Witness says Richards used cocaine

By The Associated Press

A New Mexico newspaper today reported that a Santa Fe, N.M., tour operator has told the San Antonio sheriff he witnessed Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards using cocaine 13 years ago.

The Albuquerque Journal said Richards' campaign denied the charge. Calls from The Associated Press to her campaign's headquarters early today were answered by a machine.

The Journal said tour operator J.D. Arnold told a Bexar County sheriff's investigator that he saw Richards use cocaine in a foyer outside a restroom at the Stoneleigh P. bar in Dallas during the early morning hours of Dec. 7, 1977, after a fund-raising banquet for then-congressman Jim Mattox.

Richards' staff said Arnold is a former aide to Mattox, who Richards defeated in a bitter Democratic primary runoff.

After Richards refused to say yes or no when asked during a debate whether she had ever abused illegal drugs, Mattox sought to make that question a campaign issue during the primary.

The Richards campaign said Arnold is an unreliable source because of his past run-ins with the law and that Arnold's charge is a tactic by Richards' opponent, Republican Clayton Williams.

Judy Powers of Los Alamos, N.M., said she was at the gathering that night and said Richards never was there.

"I don't know why he'd want to help Clayton Williams, he's been a lifelong Democrat," Ms. Powers said. "But I do know that Ann Richards was not there."

Jim DeLesdernier, chief of the criminal investigation division for the Bexar County Sheriff's Office, said he flew to Santa Fe on Monday to talk to Arnold as part of an investigation into drug trafficking in the San Antonio area. He said the trip was not politically motivated.

DeLesdernier refused to confirm whether there had been an allegation of cocaine use by Richards. "We have quite a heated governor's race here and at this point, I would rather not confirm it or deny it," he told the Albuquerque newspaper.

DeLesdernier said Sheriff Harlan Copeland authorized the trip to interview Arnold. He said that although Arnold's charges involve events past Texas' five-year statute of limitations, he believes they could lead to more recent incidents.

"Don't you think that on the surface it stinks?" Monte Williams, a spokesman for Richards, said Wednesday.

"It's laughable that the Bexar County sheriff would spend taxpayers' dollars to send a minion to Santa Fe to ask about some crap in 1977 that a former Jim Mattox employee alleged happened in Dallas County," he said. "This is a sign of how desperate the Clayton Williams campaign has become."

"Harlan Copeland cannot accept the fact that Clayton Williams is likely to lose this race. It's clearly a ploy by Harlan Copeland," Monte Williams told the newspaper.

"It's just sad that (Clayton) Williams has to go to New Mexico to peddle a story that he can't sell in Texas," Monte Williams added.

Reggie Bashur, a spokesman for Williams, denied the campaign had any involvement in Arnold's charges.

Arnold told the Journal that he made the charges public "because I can't stand Ann Richards. I'm so sick of her. I'm sick of everything she's done. It all goes back to the comments she made (about Mattox), like 'He's like a chicken-killing dog.'"

Richards' campaign workers say Arnold was charged with rape in Dallas and that he's been convicted of DWI, the newspaper said. Arnold denied ever being arrested or charged for DWI and said the Richards campaign is trying to discredit him. He said the rape charge was filed by a former lover and was dropped by the grand jury without hearing his testimony.

USSR : no deals with Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's emissary to Iraq is calling on President Bush with assurances of solid Kremlin support for tougher international sanctions aimed at forcing Iraq out of Kuwait.

U.S. officials said envoy Yevgeny Primakov stressed that Moscow wants to keep working through the United Nations to reverse the Aug. 2 invasion with political and diplomatic measures. Primakov stopped in Rome and Paris this week on his way to Washington.

"Among the new steps under consideration are demanding reparations from Iraq for what Secretary of State James A. Baker III calls "the rape of Kuwait" and possibly an international trial of President Saddam Hussein as a war criminal.

The U.N. Security Council has banned virtually all trade with Iraq, but after more than two months of occupying Kuwait the Iraqi leader has not bowed to the pressure.

