Prison proposal will be delivered Tuesday

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Five weeks of intense work by the Hereford Prison Task Force will come to an abrupt end Tuesday when 11 copies of a 150-plus-page proposal are hand-delivered to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in Huntsville.

O.G. (Speedy) Nieman, chairman of the local group, and Mike Hatley, the group's coordinator, will fly to Houston early Tuesday. They will then drive to Huntsville to deliver the documents to the TDCJ staff.

Today, Nieman, Hatley, Tom Simons and Tom LeGate will be reviewing the document for the last time. Simons (Deaf Smith County Judge) and LeGate (Hereford mayor) are the vice chairmen of the group.

The proposal ranges from providing utilities to the site to incentives to the TDCJ for locating a prison in Hereford. The site is about five miles east of Hereford, southeast of the Hereford Municipal Airport. Hereford is one of over 100 communities in Texas that will be trying to land a prison or other facility. The TDCJ will build 12 maximum-security and 12 medium-to-minimum-security prisons in the state. Also funded by a bond election passed last year will be several chemical dependency treatment centers.

The group is not yet willing to release the incentives that will be offered to the TDCJ if a prison is located in Deaf Smith County. The total package, including incentives, is worth over $2.5 million. Also included in the proposal:

--Enough land to produce the vegetable needs of the TDCJ.

--The City of Hereford will extend water and sewer service to the site for a cost of about $1.6 million. The city will recoup part of that cost through issuance of revenue bonds. City Manager Chester Nolen said earlier the cost of those revenue bonds would be about $1 a month, or $12 a year, on city water-sewer-garbage bills. The prison's water and sewer usage would also help pay back the bonds.

--The city is providing the 300-acre site for the proposed prison from property already owned by the city. The land is valued at $195,000.

--Other incentives include agricultural and health care considerations and special discounts that have been offered by local professionals and service agencies.

The proposal includes a description of a variety of local services and information on everything from soil types to the size of the labor force.

Statistics on available workers from Deaf Smith and surrounding counties are an integral part of the package. The proposal will draw attention to the availability of highly-trainable workers in Deaf Smith County, where the unemployment rate is near eight percent.

See editorial, Viewpoint, 4A

The local task force has received help from persons in those cities. Nieman is closely associated with the newspaper publishers in Lamesa and Snyder. Ron Rives, the hospital administrator, was in Lamesa when that city made its bid.

"We know what they did, and we know they were successful. We just don't know what's going to be on the table this time around," Nieman said.

Once Nieman and Hatley walk into the TDCJ offices Tuesday and turn over the 11 copies of the proposal, that will, basically, be it. There will be no changing the proposal, other than adding engineering studies of core samples taken from the site.

The TDCJ staff and members of its nine-member board will then study the proposals. Later this spring, the TDCJ board will announce the successful candidates.

In past expansions of the state prison system, the TDCJ board announced a "short list" of candidates. Those candidates then made oral presentations to the board that, according to one area leader, were almost like Broadway productions.

There will be no Broadway shows this year. TDCJ officials have said they will simply review each application, weigh each on its merits, and make its decisions on the basis of the application alone.

"All we can do now, basically, is hope and pray," said Nieman.

Working on prison proposal

Mike Hatley, coordinator of the Hereford Prison Task Force, waits for task force chairman Speedy Nieman to finish talking with vice chairman Tom LeGate on Friday. The 21-member task force has worked feverishly for five weeks to prepare the proposal, which will be submitted on Tuesday in Huntsville.

Over 100 Texas cities are in the hunt for a prison. AP's Chip Brown takes a look, Page 2A.

--Deaf Smith County will upgrade an existing county road to the site to farm-to-market road standards. That cost will be about $200,000. Deaf Smith County will also build the fence around the site.

--Electricity, natural gas, telephone and cable television facilities would be extended to the site. The phone service would come from West Texas Rural Telephone, which has a digital switching station near the site at Dawn. Hereford Cablevision will construct a new line to provide service to the prison. Southwestern Public Service (electricity) and Energas (natural gas) will extend their utilities to the site. The companies will bear the up-front costs of extending services to the site.

"I just don't know," says Nieman, shaking his head after hanging up from one of hundreds of phone conversations in recent weeks.

Nieman and others intimately involved with putting the package together are filled with doubts.

"I don't have any kind of reading on this," Nieman said. "I don't know if what we're proposing for incentives is in the ballpark or not. I guess someday we'll know."

The only yardstick the task force has to go by are proposals from Lamesa and Snyder. Those cities were successful in past efforts at landing a prison. The local proposal is based, in large part, on what those cities offered.

Morrison miffed by exclusion from reserves by Brown

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Mike Morrison, who is opposing incumbent Joe Brown in the Democratic primary for sheriff, is steamed.

Morrison, a former Hereford police officer, has been a member of the reserves for almost six years. He joined the reserves in 1986 after resigning from the Hereford Police Department.

Morrison, though, is not on the reserve force right now. Morrison says its politics.

Brown says it's the right thing to do, until the election is over. Each year, reserve deputies must receive a new commission card from the sheriff. The card gives the reserves full rights and privileges afforded any peace officer.

Morrison didn't get a card this year.

"I wondered why I hadn't gotten a commission card," Morrison said Friday. "I called a deputy and found out Robin Ruland was supposed to tell me I wasn't getting a card." Ruland is the deputy in charge of the reserve unit.

Brown said he decided that he would withhold the card until after the election.

"That way I wouldn't get him in a bind or me in a bind," Brown said Friday. "I could have sent in termination papers to Austin, but I didn't do that."

"Besides, why didn't he come in for his card like everyone else did? Everyone comes in for their commission card, but I haven't seen Mike at all. All he would have to do is come by or call me and I would be glad to talk to him. All he has to do is pick up the phone. Why should I call him? He could come by just like everyone else does every year."

Brown said he told Ruland "last week" that he was not issuing a new commission card to Morrison. "I told him I didn't want him in the

Vegetable conference is Tuesday

Re-emphasis of a safe food supply and safe environment will be one of many topics covered at the annual West Texas Vegetable Conference in Hereford on Tuesday.

The conference will be held at the Hereford Community Center, at Park and Ave. C, from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. The $25 registration fee will include lunch.

Many speakers will cover a broad range of topics. Exhibits in the ballroom will feature the latest products from agricultural manufacturers.

Producers may obtain four continuing education units for the morning session and two units for the afternoon session. The CEU's are required for all persons who apply chemicals to agricultural crops.

Topics in the morning session will include guidelines for safe re-entry of fields; compliance with immigration laws; resources for producing safe vegetables for consumers; herbicide effects; dangerous plants, and highlights of the Texas potato program.

After lunch, the annual business meeting of the High Plains Vegetable Growers and Shippers Council will be held at 1 p.m., with the program resuming at 1:30 p.m. Afternoon topics will include interaction with the media on food safety issues; timely payment for producers and shippers; the future market outlook; the new commercial driver's license; and understanding the complaint process.

Throughout the day will be close examination of the production and sale of dry beans and peas. Texas produces 150 million pounds of pinto beans annually, but only about 25 million pounds are grown in Texas. According to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, about 15,000 of the state's 18,000 acres of pinto beans are grown in the High Plains region. Pintos and other beans have a short growing season and have been successfully produced in the High Plains, according to Extension experts.

The conference is sponsored by the Extension Service, High Plains Vegetable Growers and Shippers Council, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Department of Agriculture, Texas Tech University, Deaf Smith County Extension Vegetable Development Committee and the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The annual Texas Corn Growers Association meeting will also be held Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. at the Castro County Expo Building in Dimmitt.

The morning session, beginning at 9:30, will feature State Rep. Pete Lancy, State Sen. Bill Sims, David Senter and John Ford of Washington, TCGA President Carl King, and U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius.

Following a luncheon prepared and served by Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE), the afternoon will feature the Texas Corn Producers Board's leaders including Harold Bob Bennett, Weldon Davis and Lois Wales; Ford; Elbert Harp, a TCPB consultant, and Dr. Pat Morrison, Texas A&M System University entomologist.

Sugarbeet meeting, banquet planned

Leaders from agriculture, research and industry will highlight the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association annual meeting and banquet Friday and Saturday in Hereford.

The annual business meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Hereford Community Center. The annual banquet will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

Saturday's banquet will be highlighted by Ray Wilkinson, a farm broadcaster and speaker from Raleigh, N.C. Wilkinson is president of Capital Broadcasting Co. of Raleigh and is past president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters. He served as a US delegate to a recent conference in Rome.

The Hereford Brand will present its annual Man of the Year in Agriculture Award at the banquet. The honoree is selected by a special committee each year and is presented at the banquet.

Past winners of the award include 1977, Charles Schlabs; 1978, Jim Perrin; 1979, Carl Kleuskens; 1980, Donald Hicks; 1981, Bill Cleavinger; 1982, Carl Straffuss; 1983, Jerry Roberts; 1984, Broman Brothers; 1985, F.L. Eicke; 1986, Nick Yosten; 1987, Raymond Schlabs; 1988, John Fuston; 1989, George Warner; and 1990, Bill Walden.

At the annual meeting, the morning session will be devoted to Texas Agricultural Extension Service researchers. They will review their activities over the past year at the Bushland experiment station.

The morning session will include TSBGA board elections.

During the afternoon, the leaders of several groups will be featured. TSBGA President Bill Cleavinger said the event comes at the end of a difficult harvest for both growers and Imperial Holly Sugar, which operates a major beet processing plant in Hereford. Cleavinger said the delayed harvest might force the meeting to be postponed.

"An anticipated excellent beet crop was severely hampered by early hard freezes and unseasonal rainfall," said Cleavinger. "Despite the poor crop, Imperial Holly is committed to maintaining the most efficient beet processing plant possible in Hereford."

Along with Cleavinger, the afternoon program will include Luther Markwart, executive vice president of the American Sugarbeet Growers Association; Bob Hanna, president of Imperial Holly; and Dennis Printz, manager of Holly's agricultural department in Hereford.

Hanna will address the future of Imperial Holly in Hereford. Hanna will discuss the recent $13 million expansion in Hereford which has improved the plant's ability to process beets.

Markwart, of Washington, DC, will discuss ASGA's campaign to educate Congress and the public on the benefits of the US sugar program. He will discuss the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"He is one of agriculture's most effective spokesmen, especially in the area of unfair national trade practices by the European Community and other countries," said Cleavinger.

Cleavinger, who serves as chairman of the ASGA legislative affairs committee, will also discuss GATT and other state and national issues.

Dave Thompson, the TSBGA vice president and chairman of the joint research committee between growers and Holly, said the research reports should be of interest to growers. Researchers on the program will be Dr. G.B. Thompson, director of the Texas A&M University Research Center in Amarillo; TAES Plant Pathologist Dr. Charlie Rush; and Dr. Steve Winter, TAES associate professor.

Printz will review the 1991 harvest and other aspects of the Holly ag department. Eddie Thompson, a Holly agriculturist, will update growers on a new computer data program. The program keeps track of beet production and quality for almost every beet field in the region. There are about 42,000 acres of beets grown in the region each year.

Exhibits from many companies and organizations will be featured at the Friday meeting. Many exhibitors will be contributing door prizes, including beet seed. The door prizes will be given away Friday.

Whaddaya bid? Many Texas cities are vying for new prisons along with Hereford

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
DALHART (AP) - Texas cities want cells, and they are willing to make a deal.

Officials from the Panhandle to the Rio Grande Valley are offering everything from trash pickup to twin-engine airplanes to help lure a prison, but more importantly the revenue that comes with it.

With a recession double dipping into prospects of new industry, most cities see prison bars as an economic boon.

The opportunity to bid for prison beds was made possible by an unprecedented $1.1 billion bond measure passed by Texas voters last November to build 25,300 new prison beds.

Proposals for the approximately 12 prisons to be awarded are due Wednesday, and it will be several more months before a decision is made.

Texas Department of Criminal Justice officials say more than 120 cities are expected to enter the sweepstakes. That's more than double the 46 cities that bid for prisons in 1989 and more than triple the 35 that bid in 1987.

"It says that Texas is in a deep economic recession," said TDCJ board chairman Selden Hale of Amarillo. "People understand there is a lot of construction money to be spent in these communities and a huge budget for operation costs each year and a bunch of employees to operate these units."

Even big cities such as Dallas have considered bidding for a prison, but economic honey isn't sweet enough for everyone.

"Everybody definitely agrees that prisons are needed," said Eric Kuykendall, city manager of Pilot Point, a city about 43 miles north of Dallas. "But (a survey found) it was close to 50-50 they didn't want it here."

And in Dallas, city plans to bid for a prison to be located on the city's southside were abandoned after residents angrily protested.

The total number of prison beds will be divided into 2,250-bed maximum security units, 1,000-bed medium security units and substance abuse treatment facilities constructed in 1,000-bed or 500-bed units.

A 1,000-bed unit would be an instant economic infusion for most areas, bringing in 300 jobs and $6 million in annual payroll.

But looking to prisons for economic prosperity has been less than hoped for in six Texas counties that built their own prisons hoping to lure state prisoners.

Facilities in each of the counties were supposed to house 500 state prisoners apiece, but sit empty in all but one of the counties.

The counties didn't foot the bill to pay them, but used grant money for infrastructure and at least one county used its own funds for legal fees. Now the facilities are in the hands of bond holders who are negotiating with the state to buy the empty jails with the newly issued prison bond money.

But that hasn't dimmed the hopes of others.

For Dalhart, tucked up in the northwest corner of the Panhandle, winning a prison would be the first new industry in several years for the town of about 6,000.

"We're just trying to keep what we have these days," said Greg Duggan, Dalhart's city manager, who helped compile the town's third prison bid in five years.

Duggan hopes Dalhart's proposal, which includes enough farm land to "grow all the vegetables consumed by the entire prison system," complete with irrigation, will be too much to turn down.

"With the number of mouths to feed and increased numbers in prison beds, that will become very important - how do we feed these people?" Duggan said.

Bill Barry, director of management services at the TDCJ in Huntsville, said the proposal is enticing.

"If that fits into our agricultural program, and we can grow what our needs are, then that is cutting down on our long-term costs," Barry said.

But Dalhart's proposal may have to overcome the biggest factor in the TDCJ board's decision making - politics.

State Rep. David Swinford, R-Dumas, revived legislation calling for the top 26 counties of the Panhandle to secede from Texas and form its own state.

Swinford said he proposed the bill out of frustration during efforts by the Legislature to redraw Congressional district lines.

Hale says Swinford's actions might hurt Panhandle cities such as Dalhart, Borger and Shamrock in their attempts to land a prison.

