House, Senate set to debate proposals to balance budget

By DAVID ESPO
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite intense Democratic criticism over the impact on Medicare, legislation to balance the budget by 2002 is headed for a historic debate on the floors of the House and Senate within a week.

The Senate Budget Committee followed the lead of its House counterpart Thursday, voting to shrink government by abolishing numerous programs and curbing the government's vast array of social programs. The vote was 12-10, strictly along party lines.

"There's every reason to believe we'll pass a balanced budget on the floor of the Senate in the next 10 to 12 days," Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici predicted.

Domenici, R-N.M., said it was time to rein in a government "that is too big to let us be free, that spends too much and borrows too much to let the economy be free."

In the House, Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and his lieutenants are pointing toward a showdown next Wednesday and Thursday. One lawmaker, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the leadership was working hard for unanimous Republican support for their plan, to underscore the importance placed on the anti-deficit drive.

So far, only one Democrat in Congress, conservative Rep. Mike Parker of Mississippi, has announced his support.

The federal budget was last balanced in 1969. Republicans made it an article of faith with the voters last fall that they would make an assault on deficits one of their highest priorities.

As they have repeatedly in the past several days, Democrats sharply attacked Republican spending plans.

At the White House, Budget Director Alice Rivlin took aim at Republican plans to rein in education and job training programs, efforts she said pay future dividends. "Of all the places in the budget to cut, these reductions seem about the most stupid and shortsighted," she said.

Polls show consistently that while voters favor a balanced budget in theory, they are far less supportive of cuts in specific programs, and Democrats have sought to tap into that opposition in recent days.

In their budget, Republicans in both houses proposed eye-catching savings from government-run health care programs for the elderly and the poor.

In the Senate, Republicans proposed savings totaling $431 billion over seven years from Medicare and Medicaid combined. The comparable figure in the House proposal is $464 billion, and includes plans to turn Medicaid over to the states in a block grant.

Democrats said such cuts would devastate the programs, Medicare particularly. Republicans countered that Medicare spending would rise every year, and that reforms are needed to slow the growth of the program in order to keep it from going broke.

While the Republican House and Senate budget plans are similar, they differ on the key issue of taxes.

The House measure is crafted to accommodate the tax cuts lawmakers voted for earlier this year as part of the GOP's "Contract With America."

Domenici, however, made tax cuts conditional on a certification by the Congressional Budget Office that the overall spending plan would, in fact, achieve a balanced budget. The theory is that the economy would respond with lower interest rates, driving up economic growth and government revenues, thereby making money available for a tax cut.

Wagon train rolls through town to rehabilitate youth

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
The Double T Wagon Train rolled into Hereford Thursday and not unlike pioneers of the old West--these wranglers have a vision and are on a quest for a new start in life.

The wagon train is part of the VisionQuest program--a private, non-profit company that contracts with various governmental agencies to provide an alternative to locking up young people.

The juvenile rehabilitation program challenges teenage boys and girls to face their three main problems--abuse, abandonment and boundaries (no limits set by parents).

The wagon train usually travels five days a week and stops for a two-day rest, for the animals as well as the people. They were tentatively scheduled to spend Thursday and Friday night in Hereford, camped near the Cowgirl Hall of Fame.

It's a labor-intensive program. About 60 kids and 40 staff members are involved in this train--one of three being operated around the country. The staff includes a treatment director, nurse, wranglers, cooks, and teachers for a high school.

The teenagers on the train are ages 12 to 18. The company also offers a Home Quest program for younger kids, and there is also a SeaQuest program on three sailing ships.

Wagon master (also known as Program Master) of the Double T train is Dan Johnston. As one might guess, he is a graduate of Texas Tech University. Dan was busy, so he introduced us to Jane Dawson, deputy program director for quality of care.

She outlined the program, one that started in 1973 and took on the wagon train program in 1976. The wagon trains usually make a loop from Tucson, Az., to Idaho and back in about nine months, then regroup and start again. This one, however, has been going since August of 1993.

The kids in the program commit for 6 to 12 months, or 2,000 miles with the train. "We don't use much force with the kids, and we don't have to--they have a lot to lose if they don't finish the commitment."

"Some of these kids had parents who were there physically, but not emotionally," says Dawson. "We serve as strong parents, brothers, sisters or cousins," she added.

"We're like a big family and the main factor is we want let them quit. They learn to accept challenges and set and accomplish goals. Through these steps come self discipline, honor and a work ethic," explained Dawson.

When a troubled teen commits to VisionQuest--through a judge's order or through referrals and an interview with the company--it's a commitment of no alcohol, no drugs and no sex for six months to a year. Many of the campers chose the program as an alternative to being locked up.

For troubled youths, the wagon train provides safe, secure limits and boundaries, away from the pressure of their neighborhoods. The life gives youths a consistent way of approaching each day with clear limits and constant discipline.

Dawne, an 18-year-old girl from California, says she made the choice to enter the program "because I didn't want to deal with the lock-up syndrome."

You "earn your way" in the wagon train family, and Dawne worked her way to be a scout on horseback. "I walked beside a wagon for three days, and that's a lot of walking when the train averages 15 to 20 miles a day."

"You have to get 15 of your peers to recommend you for a job, and they know whether or not you're going to walk the walk," said Dawne. She gave this writer a tour of the camp pointing out the picket line of mules and horses, the wagons, tepees, and all the support vehicles and trailers. Trucks move the trailers to the next stop.

"The program we have represents the Plains Indian youths' rite-of-passage," said Dawne. "Each tepee is a group and we start everything by getting in a circle and chanting our next mission--whether it be to go eat, pack up for the next move, or going to school."

