Twister! Spain warns residents not to chase tornados

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

'Tis the season for tornados and terrifying as some movie-goers say "Twister" is, the real thing can be even scarier.

And, storm-chasers may not realize how dangerous it may be to pursue potential storm clouds.

The motion picture that is drawing crowds to theatres everywhere has been a detriment, in some ways, to safety in tornado hunting.

"What's happening is too many people are driving out in the country, looking for tornados, and they may not know what to do if they see one," said the fire marshal.

Just a year ago last Sunday, a devastating funnel cloud dropped down on Friona, only 21 miles southwest of Hereford. Emergency sirens sounded here that night, also.

So far in 1996, the sirens have not been activated, reported Jay Spain, City of Hereford fire marshal and emergency coordinator for the city and Deaf Smith County.

Spain keeps an eye on the sky and electronic equipment to alert the community to danger. Law enforcement officers at all levels join with other emergency personnel to give citizens the best edge possible when weather erupts violently.

In the emergency operations center in the fire station is a television set tuned to a satellite hook-up for weather information. Two other sets are tuned to Amarillo television stations and a third set in the fire station's meeting room provides a third station's reports.

And, the National Weather Service in Amarillo is quick to notify Spain of weather systems that could turn to tornados.

Spain fears that injury, or even loss of life, may result when persons unfamiliar with storm potentials leave their homes to look for tornados.

"We have people who go out looking and they're really better off if they stay at home," he continued, adding that trying to outrun a tornado can be a very dangerous activity.

Instead of leaving their homes, Spain suggests, persons who have police scanners may tune to 154.415 and hear information, even conversation between emergency personnel, about storms that may be moving in the area.

But, if out in the world when a storm is brewing, a spotter can help his neighbors by reporting a sighting, if a cellular phone is handy.

"You can call 911 on the cell phone," pointed out Spain, "but you need to know where you are so you can tell the radio dispatcher."

The report should tell what the watcher has observed -- wall cloud, tornado, funnel cloud, heavy rain or hail -- and where.

The location report can be critical. The spotter should try to relate the location to a known area.

Time of the spotting also will be important so emergency personnel will have a grasp of movement of the storm.

What is taking place as far as movement of the storm is concerned and an estimate of size and intensity will be valuable to persons in charge of alerting the public.

Here are some tips that may make a difference in protecting oneself in stormy conditions and reporting to authorities:

-- Be alert to activity at ground level. The first clue may be dust or debris at the surface, not a funnel.

-- Lightning flashes at night can help identify a wall cloud or precipitation area. While a loud roar is associated with a tornado, strong straight winds also produce such a sound.

-- Spot from a fixed location, using landmarks to determine distances and directions.

-- If possible, use binoculars to look for rotation and other cloud features.

-- Large hail may indicate proximity to an area where tornado formation is most likely.

-- Follow basic safety rules, such as (See TORNADO, Page 2A)

Dole wins praise for pledge to keep anti-abortion platform

WASHINGTON (AP)--Bob Dole won conservative praise Friday for pledging to keep the Republican platform strongly anti-abortion and his call for tolerance of different views on the issue won enough support from GOP moderates to suggest Dole would escape a divisive convention fight.

Ending weeks of internal campaign debate, Dole said Thursday night that he would not propose -- and would not accept as GOP presidential nominee -- any retreat from the current platform language calling for a constitutional amendment banning abortion.

Dole also called for a "declaration of tolerance" in the GOP platform that welcomes those with different views on abortion or other issues. "This is not compromise, it is civility," Dole said.

Dole's statement brought a flood of reaction from politicians and activists on both sides of the issue, including praise from such disparate figures as President Clinton and Pat

Buchanan, Dole's conservative GOP primary challenger.

"Anything that restores civility in this debate is a positive thing and I applaud him for it," Clinton told reporters.

But, eager not to lose his giant lead among moderate women who support abortion rights, Clinton pointedly noted: "He is in favor of a constitutional amendment to ban abortions and I am not. There is a real difference there that I don't think can be papered over."

Echoing Clinton, National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League president Kate Michelman said Dole's statement "confirms that he is willing to make abortion illegal for most American women. No verbal window dressing will change that fact."

Of most concern to the Dole camp, however, was reaction from Republicans. And by late Friday, the consensus was that Dole had taken a giant stride toward avoiding a floor battle over abortion policy at the August Republican National Convention.

Avoiding a convention battle is something Dole advisers consider critical to maintaining enthusiastic support among the GOP's conservative base without alienating suburban swing voters who tend to favor abortion rights.

"We don't want the convention dominated by the media talking about one issue," Dole said Friday as he campaigned in Tennessee. "We've got a lot of things we agree on."

A CBS-New York Times poll on the issue, released Friday night but conducted before Dole made his statement, illustrated his need for tolerance on the issue. It found that 72 percent of Americans overall and 66 percent of Republicans do not believe the GOP platform should contain its plank supporting a constitutional amendment that would ban abortion.

Anti-abortion conservatives will have the most votes at the San Diego convention, and Dole pleased them by vowing to leave the 1992 platform intact. "Welcome news for the cause of life," was how Buchanan characterized Dole's pledge.

Dole clinched the Republican nomination in March, but Buchanan has withheld an endorsement, partly because he was waiting to see if Dole would try to change the anti-abortion plank.

Pat Robertson, the Christian Coalition founder and president, also embraced Dole's idea.

Shaw claims top mark in state contest

Hereford High School graduate Scott Shaw claimed Division I honors in the recent state Solo and Ensemble competition in Austin, leading a group of local students who participated in the event.

Shaw scored the highest score possible in his vocal solo, in which he sang "Vittoria Mio Core" in its original Italian. He was accompanied by Margaret Williams.

Several other students from Hereford participated in the state contest, scoring lower marks.

Jonathan Cantu earned a Division II for his trumpet solo, as did a percussion ensemble made up of Kyle Goldsmith, Bethany Townsend and Julie Schlabs.

In addition, Diana Detten scored a Division II on her piano solo.

Hereford High School band director Don Summersgill could not be reached to provide information about other local competitors.

School board schedules two meetings on Monday

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will meet two times on Monday, including the first regular monthly meeting of the body.

Trustees will meet at 5 p.m. at the Hereford High School tennis complex to conduct a walk-through of the recently-completed facility, which includes a fieldhouse and four new tennis courts.

They will convene in regular session at 6 p.m. in the administration building board room, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue to consider a 15-item agenda.

There is a five-item action agenda -- which includes issues requiring votes of the board -- which leads off with action on the school district attorney.

Also to be voted on is the appointment of a trustee to represent the district on the tax abatement board, approval of Region 16 Education Services Center contracts, and votes on the Texas Association of School Boards delegate and resolutions.

Information on the preliminary 1996-97 budget also will be presented, as will a report of the high school improvement committee report.

Other discussion items will be a proposal to close Union Street and talk about budget and technology workshops.

The meeting will include public comments and a closed session dealing with a complaint and personnel matters.

All school board meetings are open to the public.

Local bank door attracts attention

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

There is a door in Hereford that dwarfs even Hereford State Bank president Craig Smith.

Found in a corner of the bank, the 40,000-pound vault door has the distinction of being one of the biggest of its kind in the country.

The large circular door is built of solid steel and swings 8 feet in diameter.

The door is balanced on two hinges about the size of a stove pipe. It operates with the accuracy of a time lock.

Complete with mounting frame and supports, the door dominates an entire corner of the bank.

But even though the door weighs 40,000 pounds, it was designed to where it could be opened or closed by a small child.

The vault door was purchased from the Mosler Company, who had acquired it from a bank in Brenham, where it had hung in a bank for 44 years.

For eight years, the vault door sat in storage in San Antonio, where it gathered dust and rust.

In 1977, eight years after the purchase, the vault door was installed in the main lobby of the brand new Hereford State Bank building being constructed at Third and Sampson.

The vault door was hauled to Hereford by truck to be joined with a vault that had already been poured.

Once here, the door was carefully moved along large jacks through the side of the building and into the lobby, where it was hung.

Smith said the vault door was restored after it was hung, with the rust carefully cleaned away. A crew performs regular maintenance on it to this day.

Smith said the vault is locked with a time lock mechanism and two wheels to crank closed the locking pins.

In demonstrating the action, Smith noted that the smaller wheel raises sturdy pins mounted around the inside perimeter of the door. Those pins extend behind the frame, inside the actual vault.

A second, larger wheel, deploys a set of outside locking pins, which actually pull the door tight the wall, ensuring the inside pins extend properly.

Once complete, the vault is sealed until the next business day.

Bank officials were not sure of the cost of the vault and its installation. "It would be rather expensive," senior vice president Waldo Baxter said. "It costs more to get the vault installed than the actual cost of the door."

The vault door attracts much attention, especially from children.

"Children enjoy it as much as anybody," Baxter said.

Keeper of the vault

Hereford State Bank president Craig Smith shows off the front of the bank's 40,000-pound vault door, which was installed when the current Third Street and Sampson location was built. The massive round door was owned by the bank for eight years before that, and had spent the 44 years before that in a Brenham bank.

Man stalks, kills former girlfriend, bar/grill manager

ADDISON, Texas (AP)—A man fatally shot a former girlfriend he had stalked for more than a year, then killed a restaurant manager before turning the gun on himself Friday, police said.

The shooter was identified as Richard Bell, 35. The victims were identified as Michelle Crissa Bearden, 24, and Todd Brigham, 33, manager of Humpert's, the upscale bar and grill in this Dallas suburb.

Bell began stalking Ms. Bearden after the two stopped dating more than a year ago, according to her relatives, who released a statement through the local hospital where she died.

According to police, Bell arrived at the restaurant alone and ordered food and drinks for two people.

Ms. Bearden arrived a short time later and joined Bell at his table.

The two began arguing, Bell left the restaurant briefly, then returned to the table, where the argument continued, police said.

Brigham then came to the table and said he would ask them to leave if they didn't quiet down.

Bell stood up, displayed a handgun and shot Ms. Bearden as she sat at the table, police said. He then turned and shot Brigham before shooting Ms. Bearden again and turning the gun on himself.

Witnesses said the man shot Ms. Bearden several more times after shooting Brigham.

It was not known if Ms. Bearden had agreed to meet Bell at the restaurant or if Bell had gone to the restaurant knowing she was planning to go there.

Police were questioning several dozen customers who were inside at the time of the shooting.

Nebraska governor plans 'Beef Summit'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—It's time for beef industry leaders to sit down and chew the fat about a slump in market prices, Gov. Ben Nelson said Friday.

Nelson called a "beef summit" meeting for July 9 here in hopes that blame-placing will end and people will work together toward solutions.

Ranchers complain that just a few meatpackers control most of the industry, amounting to a monopoly that deliberately keeps a lid on prices. One of the nation's largest packers, Nebraska-based IBP, responds that record large supplies are to blame.

"I want to get away from the blame game and finger-pointing and find out what we can do together to solve this problem," Nelson said Friday in a telephone interview before speaking to the Nebraska Cattlemen's Association convention in Ogallala.

Nelson said cattle producers face an intolerable situation. "They're selling cattle for the lowest prices in 10 years and buying feed grain at the highest prices," he said.

Nelson said the meeting would bring together all segments of the beef industry, farmers, ranchers, feeders, packers and government leaders. He said people would be invited from all of the states bordering Nebraska as well as New Mexico, Texas and perhaps Florida.

The meeting would address three major topics: domestic supplies of meat, impacts of international trade agreements and the long-term effects of expanding domestic and international beef sales.

Cattlemen's Association leaders thought it was a good idea.

"We believe the marketing system is broken and the industry as we know as driving away from tornado; don't try to outrun; stay out of traffic-congested area; know where you are at all times.

If caught in a vehicle with a storm bearing down, the general advice is to get into a low ditch, or a culvert, if possible. Staying in the car may be a dangerous move.

The Hereford fire marshal said the Friona storm last year got the attention of a wide area of the Panhandle.

In order to cope with storms of that magnitude, cities and counties, including Hereford and Deaf Smith County, have organized cooperatively for relief of areas victimized by the weather.

Deaf Smith, Randall, Castro, Parmer and Oldham Counties have joined in reciprocal agreements. Cities of Hereford, Canyon, Friona and Dimmitt also are parties to the agreement.

Spain said the agreements allow law enforcement, fire and emergency medical personnel to move freely from one entity to another, when called on to help in storm situations.

In Hereford, the city fire department and EMS take precautions to ensure that vehicles will be available at all times, he added.

