Reid indicted a second time

A new indictment has been returned against a young woman whose 1993 conviction on a murder charge was overturned by an appellate court.

The Deaf Smith County Grand Jury took the action Wednesday in its first meeting of the new six-month term.

Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul said the new indictment against Tanya Thaxton Reid, 38, does not allege use of a deadly weapon as the earlier indictment did.

The state's case against Reid in the 1984 death of her eight-month-old daughter hinged on her use of hands in smothering the baby. The Seventh Court of Appeals ruled against the prosecution on this issue.

Another point in the appellate court's ruling that overturned the conviction was related to a motion for change of venue that was denied shortly before the trial started.

"We aren't sure whether the ruling means a change of venue is automatic," said Saul. The new indictment sidesteps that question, he added.

The indictment alleges Reid committed an "act clearly dangerous to human life" with "smothering and shaking that caused the death of Morgan Reid."

The defendant was convicted on a murder charge in late 1993. The two-week jury trial was marked by extensive medical evidence on problems experienced by the baby before her death and by similar problems of Reid's son later.

Reid was tried in Iowa and convicted on charges of injury to a child, alleging she caused harm to the son. She was serving a prison sentence in Iowa when she was returned to Texas for the trial in Hereford.

Morgan Reid died in Amarillo after her mother reported that the infant stopped breathing at the Reid home. The baby was transferred to an Amarillo hospital where she died.

The 22nd District Court jury sentenced Reid to 62 years in prison after finding her guilty of the murder charge.

She was being held in a prison unit in Amarillo when the conviction was overturned early in 1995. She was returned to Deaf Smith County jail where she remained until posting bond of $25,000 in October. She still is free on the bond, while awaiting a new trial.

The Grand Jury returned indictments against eight other defendants, four for felony driving while intoxicated.

Sergio Alamo, a/k/a Jaime Gonzales, 32, of 108 Hereford Calle is free on $3,000 bond on the felony DWI charge.

Free on $2,500 bond, Ernestino Ortiz, 25, of 612 Irving, No. 81, was indicted for felony DWI.

Another felony DWI defendant is Brian Keith Moshier, 32, of Dawn, who is free on bond of $2,500.

Manuel O. Solis, 37, of Clovis, N.M., indicted for felony DWI, is free on $1,500 bond.

Indicted for bribery, Refugio Pena Gamez, 69, of 308 Avenue J, has posted bond of $2,000.

Daniel Rivera, 18, of 801 S. 25 Mile Ave., was indicted for theft over $1,500 but under $20,000, and is free on $2,500 bond.

An 18-year-old Laredo resident, Luis B. Hernandez, 18, was indicted for burglary of a habitation. He is being held in Webb County jail.

Elena Gamez Hernandez, 36, of 807 N. Main, is free on bond of $2,500, on an indictment for forgery by making.

Whitewater panel statements made by Hillary Clinton

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Whitewater Committee is focusing on Hillary Rodham Clinton's sworn statements about how her law firm began doing business with the failed savings and loan at the heart of the Whitewater affair.

Under questioning by federal regulators, Richard Massey of the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Ark., twice has said he was unable to recall the origins of Rose's business with Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan.

The question is an important one for the Senate Whitewater Committee, which is trying to determine whether Mrs. Clinton told the truth when she pointed to Massey as the one who brought Madison's business into the law firm. The Clintons' partner in the Whitewater real estate venture, James McDougal, owned Madison.

In sworn statements to federal regulators last spring, Mrs. Clinton described her involvement as "minimal" in a proposal to sell preferred stock in Madison Guaranty - which was the first matter Mrs. Clinton's law firm handled for Madison.

On the stock sale proposal, newly produced billing records show Mrs. Clinton submitted bills for 22 conferences over four months with Madison executives, state regulators and attorneys at her law firm.

The White House has said the billing records - missing for two years - were "discovered" last Thursday and that they had been brought down from an office in the White House family residence sometime before then.

"To the best of my recollection," the president of Madison Guaranty and Massey "became interested in having Madison Guaranty issue some kind of preferred stock to raise capital," the first lady said in sworn answers last May.

Divers rescue cow caught in icy pond

SHICKSHINNY, Pa. (AP) - It was a cow slip.

The 900-pound bovine wandered to the center of her owner's icy pond. Problem is, she didn't moo-ve fast enough and fell in.

A neighbor, Paul Zagata, spotted her head and shoulders bobbing in the water about 100 feet from shore Tuesday. The cow's back legs were stuck in mud.

Zagata, his brother Andy and farm owner Art Hildebrandt attached a harness to the Brown Swiss cow, but she stopped moving whenever they tried to pull her from the 5-foot hole.

Plan B: Send for the Luzerne County Dive Team.

Ten men in wet suits arrived. They called in the fire department. The team fastened a rope to the harness and attached it to a winch on the front of the fire truck.

"Many other cows watched in fear and hope," said Scott Tretheway, the team's commander.

The truck immediately pulled the shivering cow up and onto the ice. She later recovered inside a barn. Tretheway estimated she was in the pond for two hours.

"This was the first farm animal I've had the pleasure of helping out," he said.

One man's trash ...

... is another woman's treasure? As preparations continued Wednesday for Saturday's government surplus auction here, Deaf Smith County Agent Beverly Harder, second from left, along with several 4-H mothers, dropped by for a look-see. Here, they look over some of the many items that will be sold

Government entities to empty storerooms in Saturday auction

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

So you say you've suddenly realized you can't live without that new crane hook, a mimeograph machine or two, a large wooden (handle-less) mallet, or a microfilm machine?

How about that sudden yearning in your heart for a set of pole-climbing spikes, a couple hundred feet of hydraulic hose or a slightly used set of Jaws of Life?

Of course, you might be pining away for a half-dozen french fry baskets, a homemade wooden box big enough for just about anything, an outdated paper shredder or an industrial-strength bug zapper.

Well whatever it is you can't live without, you're probably in luck.

This weekend, local governmental agencies will be hawking all of that and much more at the second auction to dispose of surplus materials.

The auction features items from Deaf Smith County, the Hereford Independent School District and the City of Hereford.

County Commissioner Johnny Latham, who is handling the setup of the auction in the Bull Barn, said an auction is a legal way for governmental agencies to get rid of surplus goods.

The only other way to dispose of items bought by government, he said, would be to render them unusable then throw them away.

Latham said the auctions are held "every two or three years ... whenever all three entities decide we have enough stuff to hold an auction."

He said all the items being sold have "been in storage. Just like your house. Sometimes you have to clean out ... so you can store more junk."

The public will have the opportunity to look over the auction goods before bidding begins at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Latham said the Bull Barn will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday for preview.

The auction is being conducted by Walling and Associates Auctioneers.

Looking around the Bull Barn on Wednesday -- before all the items had been gathered -- revealed a conglomeration of items guaranteed to provide almost anything for most anybody.

Lined up along one wall are more than 100 outdated computer monitors and keyboards, as well as some multi-station drive units from Hereford schools.

Across the room is a collection of chairs, some on wheels and some not; some that just need cleaning up a bit and some that are missing considerable amounts of stuffing and upholstery.

In between are such things as a commercial stove, two meat slicers, an industrial mixer, assorted machine parts and tools, three pairs of boots (two of them heavy-duty rubber boots, sizes unknown), three bed frames, 40 crank-out window openers, a box full of dusty flashlights, a 3-foot-long torque wrench, a heavy-duty chain, a large rolling pin (missing one handle) and several sets of cafeteria cooking utensils.

If it's nostalgia you want, how about picking up an old school desk, one of the many electric typewriters available, an overhead projector, a mimeograph machine, or even a real record player?

There are two lawn mowers -- one a riding model -- as well as a two-wheel military trailer, two John Deere 1508 rotary cutters and an 8-foot by 7-foot four-wheel flat bed trailer.

If it's vehicles you need, you might look over one of the nine pickups that will be parked outside the Bull Barn. They range from a 1968 model to a 1991 model. There also are two tractors.

All sales must be paid for the day of the sale and Latham said items bought must be removed right away.

Gingrich may try to keep government operating as no new budget talks set

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With chances waning for a balanced budget agreement this year, House Speaker Newt Gingrich says he may try to pass a series of short-term spending bills that would keep the government operating at reduced levels until the November election.

With no new negotiations likely before the middle of next week, Congress finally took a break Wednesday after its leaders and President Clinton failed to come to terms on a seven-year budget-balancing plan that would resolve the threat of another government shutdown Jan. 27.

Stock and bond markets tumbled Wednesday shortly after Gingrich, speaking in Casper, Wyo., predicted: "The odds are better than even, as of today, that there will be no agreement."

Talking with reporters later in Seattle, Gingrich, R-Ga., said Republicans were looking at the possibility of approving so-called continuing resolutions - temporary spending bills that would keep the government in business. The current short-term spending bill expires Jan. 26.

"What we'd like to do is to have an occasional continuing resolution for, say, 30 days at 75 percent, then 30 days at 70 percent," he said. "And for the general bureaucracy of the government, gradually shrink it over the course of the year."

When Clinton and congressional Republicans suspended budget talks Tuesday, big differences remained on Medicare and Medicaid spending and the size of a tax cut.

"Our attitude should be positive" in the next week, said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "But can we reach an agreement? I do not know. Is it doubtful? Probably. Is it possible? Yes."

