HISD, city election hopefuls file papers

The Hereford ISD trustee election got its first two candidates when one incumbent and one hopeful filed for spots on the ballot.

Meanwhile, the last eligible incumbent on the City Commission also has filed for election in the May 4 election.

On Monday, Lloyd Ames filed documents to run for the school trustee District 5 spot that is currently Ames, who works for Hereford Cablevision, was the first candidate to file for the school district race. The District 5 seat was previously held by Joe Flood, who resigned. It encompasses an area of northwest Hereford.

Incumbent District 2 trustee Raul Valdez, who previously announced his intentions to seek re-election, filed his paperwork Tuesday morning. Valdez was appointed to the school board in September 1992, then ran for a full term in May 1993. His district encompasses an area in the north central part of town. Other school board seats open for election this year are: District 4, currently held by Ron Weishaar; and District 7, currently held by Board President Jim Marsh.

Marsh has announced his intention to run again, but has not filed his election documents. Weishaar was not available for comment this morning to say whether or not he will run again

School board terms are for three

In the City Commission election, Eugene Condarco, who was appointed to the post last month, filed Monday for a place on the ballot.

He is seeking a full two-year term after being appointed to replaced Nancy Griego, who resigned after being called up to active duty in the U.S. Army.

Previously filing for re-election to the Commission were: Wayne rates ranging from 6 (percent) to 14 Winget, Place 4; and at-large candidates Carey Black, Place 5, and Roger Eades, Place 6.

The filing period for both city and school elections is 5 p.m. March 20. Early voting will be held April 15-30, with the election on May 4.

AG opinion lets districts utilize vans

AUSTIN (AP) - An attorney general's legal opinion clears the way for school districts to use their 15-passenger vans to take students to extracurricular activities.

Some school districts had said they were concerned over whether the education reform law would allow them to continue using the vans.

The law says groups of 10 or more students may be transported to and from extracurricular events in school buses; chartered buses; or in district-owned buses that meet the safety standards for vehicles owned by motor bus companies.

A different standard applies to groups of fewer than 10 students, who can be transported in passenger cars.

"The issue is the 15-passenger van. That's what everyone is concerned about ... There were a whole lot of questions from school districts about whether they could use large vans to transport students to events," David Anderson, Texas Education Agency general counsel, said Monday.

"As I read it (the opinion), it says you can use 15-passenger vans that the district owns for extracurricular transportation. That's sort of the good news for the districts," he said. Most vans meet the motor bus company standards, he said.

But if a school district wants to use the large vans for a regular bus route, then it would have to meet such additional safety standards as having a fire extinguisher, flashing lights, convex mirror and be painted yellow, Anderson said.

Ward Tisdale, spokesman for the attorney general, said Anderson's interpretation is correct.

Jump reported in property taxes levied during '95 incumbent Place 2 Commissioner levied by local government and office, which looked at the most school districts in Texas rose 4.7 percent in 1994 to $15.44 billion, the state comptroller's office reports.

However, the comptroller said, for the first time since 1987, school districts reported raising taxes at a slower rate, less than 4 percent.

"For the preceding six years, school taxes have increased at annual percent," the report said.

The property tax remained the single largest levy, with the state sales tax running No. 2 at $9.8

A total of $35 billion in taxes of all kinds was levied for 1994 government spending.

Citing rising property taxes, Gov. George W. Bush has been looking at possible ways of replacing the school levy. The latest report shows that need, Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said Monday.

'This underscores the governor's concern that the property tax burden is too high and may be near the breaking point," Ms. Hughes said.

As for the slower growth in school taxes, she said, "Even a modest increase on top of an already big burden is overwhelming for some people.'

In a preliminary analysis, a special tax study group outlined several options to Bush, including: a gross receipts tax on business revenues; a value-added tax, which is a form of indirect sales tax paid on products and services at each stage of production or distribution; and increasing or expanding the current

6.25 percent state sales tax. Ms. Hughes said the study group should have a final report ready by mid-March.

AUSTIN (AP) - Property taxes According to the comptroller's recent data available, the largest portion of property taxes - $9 billion was levied by school districts.

> Of all taxing units, counties reported the largest percentage increase from 1993 to 1994 - 5.9 percent. Cities and special districts including junior colleges, hospitals, utilities and flood control - showed a 5.5 percent increase.

