In with the new

This is what the Tom and Valerie Fellhauer family's kitchen looks like now that construction is virtually completed. Painted cabinets were replaced by oak units and a new bar counter extends to divide the kitchen and dining areas. A hanging light fixture and new appliances also brighten up the room. Family shows off unfinished remodeling project of home

Work continues with 'plenty of options every day'

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Just over a year ago, Tom and Valerie Fellhauer moved into a new home in the 200 block of Ranger.

The house featured a narrow entry hall with a doorway to the main living area, an attic overhead, a kitchen with white-and-blue cabinets, brilliant red carpeting in the master bedroom and a bathroom done in a black floral print.

It was time, they decided, to remodel.

"Basically every room of the house has been gutted and redone," Mrs. Fellhauer said as she showed off the still-unfinished product recently.

For the Fellhauer's, remodeling has been mostly a do-it-yourself project, which is why it is still not finished after a year of work.

But, she said, the family knew it was getting involved in a long-term project from the beginning.

"Oh yes," she said, "because we knew what it needed. No doubt."

The work is proceeding slowly, Mrs. Fellhauer said, because remodeling is "an expensive endeavor," so work is done a little at a time.

Mrs. Fellhauer has done most of the painting and wallpapering work herself, although she has hired a carpenter to help with some of the major construction.

The major construction has come in several forms.

First, the family attacked their outdated kitchen that included a table bolted to the floor, a light fixture she called a "box" mounted from the ceiling and white cabinets with blue accents.

"We gutted the kitchen," she said. "Literally down to the 2-by-4s."

And so, with no kitchen, the family had to find alternative means of meal preparation and clean-up.

"For seven months we had no kitchen," she said. "We cooked in one bathroom on electric skillet and washed dishes in the tub."

All this time, the Fellhauers were hosting two foreign exchange students in their tattered home.

"Bless their hearts, they were troopers," she said with a laugh.

A second major project was to open up the entry area and make more efficient use of the attic space.

The wall separating the living room from the entry was removed and, in its place was installed a staircase leading to a newly-built room upstairs.

Up there was constructed a bedroom and bathroom that will - when it is finally finished - be occupied by daughter Kealie, age 10.

For now, the stairs are still bare wood, the bedroom walls have not been painted and carpeting has not arrived.

In addition, the stairs are temporary resting place for several things displaced in the work and handrails and banisters are missing.

Mrs. Fellhauer said the family also redid all the walls in the house, removing the old texture coating that was rough and sharp and replaced it with a more modern texture that is smooth to the touch.

Paint was added -- hunter green (See REMODELING, Page 2A)

Kantor named as new commerce secretary

WASHINGTON (AP)--When the Clinton administration tried to sell American goods abroad, Mickey Kantor was the bad cop to Ron Brown's good cop. Now the U.S. trade representative is walking Brown's old beat.

President Clinton named trade ambassador Kantor to succeed Brown as commerce secretary Friday, 10 days after Brown died in a Croatian plane crash.

"We stood shoulder-to-shoulder to make sure we grew jobs and raised standards," Kantor said, recalling his relationship with Brown during an emotional ceremony announcing his appointment.

The Brown-Kantor tandem was a study in contrasts: Brown was a smooth, dapper consensus builder; Kantor's lanky build and gnarled fingers fit with his reputation as a fighter, a tough-as-nails negotiator.

"Mickey was the bad cop," Clinton quipped. "Ron was the good cop. I thought we ought to give (Kantor) a chance to be a good cop for a change."

Clinton said Kantor's appointment promises stability in his economic team.

"I don't want to miss a beat," he said. "I am determined that we will continue on the work that Ron Brown was engaged in the last day of his life."

The announcement came two days after Brown's burial.

Shuffling his economic team, Clinton also promoted Kantor's deputy, Charlene Barshefsky, to be acting trade representative and picked Franklin Raines, vice chairman of the Federal National Mortgage Association, as budget director, replacing Alice Rivlin, who is joining the Federal Reserve Board.

Like Brown, Kantor is a staunch Clinton ally and experienced political organizer. He was the president's 1992 campaign manager; Brown helped spearhead the 1992 campaign as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"As you might imagine, this has been a profoundly moving and difficult week for all of us in our political family," Clinton said.

Republicans quickly praised Kantor, who was sworn in by Vice President Al Gore as a recess appointee while Congress is out of session. Clinton will submit Kantor's formal nomination to the Senate later.

Campaigning in Texas as the certain GOP presidential nominee, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said of Kantor: "He probably will be widely supported on the Republican side. I've worked with him, found him to be very fair and a good person to work with."

A spokesman for Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, praised Kantor for his negotiating skills.

But detractors say Kantor's trade deals have cost millions of American jobs by opening U.S. borders to competition from low-wage foreign companies.

The appointment of Raines, who is black, and Barshefsky shows Clinton's commitment "to having a rainbow Cabinet," civil rights activist Jesse Jackson said in a telephone interview.

New graduation standards passed

AUSTIN (AP)--Students will have to take speech, technology and more social studies or science courses under new graduation requirements approved Friday by the State Board of Education.

The new standards increase from 21 to 22 the credits required for graduation. Students get a half credit for each semester of course work in a particular subject.

The new requirements will apply to students who begin high school in the 1997-98 school year.

The board also approved applications for 10 free-standing charter schools, independent of school districts and freed from many state regulations. They include three in Houston, two each in Dallas and Corpus Christi, and one each in Irving, Waco and Mission.

Last year's education law rewrite, which allows such charter schools, permits the board to approve up to 20 of them. Six were approved earlier, leaving four slots available.

Friday's approval came despite concerns from board member Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi that some charter schools may be elitist or result in segregation. She did support others, which target students at risk of dropping out.

Charter school supporters have said the schools would be subject to U.S. Justice Department scrutiny on the segregation issue.

In revising the minimum graduation standards, the Education Board backed off from a proposal to allow students to apply three physical education credits toward graduation, rather than two.

Education Commissioner Mike Moses had said increasing the allowable phys-ed credits would send the wrong message to the public "at a time when high school graduates need increasingly complex academic skills."

The new requirements include a passing grade of 70 for all students. During its rewrite of the public education law last year, the Legislature removed 70 as the overall passing requirement.

But state Sen. Bill Ratliff, author of the law, said he decided after reviewing the measure that the board had the authority to set the passing grade. The Dallas Morning News reported.

Promise Keeper rally slated here

A special speaker will deliver the keynote address at a Promise Keeper rally Thursday evening.

Keith Chadwick, state representative of Promise Keepers, will speak on "Break Down the Walls," at the rally, beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Hereford Independent School District administration building.

Music for the event will be presented by Jamie Johnson.

The rally is open to the public.

County champ at Regional Bee

Brigham Brown, Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee champ, was competing in the Region Bee on the West Texas A&M University campus Saturday.

A dinner was held to honor all county champions, as well as to recognize junior bee winners in the region. The spelldown was to start at 1:30 p.m. The Regional Bee is sponsored by The Amarillo Globe-News and WTA&MU.

Each county champion and junior champion will receive a lapel pin and framed certificate. Special prizes will go to those students finishing in the top six places, including an all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C., for two, where the National Spelling Bee will be held in late May.

Early voting for local elections starts Monday

Early voting in May 4 city, school and hospital district elections will begin Monday in the office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland at the courthouse.

Running for seats on the City Commission are Eugene Condarco and Joe Soliz, Place 2; Wayne Winget, Place 4, and Roger Eades, Carey Black and Frank Maes, for two at-large places.

Condarco is seeking a full two-year term after filling an unexpired term. Winget, Eades and Black are incumbents.

Hereford Independent School District voters will choose four trustees.

District 2 candidates are Raul Valdez and Charlie Arellano. Candidates for the District 4 position are Angie M. Alonzo, Leroy Lucero and Dave Charest. Lloyd Ames, Glenn Boozer and Tracy Straughan are running for the District 5 seat and Jeff Torbert is unopposed for District 7. Valdez is the only incumbent on the slate.

Deaf Smith County Hospital District voters will choose four directors from a slate of six, Larry Watts, Dean Crofford, Boyd M. Foster and Steven Cortez, incumbents, and Mark Collier and Henry C. Reid. Voters may mark ballots for as many as four candidates.

Early voting in all three elections will continue through April 30.

Local Roundup

City sets meetings

A work session and a regular meeting are set for the Hereford City Commission Monday. Beginning at 5 p.m., the commission will review the city's water infrastructure, hear a report on changes in regulations for solid waste disposal and discuss improvements at the city-owned airport. The regular meeting, beginning at 7:30 p.m. has a short agenda, calling for approval of minutes, a report from Hereford Economic Development Corporation and public comments.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District Board will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. Agenda items subject to action include helipad approval, financial and operations reports, medical staff report and physician credentialing, Hereford Health Clinic report, home health report, and quality management report. Discussion items include the Title V grant and the administrator's update.

Correction

A graphic on Page 1 of Friday's Hereford Brand incorrectly identified the Hereford ISD trustee district seat being sought by Charlie Arellano. Arellano is running for the District 2 seat currently held by Raul Valdez, who is seeking re-election. Candidates for the District 4 seat are Dave Charest, Angie Alonzo and Leroy Lopez. The Brand regrets the error.

Winning play performance set

The Hereford High School UIL One-Act Play company will present "The Importance of Being Earnest," which won them first place at the recent District 1-4A competition at Amarillo College. The play, written by Oscar Wilde, will be performed at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the HHS auditorium. Admission is by donation at the door. Following the performance, the play company will take part in Freshman Orientation activities set for 6:30 p.m. in the HHS gymnasium, where incoming freshmen and their parents who are interested in speech, debate or theater programs may visit with participating students and teachers.

REMODELING

in the hall, deep pink in one bedroom and pale yellow in the master bedroom.

The wall-filling fireplace in the living room was brown, now it's white, and the wall opposite it is a deep burgundy.

As for the nearly black bathroom, a wall separating the commode from the sink areas has been renovated and opened up into open shelving.

The dark wallpaper was removed and the room painted white and papered in a white floral print, giving it an illusion of more size than it had before.

Outside, the family is tearing out the overgrown landscaping in the front yard and most of the back yard has been covered in concrete. Before long, the storage building and playhouse that now occupy the area in front of the garage will be replaced on the new concrete pad in the back. Finally, the house trim will be repainted and the back fence replaced.

In the front yard, the tile entry will be transformed into an entry porch, while the dormer window that now sits on the front roof will have the finishing touches put on.

Mrs. Fellhauer ticked off the things left to be done as she walked through the house.

There is one bedroom that will have a wood floor installed after the carpet is removed; the red carpet in the master bedroom will be replaced; and the basement that had been completed will be redone again.

That, she said, was required because her husband and his father were working on the sewer lines. One accidentally ruptured and flooded the basement.

Doing the work herself, Mrs. Fellhauer said, has left her with options every day.

"You've got to decide every day, 'Am I going to clean today or am I going to work on the house?'" she said, noting that cleaning makes the house look better now, while working on the remodeling will do more in the long term.

For now, the work continues -- and friends and neighbors continue to inquire on the progress of the work at church and in the community.

Mrs. Fellhauer said she has no idea when the project will be finished.

"We still have a long way to go."

Park fund donation

A contribution of $300 to the Build on the Dream drive for the Hereford Aquatic Center is presented by Nazarene Christian Academy students, Lacy Torbert and Mitchell Sanders, to City Commissioner Eugene Condarco, left. Looking on are Jeff Torbert, co-chairman of the drive, and Mayor Bob Josslerand. The students represented the third grade, which raised the most in the school's drive. Josslerand announced that the campaign has reached $38,500 of the $40,000 goal.

Unabomber's manifesto is found in suspect's cabin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)--FBI agents found a typed version of the Unabomber manifesto in Theodore Kaczynski's Montana cabin, key evidence that convinces authorities that he is the serial bomber, law enforcement sources said.

FBI agents have been scouring Kaczynski's remote shack all week, trying to build their case that the former math professor is the elusive terrorist whose attacks spanned 18 years. They found the 35,000-word anti-technology manuscript in a corner of his cabin.

"We have not yet confirmed it, but it appears to be the original," a law enforcement source told The Associated Press on Friday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

U.S. News and World Report said agents told the magazine the manuscript was indeed the original version and was prepared on one of three typewriters removed from the cabin.

Kaczynski, a 53-year-old former professor at the University of California at Berkeley, was arrested last week at the remote cabin near Lincoln, and was being held on a single count of possessing bomb components.

He has not been charged with any of the 16 Unabomber attacks that killed three people and injured 23 in nine states over the past 18 years. But unidentified federal officials said the manuscript left little room for doubt that Kaczynski was the Unabomber, The New York Times reported today.

The manifesto, entitled "Industrial Society and Its Future," was published last September by The Washington Post and the Times after consultation with the Justice Department.

The Unabomber had demanded publication as his price for ceasing his string of fatal bombing attacks. There have been no more attacks since the tome was published.

Also found with the manifesto was the original of a letter the Unabomber sent to the Times last year, the Times report said.

The Unabomber has sent several letters to the Times, and it wasn't immediately clear which one this was, the Times said, but it was believed to be one relating to a demand that the manifesto be published.

The manifesto, which attacks the dehumanizing nature of modern society, was apparently a key in identifying Kaczynski. His brother, David Kaczynski, contacted the FBI after reading the manifesto and matching it to letters sent by Theodore Kaczynski.

A senior federal official in Washington disclosed earlier this week that all the Unabomber's communications, including the manifesto, had been typed on the same typewriter.

Besides the manifesto, the Unabomber wrote a number of letters, all of them signed "FC," to newspapers as well as to professors, scientists and at least one victim.

Beef scare is termed 'mad politician disease'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) --Meeting in one of the world's beef capitals for a conference planned long before the mad cow crisis, leaders of the reeling meat industry tried to put a brave face on the future of beef.

But whenever talk turned to mad cows--and Britain's plans to destroy millions of cattle--they left no doubt about who they felt needed extermination: bungling politicians and reckless journalists.

Chris Oberst, president of the International Meat Confederation, accused the British government of "extraordinary naivete." He blamed it for spreading fears of a possible link between mad cow disease and a degenerative brain disease in humans.

"It's a case of mad politician disease," he told an audience of some 400 people, who sat patiently through 15 hours of slide shows and speeches this week on the marketing of beef, chicken and pork.

Oberst also blamed the news media, saying: "The tragedy isn't what happened, it's the way it's been reported."

John Huston, president of the U.S. National Cattlemen's Beef Association, agreed, saying: "The worst thing for me is this nickname 'mad cow' and the inevitable cartoons that have appeared since."

Topics at the International Meat Confederation's 11th World Congress ranged from "The Effects upon Meat Exporters after Changes in the New Zealand Economy" to "Foot and Mouth Disease in South America" and "Strategies to Capture Red Meat Consumers."

Some speakers confessed that the mad cow crisis forced them to make last-minute changes to their speeches, or simply improvise. Still, the topic was for the most part reserved to the labyrinthian corridors of the bank where the conference was being held.

In general, participants were upbeat about the industry's future, and they stressed that no country was looking to capitalize on Britain's misfortune.

Couple waits two weeks to find winning ticket

AUSTIN (AP) - A Bandera County couple has claimed their share of a nearly $26 million Lotto jackpot.

George and Elizabeth Herdon waited nearly two weeks before checking their Quick Pick tickets for the March 13 drawing.

"We buy them and put them in a pile," Mrs. Herdon said Thursday as the couple collected their first payment of $323,000.27.

The Herdon Estate Trust will collect 19 more payments to complete its $6,483,750.27 winnings.

"We want to get some additional investment advice and go from there," George Herdon said.

Four tickets match the winning numbers, 1, 9, 19, 24, 38 and 48, in the $25.9 drawing. All four winnings have been claimed.

GRADY W. WILSON JR.

April 5, 1996
Grady William Wilson Jr., 72, Hereford native and former resident, died April 5, in Sturgis, S.D. He was the brother of Elvin Wilson of Hereford.

Services and burial were held Tuesday in Sturgis.

Mr. Wilson was a retired rancher and lived here until about 1960 when he moved to South Dakota. He was the son of an early-day Westway couple, the late Grady and Maude Wilson.

Survivors also include his wife, Juanita Wilson; two daughters, four sisters, two other brothers and several grandchildren.

Business Briefs

First Financial Bankshares, Inc., Friday reported net income of $4,444,000, or 83 cents per share for the quarter ended March 31, 1996. The amount represented an increase of approximately 17 percent over comparable earnings for the first quarter of 1995.

Hereford State Bank is an affiliated bank of First Financial. Kenneth T. Murphy, chairman and CEO of First Financial Bankshares, Abilene, stated, "The company's earnings trend continues to be positive, plus our operations benefited during the quarter from the completed acquisitions of Weatherford National Bank and Citizens National Bank of Weatherford."

Consolidated assets of the company at the end of March totaled $1.19 billion, as compared to $1.04 billion the year before. Shareholders' equity amounted to $122.7 million, representing an increase of $11.4 million from the prior year.

Emergency Services

The offense and arrest report at Hereford Police Department Saturday morning included the following activities:

--A 22-year-old man was arrested in the 800 block of Brevard on charges of public intoxication and failure to identify.

--Officers issued 26 traffic tickets Friday and checked four minor traffic accidents. No curfew violations were reported.

--The fire department responded to a grass fire at 10:08 p.m. north of the Labor Camp under the bridge.

--Three domestic disturbances were reported--in the 400 block of Ave. E, the 200 block of E. Park, and the 100 block of Ave. H.

--Theft incidents were reported in the 500 block of Ave H and in the 200 block of Fir.

--Harassment cases were reported in the 500 block of Union, and in the 100 block of Beach.

--Failure to maintain vehicle insurance was reported at US-60 and Lawton.

Sentence passed in district court

In a 222nd District Court session Friday, sentence was passed on a defendant charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and the terms of probation of a defendant were modified.

Verline Vera, 26, entered a guilty plea to the assault charge. She was granted deferred adjudication probation of seven years.

On the state's motion to revoke probation, Judge David Wesley Gulley signed an agreed order to modify probation of Emilio Reyna. He had been convicted of indecency with a child and given a 10-year probated sentence. Reyna will be placed on intensive supervision for a year.

Special week declared

Membership drive leaders

Serving as co-chairpersons of the Hereford Community Concert Association's membership drive are, from left, Bobby Boyd, Marlene Hendershot and Linda Weaver. They are shown looking over some of the materials for the 60 volunteers who will call on residents to join the association or renew their memberships.

Community concert group starts drive

Volunteers are calling on area residents to renew support for the Hereford Community Concert Association in the 1996-1997 season.

Workers gathered Saturday at the home of Helen Langley, association president, for a kickoff party for the annual drive.

Three programs have been booked for Hereford during the next season but ticket-holders will have a total of 12 performances they may attend. A reciprocal agreement allows members in Hereford, Pampa, Borger and Plainview to attend concerts in any of the four.

Coming to Hereford in the fall will be Little Eagles of Siberia, a troupe of 33 young persons, age 12 to 19, who perform in colorful costumes, singing and playing instruments.

Later in the season, a veteran entertainer, Max Morath, will bring his own brand of wit and musicianship to the Hereford High School stage.

Concluding the concert programs for the year will be the Americus Brass Band, recreating the Dodge City Cow-Boy Band that toured American cities from 1879 to 1914.

The membership drive, using a theme of "Music Like You've Never Seen," will reach throughout the community to gather support for the concert program.

Purpose of the Community concert concept is to offer professional entertainment at affordable prices.

An adult membership for the year costs $20. A student ticket is $10 for the year and a family membership may be purchased for $50.

Leading the drive this year are co-chairpersons, Bobby Boyd, Marlene Hendershot and Linda Weaver. Volunteers in the drive will contact current members for renewals.

New members also will be recruited for the association. A bonus for new members will be admission to the last concert of the current season.

Appearing at 3 p.m. on April 28, the London Piano Duo will close out the 1995-1996 season.

A representative of the Community Concerts New York office, Kay Nolan of San Antonio, has been in Hereford during the last week, working with members in preparations for the drive. She works with 27 communities that sponsor the concerts program.

During her visit to Hereford, she visited with individuals interested in Community Concerts and spoke to civic groups, including Golden K Kiwanis and Hereford Senior Citizens, to explain the Community Concerts concept and encourage participation.

Stock shows vows to stand firm on scholarship policy

HOUSTON (AP) - Despite outrage from minority leaders who promised to "play hardball," the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo said Friday it will not change a policy restricting its scholarship program to U.S. citizens.

A long-simmering debate over the citizens-only scholarship policy erupted last week when the rodeo's executive committee voted to rescind a Vietnamese-born student's $10,000 award.

The 18-year-old student, a Houston Independent School District senior who asked the rodeo not to release her name, was told of the official decision Wednesday.

Rodeo spokesman Leroy Shafer said the student's non-citizenship apparently slipped by a screening committee but was noticed a day after the February award. The student was immediately told about her likely disqualification, he said.

Shafer defended the executive committee's vote, saying the panel was simply enforcing a policy enacted when the group awarded its first scholarship in 1957. This year, the rodeo will give out $2,741,000 in direct college awards.

"We feel we are a Texas organization and association and an American organization and association," he said, adding that there are 10 times more scholarship applicants than awards. "We want to give preference to citizens who are U.S. citizens."

Young adults read newspapers

WASHINGTON (AP) - A study sponsored by the newspaper industry says 42 percent of young adults read newspapers daily or almost every day.

"This study shows that the 'MTV Generation' didn't give up reading newspapers in exchange for watching television and illustrates that young people rely on newspapers for unique information other media can't provide," said John F. Sturm, president of the Newspaper Association of America. The NAA cosponsored the research with the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Among 38 million Americans age 16 to 29 - "Generation X" - 24 percent of those asked said they read a newspaper every day, 18 percent said almost every day, 21 percent said two or three times a week and 11 percent said only on Sundays. Twenty-one percent said seldom, 4 percent never.

The "Baby Boomers" - Americans age 30 to 49, born in the post-World War II years - read papers somewhat more consistently, the study found.

Thirty-seven percent said they read papers every day, 16 percent almost every day. Only 14 percent said "seldom," and 2 percent said never.

The study was conducted by Yankelovich Partners of Norwalk, Conn. Most of the research was drawn from a 1994 study of 4,000

Americans over age 16.

The study said that within Generation X:

-44 percent said they read newspapers more frequently than they did a year ago.

-54 percent said they read newspapers to obtain news in detail.

-51 percent read a paper for coverage of movies, concerts and plays.

Promise Keepers will hold another rally here Thursday, beginning at 7 p.m. in the HISD Administration Building. Keith Chadwick, a state representative of Promise Keepers, will be the featured speaker, and Jamie Johnson will present the music. Tom Simons, one of the active local PK members, urges area men to attend and "bring a friend."

We think our readers might find good food for thought in the following tips for raising children, written by a mother of three, Jo Frisbie von Tiehl. It appeared in the March issue of the United Auto Workers monthly newsletter.