"When there's danger, EMS will scatter their vehicles so they're not bunched together in a barn," Spain pointed out. "We do the same thing with our fire equipment."

Activation of the city's alarm sirens signals residents to take cover.

"That doesn't mean get out on the street," said Spain.

Since there are no designated storm shelters, citizens should go to an interior room, away from windows or to a cellar, if possible.

There is no siren signal for an "all clear" although residents may tune to the radio or television channels for further information.

Through cooperation of Hereford Cablevision, warnings may be run across all channels on the system, Spain reported.

He repeatedly reminded citizens to abstain from conducting their own tornado watches.

"Don't get out," he emphasized.

Controversy grows over FBI files on GOP leaders

WASHINGTON (AP)—An Army investigator detailed to the Clinton White House says he gathered FBI background files on prominent Republicans simply because they were on a Secret Service list for access to the building.

But the question congressional Republicans want answered is what use -- if any -- President Clinton's aides made of the 341 files once they arrived at the White House.

The controversy over the FBI files grew out of the latest twist in the travel office controversy, in which Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., disclosed that the White House got the FBI file of office director Billy Dale seven months after he was fired.

It turns out that Dale's file was one of hundreds the White House got from the FBI in late 1993 and early 1994.

A White House spokesman said Friday that said collecting the information was "an innocent bureaucratic mistake," but Republicans rejected the explanation and promised a full inquiry.

"Such a chilling abuse of power would scare anyone who has ever registered to vote," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas.

Armey said "it may take a hearing" on Capitol Hill to determine if these were all "innocent mistakes."

Among those whose FBI files were sent to the Clinton White House was Tony Blankley, press secretary to House Speaker Newt Gingrich. "Now we have a systematic attempt to use the FBI against their enemies," said Blankley.

But White House spokesman Mark Fabiani said the fact that so many files were obtained disproves Clinger's assertions that the White House was out to dig up dirt.

"Instead of attacking, Clinger and Speaker Gingrich should be apologizing," said Fabiani.

Others whose FBI files were sent to the White House included: --Former Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

--Former White House counsel Arthur Culvahouse, who worked in both the Reagan and Bush administrations.

--Former White House chief of staff Kenneth Duberstein.

--Former White House press secretaries James Brady and Marlin Fitzwater.

--GOP political operative David Carney.

--Former Republican National Committee communications director B. Jay Cooper.

Anthony Marceca of the Army Criminal Investigation Division said he was detailed to the Clinton White House in 1993 and that he did what he was assigned to do: send for FBI background files from names on a list that landed on his desk once a week from the Secret Service.

The names, however, were often those of prominent Republicans who had long since left the administration. Their names were in Secret Service computers as still having access to the White House.

The Bush administration had removed all background records when it left office and part of Marceca's job was to re-assemble them.

While the man Marceca answered to -- Craig Livingstone -- was a Clinton political appointee who had access to the vault where the FBI files were kept, Marceca said there was no misuse of the FBI material.

Marceca, a civilian fraud investigator for CID, said that "if there were any (FBI) backgrounds ordered, I'm the person who did it" and that while Livingstone reviewed the work that came in, it was Marceca who actually handled all the paperwork.

In an interview Friday night, Marceca said he recalls that procedures were changed sometime in late 1993 after Livingstone -- the head of the White House personnel security office -- said he met with then-associate White House counsel William Kennedy.

Many old names were purged at that time from the system and access to the White House was limited under strict requirements, said Marceca.

The weekly computerized lists of names from the Secret Service stopped coming to Marceca's desk.

Marceca said he was brought to the White House to help clear up a backlog of security checks -- a subject on which the newly ensconced

Experimental new rocket passes test

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) - An experimental reusable rocket that may eventually succeed the space shuttle completed its second test flight Friday, soaring nearly 2,000 feet above the desert and then landing upright.

Last month, the 42-foot tall rocket briefly burst into flames as it completed its first test flight, but officials said the damage was superficial and the Delta Clipper Experimental Advanced rocket flight was a success.

Program officials said Friday morning's flight, which lasted 63.6 seconds, was perfect.

"I think you can all tell by the grin on my face I'm very happy with the performance today," said Pete Conrad, a former Apollo astronaut and the Clipper's flight manager for McDonnell Douglas Corp., which is developing the craft.

The unmanned rocket, fueled by liquid hydrogen and oxygen, was expected to fly a longer mission later Friday. Scientists said they wanted to evaluate the results before giving the go-ahead for the second launch to reach an altitude of 10,300 feet in two minutes, 20 seconds.

The Clipper is part of a program by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to develop another generation of reusable launch vehicles to carry payloads into orbit. It is expected to complete five test flights by the end of July, going higher and doing more complex maneuvers each time.

The rocket was renamed Friday as the Clipper Graham after Gen. Daniel O. Graham, an early proponent of programs to develop reliable and economical space travel systems. The former adviser to President Reagan died Dec. 31.

The upgraded model of the first rocket to ever take off and land vertically on Earth blasted off about 10:15 a.m., trailing fire and leaving behind an enormous cloud of smoke. It rose to 1,950 feet in about 30 seconds, hovered and moved sideways for 550 feet for two seconds, then descended slowly, tail first, to the desert.

Indian claims he was put on stamp

By TIM TALLEY
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Five commemorative stamps depicting American Indian dances were unveiled at the nation's largest American Indian cultural festival Friday amid claims by a Pawnee Indian that his image was used on one of the stamps without permission.

U.S. Postal Service officials said they are investigating claims by Pawnee dancer Pat Moore that his image appears on the "Traditional Dance" commemorative stamp, one of a series designed by artist Keith Birdsong and issued on the opening day of the 10th annual Red Earth Festival.

"We're looking at it as an organization," said Cesta Ayres, manager of corporate relations for the Postal Service in Dallas. "As soon as we have definitive information, we'll make a decision."

The Daily Oklahoman reported Friday that Moore is trying to negotiate for a cash settlement from the Postal Service and is considering filing a lawsuit. Moore claims that the stamp's image of an American Indian dancer is based on a photograph of him wearing an elaborate feathered costume that he designed.

Moore's attorney, Valerie Corzine of Oklahoma City, could not be reached for comment.

Birdsong reportedly had planned to publicly apologize when the series was unveiled during the festival's opening ceremonies. But Birdsong told The Associated Press that Postal Service officials had instructed him not to comment on the controversy.

"They won't let me say anything," Birdsong said.

"He's here as a participant in the celebration to honor a rich cultural tradition - Native American dance," Ayres said. "He is not to apologize for anything he did or didn't do."

Moore told the Oklahoman he feels the incident is another example of artists' exploitation of American Indians. But Birdsong, a commercial artist from Muskogee who has Cherokee and Creek ancestry, said he does not take advantage of his native roots.

"My family has always been proud of my heritage," he said. "Being of Indian descent and not growing up in the culture, it was a way for me to give something to Indian culture. I've never tried to exploit it."

Birdsong's stamp designs were praised during the unveiling ceremony. Aside from the Traditional Dance, the stamps depict the Fancy Dance, Butterfly Dance, Hoop Dance and Raven Dance.

"Few designers can meet the exacting requirements to design a stamp," said Bert H. Mackie of Enid, a member of the Postal Service's board of governors.

We saw a lot of the southeastern United States this past week, taking a trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., with three other couples. We played a lot of golf and enjoyed the sights as we traveled some 3,500 miles in a span of 11 days. We were in two vehicles.

Although we were road-weary at times, it was a great trip and we lucked out on the weather all along the way. In addition, the four couples--Hoovers, Herrings, Sparks and Nieman--are still on speaking terms!

The golfing trip has been an annual happening with this group since going to Myrtle Beach 12 years ago. Our wives "surprise" us each Christmas by giving us a golfing trip to a destination they have selected. Since the gals are non-golfers, they pick an area they want to visit.

The Myrtle Beach area, in case you don't know, is a golfing mecca with about 94 golf courses within a short driving distance. It is also a growing entertainment center with a number of celebrity theaters now open. We saw the Gatlin Brothers, some good old West Texas boys, in their $7.5 million theater, as well as the Carolina Opry, a country-music production.

Other theaters include those of Alabama, Ronnie Milsap, and Dixie Stampede. From the two shows we attended, as well as our experiences in Branson, Mo., it's easy to see that these shows wouldn't make it without the bus tour business. The shows cater to professional tour groups as well as church, civic and senior citizen groups.

One of the highlights for our wives were the beautiful magnolia trees and wildflowers along the way. It was "Magnolia Month" in the far southeast. Lavon is still complaining because we didn't get off the interstate and get some pictures of the magnolia trees in bloom!

Another highlight for the ladies was a tour of Brookgreen Gardens, a National Historic Landmark. Founded in 1931 as the first public sculpture garden in the U.S., the property includes 9,127 acres extending from the beachfront on the Atlantic Ocean to the freshwater swamps along the Waccamaw River.

The garden currently has 547 sculptures by 241 artists and the collection is still growing. In the wildlife park, native animals and plants are presented in swamp and forest habitats. Majestic live oaks in the gardens are approximately 250 years old.

By the way, we got our fill of seafood while in South Carolina!

How to create a tourist sensation

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

I saw this story the other day and got the biggest kick out of it and thought you would as well.

Seems the town of Torrington, Alberta, Canada, had some money coming to it from its share of the Alberta lottery.

This money was to be used for developing tourism projects.

Well, folks, the 177 residents of Torrington, Alberta, have certainly got some attention with their use of the money.

You see, a resident of Torrington thought it would be cute if they took the $9,000 in tourism money and created a prairie dog museum.

As you know, prairie dogs are rather common beasts. In fact, around Torrington, they're killed by local farmers as pests.

So volunteers in Torrington used the money to have 54 gophers stuffed, first by a taxidermist in a nearby town, then later by a local man who learned the art himself.

The critters were then placed in cute poses, dressed up and given props, backdrops and catchy sayings. Admission of $1.50 was charged and everything was well and good.

That is, until the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals heard about this abomination.

PETA featured the museum in its "Purrs and Grrrs" column, sparking a year-long campaign against the mistreatment of the now-dead prairie dogs.

PETA members have written huge numbers of letters condemning the killing of prairie dogs for the museum.

Townpeople are not too worried about it, though.

One display in the two-room museum -- located in a refurbished former grain office -- have even created a prairie dog display poking fun at the PETA protest.

It shows one prairie dog dressed as the mayor, one as a bearded gopher-activist from GAGS (Gophers Against Getting Stuffed) having a tug-of-war between them for a third gopher.

The whole thing reminds me of a similar plan that was cooked up (briefly) in Lubbock several years ago.

At the time I was covering chamber of commerce meetings for the newspaper there.

At one meeting, a chamber official proposed -- somewhat jokingly -- that Lubbock's Prairie Dog Town (a semi-contained prairie dog village located in a park there) be "dressed up" as a tourist attraction.

At the time (and, presumably, still), Prairie Dog Town consisted of a low stone wall around a plot of dirt covered in prairie dog holes and populated by untold numbers of the critters.

Anyway, the suggestion was made to cover the prairie dog holes with models of Old West buildings, to which would be added signs, decorations and other things to give it a western town "look."

At the front corner to Prairie Dog Town, a giant (15-foot) fiberglass "Prairie Dog Pete" would be erected, welcoming the expected hordes of visitors.

Of course, this didn't go very far, but I thought the whole idea was great.

Actually, I anticipated some religious implications as well. After all, imagine the entire prairie dog colony crawling out of their decorated holes each night at sundown to parade across the dirt and bow in homage to their giant fiberglass prairie dog god! (Now I wonder what PETA would have thought about that?)

(Just a real quick reminder here from me as managing editor and not as columnist.)

(As you know, summer is pretty much a quiet time around Hereford for news events, what with school out and families on vacation.)

(If you know of something going on in the community that would make a good news or feature story, please give us a call. We want to cover events in Hereford year-round and you can sure help this summer.)

(Thanks in advance.)

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

The world is full of associations and organizations that are obligated to justify their existence by sending press releases by the bushel to media. Case in point: Across my desk came a release from the Lightning Protection Institute, an Illinois-based organization. It must be legitimate. It has a fax number.

Along with a myriad of statistics, i.e., lightning packs 100 million volts into a space of about one inch, the release offers some advice on what one should do if caught in an electrical storm.

For my part, I don't need a news release to tell me to stay away from water and plumbing fixtures, etc., during a storm, as the information does. I learned about that the hard way, at the age of 15.