School property taxes, levied by the 1,040 independent school districts, accounted for 58 percent of all 1994 property taxes.

Taxes by 968 cities reached nearly $2.5 billion, or 16 percent of the total, while county taxes were $2.3 billion, or 15 percent. Property taxes by special districts in 1994 topped $1.6 billion, about 10 percent of the total.

The report found that the average of school tax rates reported rose about 3 cents in 1994 to just over $1.35 per $100 of value, the same amount of increase as in 1993.

The 1994 school rates ranged from a low of 46 cents in Allamoore ISD in Hudspeth County to a high of $2.03 per $100 of value in Huffman ISD in Harris County.

Only 26 districts had rates of less than $1 per $100 of value. About 85 percent, or 879 districts, had tax rates ranging from $1 to $1.50. Another 134 districts had rates ranging from $1.50 to $2.03.

"Taxpa, ers in about 516 districts, or 50 percent of all districts, saw their tax rates rise in 1994," the report said. About 32 percent, 336 districts, didn't change rates, and another 187 reduced rates from the preceding

Retail sales show dip

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In one more sign that the overall economy weakened further at the beginning of the year, the government reported today that retail sales dipped 0.3 percent in January, the poorest showing in six months.

The Commerce Department said the weakness was centered at auto dealerships, where sales fell 1.2 percent, the first decline in this area since last July.

Analysts blamed much of the weakness on the severe winter blizzards that kept consumers out of the stores. They said this was one more factor supporting their view that the overall economy was barely moving forward as the year began. Because of the weakness, many analysts are predicting that the percent last July.

Federal Reserve, which has already trimmed interest rates three times in an effort to spur growth, will do so again. Many forecasters are predicting two more rate cuts this spring.

The Fed has cited diminishing inflationary pressures as a key reason it has been able to ease credit. The government also reported today that wholesale prices rose 0.3 percent in Analysts discounted much of the January price increase, saying it was based on special factors such as heavy demand for energy during the cold winter.

The 0.3 percent drop in retail sales in January followed a 0.6 percent increase in December and a 0.9 percent rise in November. It was the biggest decline since sales fell 0.4

Astronauts' job turns to scientific studies, after loss of satellite

By MIKE DRAGO Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -With the U.S.-Italian tethered satellite lost in space, shuttle Columbia's astronauts turned today to the other half of their cargo - a slew of science

Experiments with protein crystals, metals, fire and other materials will take up most of astronauts' time until they return to Earth late next week.

The crew will come back without the experiment that consumed much of their training and for which scientists had the greatest hopes: the half-ton electricity-conducting satellite and its 12.8-mile tether.

The slender tether broke just above the shuttle Sunday night and the satellite quickly slipped into the black void of space with more than 12 miles of cord spiraling behind.

By early today, the satellite and tether, which cost NASA and the Italian space agency more than $400 million, already was some 5,000 miles away from Columbia. Now nothing but space junk, the satellite is expected to burn up in the atmosphere within a month.

The astronauts couldn't hide their disappointment but chalked it up to experience.

'I don't want to try to pretend that we're not pretty bitterly disappointed," said Jeffrey Hoffman. "But nevertheless, human lifetimes are short in the big scheme of things, and hopefully these dreams will someday come true.'

Scientists had hoped the tethered satellite would yield valuable electricity when dragged by a spaceship through Earth's magnetic field. The electricity could be used for space stations and tethers might even be able to lower packages to Earth, they said.

Before the break, part of the theory had proved true. The metal ball and tether generated up to 3,500 volts. But the future of tether technology suddenly appears very much in doubt. Shuttle commander Andrew Allen said the idea deserves further consideration despite the accident. 'We can't learn unless we go try," he said. "We haven't seen the last of tethers I hope, and we just need to go ahead and take another hard look at it."

Astronauts said the frayed tether end remaining aboard Columbia appeared burned, but NASA is refusing to speculate on what went wrong. An investigative board has been established.

Italian scientist Marino Dobrowolny said the cord's insulation may have been stripped away, exposing the copper wire. Data on the ground showed the equivalent of a spark or discharge, which may have occurred as the copper passed near metal on the deploying equipment, he said.

Dobrowolny said at least some valuable information was collected in the five hours before the tether broke. In the satellite's first flight, four years ago, the tether jammed only 840 feet out.

Still, some devastated scientists sounded bitter.

