Sending letters to soldiers

Teela McKee's junior and senior English classes at Hereford High School sent 140 letters to the soldiers in Saudi Arabia as a class writing assignment. The students have received about 40 letters back. McKee's classes are planning to write more letters and send a video to the U.S. soldiers in the desert.

Students write to soldiers

When Uncle Sam's boys and girls called for letters, Teela McKee, Hereford High School junior and senior English teacher, responded with a class assignment.

As a writing experience assignment, McKee had her classes write letters to the lonely soldiers in Saudi Arabia. Her classes sent out 140 letters to the Middle East and have received about 40 letters back.

"All of the letters have been from Marines," McKee said. "Some of the boys wrote several letters to the students and most sent pictures."

A few of the letters were complete with the Saudi Arabia weather report. According to the soldiers, when they arrived the temperatures were a sweltering 130 degrees, but have "cooled down to a comfortable 102."

McKee's idea to write stemmed from requests from the soldiers who wanted letters from back home.

"The students wrote about themselves, where they're from, interest and organizations they are involved in," McKee said.

The most common request the students received from the soldiers were for US news and sporting events.

"They want to know what's going on in the United States and how their favorite teams are doing," McKee said.

The letters came from soldiers who originally are from all over the United States and one foreign country.

"The Marines came from Texas to Georgia," McKee said. "One of the soldiers grew up in South Africa, where his father is a US diplomat."

One letter of interest came from of man who grew up in Umbarger. "It's amazing that out of 200,000 soldiers, we find one from Umbarger," said McKee.

The students found it interesting that almost all the soldiers indicated they were going to use their GI bills and go to college when they return.

McKee said her class will write more letters and hopefully establish pen pals with the desert fighters. Her classes are also making a video to send to the soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

Applications being taken for Leadership

Applications are now being taken for the Leadership Hereford classes that will begin Oct. 30 in Hereford.

The classes will be limited to 12 persons and will be held every other week. Participants must be prepared to make a commitment to the program, fulfilling all class and mandatory attendance requirements. The classes will deal with city, county and state or personal development, with sessions to be conducted by seasoned community leaders who are experts in their fields. The $150 tuition will cover all costs of the program including meals and transportation when necessary, program materials, speakers and meeting rooms.

"As Hereford and Deaf Smith County attempt to meet the challenges of the 1990s there is an increasing need to train responsible and informed leaders," said Donna West, Leadership Hereford chairman for the chamber.

Persons who wish to be considered for one of the openings should contact the Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333.

Soldier details problems

By DANEE' WILSON
 Staff Writer

To many Hereford residents and to people across the United States, Saudi Arabia is a country thousands of miles away where a few Americans are stationed.

Most people consider Iraq a thorn in the side of American's because pumped up gas prices and reports of the heat zone dominate the news.

To some, the Middle East crisis is a senseless confrontation that looms in the shadows of Viet Nam, but to the families of the American soldiers 10,000 miles from home in a scorching desert, the situation is very real, very dangerous.

Jimmy Curtis, son of Sue Curtis of Hereford is one of 4 or 5 Hereford natives stationed in Saudi Arabia.

"People just aren't aware of what is going on over there," said Curtis. "For one thing, in a letter to my father Jimmy wrote, 'We have enough food to get by, but if it's not too much trouble, please send food.'"

Jimmy has been in Saudi Arabia since September. "All he has requested from me is homemade cookies," she said.

There has been no indication that there is a shortage of water, but since the Saudis go through the soldiers' mail only limited information can be written.

"In World War II, people were supportive of the war in active ways," said Curtis. "Children bought war bonds at school and there was so much patriotism. 'Since Viet Nam our feelings about policies abroad have changed. People don't understand we have tens of thousands of boys in Saudi Arabia who never asked to be there, they're just serving their country.'"

Curtis said contrary to popular belief, it looks like the soldiers will be there long term and they have needs.

Jimmy's family has sent him food, insect repellent and flea collars, because the fleas are bad there.

"The soldiers are not discouraged," said Curtis. "They work six days a week with Sunday off."

"The boys who have been there a while are emotionally drained and the result is a lot of bickering. I know that in a couple of weeks my son will be at that point, too."

Not only do the soldiers need food items, they need letters from home.

Curtis said she had a friend who was in the Korean War and recalled grown men crying when mail call passed them up.

"It is my goal to see that no one from Hereford has to cry because mail call passed them," Curtis said tearfully.

She is very involved in getting the (See SOLDIER, Page 3A)

Police program details drugs, how to cope

By DANEE' WILSON
 Staff Writer

Satanism, alcohol and drug abuse unfortunately are all prevalent in Hereford, according to Hereford police officer Terry Brown, but education is the way to prevention and the Crime Prevention Unit was formed to educate.

Brown was at Hereford High School last week discussing satanism, alcohol and drug abuse with the students of Bill Spies graphic arts class.

"We try to set up an informal setting so the kids can relate to me as a friend, rather than a police officer who's out to get them," Brown said. "Students have been attentive in every session," Spies said. "The sessions have been running about two hours long and the kids are involved and listening for the whole two hours."

Brown presented his program to over 50 students and has tentatively set up more times to present more programs at the high school.

"I come in when I am needed," said Brown, who expects to have a session for the teachers in the near future.

"These programs are on problems kids deal with day to day," he said. "I want to give them information so they can make informed decisions about satanism, drug and alcohol abuse."

His presentation is aided by a display of the different types of drugs and the ways people are using the drugs. He also has video presentations that help keep the students' interest.

Brown and Esrael Silva are available to give talks to any group. For more information on the programs available or to set up an appointment with the Crime Prevention Unit call 364-2323.

AG candidate Morales battling for history

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Democrat Dan Morales and Republican J.E. "Buster" Brown are battling for the Texas attorney general's post - and a place in history.

State records indicate there never has been an Hispanic attorney general in Texas, and a Republican hasn't held the post since at least Reconstruction.

Their history-making potential is one of several similarities between the candidates, who are far apart philosophically.

Both are state lawmakers who have sponsored anti-crime measures: Brown, 49, is a senator from Lake

Jackson who has been vice chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee. Morales, 34, is a representative from San Antonio who has headed the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

Both are former prosecutors: Brown worked in Brazoria County, and Morales in Bexar County.

And both agree their differences far outweigh any resemblance.

"That's sort of like Nolan Ryan and I both played Little League baseball. But that sure doesn't make our records in baseball equal," said Brown.

Morales is equally confident: "I am satisfied that the record that I have put together compares favorably to that of my opponent."

Their basic disagreement is over the role of the state's top lawyer.

Morales describes an activist attorney general, who addresses public policy issues and works with lawmakers. Matters such as education, criminal justice and mental health have been entangled in lawsuits in Texas, he notes.

"What good lawyers do for private clients is not simply sit around the office and wait to get sued," Morales said.

But Brown says Democratic incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox, a self-described "people's lawyer," has made the office too political with his activist style.

The attorney general should defend the state's laws in court and leave policy-making to the Legislature, Brown said.

"We've got to get somebody in that office that the public will have confidence in as a lawyer," he said. "I think the people of Texas want a conservative ... that will restore the credibility of that office."

The office's responsibilities are far-reaching.

The attorney general is involved in antitrust, consumer, environmental and public health lawsuits. The office gives advisory opinions on legal matters, and administers the child support enforcement program.

District and county attorneys have the primary responsibility for criminal cases, but the attorney general can provide assistance at their request.

Brown, calling himself the underdog, has attacked Morales on several issues in the campaign.

Touting his own legal experience, Brown has challenged Morales to release a list of cases he has tried before juries.

Morales said he has tried such cases, but hasn't released a list. Former Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap Jr. said Morales was one of his best prosecutors.

Brown has been a lawyer longer. He worked as a Brazoria County prosecutor for nearly four years before going into private practice in 1972.

Morales worked as a Bexar County prosecutor in 1983-85, after a year in private practice in Houston. Since becoming a lawmaker, he says he has provided free legal services to constituents.

Brown also has criticized Morales for sponsoring a $5.7 billion tax increase in 1987, and for voting this summer against a sales tax increase Brown supported for public schools.

Morales says important services were financed by the 1987 tax increase. He opposed the latest sales tax increase, he said, because the levy is regressive and too high.

Brown blasted Morales for calling a House committee hearing on proposals to put corporate polluters behind bars. Brown called the move political, and said while he has sponsored environmental legislation, Morales has not.

Morales, who's been endorsed by the Sierra Club, said he had the hearing at the request of environmentalists. Noting oil spills this summer off the Texas coast, he added, "I just don't think that Texans want that (Criminal Jurisprudence) Committee to sit back and wait for another disaster to occur."

Brown also zeroed in on an endorsement of the Democrat by a gay group.

Morales said, "I think that the public is going to see through shrill and hateful attacks. ... They are going to be looking to the record of the candidates."

Lee is Lion of the Month

Rocky Lee, right, was named Lion of the Month for September by Hereford Lions Club Boss Lion Benny Womble, left. Lee, a past boss lion and a past district governor, was cited for his ongoing work in club projects. Lee also accepted a $500 check from the club to be used by Girlstown residents for their annual Christmas Coat and Shoe shopping trip.

SOLDIER

community to take interest in what is going on in Saudi Arabia.

"I don't want them to feel they are alone," said Curtis. "One day Jimmy will come home, but another Hereford boy or girl may be going in his place."

Curtis' sister, a member of an Amarillo teachers organization, is getting her group to put pressure on the politicians to send supplies to the soldiers.

Some items Curtis is encouraging local residents and civic groups who want to help to send are: canned fruit, individual helping size cans; no pork products as they are not allowed in Saudi Arabia. (pork and beans); pudding packs; honey; peanut butter; canned meat; jerky; homemade articles; toilet paper; canned juices; anything in a plastic bottle; Kool-aid; powdered milk; canned cream and dry cereal.

Curtis heard that a woman from She also added that chips and dip aren't necessary for nutrition, but are good for moral.

When sending cards or gifts at Christmas, remember no religious material whatsoever is allowed. Christmas cards must have Santa Claus or a holiday theme on them.

The punishment for possession of religious material in Saudi Arabia is not known by Curtis, but if a soldier becomes a prisoner of war, the results could be deadly, she said.

"What they know about God is in their hearts," she added solemnly.

According to Curtis every soldier's situation may be different.

"I don't know that Jimmy can get out and go to town, I don't know if he even has access to electricity. I believe that comfort is not the general condition of the soldiers."

Amarillo's son reported that he was in Saudi Arabia for three weeks in the desert sun before he showered.

The community can help people who want to give to the soldiers by helping to pay the postage for the packages, said Curtis. "Postage is so expensive, and I think it would be a good cause," she added.

Jimmy is in the 82nd Airborne division of the Army. His unit is a combat readiness troop. He is a weapons repair specialist specializing in missile launchers.

"Jimmy is an adopted child who was looking for his place," said Curtis. "I find it rather ironic he found his place 10,000 miles from home."

"I pray he will come home without war, but if war breaks out, he told me where he would be and what news to watch if something happens," she said with what limited relief that could bring her.

Leadership Counts!

And what better example is there than the H.I.S.D. School Board?

This leadership platform, which consists of John Fuston, Dennis Newton, Steve Coneway, Raymond Schlabs and Sylvia Flores, devotes its time and efforts weekly in securing quality education for our children.

The members of this group have been instrumental in procuring a long-range technology plan to help teach all children (Grades K - 12) computer skills ranging from keyboarding to computer programming.

They have also implemented a program that addresses the many critical needs of those students who have dropped out of school.

Additionally, the school board has placed continued emphasis on scholastic improvement which has resulted in the placement of three Hereford schools on the Governor's Excellence in Education Award program.

We offer our commendation to this group of individuals for the example they set, and the guidance they provide in our education system.

Political endorsements

With absentee voting starting this past Wednesday, the 1990 elections are upon us and Texas voters will be making choices that will determine the direction our state will take in dealing with its many problems.

Absentee voting continues through Nov. 2 and general election day is Nov. 6. We hope voters care enough to study the issues, learn as much as they can about candidates, and cast an informed vote.

Personally, we will vote for Clayton Williams for governor. We haven't been enthralled with the governor's race, but we believe Williams is the better choice. He's taken a lot of flak for saying what he thinks, but it's refreshing to us that he's not the typical politician who tries to say just the things people want to hear. He's a proven success as a businessman and we like people in office who have had to run a business on their money, not the taxpayer's money.

And though Bob Bullock represents another party, we will vote for him for lieutenant governor. He is a seasoned politician, but we think Bullock has a great track record as State Comptroller. We believe he can be an efficient No. 2 man in state government. Another Democrat, Dan Morales, is our pick for attorney general. We visited with him here in Hereford and believe him to be a man of integrity and an intelligent choice.

Voters are usually exposed to the candidates for races at the top of the ballot, and sometimes we endorse some of those candidates; sometimes not. However, we always attempt to evaluate candidates for statewide judicial offices and endorse those who are best qualified, no matter their party affiliation. We have learned that readers may or may not be influenced by whom we endorse for governor, but many of them look to us for choices for the Texas Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals.

From our research with local law enforcement people, with reports from the Texas Bipartisan Justice Committee, and campaign reports, here's how we see the races for three Supreme Court seats and the five Court of Criminal Appeals seats up for election this year:

Chief Justice--Incumbent Chief Justice Tom Phillips has helped restore the credibility of the court following the notoriety in the late 1980's. He is endorsed by strong business and medical groups. He is challenged by Associate Justice Oscar Mauzy, an unabashed activist, whose base of support is the trial lawyers. Vote for Phillips

Place 1, Supreme Court--Judge John Cornyn is the easy choice. This race provides a good example of why voters need to be informed. His opponent, Gene Kelly, enjoys the advantage of a well-known name. He is not a tap-dancer or movie star, but he'll get a lot of votes because of the name. Cornyn is qualified to be a Supreme Court judge. Kelly is not.