Primakov gave no indication in his talks with Italian and French officials, or in his meeting Thursday with Baker, that Gorbachev has an alternative formula to end the Persian Gulf standoff, the U.S. officials said before today's White House meeting.

After seeing Baker on Thursday, the Soviet envoy ruled out any deal with Saddam that would reward the Iraqi leader for pulling troops out of Kuwait.

"We should look for some possibilities to avoid, from my point of view, the military clashes, but not reward Iraq, of course, with its actions," Primakov said in halting English before climbing into a waiting black limousine.

The Soviet official, who was accompanied by Deputy Foreign Minister Viktor P. Karpov, then met for a half-hour with Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser.

Asked whether Primakov reported seeing any signs that Saddam might soften his position, Scowcroft told reporters, "he says he's interested but ... there wasn't really anything new" in what Primakov reported.

The unannounced visit to the State Department revived interest in hints that the Iraqi leader might withdraw his troops from the oil-rich emirate in exchange for a strategic island that controls access to Iraq's only military port in the Persian Gulf or for free elections in the emirate and compensation for Iraqi oil claims.

The United States and the Soviet Union are cooperating in efforts to force Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait through economic pressures. But as war talk mounted, Gorbachev sent Primakov to Baghdad in search of a political settlement.

Baker reaffirmed that the administration would be willing to consult with Congress before sending troops into combat, but offered no commitment beyond that.

Ready for a birthday bash tonight

Hereford quarterback T. J. Head (1) turns upfield after getting a key block from Leo Brown (3) in last Friday's game at Pampa. Head turns 18 today and hopes to celebrate that birthday with a Homecoming win against Randall at 7:30 p.m. at Whiteface Stadium.

Will the budget be a pork barrel

Or will Congress bring home the bacon at last?

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Alfonse D'Amato took to the Senate floor this week, scolding his colleagues for spending beyond their means.

"What about some fiscal discipline? What about a freeze?" the New York Republican demanded. "What about maybe a cut? What about eliminating some programs?"

Hours later, D'Amato's press secretary was on the phone giving reporters what has become the senator's nightly pork report - i.e., a list of millions of dollars for New York projects won by D'Amato's legendary tenacity on the Appropriations Committee.

Is Congress trying to cut spending or bring home the bacon? The answer is, both.

On the floors of the House and Senate, Congress has been debating proposals to reduce the budget deficit by $500 billion over the next five years. Meanwhile, conference committees have been meeting to craft appropriations bills that will spend the government's money.

The timing could hardly look worse. Just this week, one of the 13 Senate appropriations subcommittees received a wish list of 28,000 special projects from various senators, said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark.

"Those same senators then come in here with unctuous, pontificating statements about how, if we could just freeze this or that, we could get the deficit under control," Bumpers said on the Senate floor Wednesday.

And with elections less than a month away, members need to look fiscally tough at the same time as they're taking credit for this bridge or that veterans' hospital.

Take Rep. Doug Barnard Jr., a Georgia Democrat locked in a tense re-election race. On Tuesday, Barnard issued a press release saying he had voted against the House budget package because it would have hiked taxes by $149 billion over five years.

"If the rest of the Congress had followed my lead and voted for across-the-board cuts and freezes to spending bills all year, we wouldn't be faced with trying to find massive cuts here at the 11th hour," he said.

The next day, Barnard issued another release bragging that Fort Gordon - in his district - will get $10.6 million from federal coffers for a "soldier support center" that would consolidate all administrative offices.

Of course, only the politically naive would expect a senator or congressman to give up money for a pet project, right?

Well, maybe not.

Last week, Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich., walked into the energy and water development appropriations conference and asked that $3 million to clean up the Rouge River near Detroit be stricken from the bill, the money returned to the Treasury.

"As far as I know, it was an unprecedented move - removing a project from a bill," Pursell said afterward on the House floor. "If each member of this body followed suit, and would give up any of their projects, the numbers would begin to become significant."

Senate okays plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senior tax-writers in Congress are looking for a hurry-up compromise between vastly different deficit-reduction bills. A central issue: whether the middle class should pay higher taxes for gasoline or on their earnings.