"Frankly, an agency that put a man on the moon, in my view, could make engineering a little more reliable," said Mario Grossi, a tether expert and staff scientist at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass.

"The Italian-made satellite, nobody found the smallest flaw in the satellite. All that is failing is the equipment on board the shuttle, which is NASA."

AUSTIN (AP) - A Houston man has claimed his half of Saturday's Lotto Texas jackpot, receiving a lump sum payment of $1 million.

Roque Silva requested minimal publicity, the Texas Lottery Commission said Monday. The jackpot had been estimated at

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago, my best friend, "Bryan" (he's 13), had an argument with his dad. His dad hit him on the back and made a black and blue mark. Bryan left home and ended up at our house for the night.

The next day, Bryan called his dad, and they straightened things out. He seems OK now, and I don't think his dad has hit him again.

Bryan's parents don't give him be one heck of a nuisance. much supervision, and he gets to stay out as late as he wants. My parents like Bryan, and they take him everywhere with us. His parents never send him with any money when we invite him out to eat or to a movie. It seems they don't care where he is or what he's doing as long as he's not bothering them.

Do you think Bryan is being abused? If so, what should I do? Is there anyone I can contact who won't tell his parents that I was the one who called? Do you think I should stay out of it? I need your advice .-- Florida Friend

DEAR FLORIDA: Bryan may be neglected, but it doesn't sound as if he is being physically abused. Please keep on befriending him. You and your family are his passport to a decent life. Bless you. And P.S. If Bryan's father hits him again, Bryan should talk to the school counselor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for all those grandparents who never hear from their grandchildren through out the year -- not even a letter of appreciation in response to a gift. I offer this suggestion: Next time you send a check to those ill-mannered grandchildren, DON'T SIGN IT. I guarantee you will receive a letter in the next mail .-- John in Tequesta, Fla.

DEAR TEQUESTA: What a splendid suggestion! You have hit on a sure-fire idea that will definitely produce results.

Bedtime habits can influence sleeping disorders, problems sleep a wink at night, Gieski said.

By LYNN BULMAHN Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas _ If a good night's sleep always eludes you, see your doctor. But first, you might try adjusting a few bedtime habits to see if that helps you fall asleep more

Besides counting sheep, there are several things people can do to help ensure a restful night's sleep. Here are tips from Sarah Head, a registered nurse with Concepts of Care, and Robert Gieski, coordinator for the Center for Sleep Disorders at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center:

*Go to bed and get up at the same time every day. *Limit the activities you do in your bed. Don't use your bed as an easy chair to watch TV, and don't read in bed. You want to subconsciously associate your bed and your bedroom with sleep, relaxation and rest.

*Too much caffeine can give you the wide-awakes. Don't drink coffee after 5 p.m., if at all.

*Don't eat heavily, exercise or drink alcohol within three to four hours of bedtime.

*How long are you staying in bed? Head knows of seniors who turn in 7 p.m. Gieski said he's known seniors who sleep in, then lounge in their bed until afternoon. With so much time in the sack, it's no wonder they can't fall asleep the next night.

*Naps are fine, as long as you limit the time you spend snoozing. While doctors actually recommend taking an hour's nap during the day, some elderly people snooze much longer than that. Then they find they can't America's Drug Problem Is Not As Big As You Think.

It can start as a dare. Or youthful curiosity. Or it may be a way to escape problems at home. Whatever the reason, studies show that an alarming number of young children are trying drugs. Unfortunately, too many parents still do not believe that their children are at risk.

The truth is, it's never too early to start teaching your kids about the dangers of drugs.

At Boston, Reggie Miller scored 39 points, including the game-winning 3-pointer with six seconds left in overtime.

The Celtics overcame an eight-point deficit with two minutes left in regulation to tie it on Rick Fox's free throws with 4.1 seconds to play. Boston led 119-117 in overtime when Miller ran through two screens to get open for the game-winning 3-pointer.

Rik Smits had 19 points rebounds and Antonio Davis scored 12 points with 12 rebounds for Indiana. Dino Radia scored 33 and David Wesley had 23 points with 10 assists for Boston, which lost its fifth straight.

Pistons 93, Kings 78

Lindsey Hunter made three consecutive 3-pointers during a 14-0 fourth-quarter run as visiting Detroit sent Sacramento to its 11th straight

Five straight points by Mitch Richmond helped the Kings close to 76-73 midway through the fourth. But the 3-pointers by Hunter provided the Pistons with an 88-73 lead.

