Bomb blast in Centennial Park rocks Olympic Games

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - Terrorism struck the Olympics for the first time since Munich in 1972 when a pipe bomb exploded today in the heart of the Summer Games, killing at least one and wounding more than 100. A Turkish TV cameraman died rushing to the scene.

A 911 call warning of the blast was received 18 minutes before the bomb went off, not allowing enough time to fully evacuate the park, according to a Justice Department official speaking on condition of anonymity. Officers on the scene had already spotted a suspicious bag but couldn't clear the area in time.

"We will consider it an act of terrorism until information should arrive to the contrary," FBI Special Agent Woody Johnson said.

As in Munich, when the Olympics continued even after terrorists killed 11 Israeli athletes, officials in Atlanta said they would not halt the games today.

"The games will go on," said Francois Carrard, director general of the International Olympic Committee.

And so they did, beginning with a moment of silence and the lowering of flags to half-staff at all venues on the day of the glamour event of the games: the 100-meter dash.

At Lake Lanier, where rowing finals were being held today, soldiers carrying machine guns patrolled the grounds. Soldiers - rather than the usual Olympic security - were manning the security checkpoints.

The bomb went off at about 1:25 a.m. near a sound and light tower at Centennial Olympic Park, where thousands of revelers were celebrating at an open-air, free concert.

The home is the only new residential construction to be granted a building permit through the first six months of 1996. Another major project this year has been the construction of new tennis courts and a field house at Hereford High School.

Number of building permits up this year; total value declines

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

The number of building permits issued in the first six months of 1996 increased slightly from last year, according to statistics from the City of Hereford.

Reports of permits and valuations are kept by Becky Reinart of the city's building department.

The city issued 61 building permits, up from 51 permits issued in the first six months of 1995.

Despite the increase in numbers, the total value of these permits was $824,427, down from last year's total value of $2,052,067 through the first six months.

Here are the 1996 building permits and values by month:

- January, four, $250,000.
- February, nine, $251,327.
- March, seven, $22,900.
- April, 11, $61,500.
- May, 15, $39,000.
- June, 15, $199,100.

- April, 11, $61,500.
- May, 15, $39,000.

To compare the numbers, here are the 1995 building permits and values by month:

- March, 11, $263,570.
- April, eight, $151,950.
- May, 10, $27,875.
- June, eight, $132,800.

Of the 61 building permits issued so far this year, 47 permits were issued for residential construction and 14 permits were issued for commercial construction.

A permit was issued for a single-family house, the only building permit issued for a house in this reporting period. The other residential permits were issued for additions and renovations to existing houses, such as garages, carports, storage buildings, basements and porches.

In the first six months of 1995, permits were issued for eight single-family homes and one three- and four-family dwellings.

The 1996 total value of residential permits amounts to $390,800, while commercial permits account for $433,627.

The largest single building permit was issued for construction of new tennis facilities at Hereford High School this year.

The new facility includes four post-tensioned concrete courts, which replaced four existing courts. A building with an office and men and

Chamber tuning up for 1996 edition of Jubilee

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Early August in Hereford means one thing each year -- the Town and Country Jubilee.

This year's festivities are slated to begin this Saturday, Aug. 3, with a week's worth of fun and events culminating in the parade and Jubilee Junction on Aug. 10.

Co-chairmen of the Jubilee this year are Sid Shaw and Mark Andrews, who are working with Chamber President Tommie Weemes to put this year's event together.

The theme of the Jubilee is "Orchestrating the Future," which Weemes said is a continuation of the chamber's theme for the year begun at the Chamber Banquet.

Dameron Park is the center of Jubilee festivities, although local merchants are getting involved in the excitement and there will be events held elsewhere as well.

Events kick off on Saturday with the Jubilee Beef Fajita Cookoff, which will be held in Dameron Park and sponsored by the Hereford Cattlewomen.

Competition among local fajita cooking teams will come to a head at 6:30 p.m., when judging of entries begins. Tasting by the public will begin at 7 p.m.

Entry forms for the contest are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, 701 N. Main, or AzTx Cattle Co., 311 E. Park.

Local merchants and the chamber are combining to give away a free trip for two to a Dallas Cowboys football game.

The prize includes tickets and airfare for two to the Oct. 13 game against the Arizona Cardinals.

In the middle of the week, the chamber will sponsor its weekly Farmers Market in the Family Dollar parking lot at U.S. 385 and Park Avenue.

Denise Andrew's of Andrew's Produce heads up that sale, which is open to area produce growers. It begins at 5 p.m.

Beginning Aug. 9, area riders will take to the arena for a team roping contest and cowboy rodeo.

But it is on Aug. 10 that the Jubilee really explodes into action.

That day begins at 8 a.m. at the YMCA with the annual Greg Black Memorial 10K, 2 Mile Fun Run and 2 Mile Walk.

The event is sponsored by the YMCA, Hereford Cablevision and Plains Insurance.

Making merry music

Local performers such as this group that played at the 1995 Town and Country Jubilee are among the features of the annual event, which kicks off this Saturday and runs through Aug. 10. A week of events begins with the annual Fajita Cookoff sponsored by the Hereford Cattlewomen. The Jubilee ends on the 10th with the annual parade and Jubilee Junction in Dameron Park. Telephone caller warned of bomb

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - A calm-voiced telephone caller warned a 911 emergency operator of the impending explosion in Atlanta, and a bomb exploded 18 minutes later, law enforcement officials said.

The call came too soon before the blast to aid in evacuating an open-air concert site at the Olympics, according to one law enforcement official and a Justice Department official.

The caller spoke "in a calm voice," according to the Justice official, who requested anonymity. The FBI's Woody Johnson told a news conference in Atlanta, "We believe it was a white male with an indistinguishable accent," that Johnson agreed was American.

The call reached the 911 operator at 1:07 a.m., a law enforcement official said, adding "The caller said a bomb would go off in Centennial Park in 30 minutes."

A bomb went off in that park at 1:25 a.m., spewing out nails and screws that investigators found at the scene later, the law enforcement official said. The use of nails and screws around pipe bombs is designed to increase their harm to people.

The call "was strictly a warning" accurately predicting the site of the blast, another law enforcement official said, requesting anonymity. The caller did not give a name or identify any group or organization claiming responsibility for the bombing, the second law enforcement official said.

The 911 call did not provide enough advance warning to dispatch a bomb squad, the first law enforcement official said, but coincidentally a bomb squad had already been summoned to the site by someone who spotted an unattended bag, that ultimately blew up.

Bomb squad officers who examined the bag quickly before beginning an evacuation saw three pipes inside, but the pipes may all have been part of one bomb rather than three separate ones, the first official said.

The 911 call came from a pay telephone near a hotel about two blocks from the location of the explosion, the Justice official said.

Agents were able to quickly determine that because Atlanta's 911 system, like others, displays for emergency operators the telephone number of the calling party.

One Treasury agent expressed confidence the bombing could be solved. "We've got a phone call. And a pipe bomb is very inefficient; it always leaves a lot of evidence behind," said this Treasury agent, requesting anonymity. "We've investigated thousands of these; we know what to do."

TV show to air in Sept.

The cover story in last Sunday's Hereford Brand entertainment section contained information about a show called "Just for the Ride," presented as part of the PBS network's POV series.

That show was to have aired on Tuesday, July 23.

However, officials of KACV-TV in Amarillo, the local PBS affiliate, said this past week that the show will instead be aired in September instead.

A portion of the broadcast was filmed in Hereford and includes footage filmed at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center when it was located here.

Jubilee jumping

A parade, food and music at the annual Town and Country Jubilee is great, but so are the games and activities, such as the Bungee Jumping booth at last year's Jubilee Junction. This year's Junction will contain a variety of booths offering fun, games and, of course, food.

warning of the blast a few minutes before the pipe bomb went off, according to a Justice Department official, who requested anonymity. But the call came so close to the explosion that there was not enough time to notify police in time, the Justice official said. The FBI was getting the tape of the call.

The 911 call came from a pay telephone near a hotel about two blocks from the park, the Justice official said. Agents were able to quickly determine that because Atlanta's 911 system, like others, displays the telephone number of the calling party for emergency operators.

"I felt the ground shake," said Desmond Edwards, an Atlanta schoolteacher. "Some people looked really messed up. There were rivers of blood."

"I thought it was fireworks, like a big boom, and I saw three guys laying in the street," said Terry Tyson. "They all had leg injuries. Blood was running down the street. It was horrible."

Johnson said the park and all Olympic venues would be "sanitized."

Justice Department spokeswoman Carole Florman there have been a number of calls since the blast alerting authorities to abandoned or suspicious parcels in Atlanta. Each parcel was being checked, but none proved to be explosive so far, Florman said shortly before 8 a.m.

"Since the Games began, about 120 abandoned or suspicious parcels have been picked up and NOT one of them has contained explosives," Florman said.

Captain's order last words on Flight 800

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP) - A captain's calm order to increase altitude amounted to the last recorded words from TWA Flight 800's cockpit before the plane exploded over the Atlantic Ocean, data from the flight's black boxes show.

The last words from the cockpit are followed by a loud unidentifiable noise. After that the flight recorder tape abruptly ends, indicating the flight was operating normally moments before the explosion and raising suspicions that a bomb or missile downed the plane, investigators said Friday.

An investigator who spoke on condition of anonymity told the Los Angeles Times that the explosion blasted through the right side of the plane, first rupturing the fuel tanks before the rest of the wreckage fell into the sea.

The position of underwater debris showed which side of the plane was rocked by the blast, the newspaper reported in today's editions.

The radar records also showed that the plane descended for several seconds before bursting into a fireball and falling in pieces to the ocean. After the voice tape ends, the plane - or some large portion of it - continued to be tracked by radar for an additional 41 seconds and 2 1/2 nautical miles, said National Transportation Safety Board Vice Chairman Robert Francis.

The point at which the radar ends is "near the positions where the engines and large pieces of wreckage have been found," Francis said.

The Paris-bound 747 exploded in a fireball around sunset on July 17 at 13,700 feet, 10 miles off of Long Island. All 230 people aboard perished.

NTSB engineers said the flight data recorder, retrieved from wreckage on the ocean bottom, ended abruptly without showing anything unusual.

The final words in the cockpit were from the captain as he calmly issued an order to increase altitude after receiving clearance from ground control to go from 13,000 to 15,000 feet, investigators said Friday.

JUBILEE

will receive a free running visor. Races will begin at 8 a.m.

At 10:30 a.m., the focus shifts to the area between Hereford High School and downtown, as the Jubilee Parade kicks off.

Weemes said one change this year is that judging of parade entries and presentation of first place ribbons will be done before the parade begins.

The parade is sponsored by the Whiteface Kiwanis Club, with Dan Higgins and Jerry Koenig heading the event for the club.

Jimmy Bell is the chamber's representative with the parade. He will present the large blue ribbons to the winning entries after judging by an anonymous panel of judges is complete.

Anybody is welcome to join in the parade. Sign up forms are available at the chamber of from Whiteface Kiwanis Club members.

Weemes said residents interested in being part of the parade should sign up no later than Wednesday, Aug. 7, to give organizers time to set up the parade marching order.

Typically, there are about 80 to 90 entrants in the parade.

Entries that will be judged must be in place at the Hereford High School parking lot by 9 a.m. on Aug. 10 to be judged.

The parade starts at the high school at 10:30 a.m. and proceeds south on Avenue F to Park Avenue, west to Main Street, then south to downtown, where it breaks up around FirstBank Southwest.

A reviewing stand provided by Roy Newton will be set up in front of the chamber offices.

Immediately following the parade, the Jubilee Junction will kick off in Dameron Park.

Local entertainers will be on stage -- provided by Newton -- to sing for the crowds and local non-profit organizations will have a variety of food and game booths.

Former chamber executive vice president Mike Carr encouraged those involved in the Jubilee Junction to offer more than just food.

"We really need to urge the participants to, in addition to having the food booths, they need to have some simple games," he said, adding that games are what will attract children, which will in turn insure families spend more time at the park.

Local groups are encouraged to sign up at the chamber for their food and game booths.

Weemes said local businesses may have booths at the Jubilee Junction, but only for free giveaways and promotional purposes so as to avoid competing with non-profit groups.

Both Carr and Weemes cautioned booth operators not to bring microwave ovens due to problems they cause with the park's electrical system.

In fact, Carr said, booth operators should try to prepare their food ahead of time as much as possible.

Weemes said there will be a meeting for all booth operators and parade participants at 5 p.m. on Aug. 9 in the chamber.

At that time, booth assignments will be made and booth operators may begin moving their equipment to the park and start setting up.

REGISTRATION

grade students entering the district for the first time should bring proof of age, immunization records and the child's Social Security number.

Kindergarten classes will be held at Aikman, Northwest and Tierra Blanca primary schools and Bluebonnet Intermediate School.

Kindergarten registration on the paired campuses of Aikman and Bluebonnet will be on a first come basis.

When the kindergarten classes at Aikman are at their maximum level, then students subsequently registering will be required to attend class at Bluebonnet, Aikman's paired campus.

Actual student assignments to teachers will be made by the building principal.

Pre-kindergarten class registration will be held on Aug. 6 in the Stanton Educational Support Center, 711 E. Park, between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Pre-kindergarten classes are half-day sessions, with morning classes from 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and afternoon classes from 11:55 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Transportation for pre-kindergarten classes will be provided outside the two-mile limit for the morning class. Students will be delivered to bus drop-off points. Students in the afternoon class also may be picked up.

Parents are responsible for all other transportation.

Breakfast and lunch will be provided for the morning classes, while lunch will be provided for students in the afternoon classes.

To be eligible for pre-kindergarten classes, the child's family must meet free or reduced lunch guidelines or limited English proficiency guidelines.

The local entertainment is being coordinated by Connie Walker and his daughters, Karen Fangman and Jeanine Zimmerman.

Local singers and bands are encouraged to contact them at the Country Opry, 364-9643, about performing at the Jubilee.

Although the major activity of the Jubilee will be in the park, there are several activities going on elsewhere.

The Hereford Senior Citizens will sponsor their annual quilt show, which will be open on Friday, Aug. 9, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center auditorium, 426 Ranger.

The Jubilee of Arts, sponsored by the Pilot Club, will be held on Aug. 10 in the Community Center. Artists and craftsmen from Texas and New Mexico will be on hand to display and sell a variety of handcrafted items.

Hispanic leader Garcia dies at 82

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer

Dr. Hector P. Garcia, a leader in the fight for equal treatment of Hispanics who founded the American GI Forum in 1948 as a platform for social change, died Friday of pneumonia. He was 82.

"He's going to be remembered as the Martin Luther King of Hispanics," said Gilbert Casares, Garcia's longtime friend and a founding member of the American GI Forum.

"He is the Hispanic who has done more to better the lives of Hispanics - not only in the United States, but throughout the world," Casares said.

President Clinton called Garcia a national hero. "Dr. Garcia fought for half a century for civil and educational rights of Mexican Americans. ... Hillary and I extend our deepest condolences to his family and to all the Latino community."

Garcia died Friday morning at Corpus Christi's Memorial Medical Center, where he had been hospitalized for months, said his cousin, Amador C. Garcia, who remembered Garcia as "a man of integrity, peace and wisdom" who fought for all minorities.

"He opened many doors for people," he said. "The cornerstone of his philosophy was use the system, and he educated us in the belief that the system works."

Born in Liera, Mexico, in 1914, Garcia grew up in Texas' Rio Grande Valley, where he witnessed firsthand social injustice and discrimination against Mexican-Americans.

A high school teacher once told him, "No Mexican will ever make an 'A' in my class." In response, Garcia went on to become a doctor, graduating from the University of Texas in 1940.

After spending four years in the Army, which awarded him the Bronze Star with six battle stars for his service during World War II, Garcia returned to Texas to start a medical practice in Corpus Christi.

With his office located next to the U.S. Veterans Administration, Garcia treated a number of veterans, many of whom were Hispanics who shared with him their difficulties in obtaining military benefits.

In 1948, just two years after beginning his career as a doctor, Garcia launched his career as an activist, creating the American GI Forum to fight for Hispanic veterans' rights.

His efforts gained national recognition in 1949 when he took up the fight of Pvt. Felix Longoria, a Texan whose family was denied use of a hometown funeral chapel because "the Anglo people would not stand for it."

Longoria's story ran on The Associated Press wire, and, within days, the case drew ire nationwide. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, D-Texas, intervened, and Longoria was given a hero's burial at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Under Garcia's leadership, the GI Forum expanded its focus to fight discrimination in other areas, including courts and schools.

A major victory came in 1954, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Texas courts could not exclude Hispanic citizens from juries in a case brought by the GI Forum and the League for United Latin American Citizens. The Forum also led desegregation lawsuits against several Texas school districts in 1955-56.

Garcia said he disliked politics, but his efforts to get out the Hispanic vote in 1960 helped John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson carry Texas.

In 1961, President Kennedy appointed Garcia to a delegation negotiating a mutual defense treaty, and in 1967, President Johnson asked him to serve as an ambassador to the U.S. delegation to the United Nations.

Garcia also served on numerous advisory committees, including the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, under Presidents Johnson and Carter.

In 1984, President Reagan presented Garcia with the Presidential Medal of Freedom - the nation's highest civilian honor.

Garcia also continued building his medical practice in Corpus Christi, where he was known as "Doctor Hector," a man who would treat patients regardless of whether they could pay.

His humanitarianism was recognized when Memorial Medical Center named its indigent care clinic after him.

"He practiced his healing arts with the same dedication and success as his efforts to bring justice and dignity to all," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said.

Garcia's work served as an example for younger generations of Hispanics. "I considered him my mentor," said state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi. "A lot of people are in public office because of Dr. Hector P. Garcia."

Garcia's friends and co-workers said they plan to ensure his legacy lives on long after his death.

It's been relatively quiet on the news beats this summer, but the annual Town & Country Jubilee Aug. 4-10 will signal the start of the busy fall season.

The beginning of school is just around the corner, with all its activities; ladies' clubs will start meeting again, and before you know it--Christmas activities will begin!

oOo

If you're feeling listless...make a list!

oOo

Most of us would agree that it's not good for our health or attitude to do too much worrying. The problem is that most of us let little things get under our skin, even when we ask for divine intervention to help us.

We ran across an article a number of years ago that was published in "Medical Talk." We think some of our readers might want to clip this, then pray for the ability to make it happen:

Learn to Let Go

If you want to be healthy morally, mentally and physically, just let go.

Let go of the little bothers of everyday life, the irritations and the petty vexations that cross your path daily. Don't take them up and nurse them, pet them and brood over them. They are not worth while. Let them go.

That little hurt you got from a friend, perhaps it wasn't intended, perhaps it was--but never mind, let it go. Refuse to think about it.

Let go of that feeling of hatred you have for another, the jealousy, the envy, the malice--let go all such thoughts. Sweep them out of your mind and you will be surprised what a cleaning and rejuvenating effect it will have upon you, both physically and mentally. Let them all go; you house them at deadly risk.

But the big troubles, the bitter disappointments, the deep wrongs and the heart-breaking sorrow, the tragedies of life...what about them? Why, just let them go too. Drop them, softly maybe, but surely. Put away all regret and bitterness, and let sorrow be only a softening influence. Yes, let them go too, and make the most of the future.

Then that little pet ailment that your have been hanging on to and talking about, let it go. It will be a good riddance. You have treated it royally, but abandon it; let it go. Talk about health instead, and health will come. Quit nursing that pet ailment and let it go.

It is not so hard once you get used to the habit of letting go of these things: You will find it such an easy way to get rid of the things that may mar and embitter life that you will enjoy letting them go.

You will find the world such a beautiful place. You will find it beautiful because you will be free to enjoy it--free in mind and body.

Learn to let go. As you value health of body and peace of mind, let go--just simply let go.

Congressman Combest comments

Welfare reform will help children

BY LARRY COMBEST
U.S. Representative

Truly helping someone in need means taking an interest in them, not throwing money at them as if they were a street beggar.

For 31 years, the welfare programs created in 1965 have thrown $5.4 trillion at welfare with nothing to show but poverty, despair, homelessness, broken families and a damaged work ethic. Most families on welfare want a way off.

Generations of families caught in the cycle of welfare dependency have reason for new hope. Parents will have help for day care for their children while they are at work, but they will also have the obligation to apply for jobs, go to interviews and work at training for new skills. There will also be limits.