The Senate passed its plan 54-46 this morning, with a majority of both parties supporting it.

"One more big hurdle and then we'll have the job done," said Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine.

Many Republicans still were not forgiving President Bush for abandoning his pledge to oppose tax increases. "Raising taxes in the face of a recession is a hare-brained idea," said Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., who voted against the measure.

Congressional leaders said they would attempt to reconcile differences between the Senate plan and the version the House passed Tuesday in time to get a completed agreement to Bush before midnight, when federal spending authority expires.

New ad attacks Williams

AUSTIN (AP) - Clayton Williams' campaign called a new commercial by Democrat Ann Richards a vicious attack, but Richards aides say it merely quotes the Republican gubernatorial candidate.

"The more the people see of him, the better for us," said Richards consultant Glenn Smith.

The spot began airing statewide Thursday. It repeats Williams' controversial joke about rape, plus a more recent comment that he hoped Richards, a recovering alcoholic, "didn't go back to drinking again."

The commercial ends with an announcer asking, "Governor Williams?"

A spokesman for the GOP candidate, Gordon Hensley, called the commercial "evil and malicious." He said it underscored the reason Richards had refused to sign a "positive" campaign pledge.

"Richards has been smoked out of her negative campaign cocoon. It is now clear why she wouldn't join Clayton Williams in his pledge to the people of Texas to run positive television spots," Hensley said.

Aides to the Democratic candidate said the ad is designed to remind Texans of remarks the Republican has made over the past several months. "We're showing people what Clayton Williams has said through the whole campaign," said Monte Williams, another Richards aide.

"There's no question these are his statements through the course of the campaign."

The Richards commercial recounts four remarks made by Williams since he became the GOP nominee.

The most controversial was a joke about rape, made last March, when he likened bad weather to rape and said if it were inevitable "relax and enjoy it."

Williams quickly apologized, saying he didn't mean to offend anyone.

The commercial reruns news footage of Williams responding when Richards claimed a new poll would show her only six percentage points behind him. "I hope she didn't go back to drinking again," Williams said then.

The Richards commercial also cites a newspaper interview in which Williams said he was a conservationist but described himself as an "anti-environmentalist" and of his claim that he would "head-and-hoof her and drag her through the dirt" by election day.

Responding for Williams, Hensley said that Richards ad was nothing but an attack. He said it shows a growing desperation and indicated that the Democrat didn't really believe a new poll that showed her narrowing the gap with Williams.

"Richards is hardly reacting in a confident manner. It underscores the fact that the polls aren't as close as she would hope," he said.

RICHARDS

Here is the text of the latest campaign commercial being aired statewide by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards and the response of GOP contender Clayton Williams.

RICHARDS AD

(The commercial shows newspaper clippings and TV news footage in which Williams is quoted.)

Announcer: "Governor Williams, in his own words."

"He called himself, quote, 'an anti-environmentalist.'"

"On rape: It's like the weather. If it's inevitable, relax and enjoy it."

"On his campaign strategy: I'll head-and-hoof her and drag her through the dirt."

"On Ann Richards: Videotape of Williams speaking: 'I hope she didn't go back to drinking again.'"

Announcer: "Governor Williams?"

WILLIAMS' RESPONSE

Gordon Hensley, press secretary to the Republican candidate, called the commercial "evil and malicious."

Hensley declined to respond directly to the remarks quoted in the ad, but said it underscored the reason the Democrat wouldn't sign a "positive" campaign pledge as requested by Williams.

"Richards has been smoked out of her negative campaign cocoon. It is now clear why she wouldn't join Clayton Williams in his pledge to the people of Texas to run positive television spots," Hensley said.

Parks and Wildlife mag great gift for outdoorsmen

Looking for a great gift idea? Consider giving a one year gift subscription to Texas Parks and Wildlife magazine; at $10 it is a real bargain. The October edition is a 'Special High Plains Issue' and is full of magnificent pictures and great information about our part of Texas. You can call toll free at 1-800-937-9393 and ask them to start with the October issue.