There is one tepee of girls. "We are not allowed to talk to the boys, said Dawne, "but we do say 'good morning' sometimes."

Each tepee family is responsible for a wagon, its mules and equipment. Those who have learned to "con" everyone around them find out in a hurry that manipulation doesn't work with a 1,500-pound mule.

The vision quest program not only offers the wagon train experience, but also wilderness "quests" in activities such as hiking, biking, marathons, or breaking mustangs. Dawne did her quest in biking in the wilderness. "They make sure you have to stretch to make your quest."

She said the day typically begins at 6 a.m., when there is a 20-minute call for breakfast. Following morning chores and breakfast, the train begins a 15-20 mile journey. While the wagons are underway, youths known as "campjacks" clean up the campgrounds and move ahead to prepare the next camp, then attend school. Those driving the wagons begin school after pulling into camp.

"Sometimes that is after sundown," grinned Dawne, "but we take turns at being campjacks and doing the school work is just part of it. I'm going for my GED next month when I finish my year and go home."

And, she thinks the wagon train experience has prepared her for home again. "I've learned a lot about communicating and getting along the girls in my tepee. I think I understand my mother better, now, and about setting goals and succeeding."

Dawson said the rehab program has a success rate of 70 percent. "The program breaks the cycle of failure and re-incarceration, offering kids a fresh start in life."

Funds for new OKC federal building pass

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new federal building for Oklahoma City won approval by House and Senate negotiators, but other federal building projects generally faced a round of deep cuts.

Hardest hit would be a plan to consolidate Food and Drug Administration operations in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, which would lose $228 million budgeted for construction costs.

The negotiators agreed Thursday to spend $110.5 million, more than twice what the Clinton administration sought, for Treasury Department expenses resulting from the Oklahoma City bombing.

Of that, $40.4 million would be for construction of a new federal building.

The decision came during a session in which lawmakers slashed $580 million from 39 other federal building projects in the works this year. It's all part of the drive to reduce the deficit.

The lawmakers are meeting this week to work out differences between the bills each chamber passed to reduce the level of federal spending in the current fiscal year. Any decisions they reach must be passed by the House and Senate, and signed by President Clinton to become law.

The Senate had tried to kill all $284 million in unobligated funding for the FDA project.

Local firm presented small business award

Ed Hodges, a representative from U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's office in Dallas, presented the "1995 Small Business Achievement Award" to McCaslin Lumber Co. of Hereford during a ceremony here Thursday morning.

In observance of National Small Business Appreciation Week, May 7-13, Sen. Gramm sent his congratulations in the form of a personal letter read by Hodges. Mike Carr, Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce executive, served as master of ceremonies.

Mayor Bob Josseland made brief congratulatory remarks to McCaslin Lumber, then asked Hodges to take Sen. Gramm a message of appreciation for the honor bestowed on the local firm. Approximately 30 people attended the event.

Honored guests included Clarice McCaslin and former company managers Ralph Hastings and Wayne Phillips. Tom Lange is the current manager.

Gramm's letter stated, in part: "The small business owner has become the backbone of American democracy by providing a solid foundation on which communities are built. McCaslin Lumber has made a positive impact on Hereford's economy and has served as a civic cornerstone."

"Small business owners pay the bulk of taxes that our communities use to finance a police force, operate a school system, and provide a health care facility. It is very fitting for our nation to dedicate a week in recognition of our small business owners."

"On this special occasion, I join the city of Hereford in honoring McCaslin Lumber for its decades of operation."

HTFCU annual meeting held; Betzen re-elected

Tommy Betzen was re-elected to the board of the Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union on Thursday as members gathered for the 58th annual meeting.

The meeting was held in the Hereford Community Center. The election was a quick part of the session, as the nominating committee had only one expired term to address and Betzen was the only nominee.

After credit union lawyer R.C. Hoelscher--who conducted the election--asked three times for nominations from the floor, a motion was made to close nominations and elect Betzen by acclamation.

That motion passed unanimously. In his remarks, board president Joe Kerr noted that the credit union opened in 1937 with donations of 25 cents from local residents.

Now, he said, the institution has between $22 million and $23 million in assets, with 16 employees in Hereford and Dimmitt.

The facility has 7,574 savers, he said, and 2,208 borrowers, with 64.3 percent of all savings in the credit union loaned out to members.

That, Kerr said, is an improvement over recent years after the credit union began restructuring its loans in September 1991 when the National Credit Union Administration determined the credit union had too many agriculture and business loans.

Since then, Kerr said, the number of those loans has dropped from more than 30 percent to about 10 percent of the total loan portfolio.

"We're building back and it's going to make a healthier operation," he said.

Manager Bob Baker introduced two new staff members to the assembly, Comptroller William E. Allen and Dimmitt branch manager Mike Huseman.

Following the business meeting, Betzen presided over the awarding of door prizes, assisted by Jessica Weishaar and Jacqueline Paschel.

Tobacco to minors is illegal in proposal

AUSTIN (AP) - Legislation to make it illegal for minors to buy or use tobacco products has been tentatively approved by the Texas House.

"This will do something good for the children all across the state of Texas," said Rep. Curtis Seidlits, D-Sherman.

The measure won preliminary approval Thursday on an 87-49 vote. It faces another House vote before heading to the Senate. Senators Thursday approved a separate bill to impose statewide smoking restrictions, and that measure included a provision on minors similar to Seidlits' bill.

Seidlits said his bill aimed to "catch these young people and make sure they understand the dangers of smoking."