The ABC's of Raising Decent Children

- A is for Accountability. Hold your children accountable for their behavior
- B is for Boundaries. Set specific limits and make clear the repercussions if those limits are exceeded.
- C is for Consistency. Hold to the same principles and practices.
- D is for Discipline. Make the punishment fit the crime. Never discipline in anger.
- E is for Example. Children are in greater need of models than critics. Set a good example.
- F is for Forgiveness. Practice and teach the importance of forgiving.
- G is for Giving. Teach the joy of giving, not only to family and friends, but to strangers in need.
- H is for sense of Humor. Promote laughter with your children.
- I is for Imagination. Be creative, and play with your children. Make up stories or songs.
- J is for Justice. Be fair and insist that they be fair also.
- K is for Knowing your children's friends and their parents as well as their teachers.
- L is for Listening. Listen to your children. It will teach them how to listen to others, and their thoughts will give you insight.
- M is for Morals. Be sure your standard of conduct is sound.
- N is for No. Use it and mean it.
- O is for Outdoors. Provide as much outdoor activity as possible. Teach respect for nature.
- P is for Pressure. Reduce the pressure on your children, but insist they maintain high standards.
- Q is for Questions. Pay close attention to their questions and give simple answers unless they demand more.
- R is for Respect. Show respect, teach respect and earn respect.
- S is for Source of Strength. Share your own faith or beliefs with your children. Faith can be their port in the storms of life later.
- T is for Togetherness. Have special, designated times to be together as a family--but know when to let go, too.
- U is for Uniqueness. Understand the uniqueness of each child and let that child be who he or she is.
- V is for Voice. Tone of voice can convey more to a child than the words spoken.
- W is for Words. Keep your word. Promises broken destroy trust.
- X is for eXamine. Examine constantly and be aware.
- Y is for You. Take care of yourself mentally, physically and spiritually.
- A happy parent helps a child to be happy.
- Z is for Zowie! Who would have thought they would grow up so quickly?

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Growing up in a cultural desert probably was a test of character for those of us who began life during the Depression and grew up during World War II.

We only read about symphony orchestras in books and knew there was Grand Opera because a major oil company sponsored opera performances on the radio. Knowing there was the opportunity to learn and enjoy didn't mean we did, though. All we knew about ballet was the men and women wore funny costumes and danced on their toes.

But we did have a movie theatre and besides the weekly cowboy show and serial on Saturday, there were motion pictures that introduced us to another world.

While I was almost grown before I saw a man in a real tuxedo, I had seen hundreds on the silver screen. Remember Fred Astaire? He danced around with Ginger Rogers (and other partners) during my time. And, he always wore white tie and tails. What a way to live!

Motion pictures brought us such child stars as Shirley Temple and Jane Withers, Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney and, later, Elizabeth Taylor and Roddy McDowell. They all were involved in shennanigans of some kind or other but, in those words of wisdom, they were all good clean fun. And they never used bad words.

Even the Bowery Boys whose venue was a part of the world that was as foreign as another country didn't send shudders through parents.

Along with thousands of other girls of that era, my hair was curled on special occasions in the same kind of ringlets Shirley Temple wore. Although I acted more like the tomboy Jane Withers, my mother tried to instill Shirley Temple in me.

When the movie theatre's management tried give-aways to lure customers to slow nights, the owners had drawings for Shirley Temple and Jane Withers dolls. As I recall, my heart's desire was one looking like the curly-haired star. But, I won a Withers. I must not complain, though. Just winning was pretty great.

Don't misunderstand. The pictures we saw were not culturally exhilarating but they did represent something totally different from our own drab world. At the time, we didn't call our hometown drab but the movies showed us there was something else out there. It was magic, if you will.

There wouldn't seem to be any comparison with this era. Television takes children all over the world, either on commercial or public channels. Besides those opportunities, educational videos are big business and bring even the cosmos to preschoolers.

Hopefully, the television viewing and computer games won't produce a nation of children unable to read.

As I listen to conversations among children, I'm taken with the extent of their vocabularies. And, their ability to use words in proper context.

My grandchildren love a series called "The Magic School Bus." They have videos and they have a computer game. Both my grandsons (age 5 and 5 1/2) can name the planets, in order of their proximity to earth. I can't even remember the names.

Public television brings "Sesame Street," the top-rated children's program, and others that may be the best nursery school extant.

Now here's the but . . . Will my grandchildren and others like them become bored as they grow older because they've already seen and done so much?

When they go off to college, will there be anything left to cause their eyes to widen and their mouths to fall open?

Somehow I can't think of anything worse than not being awe-struck by beautiful music or dance. Or hungry for some new knowledge. Or entranced with beautiful art and stage performance.

Call this my prayer -- that our children don't grow up with a cynical "been there, done that" attitude, that the beautiful things of the world don't get lost in the age of computers and television.

Learn the issues -- watch the forum

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

In case you missed last Thursday's candidate forum, please be sure to watch it on TV sometime between now and the election -- it will give you a chance to see what the candidates think about issues important to Hereford.

For those of you who didn't go, the forum was about three hours long, thanks to a really good turnout of candidates.

For those with a long memory, there were six candidates for county office in the November general election.

We also saw four city commission candidates, four running for hospital board and seven going for seats on the school board.

Because of recent events surrounding the school board, I expect many in the audience focused on what the candidates for those races said, but I know I learned some interesting things about the city and hospital races as well.

It was refreshing to see such camaraderie among the city commissioners (since those who attended were all incumbents), although poor Eugene Condarco -- a new appointee -- did sometimes look like the new in-law sitting at the table with the siblings while sharing space with Wayne Winget, Carey Black and Roger Eades.

But I have no doubt that, in another three years, he will be at ease with them.

That unity was expressed by several school board candidates and, having sat through several acrimonious meetings of the school board in recent months, I can only second their hope that a new board will bring a spirit of harmony and unity to the school district.

I'm only sorry that we were not able to provide more complete coverage of the forum in Friday's Brand.

It was impossible to publish all the remarks, so I instead tried to focus on those issues that were of importance to the residents of Hereford.

Again, if you want to hear the whole thing, it will be televised on Hereford Cablevision between now and the election. I'd recommend you do, so you will be informed when you vote on May 4.

Back when the Soviet Union collapsed in 1991, I maintained that this surge of democracy and the establishment of democratically-elected governments was just a big farce.

I have always believed that, in the long run, democracy and 75 years of communism will be proven to be incompatible, and residents of the former Soviet republics will decide they are better off with communism and totalitarianism than with what they have now.

I say all that to preface a story I picked up a while back from the Associated Press out of Moscow.

Seems the Russian parliament has voted overwhelming that the breakup of the Soviet Union was illegal and demanded steps be taken to restore it.

It seems like this is probably a large hole in the dike of democracy that will ultimately lead to a collapse of the experiment and return to the former state of events.

In fact, the article notes, the Communist Party has become very popular in recent years, partly due to a loss of prestige as a Superpower and partly because of economic hardship brought about by the collapse.

I'll keep an eye on these events in the coming months and try to keep you informed about what is happening there.

But let's consider this. Through all this "reform" in that part of the world, the United States has been industriously scrapping its nuclear weapons arsenal, gutting the military and closing bases right and left.

If the Soviet Union -- with all its dreams of world domination and hatred of the United States -- revives, then I would say we would be in serious trouble from a defensive point of view.

Let's just hope and pray that never happens.

(But I'll still not be surprised if it does.)

Tax overhaul talk this year, but no action

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's going to be a lot of talk about overhauling the American way of taxes this campaign year. There'll be talk, not action, on the Republican promise of a flatter, fairer tax system - and even talk of an end to the Internal Revenue Service.

Since Monday is income tax deadline day, the Republican House is taking up a constitutional amendment that would make it far more difficult for Congress to raise taxes, but that's largely symbolic. Written into the Constitution, it would require two-thirds votes for any significant increase in federal taxes.

It would take a two-thirds vote in the House and then the Senate to approve the amendment and put it up for state ratification. While that is not likely, certainly not in the Senate, it's a handy talking point in a political year. Sponsors call it "the taxpayer bill of rights."

Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican nominee-in-waiting, has advocated that three-fifths majorities be required to increase taxes. In addition, when he was still contesting for the GOP nomination, he said flatly, "In a Bob Dole administration, there will not be a tax increase."

Beyond the budget impasse over immediate tax cuts, how much and who gets the benefits, there's debate over the system itself. It flared in the flat-tax campaign of Steve Forbes, whose issue will outlast his up-and-then-out bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

Dole avoids tight commitments to any formula, preferring legislative leeway. He pledges fundamental reform. "We need a fairer tax system, we need a flatter system, we need a simpler system," Dole says. But he stops short of the pure flat-tax advocates, who would drop tax deductions for home mortgage interest. He says that should be preserved along with the break for charitable contributions.

Since Dole and company will oversee the Republican platform, that's about as specific as it is likely to get.

The flat-tax people aren't that patient. Rep. Dick Armey, the House majority leader, has been pushing the idea for two years. "I don't write legislation for the heck of it," he said in a recent TV interview. "I intend to pass it."

But change that fundamental is hard to manage even in the political pause between election years.

The White House contends that Republican flat-tax plans could worsen the deficit unless the rates were set so high as to burden the middle class, while benefiting upper income taxpayers. The administration favors simplification. Clinton, like Dole, wants the mortgage interest deduction preserved.

There are rival formulas, too: a national sales tax, a value-added tax and variations on them all.

Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, wants the income tax abolished outright, and the IRS shut down, to be replaced by a tax on the consumption of goods and services.

But not this year. Archer says this is a year for exploring the options, explaining them to the American taxpayer and seeking consensus.

First, though, the campaign arguments. There are indications that voters may be expecting more than debate. A Pew Research Center poll shows 59 percent consider tax reform a high priority, putting it fourth on the list of voter concerns.

The political parties already are broadcasting rival TV commercials on the issue. The Democratic ad says Clinton sought to cut taxes for 40 million Americans but "Dole votes no." The Republican National Committee has just launched a $1.5 million ad campaign accusing Clinton of vetoing tax relief for families with children.

That's shorthand on both sides, since the specific items involved are part of the far broader debate about the balancing the budget and cuts in spending, along with taxes. A $500-a-child tax credit was part of the GOP budget Clinton vetoed. He proposed a version aimed at lower-income families. He also wants to expand the tax credit for the working poor, which could have been curbed in the GOP budget.

Ultrasound test for breast lumps OK'ed

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Food and Drug Administration approved a powerful ultrasound Friday to help doctors determine when lumps in women's breasts are noncancerous - so those women can skip a common surgical cancer test.

Advanced Technology Laboratories predicts its High-Definition Imaging, or HDI, ultrasound eventually will cut by 40 percent the 700,000 breast biopsies performed annually in the United States.

Out of those biopsies, 180,000 women are diagnosed with breast cancer every year. The rest have benign lumps.

Women must undergo a regular mammogram to detect any suspicious cells in their breasts. The ultrasound is intended to help doctors then decide which of those women need a biopsy to tell if the lesion is cancerous or benign and which can safely skip that outpatient surgery.

A biopsy costs about $2,500, while the 15-minute, painless ultrasound will cost $75 to $300, Seattle-based ALT said.

"No test is 100 percent, although this is very close," said Dr. Brian Garra, a breast cancer specialist at Georgetown University Medical Center, who advised the FDA on the machine's effectiveness.

"It doesn't mean a clean bill of health," he warned, noting that women who likely have benign lumps still must be watched to ensure the mass doesn't change, which can signal cancer.

A mammogram displays suspicious masses in breasts as blurry white spots against normal tissue.

Doctors can sometimes tell from a clear mammogram that the lesion is merely a cyst and may tell the woman just to get rechecked in a few months.

Many doctors to be safe order a biopsy, cutting out a tiny portion of breast tissue to check for cancerous cells. But doctors want to reduce the number of unnecessary biopsies performed each year to spare women anxiety, pain and expense.

Ultrasound sends high frequency sound waves into the body, which reflect back to create images. While weaker ultrasound is used in numerous medical procedures, ATL's is the first strong enough to show a clear picture of breast lumps. If they have, for example, smooth edges and no irregular colors or dark shadows, they probably are benign, ATL says.

ATL said that when it tested the ultrasound on 1,021 breast lumps, it was 99 percent accurate in diagnosing lumps as benign. It missed one cancer - hidden in the shadow of a large cyst.

The ultrasound did have a high false positive rate: 41 percent of the lumps HDI indicated were cancerous turned out to be benign. But those are women who would have had biopsies anyway.

The ultrasound cannot picture the very smallest breast lesions, so FDA scientists recommended it be used on those at least 2.5 inches large. Nine hospitals in eight states - in California, Texas, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Illinois, Ohio, Louisiana and Connecticut - already have trained doctors to use the ultrasound.

Plane wreckage clears up 2 McAllen mysteries

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - The discovery of plane wreckage in the mountains of southern Mexico has helped solve two mysteries in this South Texas city: the 20-year-old disappearance of a doctor and his wife and the identity of two skulls found six months ago in their home.

"It really is a relief," said 86-year-old Evelyn Blondeau, the executor of Dr. David White's will and a friend of his wife, Mable. "I just couldn't believe it after so long a time."

Isaac White, the couple's son, said he also was relieved by the discovery.

"We hope to have some good news in terms of some developments because we haven't had any for 20 years," said White, a Dallas attorney.

Mexican police found the wreckage of a Beechcraft Bonanza plane this week in the Santa Marta mountains near the city of San Andres Tuxtla, just south of Veracruz. They identified White as one of the victims and said the bodies of two women also were found.

Searchers planned to fly by helicopter to the crash site Friday.

Details of the Whites' disappearance remain sketchy, but some information has been developed through police reports and family and friends.

The couple were reported missing to McAllen police on Jan. 4, 1975, shortly after they had left on a trip to Central America. White was 64 at the time, but there was no age available for Mrs. White, police said.

Morgan Talbot, the couple's attorney, said they planned to fly in White's Beechcraft Bonanza to Florida, then on to Central America and Veracruz. Talbot said he didn't know the purpose of the trip.

"He was a man with a lot of curiosity and liked to go places and do things, but he liked to fly his airplane as well," he said. "He was an avid flyer."

McAllen police, meanwhile, said the discovery of the wreckage has helped answer some questions regarding two skulls and other bones found in the Whites' home last October.

A repairman reconditioning the house for new owners found the bones in a burlap bag stuffed into insulation in the attic. Authorities had been concerned the bones were those of the Whites.

Dry spring makes Internet good place to find bluebonnets

By DAVID SIKES
Killeen Daily Herald

KILLEEN, Texas - Bluebirds, bluegrass, blue skies, blue seas. All capture the essence of Mother Nature. But to a Texan or anyone else lucky enough to see a country road cutting through a field blanketed with bluebonnets, there's no more breathtaking sight. Painters, photographers, naturalists, children, even dogs are drawn to the Hill Country bloom that is typically Texas in the springtime.

But, sadly, not this year. For the most part, autumn's drought has left only Texans blue this April.

So far, this year seems to be the worst bluebonnet showing in 10 or 15 seasons, according to wildflower watchers.

Usually, travelers to and from Austin, Lampasas, Marble Falls and even as far south as Brenham and Uvalde are treated to virtually miles of roadside vistas of violet. The sight has prompted many to stop along bluebonnet-bordered highways to wallow and wade in purple. Typically, on sunny days in April and May, hundreds of motorists can be seen taking snapshots of their children and dogs running through the patches of pastel.

But this spring, photos and paintings of the purple perennials may be all many Texans will have unless they are willing to put out a little extra effort to find the now-elusive adopted flower of Texas.

The five or so varieties of bluebonnets officially became the state flower of Texas in 1971 after a selection process that spanned seven decades. The two predominant species of bluebonnets grow naturally only in Texas.

The bluebonnet season is generally from mid-March or April to the end of May, depending on rainfall and temperature. A wet fall coupled with a sunny spring provide the best conditions for a bountiful crop, according to James Davis, Bell County agricultural extension agent.

Of course, it might be difficult to convince visitors of Texas' usually manic wildflower growth because of their scarcity this season.

But, for those craving an immediate wildflower fix, there are several sources that may be able to help - one of which may seem rather unlikely.

It seems that in Texas, even the information superhighway has bluebonnets on it.

In late March, the Texas Rural Communities organization began an Internet service called the BluebonNET.

The service provides net surfers and nature lovers with all the information needed to seek and find wildflowers throughout Central Texas. The idea is the brainchild of Pete McRae, special assistant for project development for TRC.

TRC is a non-profit organization concerned with rural development, preservation and tourism. And according to general manager Leland Beatty, its new method of promoting rural Texas is catching on quickly in the wake of this year's bluebonnet crisis.

"There are some really good patches of wildflowers to be found," Beatty said. "You just have to look for them. That's where we come in. This is a great benefit to nature lovers, consumers and the (rural) communities."

Here's how it works. Anyone with access to the Internet through a personal computer with a web browser and a modem may access the BluebonNET home page. Once on the page, people can get directions to wildflower sites, hidden bluebonnet patches, area lodging and restaurants.

They can even download maps and book accommodations at more than 20 bed-and-breakfast establishments.

Updates on where wildflowers are coming into bloom are submitted at least weekly by operators of each bed and breakfast and "reporters" from chambers of commerce.

"Usually the fields are thick with bluebonnets around here," said Beverly Solomon, BluebonNET reporter and part-owner of the Moses-Hughes Ranch, a Lampasas bed and breakfast, which depends on the abundance of flowers to attract visitors each spring. "But so far, we've only seen a couple of acres of plants, and they haven't bloomed yet."

Perhaps the fact that the bluebonnets aren't as prominent this year is prompting wildflower seekers to look to other sources, such as the BluebonNET, to find the usually bountiful blooms.

"We had so many 'hits' the first few days we had to switch to a faster machine to accommodate the load," Beatty said. "In just two days this (past) week we had more than 550 people access the site. The number of hits depends a lot on the amount of media attention we get."

The BluebonNET site may be reached at <http://www.bluebonnet.com>

Another source for wildflower seekers is the National Wildflower Resource Center in Austin.

The 42-acre center, opened last year, is a $10 million complex inspired by Lady Bird Johnson and dedicated to the splendors of North America's indigenous flora.

The service supplies information similar to that of the BluebonNET, but also provides facts and hints through an information clearinghouse for a small fee. A wildflower hot line and travel tips are also available for those planning wildflower trips and tours.

The center receives between 1,000 and 1,500 calls a week from people inquiring about Texas wildflowers, according to Patricia Alholm, NWRC public relations and marketing director, who said this year's news isn't as good as she'd like.

"There are some bluebonnets out there, but they don't stand out as much against the brown grass," she said. "You have to look a little harder. They're just not as vibrant."

Despite the scarcity of early blooms, Alholm urged wildflower lovers not to despair. When the bluebonnets, Indian paintbrushes and primroses are gone, that still leaves 497 native wild plants in bloom throughout Texas, she said.

"Actually, there are a greater variety of wildflowers in bloom in May when the bluebonnets start disappearing than any other time," Alholm said.

The annual Wildflower Days festival in April is the center's biggest celebration of the year. Billed as the nation's premier wildflower fest, this year's event is scheduled for this weekend.

A variety of guest speakers, performers, food and shows are included at the nature party set in the Texas Hill Country.

For up-to-date information on Texas wildflower sites from March 20 through May 30, call (512) 832-4059. For NWRC information, call (512) 292-4200.

Officials at the center said they expect more calls than ever this season as wanting wildflower seekers discover a scant supply of the evasive flowers.

Perhaps next year, spring will once again reveal to more than a fortunate few the annual Texas transformation of its stark winter landscape into an impressionistic scene reminiscent of Monet.

It's enough to humble even the most devout Texan.

'Mascots' of San Francisco don't let on how old they are

By MARTHA IRVINE

Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -- Don't ask them when they were born.

There's no need to inquire about when they graduated from high school or ask for any other piece of information that would give away their age.

Twins Vivian and Marian Brown aren't about to budge.

"We're 21-plus," the perky retirees like to say.

Even Ellis Schuman, their piano teacher for 10 years, doesn't know.

"It's the best-kept secret in San Francisco, as far as the twins are concerned," Schuman says, laughing.

Image is everything for the identical pair who've become the city's unofficial mascots. Known as the San Francisco Twins, they have gained international attention, starring in commercials and on billboards for everything from Reebok athletic shoes to IBM, Southwest Airlines and Joe Boxer underwear.

The fame has made them sticklers about collecting any and all photographs taken of them.

"We have more than a thousand," Marian says.

Around town, the self-proclaimed clothes horses are known for their perfectly matched outfits and overlapping banter that has earned them the nicknames "Chip and Dale."

"Their whole attitude is very uplifting," Schuman says.

No matter how much they smile and giggle, don't take these sisters for pushovers.

"We do what we want to do," Vivian says. "If we don't want to do it - no way."

And if they have something to say, they say it - including opinions on everything from immigration policy to safe sex and subsidized housing.

Appearance has to be their favorite topic.

"We say kids today all dress alike. It's awful. All those baggy pants," Marian says. "When people dress up, they look like they're going places."

Their own clothing is a study in repetition, as is just about everything else in their lives.

They've lived in the same rent-controlled apartment on Nob Hill since 1978, sharing one bedroom with twin beds.

Each day, they rise at 9 a.m. in time to watch "The Price is Right" at 10.

When Marian is not cooking dinner on Tuesdays and Thursdays, they eat at the same series of restaurants every week.

And, without fail, they show up 45 minutes late for church on Sundays so they miss the hand-clapping Pentecostal music.

"God is not deaf," Vivian says. She quickly adds, "But the pastor preaches the Word."

The life they've created in San Francisco is a long way from Mattawan, Mich., the sleepy farming town where they grew up. As they tell it, the town had a grocery store, a filling station, a church and Mattawan High School, where the twins were co-valedictorians.

"But it wasn't because we were geniuses," says Marian, who, like her sister, couldn't wait to shake the snow of Mattawan and nearby Kalamazoo, where both received degrees in business administration at Western Michigan University.

Ever independent, they still roll their eyes at their late father's suggestion that "Girls get married." They often tell the story of a set of fraternal twins who asked for their respective hands years ago, but to no avail.

"There's nothing glamorous about housework," Vivian says. "Or changing babies' diapers," Marian adds. "I knew that at age 16."

Instead, the twins taught high school and later worked as secretaries for the Kalamazoo-based Upjohn pharmaceutical company, now Pharmacia & Upjohn Inc.

By the early 1970s, Vivian's chronic bronchial condition was worsening, prompting a move to San Francisco, their permanent home since 1973.

"I feel more at home out here than we ever did (in Michigan)," Marian says.

Why don't they drive each other crazy?

"We agree on the majors and disagree on the minors," they often say.

Traditional instruments making comeback in Texas

By LYNN BULMAHN
Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO, Texas - America is a melting pot. Not only did people come to our shores from around the world, they also brought their music and traditional instruments.

But with the advent of mass communications, people began putting aside such instruments in favor of listening to recorded or broadcast music. And playing more modern instruments.

But things are changing. Today, there is a re-emergence of more traditional types of musical instruments as modern Americans discover the unique sounds.

According to family stories, as a child Danny Kohl heard bagpipe music on the radio and the sound made his eyes light up with excitement.

His life hasn't been the same since. Kohl has had a lifelong devotion toward the pipes and taught himself how to play them.

"I have had an extreme love for the bagpipes and for the Scottish culture as long as I can remember," he said.

As a teen-ager, Kohl built a set of bagpipes using cane poles, wood and a bag made of a truck tire's inner tube. He worked on them for three years, basing the instrument on a picture since he'd never seen the real thing.

He was able to pick out a few tunes on the crude pipes. Later, when he'd purchased his first set of real bagpipes, Kohl said he was amazed at how close he'd come to duplicating the real thing.

Kohl got a lead on ordering that first set of pipes in 1961. He was serving with the 101st Airborne Division in Kentucky and mentioned to an Army friend that he'd always wanted to play bagpipes. The friend suggested he contact the Iowa State music department, where an all-girl band of pipers played at football games. The Iowa band director wrote back with an address for a Seattle catalog company from which Kohl ordered his first set of bagpipes.

"I practiced in the barracks until the guys started complaining," Kohl said. Then he started going to a service club that had sound-proof studio rooms.

"Every night after chow, I'd go practice," he said. "I learned to play by myself, largely by trial and error."

Kohl is not Scottish - but neither are the bagpipes.

The instrument's history can be traced back to the ancient Romans approximately 25 centuries before Christ.

The earliest bagpipes had reeds so strong that a player would have to put leather protection on his face to blow them. They could be heard some 10 miles away.

