Hill: Holly Sugar to remain in Hereford

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

"We have no plans of closing the Hereford plant," said Roger Hill, president of Holly Sugar, Inc., when he addressed sugar beet growers at the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association on Friday. Hill said Holly will be operating in Hereford for the next 30 years. "We have a reason to be here," he said. "This is the best and most effective growers that Holly Sugar works with."

He also praised the Hereford plant as being a "jewel."

"Hereford's plant is one of the largest, most efficient, has the best sugar and has the second highest net price in the country," he said.

He also praised Hereford's sugar beet directors of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association as being among the best in the country.

Hill said that even though 1995 was not an exceptional year for the sugar beet industry, there is a bright spot. Holly employees and growers are working toward better times.

"Everyone had a bad production year," he said. "In 1995 the U.S. sugar beet crop was down 10 percent. 1994 was a record year for production."

The good news, Hill said, is that prices are up. The bad news is that there was a decrease in sugar tonnage this year.

Hill urged growers to continue their support of the Holly plant and said that Holly needs to increase its growing acres to 37,000 acres for 1996.

"It is still a good crop to have in your (producer's) rotation," he said. "It has worked well through the years for many farmers."

He also said Holly Sugar is dedicated at looking at different ways to meet the needs of its growers.

United Way reaches '95 goal

Tierra Blanca pledge pushes total over $130,000

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Look at the percent total for the 1995 United Way of Deaf Smith County fund-raising drive and it will read 100 percent.

Technically, though, the United Way has reached its goal for the first time in "probably eight or 10 years."

As of Friday, the United Way reported donations and pledges of $130,074.94.

Karen Sherrod, executive director of the United Way, said a $100 pledge last week from the Tierra Blanca Primary School third-grade class was just what was needed to top the magic goal.

As a result, she said, the United Way has reached its goal for the first time in "probably eight or 10 years."

In fact, she continued, the amount raised this year is "at least $2,000 more than we did last year" when the goal was $150,000.

The United Way began its annual fund-raising drive on Sept. 14, 1995, with six weeks set aside for working toward the goal.

During that time, volunteers conducted employee campaign meetings, wrote letters, visited employers and spoke to civic groups about the need to support the United Way and its member agencies.

While the actual goal was not reached until last week, Mrs. Sherrod said a lion's share of the funds were raised during the official campaign, with "clean-up" efforts remaining until the end.

"The businesses really cooperated," Mrs. Sherrod said, noting that volunteers visited some companies this campaign for the first time ever. Altogether, more than 50 employee meetings were held.

"I would really like to emphasize a big 'thank-you' to all the agencies, all the volunteers, the division heads," individuals, companies and employee groups who gave this year, she said.

"They are United Way. The United Way is the people of this community supporting the people of this community."

Mrs. Sherrod said the key to this year's success came from the core of volunteers who helped raise the money.

"The board is just really working hard," she said. "We are working on a five-year strategic plan to get us more organized."

Having a larger number of volunteers, she said, made it easier to get the work done.

"We were just so pleased how much better it seemed to go when we go the volunteer help. It made all the difference in the world," she said. "Really, the more people you have, the less they have to do."

A new feature of the 1995 campaign, Mrs. Sherrod went on, was an incentive program that included getting each of the agencies served by United Way involved in the fund-raising efforts.

For the third straight year, the United will be funding all its agencies with 100 percent of its annual allocation.

In addition, any funds received over the amount already allocated will be awarded on a merit basis to those agencies which earned points for contributions to the fund-raising campaign.

Even though the United Way of Deaf Smith County received pledges totalling more than $130,000, Mrs. Sherrod said not all those funds will be actually collected.

Allocations to the agencies served by United Way are made on a quarterly basis.

Because some people make donations through deductions from their paychecks, collecting the United Way's money takes an entire year.

Some of that money never comes in, Mrs. Sherrod said, because employees leave their jobs, are transferred or face other problems.

"At least we're able to say we reached our goal," she said.

Honor student puts free time on hold to prepare for annual livestock show

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

What does a Hereford High School sophomore honor student do for fun? According to Erin Auckerman, for the last few months, "fun" has been put on the back burner.

Her free time has been filled with working with her livestock and getting them ready for this week's Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show.

Erin, daughter of Rick and Georgia Auckerman, said helping on the farm and working with her lambs, goats and bucket calves is her main objective right now.

Although Erin has been working hard on her animal projects, she said she also likes hanging out with her friends -- which often times involves 4-H and FFA projects.

She will show four lambs and a goat in this year's show.

"I've been trying to get my animals ready for the show," Erin said. "You have got to get them used to you and get them to know what you expect of them."

Erin has been showing lambs and raising bucket calves for seven years. But, this year she will add a goat to her menagerie.

The Hereford Young Farmers will present a goat show this year to see what kind of response it will bring.

"Since this is new to the show, we really don't know how we should present them (goats)," she said. "We don't know yet if we are suppose to use a halter or use a collar. So, all I've done is halter break the goat."

Erin spends most of her after school time exercising and feeding her animals. The more she works with the animals the more they respond to her.

"You really want your lamb muscled," she said. "I have been setting them up and bracing them since I've had them."

Raising animals to show is not a short-term project. Erin has had her lambs since mid-summer.

Close attention to the animals' nutrition is a special job. Erin must be sure that the lamb or goat is in the specified weight range for showing.

"We are hoping to do good this year," she said. "I really would like to make the sale with all of my animals."

Being involved in 4-H does not come new to Erin -- her three sisters also are active in the organization.

Her sister, Cady, a senior, has been very involved in 4-H and the two have worked together on projects. Not only does Erin participate in animal projects, she is involved in the 4-H food, clothing, livestock judging, public speaking and beef projects and all this while -- maintaining her honor student status.

Her most recent accomplishment was going to Washington D.C., for placing first in the state record book competition.

Erin also attends various 4-H camps during the summer.

"I go to sewing camp, lamb camp and clothing and textile camp. I also attend State Round Up, where I'm a County Council Secretary," she said.

She also serves as vice president of her 4-H Showmanship Club.

Erin is dedicated to her family and church.

She is close to her three sisters, Cady, a senior; Kylee, an eighth

Getting ready for show

Erin Auckerman "sets up" one of her four lambs in preparation for this week's Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show. Erin, along with other FFA and 4-H students, has been working with her animals since mid-summer in anticipation of this year's competition. Erin, daughter of Rick and Georgia Auckerman, is currently a Hereford High School sophomore.

Endeavour needs headlights to land

Nighttime touchdown brings end to 74th shuttle mission

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Space shuttle Endeavour and its crew glided to a safe landing in darkness today, bringing back a Japanese science satellite that had been in orbit nearly one year.

Commander Brian Duffy piloted Endeavour to a smooth 1:42 a.m. CST touchdown on a floodlit runway at Kennedy Space Center. The descending shuttle was a ghostly white against the black sky in infrared camera views.

"Can't tell you how glad we are to be back after a very rewarding, very successful mission," Duffy told reporters. "Things went just the way we wanted them to. We couldn't be happier."

It was only the eighth time in 74 missions that NASA shuttles landed in the dark. The middle-of-the-night landing was dictated by the course the shuttle had to follow in chasing down the Japanese satellite.

Duffy, an Air Force colonel, said the touchdown was the highlight of his 21-year aviation career and turned out to be just as he had expected, despite some slight turbulence.

Endeavour logged 3.7 million miles during the busy nine-day flight, spent fetching satellites and walking in space. Besides the Japanese satellite, the shuttle held a NASA probe that the six astronauts released and retrieved two days later.

"You did a great job of getting us started in 1996," Mission Control told the crew.

Before returning to Earth, Duffy called it "one fantastic mission."

About 50 Japanese space representatives gathered at the landing strip to welcome back Endeavour and crew, in particular Japanese astronaut Koichi Wakata. Wakata said he was looking forward to celebrating "in the near future with all the crew members over Japanese sake."

Capturing the Japanese satellite and its astronomical, new and crystal experiments was the No. 1 priority for Endeavour's U.S.-Japanese crew. The Japanese space program paid NASA about $65 million for pickup and delivery.

The satellite is missing its two fold-down solar panels. They had to be cut loose by ground controllers last week after failing to latch into place.

Crew members also took two spacewalks, on Monday and Wednesday. Leroy Chiao, Dr. Daniel Barry and Winston Scott gave mostly favorable reviews to the heated spacesuits and station-building tools and techniques they tested for a total of 13 hours in the frigid void.

Construction of the international space station is supposed to begin in 1997 and take five years. NASA plans practice spacewalks on three more shuttle missions, the next one this spring.

"This mission contributed significantly to moving in the right direction," shuttle program manager Tommy Holloway said.

Overall, Holloway said he was pleased with how well the mission went "in spite of a three-week (government) furlough and a threat of closing our shuttle program down for lack of budget."

President eulogises Rep. Barbara Jordan

HOUSTON (AP) - Speaking before hundreds of mourners, President Clinton said the life and public service of Barbara Jordan were symbolized by "the poetry of her words and the power of her voice."

Clinton said the former Democratic Congresswoman from Texas, who died this week at age 59, had "stirred our national conscience."

"She did it as a member of Congress, teacher, citizen," Clinton said today.

Jordan died of pneumonia and complications of leukemia. More than 1,500 people filled Houston's Good Hope Missionary Church and scores more stood with umbrellas under a light mist as the funeral service proceeded.

As he entered the sanctuary, Clinton paused and touched the edge of Jordan's open coffin, which was draped with a flag. Later, he noted that Jordan was wearing the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian decoration, which he awarded her in 1994.

At the end of his remarks, Clinton looked down on the coffin, which had been closed, and said "Barbara, we the people will miss you." The congregation burst into applause.

Former Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, who also made remarks at the funeral, called Jordan an "American original" and said she was as "true as the North Star."

School group uses skits to teach dangers of the 'lure of assistance'

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Amanda Norris' voice climbs to a pleading and desperate pitch.

"Do you see my dog? Can you help me?" the 14-year-old actress asks.

In the next split second - when Amanda's classmate comes close to view a photo of lost Fluffy - she grabs her victim.

That skit at All Saints Episcopal School dramatized what ninth-graders here call the lure of assistance, one way that molesters and abductors get their hands on unsuspecting children.

Amanda and three of her classmates were in training Friday for a community service project performed by ninth-grade classes at All Saints since 1990. These teen-agers teach younger students in Lubbock and some nearby towns how to get out of dangerous situations.

"This can really make a visible and apparent difference," said 14-year-old Ryan Kuratko. "Because it does happen."

And it happened again Jan. 13, when a man in a pickup dragged Amber Hagerman off her bicycle in Arlington and drove off with the girl. The 9-year-old's body turned up in a creek late Wednesday; her throat had been cut.

Students at All Saints use props and skits to demonstrate how easily a victim can be trapped by a perpetrator who approaches with bribery, affectionate words or a fake emergency. Audience members participate.

"The response is very positive," said All Saints headmaster Ken Bastian. "They're absolutely glued to this group because of the power of the presentation."

Bastian says five people have called him over the years to report that possible abductions were foiled because the preyed-upon child recognized a lure.

Kenneth Wooden wrote the Child Lures program used by All Saints and schools, churches and law enforcement agencies across the country. The basis, Wooden said, comes from his interviews with about 1,000 inmates and parents of murdered children.

"We teach kids to trust their basic instincts," he said.

Thirty All Saints students will be part of the teams that teach the lures this spring. Bastian said March and April are the most prevalent months for abductions because warm weather draws children outside.

Teachers and students agree that the sensitive warnings seem effective coming from teen-agers instead of someone older.

Young audiences think "this person knows what it's like to be me," Amanda said.

"Adults are adults," Ryan said. "They're always telling you what to do."

Lessons put a priority on communicating with parents and growing confident enough to get out of a situation that gives off bad vibes. The student-teachers mention murder but don't dwell on it, said drama coach Barbara Blankenship.

Says Amanda: "You've got to get past the sensitivity to drive home the point."

Goal-breaking pledge

The third-grade class at Tierra Blanca Primary School last week pledged $100 to the United Way of Deaf Smith County, bringing the total raised in pledges and donations to just over $130,000, the agency's goal for its 1995 fund-raising campaign. Shown are third graders, from left, Deborah Lara, Yesenia Frausto, Robert Jones and A.J. Tijerina presenting their pledge card to United Way executive director Karen Sherrod. Clinton calls third shutdown 'unbelievably irresponsible'; wants increase in debt limit

By LAWRENCE L. KNOTSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton told the Republican-led Congress today that using the budget impasse as an excuse to shut down the government for the third time in two months would be "unbelievably irresponsible."

Congress would be equally wayward, Clinton said, if it refuses to increase the national debt limit, forcing the government into default and putting "the creditworthiness of the United States at risk."

"Don't shut the government down," Clinton said in his weekly radio address, taped Friday. "Don't make America default on its debt. My door is open. Let's talk."

Republican leaders say they want to avert another federal shutdown next week with a stopgap bill, but they are still trying to decide how to satisfy adamant House conservatives, Senate moderates and the president. In the GOP radio response, Rep. Bill Paxon, R-N.Y., kept up the party's criticism of the budget proposal Clinton has submitted. While the president now agrees the budget should be balanced in seven years, Paxon said, he has refused to make the policy changes the GOP demands.

Paxon said Clinton's proposal remains based on "the same tired liberal answers that got us into this mess years ago. His plan is a quick fix that puts off the tough choices until well after the election. ... The president's budget supports Washington's old liberal spending ways."

Clinton put Republican leaders on notice in his own radio talk that if a partial shutdown does take place on Jan. 26 - for the third time since November - he will do all he can to make sure the GOP gets the blame.

He urged Republican leaders to return to the table and resume negotiations and said:

"The budget talks are suspended now because the Republican congressional leaders walked away from the table. I wish they hadn't done that, and I hope they'll come back, and soon."

Clinton also said he continues to believe the budget can be balanced in seven years without the kind of cuts that would devastate Medicare, Medicaid, the environment, and support for education.

"Two government shutdowns so far have cost taxpayers about a billion-and-a-half dollars," Clinton said. "That's not Monopoly money. Shutting down the government again would be unbelievably irresponsible."

A decision on legislation to avert a shutdown won't be made until rank-and-file Republicans meet on Tuesday. And conservatives might insist on slashing and even eliminating some programs the president values.

That would make a confrontation with Clinton likely - at a time when top Republicans have decided they have little to gain by prompting yet another partial federal shutdown.

"There's going to be some tense moments" before a bill keeping government open can be crafted, Rep. David Hobson, R-Ohio, a member of the House leadership, said Friday. "A lot of people feel this is time to stand for principle, not polls."

With most lawmakers due to return to the Capitol from a winter recess next week, House leaders scheduled a leadership meeting for Monday.

Death toll climbs from severe weather

By JAMES MARTINEZ

Associated Press Writer
Melting snow from the Blizzard of '96 combined with lashing rain to unleash a torrent of mud slides and flooding in the East that forced entire cities to seek higher ground today.

At least 15 deaths were blamed on the weather and four people were missing.

More than 100,000 residents of Pennsylvania's Wyoming Valley, including all of Wilkes-Barre, were ordered to evacuate today as the Susquehanna River rose to alarming levels. It was expected to crest this afternoon at up to 36 feet - just below the top of the levee.

"I don't want to leave," Grace Fetter yelled from her front porch. "This is my house."

Buses, ambulances, trucks and vans carried residents to Red Cross shelters in high schools and town halls, said Luzerne County emergency official Al Bardar.

One county jail made plans to evacuate inmates, volunteers began filling sandbags and the American Red Cross began notifying shelters outside the flood plain.

"I grabbed my Bible, because I'm a Christian, and my crocheting so I have something to do," said Mary Scott, 32, as she was leaving her home.

Several towns were also warned to evacuate in West Virginia, which saw rivers swell from a combination of 3 feet of melting snow and 2.5 inches of rain Friday. It was the worst flooding since the November 1985 floods that left 47 dead and caused $570 million in damage.

Search on for killers of Amber

By MELISSA WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - As the gruesome reality of the Amber Hagerman tragedy sinks in with her friends, family and the strangers who became gripped by the saga, authorities hope to be on the trail of the girl's killer.

"We have a couple of leads that are kind of promising, but nothing that we are ready to go public with," Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said Friday. "We feel like the trail is there that is going to lead us to a suspect."

Police are focusing on about 500 tips and continue to comb the area where Amber's nude body, her throat cut, was found late Wednesday by a man walking his dog outside an apartment complex. The site is about eight miles north of the working-class neighborhood where a witness saw a man drag Amber off her bicycle as she fought and screamed.

Exactly one week after she was snatched, mourners were set to bid her farewell. A funeral was scheduled for Saturday afternoon, to be followed by a burial at Moore Memorial Gardens. The girl's parents want Amber to be buried along with about 30 other children in an area of the cemetery called Babyland, which overlooks a small body of water.

The case quickly captured the hearts of the community, as well as much of the country. The emotion continued pouring back to the grieving family Friday, much of it from people who never knew the brown-haired, blue-eyed Girl Scout.

President Clinton called Amber's parents to offer his condolences and thousands of others attended a six-hour wake at an Arlington funeral home, filing slowly past her blue casket surrounded by pink floral sprays. Her body was clad in a pink satin dress and she was clutching a teddy bear.

"I just wanted to see her and feel the grief that her family is feeling," said Willie Randolph, 19, who attends the same technical school as Amber's mother.

Other mourners have turned the abduction site into a quasi-shrine to Amber's memory. Cards, flowers, ribbons and stuffed animals have all been placed by a loading dock of the abandoned grocery store just a few blocks from her grandparents' home.

So far, the only clue police have released is that Amber's abductor drove a black pickup truck. Tapes from a surveillance camera outside the apartment complex near where her body was found may turn up some information.

"I don't know if it's the kind of thing that is going to lend itself to something popping up at us immediately," Anderson said. "It's probably going to take days or weeks of analysis before we can determine whether it's of any value to us."

A more high-tech test was conducted after dark Friday in hopes of pinning down the murder scene, or at least where Amber's body was dumped into the creek.

Issues being debated at experimental conference

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Teresa Farris barely has enough money to pay the bills each month. She has three grown sons and a 9-year-old boy who is emotionally handicapped. She doesn't vote unless it's a presidential election and doesn't think her voice matters to officials in Washington.

But on Friday, Ms. Farris was in a classroom at the University of Texas with 15 strangers discussing U.S. foreign policy as part of the National Issues Convention.

The NIC is a political experiment that has brought roughly 500 randomly selected Americans to Austin to debate on three issues - U.S. foreign policy, the economy and family - and allow them to interact with presidential candidates.

The number of Republican candidates who will personally attend the convention had dwindled to one, Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind. Three other Republicans - Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and publishing executive Steve Forbes - will participate via satellite TV. Vice President Al Gore will attend in place of President Clinton.

But convention officials and many of the delegates say the forum would meet its goal of articulating citizen views, with or without a large number of candidates.

Delegate Chris Kelsaw, a 34-year-old industrial worker from Fort Wayne, Ind., said he hopes the convention will allow "the voice of America to be heard."

"The voice of America has been silenced for a long time," said Kelsaw, who is married and has seven children. "It's great to allow people to speak on how they feel. The polling itself may be a bunch of paperwork, but I hope the candidates listen to us."

Ms. Farris said she was impressed by the cross section of people who were selected as delegates and the wide range of opinions they have voiced during small-group sessions on the issues.

"I sat in today's discussions and felt stupid in some ways because there are other people more educated than I am," said Ms. Farris, of Midlothian, Va.

"But people are listening to others' opinions without getting angry. It's better than I expected. I almost didn't come," she said.

Ms. Farris said if she could ask one question of the candidates or Gore it would be, "Why aren't there any truthful politicians?"

She may get her chance. The GOP candidates will take questions from the delegates Saturday night, while Gore will do the same Sunday. The interaction is part of a concept developed by convention creator James Fishkin known as deliberative polling.

Fishkin, a UT professor, says such polling differs from ordinary polls, which offer a snapshot of the current state of public opinion. Instead, deliberative poll samples opinion on specific topics before and after people have the opportunity to learn about and discuss those issues.

Edith Wolpin, a delegate from Howard Beach, N.Y., said she doubted that many people would change their minds about an issue.