Everyone knows that a thunderstorm, full of sound and fury, can stir up quickly in our part of the world. When I was a high school student, my family lived about a mile from town on a dirt road and the telephone was often iffy, at best.

To get to the point, one Sunday night after the rest of the family had gone to bed, I filled the bathtub and was luxuriating, without someone hammering on the door. There were a few flashes of lightning and low rumbles of thunder as rain began pelting down.

Suddenly, a deafening clap of thunder shattered my reverie. Then lightning flashed brighter than day and, to my everlasting surprise, I seemed to see little lightning bolts dancing across the water. Whether I was indeed shocked or just scared witless is debatable.

A loud call from my mother broke the silence after the crashing noise. Are you okay? she yelled. When I finally found my voice, I said a barely audible, yes. Get out of the tub, she ordered. Yes, I answered again. Now, she insisted. I will if I can, said I.

As I stepped out of the tub, I was shaking so hard that droplets of water were fairly flying all over the bathroom. Toweling was barely necessary but I managed to dry off and put on my pajamas, all the while my mother stood at the door asking me questions.

When I finally was dressed and walked out, she was waiting for me.

My parents had conferred about calling the doctor to see if I needed any special attention, I learned later. But, the telephone line was interrupted by the storm. Besides that, the road from the house to pavement appeared impassable at that time. In a sense, we were isolated.

For the next several hours, I was alternately shaking and nodding. With my mother's prompting I tried to memorize a poem for an English class the next day. All I can remember is the title, "When the Frost Is on the Pumpkin."

Toward morning, I dozed off and slept a few hours. When I got up to go to school, I was told I could take the day off. If I wanted, I could go to a nearby town with my grandparents. My grandmother had a doctor's appointment and my grandfather planned to go to a cattle auction, as was his custom.

Boy, that was a treat. Playing hooky was not acceptable in my family. The excuse was that I was so tired from my nighttime experience that I needed the rest. My mother would explain to the principal.

So, off we went to the city. First stop was the doctor's office. While I sat in the waiting room, my grandmother followed a nurse down the hall. In a few minutes, the nurse came back and said I could wait in another room, if I wanted to. That suited me. I was in no mood to look at all those sick people.

Soon, the doctor -- a friend of the family for years -- came in with stethoscope in hand. He was friendly and laughed at my story about the lightning.

Well, he said, let's see if your heart is still beating. Now, let me look into your eyes. And, I'll just tap your knees with this little hammer. Apparently, he was satisfied with my response to his quick examination so he said I could go, and left the room.

If my parents thought they were fooling me about the reason for my trip, they were mistaken. I realized when the doctor walked in that I, not my grandmother, was the patient that day. And, I felt better, too.

Now, I never get in the tub during a rainstorm. Nor do I wash dishes. I stay away, far away, from water, except in a glass.

Editorials from around the State

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Austin American-Statesman on Whitewater:
Last week's convictions of three of President Clinton's former business

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

While I admit to a total lack of knowledge concerning the newspaper business, I can't help but think there is a better use for the space currently used to print the Emergency Services report. In fact, I know a better use and you can kill two birds with one stone.

For whatever reason, kids involved in Kids, Inc., sports have been all but ignored by The Brand. I am partial to baseball and baseball is what's happening now, so I'll start there.

It seems to me that if there ever was a happening that is of local interest it would be our children, grandchildren, brothers or sisters, hitting a home run or striking out. Either way, pictures of and about our players positively affect far more people than the number of fights, DWI's or any other trash people create for themselves.

Please let me express my gratitude and deep respect for our law enforcement, EMS and fire department. I don't want to take anything away from the super jobs they do. However, the printing of a detailed crime report does not paint a very positive picture of our town.

I realize that not printing the report will not cause the number of incidents to decline. By the same token, neither will printing them. Why waste the space?

Here are the two birds: Kill the negative impact of the printed emergency report and use the space to correct the severe lack of attention given our local youth. Baseball is a start.

Regardless of whether the Emergency Services report is published, the fact that local youth activities have greatly overlooked still remains. In a time when good news seems harder and harder to find, we are missing the best news of all.

Respectfully,
Charlie Kerr

Editor's Note:

First, the lack of news about Kids, Inc., baseball is not about space used for other news, nor about positive and negative impacts. A newspaper mirrors community life, and there is good and bad news.

We'd like to report scores, league standings, etc., of the games. Each year we ask league officials to turn in the information, as we don't have the manpower to chase down the results. We're not being critical, but volunteers just don't take the time to report scores. Our sports editor gets out to shoot pictures occasionally and, at season's end, takes team photos of league champions.

Secondly, we challenge you to find another newspaper that prints more news about local youth activities. Surely you are referring only to summer youth baseball? We believe if you measure the column inches printed in The Brand about positive youth activities, it would outnumber the emergency services reports by a very large margin.

partners in a failed real estate venture show that faith in the judicial system is justified. For all the gloating that the president's critics are doing and for all the damage control that the president's supporters are trying, the fact remains that a jury did its job.

From the very outset, the confused and confusing tale of Whitewater -- an Arkansas resort deal that went sour -- has been perplexing. It has been examined and re-examined, but its still difficult to follow.

Republican partisans try to equate it with the Watergate scandal, but the differences between some yuppies trying to make a fast buck on real estate and a sitting president of the United States using the powers of his office to subvert the Constitution are profound.

That should not be read as excusing or minimizing illegal conduct. Kenneth Starr, the Texas-born special prosecutor in the Whitewater case, should exhaust all avenues in the case, even if that trail leads to the White House family quarters. ...

The Dallas Morning News on fighting the drought

After a famine struck, the Book of Joel describes ancient Israel this way: "The fields are laid waste, the ground mourns." Joel's remedy was to "Sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly. Gather the elders ... and cry to the Lord." Eventually, relief appeared.

Centuries later, some congregations and individuals seek a similar remedy for the drought afflicting the American Southwest. They make supplication, hoping for their own reprieve, like last week's drops of rain.

Now, agriculture loans are "called in" entirely when farmers or ranchers get in trouble. Mr. Perry suggests rural bankers should be able to call in just part of the loan. The extension would give agricultural producers more time to pay off their loans. Rural banks should like this idea, too, since their survival depends upon local farms and ranches.

Also, Texas legislators should consider the drought an ominous warning. Some ranchers complain they overuse their lands so they can raise enough crops or livestock to pay property tax.

Texas legislators recently let agricultural producers have more flexibility with their property taxes. But farmers and ranchers still face a predicament. As the state's share of educating children declines, from about 70 percent of education spending in Texas to just over 40 percent, local communities must make up the difference. In rural school districts, that means hiking taxes on farms and ranches.

A third drought remedy involves better agriculture practices. The current crisis may be exacerbated by ranchers over grazing their lands.

Some ranchers, for instance, stock their pastures anticipating high rain levels. When substantial rains do not materialize, a large herd puts extra pressure on the land.

Not Ward, a third-generation rancher near Cresson, advocates introducing more native prairie grasses, too. Little blue-stems and other native prairie grasses withstand drought and extreme cold better than imported grasses, he says. Former Soil and Conservation Service official R.J. Pederson cites how native prairie grasses "are nature's gift to us." They require no fertilization or mowing, he notes. And they last long, providing good hay crops.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL
When I am introduced as the new assistant director of the library, the first question people ask me is, "Are you taking Joe's Place?" Well, it would be pretty hard to take Joe Weaver's place. Joe's "place" was so uniquely his, and he did it so well, I'm not sure anyone else could take it.

The second question asked is, "Are you going to impersonate presidents like Joe did?" Here again, that was something that was special with Joe. Somehow a short, blonde/gray Abraham Lincoln loses some of its punch.

At this point my main challenge is trying to get the light pen to work them I check out books. (You have to hold your mouth just right).

However, I do hope to develop programs to share with the community. Being the new kid on the block has its ups and downs. All in all, it is proving to be a wonderful adventure. Not only am I privileged to meet many new people, but also I'm being introduced to the many-faceted world of our county library.

Even though my family and I have been regular patrons of the library, I had no idea of all the myriads of details that must be kept up with and the many services and materials offered by our county library. As I become more familiar with things here, I will share them with you. Even if you check out books regularly, you may not be aware of all the things available.

Since we moved from eastern Oklahoma to Hereford seven and a half years ago, I have worked at Nazarene Christian Academy. Teaching fourth grade was my favorite assignment there. The transition from school to the library has not been too traumatic, especially since we are launching into the summer reading program. It's sort of like summer school, but I don't have to grade papers.

Registration is now open for the summer program, with special activities planned for each Tuesday morning. Our theme this year is Ready...Set...Read. Each participant will get his/her name on a tennis show in the window, and as goals are reached for reading time, ribbons and prizes will be awarded.

Our first Tuesday morning activity was the movie Little Giants, with 260 children attending. On upcoming Tuesday mornings we will have crafts including sun visors, basketball goals for trash cans, beetlebug racers, and paddle wheel boats.

The last Tuesday of the program, July 9, will be a water park in the parking lot. On this day, be sure to dress to get wet and bring a towel with your name on it. In addition to being lots of fun, the summer reading program reinforces and establishes those hard-earned reading skills gained throughout the school year.

Also, don't forget to pick up your entry blank for the bookmark contest. Winners will have their creations distributed all over the Panhandle at the Tri-state Fair. Deadline for this contest is July 22.

Mar your calendar for June 20 for the Family Film. This month's movie is The Sandlot. Bring the kids, the neighbors, Grandma, and Grandpa. It's free, and the popcorn is only a quarter.

Adults are not left out this summer. We have just received two books for those of you who are interested in the O.J. trial. Whichever side you are on, we have a book for you. In Contempt by Christopher Darden chronicles what has been called the "trial of the century" from the prosecution's point of view. Darden shows what we could not see on television: behind-the-scenes meetings where Darden tried to determine whether detective Mark Fuhrman was telling the truth about his racist views; deteriorating relationships between the defense and prosecution teams, with taunting, baiting, and a pushing match between Darden and Simpson; and a judge who let the case get out of control while he collected hourglasses from fans and invited celebrities into his chambers. Beyond the trial itself, Darden addresses issues of his African-American heritage.

For those who wish a view from the other side, we have Robert Shapiro's The Search for Justice. This is the inside story from the man who assembled the "dream team," giving revealing glimpses of the defendant and others who names became household words such as F. Lee Bailey, Johnnie Cochran, Marcia Clark, and Judge Lance Ito. Shapiro tells us how he planned the defense strategy against what appeared to be overwhelming odds, and answers critics who claim that legal maneuvering and "loopholes" prevailed over justice. Woven through the story, is Shapiro's account of her personal struggle with loss of privacy resulting from intense media attention. Now, back to that light pen. Maybe if I close one eye...

Names in the News

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)--Like 17 drivers at this year's Indianapolis 500, many celebrity race fans were rookies.
"This is my first visit to the 500, and I'm not very knowledgeable about racing," Alex Trebek, the host of television's "Jeopardy" game show, said Sunday.
David Letterman and Paul Newman, who have been involved in auto racing for years, skipped this year's Indy 500, opting for the inaugural U.S. 500 in Michigan.
Most of the sport's big name drivers competed in the U.S. 500 to protest new qualifying rules at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.
Other celebrity first-timers at the Speedway included Jonathan Silverman, star of the series "The Single Guy," and Barry Williams, who portrayed Greg Brady on "The Brady Bunch" television series.

Rodman grabs Game 2 win Rebounder secures Bulls' 2nd victory

Horse show trophy winners

Local girls score highly at horse show

A quartet of girls from the Deaf Smith County 4-H club brought trophies home from the Lamb County 4-H Horse Show, including two who captured reserve all-around honors. Amy Northcutt in the junior division and Toni Kay Payne in the pee wee division both received reserve all-around, which means runner-up to the all-around winner. Payne also picked up the reserve performance title.

Also from the Deaf Smith club, Kalyn Esqueda and Kasi Gallagher earned trophies.

The event was held June 1 in Lubbock. It was originally scheduled to be held Earth - which actually is in Lamb County - but rain forced the move to Lubbock.

Northcutt placed in nine events, winning two, showmanship and barrels. She placed third in halter, stakes, poles and flags; fourth in western pleasure and western riding; and fifth in western horsemanship.

Payne also won two events in the pee wee division, halter and western horsemanship. She took third in showmanship and western pleasure; fourth in stakes and flags; and fifth in barrels and poles.