Grant Hill scored 21 points with 10 rebounds and six assists. Newly acquired Billy Owens led the Kings

enter AP poll

Texas was running out of time to maintain its string of yearly appearances in The Associated Press women's basketball poll. Thanks to a big victory in front of a big crowd, that string is still intact.

With just two polls remaining, Texas made its first Top 25 appearance of the season on Monday. The Longhorns grabbed the No. 25 spot and now have been ranked at least once in each of the 20 years The AP poll has existed.

Tennessee is the only other school with that distinction.

Louisiana Tech led the poll for the second straight week and the 12th time overall this season.

Cancer victim relates humorous experiences

By LINDA JONES

The Dallas Morning News DALLAS - It's hard to believe that Eileen Marin could find anything funny about cancer.

After all, since 1992, the single mother from Richardson has been diagnosed with colon cancer and two types of breast cancer. But despite her four years of constant hospital visits, six painful surgeries and related challenges, Ms. Marin has somehow managed to turn some of her suffering into funny sayings and light cartoons.

The whole point is mixing humor with laughter and tears," says Ms. Marin, who fought wallowing in self-pity by writing her new book, "Chemotherapy Gives New Meaning to a Bad Hair Day." Her cancer is in remission.

The book, which is less than 100 pages in length, includes cartoons with happy-face characters putting positive and witty spins on the often tough experiences faced by cancer

A sampling: One cartoon depicts a patient in bed preparing to receive intravenous treatment. The caption: endure. "All I want for Christmas is another good vein." who is bald, apparently from chemotherapy treatments, smiling and looking over her wig collection. The caption: "Decisions, decisions, decisions. Think I'll be a redhead today." The cartoons, witticisms and serious words of advice account for about 50 pages of the book. The rest are blank pages designed to be used as a journal. "I think it's an important part of the healing process," says Ms. Marin, who has made her share of journal entries over the years.

Tongue prints are as unique as fingerprints.

IMPRESSIVE, ISN'T IT ..

18-year-old son is self-employed; she designs consumer-research studies for companies. She also published 2,000 copies of the book herself, after two publishers declined to do so. She believes they may have been subject in a humorous manner. "I don't think they wanted to step on anybody's toes," she says.

uncomfortable about dealing with the

Ms. Marin's friends encouraged her to write the book after she tried to cheer up other cancer patients she knew by writing them uplifting messages and sending gifts. Making them happy made her happy, which made her own situation easier to bear.

"Survivors know that they've all used humor of some sort. But nobody has ever really addressed it in the media," she says.

Those who might recoil at the thought of someone writing a humorous book about surviving cancer aren't thinking realistically, Ms. Marin notes. She says she hasn't written a humorous book about cancer, but rather a humorous book about the treatment patients must

The Women's Health Boutique sells the book, which retails for $11.50. This month, Ms. Marin will teach workshops for women cancer survivors at the retail store, which specialize in medical supplies for women. (For information on the workshops, call 214-235-5069.)

'We're all going to die," she says. "The gift of diagnosis for me and many other (cancer survivors) I've met is to fully appreciate and live one day at a time. And, to truly live life, you have to experience both laughter and tears.'

DALLAS -- The recent demise of McDonald's McLean Deluxe hamburger is the latest evidence that restaurant patrons often say one thing and eat another.

Since the early '90s, restaurant chains have been experimenting with low-fat and low-calorie dishes. The motivation was twofold: Public health watchdog groups were regularly lambasting restaurant operators for serving up what one group called "a heart attack on a plate." And marketing surveys indicated a significant slice of the dining public wanted lighter, healthier fare.

So far, though, it hasn't worked out that way. NPD Crest, a suburban Chicago-based market research firm, regularly asks focus groups what they want on a menu -- and what they actually order.

"Their attitudes typically don't correlate with their behavior," said NPD's Bonnie Riggs. The focus group results -- and the experiences of restaurants ranging from McDonald's to Dallas-based Brinker International to Taco Bell _ point up an anomaly. At a time when food companies such as Frito-Lay and Nabisco are making millions on new lines of low-fat and no-fat products, restaurant patrons are shunning light

"I feel like I'm getting gypped when I order them," said Philip Peters of Dallas, who was having lunch with friends recently at a local restaurant.