"Frankly, if that legislator wants to withdraw from the state and be serious about that, it's got to have an impact on the decision for the state to invest money there," Hale said. "I have been told by other board members they thought it would have an impact."

Swinford said Hale ought to "judge the communities on the merits of what they have to offer, not on whether I like the redistricting plan."

Joe Nisbett, executive vice president of the Dalhart Chamber of Commerce, said it was frustrating to think that hundreds of hours of preparing the city's prison proposal could be wiped out by a political squabble.

"This is something that David Swinford has come up with on his own," Nisbett said. "If he had asked the people of Borger and Dalhart, they probably would have told him that they wanted to remain with Texas."

Hale says, like it or not, politics will be a major consideration in the board's decisions.

"The prison board is going to have a tendency to support the legislators who helped them," Hale said. "People who helped you are going to get a long hard look, that's just Texas politics."

Hale is quick to point out that the board's first priorities will be the economic incentives for the state and the location of the prison in relation to hospitals, schools and utility hookups.

"We have been offered twin engine airplanes, housing, satellite dishes, irrigated land, warehouses, reduced utility rates, it's just a bunch of different things," Barry said.

"Ultimately what we are looking at is just trying to locate prisons that are beneficial to the state and benefit us operationally."

Each proposal must include 300 acres, utility hookups, garbage pickup, a 150,000-gallon water tower, roads to the site, an environmental review of the property and a deed ready to be signed over to the state.

What else is thrown in depends on each city.

"It kind of ends up being a sweepstakes," said Jerry Huffman, president of the Angelina County Chamber of Commerce in East Texas, which is also making its third prison proposal in five years.

"It's very competitive, and this time two to three times more communities are getting into it. Packaging the proposal and knowing what the prison system is going for is quite difficult."

Huffman refused to say what Angelina County's incentive package included so "others won't get any ideas about what we are doing."

Huffman said a prison would help compensate for several dozen jobs lost recently when the area's highway department office closed. He said other businesses have threatened to shut down due to the tough economy.

"We are doing everything we can to keep moving forward," Huffman said.

Joe Lopez, city manager in Raymondville in the Rio Grande Valley, said his city is desperate for a prison.

"It's nearly impossible to attract any new business here because we are always competing with Harlingen," Lopez said. "This would be the opportunity of a lifetime for people here. They are behind it. They want it."

Hale says he dreads the day months from now when the nine-member TDCJ board announces which cities will receive a prison.

"I realize that I am going to be the most hated man in Texas one day after we announce these site selections," Hale said. "But when this site selection thing is done, people will see we chose the sites fairly, and they will understand why we put them there."

James Brady

Former press spokesman living eventful life

EDITOR'S NOTE - More than 10 years after he was shot in the head during John Hinckley Jr.'s attempt to assassinate President Ronald Reagan, James Brady remains crippled and in pain, largely confined to a wheelchair. But through all his agony he still manages to laugh a lot and he doesn't want your pity. Just your support. For gun control.

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bullet pierced his brain 10 years ago and launched James S. Brady on a tour through Hell's amusement park - torturous therapy and terror at every turn.

Through it all, the former White House spokesman has maintained a seemingly indestructible sense of humor.

It's the same anything-for-a-laugh attitude that got him temporarily bounced off Ronald Reagan's campaign plane for making light of his candidate's claim that nature causes most pollution: Pointing at a forest fire, he yelled at reporters, "See: Killer trees! Killer trees!"

Not long ago, when asked the secret to his prize-winning chili, Brady answered without hesitation: "Road kill," referring to the meat of animals killed on the highway.

Shot in the head during John Hinckley Jr.'s attempt to assassinate President Reagan in March 1981, Jim Brady doesn't want your pity. He wants your support for his causes - gun control and a fair shake for people with disabilities.

He is confined now to a wheelchair most of the time. But the Bear, as Brady has called himself for years, says he continues to improve.

Slowly.

He is still in therapy several days a week. Horseback riding on a cagey mare named Bernie improves his balance, but it is agony to secure his legs in the stirrups. He takes what he calls "a pharmacy" of medications to counter the shooting's lingering aftereffects and pain.

The problem is not just that he tires after only a few steps, a far cry

'Play the hand that's dealt you.'
--James Brady

from the wild Indian dance he once performed for friends; that he can no longer go on outrageous spending sprees or roughhouse with his son, Scott; that he must wear a balloon contraption at night to cope with the incessant swelling in his left leg; that his left hand lies uselessly in his lap but still hurts constantly.

For Jim Brady, everything can be an obstacle.

"It's sheer terror to go to the bathroom, because you're standing up in a place that is marble city," he says. "And you know that if you go down, you're going to hit your head and you're going to kill yourself."

Brady, who is 51, keeps bitterness and anger in check most of the time. Still, he can work himself up to "a good rage" in 10 minutes.

"But that's, essentially, a negative exercise," he says. "Play the hand that's dealt you."

Nevertheless, the frustration and anger of a proud, smart, exuberant man who had to relearn life's most basic functions while enduring excruciating pain came through in a recent television movie about his life.

The movie, based on the book "Thumbs Up" by Mollie Dickenson, did not depict the gallant victim featured on many disease-of-the-week shows. Although that side was included, actor Beau Bridges also portrayed Brady as occasionally cantankerous and downright nasty. In one scene, he lashes out with his cane at his wife, Sarah, whose nickname is The Raccoon.

Brady maintains he is not such an ogre and that he never hit his wife, who chairs Handgun Control Inc. and cars or anything. I just don't think it would be the right thing to do until after the election. I don't have anything against Mike Morrison, but I don't need any problems. I think for the good of everyone in the department it would be wise not to have him here right now. I'm not running him out and I'm not terminating him."

Morrison said Brown's not letting him serve on the reserve force is "one of the dumbest things the man can do because I volunteer my time."

"I volunteer my time and I have enjoyed working in the reserve even though it has cost me a lot of money," Morrison said. "...If he'd just left it alone it would have been better. It didn't cost him anything. In fact, I have more experience than 90 percent, or more than that, of his deputies. It was for the benefit of the taxpayers of Deaf Smith County that I was doing my job. Now I have to turn in my radio and uniforms. I will turn them in Monday or Tuesday and let him accept it. I want to give them to him face to face because he sent someone else to do his job."

Local Roundup

Police arrest two Friday

Two persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, both for driving while intoxicated.

Reports included three counts of Class A assault and six counts of Class C assault in connection with a fight Friday in the 100 block of W. Park Ave. All parties involved in the fight went to the police department and filed charges.

Other reports included disorderly conduct in the 800 block of E. Third, 400 block of Sycamore and 300 block of Ave. J; criminal trespass in the 800 block of E. Park; trespass in the 600 block of Irving; civil matter over child custody in the 300 block of Ave. A; criminal mischief in the 500 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; aggravated sexual assault of a child in under investigation; theft of gasoline; burglary of a residence in the 900 block of Union; Class A assault in the 200 block and 600 block of Irving; and Class C assault in the 600 block of Irving.

Police issued 14 tickets Friday and investigated two minor accidents. Hereford volunteer firefighters were called to a vehicle fire at 8:47 p.m. near the intersection of U.S. highways 60 and 385.

Benefit garage sale planned

Donations are being accepted for a benefit garage sale for Operation Bootstrap, a service of Panhandle Community Services.

The sale will be held Jan. 24-26 in Amarillo. Persons who would like to donate items may take them to PCS at 603 E. Park Ave. in Hereford or call 364-5631 for pick-up of the items.

School board meets Tuesday

The Hereford School Board will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the School Administration Building.

The agenda includes professional, student and administrative reports; recognition of employees of the month; Davis Ford; a resolution on delinquent taxes; an innovative grant program; bids for computers; and revision of policies on safety and record management.

County plans Monday session

Deaf Smith County commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. Monday at the courthouse in Hereford.

The brief agenda includes appointment of a judge pro-tem and discussion of redistricting for county commission precincts.

Travis Shields, captain of the reserve unit, is Morrison's uncle. He said he supported Brown's decision not to issue the commission card at this time.

"I warned Mike last summer about electioneering while he was in uniform," Shields said Friday afternoon. "It was at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame thing (the Rhinestone Roundup) and he was doing some electioneering. I warned him about it then. Mike has also talked to some of the deputies and other people while on duty. I warned Mike not to do that while he was in uniform. I support Joe all the way on this, because I'm loyal to Joe Brown or I wouldn't be here."

"I wanted to run a clean campaign, and now there's this," Morrison said.

"Hey, if it's his experience he's talking about, let him run on that," Brown said. "I don't think Mike understands. It's just 'til it's (the election) over with. If I wanted him out I sure would have terminated him."

Miller will seek commission seat

Mike Miller, owner of the Ranch House Restaurant in Hereford, has announced his candidacy for County Commissioner from Precinct 3, subject to the Republican Primary.

Miller, 64, is the lone Republican to file in local races. There are three Democrats seeking the seat, including incumbent Troy Don Moore, Paul Hamilton and Roy Dale Messer.

Miller, 64, said he is a moderate conservative and a strong believer in the two-party system.

"It kind of irritated me that no one was running in the Republican Primary and I decided to offer myself as a candidate."

Since he has no opponent, he will face the winner of the Democratic primary in November's general election.

Great cook makes Lowake Steak House great

By RICK SMITH
 San Angelo Standard-Times
LOWAKE, Texas (AP) - Helen Fisher, 82, the Lowake Steak House's veteran cook, turns toward her grill and waves a handful of spatulas like a conductor uses a baton.
 Her steak house symphony begins. First movement: Gravy.

Half a gallon of milk flows into a heavy pan. She pours in a scoop of flour, then another, then another. Stir-stir-stir-stir-stir.
 "I don't measure anymore," she says, surveying her effort critically. "After time, you get to where it just looks right."

When the huge pot of gravy looks right, she heaves it from the fire, then drops inch-thick slabs of bread onto the grill, drumming them with butter. "Never get behind on bread," she says. "Or else, you'll get in a bind and end up making toast all day long."

Bread in the warmer, gravy on a sideburner, she surveys her domain with a critical eye.
 Pickles? Sliced and ready.
 Onions? Cut into huge rings and waiting.

The overture over, for the first time in an hour, she stops moving and relaxes.
 But only for a moment.
 It's almost noon, and, after working for 31 years in the steak house, Fisher knows that the day's real work is about to begin.

In the small, compact kitchen, day waitresses Gladys Looka and Dorine Bind make last-minute preparations: they chop radishes, wrap baking potatoes in foil, stack plates into shining towers.

At noon sharp, a farmer steps in the door.

Show time.
 "I'll have me a steak and French fries and a potato, too," he says.

"What kind of dressing you want on your salad?" restaurant owner Phil Tomlinson asks.

"Salad?" the farmer says. "Why would I want salad when I can have a steak?"

Her tools tuned, back in the kitchen, Fisher begins to play.

French fries hit the grease, sizzling.

She opens the cooler and pulls out a freshly cut steak that looks as big and thick as a Dallas phone book.

Slaps it on the grill.
 A waitress brings in another order.

"Chicken fry," she calls softly.

"Onion rings."

Fisher rolls the sliced onions first in batter, then in a bowl of buttermilk.

Then throws them in the heated oil.

"They're a little headache to make when you're busy," she says, listening to the bubble of grease on flour. But isn't the restaurant famous for her onion rings?

"Well," she says, with a modest laugh, "I have made a lot of them."

The lunch crowd continues to troop into the dining room - a remodeled former Army barracks building that has been used as a steak house since the early '50s.

Fisher picks up the tempo, plopping steaks onto the grill, carefully arranging pickles and lettuce and cheese and bacon on hamburgers, spooning gravy on top of a chicken-fried steak.

She says she never intended to spend 31 years in a steak house kitchen.

She took a dishwashing job at the restaurant in 1960 after a monstrous hail storm wiped out the crop on her family's farm near Rowena.

They needed the money from her salary, and she thought she would rather wash than cook.

"Dishes don't talk back," she says, laughing.

Before long, though, she began cooking.

And never stopped.

More orders come across the scarred wooden counter where Fisher works.

Little pieces of paper begin to stack up.

Fisher takes all in stride. Working quickly and efficiently, she pauses to make sure a steak looks just right.

Takes the time to arrange the fixin's just so on a hamburger.

Once, she admits, she got nervous when orders began stacking up.

"And the more nervous I got, the slower I got. Finally, I realized that you have to just take your time and do it right."

"Everybody's in too much of a hurry nowadays," says the woman who occasionally uses the restaurant's microwave oven but has no use for one of the things at home.

"Some things you can't rush. Cooking? Well, you can fry a chicken pretty quickly, but when you've got a thicker steak or a hamburger steak, it takes time."

"You can't just throw it on and get it off. It takes time. Cook it too fast and the outside will be too done and the inside won't be finished."

"Oh," she says, after a moment.

"I suppose you could get it done faster. But it's just not as good."

"And I won't send anything out of my kitchen looking sloppy. I guess I'm too particular about some things."

The noon crowd peaking, Fisher's steak symphony moves toward its climax.

A dozen pieces of meat sizzle on her grill.

Waitresses dart in and out, carrying platters of steak and potatoes and gravy.

From the dining room comes the soft clink of silverware and the rustle of napkins and the tinkle of ice in tea glasses.

Fisher flips steaks, turns strips of bacon, shakes a snowstorm of salt and pepper, wipes her hands on a clean towel.

More fries!
 More onion rings!

More steaks!

"Someday," the 82-year-old says, smiling, "I'll probably be too old to do this."

"Not today, though."

She slices a piece of meat with a knife that is so old and often-sharpened that its blade is worn to a dagger-sharp point.

"Not today," she says, rolling a chicken in flour, then turning to shape a pile of warm, brown onion rings into a pyramid and pausing just a moment to make sure they're right, she smiles.

"Not today."

Then, she turns back to her grill.

Fowler joins hospital staff

Paul Fowler has joined the staff of Deaf Smith General Hospital as controller for DSGH's varied departments.

Fowler began work at DSGH on Dec. 16, moving here from Lubbock. A graduate of Lubbock Christian University with a degree in accounting, he has worked at several firms in Lubbock and Dallas. He has been a member of the Optimist Club in Brownfield and the Lubbock Chapter of the Institute of Management Accountants.

At DSGH, his responsibilities will include payroll, accounts payable and production of financial statements. Fowler will work with external auditors, produce projections and analysis of future acquisitions or renovations to the hospital, and develop cash flow analysis. He is also responsible for tax reporting and compliance reporting to external agencies.

DSGH Administrator Ron Rives said he looks forward to working with Fowler.