Esqueda took high point performance in the pee wee division. She won two events, showmanship and western pleasure. She took second in western horsemanship and fifth in halter.

Gallagher, also in the pee wee division, claimed third in western horsemanship and fourth in halter and western pleasure.

CHICAGO (AP) - Dennis Rodman was never quite the distraction that many predicted. Sure, he changed his hair styles, pursued his unique off-the-floor lifestyle and had run-ins with referees, even head-butting one and drawing a suspension.

But without Rodman's relentless rebounding and fearless defense, the Chicago Bulls would not have won a record 72 games this season.

And without that same aggressive play from the man of many tattoos and body piercings, they might not be up 2-0 in the NBA Finals.

"Dennis came into Chicago with one purpose in mind and that was to rebound and do whatever he can to get us the championship," Michael Jordan said after Rodman's 20-rebound performance Friday night bailed the Bulls out in a 92-88 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

"He came in with a lot of heart, especially down the stretch. The rebounding that he's done for us really has made a difference, not just in the Finals but all through the playoffs."

After Game 1, Seattle coach George Karl had a different opinion of Rodman. He claimed he flopped, acted and faked foul calls and laughed at his teammates, referees and the rest of the league.

Before Game 2, Karl said Rodman "cheats all over the court, all the time."

But Karl had no choice other than to salute the NBA's strangest player after the game Friday night.

Rodman tied a Finals record with 11 offensive rebounds, chased down the ball after a free-throw miss by Scottie Pippen in the final seconds, won a crucial jump ball and then hit a free throw to seal the victory.

"There is no question he was the MVP of the game," Karl said. "His offensive rebounds hurt us. A lot of possessions, the momentum of the game, the style of the game and even the scoreboard might have changed."

"When he got the last one that barely hit the rim... He's an amazing rebounder."

The Bulls needed Rodman on a night when they played unevenly and shot poorly. They hit 39 percent on field goals, missed 14 free throws and had just one field goal in the final six minutes.

"I thought we'd play little better, but we didn't," Rodman said. "But that's what the playoffs are all about. The people got their money's worth and we hope we can get one Sunday."

Under the 2-3-2 format, the SuperSonics now get three straight games at Key Arena, where they were 38-3 this season. Seattle has not suffered three straight losses at any time this season.

But these are the Bulls. "We think they're beatable. But by the same token, you don't win 72 games by fluke," SuperSonics guard Hersey Hawkins said. "We understand that to beat this team, you can't play 45 minutes. You have to play 48 minutes and that's what it's going to take for us Sunday afternoon in Seattle."

The Sonics were much closer to victory Friday night than they were in Game 1. Led by Shawn Kemp's 29 points, they had a chance, but managed only one basket in the final four minutes.

Kemp's two free throws with 12 seconds left cut Chicago's lead to 91-88, and Seattle fouled Pippen, who missed both free throws.

Pippen's second attempt barely grazed the front of the rim. But Rodman grabbed the rebound at the same time as Sam Perkins, and a jump ball was called. Rodman controlled the tip, outjumping a player a couple of inches taller, and clinched the victory seconds later with his final foul shot.

"He just got a hand on it," Perkins said.

Whiteface tennis, football camps planned this week

Whiteface Tennis Camp starts this week, and Herd coach Ed Coplen hopes there will be enough interest in the camp to start a league to last throughout the summer.

Coplen asks that any boys or girls who are entering the first grade through the 12th grade come to camp this week and let him know if they're interested in playing in the league.

The tennis camp will be held all week - Monday-Friday - at Whiteface Courts (north of the high school). The morning sessions, for incoming first-sixth graders, will start at 8:30 a.m. and end at 11:30. The afternoon sessions, for incoming seventh-12th graders, will start at 1 p.m. and end at 4.

The cost of the tennis camp is $25. Players can register at the beginning of their respective sessions on Monday. For more information, contact Coplen at 364-6969.

The Whiteface Football Camp also will be held this week, Monday-Wednesday only.

The athletic department of the Hereford Independent School District is offering camps for instruction in several sports throughout the summer. The camps will be organized and instructed by coaches of the Hereford High School varsity teams. Registration forms are available at Hereford Junior High, at all elementary schools and at the athletic directors' offices (at the field house and HJH).

In addition, three weeks worth of golf camps are planned for late in the summer, organized by Dave Kaesheimer, the golf pro at Pitman

Municipal Golf Course, and Herd golf coach Stacey Bixler.

Following is information for each remaining camp:

Football--June 10-12. Morning sessions for incoming fourth-sixth graders, from 9-11:30 a.m.; afternoon sessions for incoming seventh-ninth graders, from 1-3:30 p.m. The cost of the three-day camp is $20.

For more information, contact Craig Yenzen at 363-7626.

Girls' basketball--June 24-28. All-day sessions for incoming fourth-ninth graders, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. The cost of the five-day camp is $30.

Volleyball--July 15-19. All-day sessions for incoming fourth-ninth graders, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. The cost of the five-day camp is $30.

For more information, contact Brenda Reeh at 363-7633.

Golf--All the golf camps are for both boys and girls. The fees have not been set yet.

The first two weeks of golf camp - the junior camp - will be July 8-12 and July 15-19. Each week includes early sessions for golfers aged 8-13 (from 8 a.m.-1 p.m.) and afternoon sessions for ages 14-18 (from 2-7 p.m.). Golfers can choose to attend either week or even both weeks.

The third golf camp is the Pee Wee camp, set for Aug. 5-9, for kids aged 5-7. It includes morning sessions from 9-11:30 a.m.

For information on the golf camps, call the Pitman Pro Shop at 363-7139.

Bockrath leaves Tech for Alabama

By JAY REEVES
Associated Press Writer
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) - Alabama's athletic department broke with the past Friday to hire Texas Tech's Bob Bockrath as director, passing over a disciple of the late Paul "Bear" Bryant for the job.

Bockrath, selected over former Bryant assistant Mal Moore and Houston athletic director Bill Carr, vowed to run a "clean program" at Alabama, where the football program remains in the NCAA doghouse.

"I take a very strong position regarding NCAA compliance," said Bockrath, 53. "We will adhere to the rules, and we will continue to win."

The new director replaces Hootie Ingram, who quit last August saying the severe NCAA sanctions against the Crimson Tide football program would prevent him from doing his job effectively.

Ingram remains with the university in a role overseeing an expansion of Bryant-Denny Stadium. Glen Tuckett, a friend of Bockrath, has been serving as interim athletic director.

All three finalists to replace Ingram on a permanent basis rose through the ranks after getting their starts in football, which reigns supreme at Alabama. Men's basketball coach David Hobbs said he was unconcerned about the hiring of another football man as AD.

"I know he's had a lot of success at Texas Tech. His background is diverse," said Hobbs. "There's a place for everybody."

Bockrath, 53, played under Bo Schembechler at Miami of Ohio before working as an assistant coach at Purdue and Arizona. He moved into administration and remained for 11 years until being hired at California-Berkeley.

Bockrath went to Texas Tech in 1993 and has since increased fund-raising, improved facilities and increased staff.

Rockies rough up Maddux, 19-8

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Colorado Rockies, coming off a long day, made it an even longer night for Greg Maddux.

Colorado chased the four-time Cy Young winner in the fourth inning, and went on to set a team record for runs Friday night in a 19-8 romp over the Atlanta Braves.

The rout came after the Rockies returned home at 4:30 a.m. following a road trip that ended with a 14-7 victory in Houston. Needing the rest, the Rockies skipped pregame batting practice at Coors Field and decided to take their chances against the Atlanta ace.

"I don't recommend it as a way of beating Maddux all the time," Colorado manager Don Baylor said. "Tonight it was effective. It might not be the next time."

Maddux was tagged for seven runs and 11 hits in 3 1-3 innings, his shortest stint since lasting 3 1-3 innings on July 7, 1991. He allowed seven earned runs for the first time since July 1, 1990.

Maddux wound up with a no-decision that left him with a 5-4 record, although his ERA increased to 3.41.

"I made some bad pitches and gave up hits, but I gave up some hits on good pitches, too," he said.

"Games like this happen. It's part of the game."

Dante Bichette homered as the Rockies tied a club mark with 21 hits. Ellis Burks, who drove in four runs, and Bichette each had three hits.

"We gave up our share of runs, but the whole league played big today," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "We looked like the American League."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 10-0, Houston defeated Philadelphia 11-5, Florida topped New York 12-2, Montreal downed Chicago 9-3, St. Louis stopped San Francisco 9-4 and Cincinnati edged Los Angeles 2-1.

The Braves took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first before Colorado erupted. The Rockies scored two runs in the second, twice in the third and three times in the fourth, tying it at 7.

They took a 12-8 lead with five runs in the fifth, and added seven runs in the seventh.

Eric Young drove in three runs and Andres Galarraga and Walt Weiss each had two RBIs. Colorado beat the Braves for just the seventh time in 40 meetings in their four-year history.

"Maybe it was just our time against Maddux and the Braves," Young said. "We've just come from a road trip where we had nothing but bad luck, and it's only fair that the luck balances out at home."

Astros 11, Phillies 5
Jeff Bagwell and Derek Bell each homered and drove in three runs as Houston gave Carlos Crawford a rude welcome to the major leagues.

Crawford, called up from the minors Wednesday, gave up 10 runs in 3 2-3 innings. But only two of those runs were earned - Crawford's wild throw was one of three Philadelphia errors during a six-run fourth inning.

Bagwell hit his 19th homer, and Bell's two-run single ended Crawford's evening at the Astro-dome.

Pirates 10, Padres 0
Zane Smith won his 100th career game and recorded his 1,000th lifetime strikeout as Pittsburgh won at San Diego.

Smith (4-3), using a new knuckleball as a kind of changeup, pitched a six-hitter in his first complete game since 1994.

Tigers break long losing streak

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers will do anything for a victory, so they accepted without shame one resulting from a bloop hit that would have been caught under ordinary circumstances.

But there is nothing ordinary about the Tigers. They have been very bad from the start of the season. On Friday night - when they ended a seven-game losing streak in a way they weren't expecting - they were lucky.

"We can't count on being lucky to break out of it," manager Buddy Bell said after the Tigers snapped an 11-game home losing streak with only their second win in 21 games.

They beat the New York Yankees 6-5 on Travis Fryman's two-out bloop single in the last of the ninth. Luck entered the picture right there.

Curtis Pride scored the winning run, coming all the way around from first on Fryman's hit.

"They gave me the steal sign and I had a real good jump," Pride said. "I didn't see where the ball landed, but I said, 'I'm going.'"

Yankees manager Joe Torre said he thought second baseman Mariano Duncan would have caught Fryman's bloop if he wasn't covering the bag for Pride.

"We weren't in the right places tonight, I guess," Torre said. "He's stealing second and we're covering second and (Fryman) hits the ball where no one can get to it."

Pride had a career-high four hits for Detroit, including two doubles.

"I'm happy," Pride said. "But I'm happiest we got the win."

Fryman had three hits for the Tigers and Wade Boggs was 3-for-5 for New York.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Boston 10, Milwaukee 7; Chicago 8, Baltimore 2; Kansas City 9, Seattle 5; Cleveland 4, California 3; Oakland 6, Minnesota 4; and Texas 10, Toronto 7.

The Yankees lost for just the second time in seven games.

Pride reached base when his grounder to second hit Kimera Barbee. Pride took off on a steal attempt as Fryman hit an 0-1 pitch, and never hesitated attempting to score, sliding in easily ahead of the throw to the plate.

Jeff Nelson (1-2) started the ninth for New York and took the loss.

Rangers 10, Blue Jays 7
Dean Palmer and Rusty Greer drove in three runs each for Texas, and bad defense by visiting Toronto led to several more, overshadowing a big night by the Blue Jays' Carlos Delgado.

The Rangers led 5-0 one out into the game off Toronto rookie Marty Janzen (3-2), then added two runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Delgado tried keeping the Blue Jays close as he went 4-for-5 with four RBIs, including his first home run since May 2.

That two-RBI hit chased Texas starter Roger Pavlik, who improved to 8-1. Mike Henneman worked the ninth for his 17th save.

De La Hoya halts Chavez

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Julio Cesar Chavez proclaimed heading into the fight that he was in great condition. Oscar De La Hoya applauded that news, saying he wanted to hear no excuses afterward.

He did.

After De La Hoya gashed the left eye of Chavez with a pair of powerful left jabs in the first minute of the fight and beat him into a bloody mess by the time it was stopped in the fourth, Chavez said he had cut the eye sparing five days earlier, and it hadn't healed properly.