The Scots perfected the instrument in 1700.

A traditional Scottish bagpipe is made of drones, the pipes going upward on the player's shoulder, and the chanter, which is the pipe in front. The chanter contains the eight holes on which a melody is played.

In the days before telephones or radios, Kohl said, the Scots used their pipes as communication devices.

They could relay messages clear across their country within about three minutes' time.

"I like the pipes just for the sound they have," Kohl said. "It's a haunting type sound."

The basic melody is not hard to play on the pipes, Kohl says. But the harmonics and embellishments are tricky. For instance, one sound is made by placing and moving the fingers on seven holes on the chanter - all on the count of one.

Keeping a steady air pressure is rather difficult as well. The bag is a reservoir of air, allowing the proper air pressure to be maintained while the piper takes a breath.

After Kohl moved to Central Texas, he'd go to the Gathering of the Clans each year in Salado. About five or six years ago, he said, he was asked to pipe for the Waco Police Department's first memorial service at Indian Spring Park.

He's also piped at weddings, funerals, McGregor's Founders Day and church services. His most touching performance, he said, was at a closed memorial service for the agents killed in the Mount Carmel siege in 1993. "It was quite an honor for me," he said.

Kohl said people are fascinated by the bagpipes. After all, few Texans have seen them up close.

On somber occasions, he said, a good piper will make the bagpipes sound as if they're crying. Perhaps that explains why the bagpipes are commonly used at police funerals and memorial services.

Yet the piper can also make them sound happy, like they're dancing with the tune.

"It's a very, very different instrument," Kohl said.

Music educator Theresa Ford can play a variety of instruments. Perhaps the two most fascinating are the hammered dulcimer and mountain dulcimer.

Despite the similar names, the dulcimers are distinctly different from one another.

"The word dulcimer means sweet sound," said Ford, who was a music educator and music therapist at Baylor University for 10 years.

Ford performs music on the hammered dulcimer at bookstores, choir concerts, festivals and Christmas programs. She's played at the Earle-Harrison House and at Daniel Historic Village locally.

People may think of the hammered dulcimer as something from pioneer days in America, but its roots reach back even farther.

"It's an old instrument which dates back thousands of years to the area around Persia," Ford said. "It has been found in countries all over the world. It goes by different names in different cultures."

It is believed to be a forerunner of the piano.

Ford said the first time she heard a hammered dulcimer, she loved its unique, almost ethereal, sound.

She's not the only one. "People generally are attracted to the sound because it's so different from anything they've ever heard," she said.

People are also amazed at its appearance. Its unique trapezoid shape is not like most other instruments.

It has 62 strings on two bridges set at slight angles to each other so the strings crisscross.

The instrument is complicated enough that a player can get the same pitch from three different places.

Plus tuning an instrument with that many strings can take as long as 20 minutes.

"It's more difficult to tune than a piano," Ford said.

Yet, like most folk instruments, it is designed so a person can pick out a tune by ear.

The hammered dulcimer came to the U.S. with immigrants from other countries. As they settled America, particularly in areas in the north, they would add this instrument to the ensembles playing in their dance bands. As the settlers moved west, she said, they took their hammered dulcimers with them.

While a hammered dulcimer is considered a folk instrument, it is by no means obsolete. Modern composers write music for it. In fact, Ford recently accompanied a choir singing a contemporary piece composed specifically for the hammered dulcimer.

Ford also teaches people to play the mountain dulcimer. This is an instrument held in the lap, which resembles a guitar. It has various names, including lap dulcimer and Appalachian dulcimer.

Its history is more recent than the hammered dulcimer. Ford said settlers in the eastern United States, in the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, began building the instrument.

They based it on their memories of stringed instruments in their native countries.

Again, strumming the three or four strings makes this folk instrument one that is easy to learn to play, Ford said. "It is similar to playing the guitar, but easier," she said.

Both dulcimer instruments are making a comeback along with such classic folk instruments as the autoharp, a chorded zither.

Ford conducts workshops for the state dulcimer society every year. She says there are journals devoted to the music.

"You can teach yourself or play by ear," she said. "And every time you learn one instrument, the next one is easier."

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) - A bus carrying blues artist Delbert McClinton's band struck a street sweeper and overturned on Saturday, injuring three people.

The accident occurred after a metal ladder fell onto Interstate 30 from the back of a pickup truck. As two men retrieved the ladder, a commercial street sweeper came to a short stop and was rammed from behind by the McClinton bus.

McClinton's driver, Eugene Kallaus, 44, of Riverside, Iowa, was pinned in the wreckage and had to be pulled out by firefighters. He was airlifted to Dallas Methodist Medical Center, where he was in serious condition with a fractured pelvis and a broken leg, officials said.

Both the street sweeper operator and the band's drummer, Wes Starr, 40, of Nashville, were treated for minor injuries and released.

Tennis team puts 4 entries in semis

The Hereford tennis team put three doubles teams and one singles player into the semifinals of the District 1-4A Tennis Tournament, being held in Borger. Hereford boasts the No. 1 seeds in boys doubles - Pete Vargas and Tyler Merrick - and girls doubles - Natalie McWhorter and Paige Robbins. Both won matches Friday to put them in the semifinals, which were to be played Saturday.

Rob Reinauer, the No. 3 seed in boys singles, and unseeded boys' pair Andrew Carr and B.J. Lockmiller also carried the Herd banner into the semifinals.

"We've got a chance to take some to regionals," Hereford coach Ed Coplen said.

The champion and runner-up in each bracket advances the Region 1-4A Tennis Tournament. The runner-up isn't necessarily the one that loses in the finals. With something called a playback, if the finals loser hasn't yet played the winner of the third-place match, they play to determine who advances to regionals.

Hereford players could lock up in boys doubles, although the Herd pairs were set to play teams from other schools in the semifinals.

Vargas and Merrick, the No. 1 seeds, received a bye in the first round, then defeated Love and Wallace of Randall, 6-1, 6-4. Carr and Lockmiller had to win two matches to get to the semis. They started off with a 6-0, 6-2 win over Caprock's Mendez and Garcia, then knocked off No. 3 seeds Holland and Jones of Dumas, 6-4, 6-2.

McWhorter and Robbins also had a first round bye. They defeated Willard and Fraley of Borger, 7-5, 6-4, in the second round.

Hereford other girls' doubles entry was Rachel Bezner and Annie Hoffman. They got by Caprock's Gossett and Bates in the first round, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, but then fell to No. 3 seeded Hodges and Munoz of Randall, 6-0, 6-2.

Reinauer won both his matches in straight sets, beating Randall's Kevin Bazan, 6-1, 6-1, and Borger's Shad Goldston, 6-3, 6-4.

Hereford's Scott Shaw beat Randall's James Larremore, 6-1, 7-5, in the first round. Then Shaw ran into No. 2 seed Matt Thompson of Borger; Thompson won, 6-1, 6-2.

Hereford's entries in the girls' singles bracket were Holly Weishaar and Amanda Kriegshauser.

Weishaar defeated Stephanie Burgess of Caprock, 6-2, 6-2, then had to face top-seeded Lacey Jordan of Borger; Jordan won, 6-2, 6-0.

Kriegshauser lost in three sets in the first round, falling to Mindy Hermosillo of Caprock, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Harrison claims regional spot in 3,200

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

Hereford's Jamie Harrison qualified for the regional track meet by finishing second in the 3,200-meter run Friday at the District 1-4A Track Meet in Borger. Three other Hereford athletes grabbed third-place finishes and alternate status.

Harrison ran the 3,200 in 12:05, just ahead of teammate Bethany Townsend, who finished third in 12:17 and will be an alternate. Pampa's Jenny Fatheree won the event in 12:01.

"That's the first time all year Jamie's run the two-mile (3,200)," Hereford girls' coach Martha Emerson said, meaning in track season. In cross country, Harrison led Hereford to the state meet running on two-mile courses.

"That was by far Bethany's best time. I think her best (previous) time was 12:49," Emerson said. "They really did run well."

Amy Andrews and Henry Hernandez were Hereford's other two alternates after Friday. Hernandez finished third in the pole vault, clearing 12-0, and Andrews took third in the long jump, leaping 15-6 1/2. Each could go to regionals if either of the top two finishers in their events can't compete.

In the boys' long jump, Michael High took fourth and Marquise Brown was fifth. High jumped 19-7 and Brown went 19-1 1/2.

Hereford didn't place in either the boys' discus or girls' shot put. Only seven events were completed on Friday; the rest of the events were to be completed Saturday.

The 3,200 run was the only running event completed Friday. Preliminary races were run Friday for the other running events, and they went smoothly for both Hereford teams. Emerson and boys' coach Ron Young both said they were pleased, and both mentioned that their relay teams did well and reached Saturday's finals.

"Overall it went real well, as far as who we thought would get in, did get in," Young said.

Hereford boys and girls placed several times in the eight junior varsity events that were completed:

Boys: Miguel Huerta, second, 3,200 run, 11:34.04; C.J. Kubacak, second, high jump, 5-4; Matt Cosby, third, long jump, 18-4; Stephen Cloud, fourth, long jump, 18-1; and Josh Alvarado, fourth, discus, 117-5.

Girls: Griselda Carrillo, fourth, 3,200 run, 14:40; Rachel Chavez, fourth, shot put, 27-2 1/2; Meredith Tabor, fourth, triple jump, 28-5 3/4; Amy Perrin, fifth, triple jump, 28-3; and Anna Delgado, sixth, 3,200 run, 15:18.

Burkett limits Dodgers

By The Associated Press

John Burkett has been perfect on a bowling lane, but not on a ballfield. Against the Los Angeles Dodgers on Friday night, Burkett retired his first 11 batters and took a no-hitter into the seventh. Brett Butler singled in the seventh and Raul Mondesi homered the next inning, leaving Burkett with a two-hitter in the Florida Marlins' 3-1 victory.

"I knew what was going on. It's like throwing a 300 game," said Burkett, who has rolled five 300s. "When you get four or five in a row, you kind of realize you've got something going. But you never expect it to happen."

Burkett (1-1) struck out seven and walked one. Butler's hit was a single up the middle starting the seventh.

"I put a little cutter over the plate and he got a base hit," Burkett said. "After that I just said, 'Hey, get them out and win the game.'"

Gary Sheffield homered twice off Ismael Valdes (0-1) at Dodger Stadium, and Greg Colbrunn homered once.

Branson's relay throw deflected into the dugout for an error that sent Bell home for a 10-7 lead.

Todd Jones (2-0) gave up a game-tying homer to Branson in the ninth.

Giants 4, Cubs 1

Mark Leiter (1-1) repeatedly worked out of trouble while allowing one run in six innings as San Francisco won its home opener.

Leiter allowed eight hits, walked two and hit a batter. He left nine runners on base, including the bases loaded in the second and third. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his second save.

Jaime Navarro (0-2) allowed four runs and six hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Braves 5, Padres 3

Rookie Jason Schmidt (2-0) won his second straight start, allowing three runs, two earned, and six hits in 6 2-3 innings at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Bullets whip T-Wolves, move closer to playoffs

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer

The Washington Bullets pulled within one game of a playoff spot. The Golden State Warriors missed a chance to pull even closer.

The races for the eighth and final playoff spots in each conference remained the big story as the NBA season entered its final 10 days.

In the East, Washington beat Minnesota 116-106 to move within a game of Miami and Charlotte. The Bullets, Heat and Hornets each have five games left.

"There's no pressure on us. The pressure's on Miami and Charlotte to hold the spot," Brent Price said.

In the West, the Warriors lost 92-81 on the road against the Lakers and failed to take advantage of Sacramento's surprising 99-98 loss at Vancouver. The Kings, who have five games left, maintained their 1 1/2-game lead.

"The job (getting to the playoffs) will be tougher now. This was one game we were supposed to win," Kings coach Garry St. Jean said.

Bullets 116, Timberwolves 106
At Landover, Md., the Bullets won their sixth in a row for their longest winning streak in seven years.

Juwan Howard had 26 points and 10 rebounds and Price added 22 points on 7-of-8 shooting, including four of the Bullets' 10 3-pointers. Jim McIlvaine, subbing for injured center George Muresan, had a career-high 12 points and eight rebounds.

Minnesota got as close as 69-66 in the third quarter, but Washington followed with an 11-0 run that began and ended with 3-pointers by Price for a 15-point cushion.

Lakers 92, Warriors 81
The Lakers outscored the Warriors 26-13 in the fourth quarter to hurt

Golden State's playoff chances.

Vlade Divac had 26 points and 10 rebounds, reserve Anthony Peeler scored 12 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter and Elden Campbell added 16 points and six rebounds for the Lakers.

Golden State took its final lead on a pair of foul shots by Jerome Kersey with 10:16 left. Los Angeles went ahead for good 19 seconds later on a basket by George Lynch off an assist from Magic Johnson, who had 10 points, nine assists and two rebounds.

Grizzlies 99, Kings 98
The Grizzlies scored the final nine points of the game to get their 13th victory.

Blue Edwards sank a 20-foot jump shot with 43.7 seconds left to give Vancouver the lead for good, and Bryant Reeves blocked a late shot by Mitch Richmond.

Richmond, who was selected for the U.S. Olympic team Thursday, was plagued by foul problems and had only 13 points.

"We had an eight-point lead with two minutes to go and didn't take care of business," Richmond said. "They got some crucial rebounds to get back into the game. They made the big baskets to win the game."

Pacers 111, Magic 101
The Magic lost for the fourth time in their last six home games.

Reggie Miller scored 29 points, Rik Smits had 24 and Indiana ended a 10-game losing streak on Orlando's home floor.

"We're happy," said Pacers coach Larry Brown. "We haven't experienced a win down here in a long time. I thought we played well. You've gotta play well here to beat this team, especially at the level Shaq's playing."

Shaquille O'Neal led Orlando with 33 points and 11 rebounds despite sitting out 11 minutes of the second quarter with three fouls.

Hawks 104, Bucks 97
At Atlanta, Craig Ehlo scored seven points during an 11-3 run in the final 2:50 and the Hawks recovered after blowing a 19-point first-half lead.

The Bucks cut the lead to 90-88 on Johnny Newman's layup with 3:05 to play. Grant Long then scored four points in a row and Ehlo followed with a 3-pointer and four free throws for a 101-91 lead with 25 seconds left.

Mookie Blaylock led the Hawks with 25 points and Long finished with 18 points and 12 rebounds. Stacey Augmon added 17 points and Christian Laettner 16.

Celtics 136, Raptors 108
At Boston, the Celtics got 24 points from Dana Barros and 22 from Rick Fox in posting their highest point total of the season.

Ex-Celtic Acie Earl scored 40 points for Toronto.

Griffey's huge homers lead M's

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Ken Griffey Jr. was a hit at the Hard Rock.

Griffey hit one of the longest balls in the history of SkyDome, a 451-foot drive Friday night that landed above the Hard Rock Cafe in right field.

Griffey homered twice, tying Detroit's Cecil Fielder for the major league lead with five, as the Seattle Mariners beat the Toronto Blue Jays 9-6.

The crowd of 31,293, plus the patrons inside the Hard Rock, cheered as Griffey rounded the bases after his big three-run homer. Griffey went 3-for-4, drove in four runs and scored three.

"When a guy has a good performance, the fans are going to recognize it," Griffey said. "I don't think it matters where you do it."

Jose Canseco hit what is considered the longest ball at SkyDome, a drive into the fifth deck in left field of Oakland in the 1989 AL playoffs. Toronto's Carlos Delgado hit the windows of the Hard Rock in 1994.

Edgar Martinez and Jay Buhner also homered for Seattle. Ed Sprague and John Olerud connected for Toronto.

Griffey hit a solo homer off Paul Quantrill (0-2) in the third inning for a 4-0 lead. In the seventh, with runners on first and third, he homered off Giovanni Carrara.

"In that situation, I'm just trying to get the ball to the outfield, because we've got a guy on third with less than two outs," Griffey said.

Sterling Hitchcock (3-0) improved to 4-0 lifetime against the Blue Jays. "Outstanding," was the way Hitchcock described Griffey's performance. "That's playoff material right there."

Yankees 4, Rangers 3
David Cone stopped Texas for seven innings and Ruben Sierra homered for the second straight day at Yankee Stadium.

Cone (2-0) struck out nine and allowed one run. Reliever John Wetteland gave up Dean Palmer's two-run homer in the ninth, but held on for a save.

Texas, which won its first seven games of the season, lost its second in a row. The Rangers swept a three-game series from New York last weekend in Texas.

Orioles 3, Twins 2
Mike Mussina allowed only three runners the whole way and Rafael Palmeiro hit a three-run homer for streaking Baltimore. At 8-1, the Orioles are off to the second-best start in team history; only the 1966 team (12-1) began better.

Mussina pitched a two-hitter, giving up home runs to Chuck Knoblauch and Scott Stahoviak. Knoblauch, who drew a walk to start the game, was the only other Minnesota batter to reach base.

Held to two singles by Rich Robertson for five innings, Baltimore broke loose in the sixth, capped by Palmeiro's homer.

Mussina improved to 10-1 lifetime against the Twins. The Orioles won their fourth in a row and now are 6-0 at Camden Yards this season.

Watson.

"Irrespective of who you play with, you play your own game," Norman said.

"I'm in charge of my score, and I can't influence anybody or anything else, so the rest of it is history," Faldo said.

Don't believe it.

They were the top two players in the world in the late 1980s, when Faldo was winning as many major championships as Norman was letting out of his grasp.

The turning point came in 1990 at St. Andrews. Tied after two rounds of the British Open, Faldo shot a 67 and went on to win by five strokes for his fourth major title.

Norman shot a 76 and wasn't heard from again for more than two years.

He has more going for him this year. A patient, hard-earned 69 on Friday gave him a 12-under-par 132 over two rounds on a course that is punishing the slightest of mistakes.

And, he has a four-stroke lead over Faldo, who shot a scrambling, opportunistic 67 in windy conditions.

"Who knows what will happen with four strokes?" Faldo said. "It looks like Greg is in control of everything the way he's going, so you've got to do the same thing. You've got to get aggressive and play hard."

Norman, who tied the course record with the best first-round score in Masters history - a 63 - looked like he might not hold up against tricky wind gusts and pin placements that invited trouble.

He made consecutive bogeys, with a poor putt up the fringe on No. 3 and a fat shot from the greenside bunker on No. 4.

Norman was even par for the day when his 7-iron climbed high above the tree line and caught a gust of wind on the par-3 12th hole, falling short of the green and trickling toward Rae's Creek.

And then it stopped.

Fred Couples' ball on No. 12 was halted by a blade of grass when he won the 1992 Masters. Norman's was saved by a spongy row of grass 14 inches from the water.

"If it went in the water, I would have panicked," he conceded later. "They haven't done what they did last year to the front, where they shaved it down. I think it's a great move considering what happened to me."

Spared disaster, he made two-putt birdies on the par 5s and a 4-foot birdie on No. 18 to put more distance between himself and Faldo.

"I actually thought I played better today than yesterday," Norman said. "I put the ball in the right place under the circumstances. I just kept my game going the way I did the day before."

Faldo shot a 32 on the back, but his birdies on the par 5s came from terrific pitch shots from off the green, and his short game saved par on No. 11.

"It's nice to be in contention again in a major," said Faldo. "That's what it's about. That's what we play for."

Faldo hasn't been in contention since the 1993 British Open, which he lost by two strokes after a final-round 64 by Norman.

LEPA may prove beneficial to sugarbeet production

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

Constant changes and innovative and diversified ideas are a must in the agricultural industry -- an industry Hereford residents have come to rely on for economic stability.

For the first time in this area, sugarbeets will be grown under a Low Energy Precision Application irrigation system this season by James Wilhelm on his farm north of Nazareth.

The LEPA system differs from regular pivot type irrigation in that the application of water is not sprayed in a wide area over the top of the vegetation. It puts the water directly in the furrow, closer to the ground, meaning less water lost to evaporation.

The whole concept of the LEPA approach is efficiency. Less water that is applied more often -- a procedure that has been used in cotton production for many years.

Producers who once thought an abundance of water is needed to produce sugarbeets may have their minds changed.

"We can raise high quality beets with an irrigation well that pumps about 300 gallons," said Stan McCabe, Holly Sugar Corp.

agriculturist, said. "Most people believe to raise beets you need a 600- to 800-gallon well."

There are many advantages to a LEPA system, McCabe said, including cutting irrigation costs, maintaining a good yield and increasing sugar.

"The most critical time for the sugarbeet is when it is emerging," McCabe said. "We are trying to protect it at that vulnerable stage and keep it alive."

Many times, wind and blowing dust can kill emerging beet plants resulting in a re-plant situation.

The process McCabe is suggesting begins before the beets are planted. Fields that will be planted in sugarbeets should not be allowed to "blow", so he advises a producer to plant rye, a winter-hardy plant, in the furrow to hold the ground in place and prevent wind erosion.

The rye is killed before the beets are planted.

Leaving more "trash" or stubble also can help hold the ground together, he said.

Using 40 inch bed spacing, every other row is furrow diked to help hold irrigation water and any natural precipitation.

Socks are then put on the end of the nozzles which are used to water the diked rows. Some producers put extensions on the drop hoses to drop the nozzles to about 12 inches from the ground.

"Socks are used because they help preserve the dikes," he said. "Spray nozzles, and even bubble nozzles, tend to wash the dikes out."

Also, wind can blow water from a spray nozzle making distribution uneven. This can cause skips in emergence.

The spray-type nozzles also tend to wash away chemical that is applied to battle Leaf Spot disease.

"When we (producers) are in the spray season for leaf spot, we usually run on a two-week schedule. Spray irrigation tends to wash away chemical," he said. "We could cut some chemical cost if we can eliminate the washing."

"Another advantage," McCabe said with a laugh, "is that the rows that the tires run in never get watered. They (pivots) would never get stuck."

Applying water directly in the furrow would make a producer think the bed wouldn't be wet enough to germinate a seed much less keep emerging vegetation alive.

McCabe said that a producer must be patient.

"After about three passes applying about 3/10 inch of water per pass you can scratch the top of the bed and find moisture right under the surface," he said. "It moves from the furrow up through the top of the bed by capillary action."

With each application a producer tries to apply about three to five tenths of an inch of water more frequently than in conventional practice.

"Most producers think 1-1/2 inches of water per week is necessary," he said. "One thing I've learned since joining Holly is that beets are a drought tolerant plant and pouring the water on is not necessary and can hurt the beets."

McCabe contends if producers can eliminate spraying water directly on the top of the canopy (top vegetation of the sugarbeet plant) and applying more water than needed, it may reduce Cercospora Leaf Spot disease.

This fungal disease loves the warm moist conditions created when too much water is applied and hot temperatures are experienced.

With less diseases, McCabe is hoping healthier plants lead to increased sugar content.

"The water and oxygen ratio is kept closer to what it is suppose to be with less water per irrigation," he said. "That prevents many diseases from happening -- and that helps with rotation."

McCabe is optimistic about the LEPA approach and is anticipating good results.

"As we go through the season we may find we need to change the amount of water applied," he said. "It all depends on a timely rain."

Holly Sugar is still contracting acres for the 1996 - 1997 season. So far, they have contracted about 14,000 acres, most of which have been planted.

"There is still time to plant for this season," McCabe said. "Planting can take place through the month of May."

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag

It appears that we really missed out on a chance for some moisture this last weekend. Would that 18 inches of snow that Sweetwater got have been great!

As I visit with producers, many of them have taken to blaming me for the lack of rain. One farmer told me to call College Station or Washington or somewhere and get this drought situation taken care of in a hurry. Of course, being the loyal public servant that I am, I told him that I would get right on it. I just wish I could do something to help us out of this dry spell.

Please note that I did not use the word drought. My grandpa told me all about droughts, and if his definition was correct, then we ain't quite there yet. Some would disagree and say that if we are not there, then we've got to be just on the borderline.