For the first time ever, able-bodied welfare recipients will be required to work within two years or lose government-provided benefits. Lifetime benefits are limited to five years. Only in cases of extreme hardship can states exempt as many as 20 percent of their welfare recipients from the benefits' restrictions.

Additionally, states can require that benefits can be paid to an unwed teenaged mother on welfare if she stays in school and lives under adult supervision. She will be encouraged to name the father and the states will be allowed to keep the $34 billion in child support that currently goes uncollected.

Also, non-U.S. citizens cannot apply for welfare unless they are legal refugees, are older than age 75 and have lived in the U.S. legally for at least five years or have served in the military. Felons who are already receiving free room and board in jails and prisons will also be denied welfare checks.

Able-bodied food stamp recipients 18 to 50 years old without dependents must work to continue receiving stamps. However, even they are eligible for a limited time while they look for work and then must work or participate in a workfare or training program.

The welfare reform legislation is about America's future. Changing the welfare system will help the children. Encouraging families to stay together will help children. Putting welfare recipients back to work will help children. Restoring the work ethic will help children. Can you imagine the positive impression on a child who sees a parent taking pride in getting ready to go to work?

President Clinton has before him his third opportunity to sign welfare reform legislation. For the sake of generations of children and their parents trapped in an expensive, useless welfare system, the president must not veto this welfare reform legislation.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This past weekend we decided to take the family to Ute Lake. About 20 miles out of Logan, at 8 p.m. on Saturday, our car died (it was the fuel pump).

But, here came the cavalry--Leticia and Filemon Valdez, Leo Garcia, Jamie Garcia, Albert Vigil, Connie and Jean. They towed us in, got parts and fixed our car, then told us not to worry about the cost of the parts.

I am so grateful and I don't know how to say "thank you" to all these people. May I take this opportunity to tell them, "Thank you so much and may God bless you all." I know He has blessed us.

Tommy & Beatriz Barrett and family

Dear Editor:

I wish to express my gratitude towards the City Commission and to City Manager Chester Nolen for allowing this agency to hold the Medicaid Ice Cream and Swimming Party at the Hereford Aquatic Center last Saturday.

They understand the importance of trying to get parents motivated towards their children's health and making sure the children are properly immunized.

Special thanks go to the staff at the Aquatic Center, WIC, South Plains Health Providers, Joe Hamby and his EMS staff, my co-worker Amalia Mireles, to Schwan's for their donation, and for Dr. Subra's support.

And, thank you, citizens of Hereford, for understanding why things like this must be done.

Liz Agan,
Texas Dept. of Health

Dear Editor:

We would like to express our gratitude to our community for their support of the King's Manor Founders' Barbecue.

Thanks to the men who donated the meat, the merchants who donated food items, bought tickets or donated money, to the Methodist men who cooked the barbecue, and to The Hereford Brand and KPAN for publicity. This year's barbecue was a great success, thanks to all.

How to advance Dole's election cause

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

If you've been following the Republican Party this election year, you have probably seen things that are just as disturbing to you as they are to me.

We have a presidential candidate who is trailing badly in the polls, a party split over ideology and a rogue candidate who is threatening to run as an independent and pull votes with him.

Bob Dole, the "presumptive" candidate, has been hopping around lately with his foot in his mouth after getting caught in several debates that put him on the defensive.

Then there is the vice president. What vice president, you say? That's the point. Dole has tried to keep his search quiet, but the media is getting leaks about his team having interviewed numerous choices, who either are not interested, or who, I don't believe, could help the party.

Pat Buchanan is still stomping around saying he is significant, which he is only insofar as he could destroy the party by taking the farthest right of the right-wing Republicans with him if he splits to be an independent.

While I am not at the point of giving Billary the White House for another four years, I think some things need to be done to advance Dole's cause and close the gap between him and the two-headed president.

First, he needs a running mate. There are several criteria I see he needs to address in this selection.

Dole needs a running mate in the same age group as the Clinton-Gore ticket, he needs someone in good health, he needs someone with national political experience and he needs someone who will attract votes.

Gov. George W. Bush may be a good choice, but he has no experience at the national level and, let's face it, today's federal government cannot be run with just a governor (we've seen that the past three years). The other knock against Bush is his stand on abortion, which is not strict enough to bring in the pro-life forces and Buchanan.

Christine Whitman of New Jersey has as much experience as Bush as governor and she has his stand on abortion.

In Congress, there are few choices that I see would bring life to the campaign.

Many of the most experienced Senators and Representatives are of Dole's age group and would be perceived as being "too old" to take the reins of government in case something happened to the president.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison doesn't have the clout (yet). Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico is well-respected, but he's from a tiny state and his health is not all that great. Newt Gingrich is ideologically what many Republicans want, but he has other baggage (his attitude would be hard for many to swallow).

The younger Republicans just don't have the seasoning needed to be vice president.

Among those who are not currently in government there are several options.

Jack Kemp, the former football player, lawmaker and Cabinet member might not be a bad choice.

Many of the most conservative members of the party would be tickled to death to get William Bennett, the former Education Secretary on board.

Dan Quayle would be a good choice (young, experience and well-known), except for the negative press he got last time as VP.

With all these men and women excluded for various reasons, we are left with few choices.

1. Sen. Phil Gramm. He is conservative, has experience in Washington politics, yet he has not been around so long that he is a fossil or out of touch with the American people. He is from a state with lots of electoral votes and he has a national name following his run at the presidency.

2. Gov. Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin.

He is a governor, but has gained a great deal of attention for his state's reform of welfare laws. He is younger than Dole, but, unfortunately, Wisconsin is geographically similar to Kansas and doesn't have the electoral clout of California, Texas or New York.

3. Gov. Pete Wilson of California. He's also a governor, but from a big state. He also was smart enough to get out of the presidential race while he still had money.

4. Colin Powell.

Yeah, yeah, yeah, he's not going to run. He's my dark-horse candidate. While Powell doesn't meet the profile the far right wants, he's probably the best shot out there to give Dole a win in November.

As for Buchanan, I think he deserves some time at the convention, but someone needs to get it through his head that refusing to budge on his pet issues will do the party more harm than good.

Dole needs to watch himself as well. The tobacco statements, his apparent waffling on abortion planks in the party and the like are going to hurt him in the long run.

There's hope for Dole, but I think there won't be if he doesn't act quickly and decisively.

Census bureau may change racial classification 'Hispanic' to 'Latino'

By STARITA SMITH

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN--Michelle Vasquez wants her people to share center stage in the American discussion on race relations.

"When they talk about race, they talk about blacks and whites. They don't mention browns. We should be counted, too," said the 16-year-old Travis High School student.

"I think that if you're German or whatever, you're still white. Well, if you're Mexican, El Salvadoran, you're still brown. You're still the same race," she said.

Although bureaucrats might disagree with her about the use of the word "race" to describe Hispanics, Michelle's remarks show that race is a matter of perception in this country, no matter how often biologists and anthropologists tell Americans that these perceptions are flawed.

The federal government, which uses racial classifications that it admits are based on social acceptance, not on biology or anthropology, is considering changing the race and identification of brown people again.

In 1980, it decided that people of "Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Central or South American or other Spanish culture or origin, regardless of race" would be called Hispanics.

Now, however, as the Census Bureau prepares to make decisions on the 2000 census, it is revisiting that decision with two major questions: Are Hispanics a race or an ethnic group? Should they continue to be called Hispanics, or should they be referred to as Latinos - a name many say is more accurate?

These questions are not a purely intellectual exercise. Hundreds of millions of federal aid dollars have been lost to Texas because of undercounts in the past four censuses. Hispanics make up most of the people not counted.

"We're very concerned. The count is not the sexy political issue that we equate with civil rights, but for enforcement and compliance, federal resources in education and other areas, it is critical to our community," said Eric Rodriguez, policy analyst for the National Council of La Raza.

The council is an umbrella organization for more than 200 Hispanic groups throughout the country.

These discussions point out the distance between some government definitions and self-definitions of the many groups that must be counted every 10 years in the census. Hispanics have ancestors among all four of the groups the government identifies as races - blacks, whites, American Indians and Asians. They have varying political views and come from dozens of countries, yet they are counted as a single ethnic group given the name Hispanic by the U.S. census.

"When you look at the Latino population of the United States, there isn't a lot of commonality. We're a very diverse group," said Hector Galan, producer of "Chicano," a documentary on the Mexican American civil rights movement of the 1960s.

"As a marketing device and as a political device, Hispanic is easier because you can put everyone under the same umbrella," he said.

Still, people should be called what they like to be called, he added.

"Latino has gained much more acceptance among the Latino population of America than Hispanic," Galan said.

Austin, some said, is an exception to that trend.

"Hispanic is OK. I'm so used to it. It is what we have been called," said Carlos Mireles, a Capital Metro bus driver. But "Latino would be right. Latin Americans is who we are."

One of those in a position to have some influence on these decisions is Jorge Chapa, a University of Texas at Austin professor who sits on the Census Advisory Committee on the Hispanic Population.

Chapa, a demographer, said that "Hispanic" is an inaccurate term with European connotations that don't apply to people whose roots are in this hemisphere.

The majority of Hispanics are Mexican Americans, he said.

As the 1997 deadline approaches for decisions to be made on the 2000 census, the debate over race and ethnicity is growing sharper.

Most federal dollars are allocated according to total state and municipal populations.

The 1990 census showed there were 4.34 million Hispanics in Texas. Almost everyone agrees that there was an undercount of half a million people, mainly Hispanics and blacks. There were court battles and a fight with former Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher, who refused to adjust the figures upward, the way state officials wanted.

Texas, behind California, has the second-largest Hispanic population in the country.

Although some of the undercount of Hispanics has been attributed to illegal immigrants, experts say the order and wording of questions on census forms is also a big factor in miscounts. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has discovered that the use and placement of words like "race" and "other" can change counts by millions of people.

"It can create a hell of a lot of confusion because we're mixed," said Antonio Zamarron, a temporary worker at the Texas Compensation Insurance Fund.

Zamarron doesn't care whether he is called a Hispanic or Latino; he would just like some accuracy in what the government does.

Ruth McKay, a researcher for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the National Council of La Raza had asked that Hispanics be added as a racial category to the 2000 census. But La Raza's Rodriguez said McKay misrepresents the request, which has already been rejected by the federal government.

The council just wanted the Hispanic origin question placed first as "Latino/Hispanic" to eliminate confusion later, he said. Hispanics are a racially mixed people, so it would make no sense to suddenly label them a race of their own.

In 1990, the order of questions on the census form contributed to a miscount of more than 9 million people, Rodriguez and McKay said.

Book recalls deadly 1966 UT Tower attack

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - From high atop the University of Texas' clock tower, it's easy to pick out students strolling across the sunbathed campus, clutching books or holding hands. They laugh, they talk, a few glance up.

Clouds drifting lazily in the summer heat and green hills unfolding in the distance, there's a peaceful air to the spot chosen 30 years ago by Charles Whitman for one of the deadliest mass murders in the nation's history.

"It took Charles Whitman an hour and a half to turn the symbol of a premier university into a monument of madness and terror."

"It took Charles Whitman an hour and a half to turn the symbol of a premier university into a monument of madness and terror," says the forthcoming "A Tower to Climb: The Charles Whitman Murders."

"Arguably, he introduced America to domestic terrorism, but it was terrorism without a cause," author Gary M. Lavergne writes in the book to be published by the University of North Texas Press.

Whitman began killing shortly after midnight on Aug. 1, 1966. He killed his mother.

He killed his wife. Then the 25-year-old UT student, former Eagle Scout and ex-Marine prepared his arsenal and headed to the university tower's 231-foot-high observation deck.

Lugging weapons and other supplies in a military footlocker, he arrived on campus about 11:25 a.m. and was in the tower's tiny elevator 10 minutes later.

He rode to the 27th floor, then climbed stairs to the 28th, which is wrapped by the outdoor observation deck. Before going outside, Whitman fatally attacked a receptionist and opened fire on a family of tourists, killing two of them.

His day's final toll would be 16 dead and 31 wounded, most shot at a distance of more than 300 feet.

The crime stood as the nation's deadliest until 1984, when James Huberty fatally shot 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in California.

As his first victim from the observation deck, Whitman chose a female student walking across campus. She was 8-months-pregnant.

Claire Wilson survived the carefully aimed bullet that killed her unborn baby.

"I believe he aimed for the baby in the womb. I think he decided to commit an atrocious crime as he could commit," said Lavergne, an education consultant who wrote his manuscript after finding that no one

"If you choose to define insanity in terms of whether or not a person is conscious that what he is doing is right or wrong, he was clearly not insane."

else had devoted a book to the carnage.

The 96-minute tower siege ended when Whitman was shot by police officers Ramiro Martinez and Houston McCoy, who had made their way to the observation deck with a third policeman and a civilian.

Three decades later, no one knows for certain what started it.

Lavergne believes it was simply Whitman's choice to flee from his life's pressures by dying "in a big way."

"That meant, for him, taking people down with him, including his wife and his mother, and leaving his father behind to answer all the questions," Lavergne said.

Whitman had expressed hatred for his father, whom his mother had recently left. He left behind notes saying he didn't consider the world worth living in, he loved his wife and mother, he wanted to spare the women embarrassment.

The end came in the wake of personal difficulties.

His Marine stint had been stained by a court-martial for violating rules against lending money for profit and gambling.

He had a heavy school course load, coupled with a summer job. Finances were tight. He suffered from headaches and depression. He was taking amphetamines and, the autopsy revealed, there was a tumor on his brain.

But Lavergne disagrees with those who would suggest the tumor or drugs prompted Whitman's killing spree. Nor does he believe Whitman had a fit of insanity, citing his planning and the fact that the murders stretched over a 13-hour time period.

"If you choose to define insanity in terms of whether or not a person is conscious that what he is doing is right or wrong, he was clearly not insane," Lavergne says.

"We want him to be completely evil, or we want him to be an All-American boy who snapped. I don't think he was either. We want a psychiatric or an organic explanation for what he did, and there's none. He just decided to do it."

"I believe he aimed for the baby in the womb. I think he decided to commit an atrocious crime as he could commit."

Gary M. Lavergne, author

Before his killing spree, Whitman sometimes showed a temper and even acknowledged two assaults on his wife.

Months before the shooting, Whitman had told a UT staff psychiatrist he often thought "about going up on the Tower with a deer rifle and shooting people."

But Whitman struggled to put on a nice facade, Lavergne writes. Aided by his blonde, muscular looks, he generally succeeded.

Whitman "was just an All-American looking guy," recalls UT Police Officer Kenneth Williams, 48, who was a student of Whitman's schoolteacher wife, Kathy.

Mrs. Whitman was "a very, very pretty lady. Very intelligent," Williams said recently as he escorted visitors to the tower's observation deck. The deck was closed to the general public after several suicides followed the Whitman shooting.

In August 1966, Williams had just graduated from high school. He was working a construction job when the unbelievable reports of Whitman's siege came over the radio.

"Stuff like that didn't happen in Austin," he said. "It was just a little, sleepy town."

Among the wounded was Robert Heard, then an Associated Press reporter, shot while covering the story. In a recurring nightmare the first few nights after the shooting, Heard is the one looking through a telescopic sight.

"I see a figure wearing a white shirt. When I recognize it's me, that's when the nightmare ends," said Heard, now a freelance writer and author who also produces a newsletter about UT sports.

After such a near-miss with death, Heard says, "You kind of get the feeling that everything else is icing."

As for Whitman, Heard believes the young man was burning his bridges behind him by killing his mother and wife before climbing the tower.

"He was setting this thing up to go out like a meteor, which he did."

Californian makes shift from sheet metal to guitar making

By RON DeLACY
The Modesto Bee
AVERY, Calif. (AP) - As he sands, chisels, files, saws, glues or polishes, he constantly talks to himself or to the dozens of wooden pieces he is assembling, ordering them to behave.

His movements are confident, graceful and rhythmic, as though they've been with him for a lifetime.

But 45-year-old Michael Hornick, builder of Shanti (Sanskrit for peace) instruments, is relatively new to the art. He was an industrial sheet-metal worker in the San Francisco Bay area, liking the money and hating the work, when he started shaping his first guitar 11 years ago.

"I had always been into wood-work, but I never liked anything I ever made," Hornick said in his workshop a few steps from the Calaveras County mountain home he shares with wife, Margaret. "It was like, as soon as I figured out how to do something, I lost interest in it."

The guitar project, by contrast, consumed him. Reading everything he could find by other luthiers - the name for the creators of stringed instruments - and using the best Sitka spruce and Indian rosewood he could find, he worked on the instrument every night for a year after work and every weekend.

"I wanted to do it right," he said. "I didn't want it to look like an amateur built it. And when it was done and I strung it up, I felt like, ooh, wow, this is what I've got to do."

He's been doing it ever since. In 1991, he quit the sheet-metal gig and makes his living lovingly and meticulously creating about 10 guitars per year. Two are for music stores, one for Colorado's Telluride Bluegrass Festival as the grand prize in its flatpicking competition, and the rest for an ever-growing clientele that includes some of America's finest acoustic players.

Among them is Pat Flynn, a former member of New Grass Revival and one of Nashville's top studio musicians. He owns a rosewood and spruce Shanti 12-string that Hornick built in 1989.

"It's a beautiful guitar with a wonderfully balanced sound, and it keeps getting better as it ages," Flynn said. "Some guitars have a rich low end, others have bright highs, and others have a great mid-range. With the Shanti, it's all there. I don't know how he does it because on paper a lot of guitars are similar."

There is a waiting list for Hornick's guitars, which start at $3,600. Flynn is in line for a six-string, and so are a few dozen other people. If you ordered a Shanti today, you could expect to have it in 1998.

"I tell people there's an 18- to 22-month wait, but at my rate of building, it's way closer to 22," Hornick said. "I shipped one out yesterday that a guy ordered in December 1993. What's that, 2-1/2 years? My customers can't be in a hurry."

Among the painstaking parts of the process are the miters, ornamental purflers, inlays and finish work. Among the most intuitive is "voicing" the instrument, tapping on it at various stages and adjusting its resonance by thinning the inner bracing.

Most manufactured guitars are "voiced" by formula - prescribed thickness and tapering of the braces. But no two pieces of wood are exactly the same, so Hornick is constantly making adjustments, tapping with a piano-key hammer or a knuckle, chiseling here, tapping again, chiseling there, shooting for high responses on the treble side of the instrument, lows on the bass said.

"It's an exciting process," he said. "You get tuned into every piece of wood. You are getting messages every time you tap."

"You are one-on-one with the instrument. It keeps changing and you keep doing stuff to get a certain sound. There isn't any formula. It takes patience. It takes focus. It takes time."

DPS trooper has a real feel for drug traffickers

By J. ANDREW CURLISS
The Dallas Morning News
CARTHAGE, Texas - State Highway Patrol Trooper Barry Washington is on the prowl for drugs. It's Sunday morning, just after first light, as Trooper Washington steers his black-and-white Chevrolet Caprice south onto U.S. Highway 59 in Panola County, Texas.

"There's some crooks and dope close," he said. "Real close. The road's hot ... We'll see if it's out here."

Trooper Washington often finds the dope.

Each year, he hauls in more than 1,000 pounds of marijuana and 20,000 grams of cocaine, Texas Department of Public Safety records show. That's almost four percent of the patrol's total drug seizures each year.

In an average week, Trooper Washington sends two drug-trafficking suspects through the local court system. It's a system so taxed by drug arrests that the Legislature granted a county court wider authority to help handle the backlog.

And drug smugglers, many of whom depend on the stretch of U.S. 59 that Washington patrols, have noticed. Authorities say the smugglers are finding other routes to get dope from Houston to other parts of the nation.

"We've got undercover officers working with traffickers who hear time and time again about Barry. They all say they hate trying to get

"When I started, we didn't hardly focus on drug interdiction. But once we did, once we really started in on it, I just found that it was something I did well. It's something that does good for other people, too."

Barry Washington, DPS Trooper

past him," said Fred Little, a Tyler-based Department of Public Safety captain.

Officially, his methods are a secret. Officers in every drug-fighting agency in Texas have listened to Washington outline his techniques.

So, when Washington says the road is "hot," by which he means that a drug courier is likely to be close by, he is usually right - even on an early Sunday morning when most of the 6,000 people in this town on the Louisiana border are dressing for church.