Incentive prizes awarded

Students at SOAR High and the in-school GED program, both located at the Stanton Special Populations Center, recently took part in an incentive program based on attendance, responsible behavior and grades. The students were trying for a grand prize portable CD player, which was won by senior Maria Garcia, left. Three other students won $25 in Hereford Bucks. They were, right photo, from left, Marisol Arroyo, Ramiro Zapata and Jessica Mondragon. The prizes were made available through a donation by Tom Hyer of West Texas Rural Telephone.

Director Simpson found dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Don Simpson, an Academy Award-nominated producer who along with Jerry Bruckheimer made the blockbusters "Top Gun" and "Beverly Hills Cop," was found dead Friday, police said.

Simpson was found around 5 p.m. at his Bel-Air estate, Officer Don Cox said. The cause of death wasn't immediately released, but both Cox and Simpson's lawyer, Robert Chapman, said it appeared to be natural causes.

"The matter has been turned over to his family," Cox said.

Paramedics found him on the floor of an upstairs bathroom after business associates of Simpson's, working elsewhere on the estate, called 911, fire department spokesman Brian Humphrey said.

Simpson wasn't breathing and was declared dead a short time later, Humphrey said.

Simpson's age was given as 52 by his publicist and police, but "The Film Encyclopedia" by Ephraim Katz listed his birthdate as Oct. 25, 1945, which would have made him 50.

Simpson and Bruckheimer initially teamed as producers on the 1983 hit "Flashdance." The duo were named Producers of the Year in 1985 and 1988 by the National Association of Theatre Owners.

Their other credits include "Crimson Tide," "Dangerous Minds," "Beverly Hills Cop II," and most recently, "Bad Boys."

"Top Gun," the 1986 film starring Tom Cruise, was one of the most profitable pictures in Paramount's history. Simpson was a 10-time Academy Award nominee.

"I am truly in a state of shock. I have lost my partner, my friend, and someone who was like a brother to me," Bruckheimer said in a statement late Friday night. "In a community of extraordinary talents and unique characters, Don was a true original. There will never be another like him."

Born in Seattle, Simpson was raised in Anchorage, Alaska. He graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Oregon in 1966.

It was the second death at Simpson's home in five months. His friend Stephen Ammerman, a 44-year-old doctor, died of an accidental drug overdose in a pool house shower at the estate on Aug. 15.

Pasta-dumping alleged against foreign makers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Four companies from Italy and two from Turkey are dumping pasta in the United States and will be assessed special anti-dumping duties in the spring, the Commerce Department charged Friday.

The department's International Trade Administration made the determination in mid-December that the companies were selling pasta in the United States at less than fair value, harming American competitors. The official notice was published only Friday because of the government shutdown.

Three U.S. makers - Borden Inc., of Columbus, Ohio; Goch Foods, of Lincoln, Neb.; and Hershey Foods Corp., of Hershey, Pa. - complained last May that the foreign companies were competing unfairly through their pricing policies.

The International Trade Commission found in June that imports were hurting the U.S. industry.

In October, the Commerce Department said that the Italian and Turkish companies should pay special countervailing duties to offset export subsidies from their governments. The finding announced Friday would impose a new set of duties known as anti-dumping duties.

Both the countervailing and anti-dumping duties should be announced in April.

Companies found to be dumping are, from Italy, De Cecco, De Matteis, La Molisana and Liguori; and from Turkey, Maktas and Filiz.

In Fond Memory

James W. Witherspoon

James W. Witherspoon, long-time executive secretary of the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association, has proved a founding father of the modern-day sugar industry of the Texas High Plains. A tireless, champion of local sugar refining and beet production, Jim served as the attorney for the Association and steered the drive for a sugar mill in Hereford through daunting obstacles ranging from lack of quotas to State Department opposition. He overcame them all, toiling in Washington and in the High Plains on behalf of sugar beet production and sugar refining. His efforts were directly responsible for the building of the Holly Sugar Corporation Mill at Hereford. Thanks to Jim's foresight and selfless dedication the sugar industry pays millions of dollars in dividends to Hereford and the Texas High Plains each year.

The Board of Directors of the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association wishes to note with regret the passing of their dear friend, and offer this tribute to his lifetime of self-evident achievements.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creeks says middle age is when you are sitting at home on Saturday night, the telephone rings, and you hope it isn't for you.

Inflation is when you have too much month left over at the end of your money.

The only way to solve the traffic problems of the country is to pass a law that only paid-for cars are allowed to use the highways.--Will Rogers

One man's junk is another man's treasure, I've heard. There must be something to that saying.

A reader called me last week to complain that the auction being held by local governmental units reflected a waste of taxpayer money. He said some of the items were just a couple of years old and people in the private sector had to make things last longer.

I went out on Friday before the auction and looked things over. I'm confident there may have been some tools or other items that someone might get at a good price. Personally, I didn't see anything I needed, or would be interested in--even at a bargain price.

There was lots of computer terminals and keyboards, but none that would adapt to my system. I'm no computer expert, but I've learned from experience that the equipment becomes outdated in a just a few years.

However, value is in the eye of the beholder. Much of the property appeared old and well used in my brief inspection. I don't doubt that the caller saw some property that he thought could be effectively used a few more years.

As taxes keep increasing, I think he felt that governmental bodies are too quick to replace things when they're using other people's money. I'm not sure that was the case with this auction, but I'm sure glad some citizens are checking things out.

People in the big city are often quick to panic, sometimes for good reason. But here's a story that proves things are not always the way they appear.

Several weeks ago, a woman was spotted sitting in her car at a convenience store in Dallas. It was a warm day and she was sitting rigid, holding her hand to the back of her head.

A customer observed the woman as he entered the store. When he came out, he noticed the woman had not moved a muscle. A bit concerned, he called police.

When officers arrived and began talking to the woman, she was highly excited but never moved, explaining that she had been shot and that her brains were oozing out.

A more detailed investigation revealed that, fortunately, the woman had not been shot. Instead, a can of biscuits had exploded in the back seat of her warm car. The explosion had caused the gooey dough to hit and stick to the back of her head.

Startled by the loud noise and feeling the biscuit dough, the woman thought she had been shot.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Some people are born irascible. Some cultivate the characteristic, especially as they grow older. In some isolated situations, the trait wanes, even if imperceptibly.

My father fit all three. In my heart, I know he must have been a feisty little kid. He was in the youngest set of a family of 10 children and, by his own admission, he was not easy to get along with.

As he grew older, my father developed a very irritating habit, especially when it came to clothing. Mostly, he would not buy new items of clothing. It seemed odd, especially since as a young person he wore so many hand-me-downs. But, if what he had wasn't ragged, it would wear a while longer.

This became abundantly clear when my younger sister came home to get married.

I took a couple days off from work and drove almost 400 miles, only to be met at the door by my mother announcing that daddy refused to buy a new suit for the wedding.

Why, I wondered aloud, had not something been done about this situation? Because he wouldn't listen to anyone else. We waited for you to get home.

In other words the onus was on me. Why they thought I would have any influence, I don't know. Still and all, I guess there was some indication I might persuade him to buy that new blue suit.

When I approached him at his place of business, I felt the wrath of a man determined to have his own way. No, he wouldn't buy a blue suit. The only thing the suit would be good for later was to bury him, he thundered.

He was determined to wear a western-cut suit -- a gabardine number that he and the family called his "pink" suit because the beige had a slight red tint to it.

My father and I argued for hours about buying the suit. As I sensed that he was wearing down, I called my mother. Was there a suit in town that would fit him? Yes, it was being held at the men's shop, but the pants had not been turned up and the coat sleeves might be a little long.

We continued our argument over the relative merits of the pink suit and a new blue suit. He was not opposed to spending the money involved. He just didn't want a new suit. The one he had was good enough.

However, I went to the men's store, picked up the suit and took it back to my father. Please try it on, Daddy, I wheedled. He did. I quickly turned up the pants and the coat sleeves and got out of the building with him screaming at me that we could bury him in it.

With a new white shirt (it's my recollection that he didn't own a white shirt at the time) and a nice tie, Daddy was fixed up for the wedding. Getting him ready was my job, after I was dressed for my stint as maid of honor.

The wedding went off as planned, Daddy went home and hung the suit in a bag from the men's shop and pushed it to the back of the closet.

In retrospect, I've wondered if the hullabaloo wasn't just his way of getting some attention.

Some months later, I wrote my parents and asked them to get the blue suit out. There would be another wedding. That was easy.

After a span of about ten years, my younger sister got married and she decided that the men should wear white tux-black pants ensembles. My mother shuddered. Would daddy fight again?

Strangely enough, he didn't. As a matter of fact, he strutted like a peacock, pleased with his appearance. We wondered if he could be mellowing.

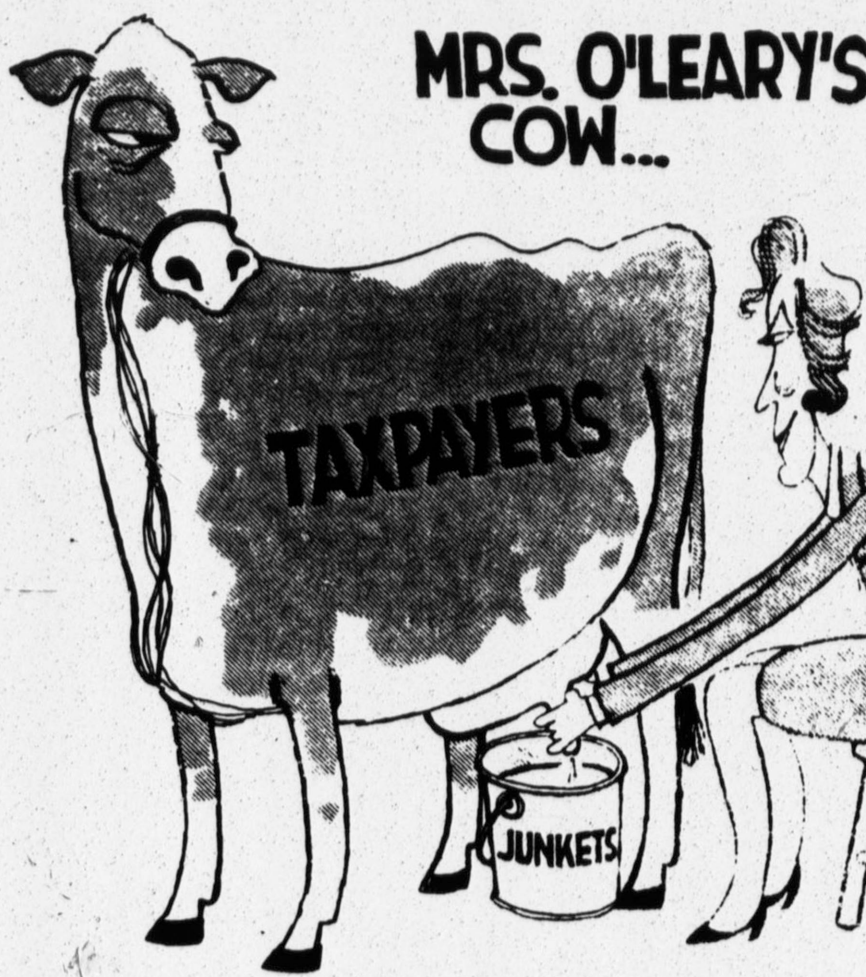

Some years later, he was called on to escort my daughter in her wedding. This meant rental of a black tux. No problem. He was broken in by the previous formal attire.

All those years, that blue suit hung in his closet. He took it out only once that I know of to wear to a cousin's wedding. It was moved when my parents relocated two or three times. Daddy told members of the family more than once that the suit was still there and we knew what to do with it.

So we did. When daddy died, I went to the closet and got the suit, a little shiny after more than 30 years and with a moth hole or two.

Daddy should have been pleased. He was buried in the blue suit.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

A letter to members of the Hereford ISD board of trustees:

Dear Board Member, I believe that you, as a board member, have a duty to the entire Hereford Independent School District as a whole, to make sound and rational decisions pertaining to the welfare of the children of this school district. You must use your professional judgment on all issues and not allow your personal feelings to dictate your final decision in whatever issue is at hand.

Any evaluation of school employees should be non-biased. I believe that some members who are seeking Charles Greenawalt's resignation have always had a "personal agenda" and that this can be construed as a "witch hunt" on the part of those board members.

I believe that when you took the oath of office to become a board member, you promised to abide by the Code of Ethics for Board Members, which states in part, "As a member of the Board, I shall promote the best interests of the District as a whole, and, to that end, I shall adhere to the following educational and ethical standards (no all excerpted here).

"2. Make decisions in terms of the educational welfare of all children in the District ...

"3. Recognize that decisions must be made by the Board as a whole and make no personal promise or take private action that may compromise the Board ...

"4. Focus Board action on policymaking, goal setting, planning and evaluation, and insist on regular and impartial evaluation of all staff ...

"5. Support and protect school personnel in the proper performance of their duties ...

"7. Hold confidential all matters pertaining to school that, if disclosed, may needlessly injure individuals or the schools, and respect the confidentiality of information that is privileged under applicable law ...

"10. Endeavor to make policy decisions only after full discussion at publicly held Board meetings, and render all decisions based on the available facts and refuse to surrender that judgment to individuals or special groups ...

"11. Encourage the free expression of opinion between the Board and students, staff and all elements of the community ...

"14. Refrain from using my Board position for personal or partisan gain ...

"15. Make certain the Board remains responsive to the community ...

"16. Remember always that my first and greatest concern must be educational welfare of all the students attending the public schools."

This Code of Ethics, as you well know, may be found in the Board Policy Manual for the Hereford Independent School District, under BBF (Local).

The school board members need to realize that Charles Greenawalt is doing a tremendous job for the Hereford Independent School District. Our superintendent and school district are recognized statewide as being exceptional and striving to do what is best for the children of our community.

I believe that Charles Greenawalt has done an exceptional job for the Hereford ISD as superintendent. He always has the best interests of the children at heart whenever there is a decision to be made. He is an impartial man. He is also a Christian man.

Charles Greenawalt is interested in the welfare of the children in this school district! He is no just sitting around collecting his monthly paychecks. If he was not genuinely interested in the children and the school district, he would not spend so much of his time and energy working with several different committees across the state.

Time and again as decisions are made, his standard response is, "Who are we here for, we're here for the kids!"

I believe that it is our duty to the children, parents, staff and superintendent of the Hereford Independent School District to make sure that the people who serve on the Board of Trustees have the best interests of the children and school district as their main goal.

We as taxpayers have the right to expect only the best for the children of Hereford ISD and that means that we expect our Board of Trustees to be professional, school-minded people, making decisions based only on what is educationally best for those children!

Sincerely, Olivia Luna

Dear Editor:

The following statement was sent to each school board member concerning their evaluation of superintendent Charles Greenawalt.

The majority of administration building employees were evidently misrepresented to the board concerning this matter, as false statements concerning our opinions have been made by some board members and their family members.

We prefer to speak for ourselves. Follow is the text of the statement:

We understand a statement has been made that the employees of the administration building do not want Charles Greenawalt in our district as superintendent. At no time has any individual or group approached any of the undersigned employees to ask his/her opinion on the matter of Charles Greenawalt's effectiveness as a district leader or his personal character. We take exception to being misrepresented by anyone in regard to this matter.

Were we asked, we would all testify that Charles Greenawalt is an honorable man of unimpeachable character and a respected and effective leader. Even though his is often a difficult job, he never fails to treat each HISD employee with respect and friendliness. He demands nothing of his co-workers and employees that he does not willingly give himself.

We, the undersigned, wish to state that Charles Greenawalt has our loyalty and support as a respected and effective leader within our building, HISD and community.

Sincerely, Pam Fogo and 48 others

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Have you heard the story of Spc. Michael New?

He is a U.S. Army medic who is facing court martial simply because he stood up for what he believed was right.

You see, back in July 1993, President Clinton authorized -- for the first time -- American troops to serve in United Nations forces, under UN commanders and wearing the blue beret of the UN.

On Oct. 10, 1995, New and his unit were ordered to Macedonia, where they would take part in the UN force patrolling between Macedonia and Yugoslavia to prevent the Balkan conflict from spreading.

New, however, took exception to what he said was an order that made him violate the U.S. Constitution.

He refused the order to don UN blue. As a result, his unit went to Macedonia and he was court-martialed.

Seems to me like this 22-year-old man from Conroe is the only one of the bunch who has his head screwed on straight.

You see, every military person -- from the lowliest private up to the Commander-in-Chief himself -- swears an oath to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America."

That Constitution, in Article II, Section 2, established the president as the Commander-in-Chief and in the Second Amendment, instituted "a well regulated Militia" to protect the country.

On the other hand, UN officers swear an oath to uphold the interests of the United Nations above those of any individual country.

You see Mr. New's quandary, don't you?

On the one hand, he swore an oath to the U.S. Constitution, but on the other hand was being ordered to follow the command of someone who did not have that same allegiance.

A military judge is supposed to be deciding whether or not to throw out the case against New or allow a jury to consider the Constitutionality issue.

While I would like to see New vindicated, it would also set an important precedent if he went to trial and was acquitted and the Constitutionality of his claim were upheld.

From my point of view, there should have been no case in the first place.

President Clinton -- with his history of disdain for the United States military and its missions around the world -- is the first U.S. president to order troops to wear UN blue.

Such an order undermined the ability of the armed forces to be secure in their place as U.S. soldiers (as opposed to UN soldiers).

It also opened a Pandora's box that could ultimately, if not stopped immediately, lead to American soldiers being forced to fight for the United Nations either on American soil, against American citizens, or overseas for causes that bring harm to the United States.

Mr. New deserves vindication, he deserves a promotion for his courage and he deserves to be treated as the American hero he truly is.

What he'll probably get is a dishonorable discharge (or "less-than-honorable") and a dressing down from his "superior" officers for his poor attitude and conduct.

If so, it will be another sad day for America, its president and our sovereignty as a nation.

Killeen Daily Herald on Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary: Lurid as solar flares, scandals keep leaping from Hazel O'Leary's Energy Department. The newest: a General Accounting Office finding that the department can't account for $255,000 spent on expeditions to India and South Africa and the revelation that an O'Leary chum, placed in a $93,000 post the secretary created, soaked taxpayers $35 a day since December 1993 in unmerited per-diem pay.

First, the trips. According to the GAO, energy officials lost track of $80,000 in the 1994 trade mission to India and failed to keep close tabs on $135,000 during a sojourn to South Africa last August (though officials say they can produce some receipts soon).

Remarkably, the GAO studied only two of about 100 trade missions undertaken by the frequent-flying Ms. O'Leary. Do your own extrapolation.

Ms. O'Leary's entourage for the two trips totaled 211 people. Cleopatra, eat your heart out ...

Ms. O'Leary also shifted $400,000 from a defense account to pay for her travel groups' security abroad. We have elsewhere noted her penchant for the swankest jets, her $43,000 study to rate the reporters who cover her and so on.

We can think of only a single justification for President Clinton to keep his most profligate secretary. The Energy Department is charged with developing alternative fuels. Ms. O'Leary has found one: money to burn.

FAA outlines plan to improve system

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)

Struggling to recover from a year of dismaying failures at air traffic control centers, the Federal Aviation Administration detailed efforts Friday to improve a system they insisted already works well.

Officials said their complex system to handle 39 million flights per year works 99.4 percent of the time. But, at least in 1995, that 0.6 percent focused a lot of attention on the agency and its antiquated computers and creaky power supplies.

The FAA admits to at least 23 instances when air traffic control centers went out of service last year.

New power supply systems have been installed in 15 of the 21 centers; controllers and technicians are getting more training on handling computer problems; 265 new maintenance technicians have been hired and new computers are to be installed, FAA Associate Administrator Monte Belger said.

"The air traffic control system is safer today than it was last year; it is more efficient today than it was last year," Belger said.

He released reports by independent experts who, while faulting some FAA actions, endorsed the steps the agency is taking.

The FAA announced Oct. 25 that it has ordered $87 million in backup electrical generators for its troubled centers for installation over the next five years.