I hate to keep harping on the subject, but you wheat producers please keep a check on your fields for green bug buildup. I was coming back from Levelland on Sunday and my car windshield was covered in green bugs as we travelled along 385. I checked two fields this week that are really building very rapidly, so keep a sharp lookout.

I am sure that some of you have planted corn by now or are just about to start. The warm weather has really raised the soil temperature. I would suggest that many of you consider cutting back on your plant populations this year due to the lack of deep soil moisture. I would also suggest that many of you take a long look at the number of acres of corn that you have been planting and think about your water supply.

Nothing is more devastating than to get a crop established, have the money in it, and then not be able to carry it through to harvest because of the lack of irrigation water.

Speaking of irrigation water, this year might be a good time to have your well output checked if it has been a while since it was last done. The NRCS or your local well company can do it for you. Many of the reports that I have been hearing are about the pumping capacity of some wells as compared to a few years ago are not good.

We in the Texas Agriculture Extension Service can also check wells for you, but because of the large area that our agricultural engineer services, it may be quite some time before he could get to your place. However if any of you are interested please call me at the local extension office.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department scientists have come up with another reason to avoid deep plowing: Valuable organic matter can literally evaporate into the air.

The most basic element of soil is carbon; excessive loss of carbon can reduce fertility. Plowing aerates the soil, letting in more oxygen, which combines with carbon to form the gas carbon dioxide. The extra oxygen stimulates microbes in the soil to break down crop residue and release more carbon dioxide.

Scientists with the Agricultural Research Service found that the most rapid loss of carbon dioxide came within minutes after plowing. Tests in wheat fields showed that carbon losses during 19 days after fall plowing were up to five times higher than those on unplowed fields.

In some cases, according to Agricultural Research magazine, the soil lost more carbon from plowing than it had gained from crop residue during the previous season.

USDA scientists are trying to place a dollar value on the carbon loss.

"They want to know if farmers and the environment might benefit, in the long term, from sensors that would direct machinery to till more gently where soil is most vulnerable to carbon loss," the magazine said.

Guthrie farmer hangs up plow after 50 years

By MACK HARRISON
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

GUTHRIE, Texas - Three John Deere tractors stand by the farmhouse as two large dogs roam the yard, wagging their tails in greeting to a visitor.

Various pieces of farm equipment - planters, seed dispensers, plows, hay balers, cultivators, strippers and cotton trailers - sit parked in orderly rows next to the empty fields.

After more than half a century of farming, Raymond King is hanging up his plow. This Friday, the King County farmer will auction off his farm equipment and retire.

"I decided to quit," he said. "Fifty years of it."

King and his wife, Minnie, sat in their farmhouse living room, its walls lined with family photos. As they spoke, each one often elaborated on what the other spouse says, finishing the partner's thoughts on a subject. Since they will no longer be raising crops on their rented farm, the Kings will have to leave their home of the past five decades.

"I imagine I can adjust," Mrs. King said.

"We'll survive," her husband said. "But when you've been in a place 50 years, it seems like home. That's a big part of your life."

The farmhouse, barn and storage shed stand in the once-thriving community of Finney, about 11 miles north of Guthrie on FM 193. Finney's population has shrunk over the years, from 35 families decades ago to five households today.

"There used to be a store and a (cotton) gin," King said. "We used to have a schoolhouse and churches. There's nothing left out here any more."

The tractors and other farm machinery on display for the auction are a far cry from the agricultural practices of 60 years ago.

"When I first came out here, before I got married, we farmed with mules," he said. "When we were first farming, we pulled cotton with our hands. We had 70 people pulling cotton for us. Now it's a lot quicker, of course."

King came to the area in 1936. He was born near Muskogee, Okla., in 1917 and lived all over the eastern part of that state before arriving in Texas.

"I had a married sister who lived here," King said. "I came to visit and went to work on a farm and just stayed here."

He had left Oklahoma with only one year of high school under his belt. At his sister's urging, he completed his education at a school in the nearby community of Grow and at one in Paducah, about 16 miles north in Cottle County. That's where he met his wife-to-be, Minnie Ratliff.

"We went together three or four years," she said. "After he went into the service (in 1942) I went to him. We were married in San Antonio."

The couple had only a few months together before King was sent to the South Pacific, where he served in an Army chemical warfare unit attached to the Air Force.

In 1946 there was little farmland on the market, so the couple began renting the land on which they grew crops: mostly cotton, wheat, hay and some milo. The landowner, who had 28 pieces of property in the area, required the people who farmed there to live on the property as well. The house did not have electricity until 1949 or phone service until 1957.

Through the years, the farm has endured floods, tornadoes and - worst of all for farmers - drought.

"We didn't have any cotton at all in 1953," Mrs. King said.

"We planted 300 acres - and we usually planted 600 - and it didn't come up," her husband added. "It didn't rain 'til July. I got a job at the gymnasium in Guthrie (for income)."

King said that despite some hard times, he and his wife have enjoyed their half-century on the farm - especially their independence.

"Being free of the time clock - to me, it's the best life in the world," he said.

For 50 years, the Kings lived and farmed in Finney. They raised three boys: James, 46, Kevin, 40, and Darrell, 36. The Kings have six grandchildren, ranging in age from 4 to 20 years.

The Kings aren't sure what they want to do once they leave the farm.

"We haven't made up our minds yet," King said with a laugh. "That's been our big worry."

"The whole community is worried," his wife added. "There are no vacant houses in the area for the couple to move into."

The couple's children also are worried about where their parents will live.

"Oh yeah, we're concerned about it," said their youngest son, Darrell, a mechanic at a copper mine in Arizona. "I'm trying to get them to move out here... Wherever they'd be happiest, that's what I want."

The Kings said they plan to stay within the state, even if they're not sure exactly where they'll end up.

"We're just kind of leaving it up to them," said Kevin, the middle child, who manages a medical clinic in Childress. "We're wanting them to move to either Childress or Arizona. ... We're all sad about them having to quit."

The oldest son, James, drives a truck at the same copper mine as Darrell. "It's an emotional thing for them," James said of the impending move. "This would sort of get them away from it. I'd like to see them come out here."

The couple have land of their own in Texas, but none of those parcels have houses on them.

"I'd hate to live anywhere else but Texas," King said.

"Since I have to move, I don't want to live anywhere the sand blows," Mrs. King said jokingly. "I think everything will work out."

"The Lord's been good to us this long," her husband added. "I don't think he's gonna quit just yet."

Satellite information will benefit farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Three summers from now, every acre of crops on Earth could be under the watchful eyes of satellites 450 miles high relaying essential information to farmers within a day it is obtained.

Farmers and their advisers will view the images, print out color maps and make statistical analyses - and know exactly where on the farm to find their soil or crop problems. That could lead to more informed, timely decisions on correcting the problems.

An airplane-carried prototype of the data-collection system already is in operation, giving customers images once a week from each land area of about 160 acres. The satellites will greatly expand the capability.

An image taken before planting but used for reference all season reflects soil differences, mainly in organic matter and ability to hold moisture. Two vegetation maps show detailed crop growth. A fourth shows how much change has occurred since the last shot.

When information points to problems in small areas, spot treatments can cut needs for fertilizer, chemicals, and water - ensuring that a deficient area gets the extra help it may need.

Work leading to the satellite launch has been under way for several years at a laboratory in Weslaco, Texas, run by the Agricultural Research Service, an Agriculture Department agency.

Data from the satellites' digital sensors will stream to two receiving stations on the U.S. East and West coasts, Agricultural Research magazine reports. From there, computer-processed information will bounce off existing communications satellites and be snagged by small satellite dishes linked to computers.

John LeBoeuf, an agronomist with Fordel Inc. in Mendota, Calif., has used the airplane prototype since 1993. Resource21 Inc., which will build and launch the four satellites, supplies the service to LeBoeuf and dozens of other farm advisers and growers.

The plane-carried system watches over about 1,700 Fordel acres, planted mostly in cantaloupe and honeydew melons.

"It identifies areas getting too much or not enough irrigation water," LeBoeuf said. "It lets us find nutrient deficiencies in the plants, so we can remedy them. It points us straight to weed, nematode, aphid and salt problems that almost certainly would get worse without attention. We also use the information to pinpoint outbreaks of plant diseases such as Fusarium wilt and vine decline."

Since 1985, ARS range scientist James H. Everitt and the team he leads at the Weslaco laboratory have assembled, tested and refined approaches to using remote sensing for monitoring crops and the environment. Now they're seeing their high-tech dreams played out as part of the everyday business of agriculture.

Until recently, turnaround time has been a chief drawback to using satellite data on farms. It took days, weeks or months to convert imagery to a form that would have been useful - had it reached farmers promptly. That no longer will be a problem when the four satellites are in orbit.

The ARS team also drew on decades of research on interpreting satellite and aircraft data by others at the USDA agency as well as by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, universities and industry.

George May, director of the Space Remote Sensing Center, part of the Institute for Technology Development, has followed the Weslaco research and has watched the airplane-based system for five years.

"We wanted to get it up to space," he said. "You can't cover the whole world from small airplanes."

Agriculture Briefs

CLARKSVILLE, Md. (AP) - Tom Moreland thinks he has built a better fly trap. Now he will see whether cattle farmers beat a path to his door.

Moreland, research manager with the University of Maryland agriculture school, has devised a white plastic chute that could save cows the irritation of flies that distract them from producing milk or putting on weight.

Tests at the university's dairy farm in Clarksville showed that the device, the "livestock walk-through fly trap," cut populations of horn flies and face flies by 87 percent and 71 percent, respectively.

The chute is placed in the gateway between the cattle barn and the pasture. As the cows pass through it, flaps that resemble the hanging sheets in an automatic carwash brush the flies off their faces and backs. A light in a grid cut into the side of the chute lures the flies into an electrocution unit and kills them.

"It's one after another pop, pop, pop, pop as they're going through it," said Moreland.

The university has licensed the technology to Orkin Pest Control Inc. of Atlanta, which is rolling out the product across the United States this summer under the trade name Fly Blocker System. It will sell for $2,000 to $2,500 per unit.

"Unless you're involved in the agriculture field, you don't really realize how big this is," said Gar Fraley, general manager of Orkin Agribusiness Services.

The dairy and beef industries suffer millions of dollars in losses from fly infestations. Flies spread brucellosis, foot and mouth disease, anthrax and tuberculosis. Horn flies can bore into the beasts and cause wounds. Face flies get into cows' eyes and cause infections.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) - Wheat and potato markets are so good that some farmers are plowing alfalfa fields under a year before their normal rotation.

"Hay prices aren't bad, you understand," said Bob Romanko, a crop specialist at the University of Idaho's Parma center. "But wheat prices are exceptional."

He said that might be why Idaho's usual 1 million-plus acres of hay will be reduced by an estimated 70,000 acres this year.

The reduction is predicted by the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service in its spring planting intentions report. But Romanko said it probably would not affect the alfalfa market.

Rick Speicher, district sales manager for Northrup King, said new hay seedings this spring are expected to be modest, followed by increased alfalfa planting this fall.

"Quite a few people are rotating out of hay early," Speicher said. "They're plowing out stands before normal rotation so they can take advantage of wheat contracts and play the potato market. I'm hearing that all across the state."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers are being offered an early exit from federal Conservation Reserve Program contracts on less-environmentally sensitive lands.

The Agriculture Department, acting under the newly signed farm law, announced the early out will be available on pre-1995 contracts that have been in effect for at least five years.

The offer is not available on several categories of lands, including those with an erodibility index over 15; land devoted to useful-life easements; field windbreaks; grass waterways; shallow-water areas; and filter strips.

Georgetown runner aims to make 6th Olympic team

By MARK McDONALD
The Dallas Morning News
GEORGETOWN, Texas - She's at it again, doing the workouts, cranking out the sprints and grinding out the mileage, just as she has for the past quarter-century. Francie Larrieu Smith, 43, with "a lot of miles on these old legs," is getting ready for another Olympic Trials.

She has made five Olympic teams, from 1972 to '92, in events ranging from the 1,500 meters to the marathon. She has broken 36 American records and won 19 national titles, and she carried the U.S. flag into the '92 Olympics in Barcelona. But making the Olympic Trials in the 10,000 meters - forget making the Olympic team - will take some nifty athletic abracadabra.

One might think that a five-time Olympian would be worthy of an automatic invitation to the Trials. But this isn't the PGA Senior Tour. No exemptions here. Francie Larrieu Smith will have to run a 10,000-meter race in 33 minutes, 20 seconds to qualify for the Olympic Trials in June.

"I really believe I can do it," she says. "I have four or five black toenails now, and black toenails come from speed work, from running up on your toes. But I'm like a kid in a candy store because I love hard workouts. I'm starting to feel the tone, the hardness of my muscles again."

Her plan is to run the Mt. SAC meet two weekends from now, then try for a qualifying time May 17 in California, at the Asics Santa Monica Distance Classic.

"The Olympics have been a big part of my life," she says. "Deep, deep down, somewhere in me, I want to go to the Olympics, but that isn't very realistic. A lot of people would have to get hurt and fall down for that to happen. Making the Trials is my goal. I'd love to toe the line again. Just to be on the same playing field again, back on the playground, oh, that would be great."

Smith's personal best is 31:28, but that was five years ago. She hasn't run a full-bore 10K in quite some time, although she did a 5K last week at the Texas Relays. Her time of 17:38 was nothing to brag about, she says, but still "very encouraging."

"I've had a minor breakthrough in the last week - my workouts have been getting significantly faster - and it was a hoot getting back on the track."

Robert Vaughan, Smith's longtime coach in Dallas, says, "Francie hasn't run a 5K as fast as she needs to run two of them back-to-back. But if anybody can do it, she can. If she's not too beaten up from recent years of running marathons, she has a chance. If 'wanting to' will get it done, she will."

Two years ago, Smith moved from Dallas to Georgetown; her husband Jimmy, a PhD, in exercise physiology, teaches at Southwestern University there. She has been working out for the past couple months with Stan Huntsman, the former men's track coach at Texas. At their first session together, Smith reached down, just below her shorts, and pinched an inch or two.

"I grabbed a handful of these cheeks and I said, 'Stan, I know this has to go.'"

Smith had put on some weight, 10 pounds or so, and Huntsman has been methodically working it off.

"I've had no mercy," he says. "She has a ways to go, but the biggest change is that she's leaner. I don't talk in pounds. I go by visual perception. I want her eyes sunk back in her head."

MUNICH OLYMPICS, 1972: "The Israeli athletes were killed in between my prelims and semifinals," she says. "We had our own rooms in the Village, so I was pretty isolated. I was 19 and I didn't know what was going on. The guy designated as our distance coach didn't have a clue. The distraction of the athletes being killed was totally shattering."

MONTREAL OLYMPICS, 1976: "Living in the Athletes Village is part of the Olympics, but it's not necessarily conducive to great performances. Living in close proximity with people from all parts of the world, that's why I got sick. Some bug from some strange place. I was in great shape and I probably had my best medal chance there, but I was sick as a dog before the semis."

MOSCOW OLYMPICS, 1980: On a wall of her house in Georgetown, Smith has a photograph of her shaking hands with Jimmy Carter, the president who called the 1980 Olympic boycott. "I guess I thought we had to go along with whatever our leaders decided," she says now.

Francie Larrieu was 12 when she decided she would go to the Olympics and win a medal. She joined the junior high track team in eighth grade, the little sister of big-time runner Ron Larrieu. At Fremont High School in Sunnyvale, Calif., the track coach asked her if she wanted to train with the boys.

"I said fine. I was running in high school cross country meets with the guys for two years. Nobody said boo-hoo about it. I just wanted to run."

She was still at Fremont when she made her first national team, and in the summer of 1969 she made her first trip to Europe. She was 16.

"And so naive," she says. "I was with Steve Prefontaine, Frank Shorter, Debbie Brill, people like that."

Those summer trips to Europe would become a part of Francie Larrieu's calendar. She joined the San Jose Cindergals, then moved to the renowned Pacific Coast Track Club, which included on its roster some of the legendary figures in track and field - Al Feuerbach, Mac Wilkins, Dwight Stones, Earl Bell, Jane Frederick, Billy Olsen. Twenty years later she reels off the names as if they were sisters and brothers.

"They were like my family. We just went over to Europe like a traveling circus, from city to city. After the meets we'd go out - people weren't as careful as they are now - and we'd get up with a hangover and go on to the next meet. All the money was under the table. I'd barely make enough to pay my bills. One summer when I went to Europe, I sublet my apartment and had $5 in my bank account."

She thinks she came of age as a competitor at a 1969 meet in Stuttgart, Germany. She was running the 1,500 then, and she found herself in a race with the world-record holder, the former world-record holder and the American-record holder. She was, in a word, frightened.

"My best time ever was 12 seconds slower than the best in the race. But I made up my mind I wasn't going to be last. I mentally tied a rope around myself and stayed with them. I sprinted at the finish and tied the American record. I thought, 'Wow. That's pretty good.'"

Smith missed the 1984 Olympic team when she finished fifth in 3,000 meters at the U.S. Trials. "She attributes that to a dream she had the night before that Brenda Webb would steal the race," says Robert Vaughan, her coach at the time. "Webb went out way too fast and Francie went with her. By the end, Francie was toast."

SEOUL OLYMPICS, 1988: "Those were my favorite Olympics. It was the first Olympics where I walked off the track knowing I'd done the best I could, the absolute best. I finished fifth and I PRed (made a personal record) in the 10,000."

BARCELONA OLYMPICS, 1992: She almost didn't pack her parade uniform before leaving for Barcelona, but she was glad she did when she was picked to carry the flag at the head of the U.S. delegation. "Probably the greatest honor ever bestowed on me ... And to be around that men's basketball team, now that was exciting. I saw them at the opening ceremonies. They were rich and famous, and I guess that made them seem a little special."

Convinced she could make the 1992 Olympic team in the marathon, Smith and Robert Vaughan started to turn up her mileage. She ran the London Marathon in the spring of 1991 and set a personal best of 2:27.35.

"She was Godzilla then," says Vaughan. "She thought she was invincible."

Smith was still recovering from London when, over Vaughan's objections, she went to California to run a road race. She then ran at the U.S. Championships and made the team going to the World Championships in Stuttgart.

"When she's not focused, she does silly things," says Vaughan. "She has periods where she goes berserk." Smith was so wrung out, she couldn't run at Worlds.

"She was a hamburger patty," says Vaughan. "She started a downhill slide that lasted through the Olympics. How she made the Olympic team is still a wonder to both of us."

But Smith's determination and will got her onto that '92 squad, her fifth Olympic team. It was brutally hot and humid on race day in Barcelona, and the smog hung in the air as though the city had been wrapped in brown paper.

"We ran through 20 kilometers like we were jogging," Smith says. "But when the Russian girl (Valentina Yegorova, the eventual winner) made her move - and it was a brilliant move - there was nothing there. I had nothing."

She finished 13th in 2:41.09. "It never dawned on me that smog would be a problem. After the race, I was walking out to see Jimmy, and suddenly I couldn't talk."

"Her throat closed," says Vaughan.

After Barcelona, Smith didn't take enough time to rest before running the big-money San Francisco Marathon. She had to drop out of the race. "Not a positive experience at all."

She was still living in Dallas - in a tidy little house near White Rock Lake - but Jimmy had moved to Georgetown for his teaching job. Francie couldn't seem to break away from Dallas and the house and her close ties to the running community. She saw Jimmy only on weekends, but she says that he never pressured her, that he gave her the time she needed.

"But I was basically by myself in Dallas from '92-'94," she says, "and it gets to the point where it's not fun. I moved to Georgetown knowing it would affect my running."

Smith had been planning to run in the '96 marathon Trials, and she believed she had an exemption into the Trials because she had been an Olympian. But when TAC did away with the exemption - a rule change that Smith says she wasn't told about - she was faced with having to run a marathon to qualify for the Trials.

"Robert and I sat down and talked about it," she says, "and we both decided there was no way."

She had continued to run races in the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure series, but her elite edge had been dulled, of course, and she had gained some weight. She still had a contract with New Balance, but Real Life began to crowd her. She started taking courses to get her teaching certificate.

Then, during a New Year's vacation about seven weeks ago, she started thinking about another run at the Trials - back to the track, back to the 10,000 meters.

"Jimmy and I were on the beach in Mexico, and I was discussing it with friends," she says. "They just convinced me to go for it. My heart is on the track. Always has been. I love the track."

She called Huntsman and Vaughan when she got back from Mexico. She and Huntsman work out in Austin three times a week, and their first session was at the main stadium at UT, on the same track where Smith had set her 10K American record back in '91. Huntsman has never coached a woman before, but he says he's "real excited" about working with Smith.

"I've got the fever big-time," she says. "I know it's a tall order ... but it's sort of like riding a bike. I have so much up here" - she taps her head - "it's just whether my body will allow me to do it. I know how to run, but it's this old body."

"I told Robert, 'I'm going to do this or I'm going to break.' And really, if I do get hurt, what difference does it make?"

Hereford, Dimmitt students honored as Good Citizens

AIMEE ALLEY

Aimee Alley, a senior at Hereford High School, and Amber Kay Langford, a senior at Dimmitt High School, have been named the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizens of the Year by their respective faculties. This annual recognition is sponsored by Los Ciboleros Chapter of the DAR.

Aimee and Amber will be honored at a reception and program to be held at the Hereford Community Center Sunday, hosted by Los Ciboleros.

The daughter of Aileen and Larry Alley, Aimee has had a wide variety of interests during her four years at

AMBER KAY LANGFORD

Hereford High School. Her sports arenas have included varsity volleyball, with her being chosen for all-district honorable mention and all-district second team her junior and senior years. She also played varsity tennis for two years.

Performing as feature twirler with the Mighty Maroon Marching Band has been a major accomplishment for the past three years after being chosen to be twirler her freshman year.

A member of the National Honor Society, Aimee has also served as an officer in the Keywanettes and as a member of the HHS Student Council. She served as the secretary of her junior class and is now the vice president of the senior class. She also participates in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Aimee is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church where she serves as a eucharistic minister, sings in the choir and is an officer in the Catholic Youth Organization.

Her plans for the future include enrolling in Texas A&M University in the fall of 1996 with a major in business with emphasis on international relations.

Amber, the daughter of Linda and Gary Langford of Dimmitt, has also had an active student life at her school. She now serves as secretary of the DHS Key Club as well as secretary of the student council for two years.

Other organizations of which she is a part include PALS (Peer Assistant Leadership), the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Interact as well as the United Methodist Youth Fellowship at her church.

She was a member of the cross country team during her freshman and sophomore years and progressed from freshman to junior varsity to varsity in basketball. Varsity tennis is also one of Amber's major interests.

Amber is a varsity cheerleader and has been named to Who's Who Among American High School Students as well as "Most Likely to Succeed" in her sophomore year. She was a member of the homecoming court last year and was a homecoming queen candidate this year. She was named "Best All Around" student in her junior class.

Amber's favorite hobby is playing the piano which she has been doing for five years.

Future plans for Amber include college with a possible major in counseling or religious education.

Los Ciboleros makes preparations for tea

Los Ciboleros Chapter DAR heard a program on "Research and Genealogy History" by Mrs. Otto Pugliese at its regular meeting Thursday in the Blue Room of the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Mrs. Pugliese is a volunteer for the LDS libraries in Amarillo and Hereford. She gave specific and helpful information on the approach and method of checking out data when preparing one's family history. Methods of research and documents to research were related to the membership.

Vice regent Argen Draper led the opening ritual assisted by chaplain Ruth Knox.

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was led by Draper, Mary Williamson led the singing of "America," The American's Creed and The Preamble to the Constitution were led by Draper.