"This previous year has been one of great change for the hospital," said Rives. "We have a lot of plans for streamlining operations and making them more effective. Paul will be instrumental in implementing some of these plans. We welcome his experience and expertise."

Fowler is engaged to Elizabeth Dunning of Lubbock. They plan to marry May 2.

Doctors are embarrassed by operation

DENVER (AP) - Embarrassed wildlife experts called off an attempt to reduce the beaver population with the long-acting contraceptive Norplant when they found out their first specimen was male.

Television cameras rolled Thursday to record the first operation to implant the birth-control device in a beaver. Beaver have become a nuisance in the Wheat Ridge suburb of Denver by gnawing trees and burrowing under paths.

The beaver had been anesthetized before veterinarian David Robinson conducted a last-minute examination and declared, "It's a male."

"The problem with beaver is their sexual organs are drawn way up inside their bodies and they're darn hard to sex," Robinson said.

Norplant, which the Food and Drug Administration approved for use by women in December 1990, consists of six matchstick-sized capsules inserted into the arm above the elbow. It's effective for about five years.

The plan was an attempt to limit the number of beaver without killing them, said Nick Fisher of Wheat Ridge's animal and park enforcement department. It was put on hold until a female beaver can be found.

PRICE QUESTIONS? PART 1

If you were to list your home, who sets the price and at what level? How can you be sure the price is not too low or too high? First, as the home owners, you set the price on your own home. The agent you choose will provide useful information to help you decide on a price, however the final decision will be yours. To make a valid decision, three types of information are needed, all of which can be provided accurately by your agent: 1. Recent sale prices of similar homes already sold. 2. Prices of similar homes currently being offered for sale. 3. Prices of similar homes which have been taken off the market, because they didn't sell (expired listings.) Each set of prices should play an important role in the price decision on your home. Part 2 next week. If you read our column, we appreciate your comments.

Speedy Nieman Community effort

Hereford and Deaf Smith County's effort to secure a prison facility will climax Wednesday when the deadline arrives for submitting an application to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. With communities across the state competing for the economic bonanza provided by a prison, the odds on being selected are slim.

Whether Hereford is chosen from among a hundred communities remains to be seen, but the Prison Task Force has made a solid effort and will submit a proposal with a great deal of merit. The proposal package took a great deal of time from many volunteers. It was accomplished in a short time frame, which was a notable achievement in itself, and this was made possible by the work of many volunteers and the cooperation of local governmental bodies. Those who worked on the project came away feeling positive and enthusiastic about the broad-based community support.

Compared with some of the proposals being presented by other communities, Hereford may not offer as much as some when judged on cash dollars being thrown into the bidding pot. But Hereford's proposal will cover the required factors, and it will offer some unique enhancements, including some options on producing vegetables for the entire prison system.

The project has been a rewarding experience for those on the task force, whose only motivation is to improve Hereford and Deaf Smith County. Even if Hereford is not selected for a prison facility, we feel the effort has been a turning point. It has changed the community attitude, and a nucleus of community volunteer leaders have stepped forward and will continue to work on other projects for the economic betterment of the community.

Babbling Brooks

You might want to check your homeowners' insurance policy so you'll be ready for the "big quake." If last Thursday's temblor was just a predecessor of the "big one," the one that will send us sliding into the Gulf of Mexico, you may be out of luck.

A Hereford woman told me Monday that her homeowners' insurance won't pay for earthquake damage.

Mona Armstrong told me the earthquake (4.7 on the Richter Scale) did some damage at their home on South Main. Some nails are poking out of the sheetrock; door jams are cracked; there are cracks around the house, and several doors were stuck and wouldn't open.

Mrs. Armstrong said the adjustor for Allstate, which carries her homeowners' insurance, said it was damage caused by the earthquake. The adjustor said that since an earthquake is not considered an act of God, there would be no money coming from the insurance.

Mrs. Armstrong said she talked to other agents in town who told her the same thing. Insurance policies in these parts apparently have no earthquake protection provisions.

Okay, will someone explain to me why the Texas Rangers will pay catcher Geno Petralli $1.3 million for the next two years, but won't pay Ruben Sierra $30 million for five years?

Petralli played in 80-odd games last season before suffering a major injury. Petralli batted a big .199. Anyone who hits less than .200 (known as the Mendoza line after shortstop Mario Mendoza, who once played for the Rangers) has no business in the major leagues, much less making 28 times what I make a year.

Of course both figures are absurd. I've never seen a baseball player worth $6 million a year. If Ruben Sierra is worth the $25 million a year the Texas Rangers are willing to pay him, Babe Ruth would be worth $100 million or more. Babe Ruth would own a team.

If Bobby Bonilla is worth the $28 million the New York Mets will pay him, then Ted Williams could pull down about $80 million a year.

And what about The Mick? If Cecil Fielder (my favorite player, since he has a body just like mine) is worth $3 million a year, Mickey Mantle would be pulling in about $90 million a year. Of course, if Mantle played today, his pay would be suspended while he went to treatment. You can't have a player coming to the park, hung over as the dickens, and hitting home runs out of the park.

I guess I'm harping on this because I am jealous. I (like dozens of major leaguers today) was all-hit, no-glove. Oh, I could catch almost anything hit to me. But I have never had an arm.

It has bugged me all my life. I can't throw a rock or a ball from here to yonder. No way.

When I was a third baseman with the mighty minor league Yankees in Dimmitt, I had to lob my throws from third to first. Why didn't I throw them on a line? They never made it to first. Jimmie and Jack Howell worked and worked and worked with me. Didn't help.

They had to play me, though. I could always hit the ball, and hit with power. I still can.

I figure I could be a designated hitter in the big leagues today and pull down a couple of million a year. Instead, people are being paid 28.5 times my annual salary to sit on the bench behind Pudge Rodriguez in Arlington, Texas.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

by Dr. Richard L. Leshner, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — Environmental activists have done a remarkable job of persuading the public that millions of plant and animal species are being driven rapidly to extinction.

In recent years, the focus has been primarily upon tropical rain forests in underdeveloped countries which, according to some estimates, have been disappearing at a rate of 1 percent each year. Based on that figure, it has been postulated that virtually all species will be extinct by the year 2025, possibly including our own.

But as is usually the case when environmentalists get wound up, there is less to this scare campaign than meets the eye. To be sure, wide swaths of biologically sensitive territory are under tremendous stress, and many species are being eradicated. This unfortunate phenomenon is a source of concern for all responsible citizens. We humans are part of an ecological chain, and are hence diminished by any disruption of its natural continuity.

But the notion that humanity and nature cannot co-exist in harmony is simply false. While extremists proclaim hysterical warnings, calmer heads in the scientific ranks offer more balanced assessments of the threat to the ecology. The reality is that thousands of species appeared and disappeared from earth long before humans arrived on the scene. Our species may or may not eventually join that ghostly parade, but nature will press on.

Much of the concern is based upon studies of species that have disappeared from islands, the data from which are then extrapolated to large land masses. But that process is logically flawed. If a species exists on only one island and dies out, it is gone for good. But species under stress on large land masses usually find refuge in adjoining regions.

Likewise, much of the data about destruction of rain forests is exaggerated. Up to half of the tropical forests cut down or burned are transformed, not into wasteland, but into secondary forest. These forests offer less sanctuary for plants and animals than primary forests do, but that does not mean they are complete ecological losses.

But perhaps the most conspicuous flaw in reports of ecological apocalypse is lack of information. Those who prophesy the destruction of millions of species have no idea how many species there are to begin with.

Nature has proven time and again a remarkable resiliency. The world abounds in verdant forest tracks that were years ago laid waste by man. Countless species of plants and animals flourish amid soaring trees, where once were only stumps and weeds. Ecological catastrophe is not inevitable. We humans are learning quickly, and may yet prove to be astute and visionary guardians of our planet.

'Flu' revives old Quayle question

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — When the flu floored the president, the health issue bounced back. And that, in turn, revives the Dan Quayle issue, just as the vice president begins campaigning for his boss and himself.

President Bush was back at his diplomatic and trade mission in Tokyo today after an overnight bout with the intestinal flu that made him so sick he collapsed at a state banquet. The ailment is ordinary, the severity of it understandable near the end of a jet-lagging 12-day foreign journey.

"It will have absolutely no effect on his reelection plans," said spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

But presidents don't get sick days without a stir; when they are stricken it is a reminder of the mortality that makes vice presidents necessary.

The White House says this ailment wasn't serious, although anybody who has had the flu doubts Bush's "I feel good" after he was helped to his feet to walk to his limousine. A day later, a wan Bush said he was "close to back to normal," but admitted, "I don't think I'll go running this afternoon."

Eight months ago, Bush was hospitalized for an irregular heartbeat, a condition traced to a thyroid ailment for which he now takes medicine daily. At that time, his doctors considered a treatment that would have required anesthesia, which might have meant Quayle would temporarily assume the powers of the presidency.

Neither the treatment nor the transfer proved necessary, but Democrats said it had people worried about Quayle as a possible successor.

At that point, there wasn't much Quayle could do in rebuttal, as he went about the routine, low-profile work of being No. 2.

Now he is the leadoff man for Bush's New Hampshire presidential primary campaign. As Quayle began a two-day campaign swing in Wednesday in Nashua, he dismissed questions about his qualifications as a potential successor by saying he is ready to do his job as necessary. But he told reporters the possibility of having to take over didn't cross his mind, because he knew Bush was not seriously ill.

Nonetheless, anything that calls attention to the succession question is political grist for the opposition, playing on misgivings about Quayle.

According to Gallup polls, more than 50 percent of Americans say they do not think him qualified to serve as president. In a November survey, 53 percent said no, 37 percent yes. Those numbers have changed little during his three years as vice president.

Bush has praised Quayle's vice presidential performance as first class, and guaranteed his spot on the ticket in 1992 long in advance. Quayle is on the letterhead, on the campaign buttons, and on the road for Bush.

A week-long Washington Post series on Quayle has been generally positive; it is to be published later this year in book form. Quayle said he wasn't asleep when the early morning call came on Bush's illness. "No, I was up reading the local newspaper," he said, smiling. It carried a lengthy account of his work as vice president, and another on his golf game.

While he's traveled to 42 foreign nations, helped raise more than $23 million as a Republican fundraiser, established himself as an administration bridge to Congress and to GOP conservatives, the vice president's job isn't a good spot for image repairs.

It's understudy work, with low visibility.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

The idea to form an "Old Texas" may have gained another supporter. According to an article in the Na. 5 edition of the Amarillo Sunday News-Globe it is now illegal to haul sugar beets on a particular stretch of highway near Plainview.

How is it possible to gain two separate understandings from the same article?

In late October a devastating freeze struck the area. Temperatures were below freezing for five consecutive days. All unharvested sugar beets were severely damaged by the unusual weather. Imperial Holly Sugar contracted almost 42,000 acres of sugar beets for the 1991 crop year. About 26,000 acres, or 60 percent, of the beets, worth $20 million, remained in the fields.

Place a common multiplier of seven against the remaining value of the crop. The High Plains economy stood to lose a staggering $140 million. Most farmers will invest $400 an acre or more for the production of one acre of beets. Harvest adds up to another $175 an acre. This is an investment of $10 million at risk.

Since farming is a capital-intensive business, most of this has been borrowed from area banks. Most of the people in the Panhandle have a stake in sugar beet crop in some form.

As is quite frequent in this part of Texas, the weather swung from one extreme to another. It rained. Because of the wet weather, farmers have been unable to get in the fields to continue with harvest in much of the area.

The unusual weather caused the remaining beets to become unstoreable and highly perishable. The shelf life of the beets went from months to days. Since the beets couldn't be stored, the region was potentially in the midst of a disaster not seen in this region since 1969. Other plans for harvest had to be developed. Imperial Holly could, at that time, by contract condemn and refused to process the severely damaged unharvested sugar beets. Can you imagine the effect this would have created throughout the economy of the High Plains?

Strategies were made by Imperial Holly and the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association to harvest and process the remaining crop. There was more rain, and farmers and processors became frustrated as fields turned into a quagmire. Time became a critical factor because each day that beets weren't harvested, the plant neared a shutdown. Beets were deteriorating in the fields. If the plant shut down, the wet weather and high cost of restarting the plant would have meant the loss of the remaining crop.

In late December, Imperial Holly said that if farmers could harvest a minimum of 3,000 tons of beets within 24 hours, the plant could remain open. Harvest seemed hopeless for the 15,000 acres of beets, worth $11 million.

The call went out to a few fields harvesters thought might be dug. Neighbors consolidated their equipment in these few fields. All available trucks were pushed and pulled through horrendous conditions. Loads were shoved out of fields through herculean effort. The possibility of saving the remaining crop and the stemming of this very real economic disaster was within our grasp.

Once again, disaster struck. Where nature has failed, our own government tried to break our backs and spirit. A few bureaucrats decided that it's time to do all they can to delay harvest at a most critical time. Citations are issued because trucks are overweighed just after exiting muddy fields with no facilities such as scales. Drivers have just threaded the eye of a needle, but they are unqualified because they don't possess the right piece of paper.

We are in the midst of the worst recession I can remember with hundreds of jobs at risk. The jobs and businesses are the backbone of our local and state property tax structure. You would think that during trying time the government would do everything it could to help the people, yet it interfered with a callous anti-business attitude.

You say, they were only doing their job. Pardon me, but I've always felt that the law is a living, breathing part of our society meant to bend and sway with the needs and necessities of a community. If our bureaucrats are filled with their own self-importance and are unable to meet the unique needs of the community, maybe it is time to form a more meaningful and responsive government.

Dear editor,

This is an open letter to junior high and high school students and teachers.

You have a unique opportunity to see a video on ultrasound, the latest advancement in medical technology and its uses in viewing the unborn, at the Pro-Life Awareness meeting, Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

You will see the unborn in their natural prenatal environment as they breathe, yawn, swallow, stick out their tongue and suck their thumbs. Ultrasound can even detect fetal heartbeats.

The meeting will last about 90 minutes. This is not a meeting to solicit funds or membership to any organization. It is simply a meeting to inform.

How many times have you turned on the news and seen a group of people being carried away by police for blockading an abortion clinic? Or legal experts debating jurisdiction? Whatever the outcome, history was being made. At this meeting there will be three men from our community who were part of this history. They were arrested, booked and some even served time in jail for their actions. You can meet and listen to and ask questions of these men. What motivated them? Was it worth it? Would they or will they do it again?

This meeting will be especially beneficial to students in biology, health, home and family, history and government classes. If you have any questions, call Janie Banner at 364-7626 or Gerald and Denise Marnell at 289-5355. Thank you.