Last August the agency said it would install new computers in five failure-plagued centers. The FAA will spend $65 million to upgrade the computers in Chicago, Dallas-Fort Worth, Washington, Cleveland and New York. But developing computer programs, and purchasing the equipment could delay installation of the new units until late 1997, officials said.

Those computers will be interim replacements for 30-year-old computers that have grown increasingly balky. Officials are no longer confident they can be kept in service until a national computer replacement program is completed over the next several years.

Belger said a team of FAA officials also has visited all 21 centers to review procedures.

The effort was prompted by a series of heavily publicized outages across the country last year. For example:

- The main air traffic control computer serving a large part of the Midwest failed on Nov. 1, for the seventh time in a year, interrupting flights at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport and other airfields across the nation.

- On Oct. 17, flights were delayed and some were canceled when a brief power failure disrupted the Fort Worth, Texas, computer that supplies air traffic information to controllers in a five-state area of the Southwest.

- For 84 tense minutes on Aug. 12, air traffic controllers were forced to work from memory after a lightning strike knocked out a Miami radar that tracks aircraft across 400,000 square miles.

- On Aug. 9, an on-board alarm system may have been all that prevented a collision between two passenger jets during an hourlong radar outage over northern California.

- On May 25, a power failure at the New York air traffic control center forced controllers to hold nearly 200 planes on the ground, some for hours.

Cars are simple machines; computers are logical; IRS is none of the above

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - To get the best performance from your car you must fully understand the purpose and operation of all the interacting parts and be able to manipulate them - or hire someone else to do it.

The same applies also to income taxes. Well, not really; a car, even with all its electronic parts, is a simple piece of machinery compared with the thousands of interacting clauses, bclauses and definitions of the tax laws.

Perhaps it would be fairer to say the tax laws are as baffling to most people as are the guts of a computer. But that wouldn't be true either. The computer is logically designed, with all parts working together.

The truth is you could never reason your way through a tax code strewn with redundant and contradictory parts accreted over years of tinkering. Having been amassed with no master design, it doesn't make common sense.

Nobody understands it fully, including those who contributed to its parts, those who interpret its demands and those who make a living of it. All conclusions can be challenged, which adds interpretations to the chaos.

It is, in the words of the National Commission on Economic Growth and Tax Reform, "beyond repair." It is "impossibly complex, outrageously expensive, overly intrusive, economically destructive, and manifestly unfair."

It thwarts initiative, slows economic growth, limits job creation, destroys initiative, places an unfair burden on families, intrudes into private matters, and violates the principle of innocent until proven guilty.

It's all there in the report of the Commission, popularly known as the Kemp Commission (for its chairman, Jack Kemp), and formed at the invitation of Senate Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Because of this, the document seems destined to become wrapped into the political debate, treated as propaganda for a flat tax, and perhaps distorted and graded as meaningless to intelligent, unbiased discussion.

How much better it would be, the report suggests, to "imagine an America where the IRS becomes the 'TPA' - a Taxpayer Protection Agency - to ensure that no one pays more than is owed."

The Kemp Report proposes a flat tax for consideration, although it does not specify a rate. It is also a Republican program, still another reason why it might be viewed as strictly a political document.

But there is much more in it for those without political affiliation or in fact any political preference and who simply want a clear exposition of how troubled America is about its tax system and how badly it wants change.

Probe asserts arms on crossing did not work

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) - Sheriff's investigators have concluded a railroad crossing arm was faulty at an Albuquerque crossing where a Texas man was killed by a train.

They say the railroad crossing guard-arm didn't come down in the train-car collision in November that killed Raul Ricardo Zertuche, 44, of Eagle Pass, Texas.

That conclusion was at odds with investigations by Burlington Northern-Santa Fe Corp.

Railroad spokesman Mike Martin said in Chicago that a splintered crossing gate and a lack of skid marks indicated the driver ran the gate.

Martin said the railroad stands by its conclusions and that its conclusions are backed by jests on the warning equipment.

But Bernalillo County sheriff's spokeswoman Ronni Sparks said her department's investigation had concluded the driver was not at fault.

"The lights were flashing, however the arm did not come down," she said.

Deputies based their conclusion on statements from 11 witnesses, evidence from the vehicle and the road and statements from the Amtrak train's engineers, according to a sheriff's report.

Witness Steven P. Tomita of Gilbert, Ariz., told sheriff's investigators that the signal devices were not working when his car pulled up to the crossing after Zertuche and another motorist.

"The white car (Zertuche's) was suddenly struck by the Amtrak train and carried down the tracks. We barely stopped in time to keep from hitting into the train," he said.

"No bells were ringing, the barricades were not lowering.... The bells began to ring shortly after we came to a stop.... The barricades never attempted to lower," Tomita said.

Harvesters overcome Herd; Lady Whitefaces roll

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Pampa Harvesters had a 9-0 run in the first quarter, and while Hereford never gave up, that was enough to win the showdown between teams with perfect records in District 1-4A play.

In fact, nine was the final margin, as Pampa won 72-63. Pampa won its 20th game (with three losses) and improved to 6-0 in district play. Pampa stopped Hereford's winning streak at 11, dropping the Herd to 4-1 in district and 15-8 overall.

In the first game of the district doubleheader, Hereford won the girls' game easily, 67-40. The Lady Whitefaces hit 10 three-pointers in the game.

While Pampa's early 9-0 run in the boys game wasn't the whole game, it was the key. They got ahead and stayed there.

"They're a hard team to catch from behind," Herd coach Randy Dean said.

Dean knew about Pampa stars Rayford Young and Coy Laury, but it was relatively unknown August Larson who Dean cited as a big factor in Pampa's surge. Larson hit two three-pointers in the first quarter; the first capped the 9-0 run, the second came moments later and gave Pampa a 16-6 lead.

"They had a guy (Larson) come off the bench and hit a couple of three-pointers, and that bumped the lead up quickly," Dean said. "Our defensive game plan was to not let Laury or Young get off to a good start and bury us. We did a good job with that, but one of their other players stepped up and hit the big shots."

Unlike past meetings between the two teams, Hereford didn't let Pampa turn the 10-point lead into 20-, then 30-point leads or more.

Pampa led 19-8 at the end of the first quarter, then took a 23-8 lead on a beautiful reverse layup by Laury, assisted by Young. Hereford answered with a 6-0 run and didn't go away.

"With the exception of that spurt in the first quarter, I thought we played the way we needed to play," Dean said.

Just before halftime, Ronald Torres and Brian Torres hit three pointers to make the score 36-23 at the break.

Pampa started the second half with a seven-point run for the Harvesters' biggest lead at 43-23. Hereford answered with a nine-point run to make it 43-31, and the teams traded baskets until the quarter closed with Pampa up 50-38.

Hereford opened the fourth quarter with a rush. Buckets by Isaac Walker and Brian Torres cut the lead to single digits at 50-42, and traded baskets by Pampa's Laury and Hereford's Michael High made it 52-44.

Another 9-0 run by Pampa took care of that threat. Pampa's Young, who led all scorers with 28 points, hit a pair of free throws then a three-pointer during the run. Between the free throws and trey, Hereford's Brian Torres was clearly hacked on a three-point attempt, but no call was made. A driving layup by Laury pushed the lead to 61-44.

High stole the ball at Pampa's end and went coast-to-coast for a lay-in-it was nearly a dunk. He was fouled and hit the free throw to cap a 7-1 run, pulling Hereford within 62-51.

Pampa did what it needed to do to win. The Harvesters hit free throws: 15-of-17 for the game, 9-of-10 in the last two and a half minutes. Young alone hit 4-of-4 for the next points after High's three-point play.

"Give Pampa a lot of credit," Dean said. "15-of-17 is pretty impressive, especially the way they shot them down the stretch."

The free throw shooting performance meant that the pair of treys Hereford's Johnathan Keenan hit in the final minute and half just made the score more respectable, instead of making the score tight.

"Our players gave a great effort tonight," Dean said. "They showed no quit and continued to battle back. Pampa's got a heck of a basketball team, but we've got a good team also."

In the girls game, Hereford scored the first nine points of the game and never let up.

The Lady Whitefaces hit three treys in the first quarter and led 20-7, and they hit three more in the second and led 37-16.

Pampa actually outscored Hereford 13-12 in the third quarter to come within 49-29, but Hereford answered with four more treys in the fourth quarter for the 67-40 win.

Misti Davis hit five of Hereford's 10 three-pointers, and the sophomore led all scorers with 17 points. The other five treys were hit by five other different players.

The Lady Whitefaces performance was a methodical dismantling of the Lady Harvesters.

"We took care of business," Lady Whitefaces coach Eddie Fortenberry said. "We talked all week about how we've got to get this one before we go to Randall (Tuesday)."

It might have been easy to overlook Pampa, a 67-30 loser to Hereford in their first meeting. Hereford plays Randall Tuesday in what is virtually a must win for Hereford's playoff hopes.

"Our focus was really good," Fortenberry said. "I didn't feel like our minds were wandering anywhere."

Pampa went with the zone and stuck with it, despite the way Hereford took advantage of it.

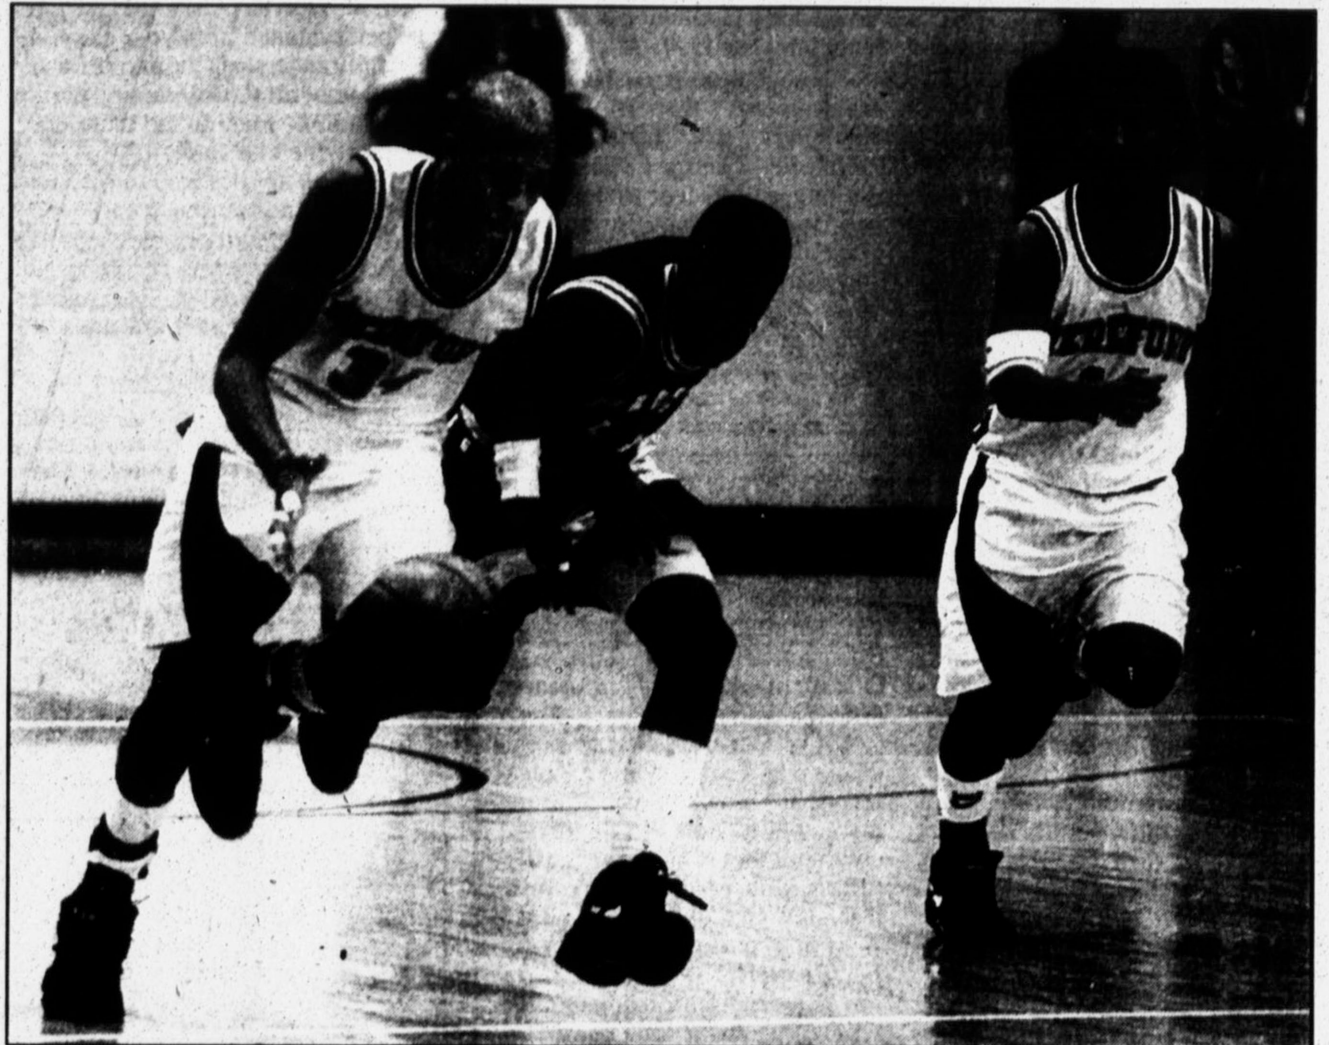

"If I had to play our team, I would not play zone. Randall won't play a zone, I know," Fortenberry said. "We've got great three-point shooters. I wouldn't sit there and let them shoot it."

Hereford's Michael High stole the ball from Pampa's Lynn Brown and heads upcourt for a layup, as Ronald Torres follows. High's three-point play cut Pampa's lead to 62-51 late in the fourth quarter, but Pampa held on for a 72-63 victory Friday in Whiteface Gym.

Sampras upset in Australia

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer
MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) - Australian Mark Philippoussis attacked Pete Sampras with aces, thundering forehands and tantalizing chips and ousted the No. 1 seed from the third round of the Australian Open today.

Philippoussis won 6-4, 7-6 (11-9), 7-6 (7-3) in a 2 hour, 14 minute match in which he served 29 aces.

For a change, Boris Becker didn't have to show his mastery of five-set matches.

Sweden's Magnus Larsson kept the match close for just one set before No. 4 seed Becker won 7-6 (7-5), 6-3, 6-3 today, advancing to the round of 16 at the Australian Open.

In first two matches, Becker needed five sets to come from behind. Another member of the tough Swedish contingent, Thomas Johansson, won the first two sets against Becker. But now with a 30-13 record in five-set matches, he has won more than any other active player.

This time, he said, serving was easier because the Center Court roof was closed because of rain, and there was no sun or wind to contend with.

"I felt my serve was very, very good, and he didn't have much chance to get on it. The match didn't go to five because of that," said Becker, who has won five Grand Slam titles, but none since the 1991 Australian Open.

Becker had just eight aces, to Larsson's seven, but he faced only one break point in the match.

Still, Larsson could have turned the match around when he came up with three outstanding shots with Becker serving at 5-3 in the second set. But the German closed out the set with a strong serve and a serve-and-volley attack.

Larsson was moving up the rankings, going as high as No. 10 last April, before he broke his right foot in June. He now is 19th.

"I didn't move. I didn't do anything to really bother him. ... At least, I have no pain in my foot. I'll just have to go home and practice more and harder to get back to the form I had here last year," when he reached the fourth round, Larsson said.

Meanwhile, another Swede was victorious today. No. 7 Thomas Enqvist won his third-round match against Herman Gummy of Argentina.

No. 6 Yevgeny Kafelnikov of Russia beat Australia's Michael Tebbutt 7-5, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 on Center Court. The first two sets were played with the roof open, and temperatures as high as 84 degrees, dropping suddenly to 61. Then came the rain. The roof was closed, and play resumed about an hour later.

On the outside courts, play was interrupted for 3 1/2 hours.

American Mali'Vai Washington won one interrupted match, beating Mauricio Hadad of Colombia 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. He faces Kafelnikov next. Becker's next foe, Brett Steven of New Zealand, beat Jan Siemerink of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-4, 6-7 (7-3), 6-2.

Australian Mark Woodforde ousted Francisco Clavet of Spain 4-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-2, 6-4.

Three of the top women players, including teen-agers Martina Hingis of Switzerland and American Lindsay Davenport, beat the rain with quick morning victories, but had to deal with winds that moved shots and blew plastic bags and other trash onto the courts.

Hingis needed just 47 minutes for a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Mana Endo, who had eliminated No. 5 Kimiko Date, a Japanese compatriot.

The 15-year-old Hingis now is ranked 20th, but that is partly because her restricted tournament schedule keeps down the number of ranking points she can earn.

T-Wolves win 3rd straight

By The Associated Press
The players could hardly believe it. And rookie coach Flip Saunders was so excited he was urging the crowd to cheer louder.

Incredibly, the Minnesota Timberwolves were closing in on their third straight victory, beating the Midwest Division-leading San Antonio Spurs 100-92 Friday night.

It's been nearly three years since the woeful Wolves strung three victories together.

"I've been around for so many losses that it's hard to remember three wins," said Doug West, the only player left from the 1989-90 expansion season. "Right now, these three wins and the way we've been playing stick out more than anything."

Two other division leaders lost Friday night. Orlando's road struggles continued as the Magic were held to two fourth-quarter field goals in a 111-99 loss at Utah, and Seattle lost for just the third time at home this season, falling to New York in overtime, 100-97.

In other NBA games, it was Atlanta 82, Philadelphia 77; Washington 93, New Jersey 87; Indiana 89, Detroit 81; Charlotte 114, Miami 106; Dallas 129, Boston 124; Portland 101, Phoenix 84; the Los Angeles Lakers 106, the Los Angeles Clippers 100.

The Timberwolves led for all but the first 30 seconds of the game, then fought to keep themselves together while holding off the cold-shooting Spurs in the final minutes. They eventually did both, reversing an embarrassing 38-point loss at San Antonio on Dec. 30.

Isaiah Rider had 19 of his 27 points in the second half and is averaging 29 points in the last three games.

Brad Lohaus hit six 3-pointers to lead San Antonio, which was playing without starter Sean Elliott and top reserve J.R. Reid. David Robinson had 21 points and 15 rebounds, but hit just eight of 24 shots.

The Spurs had beaten Minnesota nine times in a row before Friday and are now 29-4 against the Wolves.

Mavericks 129, Celtics 124

Jim Jackson scored 31 points and backcourt teammate Jason Kidd added 23 points and 12 assists as Dallas held off Boston.

It was the fourth victory in six games for the Mavericks, who got 19 points from reserve Tony Dumas and 18 from George McCloud.

David Wesley had 25 points and Dino Radja added 21 to pace the visiting Celtics, who have lost 13 of 17. Rick Fox and Dana Barros scored 18 points each for Boston.

Jazz 111, Magic 99

John Stockton had 17 assists and scored 11 of his 15 points in the fourth quarter and Karl Malone scored 37 to rally the Jazz in the second half.

Nick Anderson led the Magic with 29 points, including nine 3-pointers, and Shaquille O'Neal and Anfernee Hardaway each scored 19. But the Magic were outscored by the Jazz 27-12 over the last 8:49.

Orlando, 20-0 at home, fell to 8-10 away from Orlando Arena.

Knicks 100, SuperSonics 97, OT

Patrick Ewing scored six of his season-high 41 points in overtime as New York beat Seattle at Key Arena.

Ewing, who also pulled down a season-high 16 rebounds, put the Knicks ahead 97-95 with a 20-foot shot with 33 seconds left. The Knicks outscored the Sonics 8-2 in the final 1:45 of overtime.

Seattle was led by Shawn Kemp's 25 points.

Hawks 82, 76ers 77

Mookie Blaylock scored 23 points, including two crucial free throws with 17 seconds left, and Atlanta won its sixth straight game.

Steve Smith added 17 points for the Hawks, while Andrew Lang had 12 points and six blocked shots.

Pacers 89, Pistons 81

Indiana tied a franchise record with its 11th straight home victory.

Rik Smits scored 25 points and hit a 12-foot jumper with 1:52 remaining to give the Pacers the lead for good. Reggie Miller, who returned to Indiana's lineup after missing one game with the flu, finished with 22 points. Allan Houston led the Pistons with 21 points, and Grant Hill had 20.