While there are some glimmers that restaurant patrons may be finally warming up to low-fat entrees, a much broader trend among chains such as Pizza Hut, Wendy's and Jack in the Box is to provide their customers with ever-bigger, ever-meatier and ever-cheesier pizzas and hamburgers.

"Without question, the chains are now going to the other end of the (nutritional) spectrum," said Raj Chaudhry, publisher of "Chain Update," a restaurant industry newsletter. "Jack in the Box is offering what looks like a half-a-steer

Not that there haven't been some successes in the health-conscious

T.G.I. Friday's, the Dallas-based casual dining chain, suffered through four years of unspectacular sales of its low-fat dishes. But recent results have been appetizing, says Jody Mortenson, Friday's executive director of research and development. Sales of the chain's no-meat garden burger are now comparable to any nonhamburger sandwich on the menu, she says, and the chain's Pacific Coast tuna entree recently won kudos on a national TV report on restaurant

"We got so many letters and telephone calls thanking us for putting those items on the menu that we just knew we were hitting a niche," Ms. Mortenson said.

Dallas-based Bennigan's has seen its Health Club chicken platter become one of its best-selling entrees. Even so, recent history is littered with examples of low-fat food gone

The McLean Deluxe, with half the fat of a Big Mac, was supposed to revolutionize fast-food dining. Instead, it was a victim of slow sales and "menu streamlining" by McDonald's.

Brinker unveiled its Guiltless Grill low-fat dishes with high hopes in the fall of 1993. The meals featured half the fat of the regular fare at its Chili's restaurants and were praised for their good taste _ but they have been slighted by diners.

'It's more than 10 percent of our menu, but less than 10 percent of our sales," Brinker spokesman Harry Day said of the offerings. "We sell more of any one of our burger items than all of Guiltless Grill combined."

Applebee's International, a casual dining chain that has 17 restaurants in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, introduced light meals five years ago. Only in the past two years "have we finally seen the needle begin to move" on sales, says Ron Marks, Applebee's vice president of research and development. And even now, the light entrees are only "a nominal success," he said. Taco Bell, a division of PepsiCo Inc., last March rolled out its Border Lights menu -- a collection of tacos and burritos with half the fat of the chain's regular offerings. Border Lights are now widely perceived as a flop by industry analysts, an impression reinforced by the news that sales at Taco Bell units open for at least one year slumped four percent in 1995. For now, at least, the company is sticking by the brand and says there are no plans to drop the line at this time.

Chains that specialize in light fare have also stumbled. For instance, Fresh Choice, a salad-making chain, has been closing units due to slow sales, including two in Dallas.

So what's the problem? Restaurant pros are puzzled by that question. Some say that people want to splurge when they dine out.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: You did your readers a tremendous service by providing excellent advice in your response to a letter on carbon monoxide. We at the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission confront the tragedy of 250 children and adults dying needlessly each year because of carbon monoxide poisoning from household appliances.

We are extremely concerned about the dangers posed to families by carbon monoxide in their homes, and we have a free brochure on this dangerous gas that anyone can get by calling our toll-free hotline at 1-800-638-2772.

Stoves, furnaces, vents and chimneys should be examined regularly by a professional. Never burn charcoal indoors or in a garage; never use a gas range or oven for heating; never use unvented gas-burning appliances in a closed room; and never leave a car running in a garage. For additional safety, consumers should install carbon monoxide detectors in their homes.

Carbon monoxide is a silent killer, and like many of the dangers faced by consumers, people often don't know about it until it's too late.

Thank you for spreading the word on the dangers of carbon monoxide, and for letting people know that the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is here to help keep families safe in their homes. — Ann Brown, chairman, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission

Thank you for your prompt and very important letter. I hope all my readers will buy a carbon monoxide detector and call for this brochure that just may save their lives. Don't wait; call now! - Heloise

'Leap Day' on four-year cycle doesn't warrant greeting card

By KEN KUSMER

Associated Press Writer unique among 1,460 others, coming along every four years to keep the passage of time in synch with the Earth's seasons.

So why isn't Leap Day a bigger

It's not a national holiday. It's not a day off work. Good luck finding a greeting card to mark the occasion.

From its inception in 46 B.C. during the reign of Julius Caesar, Feb. 29 has struggled for recognition. For centuries, it wasn't even considered a legitimate day, says folk lore expert Joseph P. Goodwin of Ball State Day, other than special birthday University.