Place 2--Justice Bob Gammage should get the nod over Justice Charles Ben Howell. Both are Appeals Court Justices but Gammage appears to have much better qualifications and background. Howell has been reprimanded for unprofessional conduct by the State Bar and publicly reprimanded by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

For the Court of Criminal Appeals:

Place 1--This is open-seat race pits Austin attorney Frank Maloney against Dallas Appeals Court Justice Joe DeVaney. This is a close call but we pick Maloney, who is endorsed by bar polls, by Texas People Against Crime, and by the Texas Farm Bureau among others.

Place 2--This is another clear-cut choice of a well-qualified candidate against a "name." Judge Oliver Kitzman's record as a prosecutor and judge is excellent. His opponent is Sam Houton Clinton, who has a reputation as one of the most liberal protectors of criminals' rights in the country.

Place 3--We believe incumbent Bill White should be returned to the court. He seems to have the proper balance in protecting the people without trampling on the rights of the criminal defendant.

Place 4--David Berchelman is the choice here. We also visited with Berchelman in Hereford and he has the philosophy and qualifications which make him a distinguished man for the seat.

Place 5--This race will be historic in that the winner will be the first black elected to statewide office in Texas. We endorse Justice Louis Sturns, who also made a visit to Hereford. Since being appointed to the court, his voting record indicates he is conservative and will help restore the court's credibility. His opponent is Judge Morris Overstreet of Amarillo, who hurt his credibility (while a candidate for the court) by testifying as a character witness for a convicted drug dealer.

By the way, Phillips, Cornyn, Kitzman, Berchelman and Sturns are running as Republicans. Gammage, Maloney and White are Democrats.

Dear Sir:
I would like to say thank you to the good folks of Deaf Smith County for letting me be a part of the Centennial Celebration.

It was a memorable day. The weather, the parade, the courthouse program, Don Ray's very special sculpture, the wonderful food around the square, the museum activities were the proper ingredients for a super celebration.

Ruth McBride, her committee and all those who participated certainly know how to celebrate a centennial! I have no doubt that "Deaf" Smith would have great respect and admiration for those early settlers and for all who came after them to make Deaf Smith County a special place.

Sincerely,

BABBLING BROOKS

It's early voting time, which means we get to pick who we don't want for governor.

There's been more mud slung in the Texas governor's race than all of the tractor pulls in the southern United States this year. Who wants it: Ann "Silverfoot" Richards, the Democrat, or Clayton "Slewmouth" Williams, who just can't seem to get his mouth to be political?

There've been accusations, lies and calling of liars, innuendo you would not believe (which we'd love to print but there's this thing called libel) and much, much more in this race. The problem for Texas voters is not who to vote for, but who to vote against as governor.

The absolute worst part: come hell or high water we're stuck with the "winner" for the next four, or more, years. Maybe the proverbial creek will rise...

The Claytie vs. Ann race has added something to television that has been missing for many years: entertainment. Who know which will say what on the nightly news. Heck, I check the wire each day before we put the paper on the press, just to make sure Clayton's mouth hasn't again become disengaged from his brain, or Ann hasn't made some wild-goose-chase accusation about Claytie's bank or oil company or something.

The governor's race isn't the only race where moistened soil has been flung to the winds. There's the lieutenant governor's race, where Bob "Mr. Insider" Bullock tackles Rob Moosebacker, I mean Mossbucker, er, Mosbacher, who touts himself as an outsider. Bullock claims that Mossbucker is such an outsider that he has flat run the Department of Human Services, of which he is chairman, plumb out of money and millions of people are going to starve to death or die or something because Misbucker has been busy doing nothing.

Then there's the ag commissioner's race. That's Jim "Urban Cowboy" Hightower against Rick "I am a cotton picker" Perry.

Each side has seemed to focus on a bunch of airplane flights. Each has accused the other of taking way too many airplane rides at state taxpayer expense. I propose an easy solution: send them both to Saudi Arabia and give them each a jet fighter. Let 'em either have a dogfight or play "airplane chicken."

Now Perry has made some loose associations between Jim HIGHTOWER (Rick's spelling) and the cultivation of cannabis. The consumption of this drug may automatically disqualify someone from the U.S. Supreme Court. Does wacky tobaccy mean you can't, you know, man, be the head of the pharmin' farmers of Texas?

Is it just me, or are all of these people attending class reunions getting younger all of the time?

Something about this last week having been homecoming rekindled this thought. I saw a picture in the Castro County News over in Dimmitt of a bunch of folks having their 20th-year class reunion. Hey, I thought, I know all of these people. There was the guy who sold me my first case of bootlegged beer. There's a girl who was more mature in worldly things than anyone around. There were my big, big, big sports heroes, guys I flat idolized that were great football and basketball players.

It used to be that all of the people having their 20-year reunion were these gray-headed people that sagged instead of zagged. Now they are all of these good-looking people that don't look much different (some of them look better) than they looked 20 years ago.

My class will have our 20-year whatever in just a few more years. I can hardly wait.

An AP News Analysis

Term limits popular

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - As political punishment, the drive to limit lawmakers' terms and tenure can send them a message without getting personal. And even disenchanted voters seem to prefer it that way.

The upstart issue of this campaign, term limits are gaining endorsements from some candidates who see them as hostile to the establishment and to incumbents, few of whom are likely to be ousted by the voters.

Term limits offer a way out for voters who tend to favor their own representatives, while complaining about what is happening at the State House or the Capitol.

"People say, 'I like my legislator, but not the legislature,'" said John Keast, who tracks referendum issues for the conservative Free Congress Foundation. "Term limits are a concept rather than a candidate. It's much easier for people to handle."

A Washington Post-ABC News poll conducted Oct. 14 makes the point in numbers: 63 percent of those surveyed said they disapproved of the way Congress is doing its job - and 64 percent said they approved the performance of their own House member.

Despite the voter dissatisfaction reflected in polls, neither party expects major changes in Congress in the Nov. 6 elections.

Only two states, California and Colorado, will be deciding in this election whether to restrict terms in office. Oklahoma already has imposed a 12-year limit for state legislators, effective Jan. 1. That measure was approved by two-thirds of the voters in a Sept. 18 primary election. Polls reflect majority support for the other two state measures, but there is an intensive, well-financed campaign against the California limits.

It would take a broadened movement with staying power to apply term limits in a way that would force real changes from a system in which incumbency, and the seniority that comes with it, usually rule.

Vice President Dan Quayle sees that coming. "The voters are channeling their discontent into real and lasting reform," said Quayle, who is pushing term limits as he campaigns for Republican candidates.

"The people are restless," Quayle said. "This new wave of cynicism has been building for a long time. It should not be discounted. Clearly, term limitation is an idea whose time has come."

President Bush says he's for term limits, noting that the Republican platform advocates them. While Bush hasn't stressed it as an issue, GOP gubernatorial candidates have in states like Texas, Florida, California and Georgia.

For example, as he campaigned with Bush in Dallas on Monday, Clayton Williams said that if he is elected governor, he will push a constitutional amendment for term limits. "The people in Texas are fed up with the politicians in Austin," Williams said.

Opponents of term limits argue that career bureaucrats and special interests would become stronger than they already are if legislatures were stripped of their veteran lawmakers.

They complain that term limits are an anti-democratic measure because they restrict the choices available to the voters. Advocates concede that point, but say it's a price worth paying for change.

While there is some Democratic support for term limit measures, it makes more sense for Republicans. The GOP would benefit from turnover, especially in the House, which has been run by Democratic majorities for 36 years.

A constitutional amendment proposed in the Senate early this year would impose a 12-year ceiling on senators and House members, but it is not going anywhere in Congress. So supporters are trying to build pressure in the states. Resolutions advocating congressional term limits have been proposed in at least 29 state legislatures, adopted in only two.

Colorado's state measure also would impose a 12-year limit on service in Congress, a provision that certainly would face constitutional challenge in the courts.

But measures that apply only to state legislatures could eventually turn up the pressure for action to limit congressional tenure too.

"People rightfully feel that entrenched legislators are only interested in getting re-elected, and I do not think the movement to limit terms will stop at the state level," Quayle said in Louisville, Ky., last week.

He said it should be extended to cover the House and Senate, where he served 12 years. His first speech as a congressman from Indiana in 1977 was a call for federal term limits. It had been one of his campaign themes in 1976, when he upset a veteran Democrat.

Voice of Business

by Dr. Richard L. Lester, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — "Nothing is easier than spending the public money," President Calvin Coolidge said. "It does not appear to belong to anybody. The temptation is overwhelming to bestow it on somebody."

In truth, Coolidge understated the awesome attraction of that temptation. In his day, Congress squandered money, but only the money at its disposal. It did not as a matter of policy year after year squander billions on credit. Compared to its modern counterpart, the Congress Coolidge complained about was a paragon of fiscal restraint.

The federal deficit this year and next is expected to be in the range of $160 billion, give or take a few billion. If we factor in spending for the bailout of the saving and loan industry, the deficits are more on the order of $232 billion.

Nor is there any serious question about the source of this unprecedented shortfall. Our elected representatives in Congress continue to spend money as if there were no tomorrow. President Bush had proposed a "flexible freeze" on spending, which would have permitted spending to grow at the rate of inflation, which he and his advisors estimated to be 4.3 percent. Instead, Congress has hiked spending at a 5.7 percent clip. Between 1988 and 1993, Congress will spend a total of $447 billion more than the President's suggested limit. If we factor in spending on the S&L mess, that number rises to $616 billion more.

And how, you may ask, are our elected representatives in Congress responding to this crisis? Well, the Heritage Foundation recently plowed through spending bills to see where all that money is going. It found, among other things, that the Army Corps of Engineers has been given $100,000 to study Waikiki Beach. Well, I suppose someone has to do it. But do we really need to spend $2.85 million for a fish farm in Arkansas, $8 million for the demonstration project in Virginia, or $50,000 for the manager of a national bicycle program?

The basic problem is that each member of Congress feels obliged to the point of desperation, to bring home some federal pork. I personally do not believe that one voter out of a thousand could name one project his or her representatives in Congress have brought home. Make that one out of ten thousand. It doesn't matter. The politicians believe we all follow such things and respond accordingly. It is perhaps the most expensive illusion of our republic's long history. It may yet be the ruin of us all.

Ag race getting muddy, land battle gets murky

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

If Hollywood were to write the script, the race for agriculture commissioner between Democratic incumbent Jim Hightower and Republican challenger Rick Perry would best be described as the "Urban Cowboy" against the farmer from "Top Gun."

But there is nothing Hollywood about the battle for land commissioner, pitting incumbent Democrat Gary Mauro against GOP challenger Wes Gilbreath - just plenty of good-fashioned mudslinging.

Hightower's white Stetson hat and cowboy boots hardly disguise his progressive big city ideas, quick vocal cadence and ability to lure big-time entertainers to stump for him, including actor Robert Redford and blues singer Taj Mahal.

He is favored to win a third consecutive term as agriculture commissioner largely because he is expected to dominate in cities like Houston, Dallas and San Antonio, where campaign officials claim his name recognition is around 75 percent.

He registers significantly less support with the rural farmers and ranchers his office regulates.

Perry, on the other hand, is a third-term state representative from Haskell, where he has spent a lifetime toughening callouses farming cotton and wheat and raising cattle.

Despite the rural background, Perry is a former Air Force pilot whose suave demeanor and good looks have helped him gather campaign support from the likes of Kim Dawson, an internationally known modeling agent in Dallas.

The differences between the two candidates are as distinct as rows in a plowed field.

Perry is a conservative who sees the future of Texas in mainstream crops, cotton, feed grains and beef, that already produce about 95 percent of the jobs and profits in agriculture.

Hightower is a former journalist and a populist who champions the small farmer and the diversification of crops. His vision is of an agricultural system that requires fewer pesticides and results higher profits for the farmer.

Hightower has been accused of using his office to develop a populist party in Texas. And his reputation for speaking out against mainstream agriculture has drawn the ire of the Texas Farm Bureau, who helped recruit six candidates to oppose him in the Democratic primary.

The Farm Bureau, which does not align with a political party, even sought Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan to run against Hightower.

"Jim Hightower has never farmed," said Perry, whose campaign has raised over $1 million, nearly $250,000 more than Hightower. "He has no understanding of the industry he regulates."

Hightower says Perry's claims of being an experienced rancher are ridiculous.

"He is sort of all chaps and very little ranch," Hightower said. "He doesn't have any cattle. He is really a banker and a Realtor. On his own campaign filings, he reports less than $2,000 in income from agriculture."

Both men have accused the other of illicit use of state funds.

Hightower has nicknamed his opponent "Sky King" because Perry alone accounted for almost half of the private aircraft mileage reimbursed to the 150 House members in 1989.

Perry has defended those expenses as legitimate state business.

Perry calls Hightower a "crook." He alleges his opponent charged taxpayers $1,057 for use of a state plane to speak at a fund-raiser for U.S. Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., in Jonesboro, Ark., in August 1987.

That and reports of an FBI investigation of Hightower's 1988-90 campaign fund-raising suggest wrongdoing is rampant in the commissioner's office, Perry said.

Hightower denies Perry's charges and claims rumors of an FBI investigation were inspired by Perry's campaign.

The battle for land commissioner also has been dominated by accusations.

Gilbreath, who is president of a Houston-based outdoor advertising company called SignAd Inc., has been accused of sexual harassment by a former employee.

Gilbreath, 61, denies the charges and claims they were politically motivated.

Mauro claims Gilbreath spent most of the campaign stumping outside of big cities, where reporters would "embarrass him" by asking about the harassment case.

Gilbreath claims Mauro is personally indebted to 30 banks, squandered millions of dollars in public school funding as land commissioner and operated veterans programs at a loss.

Mauro, 42, said that's hogwash. "If I was guilty of half the things he is saying, the state auditor would have found it, or I would have been run out of town by now," Mauro said.

Mauro, who received national attention after dispersing oil-eating microbes on oil spills in the Gulf of Mexico during the summer, said his polls showed him comfortably ahead three weeks before the Nov. 6 election.

Both sides agreed 50 percent of the vote was undecided heading into the final stretch.

Mauro said if he were elected, he would push for an oil-spill preparedness plan that would protect "every square inch of the Texas Gulf Coast."

He said he would like to see $100 million allocated to build new state parks, stronger clean air initiatives and more plastics recycling.