Sincerely
Janie Banner, Gerald and Denise Marnell

Working on his popularity, Quayle told New Hampshire voters the president understands their economic plight and is working to deal with it. "We got the message," he said.

has championed the firearms-control bill named for her husband.

"I never beat The Raccoon in the boobs with my cane as one scene showed there," Brady said. "... I thought the movie made me look much meaner than I am. I'm really a pussycat."

Yet Brady did not ask that such scenes be cut.

The moviemakers did comply when he asked them to remove other segments, including one of Brady "wetting my pants, which embarrassed the hell out of me. Not that I don't do that...That's a constant problem, because the thing that tells that to stop was blown away."

Brady is as brutally honest about other frustrations, complaining at one point that he is financially dependent on his wife's income. He also receives government benefits and support from a foundation established by friends after the shooting.

"It does nothing to my sense of self-esteem not to be the breadwinner, but I'm not, and she constantly reminds me of that," says the former impulse buyer. "She's a loving wife," he says, but she's "not Mother Teresa." Sarah Brady agrees.

A voluble man, Brady speaks with far more humor and lucidity in personal conversation than he does in most public appearances. But he falls momentarily silent when asked whether he has fun in life these days.

"I'm trying to think if I've had fun in the last several months," he says quietly, tapping his cane against his wheelchair.

Then he recovers his equanimity: "I entertain myself. I think I'm a hoot."

The impediments to just getting around offer Brady plenty of fodder for wit. He knows the indignities facing disabled people who travel by air, as he's on the move about three times a week, fulfilling his roles as gun-control advocate, vice chair of the National Organization on Disability, and co-chair of the National Head Injury Foundation.

The problems can seem hilarious when described with Brady's deadpan humor and sound effects that are often impossible to describe.

One thing he hates is the so-called aisle chair - essentially a narrow, high-backed chair with straps - used on occasion to carry him up from the tarmac to the plane door.

"They get the biggest ramp men you can find and they pull you up the damn stairs, all the way up. When you get to the top, you want to go like this," he said, waving to an imaginary audience below. "Here is the trashing of this man. Watch him go up, folks."

And then there was the matchless move by one airport - location undisclosed - where, "I was loaded into a plane in the bucket of a frontloader."

"They put chains across so I couldn't roll out," he says, laughing. "The guy drove into the plane and went foomp, and the co-pilot stuck his head out the window to see if this fool on the ramp who had just driven a frontloader into his aircraft had hurt his plane or not..."

"My heart was going boom, boom, boom, boom, boom. I was afraid they were going to get me up there and go pffft with the bucket (he demonstrates a flipping motion with his hand) and then I'd go kaboom...I know frontloaders well. And I know they have minds of their own."

Watching television has its own hazards. Even Brady can't find any humor in news reports that replay film of the Hinckley attack.

Each time he sees himself get shot, Jim Brady relives the moment.

"I want to take every bit of (that) film, of that incident...and put them in a cement incinerator, slosh them with gasoline and throw a lighted cigarette in," he says.

Rather than dwelling on the hated images, Brady has focused on trying to prevent future attacks.

Brady's wife, Sarah, who joined the board of Handgun Control Inc. in 1985 and became its chair four years later, got into the gun-control movement long before Brady did.

In fact, Brady opposed her initial move.

Though he hadn't worked regularly since the shooting, he was still officially Reagan's spokesman. And at the time, Reagan didn't publicly support the so-called Brady Bill and the waiting period it required for buying handguns.

Reagan came out in favor of the bill last March - on the 10th anniversary of the shooting. His support boosted the measure's prospects, but the crime bill in which it was included failed under the weight of President Bush's threatened veto over other issues.

If the Brady Bill had been law in 1981, John Hinckley might not have been able to get a gun. "And there's a good chance that I would not be sitting in wheels today and walking with a stick." -- James Brady.

Brady contends that if the waiting period had been law in 1981, Hinckley might not have gotten a gun so easily. "And there's a good chance that I wouldn't be sitting in wheels today and walking around with a stick."

Talking about Hinckley still gets under his skin. Hinckley has been in St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington since 1982, when he was found innocent of criminal charges by reason of insanity.

Occasionally, Hinckley has asked the court to release him for a day or a weekend and sought permission several years ago to leave the country with his fiancée, a former mental patient who was found innocent by reason of insanity in the 1982 shotgun slaying of her 10-year-old daughter.

Brady has little tolerance for such requests, or for Hinckley's "extensive correspondence" with Charles Manson, the cult leader convicted in the murders of actress Sharon Tate and others two decades ago, "and all these other storybook heroes."

Hinckley has never apologized to Brady.

"Why apologize for something that you're not all that sorry about?" Brady asked.

Brady says he's in the battle for gun control for the long haul, even after the Brady Bill becomes law. Another measure he backed this year was a ban on some semi-automatic firearms and multiple-bullet ammunition clips.

The firearms have far too much power for hunting, according to

Brady. A shot fired high into the air can travel miles, he says, flying "over the brook and hitting a family that's having a picnic off somewhere. That lacks charm."

The House of Representatives voted to kill the bill in October, just one day after a man shot 22 people to death in a Killeen, Texas, cafeteria.

After the massacre, the congressman who represents Killeen, Democratic Rep. Chet Edwards, changed his mind and supported the measure. But it wasn't enough.

"I guess we're going to have to kill people in every congressional district before they get the message," Brady, a lifelong Republican, said shortly after the vote.

Brady's primary foe in the gun-control fight is the National Rifle Association, which has blocked many attempts to limit sales of firearms and ammunition.

Jim Baker, the NRA's chief lobbyist, says Brady is "a very effective lobbyist for the other side."

"His personal tragedy lends itself to an effective lobbyist," Baker says.

However, he adds, "I do think that most of the lobbying efforts are based on the obvious emotional impact that the Bradys - Jim and Sarah - bring to the issue, as opposed to a strictly factual analysis of the issues."

The Bradys deny that they rely on emotion, instead marshaling gun-related violence and death statistics to support their arguments.

And Baker had better get used to Brady.

"You can't get me out of here," Brady says.

"We Care"

John Gilliland

Every ancient culture had its own burial methods. When a Viking warrior died, his body was placed on a specially built ship, set on fire, and pushed out into a fjord. Supposedly, the fire would cleanse his soul and send him into his heaven, called Valhalla. American Indians, built a wigwag for a warrior who passed was placed on it, along with things that were valued by the warrior. Their spirit would never be able to escape to their particular heaven. Possibly, the most well known burials are the ancient Egyptians. They preserved their dead in extravagant magnificence. Today, you can see the reverence they had for the dead in our museums. Golden sarcophagi, cradles the mummified remains of their loved ones. The inside of the tombs included items that would provide help and sustenance in their after life.

Sophomores advance to tournament finals

Mid-air creativity

Angel Orosco of Hereford's junior varsity switches hands for a layup in Friday's 61-46 loss to Levelland.

Hereford's sophomore basketball team defeated the Amarillo High sophomores 53-46 Friday in the Hereford Tournament, advancing the Herd into the finals of the sophomore bracket against Pampa, a 60-33 winner over Caprock. The game was to be played at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in Whiteface Gym.

Hereford JV, however, fell 61-46 to Levelland Friday and was to face Randall for fifth place.

The sophomores took a 14-4 lead after the first quarter and made that stick. The middle quarters were even-15-15 in the second and 14-13 in the third--and Hereford withstood a 14-10 fourth quarter by the Sandies.

"We got off to a good start, did a good job of rebounding and played good defense," Coach Key Harrison said.

The sophomores got 15 points from Mark Kuper, and Josh Tice added 12 points.

In the JV game, Lovelland took leads of 17-8 after one quarter and 27-16 at the half. They scored the first four points of the third quarter, then went into a stall with five minutes left in the quarter. Lovelland scored only two more points in the quarter and Hereford scored none.

"They did a good job on that stall," Coach Oscar Rendon.

Levelland continued to stall and Hereford had to foul. They also had to foul hard, because the referees were calling a loose game. Lovelland went to the line 32 times in the fourth quarter and converted 24 shots for the bulk of their 28 points in the quarter. Hereford scored 30 in the quarter, including a run when the Herd's press resulted in some quick baskets, but they never really made it close.

Hereford got a fourth-quarter charge from Corey Scott, who hit three quick three-pointers in one stretch. He led the team with 12 points.

"They were stalling, we needed to score, and we needed the ball," Rendon said, explaining the high foul total. "It was hard for us to score once we did get the ball. They played good defense.

In other JV games Friday, it was Pampa 67, Caprock 36; Borger 58, Dimmitt 48; Canyon 55, Frenship 48; and Dumas 60, Sanford-Fritch 25.

In other sophomore games, Tascosa beat Dumas 72-40 and Borger beat Levelland 59-33.

Girls' varsity beat by Dumas' treys

The Hereford girls' varsity basketball team was victimized by three late three-pointers by Dumas' Callie Beauchamp, and the Lady Whitefaces dropped their district opener 51-48 to the Demonettes.

The boys varsity lost 78-53 to Estacado in Lubbock.

Coach Dickie Faught said the Lady Whitefaces led the game until there were three minutes left in the game. At that point, Hereford led by three, but Beauchamp hit a trey to tie, then another to take the lead. That got the Dumas crowd into the game.

"The fans were there, and when they got rolling, our kids got a little bit rattled," Faught said.

He said it was one of the best games the Lady Whitefaces had played, especially offensively, but Dumas got hot and took care of the home court advantage.

"When it got tight at the end of the game, they made the plays on their court. That's what you're supposed to do."

Jennifer Bullard led Hereford with 22 points, and Kyanne Lindley added

10 as the Lady Whitefaces fell to 7-16 on the year.

The boys' team were victims of Estacado's depth.

"They just wore us out," Hereford coach Jimmy Thomas said. "He (the Estacado coach) kept substituting. He'd put five new ones in, five new ones in. Their depth hurt us.

"I talked to their coach after the game. He said that was the best they've shot in a long time," Thomas said. "We got outrebounded. I was disappointed in that."

The Herd is now 5-14.

Hereford suffered a loss in the fourth quarter when starting point guard Richard Sanderson went out with an injury. Sanderson went up to block a shot, collided with the shooter and fell to the floor, injuring his back and wrist, Thomas said. Thomas does not yet know how serious the injuries are.

Kyle Hansen had a good game, Thomas said. Hansen led the Herd with 15 points, plus he took two charging fouls.

Leo Brown had 12 points and Sean Smith added 10.

Bulls stop Jazz

By The Associated Press

Little by little, challengers to the Chicago Bulls' role as NBA favorites are stepping aside.

Utah, leader of the Midwest Division, opened an eight-point lead in the second half against the defending champions Friday night, but the Bulls held the Jazz to 40 points in the final two periods of a 105-90 victory.

"Our defense got us back in the game," said Michael Jordan, who scored 37 points. "They didn't get their inside game going like they did in the first half."

The Jazz had their lowest point total of the season and made just 41 percent of their shots in losing their fifth consecutive road game. The victory was the ninth in 10 games for the Bulls, whose 28-5 record is the NBA's best.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 17 points, 10 under his average, while Jeff Malone scored 16.

In other games, it was Minnesota 104, Boston 94; New Jersey 104, Milwaukee 97; Philadelphia 102, the Los Angeles Clippers 90; Houston 111, Miami 107 in overtime; Detroit 86, Portland 81; Seattle 94, Dallas 82; Phoenix 118, Orlando 107; the Los Angeles Lakers 102, Denver 88; and San Antonio 128, Golden State 120.

Spurs 128, Warriors 120

Willie Anderson matched his career high with 36 points and David Robinson scored 27 as San Antonio won at Golden State.

Golden State saw its five-game winning streak ended despite 29 points each by Sarunas Marciulionis and Tim Hardaway and Chris Mullin's 25.

Timberwolves 104, Celtics 94
Minnesota, winners of just six games, ended an 11-game road losing streak and beat Boston for the second time in a week.

Gerald Glass scored 23 points and Thurl Bailey had 20 as Timberwolves coach Jimmy Rodgers won in his first trip to Boston Garden since the Celtics fired him after the 1989-90 season.

Johnson not satisfied

Cowboys look for more improvement in '92

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - By all measuring sticks, the third year of Jimmy Johnson's rule of the Dallas Cowboys was nearly a football miracle.

But it says something about Johnson's inner psyche to learn that he wasn't overjoyed about it.

"I just wish it could have been better," Johnson said shortly before taking a brief vacation to sort out the 'Pokes stunning comeback campaign.

Johnson was still stinging from a 38-6 NFC second round playoff loss to the Detroit Lions in which the Cowboys Band-Aid defense was decimated by journeyman quarterback Erik Kramer, who turned in the season's best Joe Montana impersonation.

When you are bombed by the Erik Kramers of the NFL you know something has to be done about the defense.

As owner Jerry Jones put it, the Cowboys "faked and fessed" with their defense all year, somehow posting an 11-5 regular season and upsetting the Chicago Bears in the team's first playoff game in six seasons.

There were no Pro Bowl players on the Dallas defense, yet coordinator Dave Wannstedt kept the Cowboys competitive except for two blowouts by the run-and-shoot Lions and a 24-0 thrashing by Philadelphia when the Eagles defense had its way with the offensive line.

The Dallas offense under new coordinator Norv Turner was a big hit. Wide receiver Michael Irvin and running back Emmitt Smith became the first two players from the same team to ever lead the NFL in receiving yardage and rushing yardage in the same season.

Irvin established new single season team records for pass receptions (93) and receiving yards (1,523). Smith led the NFL in rushing with 1,563 yards.

The Cowboys also have two selections in the second round and two more in the third round.

Johnson has the Cowboys rebuilding program ahead of schedule. After a 1-15 start, the Cowboys went 7-9 to earn Johnson The AP NFL Coach of the Year.

This year's 11-5 record gave the team an insight into the playoffs. It also discovered that once a team reaches that level, it's harder to fake its way to the Super Bowl. Weaknesses are magnified and picked on.

"Now we have a taste of the playoffs," Smith said. "We know what it takes to get there."

Now they'll be using those draft picks to work on staying around longer and meet Johnson's goal of becoming the first coach to win a national collegiate championship and a Super Bowl.

Even though injured starter Troy Aikman missed five games, Turner's offensive machine kept humming under Steve Beuerlein, who proved the value of keeping a competent veteran in the wings and not relying on some college kid with a clipboard.

"We learned our lesson from a year ago when Troy got hurt and the team pretty much collapsed on offense," Jones said. "That fourth round draft pick (Los Angeles Raiders) for Steve was one of the best moves we made. It saved the season for us."

Johnson had said last July in the Cowboys St. Edward's University training camp that he expected the team to be in the playoffs and win some games once it got there. The 1991 Cowboys did just that.

