Rescuers abandon hope of discovering survivors

NTSB official says no evidence of crime in crash

By TED ANTHONY
AP National Writer
EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP) - From the sea off Long Island came bodies, twisted metal and excruciating bits of lives interrupted - a poetry book, a wedding invitation, photographs floating in the brine. From around the world came sympathy and suspicion, and demands for quick answers to what caused a TWA jumbo jet to explode just after takeoff. As 400 rescuers reluctantly abandoned already long odds of finding survivors in a jumbled mass of metal, fuel and seawater at the edge of the land, talk kept returning Thursday to one word: terrorism. "There's very ample reason why the FBI is treating this as a potential crime scene," Gov. George Pataki told a shoreline news conference near the crash site. He didn't elaborate. National Transportation Safety Board vice chairman Robert Francis cautioned this morning on the NBC "Today" show that "there's no evidence of a crime yet." Paris-bound TWA Flight 800 exploded in a fireball Wednesday night about 14,000 feet above the Atlantic. All 212 passengers and 18 crew members aboard the Boeing 747 were killed in the nation's second deadliest air disaster. The Coast Guard continued to search for bodies early today; more than 100 had already been recovered. Suffolk County Medical Examiner Charles Wetli said some victims showed evidence of drowning, which means they could have been alive when they hit the water. The same victims were probably unconscious, or near death from the blast, he said. Most victims died instantly from the "massive blunt force" of the explosion, Wetli said. "Death literally occurred in a heartbeat." Also today, the search for evidence beneath the water's surface was to begin. Divers with sonar equipment will try to locate the plane's flight data recorders, which are equipped to emit a sonic beacon after exposure to salt water, Pataki said. A joint terrorism task force of the FBI and New York Police Department was investigating, but officials insisted that implied nothing about the crash's cause. "We're not ready to say what this is at this point," said James Kallstrom, assistant FBI director in New York. The task force will work alongside the NTSB, which routinely investigates airplane accidents. There was some speculation that a surface-to-air missile, perhaps fired from a boat off the coast of Long Island, could have brought the plane down. "There's no American official with half a brain who ought to be speculating on anything of that nature," said White House spokesman Mike McCurry. "There's no concrete information that would lead any of us in the United States government to draw that kind of conclusion." Asked about reports that radar detected a blip merging with the jet shortly before the explosion, something that could indicate a missile hit, a federal law enforcement official said that radar records were being reviewed. "But there still could be other explanations for the blip; it's not necessarily an object," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. CBS-TV said a preliminary Pentagon analysis showed the blip was a false signal.

Can't wait

Harvey Garza and Belinda Villegas were still attempting to put together this new swing set on Thursday in the 400 block of North Lee, but that didn't stop Sylvester Villegas, 4, left, from jumping on for a ride anyway. Watching the work at right was Marcus Villegas, 22 months. Also playing amid the work were Brandi Tjerina, 9, and Heather Garza, 7, not pictured.

Senate hopefuls lining up to run for job Montford hasn't given up

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - It appears that Texas Tech University can have state Sen. John Montford as its chancellor for more than $200,000. The price tag is also what it could cost anyone who wants to fill the Senate seat if it comes up for grabs. If Montford quits, there will be plenty of takers. "I've got my documents filed in District 28 so I can run," longtime state Rep. Delwin Jones, R-Lubbock, said Thursday. "I've been preparing for it for several years." Jones estimated that candidates would need $150,000 and $250,000 in a short election season to contend.

Montford, the powerful Democratic chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has said he would either move "up or out" by 1998. "Up" would mean either governor or lieutenant governor. There's no indication that Republican Gov. George W. Bush or Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, both political allies, intend to leave office voluntarily in two years. One road "out" would be the newly created Texas Tech chancellorship, designed as a fund-raising and political position to oversee the university and Health Science Center, which will be run by separate presidents. The Texas Tech Board of Regents changed the Tech hierarchy in April after the resignation of President Robert Lawless, who moved to the University of Tulsa. Montford interviewed for the post this week but says he hasn't been offered the job. The school has indicated it wants to hire someone before classes resume Aug. 26. Lawless made $201,034 at Tech. University of Texas Chancellor William H. Cunningham makes $251,000 annually, followed by Texas A&M counterpart Barry B. Thompson at $223,032.

Montford first was elected in 1982, when the GOP was a political organization foreign to much of West Texas. But the party has become a force in the region since then. District 28 voters supported the GOP in three of the six U.S. Congressional races in 1994 and favored Republicans in six of 13 statehouse races. A state composite index of that election shows 55.2 percent of the district's votes went Republican. However, Lubbock Mayor David Langston, former Odessa state Rep. Gary Watkins and current Lubbock City Councilman Victor Hernandez all say they want to keep the seat in Democratic hands. "I was born in El Paso, so I've got a lot of contacts there," said Hernandez. "I think I'm in as good a position as anyone." Joining Jones among interested Republicans are state Rep. Robert Duncan, GOP National Committee member Tim Lambert and State Board of Education member Monte Hasie, all of Lubbock. Jones believes his name recognition in the Odessa and Lubbock areas means the $150,000 he wants to raise could do the same work as $250,000 for a lesser-known candidate. He also doubts a Democrat can win. "Folks in this part of the country feel like that party left them behind," said Jones, who served in the Texas House for eight years from 1964-72 as a Democrat. Watkins, a longtime Democrat, said it's going to take money to gain exposure in the huge district that stretches from Lubbock to El Paso, including Big Spring and parts of Odessa and San Angelo. "I don't know if it's a negative or a plus being in Lubbock or outside," said Watkins, the only non-Lubbock resident among the early field. Montford's departure also would open the chairmanship of the budget-writing Senate Finance Committee. Several Capitol sources said a likely replacement could be Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, who currently heads the Senate Education Committee. Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, also was mentioned by one Democratic Party source. But a spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who would name the new chairman, said such speculation is premature. "The lieutenant governor says Sen. Montford is the committee chairman," said spokesman Tony Proffitt.

Hereford ties noted at opening ceremonies for Olympic Games

The Olympics will officially begin tonight and local residents W.A. and Thelma Lamm will be watching the televised ceremonies closely. Their grandson, Christopher Lamm, will participate in the opening and closing ceremonies of the Olympics in Atlanta, Ga. Lamm is the son of Alton and Ann Lamm of Powder Springs, Ga. Alton Lamm is a graduate of Hereford High School. Christopher Lamm is a graduate of McEachern High School, where he was a cheerleader for two years. Whether or not his gymnastics ability helped him to get accepted to the cast, his grandmother did not know. She said he received a letter of acceptance to participate in the opening ceremonies five months ago. According to Mrs. Lamm, he took an oath of secrecy of the opening ceremonies. "He wouldn't even tell his grandmother," she said. Mrs. Lamm said she probably will not be able to recognize him in a cast of approximately 3,000. Lamm has practiced four to five hours twice a week since May. Since Monday, he has practiced 13 hours a day. Another Hereford tie to the Olympics is swimmer Josh Davis of Austin. Davis is married to the former Shantel Cornelius, a Hereford High School graduate. She is daughter of Darlene and Donnie Cornelius.