Ruth Fish read excerpts from the article in the April DAR Magazine titled "The Moral Foundation of Society" by Margaret Thatcher, former Prime Minister, Great Britain.

Charlotte Clark reported on article in the National Defender titled "Michael New -- Sand in Cogwheel of New World Army" by Don Feder.

Ruth Newsom gave a "minute" on the Constitution.

The April tea, scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday in the Hereford Community Center, will honor the winning students from the American History Essay Contest, the Good Citizens from Hereford and Dimmitt High Schools and two special awards will be presented to a student and teacher for Flag Etiquette.

Knox, conservation chairman, announced that a redbud tree will be planted in Damron Park on April 26, Arbor Day, by Los Ciboleros Chapter DAR.

Draper, program chairman, announced the May 9 luncheon meeting will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the Dean Herring home. The program will consist of reports from the 97th Texas DAR Conference and the 105th Continental Congress.

Hostesses for the meeting were Kathryn Ruga, Helen Rose and Margaret Durham.

Guests present were Jean Beene and Yvonne Simpson. Members present were Lois Gililand, Clark, Draper, Durham, Fish, Knox, Newsom, Ruga, Smith and Williamson.

Muster is planned by Moms

Former students of Texas A&M University will assemble in Hereford on April 21 for the second annual Texas Aggie Muster sponsored by the Golden Spread Aggie Moms Club.

The Muster activities, consisting of a mixer and barbecue dinner, will begin at 6 p.m. in K-Bob's Annex.

Featured speaker for the evening will be Don Powell, president of Boatman's First National Bank of Amarillo and a member of the Board of Regents of Texas A&M.

Muster is open to all former students and their families, parents of students, and friends of Texas A&M.

The Muster tradition is more than 100 years old. More than 400 Musters will be held around the world this year "wherever Texas A&M former students live or work."

Every Muster ceremony is the same. Texas Aggie pay their respects to all those who are absent because of death since the last Muster. When the names of the honored dead are called from the Muster Roll, a friend of the deceased answers, "Here."

For more information or reservations please call Aileen Alley at 364-2619 or Jody Skiles at 578-4347.

Discussing spring flowers

Leslie Gavina and Mary Ann Carrillo discuss spring flowers such as those that can be seen in the gardens at the E.B. Black house. The volunteers who care for the gardens will hold a "Garden Party" from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Monday. Doughnuts and coffee will be served in the morning. Tours will be given and you are invited to bring a sack lunch and enjoy the day.

New Arrivals

Sharon and James Lowrey of Hereford are the proud parents of a son, Dane Ross, born April 10 in Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

He weighed 7 pounds, 9 ounces. Grandparents are Judy and Cal Mitts of Hereford and Carleen and Jim Lowrey of Prescott, Ariz.

ANTHONY'S

MR. AND MRS. RONNIE HAWKINS
...united in marriage

Couple exchanges vows in home of bride's parents

Jeanette Lynn (Morgan) Danley and Ronnie Alan Hawkins, both of Hereford, were united in marriage in an early evening ceremony on Friday.

The couple was married in the home of the bride's parents, Hoy and Rosemary Morgan, also of Hereford.

The groom is the son of Ronnie and Alan Hawkins of Hereford.

Justice of the Peace, Johnnie Turrentine, officiated during the ceremony.

Sandy Patterson served as matron of honor and Dusty Wells was best man. Both reside in Hereford.

Nikki and Christopher Danley, daughter and son of the bride, served as flower girl and ring bearer.

The home was decorated with white roses embellished with greenery, purple and white ribbon and horse shoes.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an off-white tea length dress accented with pearls and embroidery. Roses embellished the collar. The bridal dress was given to the bride by the matron of honor as something new.

She wore her maternal great grandmother's crucifix as something old.

The bride carried her sister's bridal bouquet which was purple, teal and mauve.

Her attendant wore a white dress accented with purple and carried a bouquet of white and purple flowers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in honor of the couple.

Jamie Paetzold, sister of the bride served cake to guests.

The bride's table was decorated with purple and white ribbons with horse shoes. The table featured a three tiered white cake with a traditional bride and groom adorning the top.

The bride is a 1992 Hereford High School graduate. She is currently employed by Rainbow International.

The bridegroom is a 1986 graduate of Cibola High School in Albuquerque. He served in the U.S. Army from 1986 to 1989. He is presently employed by Sugarland Feedyard.

Pageant entrants invited to Mother/Daughter Tea

All young women interested in participating in the 1996 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant, planned for June 8, are invited to attend the pageant's Mother-Daughter Tea at 2 p.m. Sunday at 124 Oak.

The tea is being held so that potential entrants and their mothers may become acquainted with members of the pageant committee who will be present to answer any questions.

The annual pageant, open to all young women between the ages of 16-21, is sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division. Contestants will vie for scholarship money and prizes.

Each contestant will participate in an interview by judges, talent competition and evening gown competition. Application forms are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main St. Entry forms must be turned in by 5 p.m. April 30.

Miss Hereford steering committee members are Rita Bell, chairman, Betty Drake, Peggie Fox, Sandy Josseland, Julia Laing, Colleen Meyer and Lacy Mueggengborg.

Parkinson group sets meeting

The Parkinson Support Group will meet at 3 p.m. Sunday at 825 S. Miles.

For information, call Valarie Manley at 364-1736 or 364-8022.

Survey results will be announced at meeting

The Hereford Health Care Alliance will hold its monthly general meeting in the game room of the Hereford Community Center at noon Monday.

The public is encouraged to bring a sack lunch and join in the meeting.

Results of a Teen Survey conducted in Hereford will be presented as well as a discussion on enlarging the executive board.

The Alliance continues to work on a preventive program to reduce Hereford's high pregnancy rate by reducing the sexual activity among teens.

The Alliance offers to civic clubs, churches and schools a sexual abstinence program called "Aim for Success." If anyone is interested in this program contact Rick Jackson at 364-6348 or 364-3753.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

If you missed Leonard Pitts' editorial on April 6, I have a copy to share as it is well worth the time spent in reading it. Titled "Good parents prepare children for life," it includes such things as...anything worth having is worth working for; you've got to earn your way in life; nothing beats a failure but a try...

Eddie Trotter will compete on the state level at the History Day competition Friday and Saturday at the Stouffer Hotel in Austin. Eddie's project is about the Texas Rangers' Stand In History and he has done an outstanding job. He has corresponded with over fifty rangers and has had interviews with a number of them. Kevin Hoffman, Wanda Crownover and I will accompany Eddie to Austin. We will visit the Texas Ranger museum in Waco on the way to Austin and will tour the Capitol while in Austin.

Seventh grade team members who had met requirements for a field trip took a day off from school Wednesday. Yellow and Green teams went together to the Discovery Center in Amarillo and to a late lunch and entertainment at Mr. Gattis' Pizza. Purple team went to Lubbock to the Science Spectrum. Approximately 175 students attended the field trip activities.

Department meetings are being held to make plans for the 1996-1997 school year. Included in these plans are supply lists, travel requests and curriculum.

Orientation for students who will enter high school next fall will be held Wednesday, April 17 at 6:30 p.m. This is an important meeting for students and their parents.

A Book Fair is taking place in the HJH library. Several classes will visit the fair each day to give students the opportunity to review books and make purchases.

HJH teacher Connie Gilbert has been chosen as Teacher of the Year to represent our campus. Richard Saucedo, Assistant Principal, has been named Outstanding Middle School Assistant Principal by Region XVI. Congratulations to these two staff members.

Again we urge parents to help us with attendance. We have entirely too many students who have entirely too many absences. It is extremely hard to keep up with all the class work required for completion of a course if work has to be turned in late, or is not turned in at all. Some students will be required to attend summer school in order to pass.

In preparing children for life, parents must set good examples. One such example is to always tell the truth. If the truth is always told, one doesn't have to remember what they said the last time they told the story!

"We must learn to live together as brothers or perish together as fools."

Ask Jennifer Phipps about her cellular service!

But please wait until she gets home from school

It's hard for most of us to comprehend the pace at which new technology is reaching into our daily lives, or how fast young people adapt to it.

Jennifer Phipps is like many other teenagers these days. The attractive Hereford High School sophomore student splits her time between regular school work, playing golf for the school golf team and earning spending money as a baby-sitter.

She also packs an XIT Cellular FLIP PHONE as an important part of her daily accessories. And she says her phone is really "no-big-deal" in the scheme of her hectic teenage life.

"A few other students have cellular phones, and I don't think anyone thinks it's that special—the other students don't give us a hard time about having one," she said. "I got the phone about the same time I got my car, and it helps me a lot when I'm baby-sitting or out of town on a golf trip. I can stay in touch with my parents."

Our customers embrace technology as a practicality

Ann Landers

NATALIE ANN ESSARY, JEREMY DAVID LOMAS

Couple plans to wed in June ceremony

Don and Faye Essary of Amarillo announce the engagement of their daughter, Natalie Ann, to Jeremy David Lomas.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Jeanne Lomas and the late Larry Lomas and the grandson of Tommy and Margaret Camahan and Joyce Lomas and the late Dennis Lomas. In addition, he is the great-grandson of Mrs. Taft McGee, all of Hereford.

The couple plans to be married June 21.

The bride-elect is a 1993 graduate of Amarillo High School and attends West Texas A&M University. She is a candidate for May 1997 graduation with a bachelor of science degree in mass communications. She is employed by Z-93 in Amarillo.

Lomas, a 1992 Hereford High School graduate, is a transfer student from the University of Texas at Austin, currently attending WTAMU. He is seeking a bachelor of arts degree in mass communications and is employed by KWTS in Canyon.

Scholarship deadline set

Deaf Smith HealthCare Foundation has announced that April 20 will be the deadline for submitting scholarship applications.

The Foundation, a local non-profit organization created to support and enhance the quality of health care in the community in general and our hospital in particular, will be awarding scholarships for the next academic year.

Applicants must be students who are interested in an education in one of the ancillary medical fields (nursing, X-ray, lab technology, physical therapy, respiratory therapy, etc.) and who have a strong commitment to come back and work in this community.

An acceptance from the chosen school is required.

Students hoping to enter medical school in the future will not be eligible for a scholarship at this time as their acceptance to that school is too far in the future and uncertain.

Applications or questions should be addressed to Deaf Smith Health-Care Foundation, Scholarship Committee, P.O. Box 1858, Hereford, Tex. 79045 or call 364-2266.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Mom is 83 and still a good-looking woman. She has been widowed twice, once when she was 58 and again last year. Mom was a devoted wife to both husbands, and the death of her last husband was devastating. She did not want to remain in the lovely apartment where she and "Ervin" lived for 20 years and chose to go to a retirement home.

Mom has been in the retirement home for seven months, and she liked it from day one. They have card games, square dancing, Scrabble, poker games, movies, concerts and bus rides to the zoo.

Usually, my sister and I visit Mom on Sunday, but we decided to surprise her on Wednesday and bring a birthday cake. We went straight to her room, but the surprise was on us. There she sat, in her silk negligee, on the sofa, necking up a storm with "Eddie," an 84-year-old resident whose wife died last year.

Mom was embarrassed and blurted out, "It's OK. Eddie and I are planning to get married." We were shocked. Does it make sense for people that age to get married? Can they possibly be interested in sex? Please provide some answers. -- Stunned Sisters in Philadelphia

DEAR PHILADELPHIA: I think it's wonderful that your mother and Eddie have found each other. Whatever they want to do together (or perhaps I should say CAN do together) is their personal business. Be happy for them. If I lived in Philadelphia, I would offer to be the flower girl.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: From time to time, you have printed letters from wives who complain about listening to their husbands snore. Many of them have expressed genuine hostility, as if the poor guys were doing it on purpose.

Why don't those women realize how lucky they are? The husband who is snoring beside his wife is not out running around. His snoring should be music to her ears. My husband was a world-class snorer. When we lived in an apartment, the neighbors complained. I didn't mind a bit.

"Vic" passed away three months ago, and I would give anything to have him beside me for just one more night, snoring like an elk.

I hope you will print my letter, Ann. There are thousands -- maybe millions -- of women who need to see it. -- Remembering in Tennessee

DEAR REMEMBERING: What a love letter! The snoring males owe you big thanks. You've proven a long-held theory of mine that it is not WHAT happens to you but how you look at it that counts. Attitude is everything.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Yesterday, I got the scare of a lifetime. The school principal phoned and said, "Please come and get your daughter. She fainted in science class and needs to be home." of course, I rushed right over.

The story is this: In "Maryanna's" health and hygiene studies, they showed a film about what happens to the bodies of people who smoke. There were very graphic photos of diseased lungs and emaciated and cancer-ridden patients. Two other students got sick.

I am furious with the school for making my daughter ill and would like to know what you think of this. -- Seeing Red in New Jersey

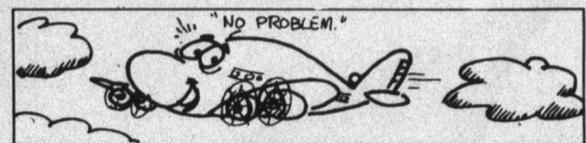

DEAR SEEING RED: I think it's wonderful. I wish more young students would get sick and faint from such pictures. Then perhaps fewer adults would die from lung cancer and heart disease.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Anniversary observed

Hoy and Rosemary Morgan were honored on their 25th anniversary with a surprise family dinner on Saturday. Morgan married Rosemary Buckley on March 26, 1971, in Clovis, N.M. The couple has resided in Hereford for 22 years. Morgan is employed by BJM Sales and Service. Mrs. Morgan is employed by Arrowhead Mills. The dinner was hosted by their daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Paetzold and Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Hawkins, in the Paetzold home.

Pan American Airways' "Pacific Clipper" completed the first around-the-world commercial flight in New York City on January 6, 1942.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Angela Bassett, whose career has taken her from the projects to Broadway and Hollywood, won top honors at the NAACP Image Awards for her performance as a scorned wife in "Waiting to Exhale."

Bassett was named best lead actress and Loretta Devine best supporting actress for their roles in the film, about the lives and loves of four close friends.

"Waiting to Exhale" was named best motion picture of the year Saturday at the 27th annual awards ceremony, which honors actors, musicians and others who positively portray blacks in the entertainment industry.

The ceremony was taped at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium and will be aired April 23 on Fox.

There are about 57 million children under 15 in the United States. That's about 22 percent of the population.

Thank You

I offer my many thanks to all my friends and customers at Hereford State Bank, who made my 13 years so enjoyable. The visits, cards and encouraging words extended to me during the days preceding my retirement are much appreciated.

Thanks again... Verline Shipley

MRS. JOHN ROBERT MARTIN
...nee Brandy Jean Messer

Messer, Martin united in matrimony

Brandy Jean Messer and John Robert Martin were united in matrimony on March 23 in Christ's Church Fellowship in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Jacky and Johnnie Messer of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of John and Marcella Martin of Amarillo.

Bill Weaver, pastor of the church, officiated.

The entry to the church was decorated with silk floral arrangements of amethyst and white morning glories and strata accented with English ivy. The sanctuary was decorated with fresh cut floral arrangements of the same flowers. Numerous arched candelabra surrounded the altar and bows of white tulle accented each pew.

Maid of honor was Nikki Messer, sister of the bride. Best man was Ben Heckman of Amarillo.

Serving as bridesmaids were Misty Pagett and Wendy Noland.

Groomsmen were David Lane and Clay Dunham, both of Clarendon.

Dennis McKay of Hereford and Jason Messer, brother of the bride, served as ushers.

Flower girls, both cousins of the bride, were Victoria Rose Messer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Messer, and Callie Johnyce Blackwell, daughter of Frank Blackwell of Lubbock.

Serving as ring bearer was Hank Messer, cousin of the bride and son Mr. and Mrs. Roy Messer.

Candle lighters were Shyla Messer, cousin of the bride, and Candice Campbell.

Wedding music was provided by Linda Gilbert and Becky Weatherly and vocal selections were performed by Vicki Ortiz.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with long tapered, leg of mutton sleeves. The cutout sweetheart neckline was accented with seed pearls and sequins. The beaded bodice featured a vee waist in front while the cutout back featured a large bow at the waist. The cathedral length train was accented with pearls and sequins and had scalloped lace edges.

The veil, made by the mother of the bride, consisted of multiple layers of white illusion held by a halo of bridal white roses accented with white satin ribbon.

The cascading bridal bouquet was of white roses, amethyst stephanotis, baby's breath and greenery.

Bridal attendants wore dresses of amethyst moire with a deep vee waist and accented with delicate white lace on the sleeves.

The couple was honored with a reception following the wedding.

Mary Beth Messer, aunt of the bride, catered the reception.

Cruse Messer, aunt of the bride, and La Nita Martin, aunt of the groom, served cake. Sherri Blackwell, cousin of the bride from Blackwell, served coffee and Buffalo Punch.

Amy Blackwell, cousin of the bride, and Kelli Thompson of Lubbock presided at the registry.

The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a three tiered white cake topped with a traditional bride and groom figurine. It was accented with a silk floral arrangement of tiny white and amethyst mums with greenery.

The groom's table held a German chocolate cake in the shape of a derailed train and an electric train ran on a track that circled the cake.

Following a wedding trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, the couple is at home in Hereford.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School. She attended West Texas A&M University and Amarillo College and has received special training from American Railroad Hazardous Material Training and Research in Colorado and Dallas. She is employed by Messer Construction Co., Inc.

The groom graduated from River Road High School in 1987, attended Amarillo College and served in the United States Army. He is also employed by Messer Construction.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent - FCE

Consumers are still receiving offers to start a new credit card account at a low interest rate. The offer may or may not be a real money harvester. Before taking the offer, get all the facts.

Call the 800 number on the back of the credit cards you hold which currently have a low interest charge that may be expiring soon. Ask what your new rate will be when the introductory rate expires. When they tell you the new, higher rate, politely ask what lower rate they might offer to keep you as a customer, since you have an option to transfer your account to another credit card that has a lower interest rate. The rate could be as low as 1 percentage point higher than your introductory rate. Consumers will not get a reasonable rate unless they ask for it.

If a low rate is not available from current credit card companies, look closely at the new offers. Check the fine print closely. Every credit card solicitation must spell out the main cost factors, the interest rates and grace periods. Look also for fees for balance transfers and cash advances.

Avoid low-rate cards that charge a cash-advance fee, often 2 percent of the amount being transferred.

Accept cards only if they provide interest-free grace periods of 30 days on balances transferred, and a 30-day grace period for new purchases. Cards without a grace period charge interest from the date of the balance transfer or new purchase, regardless if payments are made by the due date.

Apply for only one card at a time. Trying for several at once is called the "shotgun" approach. While hoping to be approved for at least one card and then cancel the others, credit card companies may see such activity in your credit reports as a signal for high probability of financial irresponsibility.

When cards are available and approved with low interest, grace periods and low, no annual or transfer fees, respond if you need the credit. When your new credit is approved, consolidate as many balances on higher interest cards as possible to your new account.

Don't be tempted to pay the minimum payment at the new low interest. Take the total of payments you had been making on all accounts consolidated, and make that payment on your new account. That is the only way making a change to a lower interest account will truly help you harvest more money by lowering the amount you pay for credit purchases.

Deaf Smith 4-Hers claim honors in District fashion competition

Deaf Smith County 4-H Fashion Show participants took top honors at the recent competition held at Panhandle High School. Senior level 4-Hers captured five of the top eight placings and will represent Deaf Smith County and District I at the State Fashion Show in June in College Station.

Senior level winners placing in the Top 4 category and going on to capture the top placing were Joanna Brumley in Evening Wear Construction and Amanda Sims in Specialty Wear Construction.

Placing in the top position in the comparative buying division were Rachel Wilks in Specialty, Ted Peabody III in Dressy Daywear and Jaime Steiert in Casual Daywear.

Amber Brumley was a Top 4 category winner in Dressy Construction. Senior level 4-Her Miriam Wilks was presented as a participant in the Design and Apparel Contest.

Top 4 winner spots were won by intermediates Kylee Auckerman in Active Playwear and Erin Louder in Comparative Buying.

Winning in the Top 4 were juniors Anne Weaver in Active Playwear and Dawn Auckerman in Comparative Buying.

These youth won the opportunity to participate in the District competition after winning at the local county fashion show.

Youth were judged on written records of learning experiences and experiences in sharing or teaching others.

In addition, records on cost, comparisons to like garments and/or comparisons of constructed to ready made garments are judged.

The final step of judging is conducted in an interview session in which youth must know detailed care and care cost of the garment, construction methods which make the garment a wise wardrobe addition, and ways to coordinate the garment to extend its use.

Final judging is conducted in interview questions for senior contestants to check fiber and fabric characteristic knowledge.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Sugar seems to bother me. When I ingest it I feel unreal and spacey, and become disoriented. I also feel nervous and get a headache. I've been tested, but doctors don't seem to agree on hypoglycemia, anxiety attacks or what. Can you help me? — J.W.

ANSWER: Hypoglycemia — low blood sugar — is a dicey premise and, I suspect, an overused one. Weakness, fatigue, headache, rapid heart, sweating and tremulousness are symptoms common to several illnesses, a good enough reason to reserve diagnosis of hypoglycemia until you have truly objective evidence of it.

The best way to get the evidence is to test blood sugar levels at the time you have symptoms. Usually that occurs a couple of hours after having ingested the sugar. If you have symptoms at such times, if your blood sugar is low then and if you feel better after a meal, then you can confidently diagnose hypoglycemia.

You don't have to run to the lab. Your doctor can let you have a machine that records blood sugar at home, or you can bring in a drop of blood on a special paper, which can be tested for sugar levels at the lab's convenience.

As I said, hypoglycemia is a dicey thing, a rare condition that some fall back on in the absence of a certain diagnosis. On the other hand, you should not dismiss it, for it certainly does exist. So insist on the test I mentioned.

The treatment for hypoglycemia is simplicity itself. You avoid sugary foods and you increase the protein in your diet. You eat smaller portions more or less evenly spaced out — usually five or six portions a day.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been diagnosed with hypoglycemia. Is there something I can do besides eating every few hours? I mean, what kinds of foods are recommended? Please list a few. — M.T.

ANSWER: What I told J.W. above goes for you. I can't add much.

Give up coffee and tea. Caffeine seems to make the symptoms worse.

Breads, bagels and cereals are fine. So also are lean chicken, fish, whole-grain foods and vegetables.

Stay away from simple sugars, such as table sugar, candy and sweet pastries. Avoid sweetened fruit juices and caffeinated soft drinks.

For more information, see my report on blood sugar. Readers can order the report by sending $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents)

No. 10 envelope to: Dr. Donohue — No. 19, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you suggest something for cracked fingers? This happens to me each winter. It can be painful. It happens to many around here, and nothing we try works. We look forward to your column each day. — S.S.

ANSWER: The cracking gets worse during the winter, right? That gives you a pretty fair clue to the cause. In winter, our heated homes get pretty dry, and that dries out the skin, causing itching, peeling and painful cracking of the hands and fingers.

Adding to the environmental causes are other insults, such as frequent immersion of hands into hot water, which often contains harsh detergents and soaps. Little wonder that cracks appear.

I have nothing but the simple straightforward answers:

- Humidify your home.
- Wear protective gloves.
- Before retiring at night, coat your fingertips with petrolatum, lanolin or mineral oil.
- During the day, apply a less messy if perhaps more expensive protection — products such as Lac Hydrin or LubriDerm.

— YOUR EYES —

NATURE'S CAMERA

The design of the human body has never caused to amaze us. Consider the eye, more sophisticated and automatic than the most advanced computer or "smart" camera.

As you started to read this newspaper, six small muscles aimed each eye at the words you wanted to read: Automatically, just as in a top-of-the-line camera, the pupil (or aperture) opened or closed to regulate the amount of light entering the eye. A ring of tiny muscles adjusted the thickness of each lens to focus the image of each word on a light-sensitive screen (the retina) at the back of the eye. Millions of cells in the retina reacted to color and intensity of light. Each eye sent a set of signals to the brain, via nerve fibers, where they joined to create a picture.