Five minutes into his shift, Washington spots a northbound Toyota switching lanes without signaling. He dips the Caprice into the median and tracks down the offender within a minute.

He chats with the driver. She seems especially nervous. Her story starts to fall apart. Washington asks

"He understands people, and he's able to read them fairly quickly. And he's also always looking beyond the initial traffic stop. He's always looking beyond and asking questions that will help him get there."

Lt. Stan Clark, DPS

to look in the trunk. She gives him consent.

And then he goes to work. He sniffs throughout the trunk. He smells her bags and clothes. He climbs under the car and taps the gas tank. He sniffs the valve stems on the tires. He rolls down the windows. He squeezes the seats. He feels the padding on the inside walls. He opens the glove box. He smells everything again. He looks in the ashtray.

He finds the dope, a marijuana cigarette stashed inside a pack of Marlboros.

"Hardly worth messing with," Washington says.

He takes the dope and writes her a warning. Three minutes later, he's pulled over another car.

Washington's daily work routine is frenetic. If he's not assigned to a traffic accident or another detail, he's looking for drugs.

Most of his stops are for minor traffic violations - an illegal lane change, a broken turn signal, a speed that's a few miles an hour over the legal limit. Most of the time, he estimates, he spends less than four minutes with a stop. Records indicate that he issues three times more warnings than citations.

On some days, he's stopped more than 40 motorists. That's one stop for every 11 minutes of his shift.

"That's what makes him so effective," said Lt. Stan Clark, one of Washington's supervisors. "He understands people, and he's able to read them fairly quickly. And he's also always looking beyond the initial traffic stop. He's always looking beyond and asking questions that will help him get there."

Sometimes that's easy to do. Once, he said, a man told him that he was driving to Houston to visit the Alamo. One February, a man said he was driving north to pick tomatoes in Michigan, the officer said.

With others, it's harder.

Washington said he once stopped a pickup truck after noticing that the bed was not sitting as low as it should. The plywood load turned out to be a facade to hide drugs.

Another time, he followed a suspicious car more than 150 miles. But because it did not violate any traffic laws, he did not pull it over, he said.

"Call it instinct, a sixth sense, a gut hunch," Captain Little said. "Call it what you will. Barry has something that is very hard to describe. He's patient, he's subtle. He's developed something that makes him very, very good."

It's also helped that his patch of road is U.S. 59. The highway stretches from Laredo on the Mexico border north through Houston and on to Texarkana, where it meets Interstate 30. His patrols are almost always in Panola County, a rural, mostly wooded, part of the state.

"I'd say (highway) 59 is one of the major drug routes in all of the United States," said Tommy Arp, assistant commander of the DPS Narcotics Service. "We're not sure of the rhyme or reason for it, but it's one of the hottest roads out there."

Authorities say smugglers use several Texas routes to get drugs from Mexico and California to the North and Northeast. The most popular are the major interstates, where it's easier to blend with traffic. Among those corridors: I-10, I-20 and I-30 from west to east and I-35, I-45 and U.S. 59 from south to north.

Trooper Washington, now 39, married and the father of a 4-year-old daughter, was once teacher Washington.

A graduate of John Brown University in Siloam Springs, Ark., he taught health and gym to freshmen and coached football, basketball and baseball for nearly three years at McKinney, Texas, north of Dallas.

But he wanted a change, so he joined the Highway Patrol division of the DPS and was assigned to Carthage. That was 14 years ago, before the so-called war on drugs reached its crest.

"When I started, we didn't hardly focus on drug interdiction," Washington says. "But once we did, once we really started in on it, I just found that it was something I did well. It's something that does good for other people, too."

He's been featured on the television show "Real Stories of the Highway Patrol." And he was the first state trooper to receive two director's citations, one of the state's top patrol awards.

"He knows the Fourth Amendment inside and out," Little said.

"We've got undercover officers working with traffickers who hear time and time again about Barry. They all say they hate trying to get past him."

Capt. Fred Little, DPS

"He knows when something can advance from suspicion to probable cause to a search and seizure."

Washington says he studies the Fourth Amendment and tries to read as many law cases that deal with searches and seizures as he can. He's taught classes on the subject to several city and county police departments.

But he also uses modern technology: His cruiser is equipped with a video recorder. And he wears a microphone on his uniform.

"Some of the older guys don't like to use the camera," Washington said. "For whatever reason, they don't like it. But I'll tell you, when you get to court, or if you've got a big haul and the crook is trying to get out of it, that camera can save the day. It backs up everything I do."

Washington once got a rental truck carrying 1,200 pounds of marijuana. He got a load of cocaine that weighed 450 kilos. Both are among the

'G.I. Joe Museum' salutes those who served in military

By BOB TUTT
Houston Chronicle
KATY, Texas - When Norris Miertschin and other green troops in his mortar battalion learned of the D-Day invasion of France, they thought World War II was over in Europe.

"We were disappointed because we hadn't had a chance to get into the war," he recalled. "That's how dumb we were."

That misconception didn't last long. A few days later, with beachheads secured, his unit was dispatched from England to join in fierce fighting against German forces in Normandy's perilous hedgerow country.

It would see 315 consecutive days of combat.

Early in this action, Lt. Miertschin, then 22, a forward observer, had to play dead for two days in no-man's land to survive. His wife, Pauline, got word he was missing in action.

For many Americans such as Miertschin, a Port Arthur native who now lives in Katy, military service provided one of the most significant times in their lives.

That's a reason he is helping ready the new Katy Veterans Memorial Museum in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building in Katy. It honors all who have served in the military, whether in wartime or times of peace.

At least in the beginning, it will consist of one 25-foot-by-25-foot room, with displays relating to every foreign war in which American forces have fought. Its builders hope it can be expanded over time to include artifacts such as weapons and uniforms.

"We've nicknamed it the G.I. Joe Museum," said Korean War veteran Marcus Adair, commander of Katy's Floyd E. Breedlove V.F.W. Post 9182. "That means that rank doesn't matter. We're honoring all veterans." Small plaques in honor of deceased veterans, going on the walls, will make no mention of rank, he said.

"That's a democratic leveling," said Jerry Waxman, a World War II Marine veteran who is credited with conceiving the idea for the museum. An artist who formerly worked for the Houston Chronicle, he is preparing the facility's displays.

Waxman is proud that the museum will salute his son, Rodger Waxman, a Marine killed in the Vietnam War. He will invite former President Bush, a World War II Navy pilot, to attend the museum's opening, expected to come in October.

Among others supporting the museum's development are:

Bob Mosher, a World War II Marine photographer assigned to a squadron that shot pictures of all of Japan for map-making purposes. Had atomic bomb attacks not induced the Japanese to surrender, he said, those maps would have been used in the planned invasions of Japan.

Edward E. Harding, an Army Air Force intelligence officer. On Aug. 6, 1945, a B-29 Superfortress named Enola Gay dropped the first atomic bomb on Japan, devastating Hiroshima. That same day Harding flew with a flight of other B-29s that blasted Kobe, another Japanese city, with conventional bombs.

He recalled that on the flight back to their base on Tinian in the Mariana Islands, a radio message reported that a powerful new weapon had been deployed against the Japanese.

Later that day on Tinian the engineer from the Enola Gay joined Harding in a non-stop bridge game. When one player got up, someone else would always take his place. He said the engineer said nothing about the A-bomb and no one asked him anything.

Bob Orkand, the museum committee's chairman, became a career Army officer after being drafted during his senior year at Columbia University in 1955.

In early January 1968, during the Vietnam War, the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong were preparing for their crucial Tet offensive. Because another officer had been wounded, Orkand was holding down two jobs in a battalion of the 1st Cavalry Division.

Before light one morning the enemy bombarded his unit. When the sun came up, he discovered that an enemy mortar round had exploded near his tent. "Fortunately," he said, "it landed in a soft sand pile, and all its impact went into the sand. But others I knew were killed. When I saw the carnage we had suffered, I gave thanks I was not hurt."

There is a footnote to Norris Miertschin's story. He was a member of the famous 1944 class of Texas A&M. All of them in R.O.T.C. - about 850 in all - decided en masse to enter military service in the summer of 1943.

After the war, the great majority returned to A&M and completed their degrees. Miertschin, who became a chemical engineer, was one of them.

Navy jumps in to help tornado-stricken town

By MARTHA MENDOZA
Associated Press Writer
CIMARRON, N.M. (AP) - The Navy has a long history of helping people in distress, but Cimarron is 800 miles from the nearest ocean.

Five naval officers on temporary assignment at the nearby Philmont Boy Scout Ranch were the first disaster response team on the scene Thursday after a tornado struck Cimarron at 3:45 p.m., injuring five people and damaging 50 buildings.

"We are officers of the Navy, and our duty is to serve the people of this country. This situation is under control," said Ensign Richard Fischer of Cleveland.

Fischer and with Ensigns John Bachr of Salinas, Calif.; Joseph Ruzicka of Dallas; L.G. Black of Charleston, Mo.; and Stephen Platt of Pittsburgh quickly organized emergency crews and volunteers into door-to-door search parties. They coordinated initial rescues with local and state police, Colfax County sheriff's deputies and Boy Scouts. They compiled information to help Lt. Gov. Walter Bradley declare a state of emergency.

And when news media arrived, Fischer donned an information officer's vest and organized a news conference.

"It must be the first time the Navy's been here. I'm glad they came," said Cimarron resident Keith Walters.

State Public Safety Secretary Darren White, who flew in from Santa Fe to help with the disaster relief, praised the Navy's assistance.

"They really helped us because it's difficult, obviously, to respond immediately to this area," he said.

Then, with a wink, White, an Army veteran, added: "They've done a pretty good job for Navy guys."

The only apparent confusion arose over direction. When asked about the condition of an area west of the village, the ensigns looked at each other, baffled, and pointed in several different directions to indicate where west might be.

"Sorry, we get a bit mixed up when we're not near water," explained a red-faced Fischer.

The ensigns said they recently graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. They were recruiting at the Boy Scout ranch before heading to Pensacola, Fla., for flight school.

there wasn't any," said Panola County District Attorney Danny Buck Davidson. "He sends me so many cases that, on most of them, I just plead them out. He's usually got it so good that we reach a plea bargain in most of his cases."

In the late 1980s, Washington made so many stops and created such a backlog that it took an act of the legislature to rescue Panola County.

In 1991, lawmakers passed two separate measures to give the county more power over its courts. One bill gave the county court-at-law judge felony jurisdiction. In effect, it created another state district judge for the county. Another bill established a criminal district attorney in the county.

The county still has a backlog of almost 350 felony cases, partly because of Washington, Davidson said.

"If I thought of that, I'd quit working," Washington said. "I've got a good job. I do something that's interesting, and I'm able to contribute to my fellow man. That's not too bad of a job, is it?"

LONDON (AP) - Paradise apparently can cure celebrity marital blues. Bobby Brown and Whitney Houston rekindled their romance with a second honeymoon on a Caribbean island, a British newspaper reported Sunday.

Photos in the Sunday Mirror showed the top pop singer and her rapper husband hugging and frolicking with their daughter Bobbi on the island of Saint Barthelemy, a French-controlled territory among the Leeward Islands.

The four-year marriage got rocky when Brown was arrested in Atlanta for alleged drunken driving in April, accompanied by a young woman. He has been charged with assault in the past.

Brown scored hits in the late 1980s with "My Prerogative" and "On Our Own." Houston's chart toppers include "I Will Always Love You."

Cartoonist dies

Dirk West, the long-time cartoonist for the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, also did work like the cartoon above for the Brand in the 1970s. He created the Whiteface bull figure which still can be seen around Hereford today. West died Friday at the age of 67.

West, Avalanche-Journal cartoonist, passes away

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Dirk West, who chronicled more than 30 years of Southwest Conference football history with hilarious and sometimes scathing newspaper cartoons, died at his home Friday. He was 67.

Relatives say West, who still drew regularly and had a political cartoon appear in Friday's Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, suffered an apparent heart attack.

West was a local children's television pioneer in the 1950s as "Uncle Dirk" on what is now KLBK-TV, and he served one term as mayor from 1978-80 after four years as a city councilman.

However, the cartooning talent he first displayed at The University Daily, Texas Tech's student newspaper, earned him his greatest acclaim.

He created the mustachioed, gun-toting Raider Red character so associated with Tech that the school acquired the copyright. Avalanche-Journal readers could tell how many losses their school had suffered by counting the bullet holes in Red's oversized cowboy hat.

During Tech's tough football times, West was just as harsh, once suggesting that the school's double-T logo stood for "Turnover Tech." However, the Red Raiders' SWC rivals took the brunt of the barbs.

West's Texas A&M Aggie, a dopey cadet who began every sentence with "Duh" and once proclaimed Gomer Pyle as a hero, might be his second most famous character.

"I riled some people over the years," West told the Avalanche-Journal last year. "I found out a long time ago that some people take that football serious. I've gotten a lot of mail from Aggies, even some threats from Texas A&M people never to come to College Station."

A Houston Cougar who lived in a trash can, a Southern Methodist Mustang who often wore blinders and an overtly innocuous Rice Owl were among the cast of characters who summarized the action twice weekly for Lubbock readers.

Former University of Texas coach Darrell Royal appreciated West's work, even when his school's Longhorn character emerged from losing weekends with its horns broken.

"He covered Southwest Conference football with his characters and drawings as well as anybody," Royal once said. "He allowed us to laugh and to not take ourselves too seriously... an opportunity more folks ought to take advantage of."

West, a lifelong Lubbockite and owner of West Advertising, cited public safety as one of his greatest concerns, Avalanche-Journal Editor Burle Pettit said.

"Sports fans everywhere lost a special friend," said Pettit, who was sports editor when he convinced West to begin drawing for the newspaper in 1964. Pettit said that as great a caricaturist as West was, his crusades for public safety as mayor and a private citizen also set him apart.

West had just paid a visit Thursday to the newspaper, for which he also wrote occasional columns. Observers say he appeared to be in good health.

A compilation of his work, "The SWC Cartoon Book," was released last year. In its foreword, West wrote that as sad as the passing of the SWC was, Texas Tech's membership in the Big 12 was exciting.

"I can't wait," he ended his opening remarks.

West is survived by his wife, Mary, and three children.

HHS's Dean to work in McDonald's game

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Coaches dream of directing a roster loaded top to bottom with pure talent.

Hereford basketball coach Randy Dean gets his chance Monday night in Houston, when he coaches in the McDonald's All-Star Game. He'll lead the North squad into the game at Hofheinz Pavilion on the University of Houston campus.

"There's an awful lot of talent in this group," Dean said, calling from Houston after his first practice. "What sticks out immediately is their ability to score. There are 10 (out of 12) players who averaged 20 points a game for their high schools."

Stanford-bound Ryan Mendez (6-foot-7) of Burlison leads the scorers with a 39-point average, and he's one of three players who average 30-plus. Eight of the players are listed at 6-4 or taller, including Lubbock's 6-5 Ryan Jama - the only player in the game from this area.

There are six players on Dean's roster headed to major colleges, including Texas Tech, Texas, Vanderbilt and West Virginia. West Texas A&M has a recruit there, too: 6-5 Tomas Wrotten of Class A Rankin, a 29-point scorer.

RANDY DEAN
...Coaching in all-star game

The South team, coached by Aldine MacArthur's Johnnie Carter, boasts two Baylor recruits. The McDonald's game is held in conjunction with the Texas High School Coaches Association's summer convention.

The coaches for the McDonald's games are nominated and voted on by other coaches, making this a great honor for Dean.

Olympics go on despite tragedy

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - For a week, the magnificent athletes and joyous fans managed to overshadow the tardy buses and computer glitches at the Olympic Games.

All that changed early today. Terrorism struck at the heart of the Olympics for the first time since the 1972 Munich Games when a bomb exploded amid thousands of revelers in Centennial Park.

One person was killed, more than 100 were injured, and a Turkish cameraman died of a heart attack rushing to the scene. Suddenly, neither athletic competition nor too-late buses seemed to matter very much, although the games went on with heightened security.

Adding even more gloom to the suddenly downcast games were a steady rain that delayed some events and the withdrawal of Jackie Joyner-Kersey from the heptathlon, which she won at the last two Olympics.

Joyner-Kersey dropped out after just one event, the 110-meter hurdles, due to an injured right hamstring she initially hurt at the U.S. trials. She walked off the track with her husband-coach Bob Kersee before the second event, the high jump, began.

She already has said this would be her final Olympics. Joyner-Kersey also is scheduled to compete in the long jump, but her withdrawal left that event in serious doubt.

British rowers Steven Redgrave and Matthew Pinsent won a gold medal this morning in the men's coxless pairs at Lake Lanier, after the flags were lowered to half-staff and a moment of silence was observed.

Shortly after the American swimmers wrapped up their last glorious night in the pool and the Dream Team finally began living up to its hype, maimed people were sprawled in Centennial Olympic Park, the social and geographic center of the games.

"I thought it was fireworks, like a big boom, and I saw three guys laying in the street," said Terry Tyson, who witnessed the 1:25 a.m. blast. "Blood was running down the street. It was horrible."

There were no reports of athletes being injured, though some from Argentina and Cuba apparently were just a few feet away from where the bomb went off.

The park is in the heart of downtown, within walking distance of three major Olympic venues: the Omni, Georgia World Congress Center and the Georgia Dome, where the U.S. men's hoops team ended its 133-70 victory over China about Tyler Houston, Leo Gomez and Sammy Sosa gave the Colorado Rockies a taste of their own Mile High medicine.

Houston had a career-best six RBIs, Gomez drove in four runs and Sosa hit his National League-best 34th homer Friday night as the Chicago Cubs blasted the major leagues' best home team, 17-4.

Colorado's 37-17 mark at Coors Field includes two straight losses to the Cubs. For the second night in a row, the Rockies were done in by a poor performance by their starting pitcher. Roger Bailey allowed six runs and nine hits in three innings in the Rockies' 10-8 loss Thursday night to Chicago.

This time, it was Marvin Freeman who couldn't reach the fourth inning.

"This was not a game that we needed a starter to go only three innings," manager Don Baylor said. "That was a nightmarish performance."

The Cubs, who won their fourth straight, pounded out 17 hits off five pitchers. Freeman (7-7) gave up seven runs in three innings and Curtis Leskanic allowed five runs in 2 1-3 innings.

Houston, acquired June 26 in a trade with Atlanta, went 3-for-5 with his third home run. Gomez went 2-for-5 with his 16th homer, and Sosa went 3-for-4 and scored three runs.

"We started hitting well in San Francisco," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "I think we carried it over into this series and have gotten some quality pitching in our first two games with the Rockies as well."

Jaime Navarro (8-9) won for just the second time in his last six decisions, and Terry Adams pitched three innings for his second save.

Astros 4, Dodgers 3
At the Astrodome, Houston moved into first place in the Central, a half-game ahead of St. Louis.

Derek Bell doubled home the tying run and scored the game-winner on Bill Spiers' sacrifice fly in the eighth inning as the Astros won for the fourth time in their last six games in their last at-bat.

"I did my job," Dodgers reliever Mark Guthrie (2-1) said of Bell's hit. "I threw the pitch where I wanted. He just went out and hit it."

Danny Darwin (8-9) won in his second appearance since arriving Wednesday in a trade with Pittsburgh. Billy Wagner picked up his sixth save by pitching the ninth.

Expos 5, Cardinals 1
Host St. Louis lost its fifth straight and fell out of first place for the first time since July 5.

Former Cardinals farmhand Jeff Fassero (10-7) pitched a three-hitter and struck out 11, including the side in the ninth.

"I never impressed the Cardinals when I spent six years in their organization, but I never gave up on myself," Fassero said.

St. Louis, 2-7 so far on its 11-game homestand, has scored just 12 runs in its last five games. Donovan Osborne (9-6) allowed four runs in seven innings.

Braves 2, Giants 1
Tom Glavine, Brad Clontz and Mark Wohlers limited host San Francisco to eight hits, and Marquis Grissom's solo home run in the fifth inning broke a 1-1 tie.

Atlanta, whose 64-38 record is the best in the majors, increased its lead over Montreal to 8 1/2 games in the East.

Glavine (11-5) allowed seven hits, matched his season high with nine strikeouts and walked three. Wohlers pitched the ninth for his 24th save.

Mark Leiter (4-10) sustained his fifth straight loss. He hasn't won in eight starts since June 13.