"I did not feel the punch in the first round," said Chavez, who was stopped for the first time ever and lost for just the second in 100 career fights. "My corner tried to fix the area, but it was very delicate to start with."

"I did not feel Oscar's punches. If it wasn't for my injury, which happened five days before the fight, I would not make it easy for Oscar to win. I did not want to cancel because the fight promotion was too far on the way," Chavez said through an interpreter before being taken to the hospital to have his mangled brow stitched up.

"Definitely I want to come back because I can't lose this way. I'm going to do two more fights and after that, we will see. I really want revenge."

White Sox 8, Orioles 2
Alex Fernandez scattered 11 hits as visiting Chicago snapped Baltimore's four-game winning streak while hitting three home runs.

Tony Phillips, Ron Karkovics and Robin Ventura homered off Scott Erickson, who had yielded only two homers in 63 1-3 innings this season. Chicago got 14 hits, including three by Phillips, in its seventh win in eight games.

Monterey wins Class 5A crown

AUSTIN (AP) - In a game delayed nearly five hours because of early morning rain showers on Friday, Lubbock Monterey saved the best for last in this year's state tournament with a dramatic 5-4 victory over Klein Oak in the 5A title game.

Dusty Hart delivered a clutch two-run single in the sixth inning and Mark Martinez threw dizzying curve balls to help Monterey come from behind and seal the victory early Saturday morning.

Monterey (36-3), making a record tying 12th appearance at the state tournament, won its fourth state title in a game that began just before midnight.

In the Class 4A title game, Mike McCoy gave up just three hits and Fort Worth Arlington Heights exploded on offense in a 14-0 victory over Little Cypress-Mauriceville.

In the Class 3A championship, Regi McKnight laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to bring home the winning run in the top of the seventh as Crockett defeated Graham 8-6.

In Class 2A, Patrick Colon pitched a one-hitter and was supported with great defense as Weimar defeated Gilmer Harmony 4-0 for the state title.

In Class 1A, Jason Simank and Twone Simmons each hit inside-the-park home runs and Thorndale scored two runs on an error in the top of the seventh as it claimed a 7-5 victory over Spurger for the title.

Failed baseball tryout sent Aggie to Olympics

By JACK STALLARD
The Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas - Had W.F. "Buddy" Davis not been such a valuable asset to the Texas A&M University basketball team during his freshman year, he might never have won a gold medal in the high jump at the 1952 Olympic Games.

"I guess that's one way to put it," said Davis, who has led a life to rival that of the fictional character "Forrest Gump."

It's a life that took Davis, now 65 and living in Lufkin, from a childhood bout with polio to Olympic glory, a pair of NBA championships and a long career in the banking business.

Along the way, he married his next-door neighbor and childhood sweetheart despite the fact the two were forbidden to associate with one another as children because she attended Catholic school and he was in the public school system.

The two, approaching their 47th anniversary, have 9 children and 15 grandchildren.

An entire room in his home is decorated with plaques, pictures and faded newspaper clippings chronicling the athletic accomplishments of Davis, a member of the Texas High School Basketball Hall of Fame, the Texas Sports Hall of Fame and the Texas A&M Hall of Fame.

Davis' pride and joy, the gold medal he won in the high jump at the 1952 Olympic Games in Helsinki, Finland, sits on a shelf encased in a glass bubble.

As a child in Nederland, Davis gave little thought about being an Olympic athlete or a member of an NBA championship team.

He simply wanted to walk. At the age of nine Davis was stricken with infantile paralysis, a form of polio that left both legs virtually paralyzed. To help strengthen his legs Davis' mother may have invented the first stationary bicycle.

"I didn't have the crippling kind of polio," Davis said. "I had the kind that got the muscle instead of the nerves. It took me five or six years to get over it. My legs just had no strength, so we put a bicycle up on its kickstand and I would spend hours peddling in place."

Davis entered high school as a 6-foot tall freshman, but was 6-4 by the time he started his sophomore year, 6-7 as a junior and 6-8 as a senior. He is 6-9 now.

He earned a basketball scholarship from Texas A&M and decided during the off-season he would try out for the freshman baseball team. It turned out to be the beginning of Davis' high-jumping career.

Davis struck out eight men in three innings in his first freshman baseball game for the Aggies, but failed to make the team.

"I just knew I was going to make the team, but the baseball coach was also the basketball coach. He told me he had six pitchers but just one center, so it was back to the gym for me," Davis said.

On his way back to the gymnasium, Davis walked across Kyle Field where the track team was working out. Still in his baseball uniform and needing to let off some steam, Davis zeroed in on the high jump area and cleared 5-9.

"The track coach saw me and asked me to go to a freshman track meet with the team that weekend. I said yes if he could make it OK with the basketball coach who had just kicked me off the baseball team," Davis said.

With no training in the high jump, Davis tied for second in his first meet that weekend. He participated in both sports as a sophomore, and as a junior he helped lead the A&M basketball team to its first Southwest Conference title in 26 years.

Davis got a late start on the track season because the basketball team was in Kansas City for the NCAA Tournament, but he made up for lost time by clearing 6-9 in his first meet.

"The highest I had ever jumped before that was 6-4," he said. "My coach was in Europe coaching the Armed Forces team, and he read about the 6-9 jump in Stars and Stripes. As soon as he got back he switched my full basketball scholarship to a half basketball, half track scholarship so he could get dibs on me in the spring."

Davis' 6-9 leap was the top jump in the nation that year, and he won the SWC title as a senior with an official jump of 6-10 1/2, earning an invitation to try out for the Olympic team and earning one of the three spots on the team reserved for high jumpers.

"I had no idea just how big it was," Davis said. "Back then communication was nothing like it is now. I was in college before I saw my first television set. The only communication we had was through newspapers and radio."

The field of 156 high jumpers from around the world was narrowed to 20 by the time the bar was set at 6-1 in the first day of competition in Helsinki. At 6-2 one of the American jumpers was eliminated, and the other eventually missed his three jumps to leave only Davis to represent the United States.

Davis won the gold medal with a jump of 6-8 1/2.

"It's hard to describe the feeling," Davis said. "Here's an old boy from Nederland who had hardly ever been out of town, but at that particular moment they play the national anthem you realize you are the No. 1 athlete in the world's largest sporting event."

When Davis returned to the United States he found out he had been drafted by the Philadelphia Warriors of the NBA. He also received a cable from future Houston Oilers' owner Bud Adams asking him to put off signing with the Warriors until the two could meet.

Adams, who was attempting his first venture into secondary sports, wanted Davis to play basketball for the ADA Oilers and to work for ADA Oil Co. in Houston.

Since Davis still held hopes of setting the world record in the high jump, he took Adams up on his offer - turning down a contract with the Warriors and keeping his amateur status intact.

That summer Davis broke the world record at the AAU national meet in Akron, Ohio with a jump of 6-11 1/2.

The following week Davis, married with two children and another on the way, signed a contract with the Warriors.

He spent five seasons with Philadelphia and one season with the St. Louis Hawks, winning NBA titles with each and retiring from the game after being traded to the Boston Celtics.

"By this time we had five children with one on the way. The money was good, but to be away from my family the way I was, it wasn't that good," Davis said.

Davis returned to Texas to work for the district attorney's office in Port Arthur for three years before moving to Vidor and getting into the banking business.

He worked in Vidor, Groves, Wharton, El Campo and Texarkana over the next 25 years before retiring in 1987.

"I took early retirement, which basically means they fired me and bought out my contract and stock options," Davis said. "I tried retirement for a year, but there wasn't enough to do and my wife got tired of running me off, so we moved to Puerto Rico and I took a job with the Coast Guard."

fishing, playing golf and helping his wife renovate their house.

With the Olympic Games set for July in Atlanta, Davis is once again in the spotlight. He has a stack of letters from around the world, most received in recent weeks, requesting his autograph.

"Because of this," said Davis as he pointed to his Olympic gold medal. "I don't think I will ever be forgotten. That's a nice feeling."

New book tells Hogan's story

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Since the first human with a stick hit the first rock, sportsmen have sought the secret of the most efficient and productive way to propel an object straight and long.

The Old Course in St. Andrews dates back to the 15th century and there the game evolved from feathery balls (stuffed with goose feathers) being struck by wooden-faced clubs with hickory shafts to the modern Great Big Bertha titanium-faced drivers and hot surlyn and balata golf balls.

For eons golfers have looked for the "secret" that would turn them from Jack the Duffer to Jack Nicklaus.

Ben Hogan probably made the most money by teasing the general public with "the secret"

Curt Sampson has just released a book on Hogan through Rutledge Hill Press that not only deals with the Hogan mystique but it delves into "the secret" that "The Hawk" claimed he knew about the golf swing.

Hogan wouldn't work with Sampson on the book entitled "Hogan" but the former PGA Tour professional who lives in Ennis crafted a book you can't put down, particularly when it comes to talking about the golf secrets of the Texas hawk, who by the way was born in Dublin, Texas not Fort Worth as everyone thinks.

In 1954 Hogan pocketed $10,000 from Life Magazine for just a debate on Hogan's unlocking of the mystery of golf.

It was called: "Ben Hogan's Secret: A Debate."

A year later, Life hit the stands with the story "Hogan's Secret. Ben Hogan Finally Reveals the Mysterious Maneuver That Made Him A Champion."

Sampson's book points out that there was no way Hogan's secret would help the average golfer.

In fact, Hogan himself said "I doubt it will be worth a doggone to the weekend duffer and it will ruin a bad golfer."

Hogan labeled his move "pronation" and it involved turning the left hand to the left, fanning the club open on the back swing and cupping his left wrist inward on the backswing.

Hogan had trouble hooking the ball and this turned him into a fader of the golf ball. Most of the nation's golfers slice the ball to the right anyway. Hogan's secret, according to the book, wasn't a big help.

Later, Hogan penned a popular book called "Five Lessons: The Modern Fundamentals of Golf." It was a best seller although most of the people buying it had problems executing Hogan style.

Sampson's book is full of nuggets on Hogan, who still lives in Fort Worth. However, the book wasn't well received by the Hogan household. Wife Valeri thought the book was too hard on Hogan, who had a stern countenance when he was going about his golfing business.

The Scots called him "The Wee Ice Man" after his only trip abroad to win the British Open at Carnoustie in 1953.

Sampson reminds us that Herbert Warren Wind once wrote about Hogan that he played the game with "the burning frigidity of dry ice."

Sampson points out that until Hogan came along the PGA Tour "was a rolling fraternity party. He was the first to take it (golf) seriously. He literally invented practice. No one practiced after a round before him. Now, every pro does."

Sampson said there was a fascination for Hogan because "the Little Man succeeded against long odds. He quite obviously was a man with personal, and professional secrets. His secret was that golf is a chess game in which mental powers supersede the physical."

Sampson said "Hogan" is not an authorized biography because "he and I have had only two extended conversations which is two more than most people get."

The book is a must read for any golfer whether he admired Hogan or not. He was one of the greatest golfers who ever played. And Sampson covers all 18 holes of Hogan's career admirably.

Local feedyard includes employees, families in activities based on teaching job safety

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor
Not many companies offer a two day safety training program for their employees that also includes special activities for members of the employees' families, a hamburger lunch and a steak supper.

For a feedyard to provide such a program is undoubtedly the exception rather than the rule.
Great Plains Cattle Feeders, located 14 miles north of Hereford, did just that for the third consecutive year this past week.

"We want to promote the family, including the kids," said Jeff Matsler, assistant manager at Great Plains.

"We want them to know what we do on the job, understand the importance of safety and what we work around."

The two-day clinic also affords an opportunity for the employees who work in different areas of the yard to become better acquainted and understand the role that good working relationships can play in maintaining a safe work environment.

Since most activity in a feedyard involves the use of horses, much of the instruction during the clinic revolved around the importance of proper training and safe use of horses.

Instructor for the clinic was a professional cutting horse trainer, Scott McClurg from Weatherford, who also brought his wife, three daughters and his eldest daughter's girlfriend -- in keeping with the main idea of a family-oriented activity.

McClurg worked first with the employees' children and gave them an opportunity for some hands-on experience with horses.

Then he turned his attention to the employees, giving them instruction on an individual basis.

"I have been through this first by myself and I am willing to help others so they won't have to learn the hard way like I did. It's really just all-around horsemanship," McClurg said.

He has trained and shown cutting horses professionally since 1980, winning more than $250,000 in prize money.