Even when nature's "camera" doesn't work quite perfectly, there's still help available. That's when your optometrist may prescribe eye glasses, contact lenses or other corrective means.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

The Family Film this month is "The Trouble With Angels" at 7 p.m. on Thursday in the Heritage Room. Everyone is invited to come. It is free and popcorn will be available for 25 cents a bag.

April 14-20 is National Library Week and this year's theme, "Libraries Change Lives," seems to be very appropriate. Never in my wildest dreams, when I was growing up, did I ever picture myself as a librarian. Being a "reluctant reader" and knowing I would follow in my father's footsteps and become a rancher, all I would need was math.

I knew that to be true because all Daddy ever did was count cows and calves and figure the cost of feed on the kitchen table cloth.

Growing up in Texline there was no public library and the school library consisted of 800 volumes ranging from junior high-school books. When you read any of those books you had to give an oral report. In my efforts to learn the ranching business there just wasn't time for reading. I would have to sit still to read and I was a kid of action, besides reading was hard.

As an adult I once heard a librarian say, "If you think you don't like to read, it is because you haven't found the right book yet." Well, that was certainly true for me.

Being an avid reader, mother had acquired her own library and one boring 8th grade summer day, when I couldn't find anything to do, my mother handed me a Louis L'Amour western, "The Burning Hills." She said, "Read this. You'll like it." I'm not sure how long it took me to finish that book but it occupied my time for several days, maybe even weeks. It was the first book I had ever read from cover to cover. I remember looking forward to getting back to the story to see what would happen next. That was the first time reading had ever been fun and even exciting.

I remember walking into the college library for the first time my freshman year. Looking at the building from the outside you could tell it was several stories high and I imagined it would be full of books. When I walked in the main entrance I was amazed. There wasn't one book in sight. Where were all the books? Thank heavens I had a smart roommate from the big city of Bartlett and she knew how to use the card catalog, and I was a fast learner. I soon discovered the "stacks," floor to ceiling, wall to wall shelves of books. I remember how awed, how scared and how excited I felt when I left. I had done it! I had faced the enemy and succeeded in finding five sources needed for my first college research paper.

After Jerry and I moved to Hereford our financial situation was very thin. We were not able to make ends meet, so Jerry began job hunting for me. He saw the ad in the paper for a position at the Deaf Smith County Library. Acting on his instruction, I found my way to the library and filled out an application. A week later I began my job as services coordinator. I was in charge of all children and adult programming (four story times a week). The first adult program was scheduled between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Decorating for the holidays, three people attended. Disappointed, but not defeated, I continued on. Sixteen years later I have the privilege of being the library director, helping others discover the joy of reading and the excitement of finding needed information. Yes, I can definitely say "Libraries have changed my life."

Ready for romance? In "The Serpent Garden" by Judith Merkle Riley it is Tudor England. Henry VIII and his Machiavellian counselor Cardinal Wolsey are plotting to put an Englishman on the French throne. Thanks to the miniature portrait Susanna Dallet has painted of Henry's younger sister Mary, the wedding is almost set.

Everyone wants to know the identity of the painter who created the breath-taking miniature and many begin to search among the members of the painters' guild. Because women are not allowed to be members of the guild Susanna's identity remains a secret, allowing her a means of financial support.

Recently widowed Susanna relies on her God-given talent for portrait painting as her only source of income. The uncanny gift for capturing the character of each subject catches the attention of the ruthlessly manipulative Wolsey.

Wolsey becomes captivated by Susanna's wit, independence and talent. Susanna travels with the entourage going to France as the painter commissioned to record the royal wedding. Unknowingly Susanna carries the key to a grave secret that will have her embroiled in diabolical plots swirling through the French court.

Mary ultimately comes to Susanna's aid and keeps her from danger, revealing her courage and introduces Susanna to her future husband.

Arthur C. Clark and Mike McQuay joined forces to create Richter 10 the story of a colossal earthquake that happens in the near future of the U.S. Main character Lewis Crane, lived through the 1994 Los Angeles earthquake, but his family didn't.

At 7 years of age Lewis was alone. Now at 37 he has spent his life developing a unique theory of quake prediction, determined to save other families from the devastation he has suffered. But there are those that hope Lewis does not succeed.

The only way to prove his theory is for Lewis to predict an "unpredictable" quake. As Lewis continues his research he discovers a quake along the Reelfoot Rift that promises to register 8.5 on the Richter Scale. This big one will include Memphis, Indianapolis, and Nashville being swallowed up, and Chicago left in total ruin.

When Lewis makes his prediction the nation becomes divided between those who believe Crane and those who think he is just another crazy. The outcome is something no one expects, which leaves Crane's reputation and life in ruin.

But Lewis knows there is another quake to come -- an incredible 10. He knows where, when and even how to stop it, but will anyone believe him?

Former defensive end for the Atlanta Falcons Tim Green has created another thriller, "Outlaws." In the empty, sun-baked landscape of the Texas Panhandle (Do you know what that looks like?) two ruthless renegades complete a deadly bargain.

One, receiving stacks of $100 bills, intends to start a new life. The other receiving a small, silver object, intends to end the lives of millions halfway around the world. Armageddon is just another "good business" deal, and to the defensive back of the Texas Outlaws, love is a weakness that can get you killed.

For years Cody has been wreaking havoc on the opposition with lethal precision. When an IRS auditor is found dead Cody's killer instinct takes on a new meaning. Is Cody a hitman, or a fall guy? Cody's gorgeous, seductive and ambitious wife Jenny, promised to love until "death they did part." Did she literally mean what she said?

Madison, one of Austin's top defense attorneys is fighting a vengeful ex-husband for custody of their son, to clear Cody's name, and will soon be fighting for her very life.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Tonya Harding has ditched her machinist husband to focus on her skating comeback. Only problem is: The powers-that-be in the skating world have blackballed her.

Harding, 25, filed for divorce just 3-1/2 months into her marriage to Michael Smith. She wants no distractions as she concentrates on what her agent David Hans Schmidt dubbed "Tonya II, The Comeback."

"Don't get any wild ideas here, OK?" Harding told radio station KKRZ Wednesday. "I'm not going to be performing nude or topless or anything like that."

Harding was fined $110,000 and put on probation for helping cover up the 1994 attack engineered by her first husband on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

The 11 months remaining in her probation don't prevent her from resuming a skating career or seeking reinstatement to the U.S. Figure Skating Association.

The association, however, says it won't reverse its decision to ban her. "Tonya Harding has been suspended for life," USFSA spokeswoman Kristin Matta said.

Harding could still skate professionally in non-USFSA shows.

Slow down and explore the real Texas

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical and travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.

A Lesson from the Everglades

I guess the lesson actually started in Sunday School several weeks ago, when Dee Ann Osteen brought one of Bill Keane's "Family Circus" cartoons to share with the class. We were discussing the subject of success and in the cartoon, Billy asks his Dad if he'll ever be a success. His father assures him that he will, and then goes on to explain that success is a journey and that Bill can experience success now.

Billy replies that he thought success was a long way ahead. His father's answer contained a good bit of practical wisdom. He said, "If you only found success at the end of the road, it's too late; the journey's over. Enjoy all your successes right now, today and tomorrow."

A World of Beauty

The truth of Bill Keane's message became very clear to me recently as I trekked through the Florida Everglades. I was driving from Miami to Tampa across the isolated stretch of Highway 84 and Interstate 75 known as "Alligator Alley."

Hundreds of snow birds were flying by me, though I was traveling just above the speed limit. No, I'm not talking about the beautiful snowy, white egrets that populate the glades. Rather, I refer to the senior citizens who migrate south every winter to escape the cold of their beloved northern states.

They were traveling across this wilderness area seeing none of its natural beauty. Their passengers read newspapers, slept or otherwise appeared bored.

To me there was beauty all around. The temperature was nearly 80 degrees, and the sun felt warm so I drove with the window down. The landscape varied from slews of saw grass to stands of cypress trees and occasional pine heads.

The flowing waterways teemed with ducks and egrets, and the azure blue sky was punctuated with fluffy white clouds and soaring hawks. The air was pungent with the smell of the Glades.

I remembered the winter of 1981 when our family spent a winter in Florida. Two of Sue's cousins took me on an 80-mile wilderness excursion through the Everglades. I'll never forget the sights, sounds and smells of that trip.

I was snapped back to the present by a long gray shadow on the bank of a waterway near the road. "Gator" my eyes reported to my brain. Dozens of the creatures were sunning themselves on the banks. I eased to a stop on the shoulder and took some pictures. One big fellow might have measured 20 feet in length. I walked closer and we eyed each other across the water. "Lunch," he was thinking. "Shoes and handbags," I was thinking.

I breathed deeply, stretched and enjoyed the warmth of the sun. What a day in the Everglades. Thirty feet behind me, bored folks whizzed by. They were oblivious to the wonder of God's creation. What a shame.

Just Like Life

Millions of people are whizzing down life's highways, everyday. They are focusing on some distant dream, some future success or some promise of happiness yet unfulfilled. They are so focused on the future that they cannot enjoy or find success in the moment. Just like Billy before his visit with his father, they believe success and happiness lie up ahead.

No, I'm not suggesting that we shouldn't have dreams and goals for success and happiness. On the contrary, I believe in the power of focusing on meaningful achievement. However, not to the exclusion of enjoying today.

Life is short. Live it well. Enjoy each day as you make your journey. Take time to smell the flowers, feel the breeze and express your gratitude to your maker. Life really is fleeting, so learn to enjoy the present.

Support group meets Tuesday

The Diabetic Support Group will hold its regular meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Naomi Flores Garcia RN and a Diabetes Educator with Northwest Texas Healthcare System of Amarillo will present a program on the subject of reading labels and purchasing foods.

This will be an excellent time to bring questions and have a sharing session with other participants.

The facilitators from Hereford Home Health Care, Inc. will be available to act as interpreters for any non-English speaking participants.

Any and all Diabetes Mellitus patients are invited to participate in this group.

An afternoon session has been organized for those persons who are unable to attend the evening meeting. This group will meet in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center at 1 p.m. Tuesday. The facilitator for the afternoon meeting will be Charlotte R. Clark RD/LD. Label information will be the topic of discussion.

Bennie Knapp was in Hereford recently for a state visit.

Knapp, who has been a member of the Ladies Auxiliary since 1974, is a member of C.L. Bridge Memorial Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2544.

She is a veteran of the United States Navy and is married to M. John Knapp. Their home is in Fort Worth. The couple has two sons, Mr. and Mrs. John Knapp Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Knapp, and five grandchildren.

Knapp has chosen as her theme this year "Anchored in Texas...Serving with Pride" which is illustrated in the symbol of Texas with an anchor in the center. Her special project is assisting the hearing impaired.

The Ladies Auxiliary is a service organization with over 47,000 members in Texas and over 770,000 members nationwide. The Auxiliary is dedicated to protecting Veterans entitlements, promoting patriotism and making our communities a better place to live.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Hollywood hooker caught with Hugh Grant didn't show up for court, so the judge issued a warrant for her arrest.

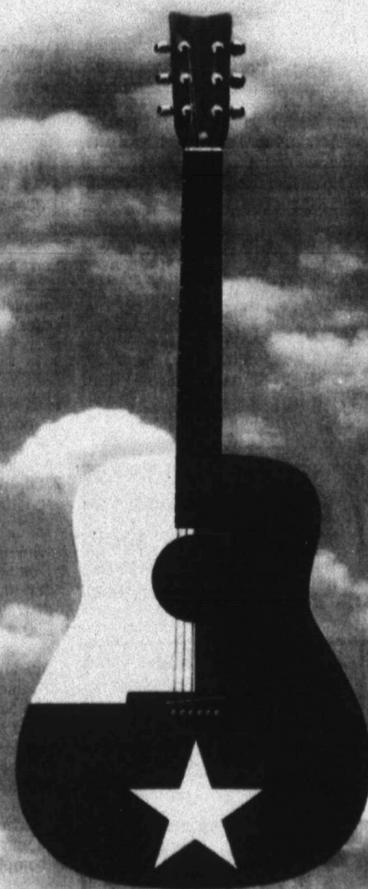

Judge Patricia Ann Bigelow on Wednesday revoked probation for Estella Maria Thompson when she didn't show up to provide proof she had received AIDS education and completed five days of community service.

Thompson's lawyer, Richard Nahigian, said he hadn't talked to his client but that her failure to appear "could have been an oversight."

Grant and Thompson were arrested last June as she performed oral sex on him in his BMW.

Thompson, also known as Divine Brown, pleaded no contest to lewd conduct and served a six-month jail sentence.

Hints from Heloise

New Homes for Old Dogs

Dear Heloise: A while ago you published a letter from Janet Huey from Racers Recycled in Houston.

I followed up with her and received the name of a Birmingham, Ala., greyhound adoption center. Now I have a very manageable, loving pet that is neutered, housebroken and great with my 2 1/2-year-old granddaughter.

These people do a wonderful job and are to be commended. Thanks. — Joe Archer, Florence, Ala.

They are great and so are you! It's wonderful to know you're delighted with your pet. Janet has received lots of letters like yours and it thrills her (and my office) to know all those beautiful dogs have gone to so many loving homes.

There are more than 120 adoption groups in the United States and Canada. Racers Recycled will put you in touch with a group close to you. For anyone interested in learning more about adopting these gentle, beautiful dogs, please write to Racers Recycled, PO Box 270107, Houston TX 77277-0107. They refer by ZIP code, so if you live near a large city in another state, please include that ZIP code too. — Heloise MAGNET

Dear Heloise: I found a large magnet of the United States that I keep on the side of my refrigerator door. Underneath it and slightly protruding, I keep a list of my husband's and my medications and allergies. If an emergency person comes to our home, we send them immediately to the refrigerator to see what prescriptions it contains.

The list of all medical information is under this magnet and visible to them. The emergency care they give depends on your physical problems. Any help they have is beneficial. — Averil Bergey, Scottsdale, Ariz.

IDENTIFY ITEMS
Dear Heloise: To help quickly identify my luggage and other items such as golf bags and back bags, boots, tools and sports equipment, I mark them with dimensional fabric and craft paint.

This is very helpful when traveling by air, as so many bags are alike. — Ruth E. Kling, Marco Island, Fla.

OLD FASHIONED CHARM

Room To Expand Over The Garage

This small plan is packed with first class features, including room for future expansion. The stairs up to this room are located in the formal foyer of the home. Continuing back from the foyer is a family room with fireplace and rear sun deck access.

The home includes two eating areas, one being a formal dining room with cased opening to the family room. A central kitchen serves both eating areas and is designed for convenience in meal preparation. The laundry area is tucked away near the entrance to the double garage.

The bed room wing of the house exudes warmth and comfort while allowing the most practical use of interior space. The master bed room is shown with a tray ceiling and the garden master bath has a sloped ceiling. A double vanity is shown and linen storage is provided.

The remaining two bedrooms share a hall bath, also shown with linen storage.

Twin dormers on the front give the home country picturesque character. The home contains 1,537 square feet of heated space with an additional 271 square feet available in the bonus room over the garage.

Shtetl examines Holocaust legacy in little Polish town

Zbyszek Romaniuk of Bransk, Poland, is a Christian studying the 400-year history of his town's Jewish community, which ended with the Holocaust. His story is part of Shtetl, a special presentation of Frontline, debuting Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

By Suzanne Gill
eTVData Features Syndicate

"This film is made like a painting," says Marian Marzynski, the director and producer of Shtetl, debuting Wednesday, April 17, on PBS' Frontline (check local listings).

"You put one color on, then another and another, and at the end you have a texture," he explains.

The first layer is Marzynski himself, who survived the Holocaust in a Catholic orphanage. As Shtetl shows, he tried in his 30s to return to the little town, or shtetl, his family had called home, but sadness drove him away.

Marzynski's American-born Jewish friend, Nathan Kaplan, however, regards a shtetl pilgrimage with optimism. At 70, Kaplan visits Bransk, Poland, his father's town, and Marzynski goes along as his interpreter.

In Bransk they meet 29-year-old Zbyszek Romaniuk, a town hall employee with whom Kaplan has been corresponding. Romaniuk, who is interested in Bransk history, becomes their guide.

Romaniuk is not Jewish. No one in Bransk today is Jewish, though 2,500 Jews lived there 60 years ago. Except for a handful who escaped, they were all killed at the Treblinka death camp.

With Kaplan and Marzynski, Romaniuk recovers Jewish gravestones used by the Germans to pave a sidewalk. Romaniuk returns them to the old cemetery. Later a rabbi tells him he has done a mitzvah — a good deed.

Many of the old-timers in Bransk are fearful of Kaplan's visit; they are afraid he and other Jews will want to reclaim their families' property.

When Kaplan returns home to Chicago, his laptop computer is filled with pages of notes.

At that point, Marzynski says, "I knew I had scratched the surface of something, but there were more questions that were not answered."

So he invites Romaniuk to America and arranges for him to meet survivors and the children of survivors, all with memories of Bransk. Time and again they marvel at the easygoing Pole who cares about Jews.

Marzynski takes his friend to Israel. There a group of students exposes Romaniuk's blind spot: his firm belief it was the German invaders, not the Poles who stood by, who delivered the Bransk Jews to their deaths.

"But that is a complex he has as a Pole," Marzynski says. Clearly many Poles would rather forget the Jews entirely than face memories of guilt.

"He was confronting something that was bigger than him. I knew sooner or later he would step on the mine and something would explode. He didn't know what he was getting into."

Back in Bransk, Romaniuk has paid the price for his curiosity. Once he had a promising political future, but since Shtetl, Marzynski says, "he has been rejected by the town, lost his election. This film taught him a few things, and the problem for him is, is he going to apply this in life?"

Running three hours, Shtetl is a long but captivating film, full of warm reunions and bittersweet memories. The filmmaker's heart is full, but he resists the opportunity to lecture.

"Somebody said, 'You will make a lot of Jews mad by not saying (the Poles are guilty).' But it is not my role in the film to be a smart aleck and give opinions so people aren't unhappy."

"I'm in the business of the benefit of the doubt. I give a chance to people who are trying hard. It's up to the audience to evaluate that."

HIGHLIGHTS

Duke, Davidovich star in Hallmark's "Harvest of Fire"

Patty Duke and Lolita Davidovich work together to catch an arsonist

Oscar and multiple Emmy Award winner Patty Duke joins Lolita Davidovich in "Harvest of Fire," the 188th presentation of the Hallmark Hall Of Fame. The special airs Sunday, April 21 at 8:00 pm on CBS.

Patty Duke plays Amish widow, Annie Beiler who agrees to take FBI agent Sally Russell, (Lolita Davidovich) into her home; the agent is trying to capture an arsonist who is burning down barns on Amish farms.

The Amish have little interest in helping with the investigation. They simply want to get on with their lives, believing God will take care of the arsonist.

They are suspicious of all outsiders -- whom they call "the English" -- including law enforcement officers. Gradually, however, agent Sally develops a rapport with Annie; living with -- and working alongside -- the Beiler family, she learns a lot about herself, her values, and her relationship with her boyfriend. Still, it's not a case of rapport at first sight.

"It's not really a case of two people just hitting it off the first time they meet. The understanding, the respect, the relationship -- it all develops slowly," says Duke. "Even though -- on the face of it -- they're so different, one of the reasons they're able to become close is that this Amish lady has a sense of humor, and a sense of adventure." Duke continues, "It's as if each of them is searching for something the other one has to offer. Sally is looking for some sense of order in her life; Annie wants to taste the outside -- she's intrigued by this 'professional woman' who comes into her life."

"What's also very interesting is that Annie is secure enough in her beliefs and her way of living that she doesn't tremble in life. Annie's a very secure person -- within herself, her family, her community," says Duke.

Lolita talks about her character research, "I spoke with several female FBI agents before I started playing Sally, and what I learned is that, in general, the women agents tend to rely on their brains, their intuition, a little more than male agents do -- the men tend to be more physical. When the women are trying to solve a crime, to come up with answers, they tend to take a psychological approach. My character, Agent Sally Russell, is smart and -- a cynic would say -- cagey. But she knows how to get answers: be persistent, be methodical, and use psychology rather than brute strength."

Others starring in "Harvest" are J.A. Preston ("A Few Good Men," "Real Life") as Sheriff Paul Garrison. Jean Louisa Kelly ("Uncle Buck," "Mr. Holland's Opus") as Rachel.

"Harvest of Fire" was filmed on location in and around an Amish community in Iowa. Director Arthur Allan Seidelman ("A Friendship in Vienna," "Strange Voices") says a major challenge he faced was "to give life to this beautiful land where we're shooting. Just like the people here are rich in their souls, so, too, the land is rich. I wanted very much to make the land an important character in this story."

All in all the story is ultimately about what really matters in life, what's most important. "When the sun goes down and you're alone in your room at night," Davidovich says, "how do you fill that emptiness and deal with that loneliness? It's not with the paycheck and it's not with the awards on the mantel. It's with family. It's with friends. It's with people who matter to you."

"Harvest of Fire" will air on Sunday, April 21 at 8:00 pm on CBS.

Together, the miniseries The Winds of War and War and Remembrance have a running time of 48 hours. They cost a total of $140 million.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES - March 21/April 20

Avoid discussing money with loved ones, especially if it has been a touchy topic lately. Resist the temptation to break plans with a friend. Even if socializing seems inconvenient now, you'll have more to gain if you stick to the original plan. An unforeseen obstacle may delay travel plans.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Try to make the best of an unpleasant situation early this week. You'll see that a positive attitude can work wonders. Don't let financial woes get you down. A sound plan will get you where you want to be. A new hobby provides a pleasant diversion. Shocking news comes on Friday.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Look before you leap when it comes to large purchases. The overzealous Gemini could wind up in a sea of regret. Overloading your social calendar may be a mistake. Leave time for domestic chores and quiet moments at home. Offer a kind ear to a friend who's down in the dumps.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Stop worrying and have some fun! Get out of your protective shell and live a little. Really, it's not so bad! A friend who has disappointed you in the past will do something to redeem him/herself. Even if you decide to forgive, don't forget. A look ahead gives you something to be happy about.

LEO - July 23/August 23

An event you have had your heart set on could suddenly be cancelled. You may want to make a back-up weekend plan. A new love interest may promise more than (s)he delivers. Instead of wearing your heart on your sleeve, play it cool for a while. An out-of-town visitor brings good news.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Escape daily doldrums by delving into a novel or indulging in a favorite hobby. Pamper yourself when you can, especially if you have a busy schedule ahead. Someone you meet this week will give you good financial advice. Don't just shrug it off. A family member has good news.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

You may have to read between the lines to understand what a loved one is trying to tell you. This is especially true if you're dealing with a Scorpio. A challenging work project will get your creative juices flowing. You'll have the opportunity to show off your talents. Give it your all! Another Libra plays a role on Wednesday.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

If you're a typical stubborn Scorpio, you probably don't like change. But this week, you may find it inevitable. Instead of fighting it, try to make it more positive. A heart-to-heart conversation will make you see a friend's motives more clearly. Good news comes in three's this week.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Worries regarding a family member will be alleviated by Wednesday. Keep a close watch on valued possessions this week or something you need could be misplaced. If you're looking for a new job, Thursday will be a lucky day. Be sure to dress your best when meeting potential employers.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Diplomacy will be needed at work this week, especially if you are in a management-type position. A mid-week change of routine will provide a nice diversion. You'll realize that you need more variety in life. Patience will be a virtue in a family discussion. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Trust your instincts when it comes to an important decision. Don't let anyone sway your opinions. An unexpected invitation will give you something to look forward to this coming weekend. A fellow Aquarian may be the cause of aggravation later in the week. Avoid explosive confrontations.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Just when you think you got a lucky break, something changes to turn things around. Take heart. A few pleasant surprises await. In matters of love, you may find that you're giving far more than your getting. It may be time to voice your concerns. Children add diversity to the weekend.