Opponents said it would take away the right of local communities to enact their own ordinances on teen smoking. "The bottom line of this bill is to take away local control," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Berlanga also argued that Seidlits' bill was too tough on minors, asking: "Should we penalize the children, or are we going to penalize the merchant?"

Under the bill, youths under age 18 would be prohibited from possessing, purchasing or accepting tobacco products.

An offense would be punishable by a fine of $25 to $200 or 25 hours of community service. Subsequent offenses would be punishable by a fine of $100 to $500 or 50 hours of community service.

The measure also would prohibit sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors, and it would prohibit placement of vending machines containing tobacco products in places accessible to minors, with some exceptions.

Prosecution's testimony on DNA may be overwhelming evidence

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Prosecutors have given jurors 170 million reasons to convict O.J. Simpson.

Scientist Robin Cotton said Thursday that only one in 170 million black and white people have the genetic blueprint of Simpson's blood and a small drop of blood found near the bodies of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend.

Calculated another way, the prosecution's DNA tests showed there are only a few people on Earth with the same genetic makeup of blood found at the murder scene - and one of them is Simpson.

Under cross-examination, Cotton acknowledged her astronomical figures ignore possible tampering or contamination and do not say when or how the blood was deposited.

Nevertheless, some legal analysts said the evidence was so compelling that, after about three months of testimony, prosecutors have presented all they need to obtain a guilty verdict that would stand up on appeal.

"They have met their burden of proof, legally speaking," said Loyola University law professor Stanley Goldman. "If the prosecution wanted to end it here, they could end it here."

It doesn't end here, of course, not by a long shot.

There is still the cross-examination of Cotton, which continues today after a shaky start Thursday.

There also is much more DNA testimony still to come from a scientist at the California Department of Justice laboratory, which tested many items collected in the case.

And, finally, the defense has yet to present its case, with the big question being whether Simpson himself will take the witness stand.

The defense has suggested a detective smeared Ms. Simpson's blood on a sock at the foot of Simpson's bed and someone else sprinkled Simpson's blood about the crime scene and his mansion.

Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were knifed to death outside her condominium on June 12. With no apparent eyewitnesses and no murder weapon found, prosecutors are relying on the blood evidence to support their theory that Simpson is the killer.

Cotton, director of the Cellmark Diagnostics lab, has led jurors down an elaborate blood trail toward Simpson. Speaking in the unemotional, analytic tone of a teacher, she used complex calculations to closely link

Simpson to five drops of blood collected from the crime scene and his mansion.

Jurors appeared riveted by the testimony, gazing at charts and taking copious notes. Twice they were trotted out of the jury box to look closely at DNA X-rays mounted on a light box.

Cotton's most astronomical figures involved a pair of socks found near Simpson's bed. Cotton said one sock contained the DNA type of Ms. Simpson. Asked how many other whites shared that DNA type, Cotton said one in 9.7 billion.

There are an estimated 5.5 billion people on the planet.

Using that same figure for the world's population, only a few people - including Simpson - have the same genetic makeup found in one of the blood drops taken from a walkway outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

Teenager amasses tickets; now faces lengthy jail term

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - An Amarillo teen-ager likely has bought himself a ticket for an extended visit to jail after piling up 88 traffic tickets - now totaling some $27,000 in fines - since January.

The 19-year-old was arrested Wednesday, but has not been arraigned. He remained in custody Thursday.

"He didn't have a driver's license or insurance," police warrant officer Flint Robbins said. "But he kept driving. It didn't take too long before word got out, and he kept getting tickets (for) no license or insurance, running stop signs, things like that."

He neither paid the tickets nor contested them in court. Warrants for traffic ticket arrests take about 90 days to be issued. In the meantime, the tickets just piled up.

On May 5, he was jailed for eight of the 88 tickets, but disappeared after posting bond, the officer said.

Municipal Court Judge Donna Clayton then instructed that a warrant be issued for all 88 citations.

"Because they were so massive, the judge decided he couldn't be eligible for a bond," Robbins said.

If the man pleads guilty, the fines will tally about $27,112. If he cannot pay the fines, he will be jailed until the incarceration time - valued at $50 a day - pays off the tickets, Robbins said.

That would take about 1-1/2 years. "If that was theft, if he had stolen as much as he's been ticketed for, it would be a third-degree felony," Robbins said. "It's pretty amazing."

Judge rules for subsidy

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A judge has refused to block Amarillo from paying American Airlines nearly $3 million to retain jet service.

Judge Paul Davis Jr. on Thursday rejected the challenge filed by two businessmen following a hearing in Austin.

C. Rufus Gaut and C.W. Crouch had objected to paying American to keep jet service to and from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Fort Worth-based American has considered using turbo props for Amarillo service, to save money.

Gaut and Crouch had claimed the Amarillo Economic Development Corporation does not have the authority to use tax money for such payments.

Amarillo leaders in March decided to pay American to keep the jet service. That deal was suggested last year if passenger loads fell below 70 percent capacity.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the patient who was mad because she couldn't get lab results. I am a nurse at a community hospital in Southwest Florida. Friends and family members telephone from all over the country inquiring about the condition, diagnosis or prognosis of a patient. To protect the confidentiality rights of the patient, we do not divulge such information. You would be doing a great service by getting this message out to the public.

they are God." I wish she could see doctors through my eyes. The majority of physicians are dedicated, compassionate professionals who have incredibly difficult work to do. They are beleaguered by ever-increasing mounds of paperwork, shrinking reimbursement and constant demands and interruptions.