Padres 3, Marlins 0, 11 innings Ken Caminiti went hitless in his first four at-bats with three strikeouts, but hit a three-run double with one out in the top of the 11th off Donn Pall (1-1).

Visiting San Diego moved into first place in the West, one game ahead of Colorado and Los Angeles.

John Flaherty of the Padres extended his hitting streak to 26 games, the longest in the majors this season, with a double in the sixth inning.

Flaherty, whose streak is the second longest in team history, tied Gabby Hartnett (1937) for the second longest by a major league catcher. Benito Santiago's 34-game streak in 1987 is tops in both categories.

Trevor Hoffman (6-4) got the final five outs.

Reds 7, Mets 4
John Smiley (9-9) allowed one run and five hits in seven innings, and helped himself with a two-run double in Cincinnati's six-run fifth inning.

The host Reds extended their winning streak to five and reached 500 (49-49) for the first time since April 21, when they were 9-9.

Paul Wilson (4-6) gave up seven runs in 4 1-3 innings as New York lost its fifth straight.

"I never thought I'd feel so good about .500. Usually, it means mediocrity," Reds manager Ray Knight said.

Pirates 7, Phillies 4
Host Pittsburgh extended its winning streak to five, and Philadelphia lost its sixth straight and 13th of 14.

Jason Kendall hit a two-run double in the eighth inning off Ricky Bottalico (2-5) to break a 4-4 tie, and Jermaine Allensworth added an RBI double.

John Ericks (2-3) got the win despite allowing the Phillies to tie it at 4 in the top of the eighth.

McGwire homers in 4th straight game

By The Associated Press
Imagine if Mark McGwire hadn't missed the first three weeks of the season.

McGwire homered for the fourth straight night, raising his season total to 38 and leading the Oakland Athletics over the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3 Friday. Even though he's played in only 80 of 104 games, he's on a pace to hit 59 homers.

"It doesn't mean anything to me. You are the ones who talk about the records," McGwire told reporters. "I'm trying to contribute any way I can."

McGwire, who missed the start of the season because of a foot injury, has seven homers in his last eight games. He didn't start Friday because he's 0-for-11 against Blue Jays starter

Juan Guzman, then hit for Rafael Bournival in the eighth and tied the score 3-3 against Paul Quantrill with the fourth pinch homer of his career, the first since Oct. 1, 1991.

"The individual stuff is nice," McGwire said. "But it's not the reason I play baseball. It never was and it never will be."

In other games, Cleveland beat Baltimore 14-9, New York routed Kansas City 15-1, Chicago beat Texas 6-2, Minnesota beat Boston 5-1, California beat Milwaukee 6-5, and Seattle beat Detroit 6-4.

At Toronto, Terry Steinbach led off the ninth with a single. One out later, Ernie Young put the Athletics ahead with his 14th homer, a two-run drive off Tony Castillo (2-2).

Buddy Groom (5-0) pitched two-thirds of an inning, and Billy Taylor got three outs for his 11th save.

Indians 14, Orioles 9
Albert Belle went 4-for-5 with a three-run homer, and visiting Cleveland had 20 hits in a game that featured seven home runs.

Belle's performance came one night after he had three hits, two homers and five RBIs against Baltimore. He is 27-for-58 (.466) with eight homers and 25 RBIs in his last 17 games.

Jim Thome and Brian Giles also homered for the Indians, 11-5 since the All-Star break.

White Sox 6, Rangers 2
Wilson Alvarez (13-5) scattered four hits and struck out 11 in eight innings as he stopped a four-game losing streak.

Chicago won for just the second time in nine games during an 11-game homestand. Texas has lost six of nine.

Darren Oliver (8-4) allowed all six runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Mariners 6, Tigers 4
Jay Buhner drove in three runs and Joey Cora hit a two-run single at the Kingdome.

Sterling Hitchcock (10-4) gave up four runs and eight hits in six-plus innings. Rafael Carmona pitched out of a bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the seventh, and Mike Jackson pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

A.J. Sager (2-2) gave up seven hits and five runs in four innings.

midnight. The Olympic Village, where most of the athletes are staying, is about a mile away from the bomb site.

Francois Carrard, director general of the International Olympic Committee, vowed early today that "the games will go on."

There was a moment of silence at all Olympic venues and flags were lowered to half-staff. Security was heightened at all venues, with spectators reporting two-hour waits to enter some events.

The last fatalities connected to an Olympic Games were the 11 Israeli athletes killed by terrorists in Munich.

"It's horrible - the worst fears," said Bob Brennan, a spokesman for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games.

But the Olympics were not interrupted and tonight, the world's fastest man and woman will be determined when the 100-meter finals are held at Olympic Stadium. Also on tap for Day 9 of the games: the finals of beach volleyball and third-round tennis featuring a match between Monica Seles and Gabriela Sabatini.

The women's softball team, which suddenly looks vulnerable, plays China tonight, trying to rebound from only its second defeat in international play since 1986.

"You come here and want to put on a show, to dominate," said pitcher Lisa Fernandez, who lost a perfect game - and the game itself - when Australia's Joanne Brown hit a two-out, two-strike, two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th for a 2-1 victory Friday. "And all of a sudden, the brakes went out."

The brakes are working just fine for the Dream Team, which finally came up with the kind of slamfest everyone was demanding of the American multi-millionaires while they yawned through their first three games, winning by an average of "only" 28 points.

The Dream Team set an American record for points in an Olympic game in the victory over China, breaking the mark of 127 reached twice in 1992 by the original Dream Team.

For the first time in the Olympics, the NBA stars actually appeared to be having fun before a record crowd of 34,417. They giggled on the bench.

They hung from the rim after dunks. And Charles Barkley spelled out the letters "Y-M-C-A" while the Village People song played during a timeout.

Amy Van Dyken was having fun, too. She won a record-setting fourth gold medal on the final night of swimming, leading the underrated American team to its greatest gold medal rush since the Los Angeles Games.

No U.S. woman - not Janet Evans, Joyner-Kersey, Mary Lou Retton or Bonnie Blair - had ever won four gold medals at a single Olympics. Irish swimmer Michelle Smith's bid for four individual wins was stopped in the 200 butterfly, where she picked up a bronze to go with her three golds.

Van Dyken joined her teammates to win 13 golds and 26 total medals in Atlanta, the best performance for the Americans since they won 21 golds at the 1984 games, which were boycotted by most of the Soviet bloc.

"Thanks America for a dream come true," said a banner unfurled by the world record-setting 400 medley relay team, drawing a roar from the crowd of 15,000 that included former President Carter.

Earlier in the day, Carter took in the first day of track and field, the glamour sport of the games, and watched Michael Johnson begin his quest for a historic double.

Adorned in gold shoes, which he hopes will soon match the two medals around his neck, Johnson appeared to be out for a weekend jog as he passed his first test in the men's 400 meters.

"I'm trying to get to the final as easily as possible," said Johnson, who slowed to a trot at the finish line and was passed by a Sri Lankan.

Ato Boldon of Trinidad guaranteed a world record tonight after he and Frankie Fredericks of Namibia eclipsed 10 seconds in qualifying for the men's 100. Gail Devers and Gwen Torrence advanced to the women's 100 semifinals, but the 31-year-old Torrence grabbed at her right thigh after each heat.

Randy Barnes won the shot put title with a toss of 70 feet, 11 inches on his last attempt. Fellow American John Godiva had to settle for a silver.

Through Friday, the Americans topped the medals table with 39 (16 gold, 18 silver, 5 bronze), followed by Russia with 28 (13-9-6).

Of course, medal standings no longer seem to have much importance at these games.

DEAN

"All of the coaches here are real proud for Randy," Hereford football coach and athletic director Craig Yencer said. "That's one of the highest honors, because it's voted on by coaches - that really makes it a special deal. It's a credit to what Randy's done with the basketball program. Randy's not only a fine coach, but he's a fine man. That's important to all of us."

The honor for Dean means a working vacation for several others from Hereford. Dean took his whole crew to Houston: assistant coaches Key Harrison and Rodney Allen, head trainer Ed "Doc" Morrow, student trainer Oscar Rangel and student manager London Morris.

Dean is the second coach to represent Hereford in the THSCA all-star game; W.H. "Cuby" Kitchens coached in the game in 1961. Kitchens said two of his players from that era played in the game: Jim Curtisinger and Steve Slagle.

Renfro enters Hall of Fame as happy man

By JEAN-JACQUES TAYLOR
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - On a crisp January morning earlier this year, Mel Renfro opened the door to his Portland, Ore., home and stared in wonderment at the thick blanket of snow covering his neighborhood.

"It was so beautiful and the snow was so fresh that it seemed to be an omen," Renfro said. "It was a winter wonderland, and it was a magnificent setting for something good to happen."

Maybe this would be the day the Pro Football Hall of Fame would accept him, he said to himself. Four times in 14 years Renfro had been a finalist for induction into the Hall of Fame. Each time he had failed to get enough votes from the selection committee.

"I was very bitter the first two times I was nominated because I thought I had the credentials. It really hurt me and my family," Renfro said. "I assumed I was going into the Hall of Fame, especially after Bob Lilly and Roger Staubach got in. I thought it was just a matter of time."

Renfro didn't want to wait for a phone call, so he drove to work hoping it would relieve the tension. When it didn't, he returned home.

Moments after arriving, a Chicago radio station called with good news: He had been accepted. And Saturday, Renfro will become the seventh member of the Cowboys and 186th person inducted into the Hall of Fame.

"Since then I've been on cloud nine," said Renfro, who has asked former coach Tom Landry to introduce him. "It's like an adrenaline flow that never ends."

For Renfro, life after football has been an arduous journey. Bad business ventures, personal bankruptcy and a host of other personal problems have plagued him since he retired in 1977.

Retirement should have been a time for Renfro to capitalize on the name he created for himself by playing in the Pro Bowl each of his first 10 seasons, intercepting a club-record 52 passes and playing in four Super Bowls. It should have been the best time of his life, but it wasn't.

After retiring, Renfro said he was disappointed the Cowboys didn't offer him an assistant coaching job as they did for former players Dan Reeves, Mike Ditka and Jerry Tubbs.

Instead, the Cowboys hired him as a scout and cut his salary nearly 90 percent to $700 per month. Assistant coaches also worked for relatively paltry salaries in those days.

"I could have seen him in that kind of role, because he was smart and he understood the game," Landry said. "It just didn't work out."

Renfro said he quit his job with the Cowboys after a year. He started a fast-food chicken restaurant, but it failed, forcing him to file for personal bankruptcy to hold off creditors.

His financial problems led to his failure to pay $8,582 in child support, and he wound up spending two days in jail.

"My life was pure hell," he said. "There were no opportunities. I couldn't get a job. I couldn't get a loan to start a business."

"There were players stepping out of the NFL with no more business expertise than I had and they were getting lucrative jobs."

In 1983, Renfro began a sojourn that took him to Los Angeles, Portland, St. Louis, Portland, Las Vegas and finally back to Portland. During that time, he coached in the United States Football League and the NFL with the St. Louis Cardinals. He sold cars, owned a bike shop, a record store and a restaurant-style lounge.

"From a business standpoint, he tended to trust people too much," former Cowboy president Tex Schramm said. "My feeling is that he was too easily influenced and he got into a lot of things that just weren't good business ventures."

Renfro returned to Portland four years ago with a dream. He wanted to revitalize the northeast Portland community where he grew up.

"I looked back at where I had been and all of the things I had accomplished," Renfro said, "and none of it seemed to mean a whole lot."

When Renfro retired in 1977, he had dominated the game like few other defensive backs.

The sinewy, 6-0, 187-pounder with sprinter's speed helped mold the Cowboys from a mediocre team into a perennial championship contender.

He played in eight NFL and NFC Championship games. He ranks 12th all-time in kickoff returns with a 26.4 average and 16th in interceptions.

Impressed with his offensive skills, Landry used Renfro as a running back and receiver for the first few games of the 1966 season. He was even named Most Valuable Player of the 1970 Pro Bowl after returning two punts for touchdowns.

That's why the question remains of why it took so long for Renfro to get into the Hall of Fame.

"I asked the question a million times," said Gil Brandt, former Cowboys player personnel director. "There were players in the Hall of Fame who were clearly not better than Mel."

Len Casanova, Renfro's college coach, wrote letters to the Hall of Fame on Renfro's behalf.

Renfro said his past may have served as a roadblock. He refers specifically to a lawsuit he filed 27 years ago and being implicated in a ticket-scalping scheme in 1981.

In 1969, Renfro sued a North Dallas duplex for racial discrimination and a violation of the Fair Housing Act of 1968. Renfro said the Cowboys asked him not to file the suit, though Schramm testified in his behalf.

Renfro later won the first permanent injunction in Dallas to enforce the Fair Housing Act.

In 1981, Renfro was implicated in a scheme to scalp Super Bowl tickets. Renfro said he refused to take the entire blame and implicated others, upsetting the Cowboys' front office.

Landry said he thinks Renfro was simply overlooked as the Hall of Fame chose to enshrine former Cowboys Lilly, Staubach, Tony Dorsett and Randy White.

"We're all prejudiced about our players when it comes to something like that," Landry said. "There are a lot of deserving players that don't ever make it."

Tom DeSylvia, Renfro's high school football coach, said he has never seen a better athlete than Renfro.

He provided two examples.

Once, he said, Renfro helped Jefferson win a track meet by winning the pole vault, although it was the first time he competed in that event.

Then there was the time all-city wrestler Fred Hill tried to show Renfro his best moves. Moments later, Renfro pinned Hill.

Like his three older brothers, Renfro received most of his acclaim on the football field. He teamed with Terry Baker, who later won the Heisman Trophy at Oregon State, to lead Jefferson to 34 consecutive wins and three consecutive state championships.

Renfro could have picked any college, but he narrowed his choices to Oregon or Oregon State.

"I was an introvert, a homebody and I didn't want to go far away," he said.

Renfro liked Oregon State's laid-back atmosphere. Oregon had too much pomp and circumstance.

"I was really worried about whether we'd get him because his high school coach went to Oregon State, and Mel was so quiet that I wasn't sure where we stood," Casanova said.

Casanova convinced Renfro's father that Mel should attend Oregon.

Renfro became one of the best players in school history.

He rushed for 1,540 yards, a 5.5 average per carry, and scored 23 touchdowns. He caught 41 passes for a 15.7 average and averaged 26.7 yards on 23 kickoffs and 12.9 yards on 10 punt returns.

"I don't think you ever know in college that someone is going to be a Hall of Famer," Baker said. "But we knew by the end of his junior year that he was going to be in the NFL."

Renfro probably never should have played for the Cowboys. He should have been long gone before they drafted him in the second round.

Ironically, President John F. Kennedy's assassination helped bring Renfro to Dallas. After Kennedy was killed, the Oregon-Oregon State game was postponed.

"I felt touched and hurt by what had happened," Renfro said. "I was also dependent over the pressures of being married while I was in college and the pressure of performing on the football field and in the classroom."

Depressed and drunk, Renfro said he exploded. He slammed his fist into a mirror and a jagged piece of glass sliced his wrist.

"One of the doctors told me that if it had been any deeper, I would have cut a vein and probably bled to death," Renfro said.

Renfro, who needed surgery to repair his wrist, missed Oregon's bowl game. Renfro said the Cowboys then started rumors that made other teams reluctant to draft him.

The American Football League's Oakland Raiders didn't draft him until the ninth round.

"In those days people didn't have the technology they have now," Brandt said. "The league knew my feelings about Mel, and when we didn't draft him in the first round, we probably could have gotten him in the third round."

Landry moved Renfro to free safety the week before the Cowboys' first pre-season game. He played so well Landry started him in the opener.

"Mel didn't have the body strength to take the pounding that a running back takes," Brandt said.

Rose Bowl agreement doesn't solve problem

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
AP Football Writer

It's Saturday, Nov. 28, 1998. Three teams - let's say Nebraska, Penn State and Tennessee - are undefeated and ranked 1-2-3.

The Cornhuskers are playing in the Big 12 title game, the Volunteers in the SEC title game and the Nittany Lions have already won the Big Ten.

ABC's new bowl alliance is about to kick in and the Orange Bowl has the first true national title game, No. 1 vs. No. 2 at Joe Robbie Stadium on Jan. 2, 1999.

Nebraska wins. Tennessee wins. All three teams are undefeated, untied and on Monday, ranked 1-2-3 by the writers' and coaches' polls.

What happens now? Let's see. 1 plays 2 and 3 goes to ... the Rose Bowl?

So where's the clear-cut champion being promised by all these conference commissioners and TV executives?

You're close, guys, but not quite there.

Sure, it's great the Rose Bowl finally stepped off its pedestal and brought the Big Ten and Pac-10 with it into the bowl alliance. Now, the six top conferences and Notre Dame form a cozy group being touted as the "super alliance."

Is this what college football really needs? For now, OK, but there's still too many hitches. If it isn't too many undefeated teams, it'll be not enough undefeated teams. If it isn't a conflict between the polls, it'll be a bowl sniping about not getting a sellable matchup.

In order to end all this who, what, where, and why stuff, here's a proposal that will end all this madness:

Let's have a playoff!
 Of all the coaches who gave their blessing when ABC announced its four-year deal to match No. 1 vs. No. 2 - with the Rose Bowl a willing partner - only Florida's Steve Spurrier made it clear he still favors a playoff.

Each of the six conferences in the alliance would have a title game the last weekend of November, kind of like a mini Marc. Madness.

Those six champs, plus the two teams that either have the best records or are ranked highest, would get wild-card berths and fill out the field.

After a one-week rest (final exams, you know), the playoff would commence the weekend of Dec. 12-13, 1998, at four bowl sites - for example, the Sugar, Cotton, Gator and Florida Citrus, or whoever antes up the most money to help ABC recoup some of the $500 million it reportedly is spending on its new deal.

The next week, it's on to the semifinals at two bowl sites (of course, three bowls will be willing to pay even more than the others and they will form a semifinal-final championship rotation). Let's use the Fiesta and Rose for the semis this time.

The winners then get two weeks off while the rest of the minor bowl games are played from Dec. 22-Jan. 1. That would give the Sun, Liberty and Peach bowls a nice window of opportunity.

Finally, on Jan. 2, 1999, the game for the national championship.

She currently attends WTAMU in pursuit of a bachelor's degree in elementary education. London serves as a leader in the Cutting Edge Youth Ministry.

Northcutt received second place at the Texas Forensic Association state tournament in San Antonio in 1994. She was a member of the Texas Educational Theater Association from 1992 to 1994.

Her stage credits include "Fortinbras" and "The Good Doctor" at WTAMU, and "Annie Get Your Gun" at Texas Tech. She also performed in the Canyon Follies production of "My Fair Lady."

Northcutt is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wake Northcutt of Hereford.

Written by Pulitzer-Prize winner Paul Green, "TEXAS" uses song, dance, dialogue, colorful costumes and spectacular special effects to tell this story of early settlers in the Lone Star State.

The show's setting in magnificent Palo Duro Canyon adds to the depth and drama of the action as cowboys ride the range, Indians stand stoically on the craggy face of the canyon and progress makes its path across the prairie.

The internationally acclaimed outdoor drama is in its 31st season at Pioneer Amphitheater.

"TEXAS" plays nightly except Sundays as a professional cast of 80 singers, dancers, actors and musicians tell the colorful story of pioneer life on the Texas high plains.

Green wrote the play specifically for the Palo Duro Canyon State Park setting beneath the 600 foot canyon wall in the amphitheater.

This setting, combined with spectacular special effects, dazzles audiences nightly. A fierce thunderstorm explodes with a startling crash of lightning. Fireworks color the night sky during the finale, and a state of the art digital sound system makes even the crickets wonder what's real and what's simulated.

Since its beginning in 1966, the popularity of "TEXAS" continues to grow. A total of 2.6 million people have enjoyed this rough and tumble tale. Each summer visitors come from every state in the nation and almost 100 foreign countries.

Local EN C.A.R.E. chapter sets meeting with city, school officials

A drunk teenager spins his car out of control and runs into a van carrying a family of five. All the members of the family die, but the driver survives, haunted forever with the guilt of what he has done.

Accidents like this impact dozens of people, from the families of the victims and the driver to the law officers at the scene, to everyone who reads the grisly details in the community newspaper.

One group of professionals who has had to deal with the results of accidents caused by drunk or drug-impaired underage drivers has decided to do something about the growing problems.