TV PIPELINE

Q: Where did Kristen Johnston (3rd Rock From the Sun) come from? Great flexi-face! Also, is Gordon Hunt, the director of a recent Mad About You episode, related to star Helen Hunt? I understand her first movie was a sports film. -Ed White, Stanley, N.C.

Kristen Johnston

A: Born in the nation's capital, Johnston was reared in Milwaukee. She spent a big chunk of her teens traveling as an exchange student in Sweden and South America.

She has a lengthy roster of stage credits (including a Drama Desk Award nomination for a Lincoln Center play called The Lights), but otherwise had made only guest appearances in shows such as Chicago Hope before landing on 3rd Rock.

Gordon Hunt is the father of Helen, who made her acting debut as a child in the TV movie Pioneer Woman. The "sports film" you mention may be her favorite vehicle, The Miracle of Kathy Miller, in which she played a runner who recovered from devastating injuries in a car accident to compete again.

Q: Following your advice to another reader, I called Movies Unlimited to try to find a video of Disney's Song of the South. They told me it wasn't available and never would be. True? Why? -David M. Plechas, Cerritos, Calif.

A: First, for confused readers, the Movies Unlimited number - (800) 4MOVIES - works out to 466-8437, not -8432 as a typo originally had it.

A Disney publicist declined to comment on a rumor that the company feared the 1946 Song might be deemed racially insensitive today, but confirmed the studio has no plans to release this title on video - ever.

For the very determined, however, film historian Leonard Maltin says Song has been released on laserdisc in Japan, so if you have a laserdisc player and can find a video company that handles imports, go for it.

Q: Can you please tell me the name of the leading actor in the TV series version of War of the Worlds? I can see his face, but can't remember his name or other series he might have been on. Can you help? -Anne Barlow, Nyssa, Ore.

A: Jared Martin played Dr. Harrison Blackwood in that syndicated series. A decade earlier he starred in a short-lived ABC series, Fantastic Journey, but he probably is best known for playing Sue Ellen Ewing's (Linda Gray) ill-fated lover, Dusty Farlow, on Dallas.

Q: Did William Schallert, who played the father on The Patty Duke Show, also play the dad on Mork and Mindy? -J. McCallion, Honolulu.

A: No, Conrad Janis played Frederick McConnell, Mindy's father.

CityKids celebrates youth in special television concert

By Amy Hibbert
eTVData Features Syndicate

Many natural resources are being wasted in the world today, but there is still one largely untapped resource available: this country's youth.

The numerous reports of crime and violence in schools and neighborhoods often overshadow the work of organizations like the New York-based CityKids Foundation, a group of young people devoted to the survival of today's youth.

CityKids -- a national nonprofit multicultural organization -- celebrates its 10th anniversary with a television special, CityKids All Star Celebration. The program premieres Saturday, April 20, on ABC.

Demi Moore, the foundation's national spokeswoman, serves as host.

Paula Abdul sings a medley of her songs with members of CityKids providing backup. Michael Bolton performs a soulful rendition of "What's Going On."

Other musical acts include Brandy (Mo'Nisha) singing "Best Friend," and Salt-N-Pepa high-stepping to "Ain't Nuthin' but a She Thing."

Sinbad attempts -- albeit unsuccessfully -- to define the latest slang words, and Richard Jeni provides laughs with tales of his childhood.

Members of the foundation also perform sketches to emphasize the different issues facing youth around the country, including gang violence, racial discrimination and homelessness.

In a stirring segment, Drew Barrymore, Cindy Crawford, Ricki Lake, Rosie Perez and Jimmy Smits lend their voices to letters written by young people across the country that hit on some serious subjects.

Although the celebration addresses many difficult issues, the program's pace and atmosphere make it an uplifting and exhilarating experience for both the participants and the audience.

As the ever-changing world continues to present new challenges, the CityKids message remains constant: Today's young people are the future and they have a lot to give.

Hero and the Terror ★★ (1988) Chuck Norris, Brynni Thayer. Time Approximate. A Los Angeles police officer launches an obsessive search for a serial killer preying on local women. 2:00. April 14 6pm.

High Society ★★½ (1956) Bing Crosby, Grace Kelly. A reporter and a photographer covering a wedding for a fashion magazine cause the bride to think twice about marriage. 2:00. April 15 2pm.

The Hoodlum Saint ★★½ (1946) William Powell, Esther Williams. An unemployed war veteran resorts to crime before discovering that virtue has its own rewards. 1:45. April 19 10pm.

House of Wax ★★½ (1953) Vincent Price, Phyllis Kirk. A fire-scarred sculptor uses horrible methods to restore the marvelous wax creations his crippled hands cannot. 2:00. April 19 3am.

Howling II... Your Sister is a Werewolf ★½ (1985) Christopher Lee, Annie McEnroe. Two Americans join a seasoned werewolf hunter on a mission to destroy a society of lycanthropes in Transylvania. 1:55. April 14 1:05am.

The Hunchback of Notre Dame ★★½ (1939) Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara. Deformed bell-ringer Quasimodo falls hopelessly in love with a beautiful gypsy. Based on Victor Hugo's novel. 2:00. April 17 5am.

I Accuse! ★★★ (1958) Jose Ferrer, Viveca Lindfors. An account of the events surrounding the treason trial and imprisonment of French army officer Alfred Dreyfus. 2:00. April 15 9am.

MONDAY

Gigi Rice stars as a single mother who must protect herself and her son from a computer stalker in Deadly Web. The NBC movie premieres Monday.

IN FOCUS

Dick Clark celebrates the induction of seven talented people who have contributed greatly to the TV industry in the 11th annual Academy of Television Arts & Sciences' Hall of Fame, airing Thursday, April 18, on CBS. The inductees, recognized for their contributions on and off camera, include Bill Moyers, Dick Van Dyke, Jim McKay, Betty White, the late Michael Landon and the writing-producing team of Levinson and Link. Patrick Duffy, Michele Lee and John Ritter are among the presenters.

Blair Underwood steps up to the plate and stars as baseball great Jackie Robinson in Soul of the Game, premiering Saturday, April 20, on HBO. When the commissioner responsible for keeping blacks out of the major leagues dies, scouts begin searching the Negro Leagues for talent. Based on actual events, the film tells the story of Robinson, pitcher Satchel Paige (Delroy Lindo) and other black baseball stars who had dreams of breaking into the major leagues. Edward Herrmann also stars.

when she played a pregnant woman in the movie "Mrs. Winterbourne," a romantic comedy due out later this month.

Lake, 27, who now weighs between 130 and 140, said in the April 15 issue of People magazine that playing pregnant was good practice because she and husband Rob Sussman want to have a baby soon.

"Having been fat for so long, I know it's definitely not the most flattering look for me, but hopefully the real thing will be better - I'll have that special glow."

NEW YORK (AP) - Anthony Edwards' co-stars on "ER" say viewers are ready to see a sexier side of his character, Dr. Mark Greene. "Anthony is the sexy one,"

Julianna Margulies tells TV Guide in its April 13 issue. "I asked all of my friends, 'If you had to sleep with one of the doctors, who would it be?' They all said Greene."

Margulies, who plays Nurse Carol Hathaway, says women are smart.

"They say, 'Oh, I could have a great one-night stand with Dr. Doug Ross (actor George Clooney). But Greene, he is the one I would want to be able to have great sex with - and take home to my mother.'"

As for Edwards, whose character is going through a divorce, he says that he'll soon have an on-screen fling.

Jim Henson's The Muppet Show aired in syndication in the 1970s and '80s after being turned down by all three major networks.

SOAP TALK

Viewer wants ATWT to take high road

By Candace Havens
eTVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: Please relay my comments to As the World Turns.

I believe the lack of ethical and moral responsibility in soap story lines is appalling. When the writers allow a bad character to win at whatever his game is, they are sending a message to young people and others this type of behavior is rewarded.

For example, Carly (Maura West) and Scott (Doug Wert) on ATWT are succeeding at their unethical schemes. This indicates to impressionable people that a person can succeed with these attitudes and efforts!

Our society has enough problems already. TV producers and writers must take responsibility for their characters' poor values and ethics.

Sometimes writers should approach the program with the idea that crime and the unethical treatment of others rarely succeed in our society.

Also, it is unrealistic to have an evil character on a soap reform himself without justice prevailing and some kind of psychological treatment taking place. The writers should stop keeping such characters on soaps just because they are popular. Once in a while viewers would like to see bad characters get their comeuppance.

Are the writers on soaps not creative enough to write story lines that promote justice, honesty and ethical behavior? -Marie Neal, Akron, Ohio.

Dear Reader: Carly and Scott are two of the milder ethical offenders on soaps. Sheila (Kimberlin Brown) on The Bold and the Beautiful and Vivian (Louise Sorel) on Days of Our Lives make Carly look like a Girl Scout.

The day Vivian buried Carly (Crystal Chappell) alive on Days, the telephone lines at NBC were jammed.

Viewers were horrified by what they saw. But the fact is most of them kept watching, and that translates into higher ratings.

Producers and writers of all the daytime series are aware of the behavior portrayed on their shows, but some are more responsible about what they broadcast than others.

Send questions of general interest to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, TVData Features Syndicate, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804, or e-mail to soaptalk@tvdata.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.

HIGHLIGHTS

FAM Presents Hallmark Entertainment World Premiere Movie

Robert Urich as Captain Matt Troop, a loving father and husband

In the heartwarming family adventure, based on the classic novel written by Rudyard Kipling, "Captains Courageous," director Michael Anderson's ultimate goal is to entertain, but he also hopes that people will want to see or read more classic stories

"In Kipling's stories, we always take away a moral message," says Anderson. "In 'Captain's Courageous,' we discover that Harvey, (Kenny Vadas), a spoiled, millionaire orphan, had everything materially, but he was deprived of such commonplace things as a heartfelt embrace or an approving pat on the back. He was so young when he was orphaned that he never truly experienced paternal love. In this story, when Harvey comes aboard the fishing schooner and sees the relationship between Dan (Kaj-Erik Eriksen) and the Captain (Robert Urich), he realizes what he's been missing and begins to yearn for it. He also understands that he needs to make changes within himself to allow others to love him. It's wonderful to watch him discover that the true riches in life are those you can't take to the bank."

"Robert brought the character of Captain Matt Troop beyond the written page," says Anderson. "Being a father, he also brought a great deal of personal skill, knowledge and experience with kids to his portrayal. Throughout the story, you can feel his warmth and kindness toward the boys, especially as he begins to reward Harvey with small privileges."

Adds Urich, "Kids don't read very much these days, so it's important to expose them to one of Kipling's greatest adventure tales. My 15-year-old son had never heard of the story. When I was going to Vancouver to do 'Captains Courageous,' he thought I was playing a superhero with a cape and spandex."

[The Family Channel makes teaching classics a breeze in FAM's Cable In The Classroom Study Guide for 'Captains Courageous.' The 24-page learning adventure for fourth grade and above incorporates a broad spectrum of education tools with selections on literature, math, science, social studies and personal development.]

The story of "Captains Courageous" is the tale of a spoiled, rich orphan, Harvey Cheyne Jr., who learns the value of hard work and true friendship from those fishermen who rescue him after he falls off a cruise liner en route to a British boarding school.

The boy's transformation begins when he joins the crew of a New England fishing schooner, captained by Matt Troop, and is forced to work for his passage alongside Dan, the captain's son. After resisting efforts to make him one of the crew, Harvey eventually evolves from an obnoxious, pampered youth into a loyal and trusted friend. Meanwhile, the captain's aloofness gives way to fatherly acceptance that changes Harvey's life.

Concludes Anderson, "In Kipling's story, Harvey understands that he has to make changes within himself to allow others to love him. This timeless message is something the whole family can enjoy together."

"Captains Courageous," debuts Sunday, April 21 at 6:00 pm on The Family Channel.

Interior decorators able to find extra space in house

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition

Who are you gonna call when you're stuck in your present home, but need more space? Ghost busters probably won't help, but interior decorators who sometimes perform minor miracles of space expansion might do the trick.

Two New York-based decorators recently found space in two different apartments to accommodate children's bedrooms.

Joan Halperin went outdoors to discover enough room for a bedroom to accommodate two children in an apartment in New Jersey. She found what her client needed by enclosing a 6- by 15-foot balcony/terrace off the living room. Although an unusual idea, its execution was rather simple, the decorator says.

"We installed sliding glass windows, sheetrocked and painted the ceiling and former exterior wall, and added electric baseboard heaters," Halperin explains.

A plywood subfloor and carpeting were installed and the room was furnished sparsely with built-in, gray laminate-covered storage beds, a desk and a chair, hanging bookcase and recessed ceiling mounted lights. Accessories were few, but the children were able to store toys and other belongings elsewhere in the apartment.

"The most fantastic accessory," Halperin says, "was the view which was of the Hudson River and the New York City skyline."

Nancy Mullan turned a 10- by 13-foot, closet-less room in a Brooklyn apartment into a more than adequate teen-ager's bedroom. First step was to build in a clothes closet along one end of the short wall. The niche that was created was fitted with a single bed for the occupant and a trundle bed for an occasional overnight guest.

Adding to the closet's utility, Mullan built shoe storage into the bottom half along one side and bookshelves into the upper portion of the same wall. The bookshelves are accessible from the bed side of the closet and the shoe shelves from the inside.

"You can pack quite a bit of storage in, over, and under a bed in a niche," says Mullan, "and it is a cozy and appealing arrangement, provided you have provided enough light in the niche with a swing arm lamp or a ceiling fixture, or both."

Mullan also had a window in this room so there is the added benefit of daylight in the niche.

The decorator used space-expanding decorating ploys in the room. The skirted armchair is on casters so it can be moved to accommodate the trundle bed. And she installed carpeting with a diagonal pattern and painted the room in light colors. Both are methods to visually expand a room.

Dividing a wall by building in a closet or bookshelves and then using the niche for sitting, sleeping or a work surface is a good way to add to the flexibility of a room.

"But in a long narrow room, make sure to do this across the short wall rather than the long wall to avoid creating a long tunnel-like space," says Mullan.

Removing a wall can create extra space in quarters that feel cramped and inadequate. Nonbearing walls without mechanical lines can be taken out rather easily, whether they are of sheet rock or plaster, Halperin says.

A floor plan of the space is essential in order to envision the possibilities.

"Get or make a floor plan for all the rooms, indicating the closets, bathrooms and outdoor areas. Darken those elements that must remain, like columns, bearing walls, and walls with mechanical services such as plumbing and heating lines," she says.

"You might find that two closets are back to back and if you take the partitions down you will have enough room for an alcove that could be a home office, a laundry room, another bathroom, or even a nursery if there is access to a window nearby," Halperin adds. "Or you may realize that by moving a doorway a few feet you can build in a long wall of closets."

Don't dismiss a room as too small before checking the adjoining spaces.

"There is typically from four to six inches of depth in a wall," Mullan says. "You may be able to pick up a bit of space by invading the wall to recess bulky equipment such as a television set, a microwave oven or a refrigerator."

Mullan used this method to recess a large television set four inches into one wall of a little-used dining room, turning the room into a combination family room and dining room.

She rearranged the dining table by placing it against a window in one end of the room with four chairs around it. The other four chairs were distributed along the walls. She arranged easy chairs and ottomans on casters in the center of the room, facing the wall with the TV set and storage shelves now in place.

When the room is needed as a dining room, the chairs are moved out of the way, the table and eight chairs pushed back into the center of the room and the ottomans tucked under the table.

Both designers say that small rooms should be kept relatively free of furniture and accessories. Open shelves and glass-fronted upper cabinets create the illusion of more openness.

Mullan tries to avoid tunnel effects in rooms, which occur if there are lines of cabinets or furniture at the same depth on both sides of a room. Having a piece of furniture protrude into the room actually makes the space seem larger, she says.

Try to emphasize diagonal lines, especially for floor coverings, she advises.

"The effect of laying a diagonal pattern on the floor is astounding," Mullan says. "If you see a room before and after, you literally believe that it has grown."

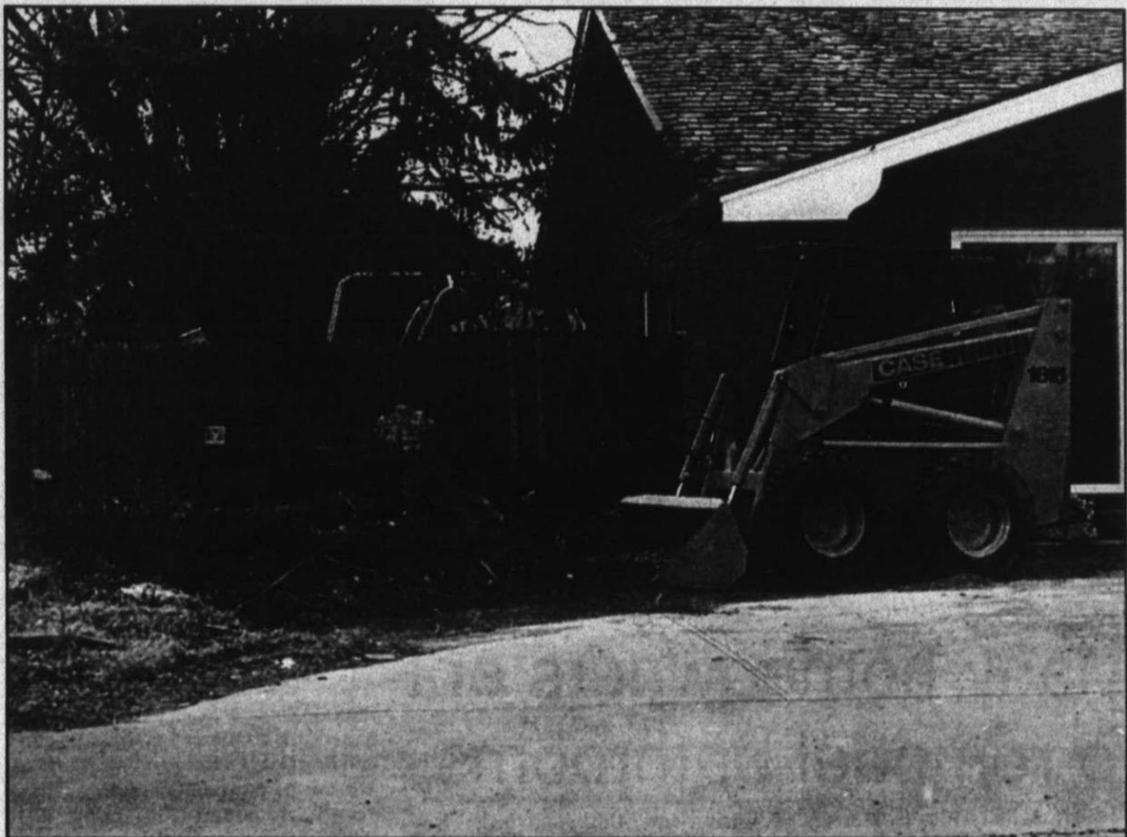

Household hints

- Smooth uneven caulking while it's still fresh by running an ice cube over it. This even removes lumps.

- Place a piece of tape on the spot where you want to nail a picture hanger on finished drywall. The tape will keep the drywall from crumbling and reinforce the hanger.

- Pick up a loose square of vinyl flooring by placing a piece of cloth on it and running a hot iron over it. Lift gently. If it's still attached, reapply the hot iron.

- Lemon juice, peroxide and cola brewed together make a good bath for rusty household items.

Major landscape job

The Tom Fellhauer family decided they needed more than just a little grass and some flowers to renew their front yard landscaping -- they brought in a small bulldozer to clear out overgrown trees and shrubs before creating a new look. The outdoor work is part of an overall remodeling job the family, which lives at 217 Ranger, is undertaking.

Owner moves to resurrect modern design

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition

The classic contemporary looks serene, simple and modern, sitting amidst rock outcroppings and laurel.

In 1983, when Katherine DeSousa bought the circa-1948 contemporary in northern Fairfield County, Conn., the impression was anything but restful.

"The house looked like a spaceship from Mars had landed on the roof," says DeSousa.

Although it had impeccable beginnings as an architect-designed copy of a well-known Frank Lloyd Wright original from the 1930s - the Madison, Wis., Jacobs house - the building had fallen on hard times. Various owners had moved the front door, nailed other doors shut, and put in unattractive extensions, such as a glassed-in porch with a corrugated roof and a partial second story with a butterfly roof painted pink and green.

"The kitchen was a disaster area," says DeSousa, who is a designer of decorative home accessories. "The stove - a model probably manufactured for two weeks in the early 1960s - had only one burner still working and no possibility of replacement parts. Every time the drawers of the homemade cupboards were opened, sawdust descended on the contents below."

Shag green carpeting, linoleum that looked like pebbles, mirrored ceiling beams, black and purple bathroom cabinets, gold-flecked plastic laminate countertops and a multi-colored bathroom ceiling were decorative features DeSousa felt must be changed as quickly as possible.

"You are probably wondering why I bought it," says DeSousa with a rueful smile. "The basic bones of the house were good. The flow of interior spaces on the first floor was quite pleasing. The house certainly had character, and its setting surrounded by rock outcroppings and laurel woods felt remote, yet was convenient to work."

The first thing DeSousa did was to clean and stabilize the structure to prevent further deterioration. She had rotten overhanging eaves rebuilt, re-roofed both house and garage, and upgraded the electric system.

After living in the house for a while, she began to think about remodeling. DeSousa worked with New York architect Jonathan Foster and Fairfield County contractor Ron Mettall to remodel the house. She ended by slightly enlarging the three-bedroom house to create a more convenient kitchen, a full bath upstairs, and a more spacious dining area.

With about 1,700 square feet and only five main rooms, the house is smaller than the typical Fairfield County residence yet quite complete. On the main floor, there is a large kitchen with a new glass-roofed seating area, a combination living room and dining area, two bedrooms, and two baths. A small windowed room used as an eating porch is located next to the bluestone terrace. A circular staircase leads to a master suite that includes a glorious new Italian marble bathroom created by extending the small kitchen addition upwards. The house is a symphony of simplicity with neutral walls and upholstery.

The red concrete floor with radiant heating (a Frank Lloyd Wright specialty) provides a note of color. Redwood strips separate the concrete blocks and make them look like giant terra cotta tiles. Other colorful notes are flower arrangements which DeSousa delights in creating, art works, and interesting accessories. Her own crystal and glass bowls and candlesticks for clients such as Baccarat, Val St. Lambert and Miller

In the kitchen, there are European appliances which DeSousa considers superior to American brands in quality and style. Her kitchen and dining area cabinets come from Germany. The granite countertops are from Canada. She had a brushed stainless steel backsplash made in Connecticut.

"This house is a real dictator," says DeSousa. "When I bought it, most of the things I owned were country items, like Hoosier cupboards. The austerity of Shaker design and Japanese design fits better," the designer adds.

"Like all houses, this one is not finished. There is always repair and replacement. The in-ground fuel tank has to be removed and that is going to be a nightmare," says DeSousa. "And I want to do some further remodeling to one downstairs bedroom and the two baths."

Further changes will gild the lily, perhaps, but the sure steps that DeSousa has already taken provide a firm foundation for the rebirth of this classic contemporary.

Many homeowners opt to remodel bathrooms

CHICAGO (AP) -- Homeowners are remodeling their bathrooms in record numbers these days, but most of them are keeping an eye on costs, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, an industry group.

The middle ground, says PHCIB, is a remodel judiciously using top-quality fixtures.