On the first day of the clinic, during a break in the training, the employees and their families were served a lunch of hamburgers cooked by Matsler.

The training continued through part of the second day then concluded with fun activities -- golf, volleyball, team roping -- for all those who had been involved.

The finale was a steak supper cooked over a campfire by Donnie Fangman and Wayne Walker and served from an authentic chuck wagon.

In a part of the country where working with cattle and horses is not only a way of making a living, but is often a way of life, this feedyard has found a viable way of combining the two.

Cooking for the crew

Donnie Fangman tends to the supper cooking over the campfire as he and Wayne Walker prepare to serve the employees of Great Plains Cattle Feeders and their families at the end of the feedyard sponsored two-day safety and horse clinic.

This is how it's done

Scott McClurg, in the foreground, is a professional cutting horse trainer. He is shown giving some specific handling tips to employees of Great Plains Cattle Feeders as family members watch from outside the fence.

Bone is not a hard and lifeless structure, but a complex, living tissue. Bones provide structural support for muscles, protect vital organs and store the calcium essential for bone density and strength.

Because bones are constantly changing, they can heal and may be affected by diet and exercise. Until the age of about 35, you build and store bone efficiently. Then, as part of the natural aging process, your bones begin to break down faster than new bone can be formed.

In women, bone loss accelerates after menopause, when ovaries stop producing estrogen--the hormone that protects against bone loss.

Think of your bones as a savings account. There is only as much bone mass in your account as you deposit. The critical years for building bone mass are from prior to adolescence to about age 30.

Some experts believe that young women can increase their bone mass by as much as 20 percent--a critical factor in protecting against osteoporosis.

To determine if you have osteoporosis or may be at risk for the disease, see a physician who will ask a variety of questions about your lifestyle and medical history. Your doctor will want to know if anyone in your family has suffered from osteoporosis or if they have fractured bones.

Based on a comprehensive medical assessment, your doctor may recommend that you have your bone mass measured. A bone mass measurement is the only way to tell if you have osteoporosis.

Specialized tests called bone density tests can measure bone density in various sites of the body. A bone density test can help detect possible fractures before they occur.

HRMC offers therapy for arthritis sufferers

Arthritis is a disease of the joints that causes pain and swelling, but arthritis sufferers in Hereford now have another answer to their problem. Hereford Regional Medical Center's Physical Therapy department has developed a rehabilitation program for arthritis patients to help relieve the pain and reduce the swelling.

"Patients with arthritis feel better when they learn to keep moving, control their pain, and focus on activities they can perform," said Crystal Backus, RPT, director of physical therapy.

"If a patient has just learned that he or she has arthritis, we need to make an evaluation to learn where the disease is. We can work with the patient in give instructions in exercise, safety and pacing techniques," she said. As with any physical therapy treatment, a physician's referral is required.

Every man has got his follies and often they are the most interesting things he's got.
—Josh Billings

New guidelines for treatment from the American College of Rheumatology and the Arthritis Foundation emphasize physical therapy intervention and are a strong endorsement of exercise to reduce pain and increase function.

Backus explained that exercise strengthens muscles, increases mobility and improves symptoms.

For more information about the arthritis rehabilitation program at HRMC, call the physical therapy department at 364-2141, ext. 243 or ask your physician.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"Would that there were an award for people who come to understand the concept of enough. Good enough. Successful enough. Thin enough. Rich enough. Socially responsible enough. When you have self-respect you have enough and when you have enough, you have self respect." --Gail Sheehy's Passages

You may, or may not, agree with the above, but it does provide some food for thought.

Jim Stiert, editor of Co-Op Connection, includes news of the achievements of area youth in the WTRT Bulletin Board portion of that news magazine. This includes 4-H, rodeo, sports, music, scholastic and other events in which the youth are involved. I enjoy "keeping up with our kids" through the WTRT newsletter and appreciate being on the mailing list.

Word has been received from Linda Dutton, VFW Auxiliary president, that Maria Solis' essay on "My American Hero" has placed in the area VFW essay competition. Maria featured her father in her essay. Maria has written several essays during her seventh grade year and has the promise of becoming a very talented writer. Congratulations, Maria.

Several Junior Historians have called with inquiries about meetings this summer. We do plan to have a planning meeting during the week of June 16-23. If any of you Junior Historians are interested in this meeting, contact Krista Warren, Mark Shakocius or Natalie Nino. They, in turn, can contact me. We will work on plans for the summer and for the fall.

If anyone has news about HJH, its students and/or teachers, that you would like included in this column during the summer, please contact me. There are many activities going on, but I will naturally miss some of them, so call and "fill me in."

HJH teachers and students are GREAT! This have been proved over and over during this past school year. I cannot thank them enough for the love and support they afforded me during this year. To Marylin, Sarah, Richard, every teacher, aide, custodian, cook, student and all who are associated with HJH, a BIG THANK YOU!!!

"Parents are those people in your life who dream great dreams for you, but then let you chase the dreams you have for yourself and love you just the same."

MR. AND MRS. LEE CHILDERS JR. ...exchange vows

Couple repeats vows

Elizabeth Floyd and Lee Childers Jr., both of San Diego, Calif., were united in marriage April 6 in the Central Church of Christ in Hereford with Tom Bailey, pastor of the church, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Lauri Peer of San Diego. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Childers Sr. of Hereford.

The bride was escorted to the altar by Melvin Holmes, uncle of the groom.

Matron of honor was Crystal Ruland, cousin of the groom. Best man was the father of the groom.

Serving as bridesmaid was Tina Wells, cousin of the groom. Groomsman was Thurman Childers, grandfather of the groom.

Guests were seated by Jimmy Lacomb Jr. and Shannon Wells, cousins of the groom.

Candle lighters were Frankie and T.J. Childers, brothers of the groom. Flower girl was Chrissy Ruland, cousin of the groom and daughter of Crystal and Clint Ruland of Hereford. Ring bearer was Jonathan Brummett, cousin of the groom and son of Chris and Tammy Brummett of Hereford.

Shirley Lacomb, aunt of the groom, presided at the guest registry. The couple was honored with a reception in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony.

Guests were served cake and punch by Tammy Brummett, Cindy Lacomb and Sonja Satterfield, all cousins of the groom, and Beth Kilpatrick.

The groom is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School. He is currently a lance corporal in the Marines stationed at Camp Pendleton in San Diego.

The couple will reside in San Diego until the end of Childers' enlistment in two years, then plan to make their home in Hereford.

Couple plans August wedding in Amarillo

Albert and Pat Cupell of Amarillo are pleased to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, April, to Danny Hart of Midland, son of Fred and Judy Hart of Borger.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Clea Bowers of Hereford and Jo Ed and Anita Cupell of Amarillo. The couple plans to be married Aug. 17 in the Paramount Terrace Christian Church in Amarillo.

Miss Cupell is a junior at Texas Tech University, seeking a degree in elementary education.

The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of Texas Tech and is currently employed as a petroleum engineer for Anadarko Petroleum in Midland.

Military Muster

Marine Pvt. Benito Ortiz, son of Benito and Ernestina Ortiz of Hereford, recently completed basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

Ortiz successfully completed 11 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally in both classroom and field assignments. Ortiz and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values -- honor, courage and commitment, and what the words mean in guiding personal and professional conduct.

He is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School.

APRIL CUPELL, DANNY HART

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I really enjoyed those mangled excuse notes from parents to teachers. Some were so funny, I laughed out loud. I'm enclosing an article from Popular Science magazine that revealed some hilarious test answers given by students in science classes. Ann, these were not contrived. They are real. I hope you will print them and give your readers a good laugh. -- Tom in Sacramento

Dear Tom: I don't for one minute doubt the validity of those responses. However, you didn't say how old these students are. If they are older than 13, I fear for our country. Here are the responses:

To collect fumes of sulfur, hold a deacon over a flame in a test tube.

When you smell an odorless gas, it is probably carbon monoxide.

Water is composed of two gins, oxygen and hydrogen. Oxygen is pure gin. Hydrogen is gin and water.

Nitrogen is not found in Ireland because it is not found in a free state.

When you breathe, you inspire. When you do not breathe, you expire.

Three kinds of blood vessels are arteries, vanes and caterpillars.

Before giving a blood transfusion, find out if the blood is affirmative or negative.

The moon is a planet just like Earth, only it is even deader.

The pistol of a flower is its only protection against insects.

A permanent set of teeth consists of eight canines, eight cuspid, two molars and eight cuspidors.

A fossil is an extinct animal. The older it is, the more extinct it is.

For fainting: Rub the person's chest, or, if it's a lady, rub her arm above the hand. Or put her head between the knees of the nearest medical doctor.

Equator: a menagerie lion running around Earth through Africa.

Germinate: to become a naturalized German.

Rhubarb: a kind of celery gone bloodshot.

The skeleton is what is left after the insides have been taken out and the outsides have been taken off. The purpose of the skeleton is so that there is something to hitch the meat to.

To remove dust from the eye, pull the eye down over the nose.

To prevent contraception, wear a condominium.

The body consists of three parts -- the brainium, the borax and the abominable cavity. The brainium contains the brain. The borax contains the heart and lungs, and the abominable cavity contains the bowls, of which there are five -- A, E, I, O and U.

Dear Ann Landers: I've read your column for ages and almost always agree with you. One subject on which we do not see eye to eye, however, is senior citizens driving. According to the Memphis Commercial Appeal, recent statistics by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration indicate that drivers over 70 were involved in 4,431 fatal crashes in 1993. That is far fewer than any other age group. The 16- to 20-year-olds were involved in 7,711 fatal crashes.

Elderly drivers also had the lowest incidence of drunk driving accidents. Now, will you give seniors the praise they deserve? -- Lambert, Miss.

Dear Lambert: With pleasure, although you should know that those statistics don't tell the whole story. The NHTSA says that the percentage of ALL accidents (fatal and non-fatal) for licensed drivers is almost the same for those under 25 as for those 65 and over.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562, (In Canada, send $5.15.)

YOUR EYES

Blurred Vision

Occasional blurriness caused by excess tearing or morning mucus in the eye is not a cause of concern, but if the blurring continues for an hour or more or if it recurs, do see your optometrist to find the cause and clear up the problem--and the vision.

There are any number of reasons why eyes get blurry. You may just need corrective lenses, or the blurring may indicate an infection; medication to cure the infection should stop the blurring. If central vision is blurred, but not the edges, it may signal a change in the central part of the retina--the macula. This calls for immediate professional attention.

But blurred peripheral or side vision, while central vision is normal, may be the first sign of glaucoma. This change can be so gradual that the patient adapts to the limited field of clear vision, continuing with regular activities, but prompt diagnosis and treatment is important to save the individual's vision.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THE GROWING CHALLENGE

(First of three parts)

In the six-year history of this column I have only written two 3-part series prior to this one. We called the first series "Coexisting with Wal-Mart." Those columns lead to Up Against the Wal-Marts, the book I co-authored with Jeanne Archer.

The headline for the second three-part series was "Cows, Culls and Customers." These columns are part of my newest book, Solid Gold Success Strategies For Your Business. Perhaps this series, "The Growing Challenge" will spawn a third book.

The challenge of growing a small business into a larger, more profitable one is a major hurdle of many entrepreneurs.

I've witnessed several small businesses grow themselves to death. In some cases, the owners did not prepare for growth. In others, no one recognized the barriers that would prevent profitable expansion. A few actually grew their business successfully, but lost interest later.

In this series I'll try to share the combined experienced of many who have succeeded. I'll begin by identifying a few barriers to growth. In part three, I'll give you some shortcuts that successful entrepreneurs are using to accelerate the growth process.

Barriers to Growth

- Low profits or no profits. If you are losing a little on everything you sell, you probably can't make it up by increasing volume. The lack of profits is a symptom. Look for the cause. You must solve profitability problems before you attempt growth.
- Declining equity or no equity. Equity is the part of the business you actually own. Equity is important to growth. Declining equity or lack of equity will limit your ability to acquire capital necessary for growth.
- No written plan for growth. For many owners, putting their plans and goals into written form helps them develop the focus they need for growth. A good plan will help you determine where you want to go and assist you in laying out the steps to get there.
- Not knowing your target customer. To grow, you must be able to clearly and concisely describe the customers you are trying to reach. You cannot meet and satisfy the needs of customers you can't identify.
- Not keeping quality in your products or services. The business grows and the quality goes. One business owner told me he nearly lost everything because he wasn't present on every job to maintain the quality standards on which he'd built his reputation. Because he had no systems in place to monitor his standards, quality slipped.