Imagine finally being able to sit down to a meal with your family, only to have your pager go off three times. Recently, I saw a young surgeon maintain a bedside vigil beside a man who had just had an aneurysm repaired. The doctor refused to leave until he was satisfied that the patient was stable. This, after a grueling 14-hour day filled with surgeries and rounds.

If physicians are slow at relaying lab results to patients, it may be because they are busy saving someone's life, and it could be yours. -- Venice, Fla.

DEAR VENICE: Thank you for an excellent letter in defense of physicians. Every profession has its lemons, but the peaches more than make up for it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I respond to the woman who believes cats should be allowed to wander outdoors? As a veterinarian in practice for 40 years, I have seen thousands of cats, and I can tell you that at least 85 percent of those poor creatures are brought in by owners who let their cats roam free.

Cats who play outside are exposed to infectious diseases and spread them to other cats in the household. They are also at risk of being killed or injured by automobiles because stoplights and signs mean nothing to them.

Fights are the main cause of feline injuries. Cats, especially the non-neutered, constantly mark their territory and prow for intruders. Indoor cats do not get into fights.

Non-neutered cats running wild also produce more cats. Last year, the Humane Society put to death over 10 million dogs and cats because it was unable to place them. What a pity!

Of course cats like to be outside, but since we have domesticated these creatures, we must do what is best for them, and being outdoors is not in their best interest. -- David Epstein, DVM, Glenview, Ill.

DEAR DR. EPSTEIN: Thank you for a letter I hope will be taken seriously by cat owners everywhere. People who love their pets take care of them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a girl, 16, good-looking with a nice personality. The guys don't ask me out because I live in a dump in a bad neighborhood. They are friendly until they learn my address.

We can't move because my dad took off and Mom has a hard time paying the rent as it is. Any ideas on how to overcome this? -- NYC

DEAR NYC: Plenty of girls who have good addresses don't get asked out. If a boy likes you, he doesn't care where you live.

Lee conducts installation of officers for Xi Epsilon Alpha Officers for 1995-96 were installed at a recent meeting of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The installation was conducted by the outgoing president, Ruby Lee. Officers installed were Ruby Sanders, president; Melinda Whitfill, vice president; Diane Beavers, recording secretary; Dee Hamilton, treasurer; and Sheri Jones, corresponding secretary.

The meeting was held in the home of the speaker and chapter member, Linda Arellano, who presented various readings about the subject "Living Gracefully: Meeting Life Situations with Grace". She also read humorous examples on how to handle stress constructively.

A business meeting was held prior to the installation. Roll call was answered by members who provided gift ideas for Secret Sisters.

Jewelry making fun with potatoes

My mother sent my daughter a surprise envelope the other day filled with interesting beads in assorted shapes and colors for her jewelry-making projects. But these weren't the typical beads we find at our local bead shop; we were made out of potatoes! Eager to make similar "cheap" beads ourselves, we experimented and came up with these steps for making a necklace. We think it's a project your preteen or teen will enjoy too.

Peel and cut one large white raw potato into 1/2- to 3/4-inch chunks (with adult assistance). Poke each chunk through its center into a bamboo skewer, making sure the chunks aren't touching. (One potato will fill about four skewers.) Poke skewers.

Paint the beads with acrylic paint. If you wish your beads to resemble stones with fishing line, elastic or cord. String the potato beads, mixing them with other beads or charms you may already have.

To string the necklace, thread a needle with fishing line, elastic or cording. String the potato beads, mixing them with other beads or charms you may already have.

Knicks blow lead; Pacers win in OT

By WENDY E. LANE AP Basketball Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Closing out games is suddenly a problem for the New York Knicks. In Game 1 of their Eastern Conference semifinal series with Indiana, they blew a six-point lead in the final 17 seconds and lost by two. In Game 3 on Thursday night, they were up by 10 with 4:51 left only to have the Pacers come back to send the game into overtime.

Indiana's 97-95 victory means the Knicks trail the best-of-7 series 2-1. "We feel like we should be ahead 3-0," New York coach Pat Riley said, "but we're not. You have to finish games."

Now the Knicks will have something to consider for Game 4 Saturday in Indianapolis. They didn't score a field goal in the last seven minutes of regulation, missed six of 14 free throws in the fourth quarter and hit just one basket in the first 4 1/2 minutes of overtime. The Pacers scored six straight points, capped by Reggie Miller's soaring jam from the middle of the lane with 41.8 seconds to play.

After Derek Harper, who scored all seven of his team's points in overtime, pulled the Knicks within one with 24.2 seconds left, he missed an 18-foot jumper with fewer than three seconds remaining. "We got in a situation where we were trying to create offense for ourselves and not as a team," Harper said. "We just didn't come up with some big plays to win the game down the stretch."

The Pacers flubbed a few plays at the end, too, bungling two inbounds plays and failing to control a rebound. "I told them in (the locker room), you can make mistakes and overcome them if you play hard and compete," Indiana coach Larry Brown said. "Doing just that for the Pacers were Miller, who bounced back to get 26 points and 11 rebounds, and Rik Smits, who scored 19 of his 21 points in the second half."

New York's John Starks hit seven 3-pointers, one shy of the NBA playoff record, for 23 points, but had only three in the second half. Charles Oakley also had 23 for the Knicks. While the Pacers got a big game from their big man, Smits, New York center Patrick Ewing played just 33 minutes, scored 11 points and fouled out with 3:33 left in regulation. His score calves limited his mobility and seemed to affect his shooting, but his complaint was with the referees.