But Johnson also said during the regular season "we still have a long way to go."

He knows that the Cowboys need big time help defensively. You can only use so many schemes before the NFL teams have you thoroughly scouted. Detroit is a good example of what can happen when a team with average talent meets a hot-handed quarterback.

Determined to stop Barry Sanders on the run, the Cowboys saw their secondary coverage get sliced apart when Kramer found the correct receiver isolated on a single defensive back. Kramer did it time after time. The Cowboys pass rush was meek and Kramer threw three touchdown passes.

The Cowboys have six draft choices in the first three rounds and they'll be checking out the best pass rushers and defensive backs in the country.

Dallas has the 13th and 24th picks in the first round (an extra one courtesy of the Herschel Walker trade) and don't be surprised if they wheel and deal right up the ladder like they did for Emmitt Smith two years ago and Russell Maryland last year.

"We're not opposed to a trade or trading up if we think a player could make a difference for us," Jones said. "We have a lot of options and we're ready to use them."

Oilers wilted under pressure

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - There was a popular theory this season that if opponents squeezed the Houston Oilers hard enough at critical moments they would pop.

The Oilers had to beat the New York Giants in the regular season finale to gain the crucial home field advantage and first week bye.

Squeeze. The Giants jumped to a first half lead and held off the Oilers in the second half for a 24-20 victory that forced the Oilers to play in the wild card playoff round for the fifth straight year.

Pop.

NBA

The Celtics, already playing without Larry Bird and Kevin McHale because of injury, lost Robert Parish in the third quarter when he sprained his left ankle.

Reggie Lewis led the Celtics with 29 points. Parish finished with 22, leaving him three shy of 20,000 for his career.

Rockets 111, Heat 107
Vernon Maxwell hit key 3-pointers with 44 seconds left in regulation and in overtime as Houston won at Miami.

Otis Thorpe led Houston with 32 points and 14 rebounds, while Hakeem Olajuwon had 30 points, 13 rebounds and eight blocked shots. Grant Long and Rony Seikaly had 23 points apiece for Miami.

SuperSonics 94, Mavericks 82
A six-point turnaround on a single third-quarter possession turned the game around for Seattle at Dallas, which suffered its seventh consecutive loss.

Eddie Johnson scored 19 points for Seattle, and Derek Harper led the Mavericks with 27 points.

Pistons 86, Trail Blazers 81
Mark Aguirre scored 21 points and Detroit held visiting Portland to 39.8 percent shooting.

Isiah Thomas sank a 20-footer before Clyde Drexler, who led Portland with 19 points, made it 82-79 with a 3-pointer with 36 seconds left.

76ers 102, Clippers 90
Philadelphia extended its Spectrum winning streak over the Clippers franchise to 19 behind Charles Barkley's 20 points and 14 rebounds. Doc Rivers scored 23 points for the Clippers.

The Oilers sizzled in the first half on Jan. 4 against the Denver Broncos in a second round playoff game. But they cratered in the second half, committed a season high 13 penalties and failed to run out the clock in the closing minutes.

The Broncos got one final chance with 2:07 to go at their own two-yard line.

Squeeze. John Elway drove the Broncos 87 yards, fueled by two fourth down conversions, to a game winning field goal that sent the Oilers home prematurely.

Pop. It's been that kind of year the Oilers.

They won more and lost more than any Oiler team in franchise history. They won a franchise record 12 games but they were 5-5 over the second half of the season, failing at crucial times to take advantage of opportunities.

The Oilers were squeeze-popped by New England (24-20) and Pittsburgh (26-14), games they should have won and games that would have given them home field advantage in the playoffs.

Still, Coach Jack Pardee isn't ready to sink the ship and build a new one.

"There's been a lot of work done on the run-and-shoot (by defenses) the last two years and there will be more next year," Pardee said. "If they take something away, you can't just be married to what they're giving you. You've got to have good players at all positions."

There is an unidentifiable thread weaving a destructive path through the talented Oilers lineup that keeps them from attaining their full potential.

The Oilers placed more players in the Pro Bowl than any NFL team and ranked high in offensive and defensive categories and yet they are out of the playoffs early for the fifth straight season.

"There's no way to describe this feeling, it's terrible," wide receiver Haywood Jeffries said. "It felt the same way last year."

Houston needed gifts from Dallas and Miami to rally to victories and in the first round of the playoffs, they were forced to make three defensive stands on fourth down for a 17-10 victory over the New York Jets, who didn't beat a team with a winning record all season.

For all of their mental failures in 1991, there is a general feeling that minor tuning is all that's needed to help the Oilers go farther in 1992 and appease their impatient fans.

"I'm proud of our improvement this season," Pardee said. "I'm disappointed we're not playing this week, but there's no gratification in self-pity."

Pardee, completing his second season as Oilers head coach, sees steady improvement.

"When we came here this was a good team going down, now we're a good team getting better," Pardee said. "We're good enough to where we're not in a panic situation anywhere, but there are a lot of areas we're a little concerned about."

The Oilers struggled with their kicking game. Ian Howfield was waived after he missed a short field goal that would have beaten the Washington Redskins and Al Del Greco replaced him with mixed reviews.

Kick returns were another problem and despite a concentrated effort to have a better running game, the Oilers actually went in reverse.

Pardee says the Oilers are still on the road that will lead them to the Super Bowl. He says they improved 30 percent from last season and another 30 percent would get them to the big game.

The Oilers showed dramatic defensive improvement from last season, leading the AFC in total defense until injuries decreased their effectiveness late in the season. The Oilers gave up 412 points in 1989, the final year of the Jerry Glanville regime, and they've reduced that from 307 last year to 251 this season.

Pardee will spend the off season trying to take the next step, get the next 30 percent improvement while remembering: "We didn't get to where we want to go. We wanted to go to the Super Bowl."

Bledsoe honored for talents

By DANEE' WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

Jolene Bledsoe has been working for the past 15 years on something she has wanted to do all her life, paint.

She has recently been honored as Artist of the Month by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division.

"I have been painting for around 15 years," said Bledsoe. "It is something I have wanted to do all my life, but I didn't have time because I was always working."

Bledsoe started painting when she lived in California.

"I started painting on my own," she said. "Because I didn't have instruction, I didn't know what to do or when."

Since her beginnings in painting, Bledsoe has studied under Jane Whipple, Jean Lyles, Jean Green, J.D. Keel and Lee Parkinson.

Painting Indian pots is Bledsoe's favorite. "I love to paint pots. It would be all I did except I paint to sell and I know not everyone like pots like I do."

Bledsoe's paintings are oils with still life motif. She has two very special paintings that she would like to become family heirlooms.

"I painted 'Jessica' a copy of a print that always hung in my parent's home. Ever since I was a little girl I have wanted to paint 'Jessica.' I want it to be a family heirloom along with a portrait of my father I painted."

All of Bledsoe's other paintings are for sale. She has painted over 200 pieces and has turned one of the bedrooms in her home into a studio to display her work.

Over the years, Bledsoe earned art related honors. In 1953 she won "Outstanding Creation of the California Hobby Show" in ceramics. In 1954, she won first in the state of California in hand modeling ceramics.

Bledsoe has many interest and hobbies. She enjoys line dancing at Hereford Senior Citizens, crochet, needle point, skip-bo, sewing and "lunch with the girls."

She is a member of American Cancer Society where she serves as a member of the board, Hereford

Cattlewomen, Netty Slaton Circle, secretary on the board at Hereford Senior Citizens and is a reporter for the Golden Line Dancers.

Bledsoe came to Hereford from California where she had live for 40 years. She retired from Lockheed after 32 years of service to move here.

"We moved to Hereford so I could be close to my dad," said Bledsoe. "I love living in Hereford. If I didn't live here, I would move."

Bledsoe's work is displayed at the Atrium through the month of January.

Artist of the Month

Jolene Bledsoe was named Artist of the Month for January by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division. Her work is on display at the Atrium.

YOUR EYES

CONTACT LENSES AND GLASSES, TOO

Most contact lens wearers used to wear glasses. Most are glad they made the switch to contacts. Yet the truth is that contact lens wearers sometimes need glasses, too. Sunglasses are a must for eye protection and greater comfort outdoors and when driving. They reduce glare and brightness. Reading glasses may be advised for contact lens wearers. Some who wear contacts adjust well to bifocal lenses or wearing one lens for distance vision and one for close work, but others prefer supplemental reading glasses. Safety glasses should be worn by anyone who works with machinery that creates dust or throws off debris. They are also indicated for sports like racquetball, basketball and underwater swimming. Safety glasses can be ground to prescription or worn over lenses. Also needed: A pair of glasses with a current prescription to wear when eyes are tired or when contacts are lost or torn.

What WE Can See Could Save Your Life.

Breast Cancer often stays hidden for several years before it can be revealed through a conventional physical exam. A mammogram is the only way to discover breast cancer in its earliest stages. The test, conducted by a trained specialist, takes just a few minutes — a few minutes that could have life-saving results. One out of nine women will develop breast cancer. This year, 38,000 will die. Those who discover the disease early have a better chance of recovery. Call today: 364-2141, ext. 248.

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent AMERICANS GIVING MORE TO CHARITY

Americans are giving more time and money to charitable causes, according to a Gallup Poll. The average household contributed $734 or 2 percent of income in 1989, representing an increase of 20 percent after inflation, compared with 1987.

Because personal philanthropy plays an important role in the lives of Americans, it is important to determine if charity contributions meet the criteria generally considered important by fund-raising standards. Two organizations that evaluate charity groups are the National Charities Information Bureau and the Council of Better Business Bureaus' Philanthropic Advisory Service. They are independent watchdog organizations that judge charities on the basis of several standards for fund-raising, governance, financial management and public information.

Although the ratings serve as a guide for donors, donors should decide for themselves if the particular criteria used in rating a charitable organization is of importance. For example, a charitable organization that spend relatively little money on programs during a particular year may be accumulating capital for a major project to be undertaken in subsequent years. But without knowing more about a particular charity, it may be difficult to know how to judge.

One family strategy that may work is to hold monthly or quarterly family "board" meetings to discuss the options for spending the family's charitable dollars. If a family earmarks money for charities, it can be a learning experience for family members to study carefully the appeals of various charitable groups, examine ratings for the appeals, and then decide which charities will receive the family's financial contributions.

A list of the standards and detailed reports on specific charities are available from the National Charities and Information Bureau, Inc., 19 Union Square West, 6th Floor, New York, NY 10003, and the Philanthropic Advisory Service, CBBS, 4200 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, VA 22209.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Serve appetizing shrimp

Few appetizers are as simple and satisfying as a quick saute of fresh shrimp. Serve this with slices of rye bread spread with lightly salted butter, and a glass of chilled white wine.

Fresh Shrimp Sauteed in Butter.
1 pound small or medium raw shrimp in the shell
5 tablespoons unsalted butter
Sea salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste
Few drops of cognac

Rinse the shrimp under cold water and drain thoroughly.
In a large skillet, heat the butter over moderately high heat. Cook until the butter begins to brown and gives off a nutty aroma, 2 to 3 minutes. Do not let butter burn. Add the shrimp and cook, shaking the pan to evenly toss the shrimp, until they turn pink and begin to curl, 2 to 3 minutes for small shrimp, 4 to 5 minutes for medium.

Add a pinch of salt; season generously with pepper. Add a few drops of cognac; cook 1 minute more.

shell and all, into your mouth. For medium shrimp, remove the shells before serving. Makes 4 servings.
(Recipe from: "Simply French: Patricia Wells Presents the Cuisine of Joel Robuchon." William Morrow. Nov. 15, 1991. $35 hard-cover)

Transfer to a warmed serving bowl; serve immediately. To best enjoy small shrimp in the shell, pull off the head and pop the tiny shrimp.

Baby clothes and diapers get a cleaning boost when soaked with Borax.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am presently doing time in prison. I can only go out in the recreation yard three hours a day, Monday through Thursday. The only way to exercise is to do chin-ups, push-ups, stretching exercises or jogging in place. I used to jog and do a lot of weightlifting when I was in my 20s and 30s. Now that I'm near 40, I can still do a lot of exercise and jog 20 to 30 minutes in place. I still have the stamina of a young man.

My skin is all fat or loose. Will it tighten up if I lose weight? Will aerobic exercises tighten it up? Since I am going to be here awhile, I want to take advantage of the time to develop my mind, spirit and body, so I can be in good health when I get out to the free world.

DEAR READER: The skin naturally grows and becomes loose in most people as they get older. Exercise will not tighten the skin. However, as you increase muscle mass, usually with strength exercises, and your muscles enlarge, that helps to fill your body out and the loose skin is less apparent. If the exercise doesn't result in excess sun exposure with sun damage, the skin usually looks better. I hope you are able to improve yourself and learn skills you can use for a better life in the future.

Couple announce March wedding plans

Barbara Christine Wooldridge of Amarillo and John Kevin Henson announce their upcoming wedding plans.

The couple will exchange vows March 14 at Paramount Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark W. Wooldridge of Amarillo. She is a student at West Texas State University and will graduate in May with a degree in music education.

The groom graduated from West Texas State University with a degree in music education. He is an assistant band director at Hereford High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Henson of Joinerville.

CHRISTY WOOLDRIDGE, KEVIN HENSON

The phrase "facing the music," which entered into popular talk in 1785, derived from theater jargon. It originally characterized the difficulty an actor "faced" when stepping before footlights.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I soon will be celebrating our 30th wedding anniversary, and although we've been quite happy together, I can't bring myself to tell my wife something that's been bothering me since our honeymoon. When we unpacked our things in a nice little resort hotel, my wife opened a large suitcase and took out an accordion.

"Louise" had never told me she played the accordion and that she took it with her everywhere. I was flabbergasted that night as I sat through three recitals of "Lady of Spain" and an old English madrigal with some surprisingly ribald lyrics. Those are the only tunes she knows.

Our social life has always been rather quiet. Our only close friends are "Bernice" and "Murray." They come over quite often and join Louise in a rousing chorus of "Lady of Spain". Murray plays his head—that is, he raps his knuckles on his head while opening and closing his mouth, which produces changes in tone. Bernice clacks two spoons together and hums the harmony.

Ann, I've had about all I can take of this. How can I tell my wife after so many years that she is no musician and the racket is driving me crazy? Any suggestion would be greatly appreciated—Head it on Long Island

DEAR LONG ISLAND: You've been truly wonderful. Please don't blow 30 years of sainthood by losing your temper.