Nurses at Hereford Regional Medical Center are opening a chapter of EN C.A.R.E., a special group dedicated to educating youngsters about the danger of mixing drugs, alcohol and driving.

The Hereford chapter, the first one in the Panhandle, has set a meeting with city and school officials for Aug. 1 to discuss the program.

Barbara Venable, one of three EN C.A.R.E. trainers in the state of Texas, will be the guest speaker at the meeting. Ms. Venable has been an EN C.A.R.E. nurse for eight years.

One Aug. 2, HRMC nurses will host a training session to learn how to conduct the EN C.A.R.E. teaching sessions. The meeting is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County Library. Nurses from Amarillo and Dimmitt will also attend the meeting.

Healthcare professionals who wish to participate in the program must meet rigorous requirements. Donna Kemp, RN, BSN, director of nursing at HRMC said.

"Emergency nurses, both LVNs and RNs, paramedics or EMTs currently working in emergency care areas may take the training," Mrs. Kemp said. "The person must have no previous DWI/DUI convictions, and must have a strong commitment to bringing this program to our children."

EN C.A.R.E. (Emergency Nurses Cancel Alcohol Related Emergencies) is a national non-profit organization whose primary goal is to educate both students and parents about underage alcohol use and the tragic consequences of drinking and driving. The group was started by two emergency room nurses in Massachusetts who were looking for a way to slow down the "senseless maiming" caused by drinking and driving.

"The statistics on drinking and driving are appalling: more than 17,000 people die every year, 2 out of every 5 Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some time in their lives, and 1.2 million are injured every year," said Rosemary Barrett, RN, coordinator of the program at Hereford Regional Medical Center.

"That should get everybody's attention that this is a serious problem that will affect all of us eventually."

Ms. Barrett said that EN C.A.R.E. is different from the very successful DARE program. "Our primary goal is education," she said. "We use tapes, videos and slides of teenagers who have been involved in alcohol-related incidents. Some of the kids were drivers, and some were passengers in vehicles that were in wrecks. They tell extremely poignant stories that will touch the hearts of all who hear them. We think youngsters relate better to someone their own age than they do to adults."

Ms. Barrett explained that professionally-trained emergency medical personnel also volunteer their time to talk with students.

"The medical people have a thorough knowledge of the medical and social consequences of alcohol-related crashes," she said. "The kids in the audience understand immediately that we really know what we're talking about. I frankly don't know a single emergency healthcare person who has not been touched by caring for victims of drunk drivers. It's one of the most traumatic parts of our job."

The school board, superintendent, police chief, and sheriff have all been invited to the Aug. 1 meeting. "Our goal is to begin the program in the junior high," she said. "We hope to reach all the students and their families."

An additional program, called TAKE CARE, is directed at people over the age of 65. "This training will focus on interaction of medication, alcohol use and abuse, drinking and driving, and safety belt use," Ms. Barrett said. "This is a 60-minute slide presentation that will be available to senior citizen groups. The combination of these two programs will allow us to reach two important at-risk segments of the driving public."

For more information about EN C.A.R.E. and TAKE CARE, contact Rosemary Barrett at HRMC, 806-364-2141, ext. 295 or 300.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

A county, or any area's, development and growth are usually reflected in their school system. Such is true of Deaf Smith County and of Hereford.

The schools in our county have grown from an humble beginning in a one room school, Womble, located in the northeast corner of the county, in 1893, to a school system in Hereford and Walcott, which includes the public schools and three private schools. These schools employ over 600 and reach over 4,000 students. There have been over 60 schools scattered throughout the county during these 103 years of growth and change.

The first school building in Hereford, moved from old Dawn in 1899, had one room and was situated at the corner of Eighth and Dewey Streets. There were two teachers and 53 students. A square two-story building was built on the site of old Central in 1900.

In 1902, Hereford Christian College opened with 250 students. The college was later called Add-Ran College and then Panhandle Christian College. The college closed its doors in 1911 and the building remained vacant until 1915 when it was purchased by the Hereford school board and used as a high school until a new building, now Stanton, was built in 1926.

Deaf Smith County reported 439 students in the 1905 year with 328 in Hereford; Union School, 9; Buttrum, 13; Day, 25; Files, 17; Coker, 4; Wyche, 5; Ward, 4; Walcott, 9; Summerfield, 12; County Line, 9 and Dawn, 5.

By 1911, there were 20 schools in the county. By 1914, the enrollment of Hereford schools was 507 with only 12 teachers. In 1916, the high school students moved into the college building that had been purchased for $18,000. 1919 brought the first use of free textbooks. The average enrollment for the Hereford schools during the 1920-1924 school years was 495, with 25 teachers -- 19 were certified.

A bond issue for $128,000 was passed for the building of Stanton School, the new high school, in 1925 and the building was occupied in 1926. This building was Hereford High School until the present building was opened at mid-term of 1954. Junior high students had been using barrack buildings from the POW Camp for classrooms and they moved into the Stanton building as the high school students moved out. The barrack buildings served as lunchrooms and as overflow for the grade schools for several more months. Stanton Junior High was named for H. V. Stantoff, the first principal there.

Shirley Elementary was opened in 1949, Parkview Negro School opened in 1953, Aikman in 1956 and Northwest in 1959. From 1960-64, classrooms were added to several buildings, the football stadium was moved to its present location and Dawn, the only remaining country school was closed, as was Parkview. From 1965-69, Bluebonnet School and La Plata Junior High opened. Tierra Blanca opened in 1969 and West Central was completed for the 1975 year. Old Central was closed for classroom use. The old Central building was demolished during the 1995-96 school year, thus bringing an era of Hereford's school history to a close.

Today the Hereford Independent School District includes Deaf Smith County and parts of Parmer and Castro counties. There are classes for K-6 at Walcott and kindergarten classes at First Baptist Church. Private schools in Hereford include St. Anthony's, Nazarene Academy and Community School.

One hundred and three years of growing...and who knows what tomorrow may bring? History may be the record of life's yesterdays, but there is always the promise of tomorrow!

Friendships multiply joys and divide griefs. -- H.G. Bohn

From The Heart

I would like to dedicate this poem to my Dad, Norman Brown, who passed away five years ago on July 27th, 1991. Both of my brothers and their families, my five sisters and their families, my Mom, my little sister, and myself miss him dearly.

A Tribute To Our Dad

God looked around his garden and he found an empty place.
He then looked down upon the Earth and saw your tired face.
He put his arms around you and lifted you to rest.
God's garden must be beautiful as he always takes the best.
He knew you were suffering, and he knew that you were in pain,
He knew that you would never get well on Earth again.
He saw the road was getting rough and the hills were hard to climb.
So he closed your weary eyelids and whispered, "Peace Be Thine."
It broke our hearts to lose you, but you didn't go alone.
For part of us went with the day God called you home.

New Arrivals

Michael and Vicki Hacker of Amarillo are the proud parents of a son, Hayden Eugene, born July 25 in High Plains Baptist Hospital.

He weighed 7 pounds, 8 ounces and was 19-3/4 inches long.

Grandparents are Morris and Gwen Hacker of Hereford and Frank and Hazel Britt of Friona.

Red Cross classes will be held at Aquatic Center

A Red Cross lifeguarding class will be held at the Hereford Aquatic Center Aug. 1-4. The cost of the class is $50.

Thought for Today: "Verily, when the day of judgment comes, we shall not be asked what we have read, but what we have done." -- Thomas a Kempis, German theologian (1380-1471).

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Don Cherry, of Del City, Okla.

Jana Stotts, sister of the bride, of Amarillo was matron of honor. Best man was C.L. (Red) Edwards, grandfather of the groom, of Flomot.

Serving as ushers and candle lighters were Darrell Billings, brother-in-law of the groom, of Canadian, and Shawn Stotts, brother-in-law of the bride, of Amarillo.

Her waist-length veil of illusion, borrowed from her sister, was attached to a crown accented with pearls and a large tulle pouf.

The cascading bridal bouquet of burgundy carnations, gladioli, astermarians and ivy with a navy blue and burgundy bow was accented with a string of pearls which belonged to the grandmother of the groom. The bouquet was carried on a Bible belonging to the mother of the bride, which she carried in her wedding and the sister of the bride carried in her wedding.

The bride wore a strand of pearls and pearl earrings borrowed from Ann Newbill and a blue lace garter with pearl hearts.

The matron of honor wore a navy blue, tea length dress of shantung silk in an off-the-shoulder design. The flower girl wore a tea length dress of burgundy velvet.

The matron of honor carried an arm bouquet of burgundy carnations, gladioli, astermarians and ivy tied with navy blue and burgundy ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

Servers were Michelle Drummond of Amarillo, Denna Vardeman of Hereford and Jamie Kelley of Abilene.

The bride's table was covered with an ivory cloth and featured the bridal bouquet as a centerpiece. The three-tiered white cake was frosted with ivory icing and decorated with wheat, cowboy hats and horseshoes and topped with a cowboy bride and groom.

The groom's table was also covered with an ivory cloth and held a chocolate cake in a horseshoe shape. The table was surrounded by a small wooden fence decorated with straw hats and ropes.

Following a wedding trip to Colorado, the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

The bride works in inventory control as receiving clerk for Austin Distributing and Manufacturing in Amarillo.

The groom is a heavy equipment operator for Hulcher Professional Services in Amarillo.

Out of town guests represented Flomot, Canadian, Borger, Oklahoma City, Okla., and Brownville, Minn.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) - Tom Arnold resents ex-wife Roseanne comparing him to O.J. Simpson.

Arnold is particularly upset about abuse allegations Roseanne made against him in the June issue of Ladies Home Journal, where she compares their failed marriage to that of Simpson and Nicole Brown Simpson.

"We did not have a perfect marriage, and I am not a perfect husband. But as far as the violence goes, it never happened," Arnold says in the July 21 issue of TV Guide.

In the Journal story, Roseanne said she felt she "would be dead if I stayed with Tom." Arnold denies Roseanne's charges of physical abuse.

"I said many stupid things; I did many dumb things," Arnold said. "But her comparing herself to Nicole Brown Simpson, who was brutally murdered, is ... it's an abomination."

Simpson was acquitted last October of murder in the fatal stabbings of his ex-wife and Ron Goldman.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who lives in Danbury, Conn., and have been reading your column ever since I was 11. I understand almost everything you write about, but please tell me, what is Burma Shave? It is not in the dictionary. All I could find is Burma -- a country in Southeast Asia now called Myanmar. I asked my parents, who are 43 years old, and they have never heard of Burma Shave either. Please explain. -- Betty, A Longtime Reader

Dear Betty: Long before electric razors and disposable blades came along, men had to shave with a cream that lathered up. One of the most popular of these shaving creams was Burma Shave.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

People who sleep late certainly miss a lot.

Now I admit to "sleeping in" until 7:30 or 8 sometimes on the weekends, but as a general rule I am an early riser -- partially from necessity and partially because I like mornings.

There is something I find specially appealing about getting up before daylight and watching the day begin as the sun slowly rises.

It's a new day--a new beginning. The whole world seems clean, fresh and renewed.

I also enjoy the morning ritual of the smell of coffee brewing and sipping that first cup while I wake up.

There are other smells associated only with early morning, such as the sharp aroma of bacon frying and the soft, warm smell of homemade biscuits baking.

As a youngster growing up on a farm, I got up early, even in the summer. There were chores to be done so there was no time for sleeping late.

I always knew when it was time to get up before my mother ever called us, because I could smell breakfast cooking.

Maybe breakfast is a big part of the reason I enjoy mornings. I enjoy breakfast.

Even though breakfast was often bacon, eggs and biscuits, we enjoyed other "morning" foods like pancakes with homemade maple syrup.

There was another breakfast item we considered a special treat that we also ate with the maple syrup. We called it "Aunt Ruth's Moon Cake."

Now I'm sure there is another name for this recipe, but I've never heard it.

We learned how to make this particular delicacy from my mother's aunt whose name was Ruth, so her name became permanently attached to the title of the recipe.

She was the one who dubbed the recipe "Moon Cake" because the finished product appears to have craters like the moon. It's actually a large pancake-like treat that is baked in the oven.

AUNT RUTH'S MOON CAKE
Melt half a stick of margarine in a heavy iron skillet.

Meanwhile, beat 2 eggs well; add 1/2 cup milk, 1/2 cup flour; pinch of salt and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Mix well.

Pour into melted butter in hot skillet. Bake in 425 degree oven for 10-15 minutes or until top is puffed and beginning to brown.

Serve with syrup, jam or preserves as desired.

For those of you who are more health-conscious (as my mother was years ago), the following footnote is on her original recipe: I cheat and use about half the margarine the recipe calls for.

When you remove the Moon Cake from the oven the top will be puffed, but as it cools the top slowly falls giving the crater effect that gave this recipe its name.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Since I have reached the age when the strength in my fingers has lessened, my daughter gave me a pair of small pliers with rubber-coated handles that fits right in my utensil drawer.

They are especially helpful to grip the plastic pull-tabs on milk and juice containers and the foil, plastic or paper liners on chips, cheese spreads, etc. that have small pull-tabs.

The pliers can be expanded to open vinegar, soy sauce, flavorings and other jars with small lids. This would also make a thoughtful gift to anyone who is past 65. -- Barbara Kelly, Abilene, Texas

CATALOG BUYING

Dear Heloise: We all get enticing catalogs in the mail. I look at them if I have time and turn the corners down on pages that have things that interest me.

Then I put them in my "think about it" pile (a basket near my desk). After a week or so I go back for another look. I often find my original impulse to buy has abated. If not, then I go ahead and order. This procedure has saved me a lot of unneeded purchases. -- Jeanne Rueter, Valparaiso, Ind.

Both of us! I do the same and it's amazing how later that "must-have" item isn't so must-have. Write anytime. -- Heloise

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

One of the fond memories I have of growing up is the wonders found in the buffet drawer. Inside that drawer under great-grandmother's crocheted table cloths are the scrapbooks my mom and dad kept while they were growing up.

Being a cowboy, dad never struck me as being the sentimental type, so I was surprised that he even had a scrapbook. Located just inside the front cover of the scrapbook was a picture of a cowboy dressed in chaps and a deep red shirt. He was holding a hat in one hand and a rope in the other. You could tell he was a real cowboy by the white forehead.

You know what I mean, the suntanned face with the hat line that begins about halfway up the forehead with the lightest area located at the hairline. The man had his head ducked just a little with a shy grin on his face.

That expression reminded me of my dad. I asked who he was and why the picture was in the book and all dad said was, "That was a real cowboy and a man that I admired, his name is Will Rogers."

The book American Original: A Life of Will Rogers by Ray Robinson was purchased to help satisfy my curiosity. I wanted to get to know the man a little better. Mr. Robinson says, "Will...projected kindness, even as he mildly scolded the hypocritical and the self-righteous."

Will preferred to leave life's underdogs, those who had suffered in their daily struggles to put food on the table, untouched and his decency and generosity always prevailed.

James Whitmore, who has played the role of Will Rogers, had this to say about him. "He was one helluva man for any time, a prescient fellow with all the right gut instincts. Like heliotrope, he always wanted to face the sun."

Will once commented, "when I die, my epitaph, or whatever you call it -- those signs on the gravestones -- is going to read: 'I joked about almost every prominent man of my time but I never met one I didn't like!' I am so proud of that, I can hardly wait to die so it can be carved. And when you come around to my grave I'll be sitting there proudly reading it."

Doesn't that sound like someone you would like to know?

Another biography available this week is The Awakening Heart: My Continuing Journey to Love by Betty J. Eadie.

Betty is the author of Embraced by the Light in which she described her inspiring near-death experience.

The Awakening Heart takes Betty's followers to new levels of spiritual discovery as she expands on the invaluable knowledge and insights she has received through subsequent visions and visitations. Betty's message of love is the beginning and continues with people truly serving others, it is through this service that one continues to grow spiritually.

Embraced by the Light made the New York Times Bestseller list and it is predicted that The Awakening Heart will do the same.

Larry Dossey, M.D., author of the best seller Healing Words has a new book entitled Prayer is Good Medicine. According to Dr. Dossey prayer works even across great distances.

He also says seeking general guidance through prayer can be more valuable than asking for something specific.

In the book, Dr. Dossey illustrates how adopting a compassionate, sincere, and loving attitude will allow your prayers to be truly beneficial. Prayers are always answered Dossey assures us, even though the answer may not be yes.

"I am not suggesting that it is the only medicine or that it must be relied on instead of other medicines...Prayer, medications and surgery -- they are all a blessing, a grace, a gift, why not use all of them, with reverence and gratitude?" says Dr. Dossey.

If you are interested and want to look deeper into the scientific issues surrounding prayer please consult the book Healing Words. More than 130 scientific studies have been conducted in the general area of "healing," many of which employed prayer. In over half of the studies, results strongly indicated that prayer works. While science shows that prayer works, it is unable to show how it works, thus the sacred mystery remains.

Throughout the book Dr. Dossey's reflections are supported by studies proving the link between prayer and health, and stories from doctors, patients, relatives and friends who share their personal experiences with prayer.

No matter what form your faith takes, this book will help give you a new appreciation of prayer and the tools to help you make better use of it.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent-FCS
A recent outbreak of botulism food poisoning in El Paso connected to an ethnic potato based dip has caused increased emphasis on preventing this serious foodborne illness.

Botulism-causing Clostridium botulinum bacteria are everywhere, being very prevalent in soil and marine sediments worldwide. Their spores are often found on the surfaces of fruits and vegetables and in seafood. The bacteria are dangerous because they produce toxin as they grow and reproduce. Botulinum toxin is one of the most dangerous poisonous substances known.

Once in the body, the toxin binds to nerve endings at the point where they nerve endings join muscles. This prevents nerves from signaling the muscles to contract and results in weakening and paralysis. This paralysis starts from the cranium down, affecting many vital body systems, including the muscles that regulate breathing.

The condition in which C. botulinum spores grow and produce toxin is absence of oxygen, low acidity and temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees F. This toxin producing situation can easily occur in improperly preserved home canned foods or improperly stored prepared foods.

In the United States, one of the most common culprits in foodborne botulism is home canned food, especially vegetables such as asparagus, green beans and peppers. These are all low-acid foods that must be canned in a pressure canner, as should all vegetables, meats, poultry and seafood.

The basic recommendation from the U.S. Department of Agriculture is to can these foods in a pressure canner because the pressure in the canner creates a high enough temperature to kill the spores of the bacteria. County Extension agents throughout the state have specifics of these recommendations for home canning of low acid foods. Ask for bulletins L2216, L2217 and L2215.

Also, foods cooked at home should not be left at temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees F. This is the temperature danger zone at which most bacteria grow rapidly. An extra precaution is to boil home canned low-acid foods for 10 minutes (at sea level) before consuming.

Commercial foods also have been implicated in outbreaks of botulism. Another precaution that consumers should take is reading labels and being careful to refrigerate foods that indicate so on the label.

Finally, consumers should always be wary of any canned items that are rusty, swollen or otherwise damaged. The best advice is "If in doubt, throw it out."

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My 10-year-old is a baseball fanatic. He is a good pitcher, and he is always asked to pitch in local youth leagues. I think he is overdoing it. My husband thinks I am being overprotective. What do you think? — Mrs. L.R.

ANSWER: The mechanics of pitching a ball argue for your concern. The moment of release of the ball completes a complicated process. There is a powerful downward thrust of the fingers and wrist, the force of which transfers directly to the elbow.

That is where the term "Little League elbow" arose, although I am usually reminded of the stringent rules governing pitching rotations and numbers of innings permitted in formal organized leagues.

So I guess the first advice is to assure yourself that the youth league involved has stringent guidelines limiting pitcher use.

Someone your son's age should not be pitching in a game more than six innings a week. And he should limit the duration of practice pitching during that time.

Overuse of the arm threatens a baseball career, as well as participation in other sports that feature arm motions.

The forces against the elbow increase measurably depending on several factors. A baseball that has become soggy and therefore heavier would add to the stress on the pitcher's arm, for example.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My daughter plays field hockey in school and has been plagued by what has been described as a very tight iliotibial band. She has tried all the suggestions made by the trainer, but to no avail. I would appreciate any input. — P.B.

ANSWER: The iliotibial band is a strip of tough tissue running from the upper thigh to the knee. Should the band become inflamed, there is pain on the outside of the thigh or on the outer side of the knee.