'Because the day occurred every four years, it was not considered a legal day. It was an extra day. It was something outside the regular calendar," Goodwin says. "Some people think that's why it came to be called Leap Day - you leap over it."

Until about 300 years ago, no official business was transacted Feb. 29 because the day wasn't considered to have actually occurred and deals would not hold up in court, says Donald Dossey, author of "Holiday Folklore, Phobias, and Fun.

So why haven't labor leaders the working masses to enjoy a day off? After all, employers would have to grant it only once each four years. a marketing director for a shopping 'It didn't have a lot of history to INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - It's a day it, no long-term feelings to it as far as workers were concerned," Dossey explains. "It didn't have any tradition that workers could hang onto."

One observance of Feb. 29 is Bachelor's Day, when women were afforded the chance to ask men for their hands in marriage. Legend has It St. Bridget took up the cause with St. Patrick and, in a compromise, he allowed the role reversal to occur once every four years.

Still, even with the proliferation of occasions to send greeting cards, it's tough finding cards to mark Leap cards.

"There's no demand for it," says. Hallmark Cards spokeswoman Rachel Bolton in Kansas City, Mo. "You have to ask yourself: What does a day mean to people? With Valentine's Day for example, it is a day to do something, to profess love."

Short of action by Congress or some other arbiter of official days, Leap Day is likely to remain mired in obscurity. "For every holiday that exists," Bolton says, "there was a grassroots movement, that one leader or group was pressing to have."

Peter Morris of Kelowna, British seized Feb. 29 as an opportunity for Columbia, may be ready to take up that challenge.

Twelve years ago, while toiling as center in Edmonton, Alberta, Morris bellyached to colleagues that average workers, unlike bosses and secretaries, have no designated day and labor on with little recognition. "Much like Leap Day itself," he says.