Berryhill's hit ends Reds-Marlins marathon

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Damon Berryhill was 0-for-1995, so it figured he'd have to wait and wait for his first hit when he finally got to play.

Berryhill was sitting on the bench while the Cincinnati Reds and Florida Marlins battled to a 1-1 tie through seven innings.

The reserve catcher entered the game in the eighth inning. His third at-bat of the night and seventh for the season turned into his first hit, a tie-breaking single that helped Cincinnati capture a 15-inning marathon 3-1.

"When you're 0-for-6, you're thinking, 'What's going on?'" Berryhill said. "I just wanted to do some damage, and to come through is a bonus."

The victory was the Reds' fifth straight after a rocky 1-8 start. And they allowed Florida just one run in the past 28 innings while completing a three-game sweep in Miami.

The Marlins suffered their fifth straight loss and have lost a franchise-record nine straight at home, including seven this year.

Kurt Abbott's first home run of the year put Florida on top 1-0. Reggie Sanders tied the game in the seventh with a two-out single, the Reds' first hit to get out of the infield. It came after Ron Gant and Bret Boone reached on infield singles.

Astros 12, Pirates 4

In Pittsburgh, Houston completed a three-game sweep of the Pirates as Phil Plantier hit a three-run, first-inning homer.

Luis Gonzalez and Derek Bell each had three of Houston's 17 hits. The Astros totaled 41 hits while outscoring Pittsburgh 31-13 in the rain-shortened series.

The Pirates' 3-10 start is their worst since 1974, when they went on to win the National League East. They started 4-10 in 1979, their last World Series championship season.

Rockies 10, Giants 4

Colorado pounded out four homers in completing a three-game home sweep of San Francisco. Larry Walker, Andres Galarraga, Dante Bichette and rookie Jason Bates hit the home runs.

Walker and Vinny Castilla each had three hits and three RBIs.

The Rockies have hit 15 homers in their last five games and are tied for the best record in the NL (10-4).

Terry Mulholland (2-2) walked the first two batters he faced in the game, then served up Walker's third homer of the year, a 424-foot shot to right that was the first to reach the second deck at Coors Field.

Expos 13, Phillies 1

Rookie Carlos Perez sparked in his first major league start for visiting Montreal, pitching five innings and hitting a home run as the Expos snapped Philadelphia's seven-game winning streak.

Perez (1-0) is the brother of the New York Yankees' Melido Perez and former Expos pitcher Pascual Perez. He scattered six hits, struck out six and allowed only one run. He had two wild pitches, but no walks.

Mets 5, Braves 3

Bobby Jones (2-1) scattered six hits over eight innings and Rico Brogna and Joe Orsulak, who each had three hits, drove in a run apiece as New York defeated visiting Atlanta.

Texas' Rogers shuts down Angels

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

There still hasn't been a complete game in the American League, although Kenny Rogers and Sean Bergman did their best to be the first.

Rogers pitched eight shutout innings against California on Thursday and the Texas Rangers beat the Angels 6-2.

Bergman tossed seven shutout innings before being removed from the game and the Detroit Tigers defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 8-0.

Both pitchers fell victim, sort of, to managers' strategy of preventing their starters from throwing too many pitches too early in the season. There have been 96 games played in the AL this season without a complete game.

Rogers threw 117 pitches, allowed four hits and struck out four with five walks. Reliever Roger McDowell then allowed three hits and two walks in two-thirds of an inning before Jeff Russell got the final out.

Bergman threw 98 pitches and allowed seven hits and two walks while striking out six. Reliever Felipe Lira finished up the shutout, the first of the year for the Tigers and only their second in the last two seasons.

In other games, New York beat Toronto 12-11 and Oakland defeated Seattle 3-1. The Baltimore at Boston game was rained out and rescheduled for Aug. 10.

Rangers 6, Angels 2

At Anaheim, Calif., it was Rogers'

first game against the Angels since he threw a perfect game against them last July 28. He extended his shutout streak against California to 24 innings and helped Texas salvage the final game of a three-game series.

Rusty Greer had a pair of RBI singles for Texas and Dave Valle had a two-run single that chased Angels starter Russ Springer (2-3) in the third.

Chili Davis was 3-for-3 and has reached base safely in his last 10 plate appearances. The AL record is 16 straight by Ted Williams of Boston in 1957.

Tigers 8, Brewers 0

At Milwaukee, Bergman bounced back from two consecutive three-inning outings that ballooned his ERA to 5.73 and opponents' batting average against him to .354.

He allowed at least one baserunner each inning, but consistently worked out of trouble.

Travis Fryman drove in four runs with a pair of two-run singles and Chad Curtis was 4-for-4 with a sacrifice fly.

Yankees 12, Blue Jays 11

Danny Tartabull hit a run-scoring single and Dion James followed with a two-run double to put the Yankees ahead 12-9 in the top of the ninth. Roberto Alomar led off the bottom of the ninth with a homer and Ed Sprague followed with a sacrifice fly.

Athletics 3, Mariners 1

Rickey Henderson drove in the go-ahead run for a third straight game and Mike Harkey pitched seven strong innings. The A's swept the three-game series.

Golfers tear up Nelson courses

IRVING, Texas (AP) - A pair of second-year touring pros, neither of whom has yet won, had 59s on their minds.

Neither could really get close to the PGA Tour's all-time scoring record, but Glen Day did manage his career-best score Thursday in the first round of the $1.3 million Byron Nelson Classic.

"I could very easily have shot 59," Day said after his bogey-free effort of 7-under-par 63 at Cottonwood Valley, one of two courses being used for the first two rounds this year in a tournament that has a history of weather troubles.