Gilbreath said as land commissioner he would try to beef up school funding and veterans programs.

Gilbreath said if he loses, he would blame the media for letting Mauro off easy.

"Our County Commission should manage by action, rather than reaction."

If Deaf Smith County is to progress, we need a "five - year plan" to operate by. Currently we have none.

Parmer hopes Goliath Gramm can be toppled

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hugh Parmer portrays himself as David taking on Goliath in his challenge of Sen. Phil Gramm.

But Republican incumbent Gramm, who is prone to invoking biblical images in his remarks, knows the giant lost that battle and doesn't plan to repeat the performance.

In the month before the election, Gramm held comfortable leads in polls and campaign funding. He raised nearly $14 million for the campaign, more than any other incumbent senator.

Parmer also raised more than $1.5 million, among the highest totals of any Senate challenger. He has tried to portray Gramm as a Washington insider who has lost touch with the values of Texans.

The approach runs the risk of drawing favorable attention to Gramm's leadership role in Congress. Gramm, a 48-year-old former economics professor, said Texans expect him to take the lead on budget and trade matters.

But Parmer gained some ground during the October budget battle in which Gramm first supported and then opposed the stance of Republican leaders.

Parmer, a 51-year-old state senator who is a Fort Worth attorney and the city's former mayor, blasted Gramm's support for higher Medicare costs in the bipartisan budget package.

"We need to create a policy that doesn't pass our financial problems on to sick older people," Parmer said.

When that plan failed to pass the House, Gramm opposed the next one, an outline with the same deficit-reduction goals that let congressional committees decide how to reach them.

"I'm not going to vote for a budget that says we're doing to do these things in the sweet by and by," Gramm said, pushing for immediate action.

Gramm's namesake budget-balancing law triggered the showdown by promising across-the-board spending cuts of up to $100 billion to meet a deficit target.

Gramm says the law can be deemed a success because since its passage the government's share of GNP has fallen from 23.9 percent to 22.6 percent. But he acknowledged its threat has been diminished by constant revision of deficit goals.

"We're not going to have a sequester," Gramm said when a reporter asked if automatic cuts could damage him politically.

Parmer has repeatedly attacked Gramm for ties to troubled financial institutions. But Parmer is also vulnerable on the issue, particularly for savings and loans.

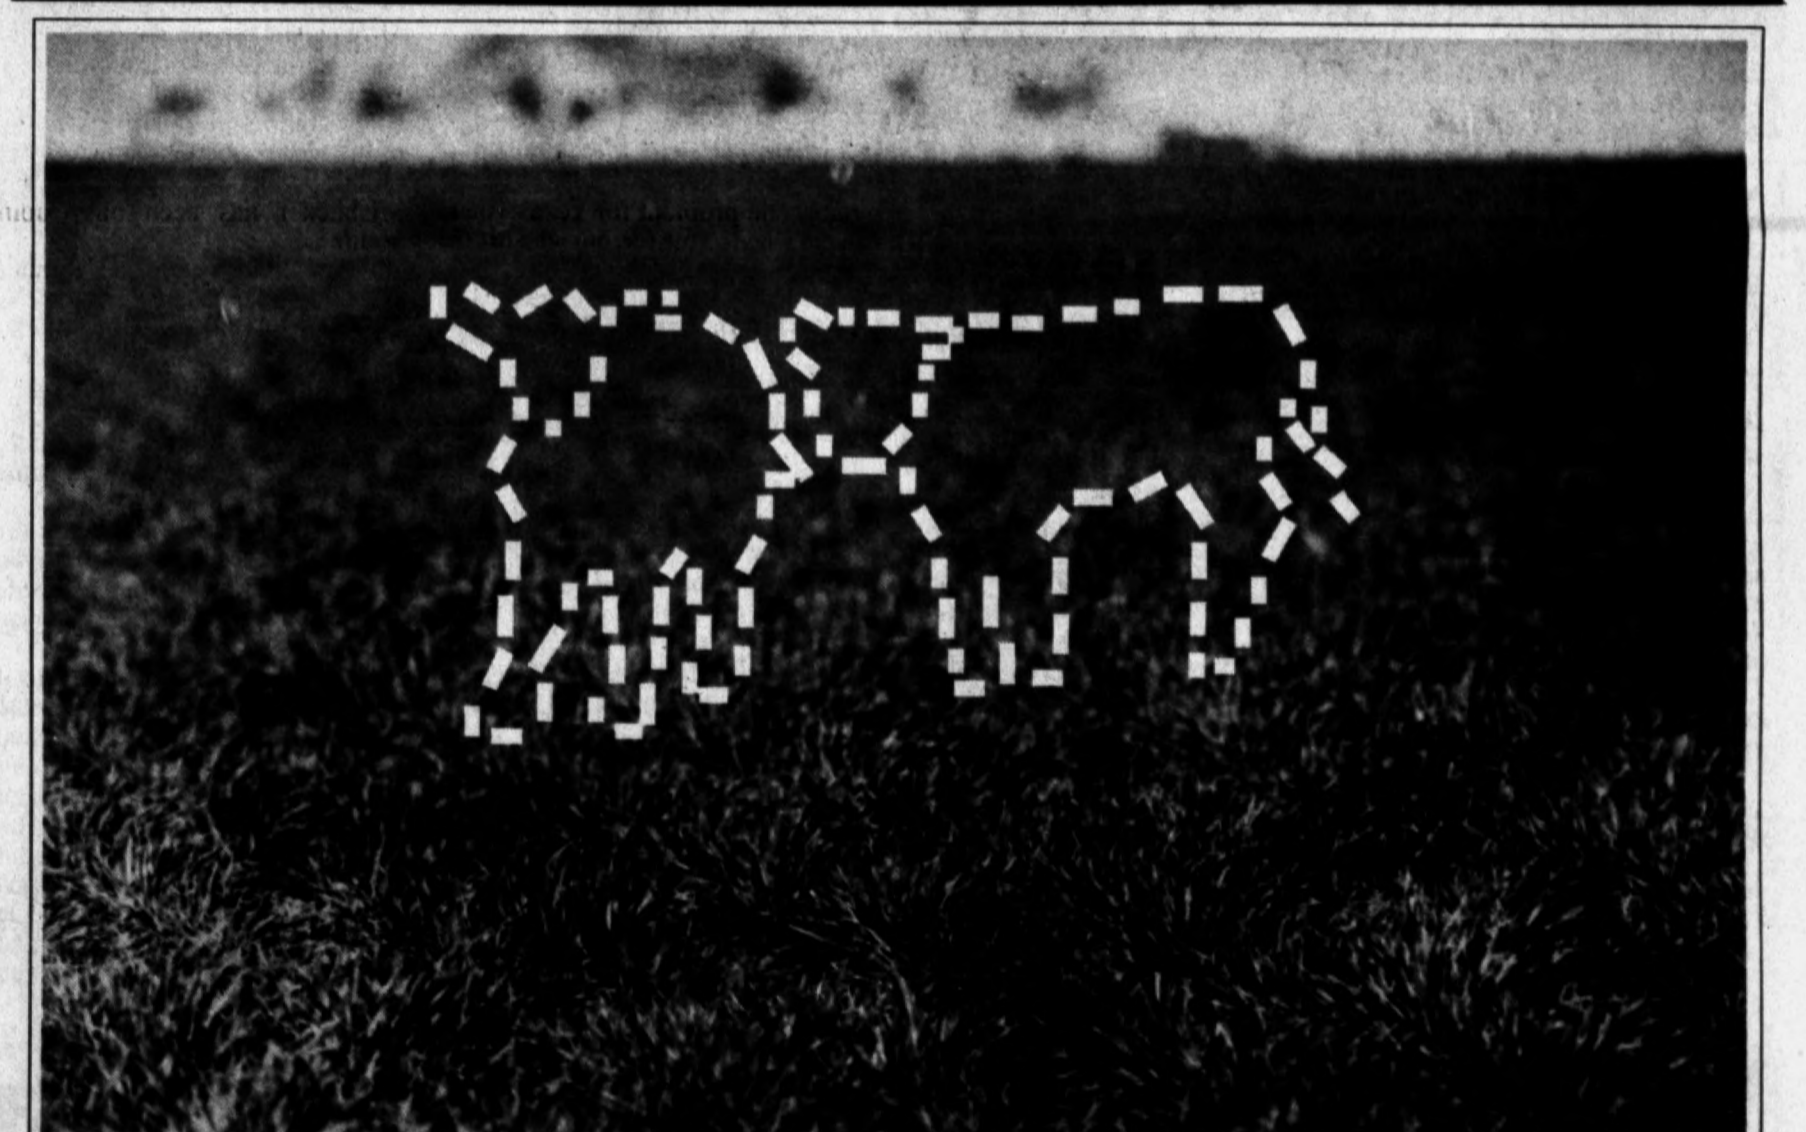

As a congressman in 1980, Gramm voted to raise deposit insurance and remove geographical lending restrictions for savings and loans.

Parmer was in the Texas Senate that deregulated state institutions in a 1983 voice vote.

Gramm accepted $86,098 from thrift-related interests during the 1980s, the sixth-highest total in the Senate and fourth-highest for a member of the Senate Banking Committee, a study of campaign contributions by Common Cause found.

Gramm has sponsored five constitutional amendments to ban abortion, but now supports the Texas GOP's legislative plan that would allow pregnant women to obtain abortions before the fetus is 20 weeks old.

Parmer says the government should leave the abortion decision up to women.

Herd raids Randall for Homecoming

By SAM WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces stayed in the thick of the District 1-4A race Friday with a 38-6 Homecoming thrashing of Canyon Randall before a packed house at Whiteface Stadium.

The Herd (2-4-1 overall, 1-0-1 in district) maintained its perfect record against Randall (0-7, 0-2) in three meetings between the schools.

The Herd offense, which rolled for a season-high 455 yards, produced five touchdowns in the romp. The Herd ground game accounted for 356 yards, paced by Matt Bromlow's 155 yards and a touchdown on 11 carries. Leo Brown added 93 yards on eight runs, most out of the slot, and Greg Urbanczyk tallied 50 yards and two scores on eight carries.

Herd coach Don Cumpston said the offensive diversity has helped increase production.

"We're just trying to mix it up," Cumpston said. "We felt like we executed pretty good most of the time."

"I think our line's getting better. They're improving every week. We were able to play a lot of kids in there with that group. Ralph (Martinez) made a difference. Getting him back helped us and he needed to play. He was real rusty. He hasn't played in three weeks."

Bromlow said the mixing it up was a key to Hereford's early offensive success.

"We ran a spread flip formation and used Urbanczyk in the slot in the first half and give me the ball," he said.

"In the second half we surprised them. I was in the slot and they thought I was going to run the sweep and I'll be danged if Urbanczyk didn't go down and score every time on the option."

"Then we just ran the basic offense with the toss like we've been doing and I got outside a few times. I got some great blocks, I really did. The offensive line did an excellent job."

Hereford's air attack also produced a pair of touchdowns. Starting quarterback T.J. Head celebrated his birthday by completing six of 13 passes for 73 yards. Head had two 11-yard scoring tosses to Bromlow and Derek Mason, both in the first quarter.

Head opened by completing four of his first five passes with both touchdowns coming in that span, but fell off with only two more completions in his last eight attempts.

"I think we surprised them," Head said of the early passes. "But we've still got to work on our passing game. We started out pretty well, but it kind of dropped off after that."

"The offensive line was excellent, though. I had all the time in the world and wasn't rushed any."

Chris Blair, who took over the offensive reins for almost all of the second half, went 2-for-7 for 26 yards with an interception and added 22 rushing yards on five carries.

"I was a little disappointed in our passing," Cumpston said. "We had some receivers open and we've got to get them the ball and we overshot them. But overall, I thought our quarterbacks played pretty good, we've just got to be a little more accurate. We'd like to throw around 55-60 percent (completion percentage). With the type passes we're throwing we ought to be able to do that."

And awaaaaay weeeee gooooo!!!!

Bromlow led the receivers, catching four passes for 50 yards while Rolando Ramirez, Louis Mungia, Mason and Jason Paetzold each hauled in one aerial.

The one problem on the night for Hereford was converting touchdowns.

The Herd botched three extra point kicks and failed twice while going for two. Bad snaps ruined two attempts as kicker Jesus Gonzales was forced to cover the first and a second led to his kick being blocked.

"I was disappointed," Cumpston said of the failed conversions. "I thought our kicking game wasn't very good all night."

"We didn't field punts. We let all the punts hit the ground and we can't do that."

"And then our extra points weren't very good. Jesus hurt his knee a little, but I think he's all right."

"And we didn't snap the ball real good. When you get down in a good, close game, that's critical. We've been doing a pretty good job with our kicking game, but I was disappointed in it. We'll have to work on that a little harder next week."

The Herd defense went with the bend-but-don't-break philosophy in the first half, allowing Randall inside the 35-yard line three times but keeping the Raiders out of the endzone.

The Raiders finished with 208 total yards with 162 coming through the air. Quarterbacks Brandon Barker and Danny Barrett, who alternated on every snap for most of the game, kept Hereford's defensive backs on the run all night with a total of 50 passes out of 73 offensive plays. Barker finished the game 11-for-30 for 101 yards while Barrett was 6-for-20 for 61 yards and a touchdown. Both were intercepted once.

Cumpston said the number of passes Randall put up was a surprise for the Herd.

"I really didn't expect them to throw that much," he said. "They put it in the air 50 times. We expected somewhere around 30 times. I guess they decide they couldn't move the ball on the ground."

Cumpston added that the Herd's pass coverage did well in the game, but said the pressure on the passer needed to be better.

"We played mostly zone," he said of the coverage scheme, "but we did play some man."

"We've got to get more pressure on the quarterback. We've got to figure out a way because we're going to play another team just like that next week in Dumas. We got to them some, and when we did it created some problems."

"Coach (Cumpston) said they would pass a lot," defensive tackle Eric Trujillo said, "but we were kind of scared they were going to run the trap. We would get a good pass rush, but when we started getting in too much they (Randall linemen) would go after our knees with cut blocks. The coaches showed us how to get around that, so we started getting in pretty good again."