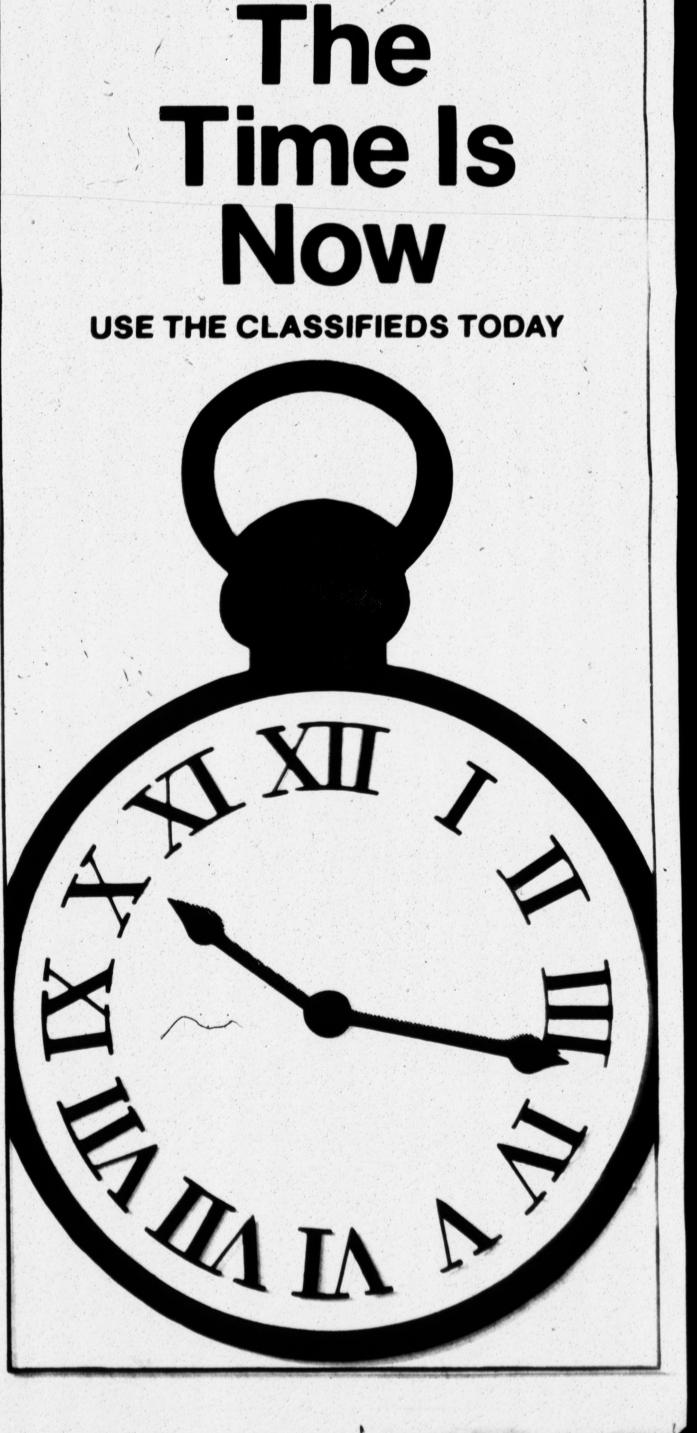

Inspired to fill this gap, Morris created International Underlings Day. observed each Feb. 29.

Until this year, observances have been limited to Morris and his co-workers. This year, however, after winning mention in Chase's 1996 Calendar of Events, a book that catalogs celebrations throughout the year, Morris has been fielding calls from across the continent.

I don't know what I've started.

In 18th Century America, artists journeyed from town to town with paintings of men and women complete in every feature, but the faces. A person wishing to sit for a portrait had to select the body he liked best and let the artist fill in the missing hair and face.

AUSTIN - State Treasurer Martha Whitehead acted illegally in December 1994 when she shored up the state-run Texpool investment fund, according to a Texas attorney general's opinion made public last Texpool lost an estimated $2 billion when investors withdrew their deposits, concerned after news reports regarding similar investments in high-risk "derivatives" that caused the bankruptcy of Orange County, Calif.

Whitehead responded by using Treasury money to buy back some of the securities at book value, to prevent losses for Texpool members. The bailout cost Texas taxpayers about $55 million, she

The non-enforceable opinion requested by the director of the State Pension Review Board was written & Assistant Attorney General Susan L. Garrison.

"The state treasurer's use of funds in the state Treasury in December 1994 to purchase Texpool funds at a price above the market value was not authorized by law," Garrison wrote.

Whitehead told the Houston Enronicle she acted only after she that been assured at a Dec. 9, 1994 meeting with three of Attorney General Dan Morales' staffers that her action would be "proper, legal, necessary and the best solution to prevent devastating losses for taxpayers at the local level."

Morales called Whitehead's characterization of the meeting "untrue." He did not comment on possible consequences of the alleged violation of the state constitution.

About 1,400 local school districts, cities and other government entities invest cash for short periods in Texpool.

Complicating matters beyond the difference between "book value" and "market value" is the fact that Whitehead's office will be abolished Sept. 1, in accordance with a constitutional amendment passed in November.

VitaPro Probe, Lawsuit

The state has filed a lawsuit seeking to invalidate the $34 million contract between the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and VitaPro Foods Inc. of Montreal, Canada, the supplier of a soybeanbased meat substitute used to feed Texas prison inmates.

According to a report in the Austin American-Statesman, the contract - now under investigation by state and federal authorities was approved without competitive bids by James A. "Andy" Collins.

Collins retired Dec. 31 from his $120,000-a-year post as executive director of the TDCJ, but continued on the payroll through Jan. 31. In January, VitaPro hired Collins as a consultant at the rate of $1,000 a day, said Yank Barry, the company's chief executive officer.

The state is seeking a refund of $3 million already spent on the meat substitute, saying the purchase should have been made through its purchasing agency, the General Services Commission.

Last week, state Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, accused Collins of lying to a Senate committee in October when he said under oath that his private business plans would not conflict with his state job. Texas law prohibits officials from conducting business with state agencies for two. years after they have left office.

Allan Polunsky, chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, ordered an investigation of the VitaPro contract after the arrest last month of Houston businessman minded a foiled prison escape plot, was carrying a business card showing he was an independent salesman for VitaPro when he was arrested.

Voters Guides OK at Polls With early voting under way for the March 12 primary, Texans will at last be free to bring voter's guides, newspaper endorsements and other printed materials into the Prior law prohibited voters from bringing printed materials into voting booths, but did allow them to bring sample ballots and handwritten notes.

Houston lawyer David Furlow challenged the 93-year-old law and won a federal court decision overturning the law in November. The Texas Secretary of State decided not to appeal the ruling.