Bullets 93, Nets 87

Chris Webber returned after a 10-game absence to score 25 points, helping the Bullets end a three-game losing streak.

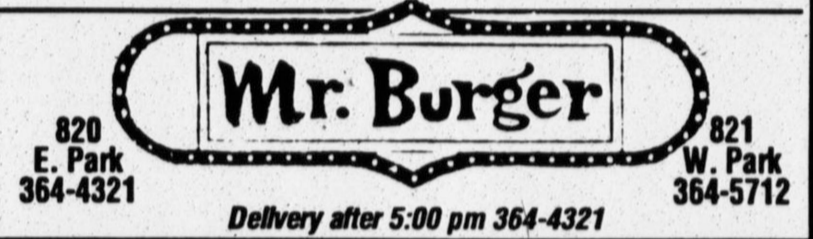

Hornets 114, Heat 106

Larry Johnson scored 29 points and Glen Rice 28 to help Charlotte defeat Miami.

Johnson hit all seven of his shots in the first period for 18 points, then went 1-for-16 the rest of the way.

Nets send Anderson packing

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Kenny Anderson's desire to test the free agency market at the end of the season left the New Jersey Nets with no choice. They picked his new team for him.

Facing the prospect of losing the former All-Star point guard and getting nothing in return, the Nets sent Anderson to the Charlotte Hornets on Friday in a four-player deal that continues the teams' recent trend of blockbuster trades.

In return for Anderson and seldom-used swingman Gerald Glass, the Nets received guards Kendall Gill and Khalid Reeves.

Charlotte should be able to sign Anderson to a new contract, said his attorney, David Falk.

"I can't imagine Kenny Anderson not being a part of Charlotte's future for a long time," Falk said in Baltimore prior to the Nets' game against the Washington Bullets.

Anderson rejected a six-year, $40 million contract at the start of the season, saying he hadn't made up his mind on free agency. The two sides continued to talk in recent weeks, but the Nets wanted something done before the NBA trading deadline next month.

Last week, Falk told the Nets that Anderson was leaning toward free agency, Nets general manager Willis Reed said.

"We didn't want to end up at the last hour just having to do something," Reed said.

New year good time to update, or write, will

By KACEE HARGRAVE
San Angelo Standard-Times
SAN ANGELO, Texas - It's 1996.
A new year. A new diet. A new outlook on life.

A new will and testament.
What?

Most people don't like to think about death, especially at the beginning of a new year.

But attorneys who handle estates and other probate matters say a good New Year's resolution for people may be to write or update their wills.

"I think all of us know we need a will. It's just human to postpone it," said Jim A. Carter, a partner in the San Angelo law firm of Smith, Carter, Rose, Finley and Griffiths.

"We all know we're going to die, but we think, 'Not today.'"

Carter handles a lot of probate cases and gives presentations on the subject for various civic and professional groups.

Rae Leifeste, an attorney at the Hall and Lane law firm, also does estate work. He said a lot of people don't realize how much their estates are actually worth.

"You may have more property than you think you do," Leifeste said.
"Many people don't think their estate is that large. But what if they have a $500,000 to $1 million life insurance policy? That sneaks up on a lot of people."

Besides life insurance coverage, items such as retirement plans, the value of owned property and other assets can add up quickly.

If an individual's estate adds up to $600,000 or more, or if a couple's estate is worth $1.2 million or more, it is subject to estate taxes which may be difficult for heirs to pay off.

Estate tax "is a huge tax that people don't hear much about,"

Leifeste said estate taxes can take as much as 39 percent to 55 percent of a person's estate, depending on how large it is.

For example, a $10 million estate could be taxed more than $5 million.

Some of that money goes to the Internal Revenue Service, while another portion of it goes to the state, Carter explained.

In some cases, inheritors of an estate sometimes have to sell land, houses and other items received from a deceased loved one just to pay the estate tax. Leifeste said there are ways to reduce or redistribute the amount of one's estate value, such as donating or selling a certain amount of the estate to heirs before death. But he said people are limited in the ways they can become exempt from paying the tax.

With all the other technical laws involved in estate planning, attorneys believe it is wise to seek legal advice.

"If they're not trained to do it, I recommend they get an attorney who does estate work," Carter said.
"Listen to the attorney's recommendation and then decide what to do."

Accountants also do estate planning.

Phillip Schneemann, a certified public accountant at Evans and Schneemann, said getting a CPA is especially helpful when estate taxes come into play.

"Attorneys and accountants generally have the same goal in preparing the estate plan," Schneemann said. "Accountants, I would think, generally know more about the aspects of the tax. The attorneys know how to get those things accomplished through the writing of the wills."

Even if a person's estate is not taxable, Schneemann said getting the advice of those who are knowledgeable about their financial situation can be helpful.

"Sometimes it's difficult to get clients to talk about what is going to happen when they die," he said.
"But it's going to happen, and it's a lot easier to plan for it rather than have those you leave behind sort it out. It's your opportunity to make sure those who you want to leave your property to get it."

Instead of getting an attorney, there are "will kits" available, so people can draft a simple will themselves.

However, both Leifeste and Carter warn that not all kits are applicable to Texas laws and may end up being worthless. Also, they may not fulfill the needs of every person.

"I wouldn't recommend them," Carter said. "They generally are done in such a way that they leave everything to the husband or wife. That is not necessarily wise."

Something the will kit doesn't prevent is the stacking of estates that could be placed on the surviving spouse in the event that the other dies. Carter said such lack of planning can cause a large amount of estate tax to be owed when the surviving spouse dies.

And Leifeste said that because of this, having a will kit can sometimes be worse than having no will at all.
"Will kits are something that could be a problem," he said. "It's like pulling your own teeth without going to the dentist. They do not do very good planning for anyone other than those with a very modest estate."

Both Carter and Leifeste said it is easier and often cheaper for people to get a personalized, legal document now than to have others go through the process after they die.

"I think it's very important to do it enables a person to decide themselves who receives their property ... rather than the state of Texas," Carter said.

A lot of people wait until they get older to draw up a will, Carter said.
But having a will is especially important for parents with young children.

"Young adults with children should have a will, whether they have taxable property or not," Carter explained.
"Through that will, a parent can designate who they wish to raise their child."

The court is not required to go along with those wishes if it feels the guardian would not be fit. But Carter said the will is a way for people to make their desires known.

Also, Carter said that just because parents have chosen godparents for their children, it doesn't mean those godparents will get legal custody of them.

"Being a godparent doesn't bestow any legal rights to be guardian," he said.

Without a will, the state intervenes in the distribution of an estate through laws called "intestate succession."

Leifeste said if the deceased has children, intestate succession divides up the estate among them. If people have a will, they can make that determination on their own, he explained.

"If a parent dies without a will, some of it's going to a child. And if a child is under 18, he can't own property, so there has to be a guardian established," he explained. "A parent really needs a will to avoid the complications of guardianship."

Once someone dies, a probate hearing usually is held to appoint an executor or an administrator of the estate, which pays outstanding debts and distributes the estate among the surviving relatives.

"The executor is sort of like a closing officer in a real estate transaction," Leifeste said. "They ask for all bills to be submitted to pay them and make arrangements for disbursements of what's left after that."

An important note Leifeste makes about the probate process is that if a will hasn't been probated properly, then a person who tries to sell inherited property will have problems with the title to the property.

County Judge Mike Brown usually presides over probate hearings in Tom Green County, which can be simple or complex depending on the thoroughness of the will and whether it is contested.

Attorneys often handle the filing of applications for probate hearings, but sometimes people file for the hearings themselves at the county clerk's Office. To file an original probate application costs about $100.

Once an application is received, there is a minimum 10-day waiting period before a probate hearing can be held.

During the hearing, an applicant is sworn in and must testify to the proof of death or other facts pertinent to the case.

There are different laws that apply to each case, such as when a will is handwritten or when it is drafted by an attorney.

Self-written wills can be tricky, because there are various requirements regarding signatures and how the will was written.

"A self-written will is similar to a kit," Leifeste said. "It's very difficult to know whether it meets all the complicated requirements. If it's written in anything other than your handwriting, it has more stringent requirements."

Another difficult part of a probate hearing is when the participants are still grieving over the deceased.

"I just try to be as caring and compassionate as possible," Brown said.

Sometimes people can avoid probate hearings and wills altogether, if they have what is called a living will.

One type of living will allows a person to communicate their wishes to donate organs after their death.

However, a living will dealing with estates sets up trusts for each person with the assets you want to give them. It actually transfers titles to real property to inheritors while the property owners are still alive.

"What you do is basically probate your estate while you're alive," Leifeste said.

Living wills can also be referred to as powers of attorney in which another person can do all the business for another living person. There is also a "health care power of attorney" or a "directive to a physician," which allows a designated person to make health decisions for an extremely ill person.

There are also specific rules and regulations that apply to the issuing of both types.

Sculptor does double duty as ringmaster for real flea circus

By MARTHA IRVINE
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Maybe it's because Maria Fernanda Cardoso wears a silver cape and wields a tiny whip.

Or maybe it's because she harnesses fleas with tiny wires, gives them names like Teeny and Tiny and then blows on them to coax them to walk across a minitightrope or jump from a high dive.

Whatever it is, audiences at the Cardoso Flea Circus often leave her weekend shows at the Exploratorium science center with bemused looks on their faces.

"People don't think it's real," Cardoso says.

Close examination reveals that there are fleas attached to wire harnesses or dressed in costumes - live fleas that dance, juggle and lift weights.

One of them, a mighty mite named Tarzan, pulls a toy big rig.

"He's the strongest, but not the smartest. Otherwise he wouldn't do this," Cardoso says.

Then there's Harry Flee-dini, the world's smallest escape artist.

"Oh," she says as she opens his box. "He's gone already."

Some think Cardoso's show is strange. Many think it's funny. And at least one person in the audience always asks if the fleas are alive.

Cardoso's assistant, Heidi Zednik, says.

For the ringmaster and creator of the show, it's more than a circus sideshow. "I don't know if they know I'm a serious artist," says Cardoso, who earned her Master of Fine Arts at Yale University.

A native of Colombia, she is a sculptor and installation artist who has exhibited work at major galleries in the United States, Canada and South America. Her pieces often include animals, including lizards, snakes and starfish.

This latest project, she says, is "art and life" - a chance for her to show her sense of humor and interact with her audience.

"It's nothing like I have ever done," she says. "I have never performed anything in my life."

Cardoso began learning about fleas four years ago. She wanted to use human fleas, as have most traditional flea circuses. Those were too hard to find, so she buys cat fleas from a lab for seven to 10 cents each.

The fleas live about two months - long enough, Cardoso says, for her to become attached to them. The first step is to harness them; using tweezers and magnifying goggles.
Then she teaches them to walk on two legs and designs an act for them in her ever-evolving show.

"I tried to find somebody from which to learn. But there was no one," says Cardoso, who won't reveal how she feeds the fleas, which of course dine mainly on blood.

In her research, she found suggestions in books about an Italian named Bertolotto who designed elaborate flea circuses in Europe in the 1800s. His audiences included royalty. In New York in the 1950s, a man simply known as Prof. Heckler herded fleas at his show on 42nd Street.

As far as Cardoso knows, the last flea circus met its demise in the 1970s.

"I revived it because it was lost," says the self-proclaimed Prof.
Cardoso, Queen of the Fleas - still a serious artist who teaches sculpture at the San Francisco Art Institute.

She often finds herself daydreaming about fleas.

"This is an obsession of mine," says Cardoso, who wants to be buried in a flea-shaped coffin. "I am totally hooked. I got the flea bite."

She didn't know her audiences would, too.

"I knew it would be fun," she says. "I didn't know it would be such a big deal."

NEW YORK (AP) - Ellen DeGeneres doesn't know how to say no.

The star of ABC's "Ellen" just completed her first movie, "Mr.
Wrong"; finished the narration for a new exhibit at Disney's Epcot Center; and wrote a book, "My Point
... and I Do Have One," which is on the New York Times bestseller list.

If that weren't enough, DeGeneres also will make an appearance on "Sesame Street."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - Now that retired astronaut Norm Thagard has come down to Earth, he's going back to school.

Thagard will teach engineering this spring at his alma mater, Florida State University, where he has accepted a visiting professorship.

"We are pleased to welcome Dr.
Thagard home," said university President Talbot Sandy D'Alemberte.
"We're honored to have him teaching here."

Area sugar beet producers attend meeting on Friday

Sugar beet disease, irrigation and planting methods were among the topics at the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association's annual meeting held Friday in the Hereford Community Center.

The meeting was attended by more than 100 growers and guests.

It was scheduled to conclude Saturday night with the annual Sugar Beet Banquet, where the Ag Man of the Year was to be announced.

During Friday's meeting, members elected directors for the coming year.

Those elected were Tony Broman, Farmers Corner; Dick Fellers, Factory North; Coby Gilbreath, Dimmitt; and Jackie Welch, Kress.

Dennis Printz, Holly's Agricultural Manager, presented plaques to the Top Growers in the area.

Top Grower status requires a grower to produce the highest sugar content with at least the station average for tonnage.

Those selected were Factory

Northwest, Richard Yosten; Factory Southeast, Joe Grotegut; Dawn, Stanley Friemel; Friona, Dave Thompson; Bovina, David Norton; Farmers Corner, Gregg Broman; Wildorado, Roddy Allred; Dimmitt, Mark Welch; Nazareth, James Bradley Hill; Kress, Paul and Debbie Raymond; Artesia, Mayberry Inc.; Dalhart, R.D. Offutt Co.; and Panhandle, Aubrey Russell.

Also Friday, Dr. Steven R. Winter, professor of agronomy told producers that Hereford has the tools to grow good high quality beets.

"We had some problems this year with curly top disease, but we can control it," he said. "We are in really good shape for the coming year."

The main concern, he said, is the time at which the sugar beet is planted.

"The last two years have been hard on this area," Winter said. "It received an early frost in March that damaged the beets planted in April."

According to Winter, the safest time to plant is in March.

"Planting in April seems to be a little too soon for the plant to withstand any climate change," he said. "March is a safer time to plant because the plants are established and are usually at the two leaf stage, or further, before significant weather comes along."

Dr. Charles Rush, plant pathologist for the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Bushland, briefed producers on 1995 irrigation results.

Rush said the rule of thumb is that, for each additional inch of water put on the crop, a producer will get an additional ton of sugar beets. However, he said, beets that sit in water may acquire some soil borne pathogens.

Soil borne pathogens, according to Rush, will damage the beet by jamming up the vascular system, rendering the beet unable to utilize water efficiently.

"We found that an increase in water sometimes may also increase the potential for disease," he said. "For sugar beets grown on ground with a high disease potential, less water is actually better."

Rush found that a decrease of irrigation on pathogene-infested ground decreased disease by 20 percent, increased tonnage by 2-1/2 and increased sucrose by .08.

"This is very consistent of the results for 1994," he said. "In the future we (producers) need to figure an economic threshold for irrigation for growing beets in pathogen rich soils."

He also said producers should focus on delaying irrigation if at all possible.

Rush said his study in the future will include sprinkler irrigation systems. He said he was very optimistic about the industry in the Hereford area.

"I really believe that sprinklers are the future for the beet crop," he said.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag

This year has started off in high gear with a multitude of activities and events. We have had the High Plains Irrigation Conference, West Texas Vegetable Conference, Texas Corn Producers Board growers meeting, the Texas Sugarbeet Growers Association Annual meeting and banquet, and a training program for pesticide applicators. All in the first three weeks of January.

It appears from looking at the calendar that this is going to continue. This next week there is a water management meeting being sponsored by Energas on Monday in Hereford, the Texas Corn Growers Meeting in Dimmitt is on Tuesday and Pioneer Hybrid, Int. and American Cyanamide are sponsoring a corn producers meeting on Wednesday. Then, top that off with the Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show that begins on Wednesday and continues thru Saturday. I'm tired just listing all of the events.

February will also have several activities. The Deaf Smith County Master Gardeners and the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be sponsoring a series of home landscape education meeting. Reserve your Monday nights for these events. You will be hearing more from the Master Gardeners about these in the near future.

Speaking of Master Gardeners, the Panhandle Master Gardener Training program will begin on March 7.

The Panhandle Agrifood Master Program also begins on March 6. Persons interested in this program should also contact the extension office for applications.

Don't forget the Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show this next week. Come out and support the 4-H and FFA members that will be exhibiting livestock projects. The Young Farmers say that this year is one of the biggest in a number of years. Remember the sale on Jan. 27. These young people appreciate your support. See you next week.

Texas Corn Growers will meet in Dimmitt Tuesday

DIMMITT--The Texas Corn Growers Association will hold its 23rd annual meeting Tuesday at the Castro County Exposition Building with Texas House Speaker Pete Laney as keynote speaker.

Registration starts at 8 a.m., and the program begins at 9 a.m. A free lunch will be served by area members of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE).

The meeting will feature discussions of federal farm programs, TSGA's continuous efforts to obtain a sound agricultural policy, and various reports on area insect, weed and disease research.

Laney is expected to address private property and water rights for farmers and ranchers, state environmental issues and other matters which have an impact on Texas agricultural production.

and Don Kimball, American Agriculture Movement.

Following lunch, the afternoon session will include research presentations by Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station personnel.

Topics include research on corn cropping systems, new herbicides for corn; corn diseases, mite control systems, insect-resistant corn studies, and corn marketing programs.

Persons interested in more information on the annual meeting can contact the TCGA office at 1-806-647-4268.

The ruff is a sandpiper native to the Eastern Hemisphere. During the mating season, the male develops a tuft of feathers on his neck that he can erect into a ruff.

"Last year's meeting drew more than 300 people," said TCGA President Carl King. "Because of the quality of speakers we have lined up, we anticipate another large turnout at this year's meeting."

King, also chairman of the American Corn Growers Association board, will present his annual review of TCGA and ACGA activities. Two special panels will feature representatives of the state Farm Service Agency (FSA), formerly the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Harold Bob Bennett, state FSA executive director, will discuss the progress of the reorganization. Ray Joe Riley, state FSA board chairman, will review federal crop insurance and Farmers Home Administration loan provisions.

A second panel will center on the controversial 1995 Farm Bill which is still being debated in Washington. Panel members will include David Senter, consultant to TCGA and ACGA in Washington; Larry Mitchell, National Farmers Union; Lois Wales, spokesperson for WIFE;

Ranchers, environmentalists at odds over eagles

By RALPH WININGHAM
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO - The shot that clipped the wing of a juvenile bald eagle last month could be just the latest volley in a decades-old cross fire pitting environmentalists and Hill Country ranchers.

Middle ground in the conflict that covers thousands and thousands of acres of rugged brush and grass land is hard to find.

On one hand are individuals, backed by federal law, who say that eagle populations must be maintained to preserve the majestic birds of prey.

On the other are the ranchers, who complain they are suffering unacceptable livestock losses from the federally protected aerial predators.

Everyone agrees that the main culprits in the conflict are golden eagles, whose population is estimated at 20,000, and not the bald eagles, which are fish eaters. The bald eagles are bigger birds, but are fewer in number.

Unfortunately, juvenile bald eagles resemble golden eagles until they reach the age of 4 and develop the distinctive, white heads.

"The issue is far from black and white," said Jim Stinebaugh, senior resident agent of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service office in San Antonio. "Part of the problem is that the (golden) eagles don't nest in this part of the country. They are migrating birds."

"If a rancher has cliffs where the eagles like to perch, they can have large populations and that is where there might be some losses."

"Most ranchers probably never lose anything to eagles. One cold norther where the temperature stays in the 20s for a couple of days will kill more lambs than eagles kill in 10 years."

Stinebaugh's comments come as a surprise to Bill Luce, whose family has been in the sheep-raising business in the Rocksprings-Camp Wood-Montel area for nearly a century.

"All my life I've heard people cuss eagles," Luce said as he looked out the kitchen window of his home near Montel. "The rule of thumb by the old-timers is that you can expect to lose about two lambs a day to eagles."

"There are many nesting pairs in this country that never leave. Our problem is that the way the law reads, we can't do anything not even honk a horn or disturb an eagle if it is in the process of eating a lamb."