SUNDAY IN THE BRAND

Staying active and getting a message to stay off drugs and alcohol go hand-in-hand for the Hereford Police Department and Hereford Independent School District's DARE Program. This summer, that message has come through with the annual DARE Camp, held this past week. On Sunday, Sherri Martin visits with DARE Officer Carol Keyes and Assistant Superintendent Nena Veazey for a look at DARE Camp and local efforts to keep children off drugs and alcohol. Also Sunday, Lifestyles Editor Becky Camp introduces readers to Kerry Glidewell, who has put her faith to use in creating a very special calendar for a local Christian school. The Nazarene Christian Academy fund-raising calendar is just the start of what she hopes will grow into a way to help many other Christian entities.

Montford interviewed for the post this week but says he hasn't been offered the job. The school has indicated it wants to hire someone before classes resume Aug. 26. Lawless made $201,034 at Tech. University of Texas Chancellor William H. Cunningham makes $251,000 annually, followed by Texas A&M counterpart Barry B. Thompson at $223,032.

House votes to approve welfare reform; Senate to act next week

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress, with the mixed blessings of the White House, is moving to end six decades of guaranteed federal aid for the poor and require welfare recipients to go to work. The House, one step ahead of the Senate, voted 256-170 Thursday to approve a welfare overhaul plan that would combine current federal welfare programs into a single block grant to states, put time limits on benefits and deny assistance to legal aliens. Republicans said it would save nearly $60 billion over six years. The Senate started work on its own version Thursday and planned to complete its bill early next week. Republican leaders hoped to have a final bill on the president's desk before Congress leaves for its August recess. "This is the beginning of the end to the lengthy debate about the current welfare system," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman William Roth, R-Del.

President Clinton, who took office promising radical reform of the welfare system, has vetoed two previous GOP bills, saying they were too harsh on the poor or were attached to other unacceptable legislation. This time, Clinton has been more positive about the legislation, but the administration did not rule out another veto, saying it is still unhappy about provisions that bar aid to legal immigrants and could limit food stamp benefits for some. "It still is way short of what we need in order to be satisfied," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said. "In recent weeks he's made an awful lot of noise about his renewed commitment to welfare reform," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas. "We will get him the bill, I believe by the first week in August." GOP presidential hopeful Bob Dole said it was his party that was responsible for moving the legislation. "Thanks to Republican leadership, today America took a giant step toward restoring self-respect and self-reliance to the millions of Americans trapped in our broken welfare system," he said in a statement. A major obstacle to ultimate passage was removed Thursday when the Senate, like the House before it, separated welfare from GOP plans to revamp Medicaid. "We hope that removing this 'poison pill' from welfare reform is a breakthrough that shows that the Republican leadership seriously wants to pass bipartisan welfare reform this year," the administration said in a statement. Under the GOP bills, at least-bodied parents would have to get jobs within two years of enrolling in welfare programs and there would be a five-year lifetime limit for benefits. States could give hardship exemptions in 20 percent of those cases. A person still could receive benefits, probably at a reduced level, if he or she was in a job training program or working only part-time.

Greenspan says rate hike possible

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is signaling his willingness to raise short-term interest rates if necessary, but probably not too soon and not too much, economists conclude. Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee Thursday he's confident the central bank will boost rates "should the weight of incoming evidence persuasively suggest an oncoming intensification of inflation pressures." But, as usual, he carefully avoided explicitly revealing the Fed's next move. And his rundown of the economic evidence in hand didn't suggest a need to immediately tighten rates. His message soothed Wall Street, where stock prices have gyrated wildly all week. The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks, which had tumbled 161 points on Monday, rose 87 points Thursday, improving on a 9-point gain Tuesday and an 18-point advance Wednesday. "He's not making any promises they won't tighten but he's hoping they won't have to," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. On the one hand, Greenspan said the forces keeping a lid on inflation - global competition, workplace insecurity - are "transitory, not permanent." And "there are early indications that... favorable inflation developments, especially with regard to labor markets, may be drawing to a close." On the other hand, he said he expects "economic activity to settle back toward a more sustainable pace in the months ahead." As evidence, he cited an increase in market-set long-term interest rates, an export-dampening increase in the value of the dollar and the exhaustion of pent-up demand from businesses and consumers for big-ticket durable goods. However, he conceded, the expected slowdown "really hasn't happened yet" and, if the Fed is correct, it "has to become evident in the period immediately ahead." For the past two weeks, some financial market traders, spooked by the inflationary implications of a sharp drop in the unemployment rate to 5.3 percent in June, had been looking for a tightening move from the Fed even before its next policy-making meeting on Aug. 20. But Greenspan's testimony dispelled those fears, according to economists, and raised the possibility the Fed may not even raise rates on Aug. 20, depending on how economic statistics look between then and now.

HOUSTON - Houston's most visible and outspoken champion for crime victims' rights could wind up a victim of the ultimate crime herself should the crash of TWA Flight 800 be determined a terrorist act of mass murder. Pam Lychner, a founding member of the prominent Houston-based victims' right group Justice For All, and her two small daughters were among the victims of the jumbo jet crash into the Atlantic off Long Island, N.Y. "To me this is the ultimate tragic irony," Andy Kahan, crime victims director for Houston Mayor Bob Lanier, said Thursday. Mrs. Lychner, 37, was taking her daughters Shannon, 10, and Katie, 8, for a summer vacation to Paris.

GRAPEVINE - As the FBI investigates the crash of a TWA jumbo jet, public fears rose that the demise of Flight 800 might have been an act of terrorism. Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport spokeswoman Angel Biasatti said airport personnel are complying with the latest Federal Aviation Administration security directives. "We won't say what those security measures are; if we did, they would cease to be security measures," she said. On Thursday, travelers and well-wishers at D-FW moved routinely through security checkpoints. Some said they would tolerate less freedom of movement in exchange for greater assurances of safety.

AUSTIN - Financial aid programs worth $3.7 million to college students in the coming school year can no longer include race in determining who gets money, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board says. The board is following the advice of Attorney General Dan Morales after the U.S. Supreme Court let stand a lower court's anti-affirmative-action ruling. The higher education board tentatively approved a plan Thursday saying aid awarded in the wake of the high court's action must be distributed without considering race. Students promised aid before the July 1 order still will get it, officials said.

DALLAS - Some members of the Reform Party are worried they are being excluded from participating in the now-competitive presidential primary as the conventions approach and their surveys do not.

TYLER - Officials of four bakeries say they're ready to put an expensive class action lawsuit behind them. While continuing to deny they conspired to fix bread prices over the past two decades, the companies have agreed to pay $31.75 million to settle the suit, brought by grocery stores and school districts in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

AUSTIN - Four million dollars isn't chicken feed. So says the Texas Lottery Commission, which is trying to pump up interest for its minimum Lotto Texas drawings after receiving countless reports that people wait to play until jackpots reach $10 million or more.

WASHINGTON - A bipartisan coalition of House and Senate members is taking aim at the steamy fare and sexual innuendo now prevalent on some television networks early in the evening. Networks should voluntarily broadcast wholesome shows during a "family hour" at the start of each evening's prime-time programming, the lawmakers said at a news conference Thursday.