Surprise Louise with a dozen accordion lessons and several pieces of sheet music. Sorry, but I can't think of a thing you can do about Bernice and Murray.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing in response to "Crushed in California" who discovered her husband was having an affair when she caught him playing footsie under the card table with her best friend. She said she didn't want foolish pride to cause a divorce nobody wanted. That struck close to home.

My wife had an affair. The problem wasn't whether or not I could trust her again. It was that I couldn't put the image of "Janet" and the other man out of my head long enough for healing and forgiveness to begin.

It took almost a year to reach the point where I could give our marriage another try. When she agreed to work on putting our marriage back together, I felt like the luckiest man on earth.

Janet started to call me at work and tell me when she was going shopping.

When she was out, she'd call two and three times to let me know where she was. When she got home, she'd call again to check in with me. I found these calls a nuisance and told her so. We finally decided to see a marriage counselor. I was stunned when the counselor said she saw nothing wrong with Janet's actions and I should be pleased that she was so "attentive."

I suggested another counselor. Janet refused and we were divorced six months later. Janet says she still loves me, and I am permanently in love with her, but I can't stand her actions and she won't attempt to change. Do you see any hope here?—A Reader in Tenn.

Aluminum is the most abundant metal in the earth's crust.

DEAR TENN-: A competent counselor would have told you and Janet that her need to call you so often was not merely thoughtfulness but most likely obsessive-compulsive behavior stemming from guilt.

Now that you know Janet cannot control this, perhaps you can be more tolerant as she will consider seeing a therapist who is better trained. Good luck.

Ann Landers' latest booklet, "Nuggets and Doozies," has everything from the outrageously funny to the poignantly insightful. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Before I tell you what is on my mind I want to make it clear that I am a woman—and let me add, a wife and mother. I should also tell you that even though my husband is a career Navy officer, the views expressed in this letter are mine, not his.

I have always believed in equal rights for women and I still do, but the truth is that women and men are not now, nor will they ever be, equal. They can thank (or blame) Mother Nature.

There are now approximately 8,600 women serving in the U.S. Navy. Every year, nearly 20 percent of the women who pull ship duty get pregnant. Although fraternization is strictly against the rules, it is not possible to prevent this from happening. My husband says, "After two months at sea, there is no such thing as a homely woman."

It has been estimated that within five years, 50 percent of those who serve on American ships will be females. Training for the Navy is expensive. Pregnant women often need extra training when they go from ship duty to shore jobs. Maternity leave adds up to an extra burden to the taxpayers. It's not fair. I am not opposed to women being in the armed services but there is plenty they can do without being put on ships with men. Thanks for letting me have my say.—J.L. in Norfolk, Va.

DEAR J.L.: Your points are valid but I'm sure there are some females out there who are itching to respond. I promise to print the best letter. Readers?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will not think this problem is too trivial to publish because it has been causing me a great deal of concern.

I grew up in a family that was fairly close but no one said, "Bless you," when somebody sneezed. My husband, I'll call him Arnie, was brought up to say, "Bless you," to everyone who sneezes, even people he scarcely knows. But when I sneeze there is dead silence.

Last week I happened to be in the office where Arnie works. One of the young stenographers sneezed and he immediately said, "Bless you." A few minutes later, I sneezed and he pretended not to hear, even though I was standing right next to him.

That same evening we went to the home of friends for supper. Their well-behaved basset hound was sitting in the living room with the guests. Suddenly, the dog sneezed. Arnie said,

"Bless you." Ann, I got so angry I felt my face get hot.

In the car on the way home I really let Arnie have it. He had no explanation except the weak excuse that he didn't hear me. I asked him if it was possible that in eight years of marriage he had never once heard me sneeze yet he hears everyone else, including a dog. Still no answer from Arnie. Will you please comment? For the life of me I cannot figure this out.—Minot, N.D.

DEAR MINOT: I'm sure most people would say this is no big deal, but if it bothers you as much as you say, then it IS a big deal.

Arnie sounds as if he may be a passive-aggressive personality. These types are not openly hostile but they express their displeasure, anger and negativism in non-confrontational ways or by being totally passive—saying and doing absolutely nothing.

Can it be that Arnie is trying to get even with you for something?

Gem of the Day: Telling the truth is so much simpler. You never need to turn yourself inside out trying to remember what you said.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems" is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

There are a few Christmas decorations still up around town, but basically I think we can agree that the holidays are over. School has been in session for a whole week now, and for most of us things are what we would call normal. That means there is time to read and the Deaf Smith County Library is ready to help with a slew of new books.

Several mysteries will appear on the "new" shelf this week, including one by new author Margaret Lucke. A Relative Stranger finds private investigator Jessica Randolph receiving a late night call from her "real" father, the man who abandoned her mother years ago. He's wanted for murder and needs to prove his innocence, but "Jess" is reluctant to take the case. When one murder follows another, she finds she can't turn it down.

Double Edge by Bob Leuci presents the world of Washington, DC...the nation's political - and murder - capital. Detective Scott Ancelet is a consummate pro-unshockable, unflappable - until he sees the corpse of...well, I wouldn't want this printed in a family newspaper, but if you like lots of gory details, you'll want to read this one. Leuci, by the way, is a twenty year veteran of the NYPD, a specialist in undercover work and mob-busting. I've got a feeling this guy knows what he's talking about.

If you're more inclined toward romance than violence, we've got that, too. At least in the books. Fern Michaels is back with Texas Fury, the novel to follow Texas Rich and Texas Heat. It continues the story of the "riveting destinies" of a powerful 20th century dynasty. And model-turned-author Pat Booth offers Miami, which the publisher praises with words like "sexy," "steamy," "exotic," and "innocent" (I'll bet!).

Hey! How about a little fantasy? (Some of the wags at the library say that romance IS fantasy!) Anyway, did you ever wonder...what if Peter Pan grew up?...and what if, on a visit to London, his own children disappeared from their nursery?...and a mysterious note was left behind which let Peter back to that notorious pirate Captain Hook???? I've spent hours pondering those very questions. Thank goodness Terry Brooks has the answers in Hook! This novel is based on the screenplay of the movie that is currently taking the country by storm. And if the fate of Peter Pan does not keep you awake nights, try Endgame in Berlin by William Harrington. Current events have already somewhat outdated this book which pits two old "Cold Warriors" against each other on the American-Soviet conflict's new front: industrial espionage. Harrington, through meticulous research, presents an intriguing and convincing portrait of agents on both sides of the Berlin Wall as they struggle to find their niches in today's "new world order."

And speaking of the "new world order"...there is a lot of confusion over what is meant by the term and whether it has any relation to the New Age Movement. To help clarify the matter is Constance Cumby's #1 bestseller The Hidden Dangers Of The Rainbow-The new Age Movement and the Coming Barbarism. You may remember seeing, a few years ago, a full page newspaper or magazine ad headlined "The Christ Is Here Now." This book deals with the powers behind that ad and the movement in general. Particularly eye-opening are the comparisons between New Age and Nazism.

None Dare Call It Treason...25 Years Later takes a fresh look at John A. Stormer's original bestseller, and what has happened on the American and world scenes since it first appeared. Might be interesting to see from the perspective of current events.

Pure Cop is a unique look into the special vocabulary of law enforcement. Connie Fletcher has compiled "cop talk from the street to the specialized unit" in a hard-to-put-down "salted peanuts" format. ("Salted Peanuts" is an old library term that I just made up to describe brief paragraphs loosely gathered under a broad heading. Each paragraph is a separate unit, but the next one is so tempting!)

A couple of biographies are new this week, including Walt Garrison's Once A Cowboy, and Take My Life Please, by master comic Henny Youngman. Other non-fiction titles are Desert Storm, a Time Book, and The Smithsonian Guide to Historic America detailing information about the Desert States-NM, AZ, NV, and UT.

BY THE WAY...if you have artwork or a special collection that you would like to display at the library, please let us know. This month's display is a collection of items demonstrating the use of the printed word during WWII. I'll bet there are some things you've never seen before!

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - President Lech Walesa gave a new car to a nun whose prowess behind the wheel enabled him to keep several secret appointments when he was leader of the government's opposition and Poland was under martial law.

Sister Pauline, who is Mother Superior of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, "showed great reflexes and daredevil skills" according to a statement issued by Walesa's office Thursday.

"Despite being pursued by the secret police, she continually looked after the leader of Solidarity, managed to shake off the tail, and deliver him to his meeting place," the statement said.

Walesa, leader of the Solidarity labor union before becoming president in 1990, was imprisoned for most of 1982 after the Communist authorities imposed martial law. The union was outlawed from 1981 to 1989.

The car, a Fiat Cinquecento, will be used at a home for mentally handicapped children that is run by Sister Pauline's order.

Yesterday's News Can Be Fun

Before you bundle up your newspapers for the recycling bin, check out these activities. Not only do they enhance creativity, they're just plain fun!

For starters, have a brainstorming session with your family to come up with the many ways you can use newspapers after everyone has read their favorite sections. Your kids might come up with ideas such as:

- Wrap birthday presents with the comic section, or cut out a special comic and tuck it in someone's lunch box for a surprise.
- Dip strips of newspaper into liquid starch and make a papier-mache sculpture.
- Let your new Christmas puppy house-train on it.
- Wrap several layers around a hot casserole dish to keep the food warm when transporting it to a potluck supper.
- Clip and use the manufacturer's coupons for this week's grocery shopping.

NEW YORK (AP) - Model Christie Brinkley is being sued for $12 million by husband Billy Joel's former business manager, who says she got him fired because he drew up the couple's prenuptial agreement. Frank Weber, the brother of Joel's ex-wife, was the singer's business manager from 1980 through August 1989.

Weber claimed in court papers that Brinkley urged Joel to fire him because she "harbored ill feelings and malice" toward him over his work on the prenuptial agreement. Brinkley's lawyer, Alan R. Friedman, said the lawsuit was groundless and asked that it be dismissed.

Joel filed a $90 million lawsuit against Weber two years ago, claiming Weber stole and mismanaged his money. That case is pending. State Supreme Court Justice Edward Lehner was to hear arguments today in Weber's lawsuit. Joel's hits include "Piano Man" and "Uptown Girl."

Older kids can calculate the savings and develop an interest in cutting the family food bill.

— Fold a kid-size newspaper hat. Make a collection of them and your kids can pretend they are a pirate, Martian, policewoman or whatever they are interested in.

For a basic hat, fold one large rectangular newspaper page in half. At the top fold, bring the corners in to meet each other at the center of the page and crease. (It makes a triangle.) Fold the front bottom up to meet the triangle. Make another fold, the same size, over the triangle. Turn the hat over and repeat with back page. Tape the folds in place and open the hat. It is ready to wear. Ship ahoy!

Homemaker clubs to host introduction meeting

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent-HE
NEW EXTENSION HOMEMAKER CLUB FORMING

Are you interested in improving family finances, eating better for less money, learning better health and wellness practices, decorating for fun and profit, starting a home based business, preserving foods for family use, dressing fashionably for less?

You can learn this and more and have an opportunity to develop or sharpen leadership potential by becoming an Extension Homemaker member.

The Deaf Smith County Extension Homemaker Organization will hold an informal information program on Tuesday, January 14, at 7:00 p.m. The hour long meeting will be held in the Ballroom of the Community Center.

Extension Homemaker Clubs are formed by groups of about 5-7 homemakers who want to learn together. They meet in homes or community meeting places. Each member is involved—members learn by attending monthly meetings and by receiving training to become effective program leaders and officers. Club members teach, take part in discussions, plan recreation and participate in community projects sponsored by clubs across the county.

Deaf Smith County has 9 Extension Homemaker Clubs. Each club conducts programs in the areas of family living, clothing, nutrition, housing, health and managing family resources. Membership is available without regard to sex, age, race, socio-economic level, religion, handicap, or national origin.

You may form a homemaker club or study group by finding other homemakers with similar interests. Your county extension agent will help you organize the group or you may contact any of the 9 homemaker clubs already established for more information concerning time, place and calendars of coming events.

Currently organized clubs, times and their 1992 presidents include: BIPPUS EH CLUB meets second Wednesdays, 2:00pm-President is Mariellen Homfeld, CULTURAL EH CLUB meets second and forth Fridays,

2:00 p.m.-President is Perry Keyes; DAWN EH CLUB meets third Mondays, 2:00 pm-President is Jeanne Galley; DRAPER EH CLUB meets second Tuesdays, 12:00 noon-President is Tonic Vaughn; FORDEH CLUB meets third Tuesdays, 9:30 a.m.-President is Dean Bradley; MESSENGER EH CLUB meets second Thursdays, 2:30 p.m.-President is Veri Miller, NORTH HEREFORD EH CLUB meets first Thursdays, 2:00 p.m.-President is Edith Higgins; WESTWAY EH CLUB meets second Tuesdays, 7:00 p.m.-President is Jeanette Ramey; WYCHE EH CLUB meets first and third Thursdays, 2:30 p.m.-President is Jo Lee.

Anyone interested in forming a new club is asked to try to be present at the organizational meeting on Tuesday or call Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent at 364-3573 or one of the presidents of the existing Extension Homemaker Clubs.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

U.S. fast food marketed in France

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Nacho chips, packaged desserts and microwave entrees, to be washed down with California wines, are headed for a promotion in France, the land of cordon bleu cooking.

The French company Monoprix has agreed to introduce and promote such products at its 400 stores during an American food festival in February.

Dale Cochran, Iowa's secretary of agriculture and president of the Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council, says Monoprix will introduce $3.6 million in U.S. food products, including $900,000 from the Midwest.

In addition, Monoprix has agreed to spend $350,000 to promote the American food, a marketing budget to be matched by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agriculture Service.

"We believe the introduction of quality products to the French consumers and the extensive promotional efforts that will take place during the food store promotion will lead to long-term sales of Midwestern food products throughout France and lead to more opportunities in other areas of Europe," Cochran said in a statement distributed by his Iowa office.

What kind of quality products? The specific products have yet to be decided, says Bill Brewer, a spokesman for Cochran. But the agreement covers such American delicacies as junk foods and convenience products. Brewer says breakfast cereals, snack chips, microwave meals, desserts and wines will all be included.

Participants will include food processors with Midwest ties such as Geo. A. Hormel and Co. and Sara Lee Corp., and products made with such Iowa commodities as corn and soybeans.

"Developing new markets and expanding existing markets for value-added food products offer our greatest opportunities to create more demand for Iowa's raw agricultural commodities, better prices for farmers and jobs, income and opportunities for rural communities throughout Iowa and the Midwest," Cochran said.

The Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council is a marketing group of the departments of agriculture in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

NEW YORK (AP) - Diane Keaton isn't at all like the flaky character she played in "Annie Hall," colleagues say.