"I think we got a pretty good pass rush, but they were holding and the refs didn't see it. When we'd get around them they'd just grab our feet."

Doug Richardson, who came into the game sixth in the state with 454 receiving yards, and Cory Musick led the Raider receiving corp with seven catches each. Richardson gained a game-high 76 yards and scored the only Randall touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Herd rover Steven Banner said the job of covering the Raider receivers proved to be a chore.

"We were going Cover 3 with the rovers out in the flat while the corners had deep coverage," Banner said, "and it worked pretty good. At first we weren't covering too good, but then we started getting used to it."

Randall's ground game disappeared in the second half as the Raiders were forced to throw. After rushing for 45 yards in the first two quarters, Randall managed 1 net yard rushing in the final 24 minutes. Musick led with 33 yards on eight carries while fullback Jason Salisbury added 24 yards on 10 tries.

"They were pretty good," defensive tackle Santos Liscano said of the Randall offense. "They got us to pass rushing and then all of a sudden they'd run the trap."

"In the second half we came out looking for the run first. We were expecting them to run either the quarterback draw or the trap, and we shut down the middle."

Hereford wasted little time putting the winning points on the board, driving the opening kickoff 65 yards in four plays. Brown raced for 39 yards on the first play and picked up nine more on the next play to put Hereford at the Raider 7-yard line.

"I think it worked quite well," Brown said of the play call. "I had a bunch of good blocking and we executed really well. Their defensive end was the only guy we had to beat. He skated out and I had to cut inside him, but after that they didn't have any more support over there."

After a penalty pushed the Herd back to the 12, Head found Bromlow in the left flat for the touchdown.

"I'm usually spread in the slot in trips (three receivers to one side)," said Bromlow, who has caught four touchdown passes out of a total of nine receptions. "The two wideouts will slant inside and leave me down the sideline, and that's picture perfect for me."

Randall came out firing with two guns following the kickoff as Barker and Barrett put the ball in the air on the first four plays. Barker connected with Richardson for 16 yards after a pair of incompletions to start a 14-play drive that reached the Herd 28. After Barrett hit Musick for 5 yards, the Raiders went to the ground three plays, the only time in the game they ran more than twice in a row. Barker converted a fourth-and-inches to keep the drive going, but after Barrett passed to Musick for 14 yards to the Herd 28, Randall lost the ball on downs with four consecutive incomplete passes.

The Herd moved the ball into Randall territory, reaching the Raider 40 in six plays before Head was thrown for a 6-yard loss on third down.

After an exchange of punts, the Herd regained possession at the Randall 48 and went right back to work. Brown and Head alternated carrying the ball the first four plays with Brown picking up 22 yards and Head 15. That set up Head's second 11-yard scoring toss to tight end Mason. Mason kept his perfect record on the play, raising his season total to two catches and two touchdowns.

Randall moved deep into Hereford's end of the field again after the score as Barker hit Anthony Nelson for 21 yards and Musick for 6, but the Raiders failed to convert on fourth down from the Herd 33.

Hereford gained three first downs in reaching the Randall 25, but Head misfired on four straight passes to turn the ball over.

The Raiders responded with their deepest penetration of the half, but once again came up empty when they couldn't make enough yardage for a first down. Barker completed three passes for 20 yards in the drive and Barrett hit Richardson for 14 down to the Herd 19. After a 4-yard run by Musick, Chris Tardy came up with a pair of defensive plays to end the drive. Tardy forced a scrambling Barker out of bounds for a 4-yard loss on third down and then knocked down Barrett's fourth-down pass.

The Herd offense stalled after making one first down, but Tardy's punt bounced off a Randall blocker and Cody Page recovered to put Hereford back in business at the Raider 42.

The Whitefaces took advantage of the gift and put the ball in the endzone three plays later. Bromlow

Top-ranked teams win with ease

By CHARLES RICHARDS

Aldine went by ground and A&M Consolidated by air in crushing their opponents and preserving their No. 1 rankings in Texas high school football.

Aldine defeated Houston North Shore, 63-7, behind Derrick Johnson's 160 yards and three touchdowns, while A&M Consolidated beat Brenham, 34-7, on the four touchdown passes of quarterback Tommy Preston.

The other No. 1-ranked teams also won.

Vernon rolled past Graham 41-3 in 3A, Groveton beat Buffalo 68-0 in 2A, Munday beat Paducah 42-0 in 1A and Fort Hancock defeated Imperial Buena Vista 47-2 in six-man.

There will be some shake-ups in the polls, however. Two previously undefeated 5A teams, third-ranked Longview and sixth-ranked Tyler John Tyler, both took a tumble.

Longview was beaten by Nacogdoches, 33-12, and Tyler John Tyler was upended by Marshall, 28-14.

Tyler John Tyler took a 14-0 lead in the second quarter, but tailback D.D. Turner led Marshall back. He scored on runs of 2, 6 and 1 yards for the Mavericks, although he had only 44 yards in 20 carries.

Herd finally has that kind of game

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Look, over there, there's half of the first-team offense gathered around injured quarterback Richard Sanderson. He's diagramming a play on the blackboard, with blocking schemes and the rest of the who-goes-where stuff.

There's a coach who never chews tobacco getting a chew of tobacco.

There's the first-string offensive line dancing to "Louis, Louis." In the middle of the fourth quarter, no less.

What kind of football game is this?

Well, it's one the Hereford Whitefaces have been looking forward to all year long, a 38-6 laugher Friday over Canyon Randall. You could tell it was going to be a long night for the Raiders when they didn't receive the ball for either half's opening kickoff: Hereford won the toss but deferred the choice until the second half, Randall took the brisk south wind at its back, and the Herd said what the heck, we'll take the ball.

Then the wind changed to the west later on, the Raiders were absolutely ruined. Of course by the time the wind changed it wouldn't have made a leaf flutter. The Herd led 20-0 and would score three more times, including two Matt Bromlow touchdowns within 15 seconds, in the second half.

"This win is real good. It will pick everyone up, pick our spirits up," said quarterback T.J. Head, who had nine yards rushing and 73 yards passing including two touchdowns. "The line blocked real well, and we established the passing game a whole lot. We still have work to do on our passing game. To be a top-rated team you gotta be able to pass the ball."

"The option worked well, too. The option puts a lot into our offense and spreads the defense out."

It can kill a defense when it absolutely keys on tailback Matt Bromlow. The Raiders were so intent on stopping Bromlow that it left fullback Greg Urbanczyk free to run for the last Hereford touchdown of the night.

The Herd split Bromlow out to the wing and left Urbanczyk alone in the backfield. "We just ran the option out of the one-back and they all keyed on Matt," Urbanczyk said. "The coaches said we could break it but nobody thought it would work that well."

"We just clicked all night. We had a great first half and the third quarter we came out and jumped on 'em. We had a good crowd for Homecoming and we played to suit the crowd. We made the plays we needed to make as a team today."

One of the defensive stalwarts was tackle Monroe Timberlake, who was busy chasing a Randall quarterback tandem through 49 passing attempts.

"It feels great right now," Timberlake said. "Their guards were going at our legs and their quarterback had time in the first half. We got after him and got in his face in the third quarter and that was it. He threw the pass Matt intercepted and it was all over."

"You gotta give them some credit. Randall was a little better than some people thought, but we finally got the breaks and made things happen."

Reds win again, look to sweep

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Maybe there will be a sweep in the World Series after all.

Following Oakland's sweep of Boston in the American League playoffs to run its postseason winning streak to 10 games, there were predictions of four quick victories over Cincinnati. It hasn't quite turned out that way.

The Reds are one victory away from putting the A's in their broom closet. In another stunning display, Cincinnati beat Oakland 8-3 Friday night in Game 3.

What's going on here? "We came to the World Series to win, not just to be an opponent," Reds manager Lou Piniella said.

The Reds can wrap things up in four games if Jose Rijo can beat A's ace Dave Stewart again.

Oakland's dream of a dynasty is a loss away from crumbling and Billy Bates, Chris Sabo and Billy Hatcher are helping to tear it down hit by hit. Sabo was the A's basher in the third game, hitting two homers before most of the crowd at the Oakland Coliseum had a chance to eat a hot dog.

By the end of three innings in Game 3, the Reds led by five runs and everyone knew the Nasty Boys were waiting. Rob Dibble and Randy Myers indeed came on and finished Tom Browning's victory.

The A's were shocked in Game 1 when the Reds chased Stewart after four innings, surprised in Game 2 when Joe Oliver beat Dennis Eckersley with a 10th-inning hit and stunned in Game 3 when the Reds scored seven runs off Mike Moore and Scott Sanderson in the third inning.

The Reds hit .342 in the first three games and scored 14 of their 20 runs in the first three innings.

Sabo hit a home run leading off the second inning. But Harold Baines put the A's ahead briefly with a two-run homer in the bottom of the inning off Browning, who struggled to hold on until Dibble came to the rescue in the seventh.

The Reds sent 11 batters to the plate in the third and scored their seven runs on seven hits to chase Moore.

Hatcher singled with one out and moved to third when Oakland's Mark McGwire bobbled Paul O'Neill's hard grounder to first for an error. Eric Davis followed with a single to tie the score and designated hitter Hal Morris' RBI grounder put the Reds ahead. But they were far from finished.

Sabo hit a two-run homer to make it 5-2. The only other time he has hit two homers in a game was April 13 of this season against Atlanta. The third baseman also made several outstanding defensive plays, doing a fine impression of Brooks Robinson's work against the Reds in 1970.

Todd Benzing followed Sabo's homer with a single, moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Joe Oliver's double. Mariano Duncan added an RBI single and Barry Larkin a run-scoring triple to cap the inning.

The A's had a chance to make things interesting in the fifth when Rickey Henderson and Carney Lansford walked with two outs but a hurting Jose Canseco flied out to right. When he grounded to short in the eighth, the fans left at the Coliseum booted the A's superstar.

the kickoff for the touchdown in three plays after Randall elected to take the wind. Urbanczyk started with a 4-yard gain and bromlow added five more before ripping off a 61-yard score on a toss to the left.

Bromlow put six more on the board just 15 seconds later when he picked off Barker's first-down pass and returned it 25 yards for the touchdown.

Randall could get nothing going on offense in the entire third quarter. The Raiders held the ball for only three minutes, 22 seconds covering five possessions. The Herd defense did not allow a first down in the period and limited the Raiders to zero net yards.

The Whitefaces closed out their scoring on their third possession of the half, driving 80 yards in six plays after a Randall punt went through the endzone. Bromlow finished his night with a 37-yard run to the Randall 33 and Blair kept for 17 on the next play. Urbanczyk capped the drive by going the final 16 yards with an option pitch.

Randall made another scoring threat after Kyle Collinsworth picked off a Blair pass to give the Raiders possession at their own 46. Four plays later found Randall at the Herd 25, but the defensive reserves came up with three straight plays to thwart the attempt. Kent Simnacher knocked down a Barrett pass and Chad Burns sacked Barker for a 5-yard loss before Miguel Casas intercepted Barrett at the 4. Casas, who missed three games with a sore knee, returned the ball to the Herd 44 before being hauled down from behind.

Hereford's offensive backups started moving the ball after the pickoff, but Ramirez lost the handle on third down and Randall's Todd Wagner came up with the recovery at the Herd 45.

The Raiders managed to reach the endzone this time as three passes netted 32 yards and a defensive holding call put the ball on the 7. Barrett then found Richardson for Randall's only score.

YOUR EYES

PAIR AND A SPARE

People usually don't realize how much they depend on their eyeglasses or contact lenses -- until they don't have them! Perhaps the reading glasses have been left behind on the night table, or someone has carelessly stepped on glasses and smashed a lens and/or the frame. Bad enough if this happens at home; worse yet if you're on a trip in a foreign country.

Fact is, anyone who can't see at least 20/60 at a distance, or who can't read or see small objects clearly close up, should have a spare pair of glasses in case of emergency. Keep them handy in the car, at your desk, in your suitcase if you're on a trip, or even in your locker at the shop. Even if you don't choose a designer frame for your spare pair, the lenses should reflect your latest eyeglass prescription so you can see your best.

Even contact lens wearers should have an emergency pair of glasses in case a lens tears or the eyes become irritated.

Spurs' Mitchell rebounds from drugs

By DAVID FLORES
San Antonio Express-News
 SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Groping for light in a life dimmed by the haze of alcohol and cocaine, San Antonio Spurs forward Mike Mitchell cried out for help on March 11, 1987.

He hadn't fallen off the proverbial cliff, but he definitely could see the end of the road coming up quickly. The sight scared him.

"Everybody likes to see the light at the end of the tunnel, but I saw no light," Mitchell says now. "I could see myself losing everything. Not only financially, but my kids, my wife and everything I had worked for. I was broken spiritually more than anything else."

So, after trying to cope with alcohol and cocaine problems for nearly eight years, Mitchell interrupted his NBA career that spring day by checking into a rehabilitation center in California.

March 11, 1987, is a date crystallized in Mitchell's memory, marking what has turned out to be a milestone in his life.

"I took control of my life," Mitchell told the San Antonio Express-News before an informal workout with other Spurs players at Incarnate Word College. "I knew it would be a turning point. Periodically, I had been using cocaine since my third year in the league.

"I hadn't gotten to the point where I was doing what others have done when they're addicted, but I knew I had a problem with it. I didn't want to go down that road. I felt like I could handle it, but I couldn't."

Mitchell's wife, Diana, said her husband sought treatment for his drug and alcohol problems after painfully concluding he was on a path to self-destruction.

"When Michael entered the drug rehab, it saved our marriage," Diana said. "I had had enough. We had gotten as low as you can get. He knew if he continued, he would kill himself."

Mitchell's drinking problems started earlier in his NBA career, when he was playing with the Cleveland Cavaliers. But it was the cocaine addiction that drained him financially and nearly wrecked his life and marriage.

"My trouble was with both of them," Mitchell said of the alcohol and cocaine. "I never was high on the cocaine. I never played high. I'd use it (cocaine) after a game and when I had a day to recuperate."