Dole said "fundamental differences" remain. Republicans are pushing for basic changes in the way government operates. Democrats insist they will not accept major cutbacks in health, education and environmental programs.

Dole's comment came as he formally adjourned the Senate until Jan. 22, the day before Clinton's state-of-the-union address. That gives lawmakers a long-awaited vacation after spending much of the holiday season wrangling over the budget and two separate government shutdowns. The House adjourned Tuesday.

Pessimism over whether the talks are salvageable increased chances that how to balance the budget would be left to voters in November's election. Such a course could result in more government shutdowns and havoc as Congress tries to work out budgets for both 1996 and 1997.

"It may just be that we need one more election" to get a balanced-budget plan into law, Gingrich said. Republicans, said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay of Texas, have made good-faith efforts to craft common-sense proposals. "The president has stonewalled these efforts at every turn," he said. "I hope they will ultimately come to their senses, but I will not hold my breath."

For the Democrats, House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri said "the truth has been made clear" that Republicans are more interested in giving tax breaks to the wealthy and radically changing Medicare, Medicaid and similar programs than they are in balancing the budget.

"We're only very far away if you insist on a tax cut which requires unacceptable levels of cuts," Clinton told reporters as he convened a Cabinet meeting.

As an alternative to making a balanced budget the core issue of the 1996 elections, GOP congressional leaders are considering teaming with conservative Democrats to push a still-evolving package of spending and tax cuts through Congress.

In their last offer to Clinton on Monday, Republicans proposed savings from Medicare, Medicaid and welfare that some Democrats already have voted for.

Probation modified for pair

Failure to abide by terms of probation resulted in prison sentences Wednesday for two defendants in 22nd District Court.

During the court session, Judge David Wesley Gulley modified terms of probation for two other defendants and heard a guilty plea from an offender.

Lee Roy Trevino, also known as Lee Roy Arroyos, was ordered to Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division for a seven-year sentence on revocation of probation. He previously was given an eight-year probation sentence for forgery by passing.

Judge Gulley ordered Rafael Ornelas to serve a six-year sentence, on revocation of probation. He will enter the TDCJ boot camp program. Ornelas previously was convicted of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

On a plea to a charge of tampering with government records, Guadalupe Sanchez Montes, 23, was granted deferred adjudication and sentenced to five years' probation.

On the state's motion to revoke probation of Martin Martinez, convicted of burglary of a building, Judge Gulley signed an agreed order modifying terms of probation and ordering Martinez to enter a restitution center in Bexar County.

Charla Renee Pace was directed to enter a state substance abuse facility in the modification of her probation. She was convicted earlier of felony driving while intoxicated.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Higher education costs get higher

If recent trends continue, college tuition and fees will quadruple in the next 18 years. A baby born this year can expect to pay $36,952 in tuition and required fees for four years in a state public university in 2014. The Texas Tomorrow Fund, however, locks in tuition at today's prices. For more information, call 1-800-445-GRAD.

Year	Cost (in thousands)
'96	$8,320
'00	~12,000
'04	~18,000
'08	~25,000
'12	~32,000
2014-2018	$36,952

Easterners eye new storm prospect

Store shelves emptying, shoppers wait in long lines

By The Associated Press
Storm-weary Easterners clogged to work through mountains of piled-up snow and made another last-minute run on grocery stores as they tried to comprehend the possibility that another big storm was on the way.

"I really don't want to wait for the milk. I want to get on with my life," a frustrated Judy Kaitz said Wednesday after digging her way out of the snow in New York to stock up on food and other essentials.

Simple tasks have become tests of endurance in the aftermath of the big blizzard of '96, a storm the East is still digging out from under and which has been blamed for at least 100 deaths since Sunday.

Sunday and Monday's blizzard steamrolled as far south as Georgia and Alabama, shutting down most schools and businesses until Tuesday and paralyzing planes, trains, buses and automobiles.

Philadelphia Mayor Edward Rendell begged residents to shovel themselves out from under a record 30.7 inches of snow. He said the city's plows are too big to get through many of the narrow streets.

"You can't expect us in the greatest storm in the history of Philadelphia to do something we haven't done for 40 years in modest snowfalls," he said.

Philadelphia schools were closed for the fourth consecutive day today. Most Boston schools also were still closed; New York opened its schools on Wednesday after closing Monday and Tuesday for the first time since 1978.

In Brooklyn, N.Y., scores of cars remained buried Wednesday under snowbanks. Enterprising souls made money digging them out.

"Will Free Your Car and Your Spinal Column for $25 to $40," read one hand-made sign.

In York, Pa., which got walloped with 3 feet of snow, welfare recipients waited in vain for a bank to open so they could cash their checks. Debra Walters said she was down to half a loaf of bread and half a bottle of milk for her two girls.

"Just ice. No food for the children," she said.

Grocery shelves were so picked over from the last storm that most shoppers couldn't hoard for the new one. A few dozen withered heads of chicory were the only lettuce choices remaining in many vegetable coolers, and meat, milk and orange juice were scarce in some locations.

At rush hour Wednesday afternoon, New York's Grand Central Station overflowed with angry commuters after snow-related problems forced a railroad to cut service in half.

"It's never been this bad," Joan Scully-Randall bristled after a 90-minute wait. "I'm driving tomorrow. I don't even care about paying $20 to park the car."

Later Wednesday, icy tracks stalled a train a few hundred feet away from a station outside of New York City. Some passengers dropped to the tracks and walked.

"That's not good, because they could easily get themselves electrocuted," said Dan Brucker, a spokesman for the railroad.

A man who was trapped in his lawn-and-garden business near Winterstown, Pa., for two days finally burrowed his way to freedom Wednesday through chest-high snow.

John Shelley got stuck on Monday when he attempted to clear snow out of the parking lot. For two days, the only contact he and his one-eyed cat, Pickles, had with the outside world was by telephone and Internet messages.

When Shelley got out, he warmed up at a neighbor's house. Then he bought a couple of chicken pot pies for himself and headed home to feed his cats.

"I think the best investment I can make is a pair of snowshoes," he said.

Local Roundup

Warm weather to continue

Hereford recorded a high temperature Wednesday of 68 degrees, according to KPAN Radio, with an overnight low this morning of 28 degrees. That is also the forecast for tonight and Friday. Tonight's low is predicted to be in the upper 20s under clear skies and northwest winds at 10-15 mph. Friday, look for sunny skies and a high in the mid-60s with west winds of 10-20 mph.

WORLD/NATION

WASHINGTON - Chances are waning for a balanced budget agreement, and House Speaker Newt Gingrich says he's considering trying to pass a series of short-term spending bills that would keep the government operating at reduced levels until the November election.

WASHINGTON - A calendar turned over to congressional investigators conflicts with top White House aide Mack McLarty's earlier statements concerning the travel office findings, showing he met with Hollywood producer Harry Thomason in May 1993 before the dismissals. The revelation comes as additional evidence emerges suggesting Hillary Rodham Clinton pressed several aides, including McLarty, to remove the travel office workers.

WASHINGTON - The leading contenders in this year's presidential race all come with career-long ties to a host of special interests largely unknown to voters, according to a new study of money and presidential politics.

WASHINGTON - With blood rushing to his face, Bill Clinton stared down Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief accuser and hissed, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself for jumping on my wife." The year was 1992, the accuser was fellow Democrat Jerry Brown. And the strategy worked. This time, it won't be so easy.

UNDATED - Still battered by the blizzard that claimed more than 100 lives and dumped record amounts of snow, residents of the East flocked to grocery stores that hadn't yet had time to restock and kept a wary eye out for updates on a new, possibly damaging storm headed their way.

WASHINGTON - A bill overhauling the nation's telecommunications laws has hit another snag, this time over a provision that Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole calls a "corporate welfare" giveaway to the TV industry.

PERVOMAYSKAYA, Russia - Chechen rebels holding about 160 hostages in buses near the Dagestan-Chechnya border of southern Russia resume negotiations with local authorities today. The hostage crisis was the latest embarrassment for Moscow, which for 13 months has been trying to suppress Chechen separatists.

BANGKOK, Thailand - For four decades, Khun Sa survived battles and imprisonment, outwitted or ruthlessly eliminated rivals, and scoffed at American efforts to hunt him down.

Barely educated, he built up a narcotics empire and carved out a veritable kingdom for himself in the jungled valleys of the Golden Triangle, complete with satellite television and surface-to-air missiles.

Now, Khun Sa has handed over his weapons and is trying to negotiate the best deal he can with Burma, or Myanmar, as the military government has named the country it rules.

STATE

BROWNSVILLE - He's been called "Texas' top blood detective," examined more than a thousand crime scenes and even instructed the elite Texas Rangers on bloodstain analysis. Now a court ruling has raised questions about Austin police Sgt. Mentford "Dusty" Hesskew's credibility as a bloodstain expert. Hesskew's methodology came under fire during the appeals case of Susie Mowbray, who was convicted of the 1987 murder of her husband, a wealthy Brownsville Cadillac dealer. Mrs. Mowbray contended he committed suicide.

AUSTIN - Residents in Houston and Dallas will have more time to learn how new area codes will be added to their cities before the changes take place.

DALLAS - A picket line with County Commissioner John Wiley Price protesting racism and racial discrimination has been a familiar sight for years, sometimes on the street with traffic backed up. The fiery black commissioner now finds himself on the opposite end of a racism charge after he referred to a prominent Hispanic public official as "boy" and a "coconut."