"I don't have $10,000 for the fine, and I don't have two years to spend in jail."

Stinebaugh and Luce agree that actual losses are hard to document because eagles generally carry off their prey and ranching areas are so vast and inaccessible.

However, the U.S. Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service does provide estimates. In 1994, Texas lamb losses to eagles were estimated at 16,726. Sheep losses were estimated at 200.

Eagles rank second among predators, falling behind coyotes, in both lamb and kid goat kills, according to the department's figures.

Gary Nunley, director of the regional Texas Animal Damage Control office in San Antonio, said there is very little anyone can do with the eagle situation.

"It is possible to get a permit to go out and attempt to trap an eagle that has become a problem, but it is a very costly process," he said. "There are some sheep raisers who know when the eagles move in for the winter and put their lambing season back, but I don't know how successful they have been."

The frustration is echoed by Bill Sims, former state senator from San Angelo and a spokesman for the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

"This has always been a problem in Texas and in seven or eight areas of the state it is a hell of a problem," Sims said. "I'm not about to go out and tell people that these eagles should not be protected, but the only way to solve the problem is to lower the number of eagles."

"Back in 1968-69 we had a bill before Congress that if an eagle took livestock, the owner could get reimbursed. It died because the people wouldn't support it."

"By the time most lambs or kids have been found, you can't tell what killed them."

John Karger, executive director of the Last Chance Forever Bird of Prey Conservancy in San Antonio, said he believes the number of eagle kills is far less than reported.

"There are eagles that kill lambs, but a lot of times they are blaming animals when they didn't really do it," he said.

Karger said he thinks much of the problem lies with bad management by ranchers attempting to raise too many animals on a piece of property, poor pasture conditions and failing to monitor sick or weak animals.

"There is never going to be a solution until we educate people to the fact that nature is harsh," he said.

Officials estimate that the golden eagle population has reached 20,000, with the migrating birds arriving in Texas in early fall on their way to northern Mexico and returning to the northwestern United States by May.

"The eagles are part of our biosphere. I'm afraid a generation will have to die to make a change because of a lack of rapport with the federal government," Karger said.

As a representative of the federal government that has such a tarnished image among many landowners, Stinebaugh said he remains committed to protecting the eagles.

"Random shootings are hardly ever reported and are not a major problem," he said, explaining his last shooting case was three years ago. "My big concern is about people putting poison on carcasses to kill the birds."

"I'm afraid we are losing hundreds of eagles Hill Country-wide to that type of thing."

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) - Grain traders in Chicago will soon be able to look in their computers to find how well a wheatfield in South Dakota or a cornfield in Iowa is growing.

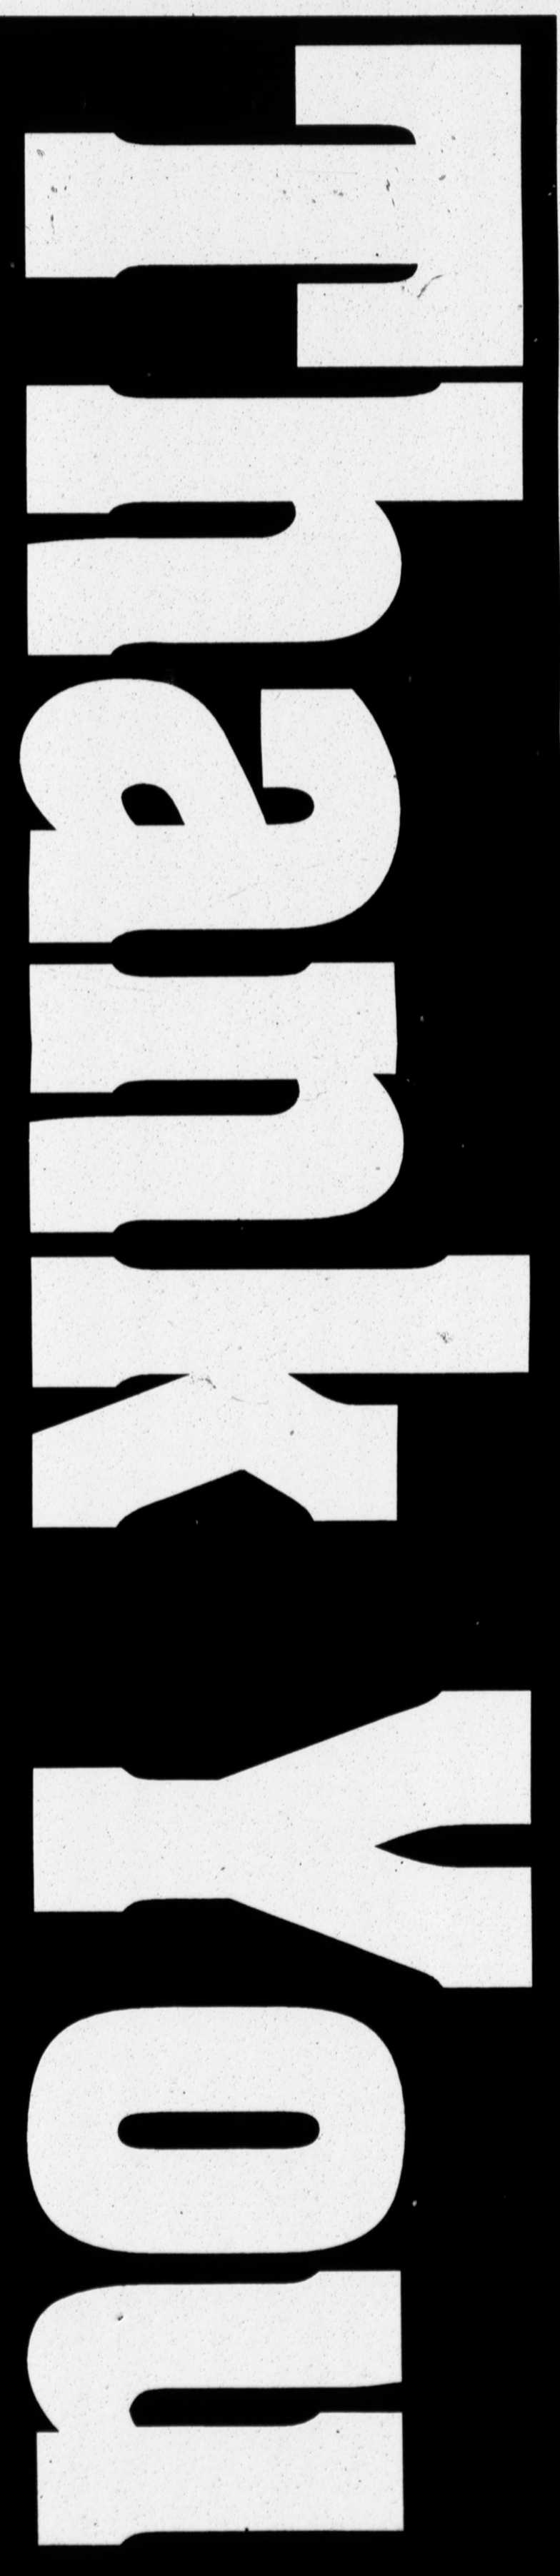

Starting next month, "vegetation greenness maps" derived from a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weather satellite will go on the market. They were developed by Ecosystem Testing Designs Inc. and the University of Kansas.

John Lomas, a research analyst for the university's Kansas Applied Remote Sensing program, analyzes the data and creates the index on which the maps are based.

The new technology will help farmers and commodities traders determine when crops are ready for harvest and whether they are ahead or behind schedule, Lomas said. A lush crop shows up dark green on the maps; less-than-ready crops look brown.

Subscribers will receive four different maps on their computers, with updates every two weeks. Lomas has data from the past seven years. Similar maps are being prepared for China, South America and other areas.

"If one person would do it, it would take me 2-1/2 days," he said.

Dallas expected to carry on NFC dominance

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Four times over the last 11 seasons, the San Francisco 49ers have won the Super Bowl. The Dallas Cowboys are expected to win their third in four years next Sunday.

When it's not the 49ers or the Cowboys, it's the 1985 Bears, perhaps the greatest defensive team in modern NFL history.

Or the 1986 Giants, whose defense rivalled the Bears. Or Joe Gibbs' Washington Redskins, who won three titles with three different quarterbacks and one of the best offensive lines ever.

They all have one thing in common.

They all play in the NFC. It's been assumed during the 11 straight seasons that the NFC team won the Super Bowl that it's simply cyclical, a swing of the pendulum following a decade when AFC teams won eight of nine.

It's hard to call it cyclical any longer.

In the last 11 Super Bowls, the NFC teams have outscored the AFC 428-181, or 38.9 points to 16.4. That's approximately the score of the first game of the streak - San Francisco 38, Miami 16, at Stanford Stadium Jan. 20, 1985, Dan Marino's only Super Bowl appearance and Don Shula's last.

Almost nobody expects the Pittsburgh Steelers to beat the Dallas Cowboys next Sunday. They only question if the Steelers can keep it close.

Even Steelers fans. "Of course I'm glad they got there, but I don't have much hope," said Adam Wolfson, a New York insurance broker and a longtime Steeler fan. "In fact, sometimes I wonder if it would be better if they'd lost to Indianapolis on 'Hail Mary' than to have them win then get embarrassed by Dallas."

If that's a Pittsburgh fan, what does the rest of the world think?

The world according to Las Vegas, has been raising the line since it opened at 11 1/2 right after the Cowboys' 38-27 win over Green Bay that set up Sunday's game. It jumped a point in the next three hours, meaning a lot of heavy money came down kerplunk on the Cowboys.

But that's been the trend. This will be the third straight game in which the line will be double figures - Dallas was favored by 10 over Buffalo two years ago and San Francisco by 19 over San Diego last season.

Both covered. In the last 12 years, the NFC team has been favored by a touchdown or more nine times and the AFC team has been favored just twice - Denver by three over Washington in 1988 and Buffalo by six over the Giants in 1991.

Only two of the last 11 games have been truly competitive.

The first was in 1989, when Joe Montana led the 49ers on a 92-yard, 11-play drive and hit John Taylor from 10 yards out with 34 seconds left to beat Cincinnati 20-16. That was the third of San Francisco's five Super Bowl wins.

The second was in 1991, when the Giants edged Buffalo 20-19 as the Bills' Scott Norwood was wide right with a 47-yard field goal attempt on the game's next-to-last play.

That may have been the only game in which the AFC team was demonstrably better on paper, but New York won it by holding the ball for 40 minutes and 33 seconds, keeping Buffalo's high-powered, no-huddle offense off the field.

In only two other games did the AFC team even lead at the half.

The most recent was two years ago, when the Bills, in the last of their four straight losses, led the Cowboys 13-6 at intermission. But just 55 seconds into the second half, Leon Lett stripped the ball from Thurman

Thomas and James Washington picked up the fumble and returned it 46 yards for a score, irrevocably turning the game.

The other was in 1987, when the Broncos led the Giants 10-9 at intermission and might have been up more had Rich Karlis not missed two short field goals.

In the second half, New York converted a fake punt on the first series, outgained the Broncos 162 yards to 2 over a 20 minute span, scored five straight times to go ahead 39-10 and won 39-20.

The others were monumental blowouts: Chicago's 46-10 rout of New England in 1986; San Francisco 55-10 over Denver in 1990; Dallas' 52-17 win over Buffalo three years ago.

And most often they're over almost before they start, like last year's 49-26 San Francisco win. Take that 55-10 game.

"After the second series, Bill Walsh looked at me and said, 'It's over,'" said Carmen Policy, the 49ers' president, who happened to be sitting with the man who had coached San Francisco's first three victories.

"I said, 'Not so soon.' And he replied: 'There's no way they can stop you.'"

Why such domination by the NFC? Just about every theory has been debunked:

- Styles. The NFC was supposed to be the conference of power and defense, the AFC of finesse. But Dallas and San Francisco, who have won the last three games, have quick-strike offenses that were supposed to be the AFC province.

- Coaches and general managers. Bobby Beathard, who won three Super Bowls in Washington, is now general manager in San Diego and Bill Parcells, who coached the Giants to two, is now in New England. San Diego has made it once but the Pats haven't come close. Will Jimmy Johnson make a difference in Miami?

- Cycles. True, the AFC won eight of nine Super Bowls between 1973 and 1981, but six of those wins were by two of the best teams in NFL history, the Dolphins and Steelers. The aggregate score in those eight wins was 200-111 - an average 25-14 - and Dallas' 27-10 win over Denver in 1978 gave the NFC at least a taste of victory.

In fact, the conferences are far more competitive than the Super Bowls show. Over the 12 years of the streak, the NFC leads just 323-308-1, in part because the AFC's bottom teams may have been better than NFC teams like the Cardinals and Buccaneers.

And things might have been relatively even the past four years if Dallas and San Francisco, clearly the class of the league, had been lopped off the NFC.

Buffalo, despite going 0-for-4 in the final game, is clearly the third best team of the '90s, behind the Cowboys and 49ers.

But in the Super Bowl, only first place counts.

Cowboys to try their luck in Arizona

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys are off to their eighth Super Bowl but the first time they've ever tried to win in Arizona.

The Cowboys have won four Super Bowls, two of them in New Orleans, one in Pasadena at the Rose Bowl and a fourth down south in the Georgia Dome.

Miami has been death on the boys in silver and blue. Dallas has lost three times there. Don't bet the Cowboys when they play in Florida. Take the Dolphins and the points when Dallas plays Jimmy Johnson next season in Miami.

Having been an in-stadium witness to the Cowboys Super Bowl triumphs and tragedies, I'd say the game in Tempe in two weeks against the Pittsburgh Steelers could be one of their most important, at least to their fans.

Of course, the best Dallas Super Bowl will always be the first time they won, 24-3 over Miami in New Orleans at the finish of the 1971 season.

The Cowboys had a reputation then of being "Next Year's Champions."

They had blown Super Bowl V, a game they should have won, losing on a last-second field goal to the Baltimore Colts. Dallas outplayed the Colts but fumble recoveries, tipped passes and strange calls from the zebras doomed Tom Landry's team.

Of course, Dallas had lost twice to the Green Bay Packers in NFL title games in 1966 and 1967.

Fans were beginning to wonder if Dallas would ever win a title. Hello out there, anybody from Minnesota, Buffalo or Denver reading?

The frustration factor was high. I can still remember Bob Lilly's helmet soaring across the field in the Orange Bowl after Jim O'Brien kicked the game winning field goal for the Colts.

The length of the helmet toss will never be equaled by any human. So it was very sweet to see the same Lilly in the locker room, wreathed in cigar smoke from a stogie almost as long as his arm, following the 24-3 win over the Miami Dolphins and Don Shula.

Even the writers didn't mind getting wet when general manager Tex Schramm was tossed into the shower. Of course, Landry got a ride off the field on the shoulders of his players. None was brave enough to toss him in the shower.

This was the big breakthrough for the Cowboys. This released them from their mental shackles and gave the franchise confidence in what it was doing.

Unfortunately for Dallas, the road to a second Vince Lombardi Trophy was blocked by the Steelers.

Dallas lost 21-17 in Miami but bounced back two years later to beat Denver 27-10 in the Big Easy, good ol' New Orleans. This was the game where defensive linemen Harvey Martin and Randy White shared co-MVP honors for the sacking of former Dallas quarterback Craig Morton.

The Steeler shadow hovered again in 1978 with Dallas losing 35-31 in the cursed Orange Bowl, despite the heroics of Captain America, Roger Staubach.

That was the end of the Landry run. He finished 2-3 in Super Bowls.

Then came Jimmy Johnson, the Port Arthur kid who proved he had the correct formula for collecting Super Bowl hardware.

The Cowboys won in 1992 in Pasadena and 1993 in Georgia with Buffalo the victim on both occasions.

Now, Barry Switzer has the Cowboys meeting Pittsburgh again. The Cowboys settled an old score by taking out the Packers 38-27 in the NFC championship game.

To longtime Dallas fans, who have suffered and celebrated with the franchise since 1960, there is still a big score to settle with the Steelers who became the team of the '70s behind Terry Bradshaw and Franco Harris at the expense of the Cowboys. Current Cowboys don't know or care much about the rivalry.

But the fans do. It would be a big payday for the Cowboys to take the Steelers down.

Then that would leave only one championship game skeleton in the closet.

Dallas still owes the Colts franchise one.

Courage, faith help local nurse achieve one of her goals in life

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

In May 1994, Gwen Keeping came to the United States, a single mother of two, with all she owned in three suitcases.

She came to a new country, a new town and a new job, sight unseen. She had nothing to sustain her except her courage and faith that she was doing the right thing.

This same courage and faith, combined with her nursing skills, sustained her following a tragic accident and as a result she was credited with saving the life of a friend and co-worker.

Prior to coming to the United States, Keeping had graduated from St. John's Newfoundland School of Nursing with an associate degree.

"There were no jobs in Canada," said Keeping. "They were laying off nurses who had worked for 20 years."

Keeping felt that her only options were to go back to school and get her bachelor of nursing degree or work casual (on an as-needed basis).

She returned to school, but after a year the grant which was financing her education was cut.

"I had three friends who had found employment in the United States. It seemed like there were lots of nursing positions available. So I figured out how to go about getting in touch with hospitals in the U.S.," Keeping said.

Working on the assumption that similar zip codes were within a given area and using a listing of hospitals prepared by the American Hospital Association, Keeping began calling hospitals in the Panhandle area.

After numerous calls and prospects that did not materialize, Keeping spoke with Pat Ancona at Hereford Regional Medical Center.

"Pat told me that they had an opening in home care, which was my field, and they would put me to work whenever I could get here," said Keeping.

And she did get here, three months later with her two daughters, Michelle and Lindsay, and what possessions they could carry in three suitcases.

The trip provided a lot of "firsts" for Keeping, including her first airplane flight, her first look at what was to be her new home and her first time away from her family.

Leaving her parents, two brothers, five sisters and their families behind was an emotional experience, especially since her parents were preparing for their 50th wedding anniversary in August 1994.

But, Keeping explained, she boarded the plane, found a window seat (and) I took Lindsay by the hand, told her to hold Michelle's hand and I said, 'It's going to be okay.'"

The Keepings were met at the Amarillo Airport by Pat Ancona.

"They had balloons that said welcome and candy when they met us at the airport," said Michelle. "It was neat."

So Keeping and her daughters began a new life that would lead to the dramatic events on a Sunday afternoon in the summer of 1995.

Keeping, her daughters and some friends were on an outing to Ute Lake where Keeping was learning to water ski.

"I had just gotten up on the skis successfully for the first time and when I fell I looked up and saw everyone in the boat cheering for me," said Keeping.

Or so she thought. But the passengers were screaming that Beverly House, a friend and co-worker, had fallen out of the boat and been struck by the propeller.

House was retrieved from the lake by her father, who then pulled Keeping into the boat.

"I was afraid Beverly was gone. Her injuries were extensive and she was bleeding badly. But I applied pressure to stop as much bleeding as I could and I started talking to Beverly.

"I kept telling her she was going to make it. She was a fighter. She wasn't ready to die. And I could see her respond when I yelled.

"I believe the fact that Beverly lived was more a spiritual thing than a nursing thing," said Keeping.

House was taken by ambulance to Tucumcari, then airlifted to Lubbock, where she underwent surgery that successfully repaired most of the damage to her head, arm and chest.

"I believe you can communicate spiritually, on an unconscious level, and even though Beverly doesn't remember my yelling at her, I think she knew it unconsciously and that's why she lived," said Keeping.

Keeping has received a plaque of appreciation from House and she was awarded the Veterans of Foreign Wars National Life Saving Award by the Ladies Auxiliary to Roy Wederbrook VFW Post 4818.

"I feel like I've met a life's goal," said Keeping.

Beside her picture in her yearbook from nursing school is the following quote from Keeping:

"If we as nurses can display a sense of humanity in what we do, a single patient becomes the global village and our hearts its homes."

Keeping family and cat

Gwen Keeping, center, holding the family cat Ruffin and her daughters, Lindsay, 10, left and Michelle, 12, right, came to Hereford from Newfoundland. Keeping, who is a nurse, had not been able to find employment in Canada, so came to the United States in hopes of making a better life for herself and her daughters.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

It has been said that one of the most tragic things about the adult condition is its distance from childhood.