Connoisseur magazine's January issue portrays the 46-year-old Keaton as a sensitive actress and filmmaker, but also a tough businesswoman.

"She's very precise and organized in her thinking," said Gerald L'Ecuyer, a director who worked with her on "Wildflower," a movie she directed for cable's Lifetime network. "Her father was an engineer and she has his mind."

Keaton won an Oscar in 1977 for Woody Allen's "Annie Hall." Most recently, she played Steve Martin's wife in "Father of the Bride."

Ostrich meat moving into American market

Moo-ve over cows. There's something leaner on the market: ostrich!

About 1,000 ostrich ranchers in the United States, who raise the birds for their hides and feathers, are now selling the meat. And people are gobbling it up. One restaurant in California is already buying about 25 pounds of ostrich a week to make ostrich burgers.

Like beef, ostrich meat is dark, tasty and full of protein. But unlike beef, it's low in fat and cholesterol. It even has fewer calories than chicken! So what's next? Ostrich McFingers?

Why Do Dogs and Cats Sometimes Eat Grass?

Dogs and cats are carnivores, or meat-eating animals. So why does your pet sometimes munch on the lawn?

No one really knows, but animal experts give a few possible reasons: Eating grass can cause Fido or Whiskers to throw up or have diarrhea. Disgusting as this may sound, it might make the animal feel better! This may be how it gets something irritating out of its system. Other people think the animals eat grass because they need extra vitamins.

But grass-chomping doesn't always mean your pet is unhealthy. Some animals will chew on anything! And if your dog or cat likes an occasional salad, don't worry. A small amount of grass shouldn't hurt.

RICKY BARTELS, DANIELLE SIMNACHER

Wedding plans announced

Danielle Simnacher and Ricky Bartels announce their engagement and March 14 wedding.

The couple plan to exchange vows at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

Danielle is a graduate of Hereford High School and West Texas State University with a degree in finance. She works at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union as an accounting clerk. She is the daughter of Albert and Patricia Simnacher and granddaughter of Adeline Loerwald, all of Hereford.

Ricky graduated from Hereford High School and WTSU. He is currently working for Allison Cattle Company. He is the son of Erwin and Jerline Bartels and grandson of Frieda Bartels of Hereford.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Stacy Keach, best known as TV's tough-guy private investigator Mike Hammer, has won rave reviews in a completely different role, as a Howard Hughes-like reclusive billionaire.

"There's such an effort on everyone's part to cubbyhole people," he said. "The great vice in being a versatile performer is no one can quite identify you."

Keach played the recluse in Rupert Holmes' stage thriller "Solitary Confinement," which just finished a run here and opens on Broadway in April.

"I'm very optimistic about this play. It's a wonderful role," he said.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Several months ago my friend's Irish setter got loose and after a day or so was returned. Several days later, the dog was deathly ill, in terrible pain and he died.

A post-mortem revealed he had eaten a corn-dog stick which had penetrated his intestines. There was nothing that could be done to save him.

I had put this sad event in the back of my mind until yesterday when I saw an employee throwing out some stale corn dogs behind a store in an effort to feed the birds. She had no idea that a hungry dog might come by and eat sticks and all.

Please remind people to remove foreign objects when putting food out for animals or in unsecured garbage cans. — Terri Curry, Florence, Ala.

I'm so sorry to hear about that poor dog, and my thoughts are with the owner.

Please be very careful when disposing of any type trash that can hurt animals or curious children. How many wild animals become hurt or die when they get into trash and come across dangerous things like open cans and corn-dog sticks?

Lets make their environment a little safer for all. — Heloise

MONEY-SAVING HINT

Dear Heloise: Don't buy expensive litter-pan liners. Use your regular tall kitchen trash-can liners instead.

Insert the litter pan into the bag, then pour in the litter on top of the bag. For removal, just peel back the bag and all litter is contained. Tie the top and it's ready to go — no mess. Quick, easy and cheap. — Peggy Hoover, Naples, Fla.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Do It Now

I intended to write this column last year. I made notes on it months ago, but never finished them. I knew it would be a difficult column to write so I put it off. I'm quite familiar with the topic. I didn't need to do much research to write it, but still I postponed the effort. The subject is procrastination. Procrastination, according to the dictionary is postponing or delaying action. The symptom of this habit is putting off until tomorrow what we don't wish to do today. Procrastination is a first cousin to inefficiency and also close kin to laziness. Most of us have developed skills in this area whether we wish to admit it or not. In some cases "putting it off" is what we do best.

Do you do this? Read a few of these hypothetical examples. If, you don't find any that you have been guilty of, call me. I'm always looking for a perfect example. Jose hates paper work. Although the sales tax report is due tomorrow, he won't look at it until then. Sally is behind on her recordkeeping. She has decided she might as well wait until the end of the month. (At the end of the month she may decide to wait until the end of the quarter.) Charles should call some customers who haven't paid him in two months. He decides to wait for the weekend mail. When no checks arrive, he delays the calls until Monday or Tuesday. Procrastination usually leads to pain. We delay until the deadline is upon us and we can't put the task off any longer. Stress and anxiety mount. The pressure builds. We work all day and into the night to finish something that should have been completed days ago. There is only one cure for procrastinations: A strong dose of "do it now." The "do it now" person is a rare person indeed. They are highly valued as friends, employees, managers and volunteers. I'd like to share three proven principles of becoming a "do it now" person. PROVEN PRINCIPLES One of the most common causes of procrastination is having more tasks than time. The first principle is to prioritize. Prioritizing is a technique that productive people have utilized for years. Walter P. Chrysler, founder of Chrysler Motor Co., always started his day with the most difficult task. He felt that if he got the tough tasks out of the way early in the day he could accomplish more. Chrysler said, "Get the high job done and it's downhill all the way." A second principle that goes hand-in-hand with prioritizing is focusing on a single task. I once had a boss who refused to work on more than one project at a time. He got a lot done. His system was to concentrate on one item, focus all of his energy and abilities on it, until it was completed. I am much more apt to complete a project, if I completely clear off my desk and focus on that job alone. When I try to work on a project amidst the piles, I find that my mind moves from project to project and pile to pile. I need a clear desk to keep my focus. The third principle is to begin. Dr. Robert Schuller said, "Beginning is half done!" Schuller must have been thinking about procrastination when he said that. Often the hardest part of any job is just getting started. This column is a good example. I put it off for months, but once I got started it took only a few hours to write and edit. When should you begin? Right now. There is no better day than today. There is no better time than now. Don't hibernate, commiserate or procrastinate. Do it now. You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," PO Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Don Taylor is the director of West Texas University's Panhandle Small Business Development Center.

A wide front porch wraps around the body of this plan. It directs you to a recessed foyer leading to the great room. The ceiling for this room is sloped to a sky bridge that overlooks both the foyer and the great room. Open stairs to the second floor bridge are central and the basement stair is shown below this stair.

The wide open kitchen includes a keeping room. It can serve a banquet, family dinner, or simply family breakfast at the corner nook showing offset sloped ceiling decor. An island sink also provides a breakfast bar for snack time. A powder room and laundry room are close by but obscure and the formal dining room is conveniently accessible.

There are two large bedrooms shown for the first floor, one of which is the master. Both include private baths and walk in closets.

The second floor provides two additional bedrooms, each of these bedrooms also includes a private bath and walk in closet. The balcony spans from end to end of this second floor, keeping the kids apart and/or offering excellent privacy.

The Victorian exterior is embellished with all the style's applicable trim, turned wood column porch rail, turret, multiple light windows, fish scale gable end, steep gable roof and horizontal wood siding.

The plan is Number 2936. It includes 2,929 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Q. I would like to put regular carpeting and padding on a basement floor and over the floor of an outside enclosed porch. Both floors are concrete on a Visqueen vapor barrier over a slab base. How can I moisture-proof this type of surface so dampness and moisture do not come up through the carpeting and cause it to rot or mildew?

A. I would also like to put some type of insulation on the floor. What type would be best and what would I put over that as an underlayment for the carpet? I am aware of one method, which is to put a foundation coating on the floor, 15-pound felt on the coating, furring strips on the felt, and 1/2-inch tempered Masonite on top. Will this give me the solid-feeling carpeted floor I want?

A. If you are certain your vapor barrier is undamaged under your slab, you don't really need a second one. However, there's always the chance it was pierced when the concrete was poured, so you are wise to want to install another. Use overlapping 6-mil polyethylene sheets. Tape the seams and allow the sheets to "curl up" the walls about 6 inches. Fasten these edges with spots of adhesive every 8 to 12 inches.

On top of the vapor barrier, place polystyrene insulation (1 inch minimum thickness) over the entire floor area. On top of this layer, place 1x4-inch kiln-dried pressure-treated furring strips every 16 inches at right angles forming a grid on 16-inch centers. It's important to use polystyrene insulation with a minimum compressive strength of 25 pounds per square inch. Dow's Styrofoam TG brand insulation is one that meets this requirement. Glue the furring strips in place with No. 11 mastic to keep them from shifting.

Glue and nail 3/8-inch exterior grade plywood over the furring strips using ring or spiral nails on 6-inch centers along the edges and 10-inch centers on interior strips. Allow a one-sixteenth-inch space between panel edges and center panel joints over the furring strips. Sand off any irregularities over the plywood joints and you are ready to lay the carpet.

The 3/8-inch plywood not only spans the furring strips for a solid floor, it's also required by most building codes as a 15-minute fire barrier over the insulation. Since codes vary, check with your local housing authority to be sure you are in compliance before laying the carpet.

'The Today Show' reaches middle age

For 40 years, NBC's The Today Show has started America's morning. Five days a week, the show focuses on breaking news stories from around the world, as well as features on business, sports and the arts. Anchors Katie Couric and Bryant Gumbel appear in Tuesday's prime time salute to the show.

Prime-time special recalls four decades

By Suzanne Gill

If tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow creeps in a petty pace, Today comes steadily onward, steaming like a first cup of coffee. For 40 years of five-day weeks in four-week months, The Today Show has been television's beacon of first light.

The Today Show went on the air on Jan. 14, 1952, with host Dave Garroway, who made "Sentimental Journey" the theme of his live morning news show. Today was conceived by NBC's Pat Weaver to fill a two-fold purpose: to tell viewers what happened between the time they went to bed and the time they woke up; and to help them ease into the day. According to NBC's Steve Friedman, who himself produced Today for eight years, the biggest changes over the last four decades were in the technology, which has made the show "more and more ambitious" over the years, blossoming from a state-of-the-art long-distance telephone call (from Chicago) on the first show, to on-the-spot coverage of the assassination of Anwar Sadat in 1981, to the prospect of an interactive Today later this decade.

"It started out mostly as a window on the world," Friedman notes. In those early days, he adds, "it was sort of an amazement that you could fill two hours of television a day."

Occasionally, though, the faces change as well. After the show's first eight years, Garroway stepped aside, and in 1962 announcer and quiz master Hugh Downs took over the helm. A few years later, the nation met its first male-female announcing team over breakfast when Barbara Walters was promoted from news correspondent and "Today girl" to co-host of the program. (Walters repeated the feat on the evening news when she joined ABC in 1976, and few local news shows have been without a coed anchor team ever since.) Walters was also the first host to win an individual Emmy (in 1975) for Today, which had won three awards for Outstanding Achievement in Daytime Programming between 1968 and 1971.

Currently a co-anchor, broadcaster and former professional baseball player Joe Garagiolo has long been a part of Today.

By the late '70s, the Today Show team was former White House correspondent Tom Brokaw and Jane Pauley, a sensible Indiana girl who married a wickedly funny cartoonist and became America's ideal working mom. When Brokaw left to anchor the evening news, it was Friedman who convinced the network to take a chance on a handsome, well-heeled sports announcer, Bryant Gumbel, to replace him.

For now, however, Today is pausing on the threshold of a new decade to remember the moments, both serious and silly, that have made it an institution. Tune in on the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 14, and you'll get to see Jane Pauley smoking a cigar.

STAR NOTES

John Mendoza does comedy his way

By Suzanne Gill

When people compare his comic style to that of Steven Wright, John Mendoza is quick to disagree. Both offer deadpan one-liners, but when their acts are placed side-by-side, as they were at last summer's Montreal Comedy Festival, they differ widely, Mendoza says. Where Wright is a victim-clown, Mendoza views life askance. "Take me or leave me," this New York native seems to say. And that may be just what the audience ordered in a decade increasingly marked by the insulation of the individual.

Mendoza is grateful to cable network Showtime for giving a new generation of comedians a showcase for their talents. For him, appearances on Jimmy Walker & Friends, A Pair of Jokers and Just for Laughs '90 led to a solo special, John Mendoza: Over Easy, which aired in December.

With his stand-up career gathering momentum, Mendoza will be making his movie debut this spring in Happy Camper, which stars Corey Feldman as a young man hoping to save a piece of nature from developers. Mendoza says he plays one of two "bad guys" trying to scare Feldman off the land.

Asked to comment on the material in his act, which includes blunt sexual commentary and drunk-driving gags, Mendoza says, "It's just pure jokes. It isn't anger comedy. I don't want to hurt anybody." Humor, after all, is in the ear of the beholder.

SOAP TALK

'GH' casting a revolving door

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: What is going on with my favorite soap, General Hospital? People are leaving right and left, and it seems like every week they take off on a totally different story line. I just found out Finola Hughes and Tristan Rogers are leaving. Once they are gone, I don't think I'll want to watch it any more. Why are they leaving, and why is there a new Dominique? —A fan in Texas.

Dear Reader: At the beginning of each new year, we see a mass exodus of soap stars who think they are going to hit it big in prime time. The sad truth is, many of them don't succeed, and with the economy like it is, it's a bad time to be out of a job.

In answer to your question, Finola Hughes, who plays Anna, has left to work on a prime-time movie, but there is a chance she will be back when the project is finished.

Tristin Rogers (Robert) is leaving to work on other projects. He was scheduled to leave this time last year, but stayed on after finding out Gloria Monty was coming back as executive producer.

Emma Samms is coming back to the show as Holly Scorpio, and it will be interesting to see how Monty works all this in. David Lewis, who plays Edward Quartermaine, is also back and adds a great deal of humor to the show.

As far as Dominique is concerned, Monty wanted to take the character in a different direction, and that is why she hired Shell Danielson (who was Laken on Santa Barbara) to play the part. It has been rumored that Tawny Fere Ellis (the ex-Dominique) simply didn't have the experience to bring the kind of depth Monty wanted for the role.

Many of you have also written in about Peter Reckell, who plays Bo Brady on Days of Our Lives. Yes, he really is leaving the soap, and it is possible that the producers will recast the part. Patsy Pease is also leaving Days, and it is doubtful she will return.