UNDATED - Sen. Phil Gramm, benefiting from a unique Texas law that enables him to run for re-election as well as the GOP presidential nomination, has support of almost half the state's voters to keep his current seat, according to a copyright poll.

PHOENIX - GOP presidential hopefuls Phil Gramm and Bob Dole are playing down the recent strength of publisher Steve Forbes in Arizona polls. They attribute Forbes' showing to his TV advertising blitz and predict it won't last.

HOUSTON - Harris County authorities believe that a 14-year-old boy has sexually abused as many as 12 children, including his younger stepbrother and stepsister.

HOUSTON - A jury has refused to hold a lounge liable for serving up a particularly volatile flaming drink that turned a 151-proof bottle of rum into a flame thrower.

AMARILLO - In the past six months, despite serious efforts to shut it down, a helium plant has spent more than $2 million to train its workers, update its computer system and proceed with other business-as-usual activities.

AUSTIN - A White Settlement couple who were sentenced to 99 years in prison for keeping their son chained for 18 months and starving him have lost their most recent court appeal.

AUSTIN - The state's highest criminal appeals court reversed itself, reinstating the conviction and death sentence of a man who confessed to killing a Kingsville university student.

WASHINGTON - Conservative Democrats are finding themselves in an enviable position now that budget talks between President Clinton and congressional Republicans have stalled, perhaps permanently.

SAN ANTONIO - Six Flags Theme Parks Inc. has reached a lease-purchase agreement to operate Fiesta Texas, a music theme park on the outskirts of San Antonio.

Threat of closing fails to stop plant activity

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - In the past six months, despite serious efforts to shut it down, a helium plant has spent more than $2 million to train its workers, update its computer system and proceed with other business-as-usual activities.

Corporate Technology Group, Enenco Laboratories, Amarillo College, Wayland Baptist University and West Texas A&M University are among those who have received contracts from Helium Operations, based in Amarillo.

The contracts allow the continuous operations of Helium's facilities at several locations.

About 180 employees of Helium Operations continue to pump money into the Amarillo economy.

Late last year, President Clinton vetoed a bill to end Helium Operations as part of a larger budget package.

But most observers, including Lou Zickar, an aide to U.S. Rep. William "Mac" Thornberry, R-Amarillo, told the Amarillo Globe-News they expect the end of the Helium Operations to be included in a final budget-bill deal.

"(The shutdown) was part of the balanced budget act put forth by the Republicans," Zickar said Wednesday.

Supporters of Helium Operations, Bureau of Mines, say the plant and other facilities actually make money for the federal government by selling helium to federal agencies.

If Congress and the president approve the end of Helium Operations, the first phase of the shutdown should take about 18 months.

James R. Dunn, a local helium official, said Helium Operations contract about $6 million worth of goods and services in the Amarillo and Canyon area each year.

The recent $2 million in contracts went, among other things, for tuition to train and certify workers, computer software and hardware, and testing of water and soil, Dunn said.

Federal workers returning to jobs after long absence

By KEVIN GALVIN Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The balanced-budget tempest and mounting snowfall paused long enough for federal workers in Washington to be ordered back to work today.

But with another storm approaching and predictions of continued political drift, nobody could say when government agencies would see smooth sledding again.

After three weeks of partial shutdown during the budget stalemate, followed by three snow days, the Office of Personnel Management called federal employees back to their jobs today.

So the question on many minds was whether workers would be kept home again Friday by a new snow storm heading for the capital. "We're trying not to speculate," said OPM spokeswoman Janice Lachance.

On the upside, the Martin Luther King holiday next Monday makes it a three-day weekend. "There'll be plenty of time to dig out," Lachance said.

Meanwhile, as the clock ticks toward the Jan. 26 expiration of the temporary spending authority that restarted the government, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Wednesday "the odds are better than even ... that there will be no agreement" with President Clinton on a balanced budget.

After Gingrich's comments, the prospect of more shutdowns and the spectre of politicians pointing fingers at each other throughout a budgetless year spooked investors and sent stock prices tumbling on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 97.19 points, or 1.9 percent. It was the Dow's ninth-worst point drop ever. In a typical reaction to times of uncertainty, investors put their money into gold.

Shuttle crew to bring used satellite to earth

By MARCIA DUNN AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Space shuttle Endeavour and its crew rocketed into orbit today and began chasing a Japanese satellite loaded with dead news, crystals and telescopes that need to be returned to Earth.

"It was a great ride uphill," commander Brian Duffy said.

The 2,000-ton spaceship rose from its seaside pad at 4:41 a.m., lighting the sky for miles around. Liftoff was delayed 23 minutes by an assortment of communication-system problems.

"Sorry it took us a couple of extra minutes to get the engines started. But once you turned the key, you sure put on a great show," Mission Control told the six astronauts.

It was 44 degrees at liftoff, warm enough under the rules established after the 1986 Challenger disaster. NASA used heaters to protect crucial shuttle parts.

The temperature was 36 degrees, the coldest ever for a shuttle launch, when Challenge, exploded 10 years ago this month, killing all seven crew members. Investigators found that the cold had stiffened the O-rings in the shuttle's booster rockets, allowing hot gas to seep out.

After the accident, NASA adopted an elaborate formula involving low temperature, wind and humidity in determining whether it is safe to launch.

On Saturday, the five U.S. and one Japanese astronauts will use the shuttle robot arm to retrieve the Japanese satellite nearly 300 miles above Earth. The satellite was soaring over Australia when Endeavour blasted off.

AUSTIN (AP) - No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 8, 11, 12, 26, 28, and 47.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $8 million.

AUSTIN (AP) - The winning Pick 3 numbers drawn Wednesday by the Texas Lottery, in order: 6-9-4 (six, nine, four)

Presentation of special flag

VFW Auxiliary makes special presentations at dinner meeting

The Ladies Auxiliary to Roy Wederbrook Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4818 met Tuesday with Betty Boggs presiding.

Prior to the business meeting, the VFW provided dinner catered by Mrs. Abalos' Restaurant.

Linda Dutton, safety chairman, presented a National Life Saving Award to Gwen Keeping, R.N., who is credited with saving the life of Beverly House in a boating accident at Ute Lake last summer.

Dutton also made a presentation to County Judge Tom Simons of a POW/MIA (Prisoner of War/Missing in Action) flag. It will be flown at the courthouse to remind everyone of the thousands of armed forces personnel who have not been accounted for.

Special guests were Carolyn Simpson, R.N., Coy House and his daughter Beverly, VFW Commander Robert Kubacak, Becky Camp from The Brand, Judge Simons and Keeping.

During the business meeting, roll was called, minutes were read and approved. Treasurers report was given and correspondence was read. Several committee reports were also given.

The next meeting will be Feb. 5 at 7:30 p.m. with a Kentucky Fried Chicken supper at 6:30 p.m.

Members present were Boggs, Doris Coffin, Derenda DeLeon, Linda Dutton, Pixie Forbus, Marie Goheen, Dora Lea Howell, Essie Martin, Ruth Morris, Erma Murphy, Terry Rhine, Leona Sowell, Ruth Stethem, Imogene Sweeney, Winnie Tyler, Anita Vardell, Carol O'Hara, Cynthia Streun and Frankie Ruland.

Longhorn District holds banquet, presents awards

The Longhorn District of the Boy Scouts of America held its district banquet recently in the Hereford Community Center.

The meeting opened with the presentation of the pledge by Troop 50 and the invocation was led by Michael Williams who recited the Philmont Grace.

After the covered dish dinner, guest speaker Joe Weaver of the Deaf Smith County Library presented a story about the famous Texan, Big Foot Wallace.

Roundup Awards were presented by David Bailey, district executive of the Longhorn District, to Jeff Milam and Gary Billingsley.

The District Award of Merit was presented to two Scouters. Recipients were Gary Williams of Friona and Kevin Harbison of Hereford. This award is presented to Scouters who go beyond what is required of Scout leaders and is the highest district award.

The meeting closed with the retirement of the colors by Cub Scout Pack 50.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading the letter from "Planning My Exit in Long Island," I had to respond. She was the woman who was finally living with the married man she'd been seeing. That lady really hit the nail on the head when she said, "You are better off alone."

I had a relationship with "Wendell" for several years. I, too, wanted this man more than anything in the world. He was wonderful to me and my daughter, well-off financially and fun to be with. But--he was married.

After three years, his wife found out about me and divorced him. I thought Wendell would surely marry me when he was free, but he finally admitted that he had no interest in marrying again. That was a real blow--after I had given him 10 years of my life.

I began to suspect that he was seeing someone else, and sure enough, I went to his home on a Sunday morning and caught him in bed with another woman.

It took several months of counseling before I finally had the strength to leave him. (He wanted us both.) I can't describe the relief I felt after I told him that I didn't want to see him anymore. Thank heavens I didn't have to deal with the guilt of breaking up his marriage. He had a long history of cheating and lying before we met.

My advice to anyone considering an involvement with a married man is: Don't go down that road. It's not worth the pain.--Been There, Done That

DEAR B.T.D.T.: Chances are good that a man who will cheat on his wife will also cheat on his girlfriend. This kind of man always wants what isn't his--until he gets it. You've helped a lot of women see the light today. Thank you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My older brother died seven years ago in an accident when he was 20 years old. My siblings and parents no longer talk about him much, but my mother (and probably my father) must think about him often.