The robins are migrating south through our area and quail hunting season is only weeks away. Now is a good time for adults to take a hunters safety course and it is a new state law that all younger hunters between the ages of 16 and 18 must take the hunter safety course before hunting. Call 1-800-792-1112 in order to find the name of a local safety instructor. Safer hunting is a goal of all hunters and this program will save lives. Don't wait until the last minute because it will take some 10 hours of instruction before certification is given.

Quail season opens statewide on Saturday, Nov. 3. The bird populations are up. The CRP program has really increased the grassy habitat for gamebirds and sufficient rains fell to help the younger birds. It is time for the bird dogs to start earning their keep.

Speaking of bird dogs and getting in shape. My chunky black lab is in better condition than his master. It has been some two months and twenty pounds since I quit smoking my pipe. I remember the sore legs of opening day last year and have vowed to not repeat that experience in 1990. So if you see two pleasantly plump hunters taking their morning and evening walks, give 'em a wave and an encouraging word. Funny, I don't remember needing to get into shape when I was in my 20s and 30s.

Deer hunters in the southern part of Texas can start their quest on Nov. 10 while the hunters in our northern region must wait until Nov. 17 for both whitetail and mule deer season to open.

The archery hunters are half way through their season and we are waiting for some good pictures. Send them to Southwest Outdoors in care of this paper. We will try to print them if you will mail us a print with your name on the back.

We are beginning a list of great Christmas gift ideas. Remember the gifts last year? This year you can quietly send us your favorite gift idea and we will put on the list. You dads out there, the kids really do need a little help so send up your gift ideas. In December, clip out the Gift Issue of Southwest Outdoors and presto, you have helped your loved ones and yourself at the same time.

SMU out to avenge 95-21

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Remember the Astrodome. That's the cry of the Southern Methodist Mustangs in Saturday's game at Ownby Stadium against the No. 9 ranked Houston Cougars.

SMU was slaughtered 95-21 by the Cougars in Houston last year when John Jenkins, now the Houston head coach, was offensive coordinator.

SMU coach Forrest Gregg is worried it could happen again.

"We'll have to play a great game or we'll have another lopsided score," Gregg said. "There is little difference in their team this year and the one last year."

Odds makers installed the unbeaten Cougars (5-0; 4-0 SWC) as 36-point favorites over SMU, which has defeated only Vanderbilt. Houston isn't eligible for bowl games because of NCAA sanctions.

In other games on Saturday, Texas (3-1 and 1-0) is host to Arkansas (2-3 and 0-2) in a noon (Raycom TV) game, Baylor (3-3 and 2-1) is at Texas A&M (4-2 and 1-1) and Texas Tech (2-4 and 0-3) is at Rice (2-4 and 0-3).

Texas is fresh off a 14-13 upset of No. 4 ranked Oklahoma. The Hogs lost their second consecutive SWC game 49-44 to Tech last week. It's the worst conference start for Arkansas since 1958.

Texas coach David McWilliams said being favored in the 'Horn-Hog series sometimes can be fatal.

"It most cases we seem to have a game go the other way than most people think it will go," McWilliams said. "Records don't mean anything. We've got a lot of confidence beating Oklahoma but we know we have to perform every game."

Texas was a seven-point choice over Arkansas, Texas Tech was a field goal favorite over Rice, and

A&M was a 13-point pick over Baylor.

Texas Christian, riding a four-game winning streak, is idle this week.

The Aggies will have to overcome the heartbreak of a 36-31 loss to No. 9 ranked Houston last Saturday.

Texas A&M led Houston 17-0, but eight turnovers allowed the Cougars to make a comeback.

"We're trying to regroup from a very disappointing loss," said Aggies coach R.C. Stocum. "This loss hurt as much as any I've ever suffered. We had the game then we gave it away to them."

The Bears broke out of an offensive slump with a 52-17 victory over Southern Methodist last week.

The Aggies lead the series 49-29-8 but most games are like the one A&M won 14-11 in Waco last year.

