts the nostalgic mood whenever Shel and Sarah discover that Bret and Ramy are having an affair. Bret and Ramy are busy plotting a fake act of terrorism to dispose of their spouses. That may not be all. This cleverly suspenseful novel delivers an entertaining blend of high tension and humor that will delight and surprise readers with each page. Ruth Rendell's belief that "crimes are more often committed out of fear than out of wickedness" is the basis of her new novel Going Wrong. Guy Curran has been a prisoner of obsessive love since his teenage years. Leonora Chisholm unknowingly holds the key to Guy's obsession and has rejected his nouveau-riche miliew."

Guy is convinced that Leonora's rejection is a result of his drug dealings becoming known. Struggling with a distorted reality Guy orders the murder of the Chisholm family member he feels is responsible for "turning Leonora against him." Later Guy becomes unsure of the correct target so he as time passed led the struggle to save redirects the killer, then again ... Calgary, Alverta: Four thumbs down on the Gems. (My wife doesn't care for them either.) Why a writer who is as original and witty as you would want to pick up some dumb stuff from other writers is beyond us.

Chicago: I'm casting my vote against the Gems. And while you're at it, please stop running recipes, lists and those incredibly stupid "inspirational pieces that bore the pants off people.

So, dear readers, in spite of the biting comments, an 8-to-1 verdict in favor of Gems is a clear mandate. They shall continue.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My parents divorced 14 years ago and have not spoken a civil word to one another since.

My sister and I have been struggling for years while planning holidays, graduations and weddings to avoid as much conflict as possible. We are now approaching our baby showers with the same tensions. My mother would no sooner invite my stepmother to her daughters' baby shower than jump off the Golden Gate Bridge. My father, however, has made it clear that enough time has passed since the divorce and that his wife should be included in these events regardless of my mother's feelings.

Once again we are attempting to make decisions that will please everybody. We are exhausted from the tension and sick and tired of walking on eggs, but there seems to be no way out of this trap. Can you

DEAR BURNED IN PHILLY: It's the same old story -- a divorced parent trying to inflict more pain on the "culprit" by enlisting the help of the children.

Don't go for it. You are grownups now and capable of making decisions based on how YOU feel about your father's wife. If you like her and would choose her as a friend, include her. If not, leave her off the guest list and stop feeling that you must defend yourselves.

"Here are two reasons we decided to move to this area from California."

"This is a great place to raise a family. We particularly like the school system and how the adults take part - no matter how busy they are.

"Our decision to move here was made with our eyes wide open. Since I was born and grew up here, then spent over twelve years in California, we were able to weigh one area's advantages against the other. And we decided to come here. It has turned out to be a smart move.

New ways to please your kids at lunch

NEW YORK (AP) - Name 100 delicious, nutritious recipes to pack in your kids' school lunches. 1 -Sesame Cheese Sticks, 2 - Meredith's Peanut Butter Cookies, 3 - Roast Beef Wrappers...

The other 97 recipes can also be found in "The Penny Whistle Lunch Box Book" by Meredith Brokaw and Annie Gilbar (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, New York; $9.95), authors of the bestselling "Penny Whistle Party Planner" and the "Penny Whistle Halloween Book."

This attractive, soft-cover cookbook, shaped like a bright yellow lunch box, is filled with recipes for breads, cheese, eggs, milk, vegetables, fruits, meats, poultry, desserts - and more.

The cookbook contains tips for planning, preparing and packing the lunch box; nutritional information; pantry suggestions; and menus that will carry a busy family through a month of school lunches. MORE THAN A

PEANUT BUTTER SANDWICH

Tired of packing that same old peanut butter sandwich with an apple, some cookies and a container of milk? (Think how your child must feel!)

With "The Penny Whistle Lunch Box Book," you can pack Guacamole Tacos, Crunchy Salad, Tortilla Chips and Joanna's Meringue Kisses; Roast Beef Wrappers, homemade Potato Chips, Sweet Pea Salad and Apple Kabobs; Tuna Swirls, Tom's Homemade Granola, Carrot Cake and Smoothie.

Sound interesting? Appetizing? Perhaps even fun? That's the idea! Packing lunch shouldn't be a hassle, but it's one of the things that mothers dread the most," Gilbar, the busy mother of two children, said in an interview here.