"I had enough that hit the hole and spun out to have shot 59," Day said after establishing a one-shot lead.

Both Day and Mark Calcavecchia, who shared second at 64 with Jay Don Blake, expressed surprise at their high standing; Day because of a year-long slump and Calcavecchia because of history.

Kiwis take 4-0 America's Cup lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The Americans know it. The New Zealanders know it. Finally, they're both saying it: The America's Cup is leaving town on a fast boat to Auckland.

The Kiwis shed their humble, it's-not-over-yet approach after their fourth straight blowout Thursday. U.S. helmsman Paul Cayard, one of the world's best sailors, felt helpless steering the slow Young America.

"I've never been in a race where I really felt I had so little control over the outcome," he said.

Black Magic 1 needs one more win. That should come Saturday when the Kiwis can complete a 5-0 sweep of the event the United States dominated since it began in 1851.

Gib Lewis still walking halls of Capitol -- but now as a lobbyist

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Former House Speaker Gib Lewis still walks the halls of power in Austin, only now the job is a little tougher and the pay is a lot better. Gib Lewis the lobbyist enjoys his work, sleeps through the night, is digging out of debt and has few regrets.

"It's a lot of hard work," Lewis said of the career he stepped into in early 1993, almost immediately upon retiring from the Legislature after 22 years. "I'll be honest with you, it's harder work than I ever thought it would be."

"I look back now at all the bad times I gave those lobbyists over the years thinking that I had a real cushy job," he said. "I'm being paid back for all those years of my foolish interpretation of their job."

Lewis, 58, calls his new occupation a "big time challenge," but readily admits that his tenure in the House — where he served an unprecedented five terms as Speaker — gives him a certain edge.

"The difference," he said, "is when I was Speaker, I could say, 'We ought to do this,' and it would get done. And that doesn't happen anymore."

Lewis won't divulge how much he earns, but notes that it's more than what state lawmakers get.

"I'll have to admit my income is a little more than $600 a month," he laughed.

Lewis counts among his clients Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, Tandy Corp., Dell Computer Corp., the Texas Wildlife Association, Laidlaw Waste Systems Inc., the Texas Alliance of Recreational Organizations and several hotels, according to Texas Ethics Commission records.

And then there's the National Rifle Association, a key proponent in the concealed-handguns bill making its way through the Legislature. "I'm very much involved in it," Lewis said of the legislation and his role with the NRA lobby.

His influence already was rumored to have played a role in the defeat of an amendment in the Senate concerning open records and handgun licenses, said M.J. Nicchio, director of legislative and governmental affairs for the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

But Lewis said that is not the case. "I really appreciate everyone thinking I'm so powerful," he said. "That's good for my clients, I guess."

Lewis said he knows the limitations of the job and won't ask a lawmaker to vote for an issue that would "cause them any embarrassment or any trouble back home."

Ironically, it was Lewis' relationship with lobbyists that resulted in two misdemeanor ethics indictments in 1990. Lewis maintains his innocence to the allegations that he accepted a gift from a powerful San Antonio law firm, which had interest in pending legislation, and then failed to report that gift on his personal financial statement.

The charges were later dropped. In a deal struck with the Travis County district attorney's office, Lewis pleaded no contest in 1992 to new misdemeanor charges alleging he failed to identify in his financial disclosure statements his interest in N.W. Investments Inc. in 1988 and 1989.

District Attorney Ronnie Earle has defended his actions, saying Lewis was held accountable for wrongdoing, was driven from office, and the public benefited by learning about the behavior of lawmakers and lobbyists.

But Lewis said the probe wasn't a factor in his retirement and that he should have left sooner because he was losing his desire to serve. He stayed, he said, because of redistricting, a contentious issue that could derail a legislative session if not skillfully handled.

The plea arrangement ended with a $2,000 fine that Lewis has said demonstrates the indictments were little more than political harassment.

More than two years later, Lewis remains bitter. "They did not do it, but they made every effort in the world to destroy my reputation and my character and, in fact, they hurt me substantially economically," he said during a recent interview in his office at Fort Worth-based Lewis Label Products Inc., a multimillion-dollar enterprise.

The company, which makes pressure-sensitive labels, lost a lot of business and banks wouldn't loan Lewis a penny, he said. Meanwhile, Lewis took a "financial beating" on soured investments, including bank stocks and real estate joint ventures, he said.

"I'm hacking away at it (debt)," he said. "I can see the light at the end of the tunnel and don't believe it's a freight train anymore."

After getting back into the black, Lewis said he'll likely continue to lobby.

"I definitely would never get back into public office," he said. "You couldn't pay me a million dollars a year to hold any office. I don't care what it is."

The only thing Lewis would change about his career in politics would be to have left two or three years earlier, a move that might have averted his financial pummeling, he said.

What Lewis likes best about his new role in government is that the pressure isn't nearly as intense. There are no more nights waking up at 3:30 a.m. and not being able to fall back to sleep until 5 a.m., if then.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

AMOS, THE SHEPHERD, HAS BEEN SELECTED BY THE LORD TO GO TO THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL, WARNING THEM THAT THEIR SINFUL WAYS HAVE ANGERED GOD.....

...FOR THEY HAVE PUT ASIDE RIGHTEOUSNESS AND DONNED THE GLITTERING GARMENTS OF SIN...

...HE LISTENS IN AWE AS THE VOICE OF THE LORD TELLS HIM JUST WHAT HE MUST DO.....