The cocaine habit sapped Mitchell emotionally and physically, but the addiction took its biggest toll on his wallet.

"If you're not a multimillionaire, it will break you," Mitchell said. "And if you are a multimillionaire, it will kill you."

Asked to estimate how much money he spent on cocaine, Mitchell pondered the question carefully before replying, "I really don't know. I spent tons of money."

More than three years after those dark days, Michael Anthony Mitchell is back in a Spurs uniform and living a life of sobriety. Tempered by the trials he has endured, Mitchell is a changed man these days. His priorities have changed and so has his life.

"I've been dry for three years," Mitchell said with a smile. "I haven't touched anything. I take it one day at a time."

Signed during the Spurs' playoff run last season after playing in Italy the past two years, Mitchell is determined to make his second stint in San Antonio special.

"I feel like it's a second chance," Mitchell said. "Whenever you get to play with guys like David Robinson and Terry Cummings, you have to feel good. You know you have an opportunity to play on a team that can win a championship and that's what every player wants, that championship ring."

Asked if he can handle the fast pace in the NBA - the long road trips, the postgame temptations and other pitfalls - Mitchell said, "I don't foresee a problem. If I did, we would have stayed in Italy."

Armed with a smooth turnaround jumper, Mitchell was an integral part of the Spurs' success in the early '80s before injuries and his personal problems slowed him down.

He averaged 20.1 points a game in seven seasons before leaving San Antonio as an unrestricted free agent in 1988. He averaged 20.6 points in 31 playoff games during that first tour, helping the Spurs win their second and third consecutive Midwest Division titles. San Antonio also reached the Western Conference finals in '82 and '83.

"He was about the same kind of player Cummings is to us now," said Bob Bass, the Spurs' vice president of operations. "Mitchell had to play 37 or 38 minutes a game and we depended on him to be one of our major scorers, along with George Gervin."

Mitchell made the Western Conference All-Star team in 1981-'82, when he played 27 games with Cleveland before getting traded. A No. 1 draft choice of the Cavaliers in 1978, Mitchell was traded to the Spurs along with Roger Phegley for Ron Brewer, Reggie Johnson and cash on Dec. 23, 1981.

At age 34, Mitchell is the oldest player on the Spurs' preseason roster, but returning to San Antonio has put the spark back in his career. Mitchell, 6-foot-7, 235 pounds, may be considered old by NBA standards, but his age has given him added incentive during the off-season.

Although Mitchell played in only four playoff games last season, Spurs coach Larry Brown was impressed with his attitude and leadership qualities.

"Mitch is a real positive person, one I want our young players to be around," Brown said. "I think we've made it clear that we're making an effort to get some good guys. It's important to us that we get older guys that are good guys and have good character."

"What kind of player he is, I don't know. When we had him, we were in the midst of the playoffs and didn't have time to work with him much. If he gets himself in shape, he's going to have a chance to play."

Bass has seen a dramatic change in Mitchell's attitude since he overcame his drug and alcohol problems.

"He's a responsible person now and very dependable," Bass said. "He seems to be very dedicated to his family and to the goals he has of developing as a person."

"Before, he had problems because of the drugs. Drugs, in many respects, make a person live from day to day, hour to hour, waiting to get another high. He didn't take care of his money and he wasn't a responsible person."

Mitchell attributes his alcohol and cocaine problems to an addictive personality and his socioeconomic background as a youth growing up in a poor Atlanta neighborhood.

"Everybody always asks why, but I say, 'Why not?'" he said, trying to explain why he turned to alcohol and then cocaine. "I grew up in the lower projects in Atlanta. There were six kids and my mother. Then, all of a sudden, I'm making all this money. Why not?"

Diana Mitchell has known her husband since he was 15. Married for more than 12 years, they grew up in the same neighborhood and their families knew each other.

The couple has a daughter, Kiah, 11; and a son, Mike Jr., 8.

"Michael had a good grasp of right and wrong, but sometimes it's a struggle growing up with the things around you," Diana said, recalling her husband's days in Atlanta. "It was more difficult for the males because the rules were different. There wasn't always a clear-cut right or wrong because so many things were accepted."

Mitchell escaped the throes of poverty by starring in basketball, earning All-American honors at Price High School before signing a scholarship with Auburn.

"Michael was all basketball," said Diana, a psychology major at UTSA. "It literally saved his life early on."

Diana said her husband "wasn't much of a drinker" in college, but started having alcohol problems early in his NBA career.

Although painfully aware of Mitchell's trouble with alcohol, Diana was stunned when she discovered he was a cocaine addict. Life became almost unbearable as Mitchell's problems mounted.

"It was so gradual," Diana said. "He did not bring drugs into the house. I mean, he may have physically brought them into the house, but he didn't use them at home."

"I lived with him and he hid the habit from me for a couple of years. Cocaine is so deceiving."

After the initial shock, Diana recalls being nearly overwhelmed by "immobilizing fear," and a sense of helplessness.

"I knew that drugs can very easily kill you," she said. "It's like playing Russian roulette with your life. I felt fear for all of us. Then, after the fear, anger, I thought, 'How could you do this to us?' Finally, before the final stages, I thought he would kill himself."

"I had this fear of somebody saying, 'Your husband is dead.' I was beyond the humiliation. I told Michael, 'I can't live with you and watch you kill yourself or hurt somebody.'"

Mike and Diana Mitchell have had their lives touched profoundly by alcohol and drug problems, dating back to their childhoods and extending beyond Mike's addiction. Both had alcoholic fathers and each lost a brother in drug-related murders in Atlanta.

Mitchell denied having a dependency problem until his career took a downturn early in the 1986-87 season, when he injured his left knee in the 10th game. After undergoing arthroscopic surgery, Mitchell was on the injured list for 11 games before returning to action. But he never started again.

He missed the last 20 games of the '86-87 season when he admitted having alcohol and drug problems. Mitchell spent 45 days at the ASAP Unit of the Van Nuys Psychiatric Hospital near Los Angeles. ASAP is an acronym for Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program.

"If I hadn't admitted myself, I probably would have been kicked out of the league," Mitchell said. "At ASAP, they gave me the tools to quit but it took more than that. I turned to God and my family."

Mitchell played in 40 games that season, averaging a career-low 12.7 points and 2.6 rebounds a game.

It was a drastic dropoff for Mitchell, who had led San Antonio in scoring the previous season with an average of 23.4 points a game. He also had averaged five rebounds a game.

He returned for the '87-88 season, but suffered another knee injury and underwent surgery on Nov. 12. He still managed to play in 68 games, averaging 13.5 points and 2.9 rebounds in what would be his last NBA season until joining the '89-90 Spurs.

Mitchell left the NBA in 1988 and played in Brescia, Italy, for two seasons before signing with the Spurs last April 23. He averaged 1.5 points in the four playoff games.

Now an older player on a team loaded with some of the best young talent in the league, Mitchell faces the challenge of adapting to a new role in his second tour with the Spurs. No longer a star, Mitchell will be called upon to provide solid bench help for a title contender.

"We want him to play 15 to 16 minutes (a game)," Bass said. "He has to be a rebounder and do the job defensively. We want him to go all out and play a physical-type game, and run the floor the best he can."

"He's in terrific shape right now. He's been working with the weights and is hard as a rock. He really wants to play. That's the difference when players get up in their careers, willing to play any role and accept any role. Some older players don't want to adjust their game. Mitchell is still ready to contribute."

Mitchell speaks to youth groups as often as he can, drawing from his experience to warn about the dangers of alcohol and cocaine.

"It made me a stronger person and a better father," he said. "I learned a lot. I just wish I had learned all those things without going through what I did. If I can reach one person, it's all worth it."

Mitchell scoffs at the notion that peer pressure contributes to drug abuse. "I don't talk about peer pressure," he said. "You can tell your kid to eat collard greens, but if he doesn't like them, he isn't going to eat them."

Hussein hastens hay hike

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Saddam Hussein's Mideast skirmish has cast a long shadow across Southwest cattle country where hay prices have jumped from $2 to $10 per ton in the past two weeks.

Chopped alfalfa, a favorite livestock roughage among Beef Belt cattle feeders, is now moving into the Texas Panhandle area at between $94 and $103 per ton, a steep hike from the old $90 per ton level a month ago. And commodity brokers fear that corn and other livestock feedstuff will take similar trends as high fuel costs begin to leak into the grain bins.

Despite a big glut in hay supplies across the nation and a predicted bumper corn crop of more than 8 billion bushels, commodity costs to the livestock producers are swinging upward. Corn had held a bearish trend until this week when prices began inching upward at a time when they should have been taking a nose-dive straight into the bear-barrel. A bumper summer wheat crop was also an enhancement to the U.S. feedgrains supply—but then came the Crises in the Gulf.

The 1990 hay crop is closing out as one of the biggest on record across the continental United States, with a predicted 3 million tons over the 1989 crop. Add this increased tonnage to a 2 million-ton carryover last spring and the bottomline shows that the U.S. hay stack is 5 million tons greater than at this same time in 1989.

But due to 50-cent hikes in a gallon of fuel at most commodity crossroads of the Southwest, freight is pushing up the price of groceries at the production level.

"You sure can't blame the truckers for these hay hikes," said Jake Holster of Amarillo, Tx., a veteran hay broker of the Great Plains. "For several weeks, they tried to absorb the increased costs of fuel, hoping that things over in the East would cool down. But they finally had to throw in the towel and ask for more freight money."

Holster, who buys and sells hay in big volumes across a half dozen states, said he had to add a $2-per-ton cost for fuel last week for all hay going to customers in the Texas Panhandle. But this is a token compared to what others are adding.

In a random check of feedyards across the Texas Panhandle last week, good quality chopped alfalfa was costing the cattle feeders on an average of $96 to $98 per ton. However, a number of the cattle feeders reported paying higher price tags of $100 to $103 per ton delivered. As of last week, Holster said he had been able to hold the price of chopped alfalfa to $94 per ton for all of his customers in the Texas Panhandle.

Due to heavy rains and uncertain commodity prices last week, most cattle feeders were buying hay on a week-to-week basis, with only isolated reports of long-term bookings. A regional check of hay supplies revealed an abundance of alfalfa at nearly all commercial production areas of the Great Plains and Front Range of the Rockies. Similar reports were also found east of the 100th Meridian in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas where normal to above-normal rainfall has been received since midsummer. Even South Texas got swamped in August and September.

Alfalfa hay stacked loose at the end of the fields in west-central Kansas and southeastern Colorado was moving in limited sales at $55 per ton in the field. But in recent days, as result of Crises in the Gulf, hay producers in these Kansas-Colorado irrigated areas have developed a bullish attitude at the market place, holding for $60 per ton in the field for loose stacked alfalfa.

On the other side of the fence in the dairy quality fields of hay, the prices have remained bullish straight through the summer growing season despite a bountiful crop from New Mexico to Colorado.

"I don't know what keeps the stuff (dairy quality) up there," said Holster. "All I know is that the people who have it are asking premium prices and I guess they're getting them."

Holster said he had moved a limited amount of dairy quality hay out of Colorado fields to Texas Panhandle consumers at $120 per ton delivered - "But heck, that's ($120) what they're asking for it in the barn over in the Pecos Valley of New Mexico."

C.M. Moffatt, a long-time hay producer and broker of Carlsbad, N.M., said most of the Eastern New Mexico dairy and horse quality alfalfa was holding at $120 per ton, or more, in the barn or stack, with alfalfa cubes priced at around $110 per ton FOB point of production. However, much of the Pecos Valley alfalfa production caught damaging rain, forcing the green stuff into commercial markets of the Texas cattle feeding industry.

Moffatt in recent weeks has also been importing chopped alfalfa out of Mexico, with most of the good quality hay selling at around $90 per ton from the Presidio Port of entry. Moffatt said he had been delivering some of the Mexico production into the El Paso region at between $109 and $112 per ton.

Though the Mideast crises hit the U.S. farm belt late in the season, the turnrow producers still felt the brunt of the fuel hikes. As West Texas crude doubled in price in about six weeks, the cost of fuel and fertilizer for most farmers jumped about $36 per acre for rice, about 30 per acre for corn, and $14 per acre on wheat production and some $12 per acre for soybean producers.

USDA economists predict commodity producers will spend $900 million more for fuel, fertilizer and pesticides for every $5-per-bushel increase in crude oil. Ag economists say this projected hike could be attributed to $400 million in direct increased costs in fuels and lubrications, with the $500 million balance going into the fertilizer hopper. Since there's no shortage in natural gas supplies at this time, it's possible, but not likely, that anhydrous ammonia prices will not be affected.

At the beginning of August, one barrel of Texas crude would buy about 6 bushels of Texas corn, but as of last week, one barrel of Texas crude would buy about 16 bushels of Texas corn.

At the turnrow level of the hay business last week, a barrel of Texas crude had almost reached the price of a ton of Colorado hay.

Pintos prove profitable plant

LUBBOCK -- A fourth of the approximately 930 million pounds of pinto beans grown annually in the U.S. are sold south of Interstate 10, mostly in Texas, New Mexico, California and Old Mexico. Now, Texas producers are beginning to cash in on that staple of the increasingly popular Tex-Mex and barbecue cuisines.

Experts estimate that Texans wolf down about 150 million pounds of pintos a year.

This year, some 18,000 acres of pintos were grown in Texas, with about 90 percent in the High Plains, says Dr. Roland Roberts, vegetable specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. With yields averaging 1,500 pounds an acre, Texas is harvesting some 27 million pounds of pintos this fall.

That will make a lot of refried or barbecued beans, but it still is only about 16 percent of the demand in Texas alone, the Texas Department of Agriculture reports.

Colorado, Idaho, North Dakota and Nebraska produce about 81 percent of the nation's pinto supply. A large part of the Texas acreage is grown under contract to Colorado packers, Roberts said. Pintos harvested in the Texas Panhandle under such contracts are hauled to Colorado, packaged with locally grown beans, and often shipped right back through the Panhandle to Texas markets, he noted.

A few pinto beans have been grown in the Texas Panhandle since the 1970s. Usually they were a "catch crop" after a more traditional crop had been lost to weather or other problems. Acreage ranged from 200 to 1,000 acres a year.