Rick Bordayo, HJH seventh grader participated in the A.L.T.A. Spelling Bee in Dallas Friday. We will relate more about his trip next week. We're proud of you, Rick!

Pink Team teachers Randy Farr, Myrna Buckley, Sandy Maldonado, David Vincent; Encore teachers Tammy Summersgill, Terry Zimmerman, Susan Perrin and Sarah Lawson presented a program on academic teaming to the Borger Middle School on Jan. 15. After the presentation, the staff at Borger decided to implement academic teaming on their campus to improve the quality of education for their students. It's great to see other districts "follow suit" to programs that we have found to be successful.

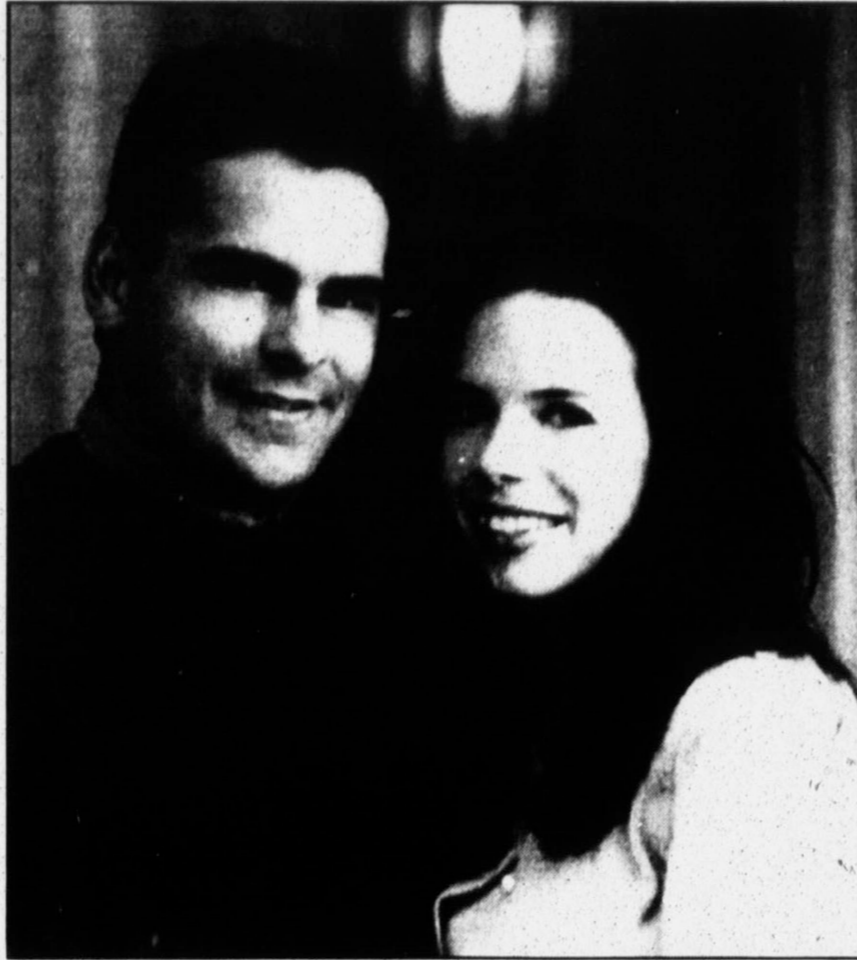

Bridge class is continuing their framing and matting business. They do an excellent job and are learning life skills as they work.

HJH has been selected to participate in two field testing opportunities. These will be for a select group of eighth grade students. One group will be a NAEP project and the other, an eighth grade class yet to be determined, will be a TEA field test. This will be done during the mornings of Jan. 23, 24, and 25. As soon as we know the names of these students, we will notify the staff, (and the students!).

Two professional journals that teachers find helpful are the TSTA Advocate and CTA Classroom Teacher. These journals offer innovative ideas for classroom use on a regular basis. The December-January Advocate has input on block scheduling and TAAS writing. HEA and CTA members will share these journals with those who are interested.

My husband, Don, and I appreciate the continued support and encouragement from all of you dear friends. He is presently at High Plains Baptist Hospital overcoming a white blood count deficiency. He was at St. Anthony's last week getting "re-hydrated." At this time, he is improving and has regained the twinkle in his eyes. We cherish your continued support and prayers.

Pope John Paul II has called for 1996 to be the year of the child. He speaks of finding our way back through the lives of those closest to creation and of valuing children as our road maps. Perhaps we can shorten that distance between adulthood and childhood in the process.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: When I moved into my new apartment, I was disappointed to find there wasn't much room for my cat's litter box. I didn't want to put it in full view, so I came up with a great idea!

I put an old towel in the bottom of my bathtub and placed the litter box on top of that. I showed Molly where it was and that's all she needed. She used it immediately.

It is out of the way and hidden by the shower curtain. All I have to do is remove the towel and box, then rinse the tub before using it. — Sarah Kaynor, Houston, Texas

Your hint will be a hit with cat owners and it solves the problem for lots of people who live in small apartments.

When it's time to eat, insert the lettuce in the sandwich to prevent it from becoming soggy. — A California Reader, Escondido, Calif.

DRY SWEATERS

Dear Heloise: Finding a place to dry knit suits and sweaters can be so frustrating, so I've come up with this problem solver.

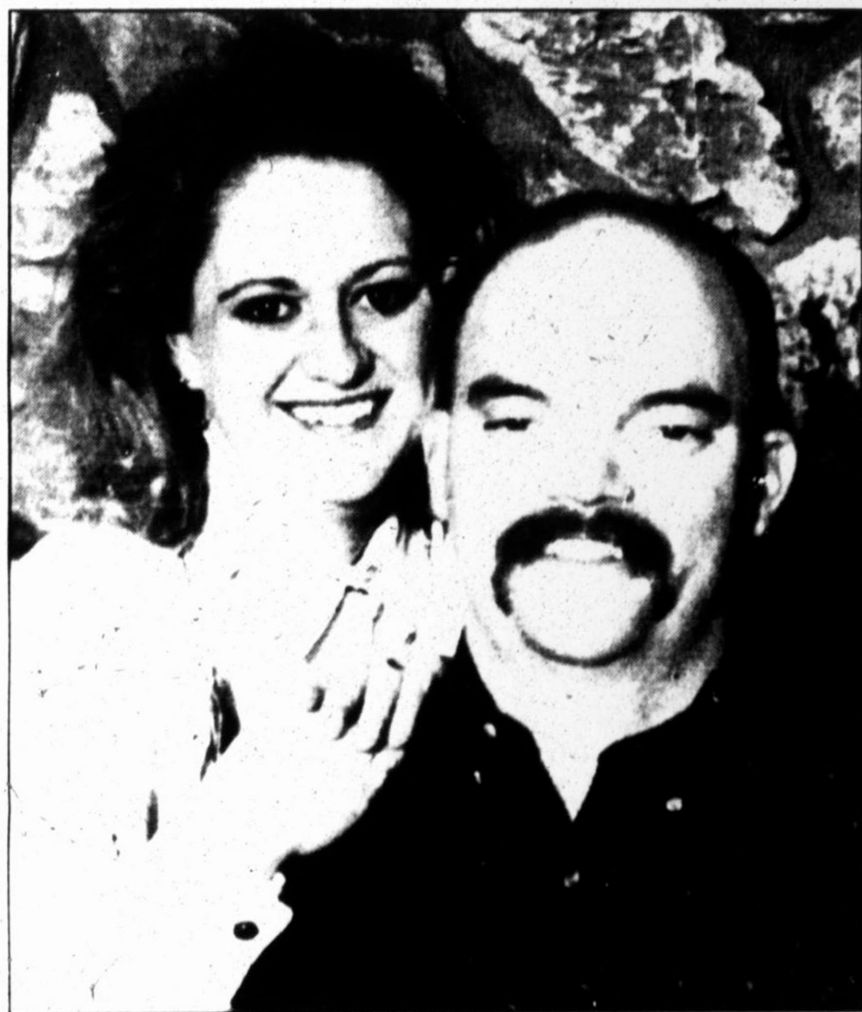

Use your ironing board! Cover it with dry-cleaner plastic bags, then put some towels over the plastic. Set it in your bathtub and place the knits on the towels.

A great solution for those heavy, flat-dry knits. — Ann Orzechowski, Springdale, Pa.

PACK LUNCH

Dear Heloise: When packing lunch sandwiches with mayo and/or mustard and lettuce, keep the lettuce crisp by keeping it in a separate bag.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Engagement Announced

Ms. Cozette Dearing of Bosque Farms, N.M. and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Page of Grady, N.M. are happy to announce the engagement of their children Amie Sue and Rodney Bill. The couple will be united in marriage on Feb. 10, in the Church of Christ in Clovis. The bride elect is currently employed at Strebeck Autoplex, in Portales and the prospective bridegroom is presently employed at T&M Fertilizer in Clovis. Page is a former resident of the Bootleg Community.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My coach says I have jumper's knee. I need that like I need a hole in the head, especially since I am in the best basketball season of my career. What can be done for this? — H.K.

ANSWER: Jumper's knee is inflammation of the tendon that runs from the kneecap to the topmost part of the lower leg, the tibia. You feel the pain below the kneecap, right? You also might get a twinge of pain when you get up and straighten the leg after sitting immobile for awhile. Running and jumping become agonizing.

It's usually a sign of overuse without sufficient rest. For 72 hours, you need rest and the standard treatment: ice and compression with an elastic bandage. During the 72 hours, try to keep the leg elevated. After the three days, use warm packs and continue resting for two to three weeks. Anti-inflammatories such as aspirin or ibuprofen can help matters.

Given your situation, I advise a professional evaluation. You don't want to pick on jumper's knee when there are so many other conditions with similar symptoms.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Does exercise make you lose your appetite? I say it does; my wife says it doesn't. — B.L.

ANSWER: Strenuous exercise can suppress appetite, but only for a short time. I can't give you an exact time frame. It varies with the individual.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Whenever I read about how walking is such a good exercise, I am enthused, but I have a problem. How much walking do you mean? And can I just amble around? — J.A.

ANSWER: A leisurely stroll is better than nothing, but you should try to put some effort into walking to get real results.

For starters, try for a pace of four miles an hour. That is about one mile in 15 minutes. It is relatively fast, the equivalent of a hurried walk when trying to get somewhere quickly.

For distance, start with a mile or even a half-mile if that's all you can manage. In a month or so, you might work up to four miles, an hour's walk. That is more than enough to start getting real aerobic benefits from walking.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters.

Thank You

MRS. DAVID JOHNSON
...nee Robyn Sublett

Sublett, Johnson exchange vows in afternoon ceremony at home

Robyn Sublett and David Johnson of Hereford exchanged wedding vows on Jan. 6, during an afternoon ceremony in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sublett of Hereford.

Charles Greenawalt, Superintendent of the Hereford Independent School District, officiated.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Johnson of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Elliot of Hartley.

The home was decorated with tulle bows and holly tied with gold and green ribbon.

It featured trees adorned with crystal lights, gold bows and gold pine cones. A holiday wreath with crystal lights and a gold Christmas plaid bow finished the look.

Renee Middleton of Amarillo served her sister as matron of honor. Randy Johnson, brother of the groom, was best man.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a two-piece floor length gown. The ivory organza blouse featured a pleated portrait collar and wrap around belt that was fastened in front with a bow.

The broomstick straight skirt was made of metallic gold.

Her veil was made of ivory tulle fashioned with gold pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white lilies, white roses, gold pine cones and evergreen tied with gold and green ribbon.

In keeping with tradition, she wore a 1974 penny in her shoe and for something borrowed she wore her maternal grandmother's pearl necklace and her paternal grandmother's pearl earrings. She wore a blue garter for something blue.

The matron of honor wore black dress slacks with a Christmas plaid jacket. She carried white lilies with baby's breath tied with a gold and green bow.

A reception was held in the home following the ceremony.

A white two-tiered cake covered with gold and green bows, white lilies, gold pine cones, baby's breath and evergreen accented the main table.

Gold flatware and crystal appointments were used to serve guests.

The bride is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School. She is currently employed by the City of Hereford.

The groom is a 1991 graduate of HHS and is presently employed by Hereford Bi-Products in the Pet Specialty Division.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Hereford.

'Trendy' fashions for men don't have to be outrageous

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Giorgio Armani closed the latest round of Italian men's fashion shows with a classic, youthful collection that proved you don't have to be outrageous to be trendy.

Wednesday's show, which included the Armani label plus second lines Emporio, Jeans, Golf and Neve ski attire, had none of the gimmicks that have invaded the men's fall-winter 1996-1997 runway: transparent fabrics, high heels or super skinny styles.

Some shows have been so extreme they could be an ode to drag fashion.

While few would deny the influence of fashion trends on even the most conservative male dresser - the necktie, for instance, has become optional except for formal social or business obligations - the question remains: How much do men really care about clothes?

The folding of Vogue Hommes, Conde Nast's trendy menswear magazine, is one indication that men do not gobble up fashion as avidly as women do.

"There is a trend toward men dressing up and stepping out, but you can't exaggerate," Dawn Mello, president of Bergdorf-Goodman, said after the show.

Next season, the Armani man will wear loose-fitting pants and a comfortable jacket in exquisitely soft fabrics. His favorite shades will be grays, blues and tans. Sweaters and pullovers will be tight. Shirts need not be white. They can be dark blue, brown and even black. Whether he wears a tie or not is his own business.

In a recent interview, Armani called a lot of what is going on in men's fashion "disgusting," accusing some designers of being more interested in "shocking" than making wearable clothes.

Another pillar of Italian style, Valentino, agrees.

"It's ugly fashion which is in danger of dying," he said before the presenting his Oliver and boutique lines in a film studio Tuesday.

Based on a Jon Voight-type urban cowboy, the Valentino collection offers high-heeled boots, string ties and holster belts. But these accessories just add spark to Valentino's traditional conservative style, as do the pastel-colored suede loafers.

Certainly a trend setter, Tom Ford for Gucci calls his winter style "modern classicism."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll bet you have already received several hundred letters from readers like me who were stunned by your insensitivity. I am referring to your response to the woman whose husband had been looking for a job for three years. You said her letter was "downright depressing" and suggested that her "negative attitude" had a lot to do with her bad luck.

Get real. I know Ph.D.s who have lost their jobs and are working for $6 an hour. You are going to hear plenty about your unsympathetic response. - John S. in Durham, N.C.

DEAR JUDY: I did indeed "hear plenty," and when 6,000 people write and tell me I'm out of the loop, I'd better take another look. Meanwhile, here's what my readers had to say:

From Wilton, Calif.: You are clearly out of touch with the sinking middle class. I was once a corporate president, and now, due to "downsizing," I am working for minimum wage. Welcome to the real world.

Troy, Mich.: My husband worked for an advertising agency for 23 years. He was only 49 when the company decided to "downsize" and suggested he take early retirement. He's been job-hunting for three years. Now do you get it?

Moline, Ill.: My son has two degrees, one in business, another in accounting. He, too, was downsized and can't find a job that puts his talents to use. He's now delivering flowers for a wholesale florist.

Davenport, Iowa: When was the last time you dipped into your retirement savings to pay the $650 monthly premium to keep your health insurance in force? Do you know what it's like to send out 125 resumes and not get a nibble?

Hartford, Conn.: Dear Marie Antoinette: Millions of people in the United States and Canada are working for peanuts to create millionaires and billionaires. This is the staff revolutions are made of.

Bellevue, Wash.: Eight families in our apartment complex have been hit with layoffs in the past three years. They are all degreed, middle-aged and attractive. You're lucky to have a permanent job, Ann. Shame on you.

Peoria, Ill.: There is a new class in America -- the Educated Working Poor. They won't be able to retire or leave anything to their children or grandkids. There goes the American dream.

Cincinnati: I was "downsized" (a polite word for canned) out the door after 21 years of faithful service. Management had changed hands, and my years of loyalty meant nothing to the new crowd. My replacement was a lad my son's age. Just sign me "Washed up at 47."

San Diego: With a master's degree and optimism, I applied for a job in urban planning and architecture. I soon discovered that the few jobs that existed were given to relatives of top management.

Philadelphia: No jobs? Nonsense! The quality of entry-level workers is pathetic. I've interviewed hundreds of college graduates who can't read, can't spell and can't do simple math. Worse yet, many can't pass a drug test. That's the real picture. Got it?

DEAR PHIL: The "real picture" often depends on your vantage point. Millions of competent people are out of work. Downsizing is a fact of life, and I feel for those who want to work and can't find jobs. Hello, Secretary of Labor Robert Reich. Any suggestions?

Forget to save some of your favorite Ann Landers columns? "Nuggets and Doozies" is the answer. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Girl Scouts 'Reach for the Stars' by participating in cookie sale

Hereford Girl Scouts kicked off the annual Cookie Sale Friday. The girls will take orders through Feb. 5. "This year's theme is 'Reach for the Stars,' because the Girl Scout Cookie Sale helps girls learn they can go far, no matter what their goal," said Maggie Henry, volunteer chair of the Cookie Sale committee for the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council.

Girls build self-confidence through the Cookie Sale as they develop skills in setting goals, meeting the public, handling money and following through on a commitment, she added. Last year's new fat-free Cinnamon Oatmeal Raisin Bar, which proved such a success, is back this year. Other favorite varieties returning are Thin Mints, Peanut Butter Sandwich, Peanut Butter Patties, Shortbread, Lemon Pastry Cremes, and Caramel Delites, plus Strawberries 'n Creme with a lower fat content.

All proceeds from Girl Scout Cookie sales stay in the Panhandle and are used to help fund troop activities, council programs, camps, volunteer training and materials, Henry said. Girls also earn "Cookie Currency," which they may spend on council activities, camp fees, uniforms, national registration fee, handbooks and other items from the council shop. Cookies are still $2.50 a box, and girls will deliver them Feb. 27-March 15.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Anyone who has a mother, father, brother or sister who has aspired to great things knows what it is like to have others look at you with expectation in their eyes. To some extent you are expected to follow in their footsteps or to aspire to your own greatness.

Being the son of Billy Graham, Franklin felt those same pressures and expectations. Franklin recalls his reaction to being a Graham in his book Rebel With a Cause and states that it wasn't until he was 22 years old that he was "finally comfortable being a Graham."

Franklin has good childhood memories such as the father-son hunting and exploring trips in the mountains around their home. And then there are other memories, such as death threats toward his dad and tourists peering in the windows of their house trying to see what life was like in the Graham home.

Franklin didn't know what he wanted to do, but he knew he did not want to become another Billy Graham. As a young adult Franklin's daredevil, destructive life resulted in him being kicked out of college and in trouble with the law.

Then one night deep in the Middle East, Franklin's life changed as he came face to face with one who makes an eternal difference.

Franklin says, "If there's anything special about my story, it's not because I'm the son of Billy and Ruth Graham, but because I'm a son of the living God."

Joni Eareckson Tada's Heaven: Your Real Home is another inspirational treat. A diving accident in 1967 left Joni a quadriplegic, paralyzed from the shoulders down.

Joni has learned to paint and draw by holding brushes and pencils in her teeth. Living her life in a wheelchair since high school, Joni has strived to pass on encouragement to other people with disabilities and their families through JAF (Joni and Friends) Ministries.

Heaven offers a refreshing and faith filled picture of the glorious promises waiting for all believers. Joni "paints a picture of heaven as the home of our hearts, the place where we will find the fulfillment of our longings and a reality that is more substantial and lasting than anything found on earth."

According to Joni "the most beautiful displays of earth's glory--towering thunderheads above a wheat field or the view of the Grand Canyon from the South rim--are only rough sketches of heaven. Earth's best is only a dim reflection, a preliminary rendering of the glory that will one day be revealed."

"This life is not forever, nor is it the best life that will ever be. The fact is that believers are headed for heaven. It is reality."

According to J.L. Packer a professor of theology at Regent College, "Joni has a unique gift for stating the profoundest wisdom in the vividest and most warmhearted way." After reading just a few pages the reader comes away with a warm satisfied smile. Just think what reading the whole book will do.