The bureau estimates that a luxury re-do can cost $10,000 and up, depending on the area of the country and features selected. These might include such high-end fixtures as a one-piece toilet and matching bidet, pedestal lavatory, elevated whirlpool tub and separate shower.

"If there is no limit on space, consider installing dual lavatories and a shower separate from the tub - two conveniences especially noticeable during 'morning rush hour,'" says Robert Brands of Kohler, Co.

Other luxury items are shower spas with multiple showerheads and spray patterns, two showerheads so two people can shower at one time, fold-down or slide-out shower seats, and towel warmers.

But the PHCIB says that mid-level budget ($3,400 to $9,000) rehabs often include some luxury items, as well as strategic replacements. These might include new toilet, lavatory with new faucet and a vanity and a bathbath with a new faucet. Figure at least $5,000 if all fixtures are replaced.

A modular shower system from Jacuzzi Inc. offers options in shower bases, walls and other features. "Our custom Shower System allows homeowners to create their own shower environment, choosing the exact size and features that meet their individual needs," says the company's chairman, Roy Jacuzzi.

With spring here and the weather warming up, many homeowners are looking at ways to spruce up their homes. Here, McLain Garden Center employees, from left, Lucy DeLeon, Glenda Drager and Kami Eades look over some of the flowers and trees that can be planted for a fresh new look.

A selection of faucet styles with different handles, finishes and matching towel bars are offered by Delta Faucet Co. "These products are aimed squarely at the market demand for stylish but value-conscious products," says Fred Barendt of Delta.

For an economical remodeling, avoid changing location of fixtures, especially the toilet, PHCIB advises. Also consider installing a bathbay instead of a china tub.

Most manufacturers offer less expensive but quality lines. Moen Inc., for example, sells all its faucet models, regardless of price, with a lifetime limited warranty against leaks and drips, according to Allen Pfenninger of the company. "You are still getting a quality faucet."

Eljer Industries offers a mix-and-match system with their toilets so consumers can upgrade according to cost and taste, says the company's Mike Lyons.

PHCIB estimates that you can replace your existing bath for $2,000 and points out that a wall-hung lavatory is less expensive than a counter-top model with a vanity. Choosing a fiberglass tub instead of a vitreous china model with ceramic tile is another option.

Homeowners should identify child hazards

ATLANTA (AP) -- Your house can be dangerous to your children, so make a survey of potential trouble spots, advises the Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University.

Emergency Center nurse Maryann Johnston, citing statistics that show that over half of all accidental injuries to children five or under occur at home, suggests going through each room to identify potential hazards and making changes to eliminate or minimize them.

These include high-reach lockups in kitchen, bath, and garage to keep cleaning products, alcoholic beverages, knives, matches, scissors, razors, medicines, cosmetics, chemicals, pesticides, nails, screws, and tools out of the hands of young children.

Also on her recommended safety checklist:

- Bathrooms, or any room where water and electricity are near each other, should have a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI), which can prevent serious injury or death. Electrical appliances should be stored on shelves or cabinets away from tub or sink.

- Lower the water heater thermostat to a maximum 120F or install anti-scalding devices on faucets to prevent scalding accidents. Put tub spout covers on faucets to prevent head injuries and put rubber mats or stickers on the tub bottom to prevent falls.

- Heavy furniture should be secured or discarded, so a child can't pull it down. Put corner guards on furnishings with sharp angles, and remove or tighten loose knobs. Though lead has not been allowed in paint since 1978, older furnishings may still have leaded paint, especially in their undercoats; the same may be true of wall paint. If you suspect the paint is old, contact your local health department.

- Phone cords, extension cords and electrical cords can be hazardous; a child can suffer electrical burns from chewing on one of these. Discard all old, frayed or faulty cords and put safety plates over all electrical outlets.

- Window guards should be installed on all windows above ground floor unless they are part of your fire escape plan. "A child can fall out of a window opened just four inches, even if there is a screen," Johnston says. She also recommends safety gates at both ends of stairs and that doors leading to balconies and decks be kept locked.

- Your automatic garage door opener should be the kind that reverses when it touches any object. "If it doesn't, install one that does, and be sure to test the reverse feature frequently," she says.

- For full family safety, install smoke and carbon monoxide detectors.

Location and reputation important in buying, building, remodeling

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -- You'll recall the three rules in buying a house: "Location, location, location."

The criteria for hiring a contractor are remarkably similar, says Jack Beddingfield, a specialist who conducts do-it-yourself clinics for Builders Square, the home improvement-home decor chain.

The three rules are "reputation, reputation, reputation," he says.

"Don't be afraid to ask for references," he says. "Then check them out. Too many people ask for references, then don't follow through. Go to a job the contractor is currently working on; check it out."

"Then talk to people he has worked for in the past several years. Are they happy? Would they hire him again?"

Beddingfield says past clients should be glad to tell you if he did a good job; they'll also be glad to tell you if he did a bad one.

If a contractor hesitates when asked for references, Beddingfield advises leaving him alone. Reputable contractors usually are happy to comply.

The size of the firm has nothing to do with how good it is if it passes the references check.

He suggests making sure certain standards be included in a written contract that details the work to be done. These might be the proportion of sand and cement in a slab-pouring job; the size of reinforced rods used in the slab (one-half inch is standard); use of heavy black plastic on the ground to keep water from seeping through concrete and heaving on the floor; the thickness of the slab (the average is 18 inches).

How do you find a contractor in the first place? Beddingfield suggests checking bulletin boards that many supply houses keep. Ask your friends who've had work done for them. Ask other contractors who will be doing other types of work; they generally know each other by reputation. Check the Yellow Pages; don't worry about making an off-the-wall judgment because you'll be checking references anyway.

The way a contractor agrees to payment also affects his reputation, Beddingfield says.

Standard procedures are for the contractor to put money into the project himself before receiving any payment.

Expect to pay him on an agreed schedule, especially if you have contracted for a complete home to your specifications.

Beddingfield suggests this schedule:

- The contractor pours the slab, then makes a draw on the agreed price.

- The next draw occurs when the structure has been framed up and weathered in.

- "You pay a draw when the plumbing is in place, then when the electric wiring is complete, and you make the final payment when the home is complete," Beddingfield says.

Never pay the complete price in advance even for smaller jobs, and never make an advance payment of any kind, he advises.

Survey looks at who gardens

EMMAUS, Pa. (AP) -- Women outnumber men in U.S. home gardens, according to a profile survey commissioned by Organic Gardening magazine.

Two out of five Americans are gardeners, and of these, 57 percent are women. The survey, "Gardening in America II," estimates that 78,313,000 American adults -- an increase of 30 percent in three years -- now practice gardening.

Other facts about the American gardener, according to the study:

*The average age of gardeners is 47; the women's average age is 45 and the men's average age is 49.

*They have been gardening for an average of 15 years.

*During growing season, America's gardeners spend an average of three hours a week on flower and ornamental gardening and an average of four hours a week on vegetable gardening.

*Forty-two percent of them make $50,000 or more a year.

*About 35 percent of gardeners have college degrees.

*Seventy-six percent of gardeners are married, and 43 percent have children under 18.

*Most gardeners -- 65 percent -- say they garden for fun; 56 percent garden for exercise and fresh air; 56 percent because they feel ornamental plants add beauty to their property; and 54 percent say that gardening is relaxing and reduces stress.

The survey also indicates that American gardeners are environmentally aware.

Fifty-six percent use manure, grass clippings, leaves and compost as fertilizers; 47 percent use mulch, grass clippings or leaves between plantings to reduce weeds; 61 percent recycle lawn waste; and 44 percent conserve water when irrigating their gardens.

One in three chooses organic lawn and gardening products instead of chemical types when they are available. Organic methods are used by 37 percent; chemical methods by 34 percent; and 29 percent use organic and chemical methods equally.

Putting in a new yard

Sometimes the simple addition of a new yard can make a home look fresh and new. Here, a roto-tiller in the middle of a freshly-tilled yard at 148 Oak is evidence that a new yard will soon be seen.

Useful products listed in gardening catalogs

By The Associated Press

Because gardening is work, you need things that are useful. Because it's enjoyable, you want things that are beautiful or fun. A selection of garden products you'll find in stores and catalogs:

*Your outdoor "room" is most pleasurable with furniture, and if you've yearned for redwood — long unavailable — you may be in luck. New World Furniture, a California firm, is recycling vintage redwood into boutique-quality tables, chairs and benches. These pieces, ranging from $600 to $1,200 for a five-piece set, are made from used redwood found in old fences, barns, wine tanks and decks. When a thin layer of wood is planed off the top of the old boards,

Try a berm over fence

By The Associated Press

It's prettier and cheaper than a fence for privacy, and it's a gardener's trompe l'oeil, in that it helps a small lot seem much larger than it is.

It's called a berm, and it's a man-made but natural-looking ridge made of fill, topped with loam and planted.

"My house is less than 20 feet from the street and only about 50 to 100 feet from the houses on either side of it. Yet I seldom see these houses or even passing cars," writes Robert Gillmore, a New Hampshire landscape designer, describing the principle of berming in Fine Gardening magazine's January-February issue.

Gillmore planted his berms with rhododendrons and ferns. Along with a strategic selection of low-maintenance ground covers, trees, shrubs and plants, they make his property of less than an acre look like a much larger estate garden.

His berms are made of sand-clay fill ($5 per cubic yard, delivered), covered with unscreened loam ($8 per yard), which he had graded by a professional contractor in about a half-day. He estimates he spent about $3,000 for each of the berms. He says the cost can be cut by using debris cleared from the property as fill.

"You don't even have to wait for the soil to settle before planting. I planted mine the same day they were installed," he says. "For about the same cost as a fence, I made aesthetically pleasing berms that require virtually no maintenance once planted with evergreen shrubs and ground covers."

Gillmore recommends shaping the berms to look natural, making the slope curving instead of flat, the crest undulating, not level, and the direction gently twisting instead of straight.

Household hints

- Keep your kitchen drain clear by running water at its hottest for two or three minutes every few weeks.

- Apply car polish to bathroom tile and fiberglass shower walls to make them easier to clean and shine.

- When you replace a burned-out light bulb, put a little dab of petroleum jelly on the base of the replacement bulb; then it won't stick when you remove it later.

top-quality, pristine redwood emerges, according to the company. The wood came from very old trees, now protected, and has a dark red color that needs no paint or stain.

*An artisan from the Appalachians can supply you with traditional handmade tools or furniture, if you're willing to be patient. "I am the only wooden pitchfork maker in the southeastern U.S.," writes Kevin Riddle of Eagle Rock, Va. In his Mountainman Woodshop, he turns out pitchforks (2 to five tines, $44 to $57), benches with solid seats or woven splint tops (ranging from $40 to $75) and slat chairs ($170 or $175 each, depending on how many you order). He says not to expect 30-day delivery because of the handwork but promises postcard updates. His catalog has the details: call him at (540) 884-2197 between 8 and 10 a.m. ET, or write Mountainman Woodshop, Route 2, Box 37, Eagle Rock, Va. 24085.

*The Royal Rubbermaid "Winchester" storage building is a good idea for people who prefer to save the garage for the car. The 8- by 10-foot structure has a 7-foot 2-inch maximum height and more than 500 cubic feet of capacity. Strong vinyl walls don't require rafters, allowing a clear span, and the two 36-inch steel doors can be padlocked. The building can be set up in just a few hours on either a wood or concrete foundation. Suggested price is $1,299.

*The Patio Greenhouse, from Gardener's Supply Company, is about the size of bookcase and is a good alternative for gardeners who don't have a lot of space or can't afford to maintain a full-size structure. Standing 58 inches tall, 35 inches wide and 18 inches deep, the assembled greenhouse can be bolted to a wall or joined back-to-back with another greenhouse. Structure is lightweight corrosion-free aluminum, glazed with 6 ml UV-stabilized polycarbonate siding. Two front doors swing open for easy access; a top roof panel is hinged to lift up for ventilation. Inside are two removable shelves. It's $199, or $375 for two, in the catalog. For orders or a catalog, call 1 (800) 955-3370.

*A little piece of living history can be yours by ordering a sapling with famous associations. The Nature Company offers a sycamore from Mill Grove, Pa., home of John James Audubon; a sycamore whose parent tree was grown from seeds that traveled to the moon on Apollo XIV in 1971; and a red maple from the woods surrounding Henry David Thoreau's cabin at Walden Pond. Each costs $58. For orders or a catalog, call 1 (800) 607-7888.

*To make the new tree stand up without getting your mower messed up in a bunch of wires, consider the Tree Saver Tree Stake Kit from Lawson Landscape Products. There's a rubber loop that encircles the young trunk, connected to rubber stretch supports, in turn hooked into stabilizing discs planted in the ground. When mowing around the tree, the gardener can temporary lift the hooks. Girdling of the tree trunk is eliminated because the rubber loop expands as the tree grows. The junior kit sells for $6.95; a larger one costs $2 more. Call 1 (800) 833-5323 for information.

*With cockle shells and brass bells...Garden Bells from Woodstock Chimes is a garden sculpture with nine bloom-like brass bells sprouting on metal stalks from a stone base. When the wind blows, the bells gently ring together. They also can be played by hand with a slight touch. Price is about $80.

*Mice in your garden? No problem if it's the redoubtable Mickey Mouse, this time in the form of a brass sundial ($55), brass hose faucet ($40), brass hose guide ($30), or free-standing 13-inch cast stone sculpture ($60), all from Mickey & Co.

*Sandstone planters are heavy, expensive, and breakable. But you can have classic lookalikes that are none of these. Thermo-Lite planters from Jokari International are made of insulating material which protects live root systems from heat and cold, is watertight, and has built-in UV protection. The planters, which easily can be moved indoors or out with the seasons, come in a variety of styles ranging from 16 to 24 inches and costing between $24 to $69.99.

Flooring choices based on variety of wants, needs

By The Associated Press

Deciding on flooring for your remodeling or building project will depend on the use the room will have, your budget, and your tastes.

Both hardwoods and resilient vinyls have their advantages, according to industry groups.

If you're thinking about traditional hardwood floors, here are some things to consider, according to the Hardwood Manufacturers Association:

- Hardwoods have natural warmth and beauty, blending with any decor, and will make your house more attractive at re-sale time.

- They can be used in any room of the house, including the kitchen and bath. The association says that a quarter of all new installations are being made in kitchens.

- A wood floor promotes a healthy environment, since dust, mites, pollen and other allergens can't get trapped on its surface.

- Hardwood requires little care; for those with surface finishes (polyurethane, moisture-cure urethane and water-based urethane) the HMA recommends a weekly routine using a nearly dry mop dipped in a solution of 1/4 cup of white vinegar and 4 cups of warm water. For those with penetrating seals and wax coatings, routine care includes vacuuming and when needed, a new coat of wax and buffing. In either case, just be sure to wipe up spills as soon as possible and use exterior and interior mats to catch grit before it can be tracked in.

- Oak and maple are the most popular choices for wood flooring, but ash, beech, cherry, hickory and walnut also are in demand, both for entire floors or as decorative accents and borders.

- Though the association advises professional installation, you can install it yourself. Unfinished flooring can be found at lumber yards, and finished flooring is available at a flooring or home center.

- Cost can vary according to your region of the country, but the association estimates that you should expect to pay from $6 to $7 per square foot for strip flooring (2 1/2 inches wide) and from $11 to $12 for prefinished commercial flooring used in high-traffic areas. Expect to pay a little more for planks (3 inches or wider) or parquet squares (ranging from 9 to 19 inches).

- Wood floors can be installed over concrete slabs as well as wood joint constructions. Block and parquet are widely used over slabs to provide resilience and insulation, says the association.

- Builders, architects and designers know how to install nearly all hardwood species over radiant heat. Parquet or strip floor works best; plank flooring wider than 3 inches is not recommended.

- Wood flooring can be sanded and restained many times over its lifetime to improve or change its look. Many homeowners are bleaching, pickling, painting and even stenciling floors for custom touches that don't compromise the wood or obscure the grain.

- Most professional installers will guarantee a floor installation for five years.

Resilient floor covering has its attractions, too, according to the Resilient Floor Covering Institute:

- Vinyl flooring in recent years has become stylish as well as durable, with special effects and designs easy to achieve. Design possibilities include faux marble, wood, ceramic, stone, mosaics, all-over pebbly textures, and geometrics. Special feature strips and shapes can be purchased to create accent borders and insets.

- Sheet vinyl, usually available in 6- or 12-foot widths, can be installed quickly with a virtually seamless look.

- Vinyl tiles, usually in 9- or 12-inch squares, offer unlimited customizing and do-it-yourself possibilities. You can buy it, take it home and install it yourself the same day.

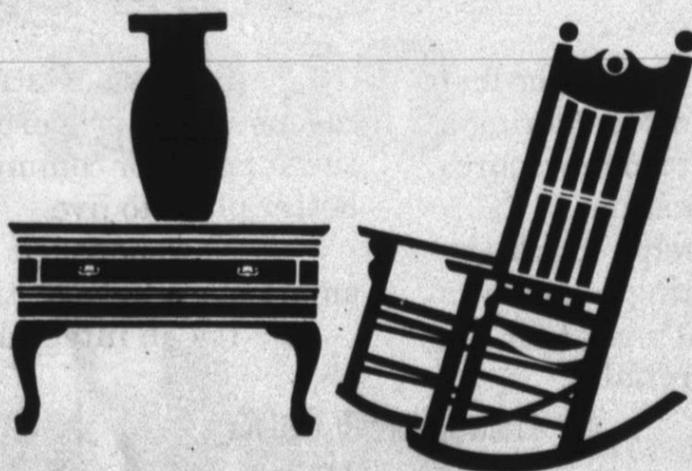

- Vinyl is available in a wide price range. Tiles are sold by the square foot, sheets by the square yard, so keep that in mind when calculating the cost for your space.

18th-Century house reproduced by family

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition

Touring 18th century house museums is appealing, but for Lois and Richard Sandberg, a simple visit was not enough. They have recreated "Homewood," an 18th century Baltimore-area house, on a site in New Canaan, Conn.

The Sandbergs got their first glimpse of Homewood in the pages of Colonial Homes magazine. The pink brick mansion was built in 1801 on the outskirts of Baltimore by Charles Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. It is located on what is now the campus of Johns Hopkins University and is open to the public as a museum.

Going through the house convinced the couple that Homewood, or a reasonable facsimile of it, was their dream house. They later were able to acquire plans for Homewood to help them to replicate it as closely as possible.

While not an exact duplicate—the Sandberg kitchen and bathrooms and the two-story family room are totally 20th century—the four-bedroom house is built of the same materials as Homewood. It has a similar facade and oval dining room and shares many decorative details with the historic house.

"I have always loved classic brick homes," says Lois Sandberg, vice president of a New York advertising firm. "The classic Federal style is clean and simple and understated."

She and her husband, founder and chairman of Dianon Systems, Inc., of Stratford, Conn., appreciate the republican spirit of the Federal style which celebrated the spirit of ancient Greece and Rome. Some of the best American buildings were erected during the relatively short period dating from about 1790 to 1830.

"The frustrating part was that many builders today are not familiar with the period," says Lois.

A true Federal brick house with extended one-story wings on each side of a two-story central section is typically found in the Tidewater areas of Maryland and Virginia. Examples of this type of house are rare in the Sandbergs' locality, where cold weather made extended wings and tall windows impractical during the Federal period. Modern central heating has eliminated that drawback in their version.

Eventually, the Sandbergs were able to find help in realizing their dream. Their builder, Gene Simms of Greenwich, Conn., specializes in large traditional houses. He has a stable of artisans skilled in traditional American building methods.

Simms had the Sandbergs look over other houses that he had built. He replicated details that they liked, such as having the doors to the principal rooms taller and wider than the doors to other rooms.

"Everything in the house was custom made," says Simms. Labor-intensive elements such as the oval dining room, the floating staircase, the four curving radius dormer windows, four symmetrical chimneys, circular interior columns, marble and carved wood fireplaces and carved wood moldings everywhere added substantially to the cost of the house, which Simms put at about $2 million.

Remaining true to historical accuracy took extra time as well as money. Simms estimates that the 6,000-square-foot house required almost 15 months to build, compared to nine months for a typical luxury house of this size. Yet, the experience must have been a pleasant one because the Sandbergs recall that the project took only a year.

Before they broke ground, the couple had plans drawn up by architect Vince Colangelo of Stamford, Conn., and reviewed by an architectural historian at the University of Virginia. They found their expert by telephoning the university's architecture department.

"He reviewed our plans and offered many helpful suggestions," says Lois Sandberg. "No, the roof should not be slate, but cedar shingles. The shutters and door should be painted dark green made from black paint mixed with yellow to prevent fading, and windows at either side of the front door should stop about waist level rather than going all the way down to the ground."

Home's bicentennial marked with party

For AP Special Edition

In 1795, an enterprising farmer named James Conklin built a house for his family in the tiny rural community of Salem, (now known as South Salem) N.Y. He never would have guessed that 200 years later, about 100 friends and neighbors of the current owner would salute his feat.

An outdoor gathering - a cross between an old-fashioned country social and a high-tech happening - commemorated the Oct. 22 bicentennial of the house. There were tables full of home-baked goodies and games like bocce, badminton and egg throwing. The centerpiece of the event was a 20-minute "son et lumiere" (French for sound and light) show at dusk, celebrating the longevity of the old farmhouse.

The technique of son et lumiere marries recorded sound and sequential illumination of various parts of a structure. Typically, it is used to bring famous historic buildings to life.

Horn, who is 83, has lived in the house since 1957, when he moved there from Manhattan with his late wife and two sons. He orchestrated the event, writing the script and gathering a group of about 30 volunteers who donated their efforts for the sheer fun of the undertaking. They included actors, recording engineers, light switchers, food preparers, games leaders and a clean-up crew.

Bringing the elaborate event into being was second nature to Horn, an artist and activist who has spent a lifetime using art to advance social and community causes. He began his career in the 1930s as a muralist for the Works Progress Administration (WPA).

Over the years, Horn has pieced together the history of the house, searching out information in county and town records and in local histories. As a result of his efforts, the house was declared a local landmark in 1984 and a Westchester County landmark in 1988.

The original structure - a wing was added later - follows an indigenous New York State farmhouse plan of the 18th century. In fact, a similar house can be seen in a historic restoration at Cooperstown, N.Y. The construction is massive. Tradition holds that 90 cart-loads of stone went into the chimney, which has multiple flues and serves five fireplaces.

The house has been modernized at various times in its history. In earlier periods, there were more small rooms, but currently there are about 10 good-sized rooms on two main floors, an attic and basement.

Living in a landmark has not been much of a problem for Horn, the 16th owner of the structure. For one thing, the major renovations already had been done before he and his wife purchased it. They upgraded the electricity and redid the roof but kept the house much as it was when they bought it.

The most interesting challenge was figuring out how to repaint the L-shaped living room. The whole room from baseboards to ceiling was barn red.

"It was too flamboyant for my wife, who preferred something quieter," Horn says.

Before the room could be painted white, the red had to be covered with aluminum-color paint.

Owned mainly by local farmers and tradesmen in the 19th and early 20th centuries, the house's most colorful history began in 1928 when it was purchased by Juliana Force, first director of the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York.

Horn says that it was Force who was responsible for the bright red living room. She substantially remodeled the house during her tenancy from 1928 to 1944, exposing the chestnut beams in the living room, library and dining room. He believes that she also may have been the one to modernize the kitchen. But which of the owners added bathrooms and oil heat remains a mystery.

Force collected Shaker furniture and artifacts and renamed the place Shaker Hollow Farm. She used it mainly for weekends and summers. For a period in the 1930s, she rented it out to Herman Smith and Richard Hall, who ran it as a restaurant and an inn. Also during her tenure, the house was briefly used for Nazi Bund meetings. It has been said that Force was so disturbed by this occurrence that she sold the house in 1944.