Would it be appropriate to send them a card on the anniversary of my brother's death, or would this be a cruel reminder?

My family and I are not very demonstrative, especially about matters that involve personal feelings, but if you advise that I send a card, I will do so.--Anonymous in Raleigh, N.C.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Please don't send a card on the anniversary of your brother's death. If you are able to take your parents out to dinner that evening, it would lift their spirits to be with you. Make the effort with no mention of the sad anniversary. You'll be glad you did.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for car moochers--people you pick up or take home from work on a regular basis who never offer to reimburse you.

Running a car is not cheap these days. There's the license, insurance, tires, lube and oil changes, alignments, tune-ups and gas. And tires wear out.

Some of us wouldn't bring this up because we are friends, but maybe if they see it in Ann Landers' column, they'll catch the drift.--Free Wheels

DEAR WHEELS: I hope your letter produces results. "You were going anyway" doesn't cut it. A steady passenger should offer to fill up the tank every few weeks or pay for a lube job. If any of you "guest passengers" see yourselves in the column today, take the hint.

Gem of the Day: Insanity is hereditary. Parents get it from their children.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Nuggets and Doozies," has everything from the outrageously funny to the poignantly insightful. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Conklin leads lodge business

Elks help out wrestlers

Harold Finch (third from left) of the Hereford Elks' Lodge donates a check from the Elks to the Hereford Wrestling Club, represented by coach Rip Evers. The wrestling club and Hereford Junior High will be hosting the West State Championship for first-year wrestlers Saturday, starting at 9 a.m. With Finch and Evers are the four members of the Hereford club who will be wrestling Saturday: (from left) Kris Hammarbeck, Ricky Lara, Jeffrey Gomez and Johnny Zamarripa.

Herd (3-0) will take on 'Horns (2-0)

Whiteface Gym will be the site of a showdown Friday between two boys' basketball teams with undefeated records in District 1-4A.

Hereford (3-0, 14-7) will host surprising Caprock, which is 2-0 in district despite a 7-14 overall record, at about 7:30 p.m. The Longhorns' district wins have come over Borger and Dumas.

Caprock was 2-10 in district, 4-26 overall last year, but returned all of its starters from that team. For Hereford, that team was tougher than its record; the Herd won both meetings last season by fairly close scores: 72-69 and 66-56.

The Hereford and Caprock girls play at 6 p.m. in the first game of Friday's doubleheader. Hereford is 3-2 in district and 17-3 overall, while Caprock is 0-4 and 7-12.

Three sub-varsity games also will be played Friday, starting with the sophomore boys' teams from Hereford and Caprock at 4:30 p.m. The boys' junior varsity teams will play at 6 in the junior high gym, followed by the JV boys at about 7:30.

Smith's hamstrings are primed for playoff run

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - When owner Jerry Jones engaged in a contract dispute with Emmitt Smith two years ago, he discovered how valuable Smith was to the team.

Smith held out for two games and the Dallas Cowboys lost both of them. Jones capitulated on the salary talks, signed Smith, and the Cowboys went on to win the Super Bowl.

A year ago, Smith was so banged up he was playing on heart and one good leg.

He limped his way through the Cowboys' NFC championship loss to the San Francisco 49ers on a pulled hamstring that would have felled a lesser man.

The bad news for the Green Bay Packers on Sunday in the NFC Championship game is that Smith, save for some bruised ribs courtesy of the Philadelphia Eagles, is feeling as good as he has all season.

"There's no comparison to where I am now to where I was last year," Smith said. "I was hurt so bad I couldn't even smile. You see me smiling now."

Smith gained only 74 yards in the 38-28 loss to the 49ers on the treacherous footing of Candlestick Park. It was not good turf for anyone with hamstring problems.

But Smith worked diligently in the offseason to get his hamstrings to behave.

"I'm just fortunate I haven't had any main injury this year since training camp in July," Smith said. "I'm definitely where I want to be. I feel great."

Smith felt pretty good the last time the Cowboys met the Packers in a 34-24 win on Oct. 8 in Texas Stadium.

He rushed 31 times for 106 yards and two touchdowns as Dallas defeated Green Bay for the sixth consecutive time.

But Smith is quick to acknowledge the Packers have improved dramatically in three months.

"They have a much better defense," Smith said. "This will be a dogfight from the start to the finish. Anybody who has seen us play this year knows we don't own anybody. You saw what kind of trouble the Packers gave to the 49ers last week. Nobody has stopped San Francisco like that in a long, long time."

"I'm sure they figure if they can stop the run they can win," Smith said. "They sure disassembled the 49ers. They stopped their main gun (Steve Young)."

Miami set to hire Johnson

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer
DAVIE, Fla. (AP) - Jimmy Johnson once again is about to follow a coaching legend.

First it was Tom Landry in Dallas, and now it's Don Shula.

Johnson's decision to coach the Miami Dolphins came after just one meeting with team owner Wayne Huizenga. An announcement was planned for this afternoon, Johnson's mother told The Associated Press late Wednesday.

"Jimmy is very happy," said Allene Johnson, speaking by telephone from her home in Port Arthur, Texas. "He just loves coaching and he's very happy to be getting back in it."

Johnson, 52, was expected to sign a four- or five-year deal that will average less than $3 million per season in salary and other inducements, enough to make him the highest-paid coach in the NFL, The Miami Herald reported.

A Dolphins representative and a source close to Huizenga would not confirm the hiring, and said they knew of no news conference scheduled for today.

Huizenga and Johnson talked for four hours Wednesday at the team's training complex. Two forces hastened the negotiations: the job is the one Johnson wants, and Johnson is the coach Huizenga wants.

Johnson has long coveted the post Shula held until retiring last week. Shula, 66, was widely criticized by fans for the team's disappointing 9-7

Ripken named Athlete of Year

By The Associated Press

Breaking a record once considered unapproachable lifted Cal Ripken Jr. to yet another honor.

The Baltimore Orioles shortstop was an overwhelming choice as The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year for 1995.

Ripken, who broke Lou Gehrig's mark of 2,130 consecutive games on Sept. 6, received 193 of 331 first-place ballots in voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. He easily outdistanced Atlanta Braves pitcher Greg Maddux, who received 47 first-place votes.

Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon was third with 19 first-place votes, followed by race car driver Jeff Gordon with seven and Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre with six.

Bulls get revenge on Sonics with 26-point win

By The Associated Press
In addition to being the league's best team, the Chicago Bulls are proving remarkably adept at correcting their mistakes. They've lost only three times this season - to Orlando, Indiana and Seattle - and have beaten each one in their next meeting. Chicago, which blew an 18-point lead at Seattle on Nov. 26, made no such mistake Wednesday night, taking a 19-point lead early in the second half and rolling to a 113-87 victory over the SuperSonics behind Michael Jordan's 35 points and 14 rebounds.

"We remember," Jordan said. The New Jersey Nets also got a measure of revenge against the New York Knicks with a 92-79 home victory six days after losing at Madison Square Garden. In the loss, the Nets broke down in the fourth quarter, but this time pulled away down the stretch. "This may have been the best 48 minutes we played all year," Nets guard Chris Childs said. In other NBA games, it was Boston 113, Sacramento 104; Washington 98, Philadelphia 93; San Antonio 92, Cleveland 86; Denver 91, Vancouver 85; and Portland 90, Miami 89. Chicago needed Jordan's rebounds to overcome the loss of Dennis Rodman, the Bulls' top rebounder in 18 of his first 19 games. Rodman was ejected late in the third quarter after getting two technical fouls. It was his first ejection since coming to Chicago, and he made the most of it, first going after referee Terry Durham and then tossing his jersey into the stands as he ran off the court. "The crowd got a real kick out of it," Jordan said. "Have you ever been to a race-car event? Everyone wants to see the race, but they want to see an accident at some point. Well, everybody wants to see the Bulls but they want to see Dennis go crazy." Scottie Pippen had 29 for the Bulls, who are 18-0 at home. Shawn Kemp had 17 points and 13 rebounds for the SuperSonics, who absorbed their most decisive loss this season. Nets 92, Knicks 79 Childs scored 10 of his career-high 21 points in a 14-6 run to open the fourth quarter as New Jersey snapped a five-game losing streak against New York. Patrick Ewing finished with 23 points for the Knicks, but missed five of six shots in the fourth quarter. Armon Gilliam had 22 points to lead New Jersey, which won for only the fourth time in 14 games. P.J. Brown added 20.

Spurs 92, Cavaliers 86 David Robinson had 24 points and 20 rebounds to lead San Antonio over visiting Cleveland. Sean Elliott scored 26 points and hit six 3-pointers, and Chuck Person had 23 in the Spurs' 11th victory in 13 games. Cleveland, which had a two-game winning streak snapped, was led by Michael Cage, who had 20 points and a season-high 20 rebounds. Terrell Brandon added 19 points, while Dan Majerle scored 18. Celtics 113, Kings 104 Dino Radja scored 25 points as Boston rallied in the fourth quarter to hand Sacramento its fifth straight road loss. Mitch Richmond led the Kings with 31 points. Dana Barros, who had 22 points, started the Celtics on a 17-0 run that brought Boston back from 11 points down late in the final period.