Almost always, where you find such tightening you will find overuse.

Your daughter is not going to like what I say, but she needs to rest the leg.

After she is free of pain, she needs to begin a stretching program.

One good band stretch is done standing in the standard position. Keeping the painful knee straight, she crosses that leg over the other as far as possible, maintaining that stretch position for 10 seconds. It might take a few practice crossings to get the idea. She should repeat the motion and the stretch as many times as she is comfortable.

She can add some intensity by turning her upper body in the opposite direction to the crossover. For example, crossing the left leg over the right would mean turning the upper body to the left at the same time.

I take it that your daughter's problem is not due to a recent injury. She should be applying heat to the area three times a day. Anti-inflammatory medicines such as ibuprofen, aspirin, indomethacin or ketoprofen can help quiet things down.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I walk an hour a day. My fingers swell up and stay that way for an hour after getting back from the walk. Is this some kind of serious disorder? — E.O.

ANSWER: My guess is that you are walking with your arms dangling at the sides. The resulting pendulum effect forces fluid out of the tiny capillaries in the hands, causing surrounding tissue to expand. It can take an hour for the fluid to get reabsorbed by the vessels.

Try keeping your elbows bent, with your hands held higher. I think that will correct the problem. If not, you should be examined for some other cause.

IN RESPONSE to reader requests, Dr. Donohue has a complete listing of his pamphlets on various medical problems. Readers who want one should send their request to Dr. Donohue — List, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Lifestyles policy

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local readers, clubs and organizations. Because this is a daily newspaper, we must have guidelines on timely submission of news items.

*General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by 9 a.m. Friday for the Sunday edition. Club reports should be submitted the day following the meeting, and no later than three days. Late contributions are subject to considerable editing.

*Listings for club meetings and special events in the "Calendar of Events" should be submitted by Wednesday of each week.

*Photos of new club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made by appointment at The Brand office Monday through Friday after 2 p.m. We do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers; however, loaner cameras are available and should be reserved 24 hours in advance. The Brand has forms available, upon request, for preparing engagement announcements, wedding stories and bridal showers. These are usually too lengthy to take over the phone.

*Engagements should be announced at least a month before the wedding, if both an engagement and wedding photo are desired. Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary wricups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

*The Brand will take on-location photos for special events. Call at least two days before the event to see if arrangements can be made.

*Notices of birthday celebrations will be written for Hereford residents 80 years of age and up. The Brand advertising department will quote prices and prepare all other birthday greetings or announcements, including Quinceaneras.

*Notices of new arrivals are obtained from Hereford Regional Medical Center. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or with grandparents in Hereford, should be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Brief items of interest about college students, or former residents, are welcome concerning degrees, academic honors, career promotions, etc. Please submit as soon as possible to ensure timeliness.

To submit an article or obtain more information, call Becky Camp at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., information may be placed in the night drop at our front door.

— YOUR EYES —

Astigmatism

Your camera is made so that light passing through the lens travels directly to a single focal point on the film in back of the camera. If the lens is slightly out-of-round—distorted—the picture directed to the film will be distorted, too.

Your eyes work the same way: the light coming in though the cornea is focused on the retina. If the cornea—or sometimes the lens itself—is distorted picture is sent to the brain. And that is astigmatism.

Now, everyone has a slight degree of astigmatism, which is often the cause of eye strain, fatigue or headache after a lot of close work. Higher degrees of astigmatism may cause blurred or obviously distorted vision. The condition may exist at birth or may develop with time. It may accompany nearsightedness, farsightedness or 20/20 visual acuity. What's important to know is that astigmatism can be corrected with glasses or certain types of contact lenses.

Parental awareness is key to early detection, prevention of hearing loss

ST LOUIS (AP) -- If your child has an undetected hearing loss, he may have trouble developing speech and language, interacting socially and have emotional problems, says an audiologist at Saint Louis University School of Medicine.

Parental awareness is key to early detection and intervention, says Douglas L. Beck, assistant professor and director of audiology in the school's department of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery. "Research has shown that when the mother suspects a hearing loss, she is usually right."

Beck says the child doesn't have to be old enough to respond in conventional audiologic tests; hearing loss can be detected even in a newborn with special tests.

Some of the risk factors cited by Beck include history of hearing loss in the family; a baby with very low birth weight; a child who doesn't respond consistently to sounds (at 12 months, he should respond to his name, telephones ringing, dogs barking, vacuum cleaners and the sounds of familiar voices); a child who doesn't pronounce words in an age-appropriate manner; a child who uses his voice too loudly or too softly.

Actual diagnosis should be made by a professional, Beck says. The licensed audiologist can test and diagnose the degree and type of hearing loss; the otologist and otolaryngologist, doctors specializing in ear, nose and throat disorders, can determine medical diagnosis and treatment.

Hearing aids, even for infants, are likely to be recommended. Children with hearing impairment in both ears will need two aids. Medical or surgical magement also may be recommended.

One child in a thousand is born with profound deafness, and two in a thousand develop deafness in early childhood, Beck points out. Children with no measurable hearing may be candidates for cochlear implants, surgically implanted electronic devices that send signals to the inner ear.

Of all my wife's relations I like myself best.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Building Loyal Customers

If you're in business, it's bound to happen to you. Sooner or later, you will be confronted by an unhappy customer. The problem may be real or imagined. It may be of serious consequence or a simple misunderstanding. How you deal with angry or unhappy customers can help you build a loyal customer base or hasten the demise of your business.

Research shows that the average unhappy customer tells at least 16 others about your unsatisfactory service. Few small businesses can afford this much negative publicity. Therefore, you must deal with problems quickly and sincerely.

Difficulties with customers often occur when they feel cheated or believe that you didn't live up to your end of the bargain. Because of previous bad experiences with others, they may feel that you won't care about their problems either.

Often, these customers are angry and preconditioned to unload on you or your company. They may think you won't listen unless they show you how upset they are.

Angry customers require careful handling. However, if you treat them fairly and resolve their problems, they become a steady, reliable source of income for your business. These customers know you will take good care of them if another problem arises. Loyal customers are often worth thousands of dollars over the life of your business.

We Have A Problem

The first step toward solving any problem is acknowledging its existence. Don't try to deny that the situation exists. If your customer believes there is a problem, you have a problem. It may not be your fault, but it is still your problem to solve. Stay calm yourself, acknowledge the problem and focus on what your customer is really saying.

The second step is to listen carefully and patiently. The angry customer needs to vent some frustration. By being a patient listener, you accomplish two goals. First, you allow the customer to work off some anger. Second, you begin gathering facts and details about what went wrong.

After the customer has lowered his or her adrenaline level, try to find the real cause of dissatisfaction. This may take some probing. Once you find the true source of unhappiness, you're a step closer to finding a solution and building loyalty.

Find the Facts

Engage in a fact-finding dialogue. Ask relevant questions. Make certain you know what happened and when. It doesn't hurt at this point to make some notes. When customers see you writing down their comments, they may stick a little closer to the facts. Your notes also serve as a record in case you cannot resolve the problem right away.

You should be careful at this point not to make a $2 deal into a $10 process. If the problem is straightforward and the solution is simple, solve it, make the customer happy and go on. It is only in more complex or more costly situations that this detailed, fact-finding conversation is important.

Once you have all the information, try to resolve the problem as quickly as you can. Ask the customer to propose a solution. If what the customer proposes is realistic, do it. Replace the item, refund the money or fix the product.

If you cannot solve the problem immediately, let the customer know what you are going to do. Communicate any progress to the customer regularly. Postponing the problem is not a solution. Remember that the goal of resolving complaints is to create a satisfied customer that will tell others about your excellent service.

We have written an easy-to-use, one-page guide to help you resolve complaints and create loyal customers. For a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: LOYAL, c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

HIGH LUXURY IN ONE STORY PLAN Basement Allows Plenty Of Optional Living

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Discrete design touches are impressive in this luxury home. A recessed entry opens into dramatic open vistas.

The foyer is flanked by a formal dining room with tray ceiling and a formal living room. Continuing on back are the gigantic family areas of the home. The great room and kitchen breakfast room are as one with vaulted ceilings and large quantities of windows.

The kitchen includes all of the standard amenities in addition to a center island and U-shaped counter with sink and snack bar. The breakfast and dining rooms are both easily served from this area.

The grand master suite is located behind the garage and isolated from other bed rooms for privacy. Doors leading to the rear terrace, a tray ceiling and a bay window are highlights of the room. The majestic master bath includes his and hers closets, vanities and toilets.

In close proximity is a large laundry room and access to the three car garage.

The other wing of the home contains three bed rooms. Two of these share a compartmented interconnecting bath and the other one has a private shower bath.

There is also a convenient half bath accessible both from the inside of the house and from the covered porch on the rear of the home.

The basement is finished into storage areas, exercise room, audio room and full shower bath. Of course these rooms are versatile in their uses.

The symmetrical balanced wing brick home with brick corner coins and dormers with arch top windows is particularly impressive. The home includes 3,501 square feet of heated space on the main level and an additional 1,628 square feet of finished space in the basement.

Further information on plan number 3516 can be obtained by writing to W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Sliding windows a popular option

Sliding windows, popular with many architectural styles, are often selected for both views and ventilation. They come in a range of sizes and combinations.

Awning windows, popular in ranch style homes, open out and are often installed below a picture or fixed window for ventilation.

Available with single, double or triple-pane insulating glass, vinyl windows never need painting and are designed to resist rust, warping, peeling and blistering. An occasional wipe with a damp cloth is usually all they require to remain new looking for years.

More information is in "A Guide to Better Windows", a 14-page booklet offering consumers advice on how to choose windows. To get a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to VWD, 355 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Farm and Ranch

Agriculture in space exhibit featured at fair

Bringing a surprising and exciting new dimension to the 1996 Amarillo Tri-State Fair is a multi-faceted exhibition of space age agricultural technology courtesy of such space giants as the National Aeronautics & Space Administration (NASA), Rockwell International and Lockheed/Martin Missiles and Space Company, to name a few.

According to the exhibit's official spokesperson, the primary goal of this innovative and elaborate effort is to inspire a greater interest and deeper appreciation among young people regarding the potential and promise of a career in agriculture.

"We are currently faced with a critical, increasing shortage of people entering the agricultural field," explains Robert Smith of RWS & Associates, who will present the dynamic new show utilizing materials from leading space corporations in America and Canada.

"NASA has predicted by the year 2040, more than 10,000 people will be living and working in space. That's only 45 years from now. Those people will be entirely dependent on space stations to serve their needs; and those stations will be relying on the farmers and agriculturists of tomorrow to meet those objectives," he said.

According to Smith, the same plants, animals and insects which maintain our environment on earth will have to be cultivated in space in order to create the artificial environment necessary to maintain human survival.

"The only way were going to be able to meet those demands of the future is to be calling on tomorrow's farmers and agriculturists to not only provide food on space, but to literally provide our living environment as well. There is no other option," he said.

"We are rapidly outgrowing this planet. Our survival as a species and as a civilization depends completely on our ability to explore and colonize space. We must collect all the skills, knowledge and abilities we learned in the old frontier and take them with us in the final frontier," Smith said.

The immediate problem, Smith said, is a lack of interest among young people concerning careers in the agriculture industry.

"They're leaving the rural areas and rural industries because the urban environment is more attractive and more lucrative. The sad fact is they can make more money and have more fun in a city than they can on a farm," he said.

"Our goal is to expose these young people to many of the explosive new advances in agricultural technology and demonstrate how farming in the future will not be only exciting and profitable, but mandatory to our very survival as well," Smith said.

One of the new technologies on exhibit will be remote sensing satellite imagery, which allows farmers to examine their crops from the perspective of outer space.

"With satellite imagery," Smith explains, "farmers can detect crop threatening problems like disease, insect infestations and insufficient levels of soil nutrients in a fraction of the time required by ordinary observation methods." "It may take a farmer as long as four weeks to visually inspect his entire crop; but with satellite imagery, he can inspect and analyze the same area in less than an hour," he said.

Smith adds speed is essential in this area. "Using ordinary methods, by the time a farmer detects a problem, his entire crop may be threatened. The faster he can spot the problem, the faster he can apply the appropriate remedy. That translates into a tremendous increase in potential crop yield and economic profit."

Included in the exhibition are a mock-up of the famous Hubble Space Telescope, a scale model of the Space Shuttle and actual samples of the Shuttle's heat reflective-tiles. Perhaps the most popular attraction are samples of Moon rocks returned from the Moon during the historic Apollo missions conducted by NASA.

The Amarillo Tri-State Fair is open to the public on Sept. 14-Sept. 21.

The Agriculture Links Up With Space exhibit/program will be open, free of charge with gate admission, in the Coors Agriculture Pavilion. Live narrated programs will be conducted daily with opportunities to view the exhibit and ask questions.

Perry delays fee increases to avoid more economic hardship

AUSTIN--Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said he is delaying previously scheduled Sept. 1 increases in three categories of agricultural-regulated fees to avoid placing further economic hardship on the state's farmers and ranchers.

"The 74th Texas Legislature directed the Texas Department of Agriculture to achieve 100 percent cost recovery by Sept. 1 in most of our regulatory programs, when feasible.

"Due to the severe drought conditions we are experiencing and the projected $2.4 billion loss in agricultural income, I have determined that it is not feasible to implement these fee increases at this time," Perry said.

Perry this week notified Gov. George W. Bush, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and Speaker of the House Pete Laney about his decision to delay the fee increases.

The scheduled increases will be delayed for grain warehouse inspection and license fees; produce dealer license fees and seed certification label and inspection fees.

A fee increase will be implemented by Sept. 1 as scheduled for pesticide product registration fees, which are paid by companies that manufacture and distribute pesticides in Texas.

Perry said he will continue to monitor and review when the fee increases can be implemented without causing significant harm to Texas' second largest industry, agriculture.

"In times of crisis such as this, state and federal government officials must use common sense and be flexible," Perry said. "Clearly, now is not the time to raise regulatory costs on our producers."

Perry also asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to rescind its June 6 fee increase that is as high as 400 percent on several veterinary health export fees that certify cattle and other livestock as healthy for export.

Texas Beef Council hosts town meeting

The Texas Beef Council (TBC) and national beef organizations will conduct a Town Hall meeting by satellite from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 22.

It is designed to answer questions from dairy and beef producers in all 254 Texas counties about the beef checkoff program.

"Texas cattle producers are asking the TBC and other agricultural organizations what the beef checkoff is doing for them in these trying times of low cattle prices, drought and high feed costs," Bob Nunley of Sabinal, TBC chairman, said. "Thanks to satellite technology, we can bring the answers to the producers."

The Town Hall meeting is a forum that will allow producers to ask questions about the direction of the checkoff program or any of its activities. Answering the questions will be leaders of the National Cattleman's Beef Association, Cattlemen's Beef Board, U.S. Meat Export Federation and Texas Beef Council. Beef producers can ask questions via a toll-free 800 number or transmit them by fax.

"The beef checkoff program is 10-years-old," Terry Stokes, TBC executive vice president, said. "The programs it has funded have maintained demand for beef in this country and have built sales for U.S. beef around the world. But as with anything, that's been in operation for a decade, it's time for everyone to become reacquainted with the goals and purposes of the program. We hope many Texas producers take the opportunity to do this through the satellite Town Hall meeting."

All beef producers can participate in the program at their Texas Farm Bureau County Office. The show will broadcast the on the Ku-band. Call your local county office for seating availability.

Aug. 15 deadline set for corn yield contest

ST. LOUIS, MO--Corn may have been planted late this year in many growing areas due to wet weather, but the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) encourages farmers not to let that stop them from entering this year's National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC). Entries must be postmarked by August 15.

"Farm program sign-up is almost over and recent weather reports look favorable especially for the Corn Belt. Now's the time to enter the NCGA's nationwide contest," said Lynn Chriss, NCYC chairman and farmer from Kenesaw, NE.

"Corn growers have the opportunity to learn from using new or different production methods. The contest helps farmers compare their own proven corn production capabilities with other farmers around the state and across the country," Chriss said.

The goal of the contest is to educate farmers on alternative methods of production that increase profitability and address environmental concerns.

"The NCYC encourages farmers to try new resourceful production methods such as no-till or new techniques of nutrient management on a contest plot before adopting them on a large scale," Chriss said.

There are nine contest classes including: dryland and irrigated acres in conventional or mulch-till, no-till and ridge-till production programs.

Because farmers only compete with those in similar growing regions, the prospect of winning is just an entry form away. Entry and harvest forms can be obtained by contacting NCGA at (314) 275-9915 or your local seed company representative.

Not only will entrants gain knowledge on which production techniques work best on their farms, they will also be rewarded for their efforts. Winners in the contest will be announced Jan. 15, and recognized at the Commodity Classic, the combined convention and trade show of the NCGA and the American Soybean Association, on Feb. 27-March 1 in Tampa, Fla.

Winners also receive great prizes from participating seed and crop protection companies.

A&E's Investigative Reports takes viewers 'Behind Bars'

©TVData Features Syndicate

Are the inmates truly running the asylum – or, more to the point, the jail and the prison?

That's one of the unsettling questions raised by "Behind Bars," a special three-hour installment of Investigative Reports premiering Sunday, July 28, on A&E Network.

Host Bill Kurtis states the crux of the matter in the opening segment of the program: How is America to deal with the growing prison population (1 million and counting) as well as the rising cost of housing the inmates?

The program then recaps the explosive May episode of Investigative Reports that sent shock waves through the Illinois legislature: the secret videotapes mass murderer Richard Speck made from within Stateville Correctional Center, Illinois' maximum security lockup.

In those tapes, which Speck made in 1988, three years before his death, the convicted killer and his male lover take drugs and have graphic sex before the camera.

"He wasn't even satisfied to do it in private. He had to flaunt it. God!" says an exasperated Kurtis.

As a result of these revelations, the Illinois legislature currently is reviewing the way in which the prison population is being handled – or mishandled, as the case may be.

While only the most naive person is unaware that sex between inmates takes place, the Speck tapes present the startling picture of inmates misbehaving on an almost inconceivable scale, without fear of reprisal. And where did they get those drugs?

From the guards, Kurtis concludes.

"More and more is given to the prisoners, to sort of buy them off from causing troubles," Kurtis explains.

"They now have cellular phones and cable TV and VCRs.

"The outrage, here in Illinois, is that here is Speck – someone who most people thought should be dead or, if not dead, certainly punished for the rest of his life – literally better off in prison than he would have been outside."

Going inside a prison, even on official business with a camera crew, is an unsettling experience, Kurtis says, because it means entering a strange world with its own rules.

"I would ask gang members, 'Why did you have the gang continue in prison?'" he recalls.

"They would say, 'For power.' And power means almost a political kind of pressure that you can use to pressure the warden to go one way or the other.

"And I asked, 'Well, does it often come to violence?'"

"And they said, 'No, most of the time we don't need to because we have the, quote, votes.'"

"There's almost a primitive kind of democracy that goes on. Get enough people on your side and you can say, 'Look, do this or we're going to cause trouble. All we have to do is sit down.'"

The episode also contains extensive footage of prisons in other countries, as well as commentary on how their officials are dealing with the concept of rehabilitation.

"I'd like for (viewers) to get a feel for the similar problem – everybody is going to have criminals in their midst – but (also) the different ways around the world that governments and countries handle them," Kurtis says. "I hope that they come away really thinking about prison reform and what we should do.

"Do you walk away from it and just not talk about it anymore?"

Bill Kurtis hosts a special three-hour edition of Investigative Reports premiering Sunday on A&E. The episode examines the growing prison population, both here and abroad, and examines the ways correctional facilities around the world are handling increasingly serious problems.

Did You Know?

AROUND 2700 BC, THE CHINESE USED ACUPUNCTURE TO TREAT PAIN ASSOCIATED WITH TOOTH DECAY.

IN THE PAST, PEOPLE DIDN'T EXERCISE TO STAY IN SHAPE BECAUSE DAILY ASPECTS OF LIFE INVOLVED PHYSICAL LABOR. BUT NOW, BECAUSE OF MODERN CONVENIENCES, MOST PEOPLE HAVE TO MAKE AN EFFORT IF THEY WANT TO STAY PHYSICALLY FIT.

A Fish Eye View Of The World...

A fishing hook looks fine to the human eye -- but what does it look like to the fish? Says a scientist who has been studying the eyesight of fish, "It's probably too big for the average fish".