Among the fiction titles you will find Hunter's Moon by Karen Robards. Set in Lexington, Kentucky, serious horse country, Molly Ballard, age 24, struggles to support her younger brothers and sisters by grooming horses at a local stable.

FBI agent Will Lyman is in town to investigate a racehorse-fixing scheme, and catches Molly stealing cash from the stable. Will lets Molly off with a warning if she promises to help him find the culprits.

The catch is she must pose as Will's girlfriend to ward off any suspicion. With grave misgivings and gritted teeth Molly complies. When a bizarre series of animal mutilations occur Molly realizes the danger which surrounds herself and her family.

Clive Cussler's Shock Wave was on a waiting list even before it arrived so you know it has got to be good. Dirk Pitt is on an expedition to find a deadly plague that is killing dolphins and seals in the Weddell Sea, when he finds Maeve Fletcher and a small party of passengers abandoned by a cruise ship.

When Pitt uncovers the cause of the plague, he also discovers that Arthur Dorsett, Maeve's father, and her two sisters are responsible because of their diamond mining technology. Struggling through the Antarctic storms, hunger and thirst, Pitt's relentless drive to survive brings him to a final, spine chilling confrontation with Arthur Dorsett.

Behind the Lines is W.E.B. Griffin's most dramatic story yet. Reserve Lieutenant Colonel of the Corps of Engineers, Fertig was reported MIA on Luzon years ago.

Now reports filtering out have suggested that "General" Fertig has set himself up as a guerrilla leader harassing the Japanese on the island of Mindanao. Marine Lieutenant Ken McCoy has been given the mission of sneaking behind enemy lines and finding Fertig.

With a motley crew of the "dirty half-dozen" McCoy steals into enemy territory and encounters more than he had bargained for.

Names in the News

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP)-The pink security wall media baron Walter Annenberg has erected around his desert estate has some of his neighbors seeing red.

Annenberg, the 87-year-old founder of TV Guide, is putting up the 7-foot security wall to further shield the 205-acre Sunnylands estate, which has been a secluded getaway to presidents Nixon, Reagan and Bush.

Some people say the pink wall clashes with the desert hues.

"I think it's ugly, and it just doesn't belong in the desert," said neighbor Charles Lagerstrom. "I think it's just gone one step too far."

The nearly mile-long wall will replace a diseased hedge. The estate also is protected by armed guards, dogs, cameras and a chain-link fence.

Estate manager Dennis Osborne had an explanation for the color - Annenberg's wife, Leonore, is partial to pink.

— YOUR EYES —

Crossed Eyes? Maybe Not

Babies are not born with fully developed eye muscle control. That's why parents need not get upset if the eyes of an infant under six months seem to cross or turn occasionally.

But if the crossing continues, or seems to increase in frequency, it's advisable to bring the baby in for an examination by the eye doctor. The optometrist has the expertise and equipment to check even the youngest eyes.

Prompt treatment is important; the sooner it starts, the better the change of correcting the problem. The child will not outgrow crossed eyes or an eye that turns outward to the side of the head. But prompt treatment—combined therapy with both prescription lenses and vision training—is often successful. The child can learn to use both eyes together so that they remain straight and properly aligned. Surgery is reserved as the last resort, not recommended unless all other treatment options are unsuccessful.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Picking A Partner

Ben had a good idea. When he took his idea to his employers, they weren't interested. "Business is good," they said. "We don't want to invest in an untested area."

However, the idea kept nagging Ben. He watched industry trends and knew the time was right. Ben resigned and worked his idea into a business plan. Then one evening at a church dinner he casually mentioned the idea to a recently retired executive.

Immediately the executive expressed his interest. Was Ben looking for partners? Did Ben need capital? Ben said yes, and they met the next night to discuss the idea. The meeting went well and the executive suggested bringing in a third partner. Ben wasn't sure at first, but finally agreed because he needed additional capital.

Each partner received one-third ownership. Ben got his third for the idea and industry knowledge. The other partners supplied capital and management expertise for their shares.

The company started quickly and early production was strong. Led by Ben's knowledge of the industry and his marketing ability, the company established solid accounts quickly and profits came early.

Then unexpectedly one morning early in the second year, Ben's partners fired him from his own company. The partners controlled two-thirds of the stock and they wanted Ben out. Ben kept his stock and demanded his third of the profit. The partners immediately raised their salaries and the leftover profit was meager.

Ben hired an attorney, but was told the partners were within their legal rights. Ben was out and had no legal recourse.

Common problems

Situations like Ben's happen every day. I've watched more than a dozen partnerships come apart, and it isn't a pretty sight. It is sad to see a business deal turn friends into bitter enemies.

Common causes of these breakups include lack of planning, unclear objectives, lack of capital and no written agreements. However, the most common reason is simply that the partners themselves are not compatible.

You should select your partners for their skills, experience and compatibility factors. Good partners should have similar work ethics, ambition, motivation and personality attributes.

Successful partner attributes

Here are some attributes that partners should possess.

- Honesty and integrity. All successful relationships are based on trust. No partnerships can last long-term if one partner is dishonest.
- Willingness to work hard. Though no two people work alike, each partner must be committed to the cause. You should define job responsibilities before you begin.

• Competence and skills. Each partner must bring useful expertise to the business. Money can start a business, but ability keeps it going.

• A good team player. A partnership, regardless of the number of partners, is a team sport. Partners must work independently when necessary, together when beneficial.

• Good people skills. Good partners get along well with all types of people. They treat others with respect and are enjoyable to be around.

• Can control their emotions. All partnerships will have periods of stress and strife. Good partners control their anger, keep cool under pressure and don't overreact.

• Communication skills. Everyone profits by improving listening, speaking and thinking skills. Listening with understanding is the first step in solving problems.

• Works toward "win-win" solutions. A good partner will see both sides of every situation. They are adept at proposing solutions where everyone comes out ahead.

• Ability to organize and prioritize. Good partners stay focused on accomplishing the most important tasks. When you organize and prioritize your efforts, everyone gets more done.

• Willing to admit errors. "I was wrong," may be one of the least used phrases in partnerships. However, it is a critical element in healing disagreements and going forward toward your common goals.

Minister hopes his empire will become model

By KARYN HUNT
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - When the Rev. Cecil Williams was a child, one of his favorite games was "funeral."

He and his six siblings would kill cockroaches, round up decaying rats and gather stiff birds to provide them with proper burials. Williams always played the role of pastor.

"We were having two or three funerals every day," he remembers with a laugh.

Unlike most services in his hometown of San Angelo, Texas, Williams' make-believe funerals were integrated.

He would assign each of his brothers and sisters a race - red, yellow, white or black. Together, they would sing hymns, pray and give their insect or rodent friends a proper send-off.

Williams went on to become a preacher of national stature. His goal is to create a model that churches of all denominations can use to integrate their congregations.

Williams ministers to San Francisco's largest congregation - nearly 6,000 homeless people, prostitutes, drug addicts, gang members, Jews, Muslims and Buddhists, who crowd into Glide Memorial United Methodist Church every day for free meals, self-help classes, sermons and inspiration.

The church's members didn't take well to Williams' egalitarian views, but he defied their prejudice and invited in the destitute from the strip clubs, X-rated movie theaters and flop houses that surrounded them in the city's infamous Tenderloin.

Within a month, he was involved in a battle to protect prostitutes from police brutality and became active in the homosexual community. Eventually, he began offering classes to help people kick drug and alcohol habits.

Those grew to include 37 programs teaching everything from computers to anger management.

Glide eventually became the city's most comprehensive nonprofit provider of human services, feeding meals to 3,500 people who every day form a line that snakes around the block.

Adding to the services it offers, Glide will break ground in the fall for a $9 million homeless shelter next door.

Williams, now 66, hopes his empire will one day become a model and training center for other churches, where ministers, priests and rabbis can learn to promote the diversity and tolerance he thinks is essential to the nation's survival.

"It seems to me that Sunday morning is still the most segregated hour in America," Williams said. "That really does speak against what the church should be doing. I'd like to have an exodus occur where the churches begin to move to a real critical point in their lives where they will become more inclusive and stop worrying about a person's sexual identity or a person's color, a person's class or whatever. We've got to move beyond that."

Patients say weather can affect their health

Could this be true or is it just an old wives' tale?

By LYNN BULMAHN
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas - With the cold blast of winter storms, people may say they're "under the weather." Some say they can predict a cold spell or rain storm when an old injury flares up. Or they may blame the dampness and cold for their aches and pains.

Is it true or is it an "old wives' tale" that weather can affect one's health?

Dr. William Shay of Providence Medical Clinic says he has many patients who say the weather aggravates their condition.

"Sore throats, coughing, bronchitis kind of come with the season," he said.

Shay said a person's immune system doesn't change with the seasons, but viruses seem to be more active when the weather is colder.

"I think certainly that cold weather affects a lot of things," said Dr. Michael Stones of Robinson Medical Clinic. "Cold weather activates your body's mechanism to conserve body heat."

To preserve heat in the trunk of the body, he said, the blood vessels going to the limbs may be constricted.

While this helps maintain the proper temperature to the vital organs, it can cause peripheral body parts - such as the arms and legs, hands and feet, to ache. Both joints and muscles can be affected.

Decreased sunlight may contribute to depression, Stones notes. Doctors have also found that people's sexual urges are lessened on winter days when there is less sunlight.

There also may be a basis for the claim that arthritic joints hurt more in cold weather, said Carey Dalton, executive director of the Arthritis Foundation's Heart of Texas branch office.

"Temperature affects a lot of people with arthritis," she said. "It makes them hurt."

Arthritis affects the joints of the body, making them stiff and painful. Cold seems to make the pain flare up.

According to a fact sheet issued by the Arthritis Foundation, weather or climate does not cause the disease itself. Nor does cold weather make the disease better or worse, but it may affect symptoms.

Weather factors that may increase pain and stiffness include cold temperatures, dampness from rain or snow, a fall in barometric pressure and a rise in humidity just before a storm.

And, yes, living in a hot, dry climate may improve arthritis symptoms for some people, the fact sheet goes on to say.

But before you pack up for a move to the desert, the fact sheet says, you should discuss it with your doctor - and take short visits at different seasons of the year to see how you feel.

In the meantime, Dalton said, a lot of arthritis patients find they get relief from taking warm showers.

Shay said he tells his patients to keep aching joints warm with a heating pad.

Many times, patients complain that their old injuries flare up in cold weather.

"A lot of my patients come in and say their knees hurt more in the cold weather," said Dr. Brett Bolte, director of rehabilitation medicine at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center. "Or they'll predict when the weather is going to change because of a previously injured joint."

He said, however, that these are subjective complaints and it would be difficult to prove or disprove whether there is a scientific basis for them.

"There's not a lot of scientific evidence to verify what people are saying," Bolte said.

Scanning the Internet, Bolte did find a scientific article in a 1994 Scandinavian Journal of Rheumatology on a study of the effect of weather conditions in acute gouty arthritis.

"What they found was that the average temperature was a little bit higher prior to the attack of gout," Bolte said. "The barometric pressure was higher and the humidity was higher than the day of the flare-up."

If the barometric pressure then decreased with a cold front, he said, the pressure inside a person's body could possibly be higher than the barometric pressure outdoors. This might cause the joints to swell more.

Stones said when a pressure front comes through, it may cause sinus problems or headaches. This can happen anytime of the year. He's even experienced it in the summer.

A pressure differential will affect a plugged up space anywhere in the body, including the joints or sinuses, he said.

If the pressure inside the body differs from barometric pressure outside, a person may feel under the weather.

The differences in pressure will "make it bulge out or suck in," regardless where a body cavity is located, Stones said.

Still, not all doctors are convinced the weather's relation to how we feel is anything more than a widespread belief we have.

"I don't know if it comes under the adage of 'an apple a day keeps the doctor away' or not," Bolte said. "It's hard to say if it's an old wives' tale that people repeat because everyone says it, or whether it's really true."

He said warm joints seem to flex better, and wonders if cold wind chills affect a painful joint that much. But, at the same time, the standby treatment is to put a cold pack on a painful knee, he notes.

"It would be neat if we could prove this theory one way or another," Bolte said. "But I don't think we've ever been able to do that yet."

Globes to honor Connery for his career achievement

BY JOHN CROOK

Academy Award winner Sean Connery (The Untouchables) will receive this year's Cecil B. DeMille Award during NBC's telecast of the Golden Globe Awards on Sunday, Jan. 21.

That career achievement award, as well as the nominees in categories of film and TV excellence, are among the few details already confirmed by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, which presents the annual awards.

"Everything about this show books late because the nominations come only a month before the show itself," explains Gene Weed, who has produced and directed every Globe telecast since 1982. "It's not like we've got three months to put it together."

"The fact that it's grown from a syndicated broadcast on a three-day or so delay, to the live Turner coverage of the last five or six years, now back to NBC, shows the importance and the value of the show."

The NBC telecast — the first by a U.S. broadcast network in more than a decade — also proves that the Globes and the Hollywood Foreign Press Association have recovered from the blow to their credibility in an early '80s scandal, when Pia Zadora received an award after her husband bankrolled a lavish press junket. CBS, which had been carrying the Globes telecasts, dropped them.

(Weed acknowledges he's heard the rumors about the Zadora incident, but says he can't confirm that CBS' decision was directly influenced by it).

In the past several years, however, the Globes have returned to their former luster and currently are regarded as a bellwether for the Oscar nominations, which follow later in the year. There's not a single bogus entry in this year's lineup for best motion picture drama: Apollo 13, Braveheart, The Bridges of Madison County, Leaving Las Vegas and Sense and Sensibility.

Because a win, or even a nomination, can draw invaluable press attention to an Oscar contender, the Golden Globes annually attract an even more stellar crowd than the Oscars and the Emmys. There's another reason as well, Weed points out.

"The interesting fact about this show is that it does pay tribute to both motion pictures and television in the same form, in the same room, at the same time," he explains. "That doesn't happen anywhere else."

"That's why it's kind of become known as the Hollywood party of the year. It's an opportunity for those people who do motion pictures and television to gather together ... and salute each other."

While leading performers in TV series are put into categories that resemble those for the Emmys, supporting players from all TV formats — series, miniseries and movies — are lumped into one category.

As a result, this year's race for TV's best supporting actor will see last year's Emmy winner, David Hyde Pierce (Frasier), competing against Tom Hulce for the TV movie The Heidi Chronicles — in which Hulce re-creates the role that Pierce played in the original Broadway production of Wendy Wasserstein's play.

A returning feature of this year's telecast is the backstage interviews by Dick Clark, Weed says.

"Dick is incredibly well versed in the industry and these people all know him, or feel as if they do," he says. "The first year that we did this, Al Pacino came running over and said, 'Dick Clark! I finally get to meet Dick Clark!' It was a very big deal for him."

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
An optimistic attitude will help you through a difficult situation this week. Believe in yourself, and you will succeed. Be aware of the location of valuable possessions. Careless behavior could lead to loss, especially later in the week. A conversation on Wednesday proves insightful.

Your desire to relax may conflict with a need to get things done. Allow yourself to relax and you'll feel fully charged to tackle all that you have to do. A family member's good news will have an effect on you, too. Time to celebrate! Good news comes in the mail.

LEO - July 23/August 23
If a friend is the source of disappointment this week, don't let it get you down. There may be more to the story than meets the eye. Seek professional advice before entering into any serious agreements or contracts. There could be some relevant information you should know.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Keep a close watch on spending, especially if there's a major purchase coming up. Feeling a little tense lately? If so, an extra trip to the gym could be the healthy remedy you need. Looking for love? It could find you when you least expect it. Be on the lookout for a Cancer of the opposite sex. Good news is on the way.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
An unreliable work associate could leave you with an unexpected work load. Take heart, your tenacious attitude is sure to get you through. An abundance of social invitations will make the weekend more interesting. You may have to disappoint one friend in order to see another.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
If you're not careful of what you say this week, you could find yourself with your foot placed firmly in your mouth. Be aware of not only what you say but how you say it, too. It may be time to raise the white flag in a longtime fall out with a friend — especially if (s)he's a Leo.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Working hard and playing hard will make the week fly by. Your social life will be more active than usual and you could be in for some special surprises — especially in the romance department. There could be some conflict in family affairs. Don't be a pushover.

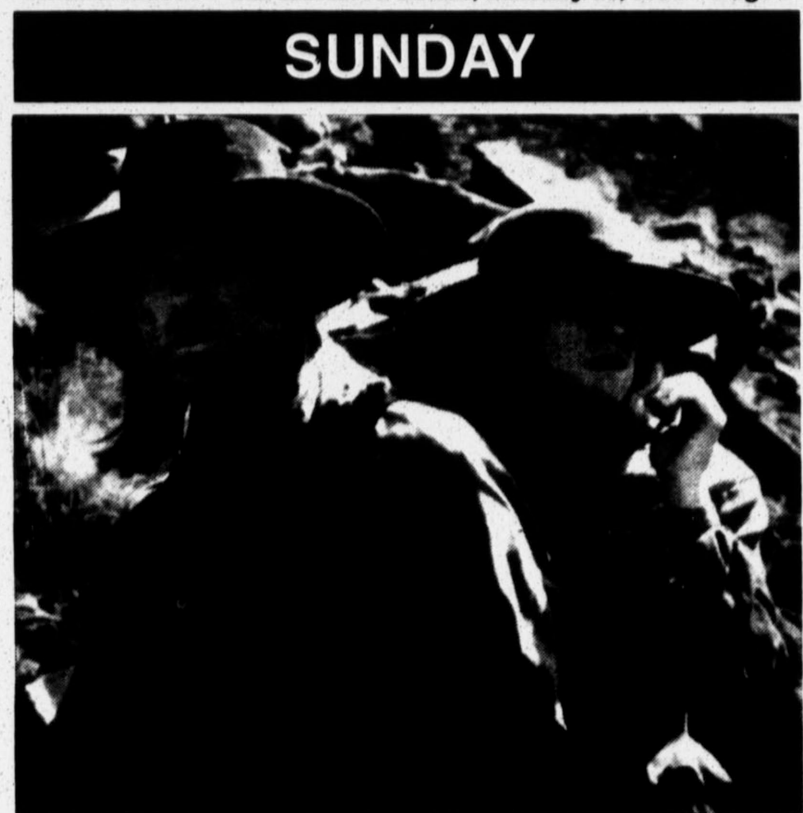

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
A younger family member will want to spend some quality time with you. Even if it doesn't suit your schedule, make the time. It will be well worth it. A positive attitude will lead you to a special goal. A gamble could reap rich returns for just a small outlay. Luck is on your side.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
An ongoing argument with a family member will only end if you change your approach. Otherwise, you'll just continue in an endless circle of disagreement. The results of a recent test are likely to put a big smile on your face. There will be reason to celebrate this weekend!

IN FOCUS

Rick Schroder stars as an attorney hired to represent a man accused of murder in Innocent Victims, a two-part movie premiering Sunday, Jan. 21, and ending Monday, Jan. 22, on ABC. A young woman and her children are murdered and circumstantial evidence points to Tim Hennis (John Corbett). Convinced he is innocent, Tim's parents (Hal Holbrook and Rue McClanahan) vow to do whatever it takes to clear his name. They hire two lawyers (Schroder and Tom Irwin) to help their son prove his innocence.

Tess Harper stars as Julia, a middle-aged woman desperately denying she has Alzheimer's disease, in The Road to Galveston, a USA Network movie premiering Wednesday, Jan. 24. Julia and two other women with the disease are taken in by Jordan (Cicely Tyson), a widow who needs funds to keep her home. Together, the four women come to a better understanding of the disease and of themselves. Based on a true story, the film also stars Piper Laurie, James McDaniel and Starletta DuPois.

WB Network takes dramatic turn with new Savannah

BY AMY HIBBERT

Since it's been on the air, The WB Network has specialized in comedy. Now, it's taking a serious turn. Savannah, a new dramatic series from Aaron Spelling (Melrose Place, Dynasty), finds a place in WB's mid-season lineup. The drama debuts with a two-hour movie Sunday, Jan. 21, before settling into its regular time slot Feb. 4.

This new show revolves around three young Southern women, who share a lifelong friendship.