Bullets 98, 76ers 93 In a matchup of two top rookies and former North Carolina teammates, Rasheed Wallace outshone Jerry Stackhouse. Wallace had a season-high 22 points and 10 rebounds in Washington's victory at Philadelphia. Stackhouse, taken third overall in the draft and one pick ahead of Wallace, finished with 12 points and no rebounds. Mark Price made his Bullets and season debut after returning from an injury to his left foot. He had five points in 20 minutes. Trail Blazers 90, Heat 89 Arvydas Sabonis tipped in the tying basket with five seconds to play, and Rod Strickland made a free throw with 2.2 seconds remaining to lift Portland over Miami. The Blazers, the NBA's worst foul shooting team at 63.3 percent, had missed their five previous free throws - two each by Sabonis and Clifford Robinson and one by Strickland. But he made the second to give host Portland its fourth victory in the last five games. Alonzo Mourning had 33 points and 10 rebounds for the Heat. Nuggets 91, Grizzlies 85 Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 25 points and Dale Ellis 20 as Denver held off Vancouver. Abdul-Rauf, who had 21 points in the first half, hit 11 of 18 shots from the field and half of his six 3-point attempts. Dikembe Mutombo had 14 points and 15 rebounds, contributing to the Nuggets' 58-44 rebounding advantage. The host Grizzlies got 20 points from Blue Edwards and 19 from Greg Anthony, plus 11 points and 15 rebounds from rookie Bryant Reeves.

UMass survives St. Joe's in OT

By The Associated Press
Top-ranked Massachusetts needed an extra day to get to Philadelphia. It took the Minutemen an extra five minutes to beat St. Joseph's and remain unbeaten. Playing Wednesday night after a one-day postponement because Massachusetts couldn't get from Amherst to Philadelphia because of the blizzard, the Minutemen beat the Hawks 94-89 in overtime behind the 34 points, nine rebounds and five blocks of junior center Marcus Camby.

"I just wish he had missed the plane or the bus, or however the heck he got here," St. Joe's coach Phil Martelli said. He could have said much the same thing about the backcourt of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, who combined for 36 points, 11 assists and only three turnovers while playing 45 minutes each. "If they aren't the best backcourt in the country, they are right near the top," Minutemen coach John Calipari said. "They do everything I ask them to." Massachusetts (13-0, 2-0 Atlantic 10) led by five points with 21 seconds left in regulation. Mark Bass of the Hawks (4-5, 0-1) made three free throws after being fouled in the act of shooting with 15 seconds left.

After Padilla made one of two from the line, Terrell Myers tied it by making three free throws with less than a second to play after being fouled by Travieso. The Minutemen never trailed in overtime and there were 22 lead changes and 17 ties in the game. "We knew that it was going to be a tough game," Calipari said. "I kept on looking up and saying they're going to stop, but they didn't. They shot better against us than anybody has all year and they were patient and smart. Fortunately, Marcus kind of took over the game." St. Joe's took a chance by playing Camby man-to-man.

"I know we took a big chance," Martelli said. "But I thought that's the only way to guard him, mainly because he is such a great passer. He rose to the occasion." In other games involving ranked teams Wednesday night, it was Pittsburgh 75, No. 5 Georgetown 56; No. 8 Wake Forest 57, Duke 54; Georgia Tech 80, No. 10 North Carolina 77; No. 11 Iowa 81, Ohio State 53; No. 13 Utah 69, Air Force 45; No. 14 Syracuse 77, Providence 75; No. 15 Virginia Tech 88, Duquesne 69; No. 16 Clemson 89, Virginia 79; No. 18 Arizona 108, Arizona State 76; and No. 25 New Mexico 78, Hawaii 72.

Ohio State's Glenn chooses to go pro

By The Associated Press
Another talented junior is leaving Ohio State early for the NFL. On Wednesday, All-America receiver Terry Glenn became the eighth Buckeyes player in the last five years to enter the NFL draft before his senior season. Glenn won the Biletnikoff Award as the nation's top receiver this season after setting school records with 17 touchdown catches and 1,411 receiving yards. "This was not an easy decision for me to make, since I have loved every minute of my time at Ohio State," he said. "But it has been a lifelong dream of mine to play professional football, and I feel that now is the time to pursue that dream." UCLA tailback Karim Abdul-Jabbar, Penn State receiver Freddie Scott, Auburn offensive lineman Willie Anderson and Oklahoma fullback Jerald Moore also said Wednesday they were coming out early, the deadline for underclassmen to enter the April draft. The NFL planned to release the complete list of early entries today. After a terrific sophomore season, Scott had a disappointing junior year, with only 34 catches and one touchdown. "My years here have been the best years of my life," he said. "I know

I made the right decision coming here. I can only hope that wherever I end up will be half as good as here and playing for coach (Joe) Paterno." Abdul-Jabbar had two consecutive 1,000-yard seasons at UCLA, which will have a new coach next season. Bruins offensive coordinator Bob Toledo was recently hired to replace Terry Donahue, who left to become a television commentator. "It was tough," Abdul-Jabbar said of his decision. "I thought I had made up my mind awhile back, but I knew with coach Toledo what I could expect, and I think big things can happen here, so that made it tougher."

Anderson was an All-Southeastern Conference tackle the past two years. "I still feel like I have a lot of unfinished business to attend to here, but after doing a lot of research I believe this is my best opportunity to do what is best for me and my family," he said. Moore was one of the few bright spots during Oklahoma's 5-5-1 season. He ran for 1,001 yards and eight touchdowns, and caught 19 passes for 216 yards and one score.

record in what he said was the toughest of his 33 NFL seasons. Johnson replaced another coaching great, Landry, when he became coach of the Cowboys in 1989, and was undaunted by the challenge of succeeding Shula, who holds the league record for victories with 347. Coaching the Dolphins will allow Johnson to work near his home in the Florida Keys. And by inheriting a team that many - including Johnson - picked to reach the Super Bowl this season, he becomes an immediate threat to capture another NFL title. "This makes the Dolphins a very dangerous team," Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith said. "It's also going to make them a very lean team. Jimmy's going to go in there and trim out all the fat - the guys just sitting around collecting checks. If I were some of those guys, I'd be a little worried." Johnson, after coaching Dallas to a 1-15 record in his first season, won the Super Bowl with the Cowboys in 1993 and 1994, then left coaching to become a TV analyst. "The only way I'd ever go back into coaching was if I looked into the future and saw a Super Bowl," Johnson said following his meeting with Huizenga. "There's no question the opportunity is here. When you have an owner like Wayne Huizenga, who is going to go out and do whatever it takes to be the very best, that gives you the opportunity as a coach. "Not only can it be a very productive relationship, I think it can be very exciting and a lot of fun." Johnson coached the Miami Hurricanes from 1984 to 1988 and kept a home in South Florida even after becoming coach of the Cowboys. "I have a strong emotional feeling toward South Florida," Johnson said. "People here have been fantastic to me. Some of the greatest times I ever had in my life were when I was at the University of Miami and the success we had there. This is a place where I wanted to be for a long time. That was one of the reasons I left the Dallas Cowboys - because I have that kind of affection for the people and area of South Florida." His mother said Johnson made a joking phone call to her home in Port Arthur, disguising his voice and pretending to be a radio reporter from Miami. "He was asking me a lot of questions about Johnson and other things," his mother said. "But I knew he was just kidding me because I recognized his voice." Johnson's hiring means a shakeup in the Dolphins staff. Personnel director Tom Heckles may be replaced with Bob Ackles of the Philadelphia Eagles, the Herald reported. Ackles is reportedly having trouble with Eagles coach Ray Rhodes. General manager Eddie Jones and assistant GM Bryan Wiedmeier will likely be retained. Johnson will travel to Mobile, Ala., on Monday, where the Senior Bowl will be played the following weekend. Next season, the Cowboys play the Dolphins, a meeting that is certain to be the most-hyped game of the year. "It won't be a big deal to me," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said earlier in the week, "because Jimmy Johnson has no effect whatsoever on the direction our team is going."

Student teachers get extra experience through UH program

By MELANIE MARKLEY
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - When a little girl complained that she had been hit by a boy in her pre-kindergarten class, Shawna Herbert calmly resolved the dispute with a few soft-spoken words.

Herbert, 22, is not yet a teacher. But, in the midst of a one-year professional training program at Cage Elementary, the college senior has a good idea of what it will be like to be one.

Like all elementary education majors at the University of Houston, Herbert must spend a full year - far more than the traditional nine to 18 weeks - in a public school before she can get her degree.

"This gives you more experience," said Herbert, "and I think experience is the best teacher there is."

The education majors not only get more experience at teaching. But for the first semester of the year-long program, university professors go into the public schools where their students are assigned and conduct their teaching methodology courses on-site.

UH Education Dean Allen Warner likens the program to medical internships where doctors spend extensive time being supervised while on the job in teaching hospitals before they can practice their profession.

"The essence of teaching is not just in the knowing but in the ability to do," Warner said. "And that holds true whether it is teaching a class, whether it is working with an individual student, working with a small group or participating with a site-based management team."

UH officials say, too, that teaching college courses inside the public schools more effectively bridges the gap between textbook theory and day-to-day reality.

"If we are not in tune with the needs of our students, then that denies us credibility, and rightly so," said Mickey Hollis, a UH education professor who manages the overall program.

Part of a nationwide trend to more closely align teacher education to the realities of the classroom, the program is called Pedagogy for Urban and Multicultural Action, or PUMA.