But in the last five years, increasing demand and more attractive prices for the farmer have prompted increased interest and acreage. Sluggish markets in 1982-83 saw the price paid farmers drop as low as nine cents a pound. For the past two years, however, the price to farmers has been about 31 cents a pound.

From less than 1,000 acres in 1980, Texas production climbed to some 9,000 acres in 1989, doubling this year.

The pinto bean is an excellent crop for the High Plains and many other parts of Texas, Roberts says. They are successfully cultivated as far south as the Rio Grande Valley.

The fertile soils, low humidity and bright sunlight of the Texas High Plains produce an excellent quality pinto, Roberts said. "Beans are very susceptible to foliage diseases," he noted. "Our semi-arid climate and high light intensity—with day after day of sunlight—keep diseases down."

"And we have extended periods without significant rainfall, so we can get the (bean) crop to mature and the pods to dry so they can be harvested without disease."

Educational programs conducted for the past several years by Roberts and county agents of the Extension Service have helped Texas farmers understand how the crop can benefit them.

Questions, answers

Q. - I own a 2 1/2-story home that needs reshingling, and I could use some tips on working safely on a multigabled, steeply pitched roof. I'm also wondering about the most economical and practical way to go about the job. The roof now has three layers of cedar shakes over tar paper and boards of varying widths. Many of the boards have 1- or 2-inch spaces between them. We like the shakes, but the cost seems prohibitive compared to asphalt shingles.

A. - For working safely on a roof, wear loose-fitting clothes so you can move around freely. Also wear soft-soled shoes to prevent slipping. High-top sneakers with good ankle support are recommended. Never go on a roof on a wet or windy day.

Shingles can be slippery when wet.

On a steep roof, the roofing ladder should be anchored in place with a bracket or framework that extends over the ridge or roof peak. This is especially important for roofs with a 4 pitch or greater. You can also use roof brackets in conjunction with a ladder. The ladder's rungs provide a firm footing that will keep you from sliding down as well as convenient hand holds. Position the ladder so you won't have to reach out to the sides to work.

If you do have to reach out sideways, always hold the ladder with the other hand and keep your hips between the ladder rails.

As to reshingling, regardless of whether you use asphalt shingles or shakes, you will have to remove the existing three layers first. If you use wood shingles, these can go over existing boards. However, if you want to use asphalt, you'll have to cover the roofing boards with plywood sheathing. This is required to span the gaps between the boards so the asphalt shingles won't sag, forming horizontal grooves in the roof.

You are concerned about the cost difference between shakes and asphalt shingles. Wood shingles are considerably more expensive than asphalt - as much as three or four times the cost - and are more time-consuming to install. A professional might charge five to six times as much for the shakes.

Asphalt shingles come in various weight classes from 210 to 400 pounds per roofing square. A roofing square is 100 square feet.

RRC candidates spar over old issue

HOUSTON (AP) - Unlike some more high-profile statewide races this season, the candidates for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission have little to argue about.

But in step with 1990 Texas politics, they have little nice to say about each other and have discovered an issue to divide them, although they had to go back 15 years to find it.

Democrat Bob Krueger and Republican Beau Boulter, both former congressmen, are vying to replace Kent Hance on the Railroad Commission, the agency charged with regulating oil, gas and transportation. Because it controls the state's most important industry, a seat on the commission carries a lot of power. But because candidates woo the industry, they seem to say much the same thing.

"I think Bob Krueger's goals are the same as mine," Boulter said in a recent interview. "The question is, who can work with the Bush administration better and of course that's me."

Krueger also said the issues are similar and added, "I was voted the most effective new member of Congress by my colleagues. He was never voted the most effective anything that matters."

Krueger, a New Braunfels businessman, served in Congress from 1975 to 1979. Boulter, an Amarillo lawyer, served from 1984 to 1988. He returned to Texas after losing the Senate race to Lloyd Bentsen.

In Congress, both came to be known as champions of the oil and gas industry. Boulter sat on the Budget Committee and chaired the House Republican Energy Task Force. Krueger served on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee's energy and power subcommittee.

Both have won the "Hats Off" award from the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners.

Back in 1975, Krueger supported an amendment to the windfall profits tax plan that would have allowed energy companies to avoid the tax by plowing the profits back into oil and gas development. It also included a title that would have gradually decontrolled domestic oil prices.

It was defeated 220-202, with all but one Texas member supporting it.

Boulter reopened the issue in September, pegging it on the price increases resulting from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the renewed talk in Washington of a windfall profits tax.

"With the current rise of anti-Texas, anti-energy sentiment in Congress, the last thing our state needs is a liberal Democrat railroad commissioner with a history of supporting the windfall profits tax and other legislation harmful to Texas interests," says a Boulter fund-raising letter.

Krueger responded with a letter explaining that the windfall profits tax didn't actually become law until April 2, 1980.

"Neither of us was a member of Congress," Krueger writes. "And neither had anything to do with the 'windfall profits tax.'" He then describes his involvement in the issue leading up to the 1980 enactment as well as several points regarding the history of the amendment that he says Boulter got wrong in his letter.

Although the Railroad Commission has no say in such matters, Krueger says the issue is "as important to the oil industry as the First Amendment is to the press."

But in this race, he says the issue boils down to "one candidate (who) is willing to be honest and the other is not."

"It's the most desperate attempt at misrepresentation," he said.

Boulter said, "It's an issue as long as he says plow-back provisions stimulate growth. Anybody who believes that believes the government can tell you what to do with your money."

On more recent issues, both men favor a national energy policy that would stabilize oil prices and reduce reliance on foreign oil.

Boulter specifically proposes the proration of natural gas production and deregulation of the trucking industry.

Krueger supports an exploration cost recovery incentive in the federal tax code, which would permit the driller to recover 65 cents per dollar of capital invested in a dry hole against the income from wells drilled after a dry hole.

He says the trucking industry should be deregulated gradually because if "we took out all controls, jobs would be wiped out overnight."

Boulter has pulled out big GOP guns to campaign for him - Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Vice President Dan Quayle.

A Mason-Dixon poll dated Oct. 11, shows Krueger with 47 percent to Boulter's 31 percent. It had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent.

Boulter dismissed the poll, saying it over-samples Democrats. His latest data shows him 9 percentage points behind with 48 percent undecided.

Cowgirl Hall of Fame to host art reception

An art reception will be held Oct. 25 at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Hereford.

The reception will display work of two local artists, Andrew Wilks of Hereford and Randy Brown of Canyon. Both artists will be joined by the Hall of Fame's October-November "Feature Artists of the Month"...Dixie Clare of Cripple Creek, Colo. and Phil Borman of Alpine.

The reception will run from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday and will feature bronze sculptures as well as paintings.

The theme will revolve around the authentic old west, the contemporary cowgirl and wildlife of the Texas Panhandle area.

Wilks will show several pieces of his bronze sculpture work. The work is small to miniature in size, highly detailed and primarily of wildlife. Wilks' work has received awards at several art shows including The National Wildlife Art Show at Kansas City and The Texas State Arts and Crafts Show. His work is being displayed locally at Brookharts in Hereford.

Mail early for holiday delivery

"Mail Early." That's what the U.S. Postal Service is advising all Americans to do again this holiday season, especially with mail intended for their loved ones overseas. "With the military build-up in Saudi Arabia, we're expecting a big strain to be placed on our mail transportation system worldwide," says Allen Kane, Assistant Postmaster General for Delivery, Distribution and Transportation.

"With the massive mailing effort going on with Operation Desert Shield, transportation and processing capabilities will be extremely tight this holiday season," adds Kane. "The Postal Service will be moving a tremendous volume of holiday mail overseas. To ensure timely delivery, customers should send their cards, letters and packages bound for military and international locations as early as possible."

Cards and letters travel overseas by Air Mail/Priority only. To mail packages to any military overseas destination, customers can choose from one of three services: First-Class/Priority or Air Mail, Parcel Airlift Mail (PAL), or Space Available Mail (SAM). Information on the cost of these services can be obtained from your local post office.

For the fastest delivery, Express Mail Military Service is an option available to more than 200 APO and FPO facilities. Customers can also choose to mail with Express Mail International Service, available to more than 100 countries.

In terms of mailing within the United States, there is no specific deadline, but the Postal Service recommends that you send your holiday mail by early December. Typically, the largest mail volumes come during the week before Christmas.

"Mailing early ensures timely delivery and is important in the event winter storms delay air and ground transportation," says Kane. "Plus, it gives your friends and relatives more time to appreciate your gifts and holiday greetings."

"MO-JO! MO-JO! MO-JO!" This is the haunting cheer that rocks the stadium filled with 20,000 fans. The fans are not only there to root for the Panthers of Odessa-Permian, but to live out their own hopes and aspirations. From the watermelon feed before the first game, through the heart-stopping season and its dramatic ending, Odessa, Texas, lives its dream on the football field under the Friday night lights. Friday Night Lights by H.G. Bissinger is both a deeply moving and disturbing story.

This startling examination of the role high school football plays in America is more than a sports story. Friday Night Lights is about race, politics, economics, education and young lives whose course may be determined for good before they begin.

Barry Switzer's Bootlegger's Boy is his chance to speak the "truth" about his own recruiting techniques, the strategy and mindset that made the Oklahoma Sooners great. For 16 years Barry was reviled and praised by the media as the "outlaw" of college football.

When Barry stepped down as head coach at Oklahoma University on June 19, 1989, he was the fourth most successful coach in NCAA history. As a result of the excesses of some unruly players, media hysteria and a "witch hunt," Switzer has turned his back on college coaching for good. As Barry said, "This isn't a Bo, or Joe, or Lou book." His story isn't plain vanilla.

Almost Like A Song is Ronnie Milsap's biography. Born blind and raised in abject poverty, Ronnie's mother rejected him as a curse. Ronnie was then sent to a school for the blind where the students were beaten to instill discipline.

As part of the curriculum he was taught to play the piano and the music of Bach and Mozart. In 1970 Milsap had his own show and was touring the world's concert halls.

In 1977 Ronnie had a hit, that was named Album of the Year and Male Vocalist of the Year. Through out the 1980s Milsap has been at the top of his field, a star of the country-pop crossover, with six Grammy Awards, 20 million records sold and 35 number one hits.

Widows to be honored at meeting

Hereford Masonic Lodge #849 will host a supper and open meeting to honor all widows of its members.

The supper will be held Oct. 23 at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Masonic Lodge on Country Club Drive.

Honoring the widows of deceased members is one aspect of masons carrying out their pledge to assist the widows and orphans of members of the fraternity, according to the constitution and laws of the Grand Lodge of Texas.

The event is open to all masons, families and guests.

Laker is the story of a woman's heart and a troubled seventeenth-century England. Following civil war under Cornwell there was a time of deadly plague and the disastrous Great Fire of London.

During these turbulent times Julia Pallister is born. The daughter of Sotherleight Manor, Julia is sustained by a courageous, enterprising spirit, always determined to survive and to save the family estate. Julia is sure her destiny lies in marrying Christopher Wren, her childhood sweetheart and a brilliant mathematician and architect. Why then does she feel drawn to another man that she despises and is an enemy of her family?

A rare and beautiful drop-pearl was placed in Julia's palm and from that moment on Julia is haunted by a dream of a glowing, indefinable beauty.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Marcel Montecino, a college dropout who spent years popping pills, gambling and getting nowhere playing piano in bordellos, at bar mitzvahs and in New Orleans clubs, has finally struck it rich - writing.

"I can spit on a piece of paper and someone will give me $50,000," he said.

Montecino, 45, earned $250,000 for his first screenplay, "Improper Conduct," scheduled to be released next year.

Tom Cruise dished out $1 million for his second novel, "Big Time," published in August.

Montecino's first novel, "The Crosskiller," was a best-seller two years ago with 900,000 copies printed.

Refreshments of assorted cookies, a fruit tray, and fruit punch were served. The table was covered with a white cloth and adorned by a fall arrangement of leatrice, yarron, carnations, daisy, and mums. Also, decorating the table were two miniature racing bicycles depicting the enthusiasm of the sport by the bride and groom.

The shower honoree was presented a platter, vegetable bowl, and butter tray from her China selection by hostesses: Jeri Bezner, Juanita Bowles, Cindy Cassels, Margaret Forby, Carol Gerke, Pat Graham, Arvella Lauderback, Louise Leasure, Gene McDaniel, Jean Southern, and Jan Weishaar.

Spain new source for fashion footwear

Spain is emerging as the new creative center of Europe. In the arts and architecture, in films and fashions, Spain is moving forward...fast

Nowhere is this artistic renaissance more apparent than footwear. For the past four years, Spain's footwear designers and manufacturers have revved up their imaginations and taken a leadership role in fashion footwear. Already established as a global supplier of quality leather shoes, the industry has rounded up its best talents and put a stylish foot forward.

Brands like Castaner, Paco Gil, Roberto Gil, Josephine, Mila and Martinez Valero are becoming known to those who prize both quality and style.

This fall, shoes from Spain are lavish-in courtly flats, decorative pumps and short-stop boots. Alhambra to the architecture of Gaudi and the Velazquez paintings, designers from Spain have an entire living record of decorative arts to inspire them...and nobody does it better.

Toeing the mark this season: -Suede! Suede! Suede! This soft-touch fabric is favored across the board, and velvet emerges for day as well.

-A tapestry of rich colors: forest green, chestnut, ruby, garnet, onyx; punctuated with brights--often in patterns reminiscent of ancient mosaics.

Elaborate ornamentation, spotlight embroidery, passementeria, scroll work. Buckles and bows in filigree, suede and jewels are big--and are often oversized. Gold, in all its forms, adds polish and shine.

All of the color, ornamentation and tactile fabrication comes together in silhouettes concentrating

Owen to celebrate birthday

The family of Donnie Owen invites friends and relatives to participate in her 90th birthday celebration. The event will be held at the Hereford Senior Citizen Center, 426 Ranger, from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 28.

on covered-up looks. Shoes with high vamps and ornamental tongues lead the parade alongside pumps.