Making promises you cannot keep. All too often you may find that in reaching out to new markets and new customers you begin making promises you cannot keep. If not corrected, you'll lose both your established accounts and your new ones.

Understanding your competitors' strengths or over-estimating their weakness. If you're in mature industry where growth can only come from taking market share from others, you must know your enemy well. Incorrectly assessing your competitor's position can cause you to make deadly assumptions and decisions.

Not staying focused on your core strengths. In just the past eight years I've seen scores of business owners lose their growth momentum by neglecting the elements that made them successful in the beginning. Use what you do well to guide your future steps.

There are others barriers that can block rapid growth. There include: Not having a financial safety net, not learning how to delegate, an unwillingness to make changes and ignoring good advice.

In part two, I will show you how to overcome these barriers by laying a strong foundation for growth. Don't miss "The Growing Challenge" Part Two.

The House of the Week

Magical Multi-Level Design

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

With 1,930 square feet of living space, Plan G-1, by HomeStyles Designers Network, features an appealing multi-level design that lends a spacious feel to its affordable square footage.

Inside, the entry shares a 16-ft. vaulted ceiling with the adjacent living and dining rooms.

In the nearby kitchen, a snack bar provides a convenient surface to set down dishes during meal cleanup. The family chef will love the pantry and liberal counter space. When you need a place to write down a grocery list or the week's menus, the built-in desk in the breakfast nook is it.

A level below the dining room and nook, the family room features a 17-ft. vaulted ceiling and a fireplace. This casual room will, without a doubt, be one of the most popular in the home. There are sliding glass doors to a backyard patio.

A PALLADIAN WINDOW serves as the focal point of this home's attractive exterior. Other features include a decorative fantail louver and a varied roofline.

A half-bath and access to the garage are nearby.

Upstairs, a railed balcony bridge overlooks the family and living rooms. Here, two bedrooms feature window seats that are ideal for cozying up with a good book. A centrally located bath services both rooms, while the upper-floor laundry room saves trips up and down the stairs.

Up a half-flight of stairs, double doors introduce the secluded master suite. The master bath has a whirlpool tub, separate shower and roomy walk-in closet.

THE ENTRY flows into the formal living and dining rooms. Nearby, the kitchen serves both the dining room and the more casual breakfast nook. The kitchen also has a convenient snack bar and a pantry. In the breakfast nook is a built-in desk, an ideal spot for paying the bills. Up a half-flight of stairs, the family room is made special by its handsome fireplace. Sliding glass doors provide access to a patio. Upstairs, a hall bath serves two bedrooms, both of which have window seats. The master suite has a private bath with a whirlpool tub and a walk-in closet.

A stunning 16-ft. vaulted ceiling caps the combined living and dining rooms, where sunshine floods in through arched windows.

Tips on taking care of pewter

Modern pewter (also called Britannia metal) is an alloy of tin, antimony and copper. It resists tarnish quite well and usually needs only an occasional wash in warm, soapy water. Rinse well and dry thoroughly.

Dust and burnish old pewter with a soft cloth. If the tin and lead in it cause a brown tarnish, remove it with a bath in washing soda. If necessary, rub the surface with extra-fine (grade 000) steel wool dipped in vegetable oil.

CAUTION: Because of the lead content, don't eat or drink from old pewter utensils.

You can polish modern and old pewter with commercial pewter cleaners or make your own modern pewter restorer with ingredients from the hardware store. For a duller matte, mix rottenstone and vegetable oil. For brighter matte finishes, apply a paste of pumice and water. Apply either paste with a soft cloth and rub gently. For shiny pewter, use automobile polish and follow label directions. Or mix a paste of powdered whiting and denatured alcohol. When the paste is dry, polish with a clean, soft cloth.

G-1 STATISTICS

Design G-1 has an entry, living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast nook, family room, three bedrooms, two full baths and one half-bath, totaling 1,930 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 exterior wall framing and a partial basement foundation. A two-car garage provides 424 square feet of space.

Corn growers demand results

Leaders from the farm organizations representing growers of the nation's top commodity told leading scientists that farmers expect a greater return on investment from the checkoff dollars they contribute toward research conducted on their behalf.

"Corn growers want significant growth and meaningful results," Russell Williams, chairman of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Research and Commercialization Committee said. "We've created a new research and corn usage portfolio that contains a realistic agenda for specific, large uses of corn, he said.

"We expect each one of our research priorities to lead to commercialization and the utilization of up to 100 million bushels of corn each year, Williams said.

Williams, a Leaf River, IL farmer, made his remarks before more than 300 scientists, farmers, chemical and industrial engineers attending the sixth biennial Corn Utilization Conference (CUC VI), sponsored by the NCGA and the National Corn Development Foundation (NCDF).

"A significant number of corn grower dollars has been invested in the past, which has built a well-prepared seed-bed of basic research," Williams said.

Williams joined the president of the NCDF, Everett Nordine, who reviewed new criteria used by the organization to evaluate research for potential new products developed from corn.

"We evaluate projects based on the overall potential for commercial and technical success, the potential impact on corn usage, the length of time to commercialization and overall cost," Nordine said.

One of the most promising new products derived from corn is polylactic acid (PLA), which can be used to make 100 percent biodegradable plastics. Similar products in the past used petroleum-based plastics mixed with corn starch.

Other products include antifreeze, detergents, pharmaceuticals and cosmetics made with glucose from corn. Corn growers also fund research to identify a cheaper way to make butanol from corn. Manufacturers use butanol in things such as lacquers and brake fluid.

Ethanol production is one of the largest industrial uses of corn. The NCGA/NCDF funds research to reduce the cost of ethanol by converting corn gluten feed to the renewable fuel.

Nordine said corn growers are working in the appropriations process

PLN hosts study club in Amarillo

The Promised Land Network (PLN), is hosting a Southern Plains Study Club on Thursday, June 13th at 7 p.m. in the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center and Museum in Amarillo.

The meeting will begin with a facilitated discussion on Dr. Dan Flores' book, Caprock Canyons: Journey into the Heart of the Southern Plains.

Well-versed in the area's unique topography and historical lore from living 13 years in Lubbock, Dr. Flores will give a presentation entitled, "Horizontal Yellow: Sky, Mesa and the Llano Bioregion."

Dr. Flores is a professor of western history at the University of Montana. He also served as professor of history at Texas Tech University.

The PLN sponsors the Southern Plains Study Club meetings as a format for public education and discussion on issues vital to shaping sustainable agriculture and rural communities in this region.

Meetings scheduled in 1996 are exploring the general topic of "land as an actor"...how the land participates in shaping agriculture as well as human institutions, infrastructure and culture.

The public is invited to join in this interactive process of reading books and discussing presentations that will form the basis of the 1997 Southern Plains Conference, "Living on the Flattest Mountain in the World: The Llano Estacado as Actor."

To obtain information about the meeting and summary notes on past presentations in the series, or to learn about other PLN activities, call Lydia Villanueva at the Hereford office: (806) 364-4445.

Advisory committee finds problems in meat industry

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal advisory committee says the Agriculture Department is not adequately enforcing a law designed to protect ranchers and others from unfair trade practices in the meat industry.

In a report released Thursday, the special Advisory Committee on Agricultural Concentration also called for more open reporting of prices throughout the livestock trade.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said he would consider the recommendations by the 21-member committee, which he appointed three months ago to review problems of concentration in the meat industry.

Though not saying which proposals he would support, Glickman noted the conclusion that the department's market reporting system and its enforcement of the Packers and Stockyards Act have not kept up with changes in agriculture.

He said farmers and ranchers worry more about concentration than any other issue in agriculture.

"President Clinton and I share those concerns," Glickman said. "We believe that there must be a fair and equitable balance of power in the marketplace, that free and open competition must be enhanced, that more openness and transparency will help the market work better."

A 10-year slump in cattle prices has prompted cattle ranchers to complain more loudly that slaughterhouses are using their market power to hold down prices. Just three companies control more than 80 percent of cattle slaughter.

The report also looked at the impact of vertical integration in the hog and broiler industries, where companies control production from breeding to slaughter, buying pigs and chickens under contract with farmers.

The report said the department has not enforced the Packers and Stockyards Act, an antitrust law governing the meat industry, as thoroughly as it could. The committee said the law tells the department to "induce healthy competition, not merely to react to unhealthy competition."

"It is to assure fair trade practices, not merely to prevent unfair trade practices," said the report, by a collection of economists, agribusiness employees, farmers and ranchers and others.

The committee recommended strictly enforcing the law and giving private citizens greater powers to take action under it, as well as letting them collect attorneys' fees.

Noting the lack of good information on prices, the committee said, "Major policy efforts should be directed to creating an atmosphere of open disclosure of basic operating facts, including many aspects of price discovery, earnings levels of packers and feeders, environmental management concerns, and contract terms" between buyers and producers.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - If government breeders are successful, rural landowners in the South with limited acreage may soon have a new source of income: a hardy, hairy sheep.

An Agricultural Research Service facility near Booneville, Ark., is trying to develop a new sheep that can resist parasites, survive oppressive heat and grow hair instead of wool.

Why hair? "Often, the wool markets are so far away that it's really not worth the grower's effort to try to ship and sell the wool," explains Michael A. Brown, head of the research facility. "And they still have the expense of having the animals sheared, so a hair animal would be better for this area."

A wool-producing sheep known as the Gulf Coast Native meets the parasite and heat requirements. Brown and Art L. Goetsch, an animal scientist, hope to develop the hair producer by crossing the Gulf Coast Native with the hairy St. Croix.

The Booneville facility has been studying the St. Croix since 1988. They started crossing St. Croix and Polypay ewes with Texel and Romanov rams in 1992, then mated the crossbred ewes with Dorset rams.

"You can maximize the hybrid vigor that comes from crossbreeding by incorporating a third breed," Brown said. "What we have now is sheep that are half Dorset, one-quarter St. Croix and one-quarter Romanov."

If those tests work out, the next step will have the ewes crossbred with Gulf Coast Natives, which could result in a parasite-resistant, heat-resistant sheep that grows hair.

"We don't know how well the heat tolerance of the Natives and St. Croix will carry through into offspring," Brown acknowledged. "But there are promising precedents in cattle. When you cross a heat-tolerant Brahman with Angus cattle, the offspring tend to have increased heat tolerance."

Sheep are well suited to small spreads in the South, Goetsch told Agricultural Research magazine. There is plenty of forage and trees, and sheep require considerably less capital than cattle.

"In our part of the country, you need about two acres for a cow-calf pair," Goetsch said. "On that amount of land, you can put six to eight ewes, plus their offspring, until weaning size."

The Gulf Coast Native sheep in these tests are misnamed, by the way. The breed is believed to have begun in merino sheep in Spain and Rambouillets in France and brought to the United States by Spanish and French explorers and settlers.

Over the years, the immigrant sheep were concentrated in Florida and Louisiana, where hot weather and plentiful parasites disposed of weaker sheep, resulting in new generations of especially hardy animals.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States exported 64,525 tons of unmanufactured tobacco worth almost $421 million in the first three months of the year. The volume was down slightly and the value dropped 1 percent from 1995.

Shipments of cigarettes during the period were worth $1.13 billion, up 1 percent, and totaled 58 billion pieces, an increase of 10 percent, the Agriculture Department reported.

Tobacco imports during the same period totaled 55,717 tons and were valued at $180 million, in each case more than double from a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Weevils and other insects that infest stored grains may fall prey to the microwave.

Scientists at the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service are working with self-employed engineer Steven L. Halverson to design a microwave applicator that would wipe out the pests as grain flows from bucket elevators into storage facilities.

Halverson explains: "Insects contain more moisture than grain does. Microwave energy applied to the grain as it falls into storage kills the insects without cooking the grain or significantly reducing germination. It takes about six seconds for grain to flow through the applicator. The higher the energy level applied, the shorter the exposure time and length of the applicator."

The researchers say they expect the cost of microwaving grain to be comparable to chemical treatment.

Not The Mommies, dearest: Meet Caryl & Marilyn

Comic duo Caryl Kristensen (left) and Marilyn Kentz, also known as The Mommies, are hosts of their own talk show, Caryl & Marilyn: Real Friends, airing weekdays on ABC. The show will feature celebrity guests, crafts, humorous observations and topical discussions.

