a 19 percent increase in fatalities, and while no hard analysis is available, some point to increased speed limits as the reason.

It is too early in 1996, and the reliable numbers for the first four months of 1996.

But the Department of Public Safety says it has so far received reports of 878 people killed in 746 fatal crashes in Texas. The same report last year showed 739 people had been killed in 637 accidents.

The DPS later revised those 1995 numbers to 838 accidents, killing 965 people. Those numbers could be revised again in a report due out next week.

Preliminary figures for all of last year showed 3,130 people were killed in 2.753 traffic crashes. There were 3,142 traffic deaths in 1994.

The DPS collects more than 500,000 accident reports each year AUSTIN (AP) - A comparison of from more than 1,000 law enforceearly 1996 traffic deaths with the ment agencies. Jim Templeton, same estimate from last year shows manager of the accident records division, said it takes months to process and edit those reports, partly because agencies have weeks to complete their reports.

At least some agencies miss reporting process too slow, to have reporting deadlines, putting the process further behind, he said.

The Texas Department of Transportation in November approved new speed limits, ranging up to 70 mph, and speed limit signs began changing after the national speed limit expired Dec. 8.

Of the state's 77,000 miles of roads, 23,000 have been assigned speed limits above 55 mph, according to Randall Dillard, a spokesman for the department. Even some two-lane, farm-to-market roads have 70 mph speed limits.

He said the department could

Attorney General Dan Morales will be in Hereford on Tuesday to meet with law enforcement officials and senior citizens. Morales will visit the Hereford Senior Citizens Center, 426 Ranger, at 10 a.m. Tuesday to introduce the Triad program to the Hereford community.

Triad, according to advance documents provided to the Brand, would link Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown and his department, Police Chief David Wagner and his department and local seniors.

Working together, the groups would "work together to reduce the criminal victimization of older citizens and enhance the delivery of law enforcement services to this population." Triad was conceived by the American Association of Retired Persons, the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the National Sheriff's Association in 1988.

A senior advisory council often called SALT, for Seniors and Lawmen Together -- plans activities designed to inform seniors and benefit law enforcement officers in the area. Among the activities sponsored by existing Triads are:

-- Crime prevention programs for older persons. -- Information on how to avoid criminal victimization. -- Home security information and inspections. -- Personal safety tips.

-- Knowledge of current frauds and scams.

-- Training in coping with telephone solicitations and doorto-door salesmen.

-- Elder abuse prevention, recognition and reporting informa-

-- Victim assistance by and for finish considering speed limits on the state's smallest roads next month, but it could be some time before all authorized changes are complete.

-- Refrigerator cards with emergency medical information.

Jerry Johns, head of the Southwest Insurance Information Service, said that because the reports are so far behind, "we will have to stick with our original estimate of 560 more deaths in the first year under a 70 mph speed limit."

Johns also said the DPS should find a way to speed up its reporting

"Given the serious consequences of increasing the speed limit in Texas, we need a more timely reporting method to compare deaths and injuries," he said.

Johns acknowledged that many factors contribute to fatal crashes. But he said speed and driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs are the biggest contributors.

'Certainly excessive speed is playing a major role in the number of deaths on Texas roads," he said.

As they approved higher speed limits, officials at the Transportation Department said they would monitor crash and fatality figures on roads where speed limits increased and would take action if the new limits caused more deaths.

But Dillard said the 1996 figures are too sketchy to consider whether the new speed limits have had an impact. He also said the new limits simply reflect the speed at which most motorists already were driving.

Ailing dad gives daughter in wedding, dies of cancer

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - The father gave away the bride, the bride and groom exchanged vows, and then the bride held her father's hand until he died.

Candace Shepherd Meeker, 20, said her father's last wish was to give her away in marriage. So she married Shawn Meeker, 21, a month earlier than planned in a ceremony at the hospice where her father was spending his final days. Her father, Donald Shepherd, had cancer. Mrs. Meeker had visited him daily at Hospice of Dayton since November.

'Shawn and I met in a skating rink seven years ago, and we have been in love for a long time," she said. "We had planned to be married in June, but when my dad got worse, we decided to step things up.

"Dad said so many times he wanted to live to see me get married."

On Tuesday, doctors told the family they feared that Shepherd, 47, would not live much longer.