Moccasins and man-tailored styles are a strong category with ties, chains and monk-strap details. Low boots and shoe boots are complements to today's short skirts, long skirts and lean pants.

Heels are often stacked or curved Louis shapes and the most forward are made chunky by modified platforms and thick, micro soles.

At night, pumps take on a more delicate, slipper effect, always with the season's signature--opulent decoration.

"There's a reason for this lavish approach," says Mercedes Lamamie de Clairac, fashion director of the Commercial Office of Spain. "We are living in a time when women are buying clothes as investments--clothes to wear for awhile. Shapes are evolutionary rather than revolutionary; more conservative clothes invite the excitement of shoes that make a statement."

The statement for fall from Spain is a sea of riches, drawing from the past to step into the present!

Special little "Goblins" day just around the corner

Halloween is fast approaching, a very special time for some very special little "Goblins". Although, private Halloween parties have taken over for the traditional door to door "Trick or Treats", still many young children will be taking our neighborhoods for that all familiar chant. Major Vernon Cawthon, regional commander of the Department of Public Safety, suggest that, "if you, as an adult, will be participating in candy give away this Halloween, turn on your porch light to let children know that they are welcome. Remove any obstacles that a child might trip over and keep lighted Jack-O-Lanterns or candles away from steps or the front door where a child's costume could be ignited by flame." Parents should instruct their children in pedestrian safety rules, insure that everyone carries a flashlight and costumes should be reflective to help motorists spot trick or treaters. Make sure the costumes aren't loose fitting, causing the child to trip. Painting the child's face is preferable to wearing a mask. If a mask is worn, insure the child can see through it. Insure that all costumes are made of non-flammable material, especially wigs and masks. Parents should accompany their children, if possible. If not, the child should be instructed to go with a group and not stop at homes which are dark. Motorists should drive slowly in residential areas and be especially on the alert for kids darting from between parked cars and walking in the streets. Remember, let's all do our part to make this a Happy and Safe Halloween for everyone involved. SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - Assemblyman Tom Hayden said he had drinks with dinner, but denied he was drunk at a City Council meeting as some observers claimed.

Informal dinner recipes for small get-together

Everyone loves big lavish bashes and formal dinner parties, but organizing them-not to mention doing the cooking-can be time-consuming. And the problem with time is that we don't always have it.

As a result, it's too easy to postpone a large party forever, citing Scarlett O'Hara's philosophy: "After all, tomorrow is another day."

But there is no reason to feel pressured when giving a small informal dinner, and the tail end of winter is the perfect time for cozy get-togethers with friends. Keep it to just four, set a nice table and cook up some warming foods.

Bon Appetit, the leading food and entertaining magazine in the country, features a "fireside Supper" that is hearty, robust and full of bright flavor.

While the elements are simple, the combination creates a meal that is quite special. None of the recipes requires long or complicated preparation, and last-minute cooking is kept to a realistic minimum.

The perfect finish to this main course would be an apple pie, either homemade or from the bakery.

PORK CHOPS WITH PAPRIKA AND SAGE CREAM
4 servings

2 1/2 teaspoons imported medium-hot paprika
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper

4 six to eight-ounce pork loin chops, 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons (1/4 stick) butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
3 tablespoons minced shallots or green onions

2 teaspoons minced fresh sage or 3/4 teaspoon dried, crumbled
1/2 cup dry white wine
3/4 cup whipping cream
Salt and freshly ground white pepper
Fresh sage leaves

Combine paprika, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper in small bowl. Spread half of mixture on pork chops, pressing into both sides. Reserve remaining paprika mixture for sauce.

Melt one tablespoon butter with oil in heavy large skillet over medium heat. Add pork chops and brown well, about three minutes per side. Reduce heat to medium-low and saute until just cooked through, about three minutes longer per side.

Transfer pork chops to heated platter. Cover with foil to keep warm.

Pour off drippings from skillet. Add remaining one tablespoon butter to skillet and melt over medium-low heat. Add shallots and cook two minutes, stirring occasionally. Add remaining paprika mixture and minced sage, and cook 30 seconds.

Add wine and boil until liquid is reduced by half, scraping up any browned bits, about three minutes. Reduce heat to medium. Stir in cream.

Simmer until thickened slightly, stirring frequently, about three minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Add any pork juices accumulated on platter.

Spoon sauce over chops. Garnish with sage.

MUSTARD GREEN BEANS
4 servings

1 pound green beans, trimmed
4 teaspoons butter
4 teaspoons coarse-grained mustard
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Steam beans until crisp-tender, about five minutes. Drain thoroughly. Melt butter in heavy medium skillet over medium heat. Stir in mustard. Toss beans in mixture to coat. Season with salt and pepper. Serve immediately.

NEW YORK (AP) - Latkes (potato pancakes), fried in oil, are a traditional dish for Hanukkah, but any food fried in oil is suitable for the holiday.

The following recipes for Spiced Apple Doughnuts and Apple Fritters with Cinnamon and Nutmeg are provided by the Spice Trade Association.

SPICED APPLE DOUGHNUTS
 3 1/4 cups all-purpose flour, divided
 1/2 cup granulated sugar
 1 tablespoon baking powder
 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
 1 teaspoon ground allspice
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 2 eggs
 3/4 cup milk
 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
 3/4 cup finely chopped cored and peeled sweet apple
 Vegetable oil
 Cinnamon Sugar (recipe follows)

In a large mixing bowl combine 1 1/2 cups flour, sugar, baking powder, cinnamon, allspice and salt; add eggs, milk and butter. With an electric mixer, beat for 2 minutes on medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in apple and remaining 1 3/4 cups flour.

Shape dough into ball; place on well-floured board; roll to coat with flour. Pat dough out to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut out dough, using a floured 2 1/2-inch doughnut cutter.

Meanwhile, in a deep-fat fryer or large saucepan, heat 2 inches of oil to 365 degrees F (to test temperature, a 1-inch cube of bread will brown in 1 minute). Using a wide spatula, lift circles of dough; place in hot oil. Fry until golden brown, 1 to 1 1/2 minutes per side. Drain on paper towels. Roll in Cinnamon Sugar, if desired. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes about 1 1/2 dozen.

CINNAMON SUGAR

In a small bowl combine 1/2 cup granulated sugar or confectioners' sugar with 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon. Stir until well mixed.

MRS. ROBIN RAY RULAND
...nee Sharon Ann Wright

Wright, Ruland united in marriage Saturday

Sharon Ann Wright and Robin Ray Ruland, both of Hereford, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in Wesley United Methodist Church in Hereford.

Officiating for the ceremony was the Rev. Don Kirklen of Immanuel Lutheran Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. David Wright of Orlando, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. Shorty Maxwell of Hereford. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ruland of Hereford.

The church altar was adorned with two brass spiral candelabra flanked by greenery and silk peach bows. The pews were marked by garland of greenery with silk peach bows.

Karen Wright, the bride's twin sister, served as maid of honor and Selwyn Moore served as best man.

Cynthia Daniel was bridesmaid. Guests were escorted by Wendell Turner.

Destin Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robby Cook, served as flower girl. Brandon Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn Moore, served as ring bearer.

Linda Davis accompanied Heather Smith as she sang "Only God Could Love You More," "I Will Be Here," "There is Love" and "The Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by Mr. Shorty Maxwell, the bride wore a traditional white satin gown encrusted with miniature pearls and beads featuring a Queen Anne neckline and a satin fitted bodice overlaid with silk Venice beaded sequins. The full length lace sleeves were designed with puffs at the shoulders. The dropped waistline featured a full flowing satin skirt with a full length train with ruffles enhanced by miniature pearls and lace.

The bride wore a fingertip-length illusion veil with satin bow and floral spray. It was attached to the back of a rose crown headpiece.

She carried a cascading bouquet of peach and white satin flowers tied with ribbon streamers in colors of gray, peach and white.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a 1931 class ring belonging to her grandmother and a double string of pearls.

Bridal attendants were attired in peach taffeta tea-length dresses with a sweetheart neckline, fitted bodices, short puffed sleeves and bows accenting the back of each dress. Each carried miniature bouquets identical to the bride's.

Jeannine Shackelford registered guests at the reception held at the church. Cake was served by the groom's sister, Chelli Wilkinson, and Emma Gonzales. Tables were covered with a white cloth with antique lace belonging to the groom's grandmother.

The three-tiered peach and white cake featured roses and hearts around each pillar. The cake was topped with the traditional wedding bell encircled in a heart. On each side of the cake were crystal candle holders belonging to the groom's grandmother.

The groom's chocolate cake was decorated in the form of a police badge.

For the wedding trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the bride wore a lace collared pullover sweater of acrylic knit with a pleated burgundy print skirt.

The couple will make their home in Hereford.

The bride is employed by the Office Center in purchasing and accounting.

The groom is employed by the Deaf Smith County Sheriff Department as a deputy.

PHOENIX (AP) - Robert Redford has begun shooting "The Dark Wind" on the Hopi and Navajo reservations in Arizona despite threats of a blockade by leaders of a Hopi village.

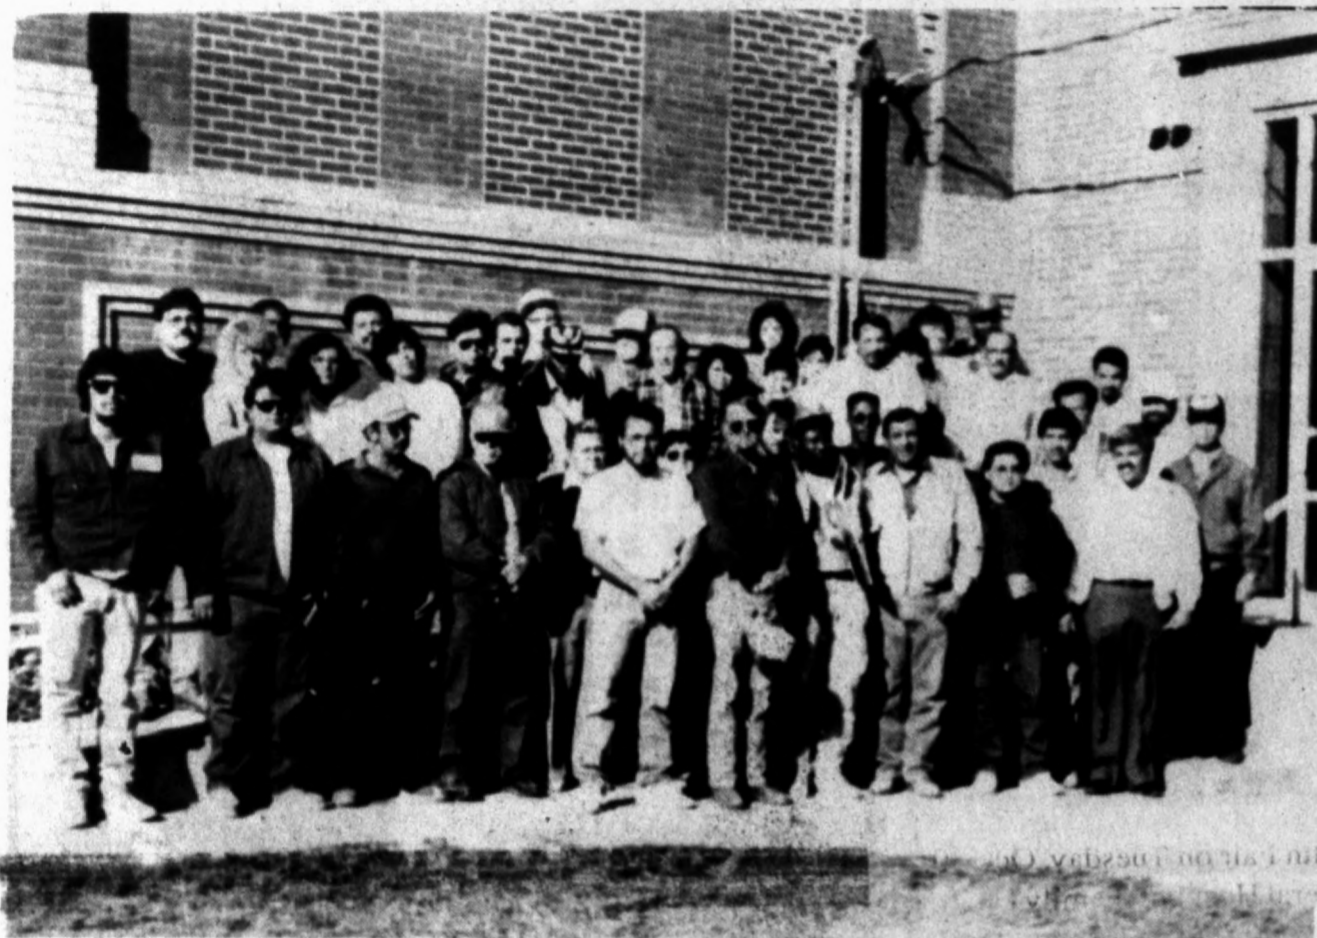

The film is based on a novel by Tony Hillerman.

Tribal officials gave permission for filming on the reservation, saying they had been assured by Redford's production company that the movie would be sensitive to Hopi culture and religion.

But leaders of the Hopi village of Shungopavi claimed the script, which was not written by Hillerman, gives a sacrilegious portrayal of Hopi secret ceremonies and depicts Hopis as inept, profane, murderous drug users.

Spokeswoman Bertha Torres said the script's "underlying theme was that Hopis are not very bright compared to Navajo people." Village leaders want all aspects of Hopi religious beliefs deleted from the script, she said.

The village has threatened a blockade, but Hopi police said they knew of no attempts to disrupt the filming, which began Monday.

Safety first

The maintenance and custodial staff from Hereford Independent School District attended a special training on First Aid and Safety. L. V. Watts and Mike Foster of the Deaf Smith General Hospital Paramedics conducted the course. The administration of HISD feel it is important for the personnel of this school district to be well informed involving the safety of our children.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ol' Blue Eyes is miffed. Now that George Michael has made it to the top, Frank Sinatra says, he shouldn't squander his talent by withdrawing from public view.