The Bears last won in Kyle Field in 1984.

Baylor is pinning its upset hopes on redshirt freshman quarterback J.J. Joe, who has 447 yards passing since he earned the starting job against Texas Tech.

"Joe can really run and has a knack of making things happen," Stocum said. "He has impressed me."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

MONEY IN A FISH'S MOUTH!

ARAMAIC, THE LANGUAGE WHICH JESUS SPOKE, IS STILL USED IN PARTS OF SYRIA TODAY IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM WITH THE SAME IDIOMATIC PHRASES AND SLANG. ONE OLD EXPRESSION IS "YOU CAN FIND A SHEKEL IN THE MOUTH OF A FISH" MEANING: IF YOU CATCH A GOOD FISH YOU CAN ALWAYS SELL IT EASILY AT THE MARKET. IF A MAN SAID "THERE'S TWENTY SHEKELS IN THE HORN OF MY GOAT," NO ONE WOULD CUT OFF THE HORN LOOKING FOR THE TWENTY SHEKELS—EVERYONE KNEW HE MEANT THE GOAT'S WORTH WAS TWENTY SHEKELS. TODAY, IF A MAN SAYS, "I'VE GOT SIX HUNDRED DOLLARS TIED UP IN MY CAR," WE WOULDN'T SEARCH HIS CAR LOOKING FOR A TIED UP BUNDLE OF MONEY—WITHOUT ANY OTHER EXPLANATION, WE KNOW IT MEANS HE'S SPENT THAT MUCH MONEY ON HIS CAR FOR REPAIRS OR SOMETHING OF THE SORT....

WHEN JESUS WAS IN CAPERNALIM AND THE ROMAN TAX-COLLECTOR ASKED FOR THE HEAD TAX EVERYONE PAID TO ROME (TWO SILVER COINS, WORTH A SHEKEL), JESUS TOLD PETER, WHO WAS A FISHERMAN, TO GO CATCH A FISH WHICH WOULD HAVE A PIECE OF MONEY IN ITS MOUTH (MATT. 17:27). MANY AUTHORITIES ARE AGREEED HE WAS USING THE SLANG OF THE DAY—IN OTHER WORDS, TO CATCH A FISH GOOD ENOUGH TO SELL ON THE MARKET FOR A SHEKEL AND THUS PAY THEIR TAX. DURING THE 1ST CENTURY A.D., WHEN THE GREEKS WERE TRANSLATING THE GOSPELS INTO THEIR OWN LANGUAGE, THEY HAD NO UNDERSTANDING OF THE TRUE MEANING OF THESE ARAMAIC EXPRESSIONS AND SO THE STORY CAME OUT AS THOUGH PETER ACTUALLY CAUGHT A FISH SWIMMING AROUND WITH A PIECE OF MONEY IN ITS MOUTH—WHICH DOESN'T MEAN JESUS COULDN'T WORK A MIRACLE IN THIS CASE, FOR HE RAISED THE DEAD AND HEALED MANY WHO WERE "BLIND, LAME, AND HALT"—BUT IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE HE NEVER PERFORMED MIRACLES FOR HIS OWN COMFORT AND BENEFIT!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 30 years old and have been reading your column since I was a teen-ager. I have never been angry enough to write until now.

I want to say that I am totally fed up with women who snipe at other women for choosing to work rather than stay at home with their children. As a mother and a teacher, I can tell you that staying at home does not always ensure good parenting. The well-adjusted children I have taught have had both stay-at-home moms and working moms. The same is true of problem children.

I have decided that this will be my last year of teaching for a while. I don't believe this proves I love my child more than a working mother loves hers nor does it prove that I am a better parent. The truth is however, I can no longer cope with the physical exhaustion of holding down two full-time jobs. At the same time, I admire the stamina of women who can. Without them we would not have enough teachers, nurses, social workers, etc.

The doctor who delivered my son is a working mother. There have been times when I don't know what I have done without her compassion and support. I do not feel, however, that these women are "super-moms." I detest that term. Without the stay-at-home moms, many working mothers would not have full-time baby sitters or transportation for their children to and from school. Nor would they have someone to call in case of an emergency.