Shannon Sturges stars as the naive Reese Burton, who remains unselfish despite her life of wealth and privilege. Peyton Richards (Jamie Luner) is a street-wise woman whose mother (Wendy Phillips) works for the Burton family. Peyton's impetuous nature seems certain to test the bonds of friendship - especially when she goes after her friend Reese's fiance (George Eads).

Lane MacKenzie (Robyn Lively) is the levelheaded one, who remains loyal to her friends despite a recent run of bad luck.

The two-hour movie begins with Reese preparing for her upcoming wedding, while a jealous Peyton looks on. Meanwhile, Lane returns home and almost immediately bumps into an old friend (David Gail).

Garth Ancier, the head of programming for WB, says in a press release he believes the dramatic angle is a good move.

"We believe there's a tremendous opportunity to attract female viewers with a one-hour drama opposite the traditional networks' three competing two-hour movies, much the way Fox has attracted a male-oriented audience with its one-hour comedy block ... on Sunday nights."

Ancier says he thinks a series by Spelling will help their ratings.

"Mr. Spelling was instrumental in the success of the third network, the fourth network and we believe he will be an integral part of the success of the fifth network, as well," he comments.

The friendship that binds the three women together is strong, but only time will tell if it is durable enough to withstand the pressure of ratings.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Please help resolve our family crisis. I say Barbara Hale of Perry Mason is the mother of William Katt. My sons say, "No way." Please help. --Shirley P., Michigan City, Ind.

A: Hale is, indeed, the very doting mother of Katt.

Q: I'm almost positive there was a show that featured Patty Duke and Richard Crenna as the parents and Helen Hunt and Anthony Edwards as their children. Can you tell me the name of the show and when it ran? --Becky Russell, Green Bay, Wisc.

A: During the 1982-83 season on ABC, It Takes Two starred Duke as Assistant District Attorney Molly Quinn, who was married to Dr. Sam Quinn (Crenna), a Chicago surgeon. Hunt played their shy daughter, Lisa, and Edwards played son Andy, an aspiring rock musician.

Q: Why are so many shows situated in New York? Do the creators have something against cities like Portland, Atlanta and Houston? --Jan B. Moffett, Charlotte, N.C.

A: There's no short answer, but one of the most common reasons is the shows' creators are writing what they know. Friends co-creators Marta Kauffman and David Crane based that hit series on their own experiences as chums in New York. Similarly, both Jerry Seinfeld (Seinfeld) and Paul Reiser (Mad About You) have a distinct New York mind-set, even though they currently live and work in Los Angeles.

Actually, there are far fewer shows set in New York these days than in the early years of television. Atlanta has been the locale for both Designing Women and Matlock. Dick Van Dyke's 1971-74 sitcom was set in Phoenix, Ariz. The Mary Tyler Moore

Barbara Hale

Show took place in Minneapolis. Frasier is set in Seattle. The list goes on.

Q: Settle a bet: Are Blair Underwood of L.A. Law and Don Franklin of seaQuest 2032 really the same person? --Bill Vasquez, Oceano, Calif.

A: No. Q: I know I saw Dale Midkiff (Visitors of the Night) in an earlier series. What was it? --Edith Ingalls, Lebanon, N.H.

A: Midkiff starred in a short-lived NBC drama series called Dream Street in 1989, but is best known for playing Capt. Darien Lambert in Time Trax, a 1992-94 syndicated sci-fi series.

Q: I say Jay North (Dennis the Menace) starred in a movie in which he was looking for his father in India. My friend says Jay made no movies. Who's right? --Karl Kittsteiner, Jackson, Mich.

Jake needs a new woman on AW

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Candace: In regard to Another World, I feel Jake (Tom Eplin) should go on with his life. He needs to leave Paulina (Judi Evans Luciano) behind and find someone like Vicky (Jensen Buchanan). People should stop calling Jake a loser.

When Paulina joined AW she was certainly no saint. She and Joe (Joseph Barbara) deserve each other.

On Days of Our Lives, I really wish Kate would return. It is time for Vivian to be exposed for all her evil deeds. Carrie and Austin should get married. Lucas should be the real father of Sami's baby. Jennifer and Jack should be together.

It takes Days such a long time to finish story lines. They just drag on and on. A lot of my friends have stopped watching because of the long stories. —Imogene Horton, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Reader: Now that Ryan (Paul Michael Valley) is gone, Jake and Vicky could hook up. But there are still a lot of fans who would like to see Jake with Paulina.

There were some rumors recently from the Days set that the producers were looking for someone to take on the role of Kate.

Dear Candace: Enough is enough with Marian/Brent (Frank Beaty) on Guiding Light. He has already killed two or three people. The whole thing is way too violent. My neighbors and I will not turn the show back on until Marian leaves. —Marion Hedgecock, High Point, N.C.

The first boxing match on Home Box Office was George Foreman's Jan. 22, 1973, upset of Joe Frazier for the World Heavyweight crown.

Dear Reader: Brent's secret is out on GL. The truth is the writers extended his stay because Beaty was so great as the characters Marian and Brent.

Dear Candace: Could you please tell me who sings Mike and Rosanna's song on As the World Turns? Do you know where I can get it? —S.T., Salford, Pa.

Dear Reader: "Every Beat of My Heart" is sung by Brian McKnight and appears on his CD I Remember You. The song was written by McKnight and Earl Rose. The CD is available at music stores.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roseanne's looking for a more wholesome environment for her youngest child.

The actress says she likes farm living and wants to bring up 5-month-old Buck somewhere other than Los Angeles. So she has put her two multimillion-dollar city homes up for sale, the Los Angeles Times reported over the weekend.

"I miss having horses and growing things," she told the Times. "I just know that I don't want to live in L.A. anymore and don't want to raise my kid here."

Besides the two Los Angeles houses, Roseanne has a farm in Iowa. She's reportedly looking for another home, in Savannah, Ga.

She and Ben Thomas, her third husband, have been married for about

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Crown Prince Willem-Alexander is under fire from animal lovers for hunting wild boar and deer on the royal estates.

Three national newspapers carried a half-page advertisement Monday asking people to send or fax a letter urging the eldest son of Queen Beatrix to hang up his guns.

"The heavy responsibility you bear as our future king cannot be combined with spreading death and destruction amongst defenseless animals," read an open letter from the Foundation for Critical Wildlife Care.

The protest was apparently triggered by a hunt last month on the grounds of Het Loo Palace. Protesters scuffled with the palace guard outside a lodge where Willem-Alexander's party was eating.

Royal House spokesman Aad Meijer said the prince received several hundred faxes Monday. He would not say whether Willem-Alexander would give up hunting.

1996 Livestock Show to feature new twists

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

When the curtain goes up on this year's Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show, there will be several new wrinkles -- and a few goats as well.

There also will be more steers, hogs, sheep -- and, yes, goats, too -- paraded through the show ring in the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn than have appeared in many years.

Figures reported as of Thursday showed 704 animals have been entered from 4-H and FFA members throughout the five-county area.

This represents the highest number of entries at any stock show since 1988, when 767 animals were paraded through the show arena.

Among the entries are 373 hogs alone -- which equals the TOTAL entries in the 1990 stock show.

As far as wrinkles go, the goats are probably the biggest one.

This year, for the first time, goats will be judged at the stock show.

As a first-year breed, the goat show has been limited to students in Deaf Smith 4-H and Hereford FFA.

There are 15 goats entered, 12 from nine 4-H members and three from Hereford FFA member Ty Nall.

The goats will be judged on Friday at 4:30 p.m. Judging them will be Dave Cleavinger, who will be here also to judge the lamb show that same night.

Because there are goats in the show, new rules had to be written for them, including allowing no minimum or maximum weights for the animals. Classes will be broken by weight, with all breeds shown together.

But rules concerning the showing of goats are not the only new twists to the stock show this year.

For the 1996 show, the HYF has instituted several new rules concerning overall performance and relating to specific animals.

Among those are two new provisions aimed at all entrants.

Rule 9 says, "All livestock entered in the Hereford Young Farmers Jr. Livestock Show must have been owned by the exhibitor, be under the supervised feeding of the County Agent or Vocational Ag Teacher, and STATE VALIDATED."

Rule 19 says that "no professional

Children too young to participate in the 1995 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show still got a chance to strut their stuff before the start of the lamb show.

Kids participated in three age divisions -- 4 and under, 5 and 6, and 7 and 8 -- as they drove hogs in front of the judges.

Shown are results from that show:

Age 4 and under -- Victoria Messer; honorable mention to Morgan Meiwes and Trent Huffaker.

Ages 5 and 6 -- Bubba Paul.

Ages 7 and 8 -- Tyrell Paul, Blake Carter and Brent Newton.

Hog showman overcame adversity to win big

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The call came in to the Hereford Fire Department at 9:44 p.m. on Nov. 9 -- a structure fire at the intersection of County Roads GG and 13.

For brothers Clint and Trip Robison, watching their family's barn burn to the ground that night was the end of a dream -- that they could have success in the 1995 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show hog competition.

Inside the 40-year-old wood frame barn were five show hogs purchased 1-1/2 months before. With the blaze apparently starting in the general area of their pens, nothing could be done to save the animals.

Just over two months later, however, Clint Robison reached the top -- claiming County Grand Champion honors in the HYF show with one of two hogs he bought to replace those killed in the fire.

Robison recently recalled the days following the fire and the ensuing work that brought him to the show arena last Thursday for a date with destiny.

Robison's mother, Terry Robison, noticed the fire when she went to the kitchen that night. She immediately called 911 and volunteer firefighters headed for the scene.

The only electricity in use at the time of the fire, Robison said, was heat lamps keeping the five hogs warm in their stalls.

The morning after the fire, the HHS senior looked at the ruins of his project and wondered if it was too late to start over. Stock show rules required animals be purchased by Dec. 1, but Robison had owned his hogs since the first of October. Buying new animals would be possible, but he had lost 1-1/2 months in time working with them.

The day, he said, he spoke with agriculture teacher Kevin Kelley at school.

"I did want to get more," he said, but "only if I could get one that would be competitive."

Brother Trip, a sophomore at HHS, decided against pursuing new hogs, focusing instead on basketball.

Both Robison and his parents praised Kelley for his dedication to helping get the hog project back on line.

While Robison and a friend traveled to Chickasaw, Okla., the weekend after the fire, they were unable to find any hogs that suited his needs.

It was Kelley the next weekend who found a breeder in Duncan, Okla., who sold him two animals -- a Hampshire and a Spot.

Buying pigs was just the first step in Robison's attempt to come back from the fire.

His father, Steve, said the family lost everything relating to hog raising -- feed, pails, feed pans, brushes, whips and stalls.

Neighbors pitched in with a new pen and hog house.

Others donated financially to help purchase the animals.

"It was just starting from scratch all over," Clint Robison said.

To help make up the lost time in working with the animals, Robison entered seven jackpot shows during December, traveling as far as Kerrville to show his two pigs and get them some experience in the show arena.

"We spent a lot more time than a lot of people do" working with the animals, he said, showing them and "just basically feeding, getting them where they look right."

Ironically, Robison said, the hog that won county champion honors here did not do as well as the other one did at the jackpot shows.

When they arrived at the Hereford show, the classifier determined both pigs would be shown in the Cross category rather than under their formal breeds.

While this meant Robison was competing against himself in the mediumweight Cross division, it also meant his county champion Hampshire hog avoided a run-in with ultimate Five-County Grand Champion Jessica Smith, who brought her winner through that breed.

In the hog show, Robison won first place in the mediumweight division with one hog and drove the other to a third place county (fifth in five-county) finish.

When the dust had cleared in the Cross breed championship, Robison had claimed five-county reserve breed champion and county Breed champion honors, second only to Five-County Reserve Grand Champion Clint Patterson.

Before entering the show, Robison said his goal was simply to get his hogs into the sale.

Although he had been pessimistic about the quality of his second set of entries early on, working with them for two months showed him they were quality animals.

Still, he said, "I felt like we had a good chance to do well with them," but never dreamed he would do that well.

Robison said throughout the judging he never knew judge Jerry McLemore was focusing more attention on his hog than on any others.

"It surprised me to win the county and it surprised me to win reserve of the breed," he said.

"I was looking at placing high in the class, maybe win the class."

Once he got to the county championship drive, Robison knew he was the winner when McLemore began describing the county winner.

During the breed championship drive, he said, McLemore specifically mentioned that his hog was a "fresh" looking pig, meaning one that had not been held off full feed rations to prepare for the show.

McLemore also said the animals

Smith claimed top honors in '95 hog show

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The judge was an hour late arriving and the computer system crashed.

But it was still a good night for Friona's Jessica Smith, who emerged from a gruelling seven-hour show with Five-County Grand Champion honors in the 1995 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show hog competition.

Miss Smith drove her champion Hampshire hog to the top of the 266-hog heap, claiming the top spot over Five-County Reserve Grand Champion Clint Patterson of Parmer County 4-H.

Patterson entered the championship drive with his medium-heavy-weight Cross hog.

Top county honors went to Clint Robison, who was named Deaf Smith County Grand Champion hog with his mediumweight Cross entry.

Robison is a member of Hereford FFA.

The last of four top hog winners also was a Cross breed, as Camille Vasek duplicated her 1994 County Reserve Champion victory with the same honor in 1995.

Miss Vasek showed the champion heavyweight Cross, then entered the championship drive after Robison's selection as county champion.

Overall, the competition lasted until midnight, eight long hours after judging was supposed to have begun at 4 p.m.

The start of the hog show was delayed an hour, however, when judge Jerry McLemore was late arriving from Oklahoma.

Showmen from Deaf Smith, Oldham, Parmer, Randall and Castro counties paraded their hogs through the show arena at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn in eight different breed classes -- Berkshire, Chester Whites, Durocs, Hampshires, Poland Chinas, Spots, Yorkshire and Crosses.

McLemore praised the exhibitors as he judged the championship drive.

"I think we've got a great bunch of youngsters," he said, commenting especially on the neat appearance of the 4-H and FFA members who wore clean pants, had their shirts tucked in and who had their hair neatly combed and styled.

McLemore said he looks for a long-bodied hog as his champions, one with a lengthy neck, tension in the front end and is tall footed.

He said his message to the competitors is to "always be competitive," adding that young people who lose should not "go away laughing," but should "have the competitive edge to do back and do what you need to do" to win next time.

McLemore concluded his remarks by saying he does not like to have to judge a class all the way through.

"It's the hardest thing to do to look at one of these youngsters, to say 'You're No. 14' or 'You're No. 18.'" Miss Smith's Hampshire, he said, is "extremely tall... very, very correct in his skeletal design."

At the conclusion of the hog judging, small groups of exhibitors returned to the ring for the showmanship competition.

The showmanship was broken into two divisions -- Junior Showmanship for entrants age 12 and under, and Senior Showmanship for those 13 and older.

This year, the showmanship winners will receive personalized jackets.

McLemore praised the young people in the Junior Showmanship drive, telling them that "I think it's an honor to get picked."

From the top 10 showman he watched work their hogs in the ring, McLemore picked Miss Vasek as first place Junior Showmanship and Josh Curtis of Parmer 4-H as the second place winner.

In the Senior Showmanship competition, he declined to specify

Lamb show had one winner, two entries

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

In 1993 and 1994, when the Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show lamb competition ended, Jessica Smith of Friona was on top.

Last year, even after having won Five-County Grand Champion honors in the hog competition, Miss Smith was not satisfied -- she wanted a three-peat of her lamb show success.

Success may not be the right word, however, as Miss Smith -- a senior at Friona High School and a member of Friona FFA -- not only captured the Five-County Grand Championship, she also completed her area show career with a one-woman sweep of the lamb show.

Miss Smith drove her mediumweight lamb to the class championship, then pushed aside all other breed champions for the Grand Champion title.

She then pulled in Reserve Grand Champion honors with the mediumweight lamb that had been judged second best in the breed competition.

Because Miss Smith was unable to show two lambs at the same time, she was assisted by fellow Friona FFA member Monty Schueler, which is allowed under stock show rules. He drove the Reserve Grand Champion entry.

Miss Smith completed her domination of the sheep show by being named second place in the Senior Showmanship competition.

The Christie family of Summerfield dominated the county honors at the sheep show, with Colby Christie nabbing County Grand Champion honors and his little brother Chad showing the County Reserve Grand Champion lamb.

In addition, Chad Christie won second place in the Junior Showmanship competition.

Timberly Mercer of Randall 4-H won first place in the Junior Showmanship contest.

Contestants squared off in four divisions -- Fine wool-purebred; Fine wool-crossbred; Medium wool; and Southdown-purebred.

Judging the show for the first time was Dave Cleavinger, who began his work at 4:30 p.m. and completed the judging by 9 p.m.

The following are complete results of the Lamb show, including breed champions. Where two numbers are shown, the first indicates an entrant's ranking in the Five-County area, while the second is that person's ranking in Deaf Smith County.

High honors in the 1995 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show steer competition stayed in Deaf Smith County.

Colby Christie, a member of Hereford FFA, captured top honors with his steer. He showed the 1,300-pound steer in the middle weight division and dominated the remaining steers in light and heavy weight classes to receive the Five-County and County Grand Champion title.

Tye Baca, a member of Castro 4-H, was named five-county Reserve Champion, with his light frame exotic breed. Baca also showed the five-county reserve champion steer in the 1994 show.

Zach Wall, a member of Hereford FFA, displayed his light frame exotic to receive the County Reserve Champion title.

Christie, who also received County Grand Champion in last year's competition, controlled the show from the beginning when he won Champion five county and Champion county in the Exotic Breed class.

Kyle Haymes, a member of Randall 4-H and 1994 Five-County Grand Champion showman, received Champion five-county in the English Steer division competition.

Champion County was taken by Brittney Binder, a member of Hereford FFA, as well as Reserve Five-County.

Ivory Isaacson, a member of Deaf Smith 4-H, received Reserve County honors.

David Lust, educator in the agriculture department at West Texas A&M University, judged the steer show which included 53 entrants.

Lust complimented the Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show as being one of his favorite shows. He said the competition is always tough and the kids are great to work with.

When judging a steer show, Lust first looks for muscling and then finish. He then decides which animal has the best combination of the two.

"This year the competition was close and tough," he said.

Lust then judged the showmanship competition.

Junior Showmanship, which is for children age 12 and under, was won by Chad Christie, while Catherine Beville won second place.

Senior Showmanship awards went to Jeb Skiles, first place, and Jeffery

JEB SKILES
Senior Steer Showman

Seaton, second place.

Last year's showmanship winners were fitted for personalized showmen jackets.

The Hereford Cattlewomen presented the annual First Year Showmanship belt buckle to Jeb Skiles.

The honor is presented to a boy or girl who does an outstanding job of showing their steer for the first time.

The award was presented by Jackie Murphy who represented the Hereford Cattlewomen.

The following is a complete list of placing's in the steer show. Where two numbers appear, the first is the five-county placing and the second is the county finish in the division.

was "a show barrow," meaning is "acted like he was showing off."

When those same phrases reappeared in the county champion drive, Robison knew he had a winner.

"That's when I knew which one he was going to pick," he said with a smile.

The surprises were not over for Robison, however.

On Saturday, his county champion hog was the first one in the show ring.

"I was in the ring and I didn't know who was bidding," he said, adding that he had left the ring before bidding ended.

After having considered past champions, Robison anticipated he would make about $4 a pound for his hog.

What he would learn later was the Premium Standard Farms had bought the hog for a whopping $6.25 a pound.

In order to keep the hog for later shows, Robison "bought" the hog back for the floor price of just over 30 cents a pound, enabling him to take it to the San Antonio Livestock Show this month, then on to Houston later.

Robison and his parents attributed a great deal of their success to Kelley, whom they said went above and beyond the call of duty to help Clint obtain new animals after the fire.

In fact, Mrs. Robison said, Kelley's dedication has had a lasting impact in her son's life.

Before the fire, she said, he had known he would go to college -- he has already been accepted to Texas Tech University -- but did not know about his formal career plans.

"He made up his mind" right after the fire, to follow in Kelley's footsteps and study to be an agriculture teacher.

"If he can help one kid as much as he was helped, it'll all be worth it," she said.

Be a good neighbor. Be alert for vandalism or break-ins. If you see anything unusual around a residence or business, call the police. Let's all be involved in policing our neighborhoods.