"Come on, George. Loosen up. Swing, man," Sinatra wrote in a letter to the Los Angeles Times a week after the newspaper featured a complaining Michael.

"Here's a kid who 'wanted to be a pop star since I was about 7 years old,'" Sinatra wrote. "And now that he's a smash performer and songwriter at 27, he wants to quit doing what tons of gifted youngsters all over the world would shoot Grandma for - just one crack at what he's complaining about."

Troy Wharton on his ranch.

"Sometimes you don't appreciate what you have until you stand 'way back and look at it. That's what I did."

"I was born only a few miles from where I now live and represent the third generation of my family on this ranch. And, while I always loved it here, I never really appreciated it fully until my wife Betty and I traveled to many other places. This included 13 trips to Africa in a five-year period.

"Of course, the startling contrast between Africa and here is not surprising.

"But, in our visits to other parts of this country, we see a lot of difference, too. This area has a decided edge ... our people. They are truly concerned about their families and friends. Folks here have the opportunity and the desire to spend time with their children. It's the quality of our people that sets us apart from most places right in the U. S. A.

"This is one of the last places in the world where the latch-string is still on the outside."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I worked my way through college, graduate school and four years of doctoral training, while raising a family. My goal was to do medical research.

I work 12 hours a day and generate my own salary and the salaries of two technicians. I do basic research in cardiology, lecture to university faculty and medical students, write papers and consult on a project for lowering cholesterol. I don't do this for the money, because the pay is poor. I don't do it for fame, because the public neither knows nor cares. I do it because I want to be a contributing member of society.

These last several months, I've been thinking about calling it quits. Why? Because I live in fear that my lab will be destroyed and my family harmed. The animal rights people are becoming increasingly militant and powerful. They keep denying it, but their intention is to stop all animal research. Their tactics are brutal and frightening.

I do not blame the general public for not understanding any of this. Scientists don't communicate very well with lay people. We aren't good with public relations and we aren't organized. The public needs to be reminded that the medical advances they enjoy today are the result of basic research done 10 or 20 years ago. Now, only 10 percent of all requests for federal grants for medical research are approved. The results of this travesty will soon be felt in emergency rooms and operation rooms throughout the country.

A few nights ago, I turned on the TV news and watched the latest animal rights demonstration. I wanted to yell, "Don't come to me when you have your heart attack. Don't cry on my shoulder when your child dies from sudden infant death syndrome. Don't ask me to help your son who has AIDS. Don't expect sympathy when your father has Alzheimer's or Parkinson's. Don't call me up when your wife has cancer. Don't expect me to console you when your grandchild is losing his sight because of juvenile diabetes. I did all I could!" If this letter sounds bitter, it's because I am.--No Names, No City

DEAR NO NAME: You are not the first scientist to say you are abandoning medical research because of fear and worry for your family's safety, but please don't quit. We need you.

I've been on your side for a long time, and so has Dr. Louis Sullivan, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services. He has called the animal rights people "terrorists." He also has made it clear that he is against unnecessary research and the cruel treatment of animals, I'm with him there too.

It is not true that computers can now replace animal in the labs. For example, an important part of AIDS research is done with monkeys. They are indispensable.

Many people who give money to animal rights organizations believe they are supporting worthwhile projects, such as spay and neuter programs, but actually their money goes for ads and propaganda opposing the use of animals for medical research. The sums collected are staggering.

Guerrilla tactics have cost researchers millions of dollars that could have gone to save human lives. This is an obscenity and an outrage. If dedicated researchers like you drop now, our children and the generations to follow will pay a terrible price. Please don't let this happen.

BAKED FRUITS

- Choose apples and pears that hold their shape well when baked. The preferred apples for baking are Red Rome (Rome Beauty), Winesap, Granny Smith, McIntosh, Jonathan and Golden Delicious. Although most pears work well, some of the preferred varieties are Anjou, Bartlett and Bosc.

- Coring whole fruit is easy if you invest in a long, cylindrical apple corer. With just a twist or two of the corer you can remove the cores and seeds from apples and pears.

- To keep the peel from splitting during baking, use the peeling edge of an apple corer or a vegetable peeler to remove a strip of peel around the top of the fruit.

- Experiment with different fillings for baked apples and pears. For starters, try granola, chocolate chips, coconut, nuts, or a cinnamon-sugar mixture.

- To see if the fruit is done, poke it with a fork. If the fork goes in and comes out easily, the fruit is done. Baking time varies slightly with the size of the fruit.

COBBLERS

- Always use the size dish called for in the recipe. The filling will bubble high during baking and the dish needs to allow for this. For extra insurance, place a baking sheet or pizza pan under the baking dish to catch spills.

- In order for the bottom of the biscuit topping to cook, the filling must be hot when the biscuit mixture is dropped on it. Prepare the filling first and keep it over low heat while mixing the topping. Then quickly pour the filling into the baking dish and drop on the biscuit mixture.

- To check doneness, after the minimum baking time is up, insert a wooden toothpick into the center of one or two of the biscuit mounds. If the toothpick comes out clean, the cobbler is done.

Gas.

It's A Natural Way To Protect Our World.

Leading scientists tell us that increased use of natural gas could dramatically improve the quality of our environment. Gas is the cleanest burning of all fossil fuels. So, unlike other fuels such as oil and coal, natural gas doesn't emit high levels of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. These pollutants are believed to be a major cause of many of the environmental problems facing us today.

One way in which natural gas is now being used to help reduce air pollution involves the injection of gas into coal burning facilities. This procedure can result in reducing nitrogen oxide emissions by as much as 60%.

So, when it comes to heating your home this winter - or cooking your food or heating your water - natural gas is the way to go.

Natural gas. It's clean. Dependable. And environmentally friendly. That's why, gas is a natural.

ENER GAS

Easy-bake cake

There's no reason not to treat Mom to breakfast in bed when Dad and the kids can make the cake from a muffin mix. Chocolate chips are used in the batter, and the topping is made with unsweetened cocoa powder and chopped nuts. (Photo: Better Homes and Gardens magazine)

The U.S. receives more legal immigrants than any other country. Between 1820 and 1984, about 52 million people officially arrived on our shores.

Portugal: Ancient beauty enriches young and old

Travel to Portugal: For children, it's a fantastic educational experience. For adults, it is even more so. A land steeped in history, Portugal abounds in museums with some of the finest collections in the world; and centuries-old monasteries and palaces, some of which are now converted into charming Pousadas, the state-run inns dotted about the countryside.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR
Continuing to Live

Continuing to live is much more than the accumulation of days, and weeks, and months and years. Continuing to live, to live in the full and true sense of living is in quality of life. We must make sure that we stay alive while we are living. There will be what we call good days and bad days, but we must not permit anyone day to become the whole of life.

There is a continuity about life, but we must be wise and diligent to make this continuity meaningful. Some days will be so big, or seem so big, and it may be a good day or a bad day, that we are inclined to let it become, more or less, the whole of our life. This must not be.

As nearly as possible, we must bring each day to a satisfactory close. Of course, our days are related, but, as nearly as possible, we must let or make each day complete in itself. We must not permit any experience of the moment to over-balance or overshadow the whole of our life-experience.

We may be discouraged today, we may be disappointed, we may even fail; but it is important to us to see tomorrow as another day, a new day. We deal with the past so that we give ourselves a fair chance to make each new day the best day it can be.

It is obvious that many people quit too soon. They, in a sense, resign from life, and just seem to let themselves be dragged along with the movement of time, actually letting life pass them by. They seem to give up. We should never do this. "Some men give up their designs when they have almost reached the goal; while others, on the contrary, obtain a victory by exerting, at the last moment, more vigorous efforts than before." - Polybius.

Each day is a new day, and this means that our living must continue with renewed vigor, growing hope, firm resolve, and un-ending optimism. This is "continuing to live." Let us not grow weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we do not become discouraged.

NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Cosby has dropped a colorful mural shown during the opening credits of "The Cosby Show" in a dispute with a teacher whose Harlem students inspired the artwork.

The dispute involves a mural painted on a Harlem building by children at the Creative Arts Workshop for Homeless Children, and a similar painting shown on the top-rated NBC series.

Workshop director Brookie Maxwell said the children who painted the original, "Street of Dreams," should get credit on the TV show and be paid if the idea is marketed.

"I've ordered it taken off the show. It has nothing to do with the kids. Has to do with this woman, who is trying to hold us up," Cosby said Tuesday.

"It's the principle of the thing," said Cosby, the highest-paid entertainer in the world.

The Costa Verde region is especially renowned as the cradle of the Portuguese nation. It was originally inhabited by Celtic tribes, followed by Romans, Visigoths and Moors. Here you'll find Porto, home of the Port wine trade; Braga, one of the earliest Christian towns with a 12th century cathedral, baroque churches and shrines; Valença, a lovely 13th century fortress town guarding the border with Spain; and Viana do Castelo, capital of Portuguese folklore, famous for its colorful costumes, embroidery, filigree jewelry and ceramics.

Portugal is much more than a land of history. It's a place to relax over a glass of wine in a little cafe overlooking a 16th century piazza; unwind on long sandy beaches; swing a golf club on the old continent; or swing at night, in glamorous casinos or discos; join the fun in a country folk festival; cast for trout in crystal mountain streams; go after big game fish or hike on mountain trails.

When people come to Portugal they find Europe as they expect it to be—old world culture, old world tradition, old world charm. You find it wherever you go in Portugal—old walled cities with cobblestone lanes leading to castles rising above the plains; fishing villages where life revolves around the tempo of the sea; strangers are invited to join village festivals where young people dressed in local folk costumes handed down from generation to generation whirl to the tune of a "vira."

There's shopping galore, especially in the markets of the Algarve region—colorful and noisy, where bargaining is the order of the day. Also shop in Lisbon, the glittering capital city with its delightful "Tax Free" shops. Load up your suitcase with fine Portuguese wine, jewelry, porcelain, colorful pottery, woven textiles, and the unique, handpainted tiles called azulejos.

Also in Lisbon visit the Alfama, the charming ancient Moorish quarter with narrow, winding streets, crowned by St. George's Castle;

Belem, from where the ships of Vasco de Gama and other explorers set sail; Azcoitao, the picturesque wine region; and Cabo Espichel, a popular ancient pilgrimage center with spectacular views of sea and mountain.

Accommodations in Portugal range from luxurious five-star deluxe establishments, to a 15th century manor house, to the pousadas, where the roof over your head can be that of a former palace, castle or an old monastery.

For free brochures that can tell you more about vacations in Portugal, see a travel agent or write to the Portuguese National Tourist Office, 590 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10036-4704 or call 212-354-4403.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been skinny all my life, but with the help of lots of between-meal snacks of whole milk, cheese, crackers, peanut butter and such things, I gained 30 pounds in the last 30 years. At age 70 I was almost up to standard. I'm now 71, active and in excellent health except for mild hypertension, which is under control. My doctor told me my cholesterol was much too high and I must do something about it.

Well I am bringing it down, but I am also losing weight — only 2 pounds in six months, which doesn't sound like much until you think how long it took to gain it. What can I do? My doctor is one of the best in this area, but he isn't a dietitian and besides, he is obviously struggling to keep his own weight down. I think he simply cannot imagine having to search for extra calories.

Have you any suggestions other than to eat more? I've had that advice since I was a skinny 6-year-old and have always eaten as much as I can without becoming nauseated.

DEAR READER: You don't have to be overweight to have a high cholesterol level. The genes you inherit affect how your body metabolizes food, including how it forms cholesterol. Also, some overweight people have very good cholesterol levels because of their genes. It is not all just diet and exercise.

Your genes also affect whether you are "fat" or "skinny." That is why many people tend to stay within the same relative weight range even with wide variations in their diet and exercise patterns.

But if your genes designed you to be skinny, and you persist in overeating to try to weigh more than nature intended for you to weigh, you may well have a high cholesterol level. Perhaps you should have accepted being thin and not tried to overeat to weigh more a long time ago. If you lose weight and get on the "skinny" side now, you may be simply bringing yourself back into line with what your own weight should be.

The same rule applies to your long-suffering doctor. He may have the genes to cause him to have great difficulty in staying lean, even if he knows all he needs to know about nutrition. It is not fair to think he doesn't know about nutrition simply because he may have different genes than you have.

If a person consumes more calories than he or she needs, the other aspects of the diet are not likely to be that beneficial. Your past diet sounds like the kind of diet that provokes the body to produce high total cholesterol levels. Whether you need to lose weight or not depends more on what your diet, total cholesterol and blood pressure are than what the scales say.

You should at least eat low-fat, low-cholesterol foods with attention to limiting your saturated fat intake. Watch your sweets as well. Maintain your calorie intake with good protein foods such as skim milk and lean poultry, fish and beef. Your other cholesterol values are also important, such as your HDL-cholesterol, "good-cholesterol" and LDL-cholesterol, "bad cholesterol." I'm sending you Special Report 44, Understanding Cholesterol and Triglycerides, to help you with this. Others who want this report can send $2 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/44, P.O. Box 787, Gibbstown, NJ 08027-9908. If a proper diet and exercise program does not control your cholesterol levels, then medicines may be used. The program to control your cholesterol should also benefit your high blood pressure.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 14-year-old female with a question about the benefits of aerobics. Recently, I joined a health club that offers a variety of aerobic classes. There are also different weight-lifting machines designed for toning. I do both. But I read that aerobic exercises burn hardly any calories and do little for someone trying to get in shape. Am I wasting my time?

DEAR READER: They help to develop a good strong heart and good lung capacity. A good exercise program that begins early in life, and is continued, is an important aspect of health. Aerobic exercises such as dancing and running require the use of a significant number of calories in a short time. That is the key to working the heart at a higher level for the best results.

Even if a small amount of exercise doesn't use a lot of calories at one session, the cumulative calorie use over a year makes a lot of difference.

Strength exercises using the machines or free weights are also important. They help you to build a strong and larger skeleton. That will help prevent bone loss from osteoporosis later in life. It is not wise to use too much weight or resistance until the skeleton has matured.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 787, Gibbstown, NJ 08027-9908. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Gotcha Daniel!