Currently, seven school districts - Houston, Spring Branch, Spring, Aldine, Alief, Fort Bend and Pasadena - have UH education majors in 25 schools on a daily basis.

At Cage Elementary, for example, 11 UH students are teaming with classroom teachers this year. After one semester already in the school, students like Herbert are now more than ready to tackle their spring-semester student-teaching requirements.

"They are much more comfortable by the time they get to this stage," said Pamela Norwood, a UH assistant professor who coordinates the program at Cage and nearby Lantrip Elementary. "They know what to expect."

Melissa Sama, another UH senior at Cage, said a full year in a school is indeed proving valuable.

"I think it does a good job of closing that gap between what is reality and what you learn about ideally in the classroom," said Sama, 21. "When you are a teacher, you will be prepared for what to expect. It won't be like you are surprised your first year of teaching when you go into a classroom on your own."

This is the third year that Cage has had the program, and Principal Steven Amstutz considers it plus for his school as well as for the prospective teachers.

"They become a part of the faculty, and we treat them that way," he said. "They've got a lot better understanding of what school life is like and what urban classrooms are about than I did when I did my nine weeks (of student teaching) in Chicago."

The issue of teacher training raised national concerns slightly more than a year ago when a status report on teaching in America found that a disturbing number of new teachers, particularly in urban schools, were woefully underprepared for their jobs.

The report, written by Columbia University education professor Linda Darling-Hammond, found that more than one-fourth of all new teachers in the classroom were not fully qualified. And in urban schools, the report said, the situation was even more critical.

To address the problem, the Rockefeller Foundation and Carnegie

Corp. funded a blue-ribbon National Commission on Teaching and America's Future to study how best to refocus school resources on the teaching profession. The commission is expected to make its recommendations in September.

Darling-Hammond, who is executive director of the commission, said while there is still a continuing shortage of qualified teachers, programs like the one at UH are doing a much better job of preparing people for today's classrooms.

"This is really the transformation of teacher education and the transformation of teaching into more of a profession just in the way the teaching hospital began to change medicine into a profession at the turn of the century," she said.

"It is an important phenomenon because we really depend on skilled teachers for everything about education to work, and we have done very little until now to really dig in and create a lot of education programs to prepare people that are highly skilled from the beginning."

UH has been working to reform its teacher education program for several years.

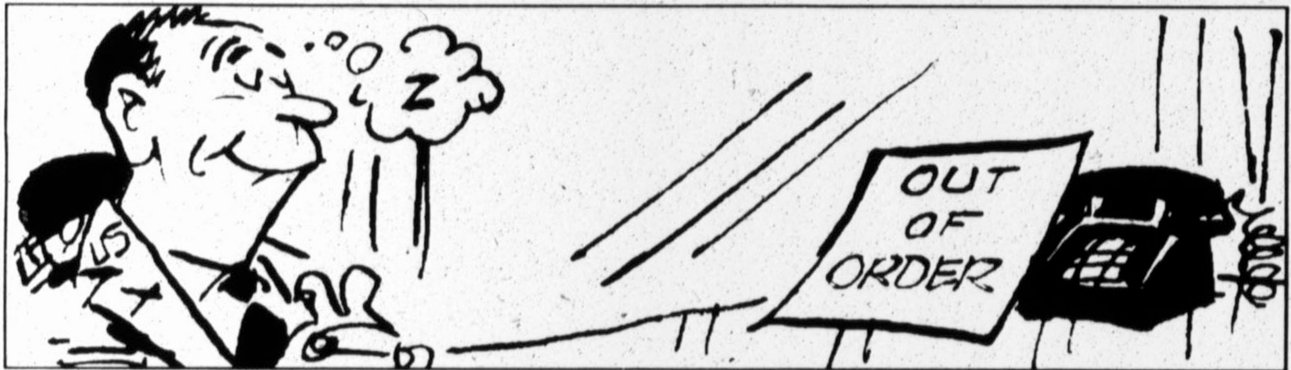

In 1992, the university was one of five universities nationwide to receive an AT&T Foundation grant aimed at developing better teacher training programs for urban classrooms. Education majors were selected at the time to pilot-test the school-based training programs at two Houston Independent School District schools. UH also has received a TEA grant to further develop the program.

Last fall, UH began requiring all elementary education majors to complete the one-year program and beginning next fall, all secondary education majors will face the same requirement.

"I think the end result is a real quality teacher that is further along with the experience and the induction into the school's profession than we've had in the past," said Hollis at UH. "It's all real-world."

Events around area offer exhibits, lectures on quilting, portrait photographs, concerts

Canyon

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon will open an exhibit of portrait photographs from the Research Center's holdings on Jan. 14 through Nov. 1.

Portraits Are People, Too is a selection of photographs ranging over a hundred year time-span and will be exhibited in the Alexander Gallery on the first floor of the Museum, with biographical information supplementing the portraits.

Over 30 portraits will be on display that include not only a variety of individuals and couples who influenced the history of the Panhandle-Plains region, but also demonstrates a wide array of photographic styles and historic framing.

Amarillo

The Endless Horizon, narrated by Patrick Stewart, will be shown in the Discovery Center's Planetarium in Amarillo beginning Jan. 13 and running through March 3.

Show times are Saturday at 1 and 3 p.m. and Sunday at 2 and 3 p.m. Admission is $2 per person, and Discovery Center members will be admitted free.

The film traces exploration through the ages, by land, by sea and in more modern times, the exploration of space. The film focuses on the unique relationship between scientific discovery and exploration that has led to advances in science theory and technology.

Topics included in The Endless

Horizon are: exploration of the oceans, exploration of the continents and exploration beyond the earth.

A quilting workshop is scheduled for Jan. 12 through Jan. 15, in the Texas A&M Regional Research Center in Amarillo.

The Golden Spread Quilt Guild of Canyon and Piecemakers Quilt Guild of Amarillo are presenting quilter and teacher, Charlotte Warr Anderson.

Anderson is a lifetime native of Salt Lake City where she lives with her husband and four children.

She has a background in sewing and crafts and made her first quilt in 1974.

Since 1983, her specialty has been one-of-a-kind pictorial quilts made with both applique and piecing techniques. Her quilts have won many prestigious awards, including two best of shows at the Houston International Quilt Festival.

Anderson teaches and lectures nationally and internationally and has appeared on Amarillo area PBS channel with Georgia Bonesteel.

The lecture on Jan. 12, will begin at 7 p.m. and is entitled "A Cotton Palette". A discussion of quilts as art and a slide lecture featuring pictorial quilts ranging from simple to masterworks will be presented.

The public is invited to attend and no registration is required for the lecture. Admission is $5 per person.

A series of workshops will also be offered.

On Saturday, Jan. 13, Pieced Pictures will be presented. It is a hands-on workshop featuring translation of pictures, line drawings and photographs into piecwork. This technique gives a slightly more abstract look to the subject.

It will be held in the Texas A&M Regional Research and Extension Center in Amarillo.

The six hour workshop will include a luncheon. Students are asked to bring a salad to share for the lunch.

On Sunday, Jan. 14, a workshop on "Applique for Realism" will be presented.

Location for this workshop is Texas A&M Regional Research and Extension Center.

It will also include a luncheon where students are asked to bring a salad to share.

Monday, Jan. 15 will be a repeat of the Saturday workshop, but students are asked to meet in The Church of Christ student center on the campus of West Texas A&M University in Canyon. It will begin at 9 a.m.

Class space is limited for the workshops so pre-registration is required. The fee for each workshop is $45.

Contact June Long at (806)359-8727 to secure your registration and receive a supply list.

The Amarillo Symphony has announced the last of three dates for the 1995-96 season.

"Symphony Backstage" will be presented Jan. 18, beginning at 6:30 p.m. with a talk given by Music Director and Conductor, James Setapen.

An open rehearsal will begin at 7:30 p.m. during the "Symphony Backstage". The symphony will rehearse the music for their concert on Jan. 20.

The guest artist for the concert will be Benny Kim, concert violinist.

Mr. Kim is a winner of several prestigious awards including Young Concert Artists International Auditions in 1983, is one of the nation's most engaging violinists.

He has performed with many of America's leading orchestras including the Chicago and St. Louis Symphonies.

In recent seasons Mr. Kim has appeared as soloist with the Buffalo Philharmonic and the symphonies of Denver, Nashville, San Antonio, Amarillo, San Diego, Virginia, Richmond, Phoenix and internationally with the Hong Kong Philharmonic and the KBS Symphony in Seoul.

Also to be featured during the concert is Susan Martin.

Ms. Martin is the principal timpanist of the Symphony and will demonstrate a variety of percussion instruments.

Ms. Martin is a professor at WTA&M University.

Gun winner

Don Dutton, left, was the winner of this 12 gauge Beretta shotgun in a drawing sponsored by the American Business Club (AMBUCS) of Hereford. Making the presentation is Johnny Rickman, president of AMBUCS.

Lubbock

The Lubbock Fine Arts Center will open Pieces, Parts and Passion: The Quilted Medium, with a reception on Jan. 16, from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The exhibition features the works of artists from throughout the United States, Canada and Australia.

There are nineteen artists invited to participate to the exhibit.

Theresa May will conduct a workshop, A Painter's Approach to Quilt Making, Feb. 16-17.

For more information about the exhibition and workshop, contact the Fine Arts Center at (806)767-2686.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Help. I sometimes become very hot, and my face gets very red. It is uncomfortable and embarrassing. People ask me what's wrong. It happens if I worry. I am 54. I have had this about five years. I don't want to be with people because of it. — Mrs. J.E.