And yes, that is Joanna Johnson (the ex-Caroline) as Faith on The Bold and the Beautiful. Johnson was lured back by executive producer Bill Bell with a really hot story line. It is obvious by the amount of mail I've received about her that fans are glad to see her back.

TIME OUT

Musburger heads to links for ABC

By Chris Carpenter
Beginning this month, ABC Sports takes yet another opportunity to show off Brent Musburger, its acquisition from CBS, this time on the golf course. Along with new host Musburger, ABC beefs up its golf coverage with former CBS analyst Steve Melnyk and Mark Roling, an on-course commentator picked up from NBC.

The threesome's first appearance is slated for Sunday, Jan. 12, on the rolling coastal hills of Carlsbad, Calif., during live, final-round coverage of the Infniti Tournament of Champions from the La Costa Resort's 7,022-yard, par-72 course.

Gathering on the wind-swept greens will be a virtual "Who's Who" of golf, both past and present. The Tournament of Champions is a combined event consisting of leading money winners from the PGA and the association's senior branch, the SPGA. The tournament's defending senior champion, Bruce Crampton, returns to head a field of SPGA contenders including colorful Lee Trevino and George Archer.

Also, hoping to take home part of the $1,150,000 purse is all-time PGA earnings leader Tom Kite. He'll be challenged by PGA Tournament champion John Daly (known for those blistering tee shots) and U.S. Open winner Payne Stewart.

Drew Barrymore alive and sober

By Taylor Michaels

Q: The word is that Drew Barrymore is dead!!! I don't believe it! Can you verify this one way or the other? —Ann McBain, Sun City, Ariz.

A: She is not dead. The rumor no doubt springs from her much publicized battle with drugs and alcohol. Barrymore, however, has so far been successful in her fight.

Q: I would like to know the address of an old friend. His name is Jeremy London. He plays the eldest son on I'll Fly Away. We went to middle school together. Jeremy also has a twin brother, Jason, who plays in a movie that's coming out called The Man in the Moon. I have not seen the two since the seventh grade, and I am now a freshman in college! I would just like to write them both and tell them how proud I am. —Miami Wade, Greenville, N.C.

A: At this time, I don't have an address for Jason, but you can write Jeremy c/o I'll Fly Away, NBC, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10112.

Drew Barrymore

Q: My daughter and I are big fans of Richard Dean Anderson. We watch MacGyver every single day. My daughter even cries when he gets hurt on the show. Could you please tell us his address? —S. and G. Williams, Watkins Glen, N.Y.

A: You would not believe how many letters I get asking about Anderson! I must give out his address every two weeks. But since you're such fans, and I wouldn't want to disappoint your daughter, you can write Anderson c/o MacGyver, Paramount Domestic Television, 5555 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., 90038. But you'd better hurry ... the last episode of the show is set to air in February. After the show ends, Anderson will try his hand at producing and plans to serve as the honorary captain of the United States Olympic hockey team.

Q: Will you please send me an address for Magic Johnson? I am one of his biggest fans. —Katie Barnes, Milledgeville, Ga.

A: Write Johnson c/o Los Angeles Lakers, P.O. Box 10, Inglewood, Calif., 90306. Even though Johnson retired from the Lakers after his announcement that he was HIV-positive, you can still write him there.

Q: Our question is: What is Goofy? Is he a horse or a dog? My dad says Goofy is a horse or mule. I say he is a dog. Who is right? —John Catterson, Buffalo, Kan.

A: I checked with Cindy Krett at Buena Vista Studios, and she said Goofy is "a dog in man's clothing." Your dad, depending on how old he is, could be thinking of Horace Horse-caller, a character who was popular 40 or 50 years ago. Another bit of interesting cartoon trivia: All of Disney's talking animals wear white gloves. That includes the old standbys, like Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, and the newer ones, like Roger Rabbit. Roger Rabbit, by the way, is a big fan of Goofy and considers his the epitome of comedic timing.

Q: I recently saw Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves, starring Kevin Costner. Who played the part of King Richard? He appeared in the last few moments of the film. I didn't see the part listed in the credits ... is this what is known as a cameo role? I believe it was Sean Connery. I have $5 riding on this bet. —Cathy B., Vt.

FAMILY FAIRE

Kids can play along with Lamb Chop

By Chris Carpenter

Spurring preschoolers into joyful activity is the intent of Lamb Chop's Play-Along, a new half-hour series to air on PBS stations nationwide beginning Jan. 13. In contrast to the gamut of joyful activities kids undertake during momentary lulls in parental supervision, the interactive goings-on of this program offer a more educational, less confounding vent for unbridled childhood glee and promise longer life for the new living room carpet.

Shari Lewis, creator of the Lamb Chop puppet family and host of the show, has been bombarding adolescent audiences with a variety of children's books, video tapes and audio cassettes for over 30 years. Through sheer volume, Lewis' experiences in children's media have undoubtedly left her act chock-full of the gags that won affection and gleaned of the ones that fell flat.

Lewis' latest product, Lamb Chop's Play-Along, appears to be a sort of common denominator of educational television. Nothing leaps off the screen as particularly dazzling because it doesn't have to.

Give the show credit, however, for involving kids in the on-screen activities. Parents may want to provide children who watch with some blank paper, a marker and a place to write before the show begins. Several opportunities arise, at least momentarily, to interface with originality.

Walter Matthau believable as a lawyer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Walter Matthau, squinting in the outdoor sunny glare under a straw hat, says there's something about his manner that makes him believable as a lawyer.

Matthau, who's played lawyers more than a dozen times, including his Academy Award-winning performance in "The Fortune Cookie," reprises his role as Harmon Cobb in "Against Her Will: An Incident in Baltimore." CBS televises the movie on Sunday, Jan. 19.

"I guess I look and sound like a lawyer," he says. "Maybe I look like I'm lying. I've certainly played a lot of them."

Matthau first played Cobb three years ago in the movie "The Incident" and the script for a third film is being written.

"The thing I like about him is that he's such a representative of Mr. Average Man," Matthau says. "He's not very good at his job. He thinks in a rather mundane, ordinary, stupid way. He's an ordinary jerk, and he's put into circumstances that exacerbate his ordinariness.

"I don't think he was ever a good lawyer. He does some research and comes up with remarkable things now and then. He's like a man who suddenly discovers he can play the piano."

Wearing a yellow sweater, Matthau is sitting on the patio at a tennis club while a quartet of duffers slam the ball around in a doubles game. Behind him, the pool reflects the sun's rays.

After several minutes of swatting at bees, he decides to move indoors. He orders a salad of vegetables and canned salmon, but settles for tuna fish.

Matthau's 1966 role in "The Fortune Cookie" represented his first collaboration with Jack Lemmon. Matthau played Whiplash Willie. He also played lawyers in "First Monday in October," on the stage in "On a Bright Day" and in an estimated dozen television shows.

"One day my mother asked me what I was getting for a picture," Matthau recalls. "I said $2 million plus 10 percent of the gross. She looked me right in the eye and said, 'If you'd had a decent father you could have been a lawyer.' The idea of me being in a respected profession meant more to her than the money."

Matthau also plays what he calls "a 90-second role" as former Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana in the current movie "JFK."

He says plans to unite him and Lemmon in a sequel to "The Odd Couple" are now in limbo.

"I've heard a lot of conflicting reports about it," he says. "There seems to be some difference of opinion concerning a lot of aspects. Is it dead? It's as open as the Israel-Arab peace talks."

In the first movie, "The Incident," Cobb was selected to defend a German prisoner of war accused of murder because it was expected he would lose. But he surprised them and won. Harry Morgan also starred as Judge Stoddard Bell.

In "Against Her Will," Cobb is invited to join Bell, who's now practicing law in Maryland. It's now a few years after the end of World War II. The idea is that it would give him a good salary and keep him out of trouble. But Cobb soon takes up the cause of a woman wrongly imprisoned in a mental institution.

Morgan and Susan Blakely, who plays his widowed daughter-in-law, join Matthau in the second movie. Brian Kerwin also appears as her new love interest.

"I think he behaves differently this time," Matthau says. "At first I didn't understand why he has some emotional outbursts. Then I came to see there's a subtext. He's in love with his daughter-in-law. When she finds a new man he's upset about it. That's the way I rationalize it."

But we like the marching bands. In an unprecedented feat of counter-programming, Doritos Brand Tortilla Chips has teamed up with the Fox comedy hit In Living Color to provide a special alternative to the Super Bowl halftime show. Fox will air a live party episode of the Emmy-winner simultaneously with the traditional halftime spectacle presented by CBS during its coverage of the game. The In Living Color Super Halftime Party will feature sports-themed sketches involving the series' most popular characters, such as Damon Wayans' Homey the Clown, and a time-remaining clock inset to let the viewer know when to switch back to the game. Doritos marketing exec Steve Liquori states, "We view this as the ultimate launch pad for new Bite-Size Doritos and a chance to make programming history."

THE 'ALL IN THE FAMILY' 20TH-ANNIVERSARY SPECIAL: (1991)

In the 70s Archie Bunker opened new television territory with his utterances about "your blacks, Jews and Puerto Ricans there" and other social and personal issues. (I ain't got no hang-up about sex!) This CBS special presents the first of All in the Family to be released on video, mixing highlights from past shows and interviews with the Bunker household (Carroll O'Connor, Jean Stapleton, Rob Reiner and Sally Struthers). No rating. Good family viewing. Time 1 hour 14 minutes.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

It is highly unlikely that you would ever have an opportunity to see this film, but there is one more version of Peter Pan which has not been released for video.

PETER PAN: (1924) A wonderful silent version of the classic tale that capture the spirit of the fantasy. Clever effects (especially for the time) and grand characterizations add to the film's appeal.

RECENTLY RELEASED CHILDREN'S VIDEO

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: (1991) Home Vision. Three programs, two cassettes each. $29.95 per program or $79.95 for the series. Three hours per program. Several children's tales from the Chronicles stories by the British author C.S. Lewis are re-created in programs from the BBC and the Wonder Works series on PBS. In the best-known of these, The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, four youngsters pass through a door in the back of clothes closet into the fantasy kingdom of Narnia, where they eventually fulfill a prophecy and become kings and queens. The second and third programs, Prince Caspian and the Voyage of the Dawn Treader and The Silver Chair, relate further adventures in the kingdom and lands beyond. Each would be rated G.

ADVICE TO VIDEO RENTERS

Five heads of movie studio video divisions recently listed the industry's pluses and minuses. Among the minuses was the big-hit mentality prevalent in many video stores. "Old VCR owners are not renting as much, and those who are renting are getting bored with video stores," said one of those polled. "Right now there is not enough selection." Others predicted an improved response from stores. "You have to remember that eighty-eight percent of VCR households rent movies, so the rental habit is alive," another said. "If the stores perceive demand, they'll stock the merchandise to refresh interest." Our advice? Regularly request from local stores our recommended films if they are not carried locally. Eventually this will pay off.

FOREIGN FILMS ON VIDEO

THE BOAT IS FULL: (1981) German and French with English subtitles. Distributed by First Run Features. In World War II, a desperate group of refugees, all previously unacquainted with one another, cross the German border into a Swiss town in which they must pose as a family to qualify for sanctuary. Clandestine strategies evolve to evade detection by the Swiss townspeople, who seem more interested in catching rule breakers than in saving people from the Nazis. Director Mark Imhoff's film depicts the situations with spare, gentle force. The film is fresh, purposeful and surprising at every turn. Would be a mild PG-13.

DESIGNING WOMEN: (1957) Starring Gregory Peck and Lauren Bacall. A sophisticated comedy graced by Mr. Peck's and Miss Bacall's presence. Miss Bacall (in all her youthful glory) plays a successful dress designer who meets and marries sportswriter Gregory Peck (in all his youthful glory). The fun begins as each tries to adapt to the other's friends and habits. It's smart, swanky fun. Would be a PG.

DOC HOLLYWOOD: Michael J. Fox. Ben Stone (Michael J. Fox) a button-cute plastic surgeon on his way to big bucks in Los Angeles, bangs up his sports car in the tiny southern town of Grandy. There he is sentenced to community service for reckless driving and, having to hang around a while, gets accustomed to locals like Lou (Julie Walker), a comely medical worker and Lillian (Frances Sternhagen), a wise-cracking waitress. Between the folks and the squash festival and all, Grandy starts looking good to Ben, who just might be persuaded to forget Los Angeles. More a television sitcom than a movie, this is truly one that will play better on the small screen. Good for a few chuckles. Rated PG-13 (mild).

GRAND CANYON: Starring Danny Glover, Kevin Kline, Steve Martin, and Mary McDonnell.

Lawrence Kasdan's The Big Chill film, Grand Canyon, is the story of a group of citizens of Los Angeles trying to grapple with the harsh realities of contemporary urban life. They have much reason to despair for in Mr. Kasdan's sad vision of L.A., the city is awash in self-pity and immobility. The characters include a disillusioned immigration lawyer (Kevin Kline), his equally disillusioned wife (Mary McDonnell), a tow truck driver (Danny Glover) whose sister and her children are trapped in a black ghetto, and a shallow Hollywood producer (Steve Martin). With humor and compassion, they forge unlikely friendships amid the chaos as they slowly begin to recognize the small miracles around them. The leads (in fact the entire ensemble cast), give strong, intuitive performances, creating a tapestry of characters. The screenplay (also written by Lawrence Kasdan with his wife, Meg) touches on many of the problems and fears of modern life with an astute, if heavy, hand. In some ways it seems as though nothing really happens in the film, yet a million things do happen. And too often the film languishes as Mr. Kasdan poses BIG QUESTIONS and then has his characters answer them in conversations that are so casual they seem improvised. Yet, more often than not, poetry emerges. Rated R for extreme language, violence and mature themes.

THELMA AND LOUISE: (1991) Starring Geena Davis and Susan Sarandon. To relieve humdrum routines, Thelma (Geena Davis) and Louise (Susan Sarandon) pile into Louise's Thunderbird and head out for a weekend fishing trip, which before they know it turns into an exuberant cross-country breakout from monotony. Thelma is packing her husband's gun. The gun and a chance encounter change their lives forever. For reasons the reader should discover only by watching the movie, they find it necessary to escape and in doing so become vibrant women who no longer have to answer to anyone else's notion of how they should lead their lives. This landmark film will be discussed in film classes years from now as one that changes the direction of filmmaking in the Twenty-First Century. Ridley Scott's film is engaging throughout and reimagines the buddy film with such freshness and vigor that the genre seems positively new. Susan Sarandon and Geena Davis give brilliant, compelling performances. Rated R for violence, language, brief nudity and mature themes.