LUBBOCK - It appears that Texas Tech University can have state Sen. John Montford as its chancellor for more than $200,000. The price tag is also what it could cost anyone who wants to fill the Senate seat if it comes up for grabs. If Montford quits, there will be plenty of takers.

AUSTIN - The 1997 Legislature likely will act to relieve Texans' property tax burden, the head of Gov. George W. Bush's property tax study committee predicts. "If this is as much of a problem as I think it is, then I think the Legislature will address it," said Elton Bomer, the state insurance commissioner and man heading up the tax study panel.

Videotaped testimony by Clinton played for Whitewater trial jurors

By JAMES JEFFERSON
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - At the first Whitewater trial, President Clinton flashed some irritation when prosecutors repeatedly pressed certain questions. In his second videotaped appearance, he joked about being a lefty and chuckled about a two-decade-old photo.

In the first trial two months ago, prosecutors strayed into seemingly irrelevant areas of Clinton's relationship with his Whitewater partners during 2-1/2 hours of questioning. The second time, questioning took just 90 minutes.

In the current trial, prosecutors seemed to save their hardest line of questioning for the witness who preceded Clinton to the stand, White House aide and presidential confidante Bruce Lindsey.

The president couldn't save his Whitewater business partners from felony convictions in the first trial. But longtime political patrons and bankers Herby Branscum and Robert M. Hill hope for a different result this time.

The two owners of Perry County Bank in Perryville, Ark., are accused of breaking banking laws during the early 1990s to curry favor with then-Gov. Clinton.

Clinton remembered the two Arkansas bankers as longtime backers who raised money and contributed liberally to his political campaigns.

But he denied appointing them to state positions in return for their financial support.

"What is not permissible is to promise any official act or to attempt to get any official act in return for a contribution, and that didn't happen in this case," a relaxed and confident Clinton said.

But the president said he could not recall a December 1990 meeting, key to the prosecution's case, in which he allegedly accepted $15,000 in checks from Hill and then raised the possibility of a plum state appointment for Branscum.

An earlier witness testified that Clinton thumbed through the checks. "It wouldn't surprise me that I would do that," the president said.

The bankers are charged with concealing from the IRS more than $50,000 in cash withdrawals the Clinton campaign made on the eve of the 1990 primary and general elections for get-out-the-vote activities.

They also are accused of misapplying bank funds by using the bank's money to reimburse themselves and others for political contributions, including checks to Clinton's 1990 campaign and his 1991 presidential exploratory committee.

Jurors watched raptly in the beginning but later appeared bored as Clinton's image was projected on a 42-inch monitor. The testimony was taped July 7 at the White House, and then edited.

It played to a less-than-full house and at least one spectator nodded off to sleep, in contrast to the previous Whitewater trial in which the gallery was packed and Clinton's exchanges with a prosecutor drew jurors and spectators alike to the edge of their seats.

Videotaped from the waist up, Clinton often gestured with his hands and removed reading glasses from his suit pocket to read documents. He chuckled when he was handed a 22-year-old picture of himself taken after a losing race for Congress. Asked to identify a backwards check mark he made on one exhibit, Clinton laughed and said, "I'm left-handed, so it's not backwards to me."

The president said he was aware that he owed more than $100,000 to the Perry County Bank after the 1990 election, loans that weren't repaid until October 1992 after he named Branscum to the Arkansas Highway Commission and reappointed Hill to the Arkansas Banking Board.

But Clinton repeatedly insisted the appointments were made because the two supporters were qualified.

Chief prosecutor W. Hickman Ewing Jr., who works for Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, treated Clinton gently. This was in contrast to Clinton's first Whitewater testimony, when Clinton occasionally flashed irritation as a prosecutor repeatedly questioned him about contacts with his Whitewater partners.

Clinton said Branscum was appointed because "I knew him and I trusted him and he had been a good supporter of mine."

Hill was reappointed to the banking board because "he was interested in serving" and was "plainly qualified," Clinton testified.

"Now, were you aware at the time you made the reappointment that he had made campaign contributions to you in 1990?" Ewing asked.

"I'm sure I was," Clinton responded.

"When you reappointed him... was it because of any contributions he had made or had obtained?" the president was asked.

"No, I mean, I was grateful for his support. I didn't think that people should be disqualified from appointment to important boards or commissions just because they'd supported the governor."

Clinton is the fourth chief executive in two decades to testify by videotape in a criminal trial. Presidents Ford, Carter and Reagan were the others.

Clinton also testified in May in the trial of his two former Whitewater business partners and Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, which ended with fraud convictions for the three defendants.

Olympic security tense following plane crash

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
AP National Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - The 30,000-strong security force deployed across this Olympic city raised its already high state of alert following the explosion of TWA Flight 800.

Officials insisted, however, that the tragedy must not paralyze the games as they open tonight.

"The Olympic movement through 100 years of existence has been accustomed to living in the world as it is. These days, the world is far from a happy world," said Francois Carrard, director general of the International Olympic Committee.

But on Atlanta's steamy streets, people gathering for the games couldn't help reflecting on the prospect of terrorism. Security precautions were a constant reminder.

Jerrie Reeder, a Southern Baptist volunteer from Brookville, Fla., passed out religious pamphlets as three security guards stood near and six mounted police passed by. "It seems like there are police everywhere I look," Reeder said.

Sylvia Achas, who traveled from the Philippines to see the games, wasn't comforted. "We are afraid," she said. "This is my first Olympics, and my last."

Sam Curtis of Phoenix acknowledged some concerns. "But I won't let terrorism keep me indoors," he said. "If you do, then they've succeeded."

Security has been a major concern for the IOC since the 1972 Munich games, when Palestinian terrorists killed 11 Israeli athletes and coaches. But officials stressed that the cause of the plane explosion Wednesday night is undetermined and no connection with the Olympics has been made.

Assistant FBI Director James Kallstrom said late Thursday that security in Atlanta is probably unprecedented in the Olympics.

"We are very confident as to what the situation is down there and we are going to continue to follow everything," he said.

About 30,000 police officers, military personnel and private security guards are in place to protect athletes and visitors. Security costs reportedly will exceed $300 million.

Officials will not release detailed breakdowns of security measures. But common sights include soldiers using mirrors to check under cars parked downtown and patrols on almost every street corner.

The renewed concerns come as Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport braces for the biggest Olympic crowds so far, with visitors arriving for the opening ceremony tonight and the start of competition Saturday.

Security at Hartsfield, the world's busiest airport, has been tight for months. On Thursday, police foot patrols were increased, and airport officials were in touch with the Federal Aviation Administration "every two or three minutes" to discuss whether even tighter security is needed, airport spokesman Miguel Southwell said.

At Olympic venues, hand-held scanners check credentials and airport-style metal detectors screen those coming in. At the Olympic Village, which will house about 16,000 athletes, guards are augmented by an array of high-tech security devices.

A 10-foot, stress-sensitive fence rings the village on the Georgia Tech campus. Anything touching it draws

Ann Landers Essay should remind readers of Grandma

Dear Ann Landers: My nephew wrote this essay about his grandmother. I came across it when going through some old papers. I hope you think it's worth sharing with your readers. -- Longwood, Fla.