"Too many fishermen worry about hiding the hook when there is no need. Fish do not recognize the barbed hook as something dangerous. Why should they? But the old saying "Keep low and keep out of sight" is good advice. A movement on the bank frightens any fish." What is the fish's eyevew of things?

As far as the trout is concerned, it's a clear one. They live in clean, fast-flowing streams and can see and be seen. Their bulbous eyes look sideways and upwards, directing their main vision toward the underside of the surface of the river.

Water plays tricks with light, bending rays around corners so the fish gets a peculiar -- but extremely effective -- view of life outside its own environment. It is as if it is peeping at the outside world through a small, circular window in the ceiling. Through the window, it can see everything that is going on through 360 degrees on both banks of the river, upstream or downstream.

This means that if a fisherman can see the fish, the fish can see him, even if it is facing away from him. This is why it is so important for an angler to move slowly and quietly. Sit quietly at the edge of a river and the fish may get used to you sitting there. But make any sudden movement, and the fish will dart away.

Looming even larger in a fish's world are objects on the surface of the water, like a float, or just above the water, like a rod. This is why a shrewd angler buys a rod with a dull finish. A rod with a coat of gloss varnish would glitter in the sunlight and be obvious to the fish. And as they have no eyelids, the slightest movement puts fish on the alert, even during resting times.

Running down each side of the body, fish have a row of nerve-ends called pressure receivers. They transmit vibrations in the water to the fish's brain. The pressure receivers are so finely tuned that scientists believe a fish can feel the changing pressure in the water as another fish swims by.

Scientists also believe that fish use the receivers as echo sounders to "feel" objects in the water they cannot see. It is in this way that fish feel vibrations caused by an angler moving around on the river bank.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES - March 21/April 20

Discipline is the key to success this week. Resist the urge to procrastinate and focus on the job at hand. Business travel plans may have to be delayed if your work schedule gets too demanding later in the week. An opportunity to see old friends will arise this weekend. Fun times await.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Think long-term when it comes to financial planning. A situation that was new and somewhat overwhelming a few months back seems like old hat now. You'll feel more comfortable in general with all aspects of your life. Renewed self confidence helps you overcome fears.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

A great week! Being in the right place at the right time could yield big rewards. You'll feel as if you have a guardian angel. In matters of romance, you'll find that absence makes the heart grow fonder. Surprising news comes from afar. Friday is a good day for communications.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Seeing how "the other half" lives helps put things into perspective for you. What you really want will become more clear. A lucky break comes your way later in the week. You'll have an opportunity to do something you didn't even think was an option. Your enthusiasm inspires others.

LEO - July 23/August 23

A slow and steady approach will be much more effective than an aggressive one when it comes to matters of the heart -- especially if you're pursuing a Scorpio. Make use of free time early in the week as your social life will accelerate towards the weekend. Diplomacy is key on Friday.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

A bad attitude will only make an unpleasant situation worse. Why not take a positive approach? If you do, you may be pleasantly surprised. An unexpected expense could put a damper on weekend plans. You may have to seek out less expensive entertainment options.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

A look into the future helps you make an important decision for today. Thinking long-term is the smart approach. At home, don't let a negative family member get you down. Keep hold of your optimistic nature. Good news comes later in the week. Now's the time to look into that class you've been wanting to take.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Help comes from an unusual source on Tuesday. You may find that you were wrong about someone's character. An argument with a loved one could escalate into a huge battle if you lose your cool. Try to take a reasonable approach. Put off making plans for the upcoming weekend.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Be open to new ideas, especially when it comes to work. You could find a faster, more productive way of doing something. The road to love may be somewhat bumpy this week. You might be better off seeking solitude and saving romance for a later date. A family member surprises you.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't be afraid to share your ideas -- no matter how off-beat they may seem. Others will be receptive. A work challenge gives you something to be excited about, but you may have to temporarily sacrifice your social life if you want to reap the full rewards. Romance takes a turn.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Giving a friend the cold shoulder is no way to resolve problems. Get things out in the open before they get out of hand. A subtle change at work could be the sign of things to come. There could be an opportunity waiting for you in the very near future. Keep your eyes open.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

An introspective mood could help you figure out how to resolve an ongoing problem. Time spent alone will prove beneficial. News about a former associate -- probably a Gemini -- will provide food for thought. You'll find that people can really change over time.

Maria Benitez brings her Teatro Flamenco to Evening at Pops for a performance of the "flamenco ballet" El Amor Brujo (Love, the Sorcerer). It airs Monday on PBS (check local listings).

Evening at Pops heats up a summer night

Flamenco, the folk dance of Spain, is a demanding form, technically rigorous and intensely emotional. It is sensual, aggressive, melancholy and brooding.

One of the premier practitioners of flamenco in this country is Maria Benitez, who has danced for summer dinner-theater audiences around Santa Fe, N.M., for three decades.

Benitez finds a national outlet for her art on Evening at Pops Monday, July 29, on PBS (check local listings). At the invitation of Boston Pops conductor Keith Lockhart, she appears with her troupe, Teatro Flamenco, to perform a sort of flamenco ballet, El Amor Brujo (Love, the Sorcerer), to a well-known score by Manuel de Falla.

The program begins in the conventional Pops manner, with the orchestra performing alone, followed by the introduction of mezzo-soprano Denyce Graves. Her strong and lovely performance of "Habanera" from Bizet's Carmen foreshadows the evening's torrid conclusion.

Next, Lockhart brings out the Los Angeles Guitar Quartet to perform two selections. One, Bantu, is the composition of one of the quartet's members.

Heavily edited to conform to its 60-minute running time, the program moves quickly on to El Amor Brujo, combining the talents of Graves, Benitez, the quartet and the orchestra.

Benitez plays the central character, a gypsy betrayed by her lover. But the story is of little significance, except as a framework for the emotional energy of the dance.

At an age when most dancers have discreetly retired to teaching, Benitez continues to cast a powerful spell. In a red silk dress that flares and falls bewitchingly over a lean, muscular body, she circles the floor, heels beating a message into the boards. Her head snaps, her black hair flies. Her hands, constantly in motion, appear to swivel on her wrists.

Despite occasionally clumsy camera work, with close-ups and jump cuts that ruin the line of the dance, this Evening at Pops is a memorable one, not to everyone's taste, yet capturing the flavor of an authentic art form.

Q: Please publish an address where I can write to Clark Johnson and Melissa Leo of Homicide: Life on the Street. Also, tell me about Clark Johnson. --M.B., Bethlehem, Pa.

Clark Johnson

A: A native of Philadelphia, Johnson began acting as a child in such Broadway and touring shows as Finian's Rainbow and South Pacific. Years later, after attending Loyola Film School in Montreal, he found work as a camera assistant and special effects technician on films that included The Dead Zone and The Fly.

Ultimately, he decided to return to acting and trained with, among others, the famed Second City company in Toronto.

His many feature film credits include Iron Eagle II, Drop Zone and Nick of Time. On TV, he appeared in The Women of Brewster Place, L.A. Law, Gabriel's Fire and Silent Witness. He has directed episodes of Under African Skies for The Family Channel.

The married actor, who has two daughters, divides his time among Baltimore, Los Angeles and Toronto.

Complete network addresses will appear here again in the fall, but you can write to the star of any NBC series c/o (name of show), NBC Television Network, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

By the way, NBC recently renewed Homicide for two more seasons.

Q: I recently saw the movie Valmont, and I thought Fairuza Balk stole the show. What else, if anything, has she done? --Robert Derbyshire, Sault Ste Marie, Ont., Canada.

A: A well-kept secret to mainstream moviegoers, Balk has been dazzling critics and her peers at least since 1985, when she won the coveted role of Dorothy in Return to Oz. To date, she has selected her movie roles with an eye to their content and complexity, not their commercial appeal.

Brian Dennehy was so impressed when they worked together in 1993's Murder in the Heartland that he hand-picked her for the pivotal role of a twisted nymphet in last December's TV movie Shadow of a Doubt.

Among the handful of Balk's movies on tape, Shame and Gas Food Lodging, both from 1992, are outstanding.

Q: In Wanted: Dead or Alive, I say Steve McQueen's character was Josh Randall and his sawed-off rifle was called his "Mare's Leg." Others disagree. --Vincent Smith, Port Jervis, N.Y.

A: You're right on both counts.

A: No. Scott Valentine played Nick Moore.

SOAP TALK

Changes are in store for Kelker-Kelly, Tylo

By Candace Havens

©TVData Features Syndicate

It's hard to keep a good man down, especially if he is Robert Kelker-Kelly.

The actor, who left the popular role of Bo on Days of Our Lives due to creative differences, is returning to a favorite haunt, the set of Another World. Kelker-Kelly starred on the soap from 1987-89 as Sam Fowler. This time the actor is coming back as a new character named Bobby Reno.

"I'm thrilled Robert is coming back to Another World," says executive producer Jill Farren Phelps. "He brings a wealth of talent and experience to this new role and will be a great addition to this brilliant cast. We are very excited to see how the Bobby/Vicky/Jake story line will play."

Also on AW: Newcomer Kim Rhodes is playing Cindy, the sister of Gabe's (John Bolger) ex-wife.

In the story line, Gabe and Lorna (Robin Christopher) have recently become engaged. Cindy will obsessively pursue Gabe's attention, causing problems for Lorna and Gabe.

In other news: Bradley Bell, executive producer for The Bold and the Beautiful, announced Hunter Tylo will return to the soap as Dr. Taylor Hayes. Tylo left B&B to star in Melrose Place this summer. Not long after her departure she announced she was pregnant. Melrose producers didn't think they could work Tylo's pregnancy into the script, so they dropped her.

When last seen on B&B, Taylor was leaving Los Angeles in an attempt to put her life together and to get over Ridge (Ronn Moss).

with Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang), who has struck up a special friendship with Grant Chambers (Charles Grant). At one time Grant and Taylor were also an item.

Once Taylor was a part of the Taylor/Ridge/Brooke love triangle. Now it looks like she will form a quadrangle with Ridge, Brooke and Grant.

Tylo returns Friday, Aug. 9.

CHITTER CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP) - Meg Ryan says she's having a blast playing a scorned woman - with a plan.

"I'm having the best time getting out tons of little frustrations," the actress said in the July 26 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "It's so fun to play this witch."

Ryan, who's starred in plenty of romantic comedies, played against type in this summer's "Courage Under Fire," portraying a Desert Storm medevac pilot.

"People think this is another 'When Harry Met Sally,' but they'll be very surprised," she said of the new film "Addicted to Love."

"It's an anti-romantic comedy. The deal is I'm really mad, and I have this elaborate sick plan to get (revenge on) the guy who dumped me."

NEW YORK (AP) - Gwyneth Paltrow says she has no interest in being a superstar, having witnessed the price of fame firsthand from her boyfriend Brad Pitt.

"If it would stop right here, it would be perfect ... I'm not mobbed on the street," Paltrow said in the July 29 issue of Newsweek.

She says Pitt's celebrity status can be daunting.

"It's not me they're attacking, but it all just makes me want to protect Brad, and not ever get anywhere near that level of fame," she said.

Paltrow plays the lead in a new adaptation of Jane Austen's "Emma."

LONDON (AP) - It's a sister act in the women's room but men keep a low profile in the gent's, according to Whoopi Goldberg.

Goldberg told reporters that she's planning a book called "Life Observations" - and she says there's no better place to start observing than the bathroom.

"Women can sit together quite openly with the stall toilet door open and talk," she said. "Men go into the bathroom and they look around. If there's not another man in there they can just stand and let it fly. If another guy comes in - it stops. They don't look at each other."

The same sharp differences are true at home, said the Oscar-winning star of "Ghost" and "Sister Act."

"A woman goes into the bathroom, does all she has to do and makes a tiny mess," Goldberg said. "A guy goes in and shaves, there's water everywhere, the towels are messed up and there's hair everywhere."

Goldberg said her book, to be published next year is "about why don't we know the answers to these questions."

NEW YORK (AP) - Jamie Lee Curtis says family life puts her acting career in perspective.

"If the only thing I had to give me self-esteem was my work, I don't think I'd really be proud of myself," Curtis said in Sunday's New York Daily News. "I'm a good mommy ... I'm a good wife and good friend. The things I know I do well have given me a sense of confidence that nobody can take away."

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Here it is, time for the Town and Country Jubilee again. Time goes by so fast. This is a fun time to be involved with everyone in our community. We need to thank all those who are so busy making the arrangements.

Our Quilt Show will be in the Center Auditorium. We have had some people who didn't want to display their quilts due to lack of security. We understand that and the center will be secured. Hand made quilts have a value that cannot be replaced.

Our Golden K Club will have a Homemade Ice Cream booth at the park and they will have a Garage Sale on Aug. 16-17. You know they donate money and do a lot of work for HSCA.

We are really working on plans for the Festival of Trees. We will meet on the second and fourth Monday of each month at 9 a.m. All who can help please come and join us. We meet next Monday.

Maria Nicola from New York will visit us Tuesday, July 30. She is doing a documentary for PBS on the Dust Bowl Days. You will want to come by and visit with her.

I have had several ask about a tour to Branson to see the Christmas shows. If there is enough interest I will finish with the plans. We would go around Dec. 3-7. We will need 40 to make your reservations.

The United Way Board is working hard getting ready for the annual campaign. I really admire this group of people. You know we are a United Way agency and the funds provided are used for match money for the federal funding for our home-delivered meal programs. We are needing volunteers to sign up at the center to help us with this drive. As you see, our lives are like a circle. It takes us all helping each other to have the wonderful community we live in.

See you at the Center and at the Town and Country Jubilee!

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

August brings back to school for the younger generation and a promise of cooler weather ahead for all. Despite the weather, the Center is an active place.

Mark Aug. 10 on your calendar, the Town and Country Jubilee Quilt Show will be in the Center auditorium. We will also have an antique sale and the snack bar will serve lunch. Come to the air conditioned Senior Center where parking is easy and enjoy the day.

Senior Adults are the nation's greatest blessing and we at the center are very blessed. I want to thank all the volunteers that work at the center. You make our center one of the best in Texas. Our senior adults bring years of experience, insight and knowledge into all areas of volunteer work. I invite all senior adults to volunteer your time and talents.

If you would like to help at the center come out and visit with the staff. We have volunteer opportunities in the food service, dining hall, meal delivery and Thrift Shop.

The following is a poem I believe in, that come from the Lions Club newsletter.

Why Should I Volunteer?

It's not for the money; It's not for the fame;
It's not for any personal gain; It's just for the love of fellow man;
It's just to lend a helping hand; It's just to give a tith of self;
That's something you can't buy with wealth; It's not for medals worn with pride;
It's for that feeling deep inside; It's that reward deep down in your heart;
It's feeling that you have been a part of helping others, far and near
That makes you a VOLUNTEER!

Basketball on radio important for retiree

By HANK KURZ Jr.
Associated Press Writer
RICHMOND, Va. (AP) -- Moving into a retirement home didn't bother Bertha Anderson a bit. The food was good, her room was nice and there were loads of social activities and other fun things to do.

Her problems didn't begin until she went to her room at night and tried to tune in her favorite winter radio program: University of Virginia men's basketball.

"For so long, I couldn't get it," Mrs. Anderson, 97, said of the games broadcast locally on WRVA-AM. She said she's tuned in Cavaliers games for as long as she can remember, but "It didn't come in here."

Mrs. Anderson said she's a sports fan from way back.

"I played on the first girls basketball team at Honaker High School," she boasts, speaking of 1916 as if it were yesterday.

Her family nurtured her sports habit.

"My son, Sattler Anderson, coached basketball at John Marshall and Hill and then was headmaster over at Huguenot Academy for 12 years," she says.

Two grandsons attended Virginia beginning in the mid-1970s. Neither played basketball, but their choice of school only furthered their grandmother's devotion to Wahoo hoops on the radio.

Then this year winter melted into spring and Mrs. Anderson couldn't tune into her other favorite program - Richmond Braves baseball. The problem begged attention.

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

Hereford Senior Citizens has entered into a very good program to protect seniors from losing their money to scams. You will be reading and hearing a lot about this program.

The name of this program is Triad. It is the combined effort of the local police and sheriff's department and senior citizens.

Many scams, or crimes, are legitimate, but can still cost you your life's savings. People will high pressure you into buying a very expensive burglar alarm system, or get you to invest your money into a sure deal, or talk you into a large down payment on a roof repair, or plumbing, etc. Then they never come back to do the job. Some may want an excess of money in advance.

When dealing with someone you don't know, someone that calls out of the blue, I think you should have your tape recorder going. If you make an appointment, then have a witness come be with you. They will deny having said what you claim, if it goes to court. You are urged to call the police and sheriff's department for advice, or call a member of this committee: Nolan Grady, Lester Wagner or Margie Daniels.

There are many ways to get "took"!

Please know that you have a friend at the police station and sheriff's department. Read the articles in the Senior Scene, and be aware of all the help that is available.

We need your cooperation.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I'm receiving Social Security benefits as a mother of children receiving benefits. At what point will my monthly benefits stop?

A: Your Social Security benefits will generally stop when your youngest child turns age 16. Your unmarried children can receive benefits until they reach age 18 (19 if they are attending an elementary or secondary school full time).

Q: How many Social Security credits are needed to get Supplemental Security Income?

A: Unlike Social Security benefits, a person does not need work credits to get Supplemental Security Income (SSI). The SSI program is designed to meet the basic needs of the elderly, blind, and disabled who have limited income and resources. If you feel you qualify, contact Social Security to apply.

Q: My 76-year-old mother lives with me and is dependent on me financially. I recently suffered a heart attack and it has made me concerned about how she would get by if I died. Would my mother be eligible for any Social Security benefits on my record?

A: Yes. Your mother would be eligible for survivors benefits if you died since she's over 62 years old and dependent on you for at least one half of her support.

Q: Will my Social Security retirement benefit be based on how much I earned during my best 10 years of work?

A: No. Most individuals need 10 years of work to be eligible for Social Security, but the benefit amount is based on many more years of earnings. For everyone born after 1928, it's based on the highest 35 years of earnings.

Q: My two children and I have been receiving survivors benefits since my husband died. Will these benefits continue if I remarry?

A: Your remarriage would have to no effect on the benefits being paid to your children. If you get benefits only because you are caring for your children, your benefits would end at the time of your remarriage unless you marry someone who is receiving Social Security benefits.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE CLARK RD/LD

Today we hear daily about the latest news concerning HIV/AIDS. Each and everyone in the area usually asks the same question. HOW DOES THIS AFFECT OUR LIVES?

The most important lesson that each one as an individual must accomplish is to listen, read and understand every aspect of this condition so that we can comprehend the magnitude of the disease and the measures to protect oneself from it. The beginning answer is education.

This RD/LD, having attended several lectures, seminars and workshops where the HIV/AIDS topic was presented, deems it appropriate to share some of the strategies nutritionally wise with you the public in Hereford.

If you are a person living with HIV/AIDS, have a family member, or an acquaintance, proper nutrition is extremely important. The vitamins, minerals and energy you receive from food, along with advice from the medical team about using nutritional supplements, may help minimize the complications of HIV disease.

When you make nutrition a priority each day, the benefits may include feeling and looking better and staying healthier longer. Eating enough of the foods you need can be challenging, since HIV/AIDS adds stress that changes your usual nutrient needs. It is important to maintain or improve your appetite and make wise food choices to allow nutrition to work for you.

Making nutrition a priority pays off. Consuming enough food can maximize your day to day energy level, productivity and sense of well-being. Think of nutrition as an investment that pays off both physically and psychologically.

Good nutrition habits help maintain:

*muscle for strength,
*your body weight, and, in the long run,

*a healthier mind and body.

Nutrients build immune defenses. Three or more meals and snacks each day can provide the nutrients needed to build a strong immune system. These nutrients include protein, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, minerals and water.

In addition, food keeps the digestive tract working. Because the digestive tract plays a strong immune system, the act of eating is a disease-fighting tactic.

Tips on snacking: include nutritious snacks, such as hot or cold cereal and milk with raisins, peanut butter and crackers, and frozen yogurt or ice cream, as an additional strategy for improving your nutritional health.

Many HIV/AIDS-related complications, including fever, weight loss and muscle wasting, may be worsened by poor nutrition habits. While receiving medical treatments, you can greatly strengthen your defenses against these complications through good nutrition.