©TVData Features Syndicate

"People who don't know us thought The Mommies Talk Show would be a parenting show," says Caryl Kristensen, half of the comedy duo known as The Mommies.

"But that's not what the show is. While there will be some parenting things, it's overall not that."

So the talk show Kristensen will host with best friend and show-biz partner Marilyn Kentz is Caryl & Marilyn: Real Friends. It replaces Mike & Maty in ABC's weekday lineup beginning Monday, June 10.

"The people who like us anyway," Kristensen adds, "will watch regardless of what we call it."

Kristensen and Kentz met a dozen years ago, when their houses faced the same Petaluma, Calif., cul-de-sac. In 1989, they started playing comedy clubs with an act based on their experiences with children, husbands and housework. NBC spun that thread into a comedy series, The Mommies, two years ago.

The series bombed, but it gave Kristensen and Kentz the leg up they needed to develop Caryl & Marilyn.

"This is really what we've been meant to do all along," Kristensen believes, "because it's a format that suits us so well. We really just get to be who we are."

"We're going to be your neighbors," Kentz explains. "Like if you got a day off, and you and your neighbors kind of met down at the mailboxes and started gossiping and talking and laughing."

To maintain their credentials as real people, the duo will tape their show during school hours and be home in the evening.

"We need to maintain our first priority," Kentz says, "which is being parents and wives."

"I'm in the middle of a mule deer report, mind you, for the fourth grade. That is what's going on in our lives."

The duo's unscripted opening segments will put a humorous spin on mule deer and other banalities. Later, a segment called "Let's Talk About It" offers a chance to be topical.

"We might talk about how we teach our kids ethics," Kentz suggests. "Or, Is America being too rude? Is anger good for you? Should kids fly?"

A celebrity guest will be part of each show, too.

"Our focus is to get a celebrity to show us a real side," Kristensen says.

"They're welcome to push whatever they're pushing at the moment, but to let the world see them through different eyes than we've seen them before."

As for the set, both women agree their favorite part is the breakaway wall between kitchen and garage.

"We will change the development of the single-family home from now until eternity," Kristensen says. "How great would it be to own a home where you just pull your car into the garage and unload your groceries?"

Craft projects will have a place, too, but there's a proviso, Kristensen says:

"They will be things that we would really want in our homes. We don't want to turn shoulder pads into angel Christmas ornaments."

"And believe it or not," Kentz puts in, "I steal Martha Stewart's stuff. So we don't hate Martha, but we do challenge her."

"Marilyn wants to have a glue-gun-off," Kristensen explains.

"I do," Kentz admits. "I want to have a duel with glue guns."

Real women, it seems, do have some pretty messy fantasies.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ June 9-15 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
Show appreciation to someone who has gone out of his/her way for you. People can't read your mind, no matter how strongly you feel. To your delight, worries about a family member will prove unwarranted. Rams in creative fields will have especially successful work weeks.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Your suspicions about something will be proven this week. Although you may not be happy about the situation, you'll be relieved that it's out in the open. An expense that seemed optional before will now be necessary. Consider long-term budget goals before making frivolous purchases.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
You'll adapt well to a change in the workplace this week. In fact, you'll do so well that others will take note. A friend's change of heart could disrupt this weekend's social plans. Although it may be a disappointment, you'll find yourself with some much-needed quiet time.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
The ambitious you wants to put in long hours at work while the playful you wants to paint the town red. Which side will win? Instead of choosing, why not find a happy balance between the two? If you don't, you may end up an even-crabbier crab! Moderation is the key.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Instead of overloading your social schedule this week, make moves to lighten it. Even though Leos love a fast paced social life, sometimes you have to slow down. At home, try to be more understanding of a moody loved one — especially if you're dealing with Pisces.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
The longer you prolong a task, the longer it will haunt you. Instead of wasting your energy worrying about it, just get it over with. A new side of a friend will be revealed this week, answering some long-standing questions. Towards the weekend, don't accept half-hearted invitations.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
A new (probably Scorpio) friend will introduce you to a new hobby or activity. You'll realize that you've been missing out on all the fun. Going the extra mile at work will only benefit you — even if it means giving up free time. This weekend, don't feel guilty if you'd rather be a couch potato than a social butterfly.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Taking a defensive stand in a romantic squabble will only make matters worse. If you look at things from both sides, you may just change your tune. Later in the week, you'll find that helping others will make you feel a lot better about yourself. A Libra plays a strong role.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Putting all your eggs in one basket will only lead to disappointment. Be wise when making investments (both financial and emotional ones). On Thursday, you could make an embarrassing situation even worse by putting your foot in your mouth. Watch what you say! Good news on Friday.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Being in the right place at the right time will provide a lucky break on Tuesday. A new friend may not be all (s)he seems. Be on guard and don't tell all. If shopping for a gift this weekend, think creatively and opt for something unconventional — especially if it's a wedding gift.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
A happy medium will have to be reached if you want to end an ongoing battle. Although you may not like compromise, this time it could work for you. Give it a try. A change in your domestic situation will make you daily routine a little easier. News from family gives you hope.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Keep a low profile in the workplace this week. Gossiping coworkers should be avoided at all costs. Getting involved could only be detrimental. In a soiled friendship, it may be time to bury the hatchet. Don't let pride stand in the way of a good friendship. Keep an open mind.

Cracker fans know by now to expect the unexpected from this dark and emotionally intense A&E movie series.

Even they will be shocked, however, by the ending to Cracker: Brotherly Love, a special three-hour outing premiering Tuesday, June 11.

As faithful viewers remember, the previous Cracker movie, Men Should Weep, ended last season on a devastating note when Penhaligon (Geraldine Somerville) was brutally raped by an unknown assailant.

Brotherly Love opens four months later, when a number of lives have been scraped raw.

Eddie "Fitz" Fitzgerald (Robbie Coltrane) turns to his wife, Judith (Barbara Flynn), for comfort following the death of his mother.

Still stinging from Fitz's liaison with Penhaligon, Judith is on edge awaiting the overdue birth of their third child.

Jimmy Beck (Lorcan Cranitch) has been on a sick leave after what he says was a nervous breakdown following the death of his former boss, Detective Chief Inspector Bilborough.

Jimmy's getting scant support from his colleague Penhaligon, who is obsessively convinced he is the man who raped her (Jimmy denies it).

Against this tense personal backdrop, a prostitute is brutally murdered.

Strong circumstantial evidence points to one of her clients, family man David Harvey (Mark Lambert), who is quickly arrested.

As similar murders follow, however, officers wonder whether they have the right culprit or whether someone is committing copycat killings to exonerate Harvey.

Among the possible suspects: Harvey's bitter wife, Maggie (Brid Brennan from Broadway's Dancing at Lughnasa), and his brother Michael (David Calder), a priest.

By the startling finale, a principal character will lie dead.

Brotherly Love opens a three-movie "season" for the popular mystery.

Best Boys and True Romance, both two-hour movies, will follow in August and September, respectively.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I'm not sure I like the direction Chicago Hope has taken since Mandy Patinkin left the show. There have been so many cast changes! Please tell me Adam Arkin is staying. -Colleen Addams, Nanaimo, B.C., Canada.

Adam Arkin

A: Executive producer John Tinker said recently he is toying with the idea of reducing the number of regular characters from nine to six or so.

Of the current cast members, Christine Lahti and Arkin have virtual locks - they alternate top billing from week to week, in case you haven't noticed - as do Jamey Sheridan, Hector Elizondo and Peter Berg, in all likelihood. Casualties, if there are any, probably will come among Jayne Brook, Thomas Gibson, Vondie Curtis-Hall and/or Roxanne Hart.

Weird news: Rumors persist that beloved former cast member Peter MacNicol is being wooed to return as a completely different character!

Q: George Clooney of ER looks so familiar to me. Wasn't he on The Facts of Life? -Allison Grubke, Eau Claire, Wis.

A: Yes, Clooney played neighbor George Burnett during the 1985-86 season of the hit sitcom. Pre-ER, however, he probably was best known for playing Booker Brooks, Roseanne and Jackie's boss on the first season of Roseanne, and Detective Falconer on Sisters.

Clooney also was part of the series cast of Baby Talk, Bodies of Evidence with Lee Horsley and a short-lived sitcom called - no kidding - ER.

Q: When I was a child in the '60s, I recall seeing a Walt Disney TV production about a minister disguised as a scarecrow who secretly avenges injustices by King George III. I think it was called Scarecrow!

Will it be shown again? -Michael S. DeVine, Gettysburg, S.D.

A: When Disney first aired this three-part presentation in 1962, it was called The Scarecrow of Romney Marsh. It's appeared on TV several times, often on The Disney Channel. You can find it on the Disney video label under the title Dr. Syn, Alias the Scarecrow.

Q: My family and I used to watch Sequest DSV and always wondered whether Michael and Peter DeLuise were related to each other and/or to Dom DeLuise. -Josie Vollandra, Richmond, Va.

A: Brothers Michael and Peter are Dom's sons.

Q: Can you tell me if actress Mary-Louise Parker is the daughter of actress Sandy Dennis? There is a strong resemblance! -Margarie Baurin, Daly City, Calif.

A: Even their quirky acting styles are similar, but Parker is not related to the late Dennis.

Hearst, Kinkead leave Guiding Light

By Candace Havens

Two Guiding Light favorites will be leaving the series this summer. Rick Hearst (Alan-Michael) and Maeve Kinkead (Vanessa) are departing.

Hearst has decided it is time to move on.

"There comes a point when you feel like you have played your character out, and that is where I am now," Hearst says.

"I believe the character's journey is complete."

"The role will be recast," says executive producer Michael Laibson. "Lucy (Sonia Satra) and Alan-Michael will be facing some new difficulties." Kinkead is taking a one-year leave of absence to spend more time with her family.

"Maevie is an earthy, caring, professional actress, who has helped to make GL a family ensemble," says Laibson. "But she has not had the time to be as active as she would like in her favorite role, that of wife and mother."

Michael Tylo (Quinton) will be coming back to GL on a recurring basis. The actor returned briefly to the show last spring, and it was rumored he would most likely return on a full-time basis.

Dear Candace: Can you please tell me what happened to the actor who played Pierce on All My Children? One day he was there and the next he was gone. Is he going to come back? He is one of my favorites.

I don't like the new guy they have playing him.

Dear Reader: It was Jim Fitzpatrick's decision to leave the show. The actor has had a longtime problem with alcohol. Recently, he decided to do something about his problem. The decision forced him to re-evaluate the rigors of working in daytime. It left him little time to heal.

Fitzpatrick has given no indication that he plans to return to the role. The role has temporarily been taken over by Greg Wrangler (ex-Steve Connolly, The Young and the Restless).

CHITTER CHATTER

LOS ANGELES (AP) - After five consecutive hit movies and a salary that has rocketed him into the comedy stratosphere, Jim Carrey is worried about remaining down-to-earth.

"I'm afraid, I guess, that I won't be able to watch anymore," said Carrey, whose next film, "The Cable Guy," hits theaters June 14.

"Everything I do comes from watching and observing, and I'm concerned that I won't be able to be the watcher because I'm the watched."

The Canadian-born comedian - known for playing zany, hyperactive characters in movies including two "Ace Ventura" films, "Batman Forever," "Dumb and Dumber" and "The Mask" - received $20 million for "The Cable Guy."

He signed on for another $20 million to do "Liar, Liar," scheduled for release at the end of the year.

"I've already had so much success, I could quit now and say, 'Thanks very much, you guys have been more than nice to me,'" he said in Sunday's Daily News of Los Angeles. "But I really would like to keep working and, hopefully, growing and challenging myself."

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - George Bush tried that impression thing. Did his impression of Dana Carvey imitating George Bush.

The former president fell back on Carvey's "Saturday Night Live" routine to explain why he won't say what he really thinks of the news media.

"As my good friend Dana Carvey would say: 'Not gonna do it. Wouldn't be prudent,'" Bush told Williams College graduates on Sunday.

"Incidentally, I made that guy rich," said Bush, who was given an honorary law degree at the school's 207th commencement.

KENNETT, Mo. (AP) - Three-time Grammy winner Sheryl

Crow is coming home to the Missouri Bootheel to be true to her school. Crow, a 1980 graduate of Kennett High School, plans a concert July 6 to raise money for Kennett's school system.

Her debut album, "Tuesday Night Music Club," earned three Grammys, including record of the year for her single "All I Wanna Do."

Three thousand tickets will be available for the show in the town of 10,000 people in Missouri's southeastern corner.