Dear Longwood: I do indeed. It is sure to remind my readers of their grandmothers. It reminded me of mine, and now, I regret not having sat with her and written down the stories she told about the days in "the old country" -- which was Russia. Here's your nephew's piece and my thanks for sending it on. I Remember Grandmama

I remember Grandmama ... standing on the porch when we arrived late at night on the train to spend the summer.

Taking us to church on Sunday. And then letting us eat all the peach ice cream we wanted.

Catching the bus down Madison Avenue the first day in town, to buy something at the Five and Dime -- usually a ring with a moonstone for 35 cents.

I remember ... those great fried apple pies -- and the blackberry brandy that she would sip while I wasn't looking.

Sitting on the curb with me when Aunt Frances threw me out for not eating my eggplant.

Cutting the yard herself because nobody could do it to suit her.

Giving us oatmeal for breakfast, long before it was the nationally healthy thing to do.

I remember the red knit scarf that she made me for Christmas. I still have it.

That great picture of her sitting in her chair and reading the Bible.

My last clear memory of her is when I arrived in Hawaii, safe, out of Vietnam. She came to the phone and just cried.

Mine was a great American classic

Grandmama. -- by C. Ellis Vaughn, who loved visiting her in Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a different "how-we-met" letter:

After running ads in the local paper, I had given up finding a decent man and canceled my ad. It ran for one week after I canceled it, and that's when I met my soul mate. He answered my ad, and we made a date.

I arrived at the restaurant 45 minutes early, knowing I could make an early exit if I felt the need. The gent, however, beat me at my own game. He arrived an hour early to check me out. I saw him across the room, not knowing who he was. When he came to my table and introduced himself, I nearly fell out of my chair. We talked for four hours, discovering similar values and interests. His sweet smile and southern gentility held me captive.

We became best friends, and over the Christmas holidays, he asked me to marry him. He is a retired naval officer, so we had a spectacularly beautiful shipboard wedding. Putting each other first in our lives and allowing one another space to grow are the guidelines in our relationship. We have adhered to the advice in your column and can attest to the fact that it really does work. So, thank you, Ann. Sign me -- Satisfied at Last

Dear Satisfied: I'm glad I helped. Thank you for letting me know.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Programs for year set by board of HRSEA

The Hereford Retired School Employee Association Executive Board met July 17 in the Senior Citizens Center for a program planning session for the 1996-1997 year.

The first meeting of the year, on Aug. 19, will be a fish fry in the home of Margaret and Charlie Bell at 132 N. Texas.

Other programs planned for the year include musical entertainment, arts and crafts, health care options, Christmas dinner and social, health and fitness, activities for retired persons, inspirational program, silent auction, fashion trends for men and women, and a retirement seminar for those still teaching. All retired school employees are invited to attend all meetings and help improve benefits for all Teacher Retirement System participants.

To encourage active membership, Betty Mercer said, "We cannot allow state government's short term interests to destroy our system. We are at as critical a time as we have ever faced before in the Teacher Retirement System."

"The development of a retirement system is never finished. If we do not believe and do not care, nothing can save the TRS. If we all work, nothing can stop it. You and I are the keepers of the system."

Members attending the planning session were Mercer, Bell, Dorothea Prowell, Frances Crume, June Owens, Eleanor Hudspeth, Audrey Powell, Leona Schilling and Marie Stringer.

Heat hopes to stay hot at nationals

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The West Texas Heat got a confidence boost several months before the National AAU 15-under girls' basketball tournament - which the team is going to this week in Nashville.

The team - made up partially of Hereford girls and coached by Hereford men - went into the regional tournament in Amarillo in May needing to win. Usually, the top two teams from a regional tournament advance, but because there weren't many teams in the division, only one team was going to advance.

To make things tougher, they had to face the region's defending champions: the Lady Texans.

The Heat won 64-58. "We couldn't settle for second," Hereford's Julie Rampley said. "We all stepped up. It showed us how good we could actually play."

Rampley is one of four Hereford girls on the team; she's joined by Kendra Wright, Makesha Rives and Tiffany Mercer. The team is coached by Jackie Mercer, who is assisted by Eddie Chavarria and Grady Brown - all three are from Hereford. Realistically, the team ought to play well. They have some of the best young basketball players in the Panhandle: Erin Wilhite of Muleshoe; Melissa Williams of Muleshoe; Laci Brunson of Silverton; Dara Ramsey of Silverton; Cami Rhea of Vega; Kendra Smith of Lubbock; Geanna Day of Lubbock; Erin Hays of Amarillo; Sarah Sims of Amarillo; and Weslyn Maupin of Gruver.

All but Wilhite, Rives and Mercer played varsity basketball at their respective schools last season. (Wright played briefly for the Lady Whitefaces at the beginning of last season.)

As if that talent weren't enough, the Heat picked up Courtney Gilmore, the six-foot all-district player from Randall. That gives the Heat at least three players - Gilmore, Rhea and Rampley - who were among the stars of their varsity teams.

"The team doesn't just have talent, it has experience. Rampley and Gilmore are going to their fourth national AAU tourney, while every one of the other players are going to their third."

One problem: many of the other teams going to Nashville are just as impressive. Fortunately, the Heat is prepared.

"We know what the competition is going to be like," Rives said.

"You've got to act like everyone is Canyon or Randall," Wright said. "You have to play hard no matter who you're playing. And you can't be intimidated by anybody."

The tournament's opening ceremonies are today, and the games start Saturday with pool play. The top two teams in each pool advance to the championship bracket.