"It's not likely to adversely affect in the slightest degree what goes on in elections," Furlow said. Other Capital Highlights

· A Central Texas militia group is plotting to kidnap a federal judge, according to an advisory by the U.S. Marshal's Service, the Houston Chronicle reported last week. A memorandum dated Feb. 8 warned judges in the Houston-based Southern District federal judicial region, in which serve 18 federal district judges, six bankruptcy judges and 12 magistrate judges. These judges work in courthouses in Houston, Laredo, McAllen, Brownsville, Galveston, Victoria and Corpus · Austin State District Judge Joseph Hart fined John E. Furnace and his Manveltex Inc., of Brazoria County, a record $915,000 in penalties for operating a water system so polluted that tap water would catch fire. The Texas Attorney General's Office investigated the case at the request of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. Furnace drilled a water well in a region with many gas and oil wells without notifying the TNRCC or customers in the 47-home system served by his comin Austin last year.

Film's unique perspective explores issues of Pantex

By JEAN PAGEL

Associated Press Writer AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The film opens with a black-and-white message of stark brevity: "The Cold War Ended."

It closes to the howls of Texas Panhandle wind and the warning from a millionaire sitting in a field of half-buried Cadillacs - that nuclear dust from a hypothetical accident at the Pantex weapons plant could blow into fatal pandemonium.

"The Plutonium Circus" takes a wacky look at the pacifists, economy boosters. Pantex employees and others with something to say about the U.S. Department of Energy's facility northeast of Amarillo.

The 73-minute color documentary touches on the morbid and absurd en route to a lesson on nuclear disassem-

"We've got this atomic bomb plant here which is just ruining the neighborhood, and it's something we don't need and we don't want,' millionaire Stanley Marsh 3, creator of Cadillac Ranch, told the camera.

Marsh likens Pantex to a death factory and work-relief project.

Others offer more upbeat descriptions of the only site in America where 3,200 workers break down nuclear weapons and store the plutonium.

"We are doing our part for continued peace through the world," Pantex community relations manager Kevin Knapp told viewers. "What we do right here outside of Amarillo, Texas, has a global impact and we have a very positive effect on millions and millions of people."

The Energy Department has no official comment on what won the Best Documentary Feature award at the South by Southwest Film Festival

"The Plutonium Circus" has since played at theaters in Austin, San and Chicago.

'Most people will think it's a scream," filmmaker George Ratliff predicted of audiences in his native Amarillo, where the movie is expected to open by early April. "It's going to be a scandal."

Ratliff, 27, said the project took seven months and $50,000 to film.

He said he aimed to create a funny but neutral way to get word out about a facility that for decades was kept secret and boring. The more that people know about Pantex, Ratliff reasons, the stricter its monitoring.

"People from all sides of the political spectrum tell me they love the movie," he said. "People can pick and choose what they believe the truth is, opposed to most documentaries, which preach to you about what's going on and what you think."

Amarillo residents portray themselves on screen.

The cast includes a farmer, a rancher, an oilman and a cowboy poet. Bob Wills' "Right or Wrong" twangs along during footage of a mushroom cloud. Women tap dance at a steak house. A world traveler shows off his collection of rat traps and elephant guns.

"Amarillo to a lot of people seems very politically conservative and culturally conservative," science sites include Dallas, Houston, Seattle fiction writer Don Webb observes for viewers. "But sometimes under those pressures, a lot of really interesting things blossom out."

David Whitten of Las Vegas-based Greycat Films, which released "The Plutonium Circus," said audience members tend to react in one of two

"Younger people and people with a well developed sense of humor find the film very entertaining," Whitten said. "People serious in their stand on nuclear weapons and all things nuclear and don't exhibit a good sense of humor, probably find the film irritating."

Whitten said the prevalent presence of comedy - opposed to fact-filled or preachy cinema - makes Pantex more broadly fascinating.

Amarillo comes off looking "like a uniquely Texas place, a mythical land bordering on some sort of 10-gallon Atlantis," he said.

Ratliff said he hopes those who see the film get concerned enough to pay attention to Pantex plutonium stored above the Texas Panhandle's main water supply. Yet, he said, most people get a laugh out of the show.

"It's a movie for entertainment. It should be playing next to 'Batman Forever,' "Ratliff said. "It's a movie that's fun."