For generations women have been fighting for the right to choose. Too often, the ones who make us feel guilty for the choices we made are OTHER WOMEN.

When will women realize that they have become their own worst enemy? We will never be treated with the respect and equality we deserve until we start treating each other decently. The feminists who blame men for their inability to get ahead in the world are barking up the wrong tree. Just sign me -- Tired of the Backbiting in Hamilton, Ontario

DEAR TIRED OF THE BACKBITING: That makes two of us. You would not believe the mean-spirited letters I receive from women lambasting their sisters who choose to stay at home with their children. Barbara Bush did a magnificent job of putting these types in their place when, in her commencement address at Wellesley, she praised homemaking as a noble profession. He comment really settled their hash.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Some dear friends of ours are going through a very difficult time. Last year their teen-ager was killed in an auto accident.

Grief has taken its toll on everybody, especially the child's mother. She wants no affection or sexual attention from her husband. She says she feels completely dead inside. (to casual observers, their relationship appears to be quite normal.)

The husband has confided that he misses the physical side of marriage and feels that it is time to resume that part of their life.

My question: Is it normal to grieve for so long and to deny the one person who could be a comfort? The husband has recovered from the tragedy and is now ready for the relationship they once had. His wife's distancing has made him feel rejected. I am worried about their marriage. Please comment.--No Names, Of Course

DEAR NO NAME: There is no set time for grieving. Some people heal faster than others. I do feel, however, that this woman needs grief counseling and I hope that she will get it soon.

La Plata Study Club visits prisoner of war camp

La Plata Study Club assembled at the home of Yvonne Simpson and departed on a group tour to the old prisoner of war camp. This was the second of a series of programs covering the theme of celebrating the Centennial.

Joe D. Rogers, who has done an extensive study of this segment of history, presented a replay of camp life with a graph layout of the buildings. He pointed out some of the ruins that remain, including the water tower, one of the quartermaster buildings, and the old swimming pool. He emphasized the barbed wire fences that encircled the compounds and the foundations for the guard towers.

The tour concluded at the memorial to the prisoners who died while there. He remarked that the prisoners who have returned for a visit to the camp stated, as they looked toward the West in the evenings, "You Americans say this camp is no more, that there are no remains; but we say there is one element that remains--that will remain always and is implanted in our memories forever--is the beautiful sunsets!"

Upon returning to the Simpson home, Rogers presented slides and told life facts of the prisoners and the soldiers stationed at the camp.

President Mildred Fuhrmann conducted the business meeting and cornbread, stew and dessert were served by hostesses Fuhrmann and Dorothy Mercer.

Members attending were Margaret Schroeter, Rosemary Shook, Julie Helms, Betty Mercer, Lois Mitchell, Nelda Fortenberry, Audine Dettman, Betty Taylor, Mercer, Avis White, Dorothea Prowell, Fuhrmann and Simpson.

Fall signals return to romance

Aerobics are out. Ballroom dancing is in. A nostalgic mood is quickly sweeping the nation, affecting everything from music and art to fall fashions and jewelry.

According to an article in the New York Times, men and women are enjoying big band music and ballroom dancing more than ever before. Why? It's fun, social and romantic, and provides a reason to dress up and feel pretty.

Last year's frou-frou party looks can still be seen on the dance floor, but dresses that are sleek, bare lots of skin and move with the body are what are tripping the light fantastic this season.

To dazzle this dramatic silhouette, real gold jewelry with a fabric look and feel is the newest way to enhance a woman's wardrobe.

Perfect for nighttime elegance or to dress up a day look is the new "velvet" finish in gold. Appearing as if brushed with stardust, the velvety look is often mixed with contrasting surfaces for added drama.

One of the most important pieces of jewelry a woman can wear is a beautiful gold pin. There are fun, spirited designs, such as a salamander, statuesque ballerina or graffiti-like doodles that can add an element of surprise to any look: For example, securing a flowing chiffon scarf, on the shoulder of a dinner jacket or blouse lapel. Another attraction-semi-precious accents light up these whimsical, frosted pins with subtle touches of gold.