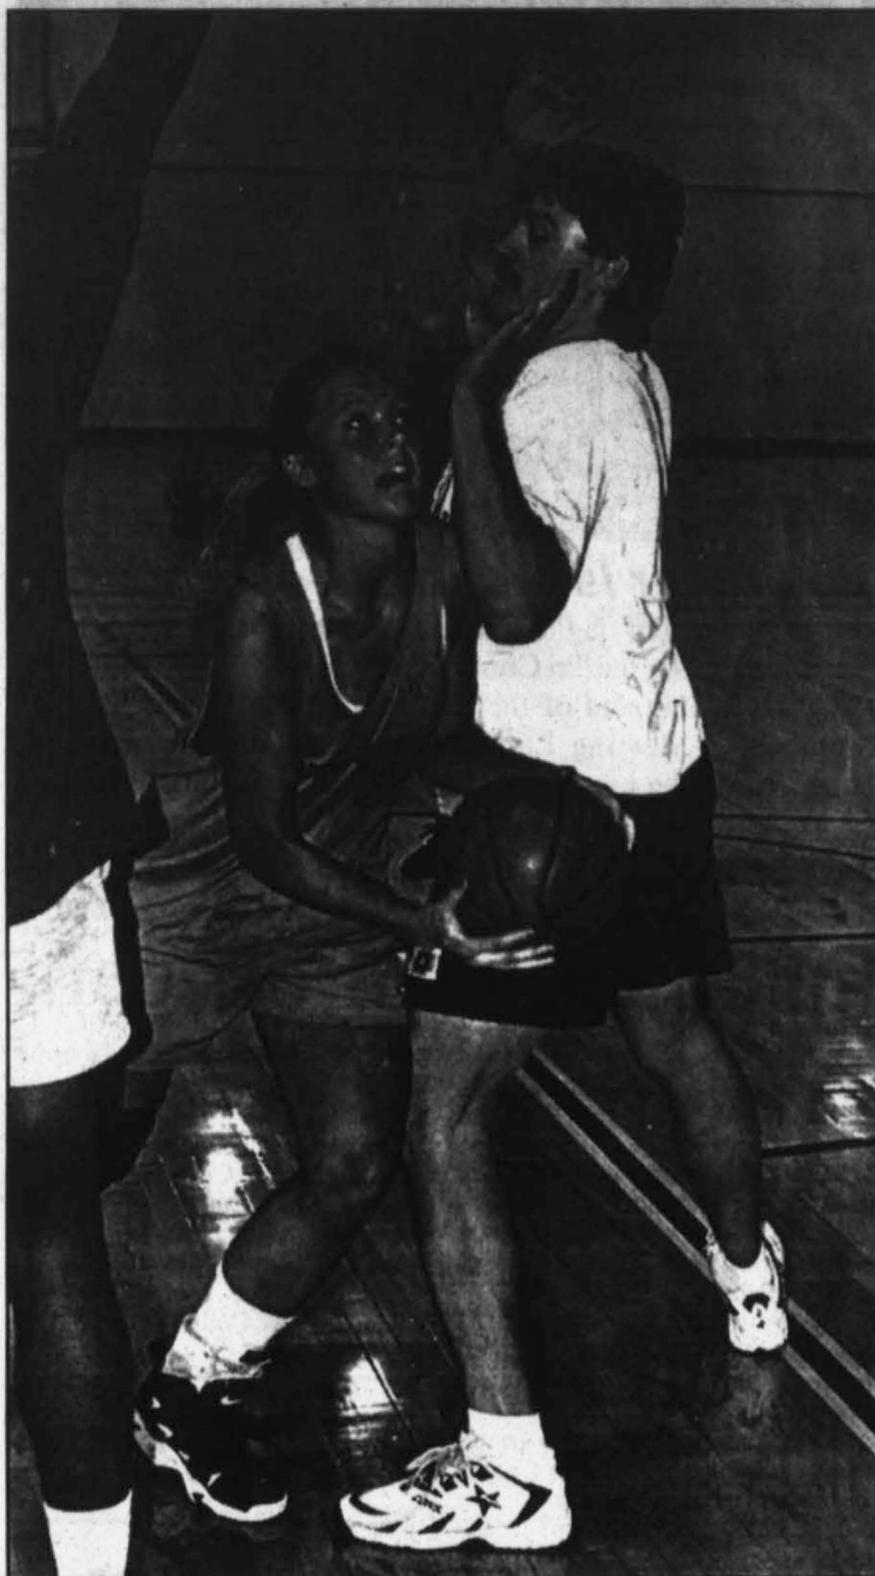

The Heat has five teams in its pool: from Wisconsin, North Carolina, Potomac Valley and Seattle. Their first game is against the Seattle team, which happens to be the No. 3 seed in the tournament after a third-place finish at last year's 14-under tournament.

The Heat players and coaches are confident, though.

"We're stronger (than last year)," Rives said. "We've all worked harder. We've dedicated ourselves more than we did last year."

"I think we'll get in the top 10," coach Mercer said. "The team we beat (the Lady Texans) to make it to nationals, they finished in the top 10, so that's what we're looking at."

"I think we're going to win," Rampley said. "The coaches and players have all been there. They know what to work on. As a team we know how together we have to play in order to win."

Driving strong

The West Texas Heat's Julie Rampley plays with finesse but has the power to go up against the big boys. Here she collides with Heat assistant coach Eddie Chavarria, but still gets off her shot. Rampley will lead the Heat into the National AAU 15-under girls' basketball tournament, which will be played this week in Nashville.

Nicklaus closes on leader

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) - Jack Nicklaus roared into contention in the British Open today with a 5-under-par 66 that moved him within one shot of the early second-round lead.

His two-round total was 135, 7-under for the tournament, one stroke behind 29-year-old Irishman Paul McGinley, who shot 65 for a record two-round total of 8-under-par 134 at the unusually benevolent Royal Lytham and St. Annes course.

"To be able to contend with Jack Nicklaus in a British Open is really special," said McGinley.

The 56-year-old Nicklaus, meanwhile, was taking dead aim at a fourth British Open championship, appearing in the 139th consecutive major of his storied career.

"I've been thinking about a fourth open for a lot of years," said Nicklaus, who last won this tournament in 1978.

Nicklaus, who has won only seniors events since the 1986 Masters, turned in a 3-under 32, then birdied Nos. 10 and 14, rolling in a 12-foot putt after hitting a magnificent approach shot out of the deep left rough.

Davis eyes gold

Olympic swimmer has local ties

A relative of Hereford residents has a good chance to collect medals this week at the Olympics in Atlanta.

And we're not talking about buying souvenirs.

Josh Davis, husband of former Hereford resident Shantel Cornelius and son-in-law of Donnie and Darlene Cornelius, will swim in three Olympic events in the next four days.

The first is the 200-meter freestyle, which will be held Saturday. He's also a member of the 800 freestyle relay team, which will compete Sunday, and the 400 freestyle relay team, with which he'll compete Tuesday.

There's a chance any or all of these events will be televised by NBC - locally Channel 4 - and they are listed in the network's programming notes. The preliminary races will be held in the afternoon, with finals during the prime time. Exact times of these events are not known. NBC's schedule for these three days are:

--Saturday: 2-5 p.m. and 6:30-11 p.m.

--Sunday: 11 a.m.-5 p.m. and 6-11 p.m.

--Tuesday: 9 a.m.-noon and 6:30-11 p.m.

The Houston Chronicle predicts the US 400 team will win gold and the 800 team will take silver. However, the Chronicle predicts Davis and teammate John Piersma will be edged out in a close 200 freestyle race by Danyon Loader of New Zealand (gold), Michael Kim of Australia (silver) and Anders Holmertz of Sweden (bronze).

Josh and Shantel live in Austin, where Shantel is a member of the University of Texas volleyball team - she has one more season of eligibility. Josh was an All-America swimmer for the Longhorns.

Olympics open tonight

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
AP Special Correspondent
ATLANTA (AP) - Something old and endangered. Something new and encroaching. Lots of red, white and blue.

When the world tunes in tonight, the stadium spectacular that opens history's biggest Olympics will offer a grand tradition on its way out, some upstart commercialism on its way in and a sassy, brassy celebration of America and of global brotherhood.

The inaugural ceremony, starting at 7:30 p.m. CDT, is scheduled to last almost four hours. And that's the problem with tradition.

Almost half that time will be taken up with the "Parade of Nations," the customary procession of athletes and officials into Atlanta's Olympic Stadium - this time more than 10,000 from 197 nations, from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe.

The numbers have become so unwieldy, the parade so time-consuming, the stadium infields so jampacked with delegations that planners are looking for a way out.