For example, when fever strikes, the body burns fuel at a higher rate. Thus, body tissues and muscles may be used as fuel, especially if energy from food is in short supply. When you eat enough during a fever, body tissues and muscles are more likely to be spared. Good nutrition planning includes consuming enough food and fluids to hasten your recovery from HIV/AIDS-related complications.

Working through hard times; when you are unable to eat enough food because of poor appetite, nausea, diarrhea, or food intolerance, don't take it lying down. Rather than falling behind consider a supplement until the problem subsides.

If diarrhea occurs, valuable nutrients cannot be absorbed and are literally flushed out. If the discomfort of diarrhea makes you afraid to eat, try foods such as applesauce, potatoes without skins, hot cereal, rice, gelatin, bananas and crackers.

Caffeine-free liquids such as broth, fruit juice, sport drinks and ice chips or water are recommended to replace fluid losses. Persistent diarrhea may cause further problems. If nutrients from foods are not absorbed, a condition known as malabsorption, or the inability to absorb nutrients, may result.

To fight this problem, a specially designed nutritional supplement may be used. Such supplements contain easily absorbed forms of nutrients, such as protein, fat and carbohydrate, to provide complete and balanced nutrition.

BASKETBALL

because that's not her way, but she did miss her ballgames," said Pat Thompson, Mrs. Anderson's niece.

The maintenance crew at the Elizabeth Adam Crump Manor couldn't figure out the problem, and radios shuttled in by family members didn't work, either.

Braves games are broadcast on WRVH-AM, a sister station of WRVA. The family explained the problem to WRVA morning show host Tim Timberlake and asked him to see what he could do to help.

"She was convinced that Tim Timberlake would get it working because she's such an avid listener," said Mrs. Thompson.

Timberlake consulted with radio engineers at his station and passed on their suggestions, but they didn't work. He inquired about a special radio that might have been the answer, but it wasn't available in Richmond.

"Everyone thought it was a great story, but nobody could help," said Judy Sutherland, another of Mrs. Anderson's nieces.

Mrs. Anderson's family finally called George Drumwright, deputy county manager for community services in Henrico County, which owns the nursing home.

Drumwright got county communication systems manager Grady Knott involved. Knott finally solved Mrs. Anderson's problem. It was as simple as repositioning the radio and adjusting the antenna to maximize reception.

By leaving the radio and antenna alone, Mrs. Anderson can listen to her games and change the station to hear other programs.

"It worked out a lot better than I anticipated," Knott said.

"I'm just tickled," Mrs. Anderson said. "I can get WRVA now ... (talk show host) Jerry Lund. And my ball games, that's the important part."

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

The 1996 Social Security trustees report tells us that the Social Security long-range financial projections are holding steady.

As past and current program beneficiaries can attest, Social Security has always met its beneficiary obligations. And it always will. Even with no changes in current law, Social Security will be able to continue paying benefits for more than three decades into the future.

Specifically, the 1996 annual report states that the combined Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance Trust Funds are rapidly accruing reserves and will be able to meet all benefit obligations through 2029.

The 2029 date is a year earlier than was reported in last year's Trustees Report. But that change is due primarily to a technical correction, and the 2029 date is the same "trust fund exhaustion" date that was reported by the trustees in 1994.

It is important to note that in 2029, contrary to what many people think, Social Security will not be "broke." Annual tax revenues will be enough to cover 77 percent of annual expenditures.

The fact that the financing situation is now stable does not, of course, alter the fact that some corrective action will have to be taken in the future. The trustees state in their report that the shortfall must be addressed, but there is "ample time to do so with deliberation and care." There is no crisis situation. The Social Security trust funds have enough revenue to meet all beneficiary obligations for the next 33 years. There is time to discuss alternative solutions and to devise an approach that has the full support of the American public.

Social Security is the most successful domestic program in the nation's history. It provides protection against the loss of earnings due to retirement, death, or disability. It covers about 142 million American workers and pays benefits to more than 43 million beneficiaries.

And it represents a financial foundation upon which both older Americans and young families can plan their lives. It has served this country well for 60 years. The trustees urge careful examination and discussion of the Social Security program to ensure that the program will continue to serve all Americans for the next 60 years.

From 1980 to 1990, in the U.S., the 95- to 99-year-old age group had the highest percentage increase in population. They increased 96 percent.

Include me out.

Tupperware-convenience became staple

EDITOR'S NOTE - Tupperware appeared on the American scene 50 years ago, a plastic convenience that became a staple of another post-World War II institution - the suburb. Today the Tupperware party continues, and both the parties and the items themselves have become receptacles for ideas about American culture.

By TED ANTHONY
AP National Writer

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. (AP) - On a cool spring evening, in a kitchen on the edge of one of America's original suburbs, Patti Tupper is busy preparing to live up to her name.

She opens a closet and smiles. On five shelves sit nearly 180 labeled, stackable plastic containers brimming with everything from Quaker Oats to white chocolate chips to light brown sugar.

"I guess it's pretty obvious - I love Tupperware. There's not much I don't have," says Mrs. Tupper, no relation to founder Earl Tupper but enthusiastic enough to be.

Tonight, Patti Tupper is about to play hostess to an American tradition: the Tupperware party.

For five decades, since Earl Tupper molded some innovative plastic cups and bowls and figured they'd sell better if they brought suburban housewives together, Tupperware has been a fixture on the national landscape.

Today, its maker estimates it can be found in 90 percent of the nation's households. And Patti Tupper, who lives in an immaculate Long Island home with her husband, Jeff, her 5-year-old daughter, Cori, and a breathtaking view of Huntington Harbor, is but the latest to fill the role of Tupperware party hostess.

She is far different than her counterparts of a generation ago.

Unlike most housewives of the 1950s, Patti Tupper is a full-time investment banker in Manhattan. Unlike many housewives of the 1950s, she must balance family and career. And, unlike some housewives of the 1950s, she has more to fill her life than a plastic bowl's burping seal and a lifetime guarantee.

Tupperware - a piece of the foundation of the American suburb - is a housewife's domain no longer.

"This is a product for the woman of the '90s - women who do everything," says Roseann Stephens, who will be selling the Tupperware on this night.

Six people are invited, all women. Except for one who is slightly older, all appear between the ages of 30 and 50. This, though, is the kind of crowd where you don't ask.

A silver tray of brie, strawberries, grapes and water biscuits is laid out on one end of the dining room. On the other sits a basket filled with eight varieties of crudites, including three colors of peppers.

No one touches it. The women consume only chablis, from huge brandy snifters. Many are still dressed up from the workday.

They get together for this sort of event once a month, they say, whether it be for Tupperware, Shaklee home products or Longaberger handmade baskets.

"There's nothing better than having six women in the room. You have six times the energy," says one guest, Lois Denino, a stay-at-home mom who left a bank job and now distributes Shaklee, a line of creams, cleaners, lawn care products and other household materials.

"This isn't just about buying Tupperware," she says. "We wouldn't do this if we didn't enjoy it."

In 1967, when a family friend leaped into Benjamin Braddock's car in "The Graduate" and whispered, "Just one word - plastics," Earl Tupper was already 21 years into making Tupperware one of the best-known plastic products of the postwar generation.

Tupper, a chemical engineer, founded a plastics company in 1938 and devised a way to adapt defense technologies by purifying a bad-smelling byproduct of oil refining into smooth, supple, extruded plastic. He named it after himself and put it on the market in 1946 as the "Wonderlicer Bowl" and the "Bell Tumbler." It sold reasonably well.

Then, in 1948, Tupper pulled a new being from the Fuller Brush Man's rib - the Tupperware Lady. She was someone who could bring together housewives trapped in the suburbs with little to do but mothering and housework.

They'd get together to talk, socialize - and buy Tupperware. The home demonstrations, quickly dubbed Tupperware parties, worked so well that, by 1951, the product was pulled from store shelves entirely.

"Suburbia was a strange, new, insecure place," design critic Thomas Hine writes in "Populuxe," his social history of the 1950s and 1960s. "Tupperware added a ritual, the party, which helped new suburbanites deal with the insecurity and loneliness that was part of their pioneering lives."

Women also wanted jobs. "This gave them an opportunity to make a very good income and hone their skills working with people," says Tupperware USA President Gaylin Olson. His mother began selling Tupperware in 1956, and he started at age 16.

Today, 50 years after it was introduced and 13 years after Earl Tupper died, his product is both omnipresent and - because of its absence from stores - strangely invisible.

Tupperware is sold in offices, by youth groups, in 60 foreign countries and on the Internet. The company has marketed kimchi containers in South Korea, tortilla keepers in Mexico and rice receptacles in China.

Tupperware parties are held everywhere from Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and 800,000 people sell Tupperware across the world - 5 percent of them men. In Jakarta, women pool their money so one each month can buy all the Tupperware she wants - an update of an old Indonesian cultural tradition.

Nearly 85 million human beings worldwide attended a Tupperware party in 1994, and the company reported net sales of $1.3 billion that year. Tupperware, based in Orlando, Fla., has been a subsidiary of Premark International Inc. for nearly a decade but spun off recently to take its place on the New York Stock Exchange and become an independent company once again.

The Tupperware party changed the face of sales, becoming the prototype for all sorts of in-home demonstrations and marketing among acquaintances - from lingerie and facial cream to baskets and sex toys.

"Tupperware made it friendly," says Rudolph Lewis, president of the National Association of Home Based Businesses in Baltimore. "It wasn't just a stranger at the door anymore."

And what the friendly face brought through the door lasted longer than anyone expected.

Today, old Tupperware is passed to the next generation or snapped up at garage sales. The art world - in keeping with the post-Warhol tendency of elevating the ordinary - considers Tupperware something of a treasure.

Vintage pieces and some new items reside in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Cooper Hewitt National Design Museum of the Smithsonian Institution and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

That pleases no one more than Morison Cousins, Tupperware's vice president of design. "Sometimes," he says, "I really find myself saying, 'This is a charming vegetable peeler I'm looking at.'" named Tony Meredith goes a step further. He trolls garage sales for vintage Tupperware pieces in pastel colors and uses them to fashion retro lamps that cost $175.

Absurd? Barney's, one of New York's top department stores, doesn't think so. Last winter, it allowed Meredith's lamps to share a window display with featured Vera Wang gowns. All but one sold.

"It's fascinating to me to use such a plain item that was done right in the first place," he says.

In Patti Tupper's paisley-wallpapered dining room, Roseann Stephens holds court before an attentive audience. A half-hour into her 50-minute presentation, the brandy snifters require refills. The women are crunching the icemaker ice at the bottom and beginning to giggle.

Stephens, who distributes Tupperware to all of Long Island, is in full live-infomercial gear, her hands caressing the Tupperware on the dining room table with the same care Vanna White uses to turn letters.

"I know you're busy every day with families, on the go," she tells the women. "So here's some tumblers." She passes out 30-ounce "Thirstquake" cups for all.

"Free gifts" have long been a Tupperware party fixture. Everybody receives at least one item; the hostess gets scads. Patti Tupper will end her evening with a set of tumblers, a frying pan ensemble, microwave divider dishes, Tupperware refrigerator magnets and a pink tea-bag squeezer.

Stephens, nary an "ah" or an "um" interrupting her flowing Long Island delivery, talks up the three-dozen items on the table. Each description seems more enthusiastic than the last.

"More of the items are for the microwave - that's the trend we're moving toward. These days so many of us are busy and just want to come home from work and be convenient."

"This is our double colander. It was our No. 1 product in 1995."

"If you're looking for a double-sided dish, this item" - pause to hold it up - "is the answer."

Stephens, 39, married with two children, appears every inch the sleek suburban woman. Her hair, her turtleneck, her miniskirt, her scarf, her hose are all jet-black. Her jacket is bright yellow.

She first sold Tupperware in 1985. In February, named one of the company's top saleswomen, she was promoted to distributor. Now, through her franchise, Genesis Enterprises, she supervises 33 managers and more than 250 salespeople.

"I can be at home with my kids and be there when they come home at 3 in the afternoon," Stephens says. "And I can still be successful."

Stephens won't say how much she earns, but the company says sales consultants - the notch below Stephens - can earn 35 percent of gross profit plus incentive gifts by selling to friends and acquaintances.

"There's a trust element that I have with her that I wouldn't have in a store," Patti Tupper says. "There's more of a feeling that she'll do right by you."

Patti Tupper still has the high-school cheerleader demeanor and the looks to go with it. In a pink minidress with white stockings and a matching bow, she lights up the room when she grins. She uses Tupperware in all 11 rooms of her house, she says.

She grew up in Greenwich, Conn., an affluent New York suburb, and in 1993 married Jeffrey K. Tupper, a Huntington native she met at the Manhattan bank where they work.

Jeff Tupper walks in at 7:39 p.m. with suit, briefcase and monogrammed banker's shirt. He smiles and makes tracks into the bowels of the house, venturing out only when the presentation is done.

"He bolts. Very fast and very far," Patti Tupper says. "He'd much rather be doing something athletic." The women socialize throughout, interspersing Tupperware comments with talk about families, careers and Heloise-type hints.

"Little baby leftover things - the Mini Fridge Set is perfect for those. Like my olives for my salad," says Gordie Jamieson, who works at the bank.

"How about my olives for my martinis?" jokes Patti Tupper.

"Pesto sauce," chimes in Lois Denino.

The chablis is now being swigged instead of sipped. Then, suddenly, a change of subject:

"Sally has a date tonight."

"With who?"

"I don't know. It's at TGI Friday's."

Laughter.

"We should go spy on them."

Just as abruptly, it's back to Tupperware.

"I love the QuickShake. That is the most wonderful thing," says Patti Tupper. "It's great for chocolate milk. You have to have this. It's the greatest thing in the whole world."

The enthusiasm is partially - but not completely - for the Tupperware.

"You get together, have fun, have food and when it's done you have to put your leftovers into something with a blue top," says Anne Hawes, Mrs.

Tupper's next-door neighbor.

"The Tupperware," she says, "is almost secondary."

Thoughts on Tupperware by people whose business it is to think about Tupperware:

-Jeffrey Meikle, author of "American Plastic: A Cultural History": "One expects that kind of plastic container to be disposable, of little or no value. Tupperware violates that. It's purchased at a social gathering, it's of higher quality, and you save it and keep it for years."

-Morison Cousins, the chief Tupperware designer, sees it as a receptacle for American values about food and the social mores that surround it: "We have so many different cultures and different eating habits in this country now. At one time, the family simply sat down and ate together. That's just not the case anymore, and the form of our products has to reflect that."

-Alison Clarke, a lecturer at the University of Brighton in England, who is writing a book about American gender issues and Tupperware: "It's about social relationships as much as about objects. For many isolated housewives in the 1950s, it was a positive way of creating some kind of community. Many women I spoke to had no social life whatsoever besides Tupperware."

Clarke sees the Tupperware party as nothing less than one of the fonts of feminism.

"The whole reason why it worked was that it was about helping each other - cooperation within the social network of the suburbs," she says. "Women were helping other women. As much as the process exploited women because they felt they were duty-bound to buy when they went to a Tupperware party, they also got many of their needs out of it."

Today, Clarke believes, women who are power employees by day and power moms-wives by night are looking for opportunities to be part of their home communities.

"It's a postfeminist dilemma," she says. "There's this whole support system they're not invested in because they've been working."

Water supply manager retires after 32 years without vacation

By JEANNE WILLIAMS
Temple Daily Telegram

MILANO, Texas -- Growth and changes have marked J.C. Hayman's long-running career with the Milano Water Supply Corp.

From its humble beginnings in 1964 to a thriving system that supplies 901 Milano-area customers, Hayman has supervised and maintained almost every connection and foot of pipeline.

After 32 years on the job without vacation, Hayman, 66, is retiring July 31, but will remain on part-time status until the end of the year. Wayne Kirk will take over as manager and Karl Westbrook will be assistant manager.

"To run a water system, somebody has to be on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week and that's hard to do," Hayman said. "It's hard to get out there and fix a leak by yourself. I've done it, but I don't expect other people to do it."

Turning on the faucet 32 years ago for Milan's first-ever water system was hardly a dramatic event, Hayman recalled. On a house-by-house connections were made, and residents were encouraged to turn the water on to get the system properly circulated.

Managing the Milano Water Supply Corp. -- be it ever so much smaller than metropolitan public works -- means complying with the same state-enforced meticulous rules followed by, for example, the city of Houston, says Hayman.

As water supply corporation manager, Hayman has been formally educated on basic water, distribution, and ground water to receive a state-required grade C-license.

"There have been lots of changes," Hayman said. "We started with 150-some-odd customers, and now it is roughly 150 miles."

As Milam County's only independently managed water supply corporation, the facility is governed by an elected board of directors currently headed by Eldon Ball. In more than three decades, the non-profit corporation has financed expansion and improvements through Farmers Home Administration low-interest, long-term loans, and grants.

There is little information about the water supply corporation that Hayman can't recollect instantly. Unlike the summer of 1993, when the new building was opened, the Milano Water Supply Corp. operated out of the Hayman residence.

Hayman served as board secretary to the original panel comprised of President O.T. Bullock, and members Raymond Ashley, E.C. Westbrook Jr. and W.O. Butler in the mid-1960s. His wife, Lanelle Hayman, was named acting manager.

Water problems were reported to the Hayman household, where he was paid by the job for maintenance work, repairs and connections. Board meetings were conducted at the residence. A special room in the house was dedicated to the water department, where Mrs. Hayman received about $100 per month for bookkeeping and billing, which she did by hand using an addressing machine.

The Milano Water Supply Corp. officially began Sept. 21, 1964, and using a $152,000 FmHA loan, established the town's first water system. Before that residents shared neighborhood water wells, used cisterns to collect rainwater, or hauled water, Ball said.

In 1974, as the system expanded, Hayman became paid manager, and his wife was named board secretary.

"The whole community is certainly indebted to Mr. Hayman for his years of dedicated service, and for use of his house as water office," Ball said. "We paid him just a minimum amount for use of house and utilities for operating the office."

The water system grew in four stages. Today, the system operates four wells and impressive storage facilities.

Hayman remembers the freezing days when he was called out for repairs, and he remembers the sweltering heat of summer working on the system, but the worst case in Milano history was well failure in the early 1970s when a critical water shortage prompted officials to send for Army tank trucks to haul water from Rockdale and pump it into Milano water lines.

Hayman really didn't miss the out-of-town vacations he didn't get to take during his 32-year tenure.

"I am kind of a home person," Hayman said. "If I wasn't doing this, I wouldn't be out chasing all over the country ... but it helps to know that you can."

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My grandmother is 80 and takes care of herself quite well, happily living alone with grandfather gone. I want her to get air conditioning, because I hear of the heat toll on elderly people. She refuses. We would pay. Are we being overly concerned? Is heat tougher on old people? — Mrs. C.E.

ANSWER: Your concern is justified. Aging lessens the body's capacity to cool itself, even in otherwise healthy folks.

Increase of sweating and dilation of skin blood vessels help us dissipate heat from the warm vessels deeper down. Pressure on the heat-dissipation processes increases when outside temperature soars.

Heat casualties among the elderly mount when outside temperature exceeds 90 degrees Fahrenheit for three straight days, especially when humidity rises.

Insist that your grandmother take other precautions to keep her body temperature from reaching danger levels. Encourage her to drink lots of liquid, for example. Tepid baths, or if she cannot manage that alone, cool sponge bathing, help greatly, as do loose garments, which permit circulation of air next to the body to help the important evaporation of perspiration.

Tell your grandmother to avoid caffeine and alcohol. Either removes water from the body by encouraging excess urination.

Retreats to a movie theater or air-conditioned mall can provide important respites from oppressive heat.

ing comfortable, such as judicious use of electric fans. One of those might be a great substitute gift. Perhaps retaining modest housework help in the summer is the answer.

From your letter, I get the idea that your grandmother might resist such help. Keep at it.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Safe body weight for adults ranges wildly. Isn't it true, though, that your safe weight through the years should match what it was when your bones stopped growing? I read this somewhere recently. — N.T.

ANSWER: What you read, I believe, were weight guidelines promulgated by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, whose advice on the subject I find a bit puzzling.

For example, a person might have been dangerously overweight at the time their bodies stopped further skeletal growth.

At best, the guidelines call for a measure of common sense. Perhaps, the authors intended the guidelines for people who were of normal weight way back when they stopped growth.

My "How to Lose Weight" report offers aid in sensible weight loss. For a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 27, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.