ANSWER: There are ways to handle the problem if we know what's going on physically to cause the blush. Blushing is a transient expansion of blood vessels, with which the tender face and neck skin is rich. A slight surge of blood turns the skin red and warm.

Your letter tells me that at least part of your problem is emotion-based. Let me suggest a treatment that can work for such a problem: the drug Nadolol, which often tempers such blood surges. It is a prescription drug.

Blushing often reflects less obvious events, such as hormonal changes of menopause. The signs of menopause can linger for years as the body adjusts to the hormone's erratic state. Hormone replacement therapy is something to mention to your doctor. It can help.

Alcohol also causes blushing, especially for those of American Indian background, and for some with an Asian background.

In the interest of completeness, I should mention the sarcinoid syndrome, which involves a rare tumor that can produce a blush-provoking substance.

So you have a lot of questions to have answered. Are you having menopause symptoms? Does your doctor think Nadolol will help? Do you have any other signs of the rarer blush producers I mentioned?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Some time ago, I received a listing of your "To Your Good Health" reports. I am looking for some information on lupus, but I found no report devoted to that in the long listing. Did I miss it or something? If not, please advise where I might find information on this subject. — M.T.

ANSWER: You didn't miss it. I have not written a report on lupus, a lapse I might correct in the future. Perhaps a reason for the lack of a lupus report thus far is the Lupus Foundation's veritable smorgasbord of available material. You can call the foundation, toll-free, at (800) 558-0121.

In a nutshell, lupus is one of many autoimmune diseases, whereby the body turns on its own tissue. Lupus ranges from mild to devastating, but with today's medicines, the outlook has improved in recent years. Joints, kidneys and lung linings are among lupus's targets, with joint pain an almost universal symptom. A distinctive rash covers the cheeks and nose in a butterfly pattern. Sunlight worsens things.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I recently had a routine blood test that indicates my white-cell count at 2,700 and red cells at 3.8 million. I had a bone-marrow test. The oncologist said I should not be concerned. Should I? I am 60 and feel good, not fatigued. — Mrs. E.W.

ANSWER: A normal white count is 4,000 to 10,000, and red above 4 million. Your numbers were slightly low.

You were examined by an oncologist, a cancer specialist. Oncologists usually are blood experts as well.

Your marrow test was to examine that site of blood-cell production.

The doctor found nothing wrong and told you not to worry. You feel fine physically. My advice is to forget about it, but to keep future appointments so that the doctor can follow your progress.

Veleda Club holds meeting

Veleda Study Club met Monday in the home of Della Hutto.

Following the reading of the club collect, members answered roll call with "Your New Year's Resolution." Carol Greenfield presented the program on "Everyday Problems and How to Deal with Them."

Greenfield stressed that we have options, life is not just one way. She said we must keep communications open, be honest, be respectful and try to see ourselves as others see us.

There were 13 members in attendance.

Burrus recites for study club

The Pioneer Study Club met recently for its first meeting of the new year during a luncheon at Kings Manor.

President, Mary Jane Burrus conducted the business meeting.

The by-laws were revised and officers were elected for the 1996-1997 year. They will be installed during the May meeting.

Oleta Hoffman recited, "Now That I'm Growing Older."

Burrus recited excerpts, "A Panhandle Pilgrimage" by Pauline Dussett Robertson and R.L. Robertson. It is a story about people who entered a harsh and dangerous country and making the Panhandle as it is known today.

Those in attendance were Nell Culpepper, Maria Escamilla, Catherine Gripp, Rosemary Thomas, Burrus and Hoffman.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 176 Pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15x11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 176 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community. Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing - county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Long-time hobby shop owner knows her trains

By ELLEN SWEETS
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - Thank goodness old habits die hard - at least that's the way Bobbye Hall feels about the generations of families that have returned to her hobby shop over the years.

For almost as long as there have been electric trains, remote-control cars and build-'em-yourself model airplanes, she's been selling them. In that time she has gotten to know her customers well. But she has also gotten to know trains. She has done the Orient Express from London to Vienna; the Bullet Train from Osaka to Tokyo; and the Blue Train across South Africa.

She has dined with nobility and had more than one interesting experience, navigating a male-dominated field long before feminism had a name.

Mrs. Hall, a feisty 86-year-old, stands barely 5 feet tall, so it's not unusual to see her haul a step-stool across the floor of her crowded East Dallas store to reach an item for a customer. She's up, reaching, and down again before you can say "could I get help?"

After all, she's been doing this for 50 years.

"Actually, it'll be 50 years next month," she says. "In the same neighborhood, almost in the same place. We've sold trains to three generations of some families; and then there's those that are coming for the first time. We treasure 'em all."

Mrs. Hall has also remained in a neighborhood that has seen major demographic shifts. Situated in a small square brick building at the corner of Bryan and Fitzhugh, her hobby shop is across the street from an Asian grocery store. Once adjacent to the city's silk stocking residential district, she has chosen to remain in the area, mainly because it's where she's used to being and because it only takes her 10 minutes to get there from her Park Cities home.

"I don't see so well at night anymore, and I don't want to have to drive in the dark any more than I have to," she says.

Mrs. Hall discusses her start in the train-and-model-building business over lunch in the Vietnamese restaurant next door. Opposite a neatly pressed white handkerchief in the left breast pocket of her bright red suit is a rhinestone pin shaped like a train engine.

Her voice is strong and authoritative.

"My husband was a model railroader," she says. "During the war, when there was gas rationing, we'd work on models together. One day he came home and said he'd rented a building for a shop of my own. I'd never sold anything in my life, but I learned. Then I realized I didn't know anything about trains, and decided I needed to learn about that too. The first thing I built, I put it on the track and it ran backward. I fixed the wiring, though, and it ran OK after that."

They opened a second store in Casa Linda. But in time, the marriage faltered. In the divorce settlement, he kept the Casa Linda store and she kept the one in East Dallas. He died in 1960.

"I'm one of the few old-timers left," she says. "One by one they've passed beyond. The neighborhood has changed dramatically, but my customers still come back. They know we treat them like family."

Harold Redd is part of that family. He and his two sons - 13-year-old Warren and 5-year-old Eric - have come from Mesquite to buy models. He and his sons build airplanes together.

"I've been coming here since I was Warren's age," Redd says. Just like I used to build them with my father, I build them with my sons. It's a guy thing."

Part of Mrs. Hall's success also rests in the fact that she also sells to an international market that includes South Africa, Australia, Switzerland, Holland, France, England and Germany.

Several years ago she got into the design and manufacture of limited edition N (for "narrow")-gauge brass trains that sell from $200 to $1,300 for an engine. For years Mrs. Hall made two trips a year to the Orient - as she still calls it - to submit designs and place orders. One of the businessmen she met in Japan eventually invited her to meet his family in Lausanne, Switzerland.

"I thought he was just another importer, just like me," Mrs. Hall says. "It wasn't until later I found out he was a count, and that his home was indeed his castle. When I went there I was thunderstruck. Now I can say I've dined in a real one."

Working with the Japanese in the 1960s held other surprises - especially for the Japanese.

"We always communicated by letter, and I had always signed my name, Bobbye Hall," she says. "So they thought I was a man. Then when I told people I was going over to meet the businessmen I had been dealing with, everybody said I would have a problem."

When a fellow dealer had a party to introduce a new edition of brass trains, the publisher of a train collector's magazine made some introductory comments about Mrs. Hall.

"When he finished, he said '...and I'm sure you will treat her kindly,'" she says. "Well, he said you could have heard a pin drop. The Japanese men immediately started trying to figure out how to entertain me."

Mrs. Hall made it easy for them. She determined her schedule, agreeing to meet with the men during the day and over lunch. Her evenings would be her own. It worked just fine.

These days, though, with the rise of the fax machine, electronic mail and easy overseas calling, there is less need for her to travel to monitor the manufacture of her special trains - but she does plan to sell a special-edition commemorative engine to coincide with the store's 50th anniversary.

Back at her shop after lunch, the store is still busy. People are coming and going, not to exchange merchandise, but to buy more.

Dean Meyer is in from Grand Saline, just east of Dallas, between here and Tyler. He began collecting trains about six years ago. He learned of Mrs. Hall's shop from a friend.

"My mom used to type for a man in Dallas, and every Christmas he'd get his trains out and filled every room with them," he says. "I must have been 5 at the time. I'd lie in the floor for hours and watch the trains go 'round. Once you start, you can't stop."

Meyer, 28, is looking at freight engines. He admits that he's gone haywire, but he does share his "toys" with his three children - including his 7-year-old daughter.

"I figure I've spent $4,000, maybe $5,000 since I started, but don't tell my wife that. I think I gave her a much lower figure."

There's no point in Ban Bywaters trying to lowball a figure to his wife. He is from one of those three-generation families to whom Mrs. Hall has sold trains. He is also responsible for the "Wonderland Express," the Galleria exhibit that is opened annually for fun and fundraising.

Bywaters, a financial consultant, with Merrill Lynch, readily pleads "no contest" to allegations of being train-addicted. He calls himself a "licensed trainologist" and is not above making dreadful puns.

"I've got a one-track mind that has derailed," he says. "Fifty years ago my dad came home from the Pacific and bought a second-hand train. Every year he added to it. Over the years, my brother and I grew up and my parents put the trains in boxes in the attic. For some reason we didn't throw them away."