"This may be the last time that athletes march into the stadium," said Don Mischer, the Hollywood producer who is staging tonight's ceremony.

Organizers of the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, Australia, are considering simply opening the ceremony with the athletes seated in the stands, Mischer told reporters Thursday.

And Friday may be the first time the world gets to see a gleaming display of a sponsor's products in the midst of musical tributes to Olympic ideals.

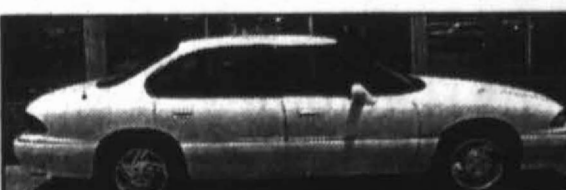

A fleet of 30 chrome-plated Silverado pickup trucks - each with a bright blue "CHEVROLET" painted on the tailgate - will roar onto the field as platforms for spotlights illuminating hundreds of cheerleaders and dancers who perform a show-stopping prime-time number.

O'Neal gets $120 million contract from LA Lakers

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer
ATLANTA (AP) - Shaquille O'Neal said the Los Angeles Lakers made the best offer. The Orlando Magic disagreed.

The squabbling began quickly after O'Neal signed the richest long-term contract in team sports history Thursday when he agreed to a $120 million, seven-year deal.

Orlando general manager John Gabriel, whose team was devastated by the loss of its franchise player, said O'Neal had opted for the lesser of the two offers.

"It's just a disappointing end. We're just disappointed in general. He was part of our family. We lost a family member today. But we will regroup."

"Our job, from a management standpoint, was to put a fair-market deal on the table. I think we did that, clearly," Gabriel said, although he refused to disclose the exact dollar amount of the Magic's final offer.

Both teams made a final push for O'Neal on Wednesday night. The deal was signed at 2:15 a.m. EDT Thursday at a downtown hotel.

"My final decision was to play for the Los Angeles Lakers. I felt that a change was necessary," O'Neal said. "Change is for the good and change is for the better. This was a dream."

"I'm a military child, so I'm used to relocating every three or four years," said O'Neal, whose father was a sergeant in the U.S. Army.

"It was a very, very tough decision, just like choosing where to go to college and whether to get married."

It was the most significant player move in a whirlwind week of unrestricted free agency that has sent NBA salaries skyrocketing to unprecedented levels.

Most of the other top-of-the-line players in this summer's bumper crop of free agents, including Michael Jordan, Gary Payton and Alonzo Mourning, elected to re-sign with their teams. But O'Neal opted for a coast-to-coast move and a contract that will pay him an average of $17.4 million per season.

Jordan's contract has the highest one-year salary - $25 million to $30 million - but O'Neal's contract is worth more over the long term.

O'Neal has averaged 27.2 points and 12.5 rebounds during his four-year pro career. Although he led Orlando to 57-plus wins the last two seasons, the Magic were swept in the 1995 NBA Finals and in this year's conference finals.

Smoltz shackles Astros

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer
Kevin Brown of Florida is running away with the major leagues' ERA title and John Smoltz of Atlanta is lapping the field in the wins category.

Both National League All-Stars increased their leads Thursday with impressive performances.

Brown pitched 5 2-3 innings of no-hit ball before settling for a three-hitter and lowered his ERA to 1.87 as the Marlins won their fourth straight, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 7-0.

Smoltz got the Braves' 17-game, Olympics-induced road trip off to a good start by pitching 8 1-3 solid innings as Atlanta beat the Houston Astros 3-2.

In other NL games Thursday, Los Angeles beat San Francisco 8-3, San Diego ripped Colorado 9-2, the Chicago Cubs beat St. Louis 6-5, Montreal topped the New York Mets 7-3 and Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 8-3.

In Miami, Brown (8-8) received rare run support in pitching his major league-leading third shutout of the season. In his eight losses, the Marlins scored just seven runs.

Brown carried a no-hitter into the sixth Thursday before Mickey Morandini hit a sharp single to right with two outs.

"I wasn't approaching things any differently as the game wore on," Brown said. "I was just trying to protect the lead, get ahead of guys and keep them off base."

Brown struck out four and walked one in breaking his three-game losing streak. He allowed six earned runs in his previous three games, but the Marlins scored only three runs.

"It's amazing to me that the guy has lost eight games," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said. "He was overpowering tonight. We hit maybe four balls hard."

In Houston, Smoltz (16-4) topped his previous career high of 15 victories by scattering seven hits before needing late relief help from Mark Wohlers.

"It's a huge win for me," said Smoltz, who won 15 games in 1992 and 1993. "A lot has been made of the fact I never had more than 15 wins. Now I do."

Brewers pummel Gooden

By The Associated Press
Dwight Gooden is simply out of control.

After walking seven in his previous start, Gooden walked a career-high eight Thursday night in the New York Yankees' 16-4 loss to the Milwaukee Brewers.

"Tonight was very frustrating," said Gooden. "I wasn't getting ahead. My mechanics were off at times. It just didn't feel right."

Dave Nilsson, Pat Listach and Fernando Vina drove in three runs each at County Stadium. The Yankees allowed their most runs since a 16-3 loss to Toronto on June 8, 1992.

Gooden (9-5) was tagged for 10 runs - five earned - and six hits in 4 2-3 innings, losing for the first time in eight starts since May 26.

"I have to look at films, check things, see where I'm going wrong," Gooden said. "I'm most concerned with the walks. I mean, 15 walks in two games. I've got to come up with some answers. I've got to go back out and get back to the basics."

In other games, Seattle routed California 15-3, Cleveland beat Minnesota 5-4, Baltimore beat Boston 6-3, Kansas City beat Chicago 7-1, Toronto beat Detroit 8-4 and Oakland beat Texas 5-4 in 11 innings.

Greg Vaughn drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a groundout, raising his league-leading RBI total to 90.

Outfielder Mike Aldrete mopped up for the Yankees in his first major league pitching appearance, pitching a one-hit ninth.

Scott Karl (9-5) allowed three runs and seven hits in seven-plus innings.

"I had a changeup I haven't had the last few outings," Karl said. "Having that pitch is really key. I move my fastball around to spots, but I'm not overpowering. I need to have something to change speed because I can't blow it by guys."

Mariners 15, Angels 3

Jay Buhner homered and drove in five runs and Alex Rodriguez had four hits for visiting Seattle.

"Atlanta's Welcome to the World." The trucks sometimes face inward toward the field, sometimes circle in convoy around the stadium track.

General Motors issued a news release boasting it is "believed to be the first Olympic sponsor to ever be included in the opening ceremonies." A top GM executive was quoted saying the audience "will recognize that we elevated GM and the Chevrolet brand way above the field."

But some who viewed a dress rehearsal Wednesday night expressed surprise at the glaring brand-naming of equipment in what is supposed to be a ceremony focusing on lofty principles. Atlanta Olympics organizers, who also were there, apparently agreed.

"Those trucks are not going to look that way Friday night," an authoritative source said.

On Thursday, Mischer added his misgivings. "I was sorry to see what GM publicized regarding this," the producer said.