She estimates that every child will take about 1,700 lunch boxes or bags to school. And therein lies the problem. So many lunches! So little time! Such fussy appetites! Gilbar's daughter only wanted tuna on wheat bread, dry, no lettuce or tomato. Veronica Chambers' children wanted more sweets. Ronna Gordon, a champion lunch-box packer, finally ran out of absolutely everything, and had to make a mustard sandwich with bacon on the side.

CREATIVE SOLUTIONS

Gilbar and Brokaw began talking to their friends, teachers, chefs, pediatricians, nutritionists - "anyone who had ever put anything edible in a child's lunch box," Gilbar said. They gathered nutritious - and delicious recipes including Turkey on a Stick, Fruit Roll, Chicken Drummettes, homemade potato chips, wontons and fortune cookies.

They also found other ways to make lunch more exciting.

"Presentation of food is as important to children as it is to adults," says Gilbar. "What adult would want to eat a peanut butter sandwich stuck in a plastic bag with the crusts still on the bread?"

Gilbar uses cookie cutters to make sandwiches in interesting shapes. Some other ideas: send jokes, riddles and notes ("Hi! Mom sent me! URGR 8!); place stickers on the outside of paper lunch bags, or use a funny stamp.

NUTRITION IS IMPORTANT Kids don't need a lot of sugar, salt or fat, Gilbar says, but lunch won't be nutritious if your child won't eat it. Therefore, she says, it's a good idea to be a little flexible when responding to kids' lunch-box requests, no matter how sticky or gooey.

For example, when Gilbar's son decided he wanted a chocolate donut for his lunch box, she packed it for him but only twice a month.

Donnie Smith packed graham cracker sandwiches filled with peanut butter and marshmallow whip. "I figured all that protein in the peanut butter made up for the sugar in the marshmallows," she explains in the book.

Veronica Chambers took another approach. Finally weary of hearing her children continually whine for sugar, she dug into her leftover Halloween candy bag and filled their boxes with all the sugar-saturated foods she could find. Her children quickly discovered how much they needed healthy food. A HANDY REFERENCE

You're sure to find many useful suggestions in "The Penny Whistle Lunch Box Book" to make lunch more delicious, imaginative and enjoyable for you and your child.

Q. I've just moved from Illinois to Colorado. Does the higher altitude affect processing times

A. Yes. Most processing times and temperatures are for altitudes of 1,000 feet above sea level or lower. For boiling-water canning, you must use a longer processing time. For pressure canning, the processing times remain the same but higher pressures are used. Call your local county extension agent for detailed instructions for your area.

Q. I left some clothing in the dryer a little too long and it was all wrinkled. Is there an easy method to quickly unwrinkle them without rewashing or ironing forever and ever? - A Reader, Provo, Utah

A. There sure is. Simply add a large damp bath towel to a small load of clothes in the dryer. Turn the dryer on and let it run for about 15 minutes and remove the clothes promptly when they are dry. They should be wrinkle-free or just need minor touch-ups. - Heloise MISHAPS AND MISTAKES

Dear Heloise: I have a wooden coffee table and I noticed little round spots where the finish was rubbed off. I couldn't figure out what was causing them and they were ruining the appearance of the table.

While polishing my nails at the table, a drop of polish remover dripped on it and dissolved the finish! I realized this was what was causing the problem.

I had to refinish the whole table and I sure won't polish my nails there anymore. - Cynthia Smith, San An-

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) -Tennessee Ernie Ford and George Jones top the latest list of nominees for the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Also nominated Thursday by the Country Music Association were Don Gibson, The Louvin Brothers and Webb Pierce. Only one of the performers will be inducted at the association's award show Oct. 8.

Ford, known as "The OI" Peapicker" had a string of hits starting in the late 1940s including "Mule Train" and "Sixteen Tons," which sold 4 million copies. Jones is credited with influencing hundreds of contemporary artists. He began turning out country hits in the mid-1950s.

Gibson is the writer of "Sweet Dreams" and "Oh Lonesome Me." Pierce was a Grand Ole Opry star with such songs as "Wondering" and 'Texas Sand."

The Louvin Brothers' singing and songwriting career was short, with Ira and Charlie Loudermilk joining the Opry in 1955 and breaking up in 1963. Ira Loudermilk was killed in a car wreck two years later.