GO PROPHESY UNTO MY PEOPLE ISRAEL...FOR THEY HAVE FORSAKEN THE LORD AND DO WORSHIP THE GOLDEN CALF!

BUT NOW AMOS HAS HEARD THE CALL FROM THE LORD!

AND NOW HE RAISES UP TO GO....

...IT IS A SOLEMN AND DEDICATED AMOS THAT CAREFULLY MAKES HIS WAY DOWN THE RUGGED HILLSIDE! THE LORD HAS COMMANDED AND HE WILL OBEY! THE PEOPLE MUST BE TOLD ABOUT THEIR SINS—THEY MUST BE AWAKENED TO THE AWFUL FATE THAT AWAITS THEM IF THEY DO NOT RETURN TO GOD'S WAYS!

'No survivors' should not be said of co-founder of Gray Panthers

By HEIDI RUSSELL
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A newspaper obituary saying activist Maggie Kuhn left "no survivors" elicited a collective chuckle from a 400-plus crowd gathered to honor her memory.

Although the Gray Panthers co-founder outlived each member of her immediate family, her crusade to shatter the myths of aging left legions of friends who called her a mentor and guide.

"It's an outrage to say she has no survivors. She has 50,000 and a million and more behind them," said Carol Estes, director of the Institute for Health and Aging at the University of California.

Kuhn died April 22 at age 89 after a quarter-century of raising hell and eyebrows with pithy observations on health care, housing and sexuality of the aged.

She not only helped change views, but touched individual lives as well, the speakers noted during the April 29 memorial service at First Presbyterian Church. Kuhn read and encouraged Estes' early critiques on gerontology.

As a young woman in the roaring '20s, Kuhn chose to take a train to college rather than to get married, said the Rev. Dieter Hessel, director of the Program on Ecology, Justice and Faith at Princeton, N.J. While a student teacher, she got caught hurling an eraser at a student, which ended her teaching career and propelled her into work with the YWCA.

Years later at age 65, when she was forced into retirement by the United Presbyterian Office of Church and Society, she and four other women organized the Gray Panthers.

"Her experience with mandatory retirement only started a cultural revolution," Hessel said.

The Gray Panthers' first issue was the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. But the crusade encompassed many other concerns, said Mary Jane Patterson, president of the World Conference on Religion and Peace and friend to Kuhn for 35 years.

And she became an "elder of the tribe" of the Gray Panthers who now boast more than 40,000 members in the United States, Europe, Japan, Canada and, most recently, Russia.

Those included peace and justice, the separation of church and state, racism, civil rights, South Africa, equal pay for women, health care for all Americans, environmental protection and children and youth, Patterson said.

Veteran has vivid memory of Hitler's Berchtesgaden

By JOHN FLORES
The Monitor (McAllen)
EDINBURG, Texas - May 11, 1945. Just four days after Germany's surrender.

Less than two weeks after Hitler's suicide on April 30 in a Berlin bunker.

On that day a soldier from the Rio Grande Valley found himself in Hitler's mountaintop Berchtesgaden hideaway, known as the Eagle's Nest.

Among the first GIs to reach the Eagle's Nest, infantry Sgt. Albert Cattaruzza sat down in the dead Nazi leader's office to write a letter to the folks back home.

Grabbing a sheet of the Führer's own letterhead, Cattaruzza typed a sarcastic note above the Nazi symbols and Adolf Hitler's name: "I still don't think he's dead. Do you?"

Cattaruzza, a ski trooper attached to the U.S. 86th Infantry Division, included the quintessential soldier's notation: "I found a quart of cognac in (Field Marshal Hermann) Goering's house. At least I can say I got drunk on him."

Cattaruzza, a McAllen businessman, was one of hundreds of soldiers from Texas' Rio Grande Valley who fought in the European Theater of Operations during World War II. Many American GIs now in their 70s and 80s mark the 50th anniversary of Germany's surrender to the Allies, signed May 7, 1945, by German Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl.

V-E Day was declared on May 8, officially ending the European phase of World War II.

Born and raised in Italy, Cattaruzza had lived in the United States, in Houston, a scant year before enlisting in the Army and being shipped back to Europe to fight. He settled in the Valley after the war.

He managed to grab a few other items while exploring Hitler's vaunted Bavarian compound.

On display at the Hidalgo County Historical Museum in Edinburg, along with Cattaruzza's original letter, are a chrome cold-water faucet knob taken from Hitler's bathroom, a map of Hitler's Berchtesgaden compound, a publicity photo of Hermann Goering and family, a medallion with Hitler's profile and Nazi lapel pins.

The letter display, part of the museum's World War II exhibit, includes an album filled with photos of smiling GIs standing, sitting and smiling proudly before the site of the bombed-out Nazi headquarters.

Also displayed are old Nazi weapons, uniforms and medallions. Included in the exhibit is an original Nazi SS officer's uniform, an eerie death-camp reminder complete with skull and haunting red eyes on the front of the cap.

Cattaruzza's letter is a potent reminder of the terror of Hitler's reign. He writes with an air of incredulity, a macabre elation born of sudden relief following months of grinding horror in the field of battle.

In a nearby display case at the museum, a deadly German MG-34 machine gun rests near a long, ornately decorated Nazi dagger, one of the legendary P-38 automatic pistols and a Nazi flag.

Linda Cattaruzza, who still lives in the Valley, said her father, who died in 1993, took her back to Europe two decades ago. Battle scars were still visible 30 years after the war, while others were hidden.

"(At Eagle's Nest), I could still see the huge craters left by the (British) bombs. ... You got a weird feeling," she said.