But what might be done to soften the commercial image could not be learned. And GM spokesman Dean Rotondo said the company had not been asked, as of late Thursday, to modify the vehicles.

Rotondo added a corporate apology for the news release, saying, "We never intended to put (organizers) in any sort of compromising and embarrassing position."

The International Olympic Committee has sanctioned the presence of standard stadium billboard ads during such ceremonies. But Olympic specialists could not immediately recall any previous on-field product display.

Trucks aside, the Olympics opener promises a rousing, diverse night of entertainment that touches on themes both local and universal.

Mischer said the "Atlanta Welcome" number, a stirring musical explosion of humanity in motion, was based on suggestions by local high school and college kids who demonstrated their stepping, clogging and cheerleading moves for him and became the volunteer cast.

The program also includes the vast, symbolic choreographies that have become standard for recent Olympics - swirling colors, flocks of performers in fantasy costumes and vague story lines and messages.

Powell to address GOP convention

WASHINGTON (AP) - Although he's been reluctant to campaign on behalf of Bob Dole, retired Gen. Colin Powell is going to be a featured speaker on opening night of the Republican National Convention.

Powell's opening-night speech will be part of a lineup that also includes former Presidents Bush and Ford as well as a video tribute to Ronald Reagan, convention officials said Thursday.

There also is talk that Reagan's wife, Nancy, may address the crowd and introduce Powell, who was her husband's national security adviser.

The convention gets under way Aug. 12 in San Diego.

Dole, who sought unsuccessfully to interest Powell in being his running mate, said earlier this week he still considers the former head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff a top prospect for a possible Dole administration Cabinet post.

"He's high on anybody's list. ... Anytime you look around, you see Colin Powell," Dole said Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live."

That same night, Dole announced his selection of New York Rep. Susan Molinari, who favors abortion rights, as convention keynote speaker.

The prime time appearances of Powell and Molinari at the convention that will nominate Dole, are seen as an attempt to reach out to moderates even while Dole keeps conservatives and anti-abortion forces happy by not changing the GOP's strong pro-life platform plank.

FDA to hear case for, against RU-486

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Eight years after the world's first abortion drug was introduced in France, scientific experts are considering whether the U.S. government should let American women choose RU-486 over surgical abortion.

Abortion providers who want the Food and Drug Administration to approve RU-486 say the drug has been used by 200,000 European women with only rare complications.

Abortion foes argue that RU-486 could make women bleed to death or that it could fail to work, leaving them to bear malformed children.

Outside scientists were to hear the conflicting stories today and make a recommendation to the FDA. The FDA isn't bound by the experts' advice but usually follows it - and has promised a quick decision, meaning Americans could know by year's end if RU-486 will be available at U.S. abortion clinics.

"Many women will be very glad there is a medical option for terminating pregnancy," said Dr. Susan Allen of Advances in Health Technology, a Washington-based firm that plans to distribute RU-486 and train doctors to use it.

Countered Dr. Donna Harrison, an obstetrician working with the National Right to Life Committee: "Our nation is being misled" about RU-486's risks.

Almost all of the nation's 1.3 million abortions are surgical, although doctors last year began publicizing the fact that a drug already on the market to treat cancer-methotrexate - can be used to induce abortion.

However, RU-486 would be the nation's only FDA-approved abortion drug. While anti-abortion protests blocked its sale here until now, the Clinton administration brokered a deal in 1994 giving U.S. patent rights to the nonprofit Population Council to seek FDA approval.

Abortion opponents cried foul and say the FDA now is pushing RU-486 to market for political reasons. FDA officials insist RU-486 is undergoing as much scrutiny as any other drug. This week it removed three scientists from the advisory panel after abortion opponents charged they were biased in favor of the drug.

French trials of 2,480 women show RU-486 is 95.5 percent effective at inducing an abortion; the remainder of the women needed surgery to complete the procedure.

The most serious complication was heavy bleeding. In extra safety testing of 2,100 Americans, four needed blood transfusions.

An RU-486 abortion isn't as simple as popping a pill. The process can be painful, causing heavy bleeding and nausea, and it can be used only through the seventh week of pregnancy, well before many women ever visit an abortion clinic.

RU-486 blocks development of progesterone, a natural hormone essential for maintaining pregnancy. A doctor administers the pill mifepristone. Two days later, the woman returns to take another pill, a hormone that causes contractions to expel the embryo, something that may not happen until the woman leaves the abortion clinic. In such cases, she is supposed to return for a third visit to make sure the abortion is complete.

Critics argue that women may bled to death, saying while that hasn't actually happened, 1 percent of those who have tried the drug so far have needed blood transfusions. But women are 10 times more likely to need a transfusion after normal labor than after RU-486, countered Planned Parenthood's Dr. Lynn Borgatta.

Anti-abortionists also say that when RU-486 fails, women may not finish the job surgically. Harrison said hundreds of malformed children could be born as a result.

Of 200,000 Europeans who have taken RU-486, only 25 children were born; said the Population Council's Dr. Wayne Bardin. One died and others had such defects as extra fingers, he said.

The procedure would cost several hundred dollars, about the same as surgical abortions, Allen said.

Crash leads to terrorism fears

By TERRY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) - As the FBI investigates the crash of a TWA jumbo jet, public fears rose that the demise of Flight 800 might have been an act of terrorism.

Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport spokeswoman Angel Biasatti said airport personnel are complying with the latest Federal Aviation Administration security directives.

"We won't say what those security measures are; if we did, they would cease to be security measures," she said.

On Thursday, travelers and well-wishers at D-FW moved routinely through security checkpoints. Some said they would tolerate less freedom of movement in exchange for greater assurances of safety.

Tony and Laura Newsom shared those concerns, having just brought their daughters Jessica, 11, and Angela, 14, from Austin. The girls were ready to board an American Airlines flight for Frankfurt, Germany, to visit their uncle on their first unescorted overseas flight.

"I've got concerns. But if it happens, it happens," Newsom said. "If somebody wants to do something, they'll do it. That was proved in Oklahoma City."

Security can't be too tight for Newsom, who said he has traveled widely overseas, including twice to Turkey.

"As a concerned dad, I would prefer security to be as tight as possible," he said. "I've been overseas, where security is so much tighter. They go through luggage. They make you claim your bag on the tarmac. If you don't pick out your bag, it's confiscated."

"It may be inconvenient, but at least you'd be more secure," he said.

At Houston Intercontinental Airport, Steve Tomlinson of Austin was escorting his mother on her first trip to Europe.

"I don't feel like it's something you have any control over, and if you enjoy traveling, it's just a risk you take," said Tomlinson as he pushed a cart of luggage toward his departure gate to London.

Airport security at major Texas airports has been more stringent in recent months, with counter clerks and baggage handlers checking photo IDs and asking passengers whether they had accepted any items or packages from strangers.

Victims' rights advocate among disaster victims

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's most visible and outspoken champion for crime victims' rights could wind up a victim of the ultimate crime herself should the crash of TWA Flight 800 be determined a terrorist act of mass murder.