Gold earrings bear a new air of sophistication and add a feminine touch to a curvaceous day suit or pleated evening gown. Whether ribbed or wrapped, the soft finish and sculpted dimension give the illusion of drapery and billowing fabric.

The hoop remains the season's favorite, with bigger, more substantial styles that make a strong fashion statement and draw attention to swept-back hairstyles.

Evening soirees call for clothes that glide across the dance floor a la Ginger Rogers. Sheer fabrics such as organza and chiffon move with the body and also create the right backdrop for a beautiful gold necklace and/or bracelets.

Gold rope is tied loosely around the neck in a simple lariat or accented with a brushed, twisted centerpiece. Gold bangles, a staple many women already own, anchor the bare look, especially in a stack of mixed styles-etched, forsted and shiny-climbing up the arm.

When asked about the appeal of dressing up, socialite-turned-fashion designer Carolyn Roehm replied, "It makes me feel feminine," which proves the point that the recent surge of nostalgia has shed new light on the art of living well and looking good.

Accent on Health

The week of Oct. 14 is national Radon Action Week--a time to recognize what the Texas Department of Health's bureau of Radiation Control is doing about radon.

This winter, the Bureau of Radiation Control will distribute about 4,000 to 6,000 radon detectors to random households across the state to study radon concentrations in Texas homes.

The Bureau of Radiation Control received a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to conduct a state-wide radon survey, train staff members, develop a data management system, provide public information, and respond to radon problems. The survey will be coordinated with the EPA.

"We want to encourage participation in the survey by all Texans who are selected at random to be in it," said Gary L. Smith, Ph.D., coordinator of the Texas survey.

"We do not think radon is much of a problem in Texas," explained Smith. "To date, however, a general survey of indoor radon concentrations has not been conducted in the state. So, we think the survey is important."

Concentrations of radon above federal limits have been found in homes throughout the United States.

Smith said the Texas survey results will define the extent of the indoor radon situation in Texas and pinpoint any areas that need attention.

Radon is an odorless, colorless radioactive gas that occurs naturally by being released from certain rocks and soils. Outdoors, radon poses no problem. Radon can accumulate to dangerous levels, however, if trapped inside an enclosed space, such as a home.

An increased risk of developing lung cancer is a potential health effect associated with exposure to elevated levels of radon over long periods of time.

Community Concert features Tony Sandler and Trio

Hereford Community Concert Association will be featuring Tony Sandler and the Tony Sandler Trio in "An International Celebration of Song" on Saturday, Oct. 20, at 8 p.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Over the past 28 years Sandler has developed an easy, relaxed charm which has endeared him to audiences around the world.

Born Lucien Joseph Santele in Kortryk, Belgium, Tony Sandler began singing as a boy with the internationally known Gregorian Choir, Les Petits Chanteurs a la Croix de Bois. Along with Gregorian training, he received a well-rounded musical education. In college his studies included medicine, higher mathematics, Latin, Greek, French, German, Flemish and English. His fluency in Italian and Spanish developed later during his singing career in Europe.

The 1990-91 Hereford Community Concert Association will feature Big Band Jamboree on Jan. 20 at 3 p.m. and Hector Olivera will be featured on April 4, at 8 p.m. All concerts will be held in the Hereford High School auditorium.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - George Clinton of the funk group Parliament Funkadelic drove across the state line to get married rather than wait three days for a license in Michigan.

The 49-year-old funk king and Stephanie Lynn Goshorn, 34, both from Brooklyn, Mich., walked into the Lucas County Courthouse with little fanfare Tuesday but didn't leave unnoticed.

Connie Krall, the deputy clerk who wrote the license, said her co-workers recognized Clinton.

"I'd never heard of him," Ms. Krall said. "But when I saw his hair, I thought he was going to be outrageous, like Little Richard, but he wasn't. He was very courteous and he never played up his celebrity status."