"My father got a picture off a German soldier, a prisoner of war, of a woman whose arms were bound, and she was looking toward the camera," Linda Cattaruzza said. "There was terror in her eyes. She was about to be killed by the Nazi soldiers ... Why would anyone carry a picture like that around with them?"

Edinburg lawyer E.G. Henrichson was a U.S. infantry officer fighting in Germany when his company was suddenly surrounded by Germans. He spent many months as a prisoner of war.

"I was damned glad to hear (of Hitler's death)," Henrichson said. "But I can't remember now where I was when he was killed. I remember where I was when Roosevelt died, and that was a blow to me. I was in prison."

Henrichson said no normal man would do the things Hitler did.

"He was a fringe idiot, over the edge," Henrichson said. "He was normal in some respects, but a complete egocentric. He thought he was God's gift to the Germans. He thought he knew it all."

"The feeling at the time was the we had only one real enemy."

Henrichson said. "It wasn't the German people, it was Hitler."

Corwin Connell, an Edinburg lawyer and World War II historian, said Hitler's death was insignificant compared to the impending Allied victory in Europe.

"The viewpoint of the people then was that it didn't really matter, because Germany was kaput anyway," he said.

Connell recalled Graf Von Kalkart, a fellow law student in 1951 at Southern Methodist University. Von Kalkart, from Prussia, served in the German army. His father, a member of the German congress in Berlin, owned thousands of acres. One night in 1930, the father threw a party.

"Kalkart (the son) listened to this proponent of the obscure splinter group called the National Socialist party," Connell recalled. "He noticed this guy, Hitler, was kind of dominating the conversation. Very persuasive and wouldn't take no for an answer."

"But then Kalkart saw some pretty girls across the room and decided to find more interesting company," Connell said. "He told us he wouldn't have dreamed that the same insistent little man he'd seen at that party, representing a small, insignificant splinter group, would have become the Führer."

Edinburg resident, Guadalupe Davila, now 75, is one World War II veteran who still can fit into the Army uniform, he wore 50 years ago. He was in the 3rd Infantry Division for three years, fighting in campaigns in North Africa, Sicily and the European mainland. He was in the Black Forest when he heard the news of Hitler's death.

"He was a brilliant man, there's no doubt about it, but a half-lunatic," Davila said. "I think he always thought for himself and not for anybody else. He wouldn't even blink an eye to kill any one of his officers or soldiers," he said.

Davila recounted an incident that gave him more insight into Hitler's mind.

"We were beating the Germans at Anzio Beach," he said. "Hitler summoned his officers. He told them he had his best divisions there and would not accept anything less than victory. He told the officers that the Americans would be defeated within three days."

"If anyone disagreed, he said, he'd shoot them on the spot."

On the home front, Hitler's death was an absolute harbinger of Allied victory.

Edinburg resident Barbara Albrecht was going to school in St. Paul, Minn., when she heard the news of Hitler's death.

"Everybody ran (into the street) ... People just went nuts. There were so many people, it closed the street down for about eight hours," Albrecht recalled. "People were hugging, screaming, happy. We were all saying that our boyfriends and husbands were finally coming home."

"Hitler's death meant the war had to end, and we knew that."

'Watch up' is summer activities admonition

Ball fields are filling up; yard work is in full force; the skies are full of severe weather. All are signs of spring.

With the increase in outdoor activities that comes with spring, Southwestern Public Service Co. reminds its customers to "watch up for safety."

One of the places where electrical accidents can occur is the farm, according to Ronnie Walker, SPS

Panhandle Division Safety and Claims Specialist.

"Quite often people forget to look up when they're lifting irrigation pipes, antennas or other metal objects," he said. "It's important to always 'watch up' and know where electric lines are."

Walker said that same warning applies to others on the job, particularly those who are working above street level.

"Roofers need to be extra careful as they move equipment," he said. "Those trimming trees also have to be careful; that extra height could be just enough to bring them in contact with electrical lines."

In fact, Walker said, federal and state safety regulations require the electric company to be notified if contractors work near electric lines.

Customers also need to be careful during severe weather that often occurs in spring.

"If an outage occurs at your home during a storm," said Walker, "call your local SPS 'repair' or 'service' number listed in the phone book. SPS has employees who are trained and equipped to correct the problem and restore service."

If you see a fallen power line on the ground, call SPS and keep people away from the line. Do not touch the line or anything it is touching, such as a car or fence, Walker said.

"Assume every line is 'live' and dangerous," he said. Many of the service problems that occur during a storm are the result of fallen tree limbs or lightning. Besides causing outages, lightning can also be dangerous to people involved in outdoor activities. If you are outdoors as a lightning storm approaches, remember that trees do not protect you from lightning and, in fact, attract it.

Parents should take the time to teach their children to avoid electrical facilities when playing outdoors. Fly kites and model airplanes in open areas, far from power lines. If a ball is hit over a neighborhood substation fence, don't try to retrieve the ball yourself, Walker said. Call the electric company instead.

Migrant parents honored

The Hereford ISD Migrant Department on Thursday held its last Parent Advisory Council meeting of the year and honored several parents for their attendance during the year. In addition, The Hereford Brand and KPAN Radio were honored with certificates of appreciation for their work with the migrant program this year. Those receiving honors are shown with Lloyd Stebbins, back left, Director of Migrant Education for the HISD, and Gary Smith, Special Education Director. Standing with them in the back row is PAC president Hilda Moreno. Front, from left, are Norma Garcia, Leonor Lucero, Estella Barron and Amparo Casillas.