When Bywaters married, he and his wife Kathleen couldn't afford a Christmas tree.

"We had a Christmas fern," he says. "I asked if she wanted me to put up my trains. They ran through entire house. She invited people in to see them. I'd come home and there'd be a houseful of people I didn't know."

Testimony to the enduring lure of model trains rests in the fact that people have been coming to see his trains, with several additions, ever since. The Wonderland display, which runs on a mile and a half of track, and consists of 21 trains with 450 cars on five levels.

Unsurprisingly, Bywaters is one of Mrs. Hall's more memorable customers. There are other well-known names, like that of Everett deGolyer, whose brass train collection found a home in the deGolyer Library at Southern Methodist University.

Then there are others, like the old man who dropped in one day when Mrs. Hall was doing inventory.

"We were just talking, while I was counting engines - he loved locomotives," she says. "Just off the top of my head, I said 'if you would buy all these engines, I wouldn't have to do this inventory.' Then, just like that, he said he would. I was stunned. I said 'are you serious?'"

"Well, he bought every one. Later, I asked him if his wife knew the value of the collection, and he said she did. But when he died I called her just to make sure. A lot of times the wives don't know how much trains are worth, and they sell them for nothing."

Mrs. Hall's favorite stories still revolve around children.

"I remember one young man who came in with his parents once, and he wanted a working oil well for his train set," she says. "His parents looked at it and said no, they didn't think they could afford it. Well, they stood and talked for a minute and sent him across the street for a candy bar."

"While he was gone, they bought the oil well and had it wrapped as a gift to surprise him. When he came back, they were standing at the car, waiting for him. All of a sudden he said he left something in the store. He ran inside and went straight to where the oil well had been. His little face lit up and he looked at me and winked."

"I just laughed and winked back."

New management to operate Fiesta Texas in San Antonio

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Six Flags Theme Parks Inc. has reached a lease-purchase agreement to operate Fiesta Texas, a music theme park on the outskirts of San Antonio.

La Cantera Development Co., a subsidiary of the San Antonio-based financial services firm USAA, will retain ownership of the park. The 10-year deal gives Six Flags the option to buy Fiesta Texas.

Financial terms of the agreement in principle were not disclosed.

Fiesta Texas opened in March 1992 and was patterned after Opryland in Nashville, Tenn. It was designed to highlight regional and other music.

The Six Flags management will increase the emphasis on rides and incorporate Warner Bros. movie and cartoon characters into the park, said Larry Bouts, chief executive officer of Six Flags Theme Parks Inc.

"We know a lot about how to build thrilling, safe and very exciting rides themed around the Warner Bros. properties," said Bouts, surrounded at a news conference Wednesday by Bugs Bunny and other Looney Tunes live characters.

Coming for the 1996 season will be a new steel roller coaster called "The Joker's Revenge," park officials said. The purple ride is based on the character from the Warner Bros. "Batman" movies. It will run backward and tilt visitors upside down.

While Six Flags won't do away with live musical performances, it will provide "a balance" between music and rides, Bouts said.

Other upcoming changes have not been disclosed, including whether Fiesta Texas will get a new name or whether the 230 full-time employees will face any layoffs.

"There might be some changes," Bouts said, "but at this point we don't know what they might be."

Six Flags officials said Andrew Barkley, a senior vice president at Six Flags, has been named president of Fiesta Texas. He replaces general manager Paul Serff.

Gaylord Entertainment Co., which had managed Fiesta Texas, said Wednesday it has ended its involvement with the park and transferred its 14-percent ownership to La Cantera. La Cantera had owned 86 percent of the park.

Fiesta Texas will benefit from Six Flags' advertising and marketing and its entertainment business experience, Bouts said.

"We all know that being part of a brand name just adds to the security that a customer might have in making a decision about what to do with their entertainment dollars," he said.

Barkley added that he intends to work with city leaders on an "aggressive tourism program." The city has touted Fiesta Texas and Sea World of Texas as additional attractions for visitors coming to San Antonio to visit the Alamo, Riverwalk and other sights.

Fiesta Texas, which sits on 200 acres in an old limestone quarry, is the first full park addition for Six Flags since 1982.

Six Flags now operates 12 theme parks including Six Flags Over Texas and Wet 'n Wild in Arlington and Six Flags AstroWorld and Six Flags WaterWorld in Houston.

It is the second-largest theme park company behind Disney and had an estimated 24 million visitors at its parks in 1995.

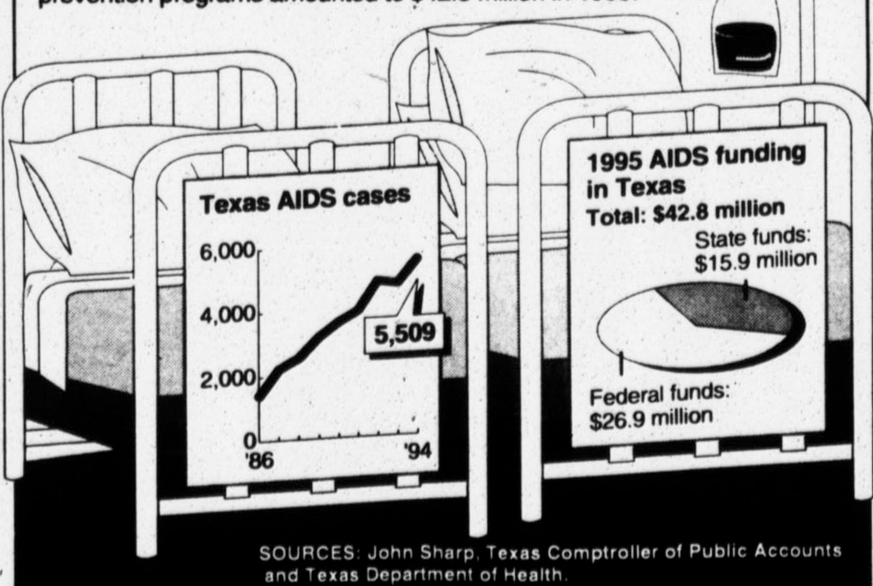

Attendance at Fiesta Texas for the 1995 season was 1.45 million, according to Amusement Business magazine. Fiesta Texas does not release attendance figures.

The park will open March 14 for 1996.

Top presidential hopefuls backed by special interests

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The leading contenders in this year's presidential race all come with career-long ties to a host of special interests largely unknown to voters, according to a new study of money and presidential politics.

Among the study's findings:
- NationsBank loaned the Democratic Party $3.5 million on favorable terms two weeks after President Clinton signed a bill that would save the bank an estimated $50 million a year. Bank President Hugh McColl had become one of Clinton's closest advisers on banking matters.

- Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has received $381,000 in support over his long career from an interest far from Kansas - California's Gallo winery. Dole has supported tax and regulatory policies worth many times that to the company.

- The top support for Texas Sen. Phil Gramm has come not from his state's oil industry, but from the National Rifle Association, which gave him $440,200. The favor has worked both ways; Gramm also has written letters soliciting donations to the gun-rights group.

"The point is, we're not just electing politicians," said Charles Lewis, director of the Center for Public Integrity and the study's primary author. "It's a package deal. We're also electing their patrons and their priorities. We think the public should know what these alignments and entanglements and relationships are."

Lewis and a team of researchers have published "The Buying of the President," a 271-page paperback designed to educate voters about the financial support systems of the Republican and Democratic parties and their leading presidential contenders.

Already, he said, the 1996 election looks like the most expensive in history, with $100 million raised before the first vote is cast in a primary. Those dollars, at least as much as the votes that follow, determine who the nominees will be, said Lewis.

"It's not a horse race, or a beauty contest," he said. "It's a giant auction."

By now the Whitewater land deal that has bedeviled Clinton is well known to the public. But Lewis said at least three other candidates have benefited from real estate dealings with some of their political supporters.

The study recounts how Gramm received more than $50,000 worth of free remodeling work on his vacation home on Maryland's Eastern Shore from a Texas savings and loan operator and builder; Dole and his wife bought a Florida condominium previously owned by Dwayne Andreas, chairman of agribusiness giant Archer Daniels Midland; and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and several political contributors owned land whose value would have been enhanced by a major new highway he proposed to build while governor.

In each case, the candidates denied any wrongdoing. But Lewis said the dealings illustrate "a corrosive process, that anyone who gets involved becomes tarnished. Before we elect another president, we better know what we're getting. If there's another Whitewater in someone's background, it would be nice to know about it before the campaign."

The study includes a list of the top career campaign donors for each of the leading candidates, and there, too, are some surprises.

For Clinton, the top supporter is the New York investment banking firm Goldman Sachs, the source of $107,850 in total campaign giving. The company's former chairman, Robert Rubin, is Clinton's treasury secretary.

Gramm's top two backers are national interest groups: the NRA, which has supported him since he first ran for the Senate in 1984, and the American Medical Association, which has given a cumulative $140,467.

In addition to the support from Gallo, a top Dole backer is Archer Daniels Midland, which benefits from numerous federal subsidies and programs, including a tax break for fuel ethanol, export subsidies for grain, and breaks for peanuts and sweeteners.

"Obviously, we have a severely corrupted process," Lewis said. "This country has got to address it. We're losing control of our democracy, and the people are becoming a prop in their own play."