Pam Lychner, a founding member of the prominent Houston-based victims' right group Justice For All, and her two small daughters were among the victims of the jumbo jet crash into the Atlantic off Long Island, N.Y.

"To me this is the ultimate tragic irony," Andy Kahan, crime victims director for Houston Mayor Bob Lanier said Thursday.

Mrs. Lychner, 37, was taking her daughters Shannon, 10, and Katie, 8, for a summer vacation to Paris.

Word of their deaths prompted an outpouring of sympathy from state officials and acquaintances.

"Pam was a dynamic and articulate advocate for the rights of crime victims here in Texas and for the tough anti-crime legislation passed by the Legislature last year," Gov. George W. Bush said. "We are crushed for her husband and family."

Her husband, Joe, also active in the group, did not accompany his family on the Paris trip but was to have joined them later. On Thursday, he flew to New York and the crash scene.

"Obviously, it's been very, very difficult for us. It's just something you can't emotionally comprehend at this time. Pam has become a victim of a crime so heinous it is hard to describe," Lychner said in New York.

He told reporters he believes terrorists blew up the plane.

"At this time I'm quite convinced," Lychner said, when asked about the possibility.

Justice For All was founded in mid-1993 after a man with a history of sexual assaults attacked Mrs. Lychner, a real estate agent, while she was showing a house. Her attacker subsequently tried to sue her, citing psychological damage she caused by getting him arrested.

"I really got incensed," she said. "I'm going to stand up and fight."

"It blossomed under her leadership," Kahan said. "She was just a voice of reason among a system that dealt with insanity."

"You don't replace somebody like that. You carry on her work."

"Pam Lychner's tireless efforts on behalf of victims of violent crime will leave a lasting legacy," Lanier said. "Hers was a voice of compassion and reason for those who have suffered."

Under her leadership, the group attracted several thousand members to become Texas' largest victims' rights group, campaigned against early release of prisoners and expansion of privileges for Texas prison inmates. The group also pushed legislative programs to aid crime victims, including passage of a measure restricting early release of prisoners. Another measure barred lawsuits like the one she endured from her attacker.

"The board and staff of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice is saddened by this tragic death," Allan Polunsky, chairman of the criminal justice board, said. "A caring and dedicated professional, Pam was a leading voice in victims' rights causes in Texas and she will be sorely missed by all of us."

Interview with newsman provides fitting epitaph

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - As the interview ended, one last question popped into my head. "How would you like to be remembered?" I asked John Chancellor.

We both let out an uneasy chuckle but he knew I just wanted him to sum up his four decades at NBC News, his distinguished tour of duty that was coming to a close.

Here is how he replied that morning three years ago: "I guess I would like to be remembered as the fellow who never tried to sell the audience any rugs."

It was vintage Chancellor: direct, droll, self-effacing, self-assured. It typified his thrice-weekly commentaries on "The NBC Nightly News" since 1982, and his decade as "Nightly News" anchor before that, and his groundbreaking years as a correspondent for years before that, beginning when he first showed up for work in 1950 as one of a quartet of NBC News reporters. Worldwide.

On July 9, 1993, Chancellor gave his farewell commentary, the last of some 1,500. "It was an honor to be a guest in your home," he told viewers.

Then he took his leave. Almost three years later to the day, cancer took his life.

Now, however unexpectedly by either of us, Chancellor's impromptu self-appraisal - he never tried to sell the audience any rugs - stands as a fitting eulogy.

His glorious hitch at NBC - all the things he covered and the role he played inventing how to cover them - has been imitated by others since his death a week ago.

As a viewer, what I know apart from the particulars is this: Chancellor was there, reliably, as far back as I can remember.

As a kid, I gravitated to NBC News' coverage of politics and the space race. Those were formative years for me as a TV-news junkie, and also, as it happened, a golden age for the network then deploying heavyweights like Chet Huntley, David Brinkley, Frank McGee, Sander Vanocur, Edwin Newman and, of course, Chancellor.

Covering the 1964 Republican Convention, for instance, NBC won more viewers than ABC and CBS combined.

Including me. Indeed, I happened to be among the millions tuned to NBC during what became, somewhat to Chancellor's chagrin, his best-remembered dispatch.

Even to my young ear, his signoff - "This is John Chancellor, somewhere in custody" - was an instant classic. It was unexcited and straight to the point, with a trace of the serio-comic as he got the bum's rush by security guards arresting him for blocking an aisle.

Despite his love for the written word, he knew a TV journalist had to master ad-libbing. "You can't just write the talk," he told me, "you have to talk the talk."

Surrounded by boxes in his Rockefeller Center office three years ago, he still looked pretty much the way he always had, like a father who would help you with your homework. But even nearing his 66th birthday, he seemed much too young to be a founding father of NBC News.

He made it clear this retirement wasn't really a retirement for a man who, with his wife, Barbara, was picking up from Manhattan and moving to Princeton, N.J., where he looked forward to many more productive years.

He was going to write books, he said, "and live a different sort of life."

Life as someone other than "John Chancellor-o-or." That was the stretch-limo treatment of his name by staff announcers after, somewhere along the line, one of them noticed that the newsman called himself "Chancel-lore," not the more usual "Chancel-lurr."

"They took my name and gave it a kind of rhetorical, operatic 'o,'" he recalled with a laugh. "I didn't say 'Chancelo-o-or,' but THEY sure did."

He tried to make them understand, but "Chancelo-o-or" it stayed. "Finally, I said, screw it," Chancellor grinned.

It might have been the only time he settled for less than the truth.

Names in the News

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - Christopher Reeve made a visit to the theater he says helped launch his acting career.

The actor, who was paralyzed from the neck down in a May 1995 horseback riding accident, came Wednesday to the Williamstown Theater Festival to see the American premiere of Arthur Miller's latest play, "The Ride Down Mt. Morgan." Reeve, who first acted at the festival as a student and is on the board of trustees, said his experience there launched him as an actor.

"I first appeared here 28 years ago, and it was a very formative year," he said.

326 Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC
ELIEZER, ABRAHAM'S STEWARD HAS RETURNED FROM HIS SEARCH FOR A BRIDE FOR ISAAC WITH REBEKAH, DAUGHTER OF BETHUEL. ISAAC, ON AN EVENING STROLL, IS THE FIRST TO SEE THE CARAVAN....

IT IS ELIEZER! RETURNED AT LAST WITH MY BRIDE!

AND REBEKAH APPROACHES ISAAC, HER FACE COVERED WITH A VEIL, AS IS THE PROPER CUSTOM OF THE DAY...

HAPPINESS FILLS ELIEZER, FOR HE SUCCESSFULLY HAS ACCOMPLISHED THE MISSION WITH WHICH HE WAS CHARGED.

AND NOW ABRAHAM MAY FINISH HIS REMAINING YEARS IN PEACE AND CONTENTMENT, FOR HE IS ASSURED THAT HIS FAMILY LINE WILL CONTINUE AND BECOME A MIGHTY NATION, AS GOD HAS PROMISED. NOW THAT HIS SON ISAAC HAS A WIFE, WHO WILL GIVE HIM LOVE AND COMFORT THROUGH THE YEARS, ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN GENESIS: CHAPTER 24.