So the Rev. John Brown, a volunteer chaplain at the hospice, was called in. Shepherd, with oxygen tubes and other medical apparatus attached, was wheeled in to the hospice chapet. "When the minister asked who would give me away, my father said, 'I do' in a firm voice," said Mrs. Meeker. "We all had tears in our eyes.'

After the brief ceremony, Mrs. Meeker accompanied her father back to his room and sat holding his hand at his bedside. He died about two hours later.

If you're going to get along in life-in school, with friends at work, or at home--you have to know all the rules...even the unwritten ones.

Likely the unwritten rules are the most important. Unwritten rules are those which you are supposed to know even if you haven't been told.

And unwritten rules get folks in the most trouble. No where is it written that you should acknowledge your mate's time spent at the beauty shop. However, the unwritten rule is that a prudent man will notice how nice his wife's hair looks even it it's the wrong color.

Unwritten rules get easier with maturity because the older you get, the more experience you have at reacting to the rules.

If your wife has taken two dresses out on approval and asks which you like best, the unwritten rule is: don't ask which one is the cheapest.

To make life easier, some guy has written a book entitled "Never Trust a Calm Dog, and Other Rules of are insane--which goes to show who's Thumb." Following are a few examples.

--Meeting a strange dog: Let him smiff the back of your closed hand. Don't show your fingers, they're easier to bite.

-- To walk or ride: Walking is faster than waiting for a city bus if you're going less than a mile.

-- Money or principle: If someone says, "It's not the money, it's the principle," then it's usually the --Spotting a bad check: Ninety percent of bad checks carry numbers below 150, indicating a new account.

-- Estimating foot size: The distance from your elbow to your wrist equals the length of your foot.
--Measuring IQ: The more buttons fastened on a person's shirt, the higher the IO.

-- Visiting theme parks: People touring attractions are more likely to turn to the right, therefore the exhibits to the left are less crowded.

-- Minding your own business: Sticking your nose into other's business can get your nose out of -- Rule of thumb: Something that works four out of five times.

-- Following a rule of thumb: As rule of thumb, we're that fifth person.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws By Georgia Tyler

Drought being on everyone's mind will fall off in agricultural communities. Homeowners are worrying about. the water bill.

All in all, drought is not a laughing matter, but dry weather may promote some humor, of the dark kind.

For instance, a couple-weeks ago, my son-in-law woke up at 4 a.m., heard the wind howling, got dressed and headed to a field he feared might be blowing. For the next four hours, he ran that old tractor around the

What's funny about that? Well, he may be conscientious but he's not an early-riser by nature.

Then, there are those of us who have a superstitious streak or enjoy a strain of black magic. We pay good money to have the car washed, believing that Mother Nature will play a good trick and send down rain.

What's funny about that? Twice I've tried that recently. The first time, the dirt blew and settled on my car. Then a damp cloud hovered overhead for five minutes and left the car in a very speckled condition. The other day, I tried the ploy and, again, the dust covered it. This time, though, no mist descended. But, I've dodged blowing water from sprinklers to preserve the clean look for a day or two.

Ministers are imploring for rain in their prayers. A layperson of my acquaintance solemnly asked the Good Lord to "turn on the spigot" during the invocation at a meeting. What's funny about that? Well, the listeners to the spigot plea momentarily lost it, choking back giggles.

Some municipalities find that water consumption should be slowed and install rationing systems. While the rules may extend to lawn watering, the water patrol can hardly check out every home for wasting What's funny about that? Well, some sneaky youngsters will try to convince mothers that water rationing extends to the nightly bath. Very few Moms will fall for the reasoning, though.

How long an area must exist these days, older citizens may see the without meaningful rainfall for weather as reminiscent of the "Dirty drought to be declared is a question Thirties." Farmers are edgy. for some bureaucrat, probably. In the Preachers are praying for rain. Retail olden days, farmers could look to the stores are concerned that business federal government to help out when moisture was in such short supply. What the new farm bill provides on this issue may not come clear for > There's nothing funny about that aspect of agriculture. What it is, instead, is tragic.

> Growing up during the Dust Bowl era left me with an acute sense of weather, just as do most West Texas residents. But, living on the East Coast introduced me to another world of water.

> One summer, about 30 years ago, the Big Apple itself embarked on a water conservation program as the reservoirs serving the city's seven million, more or less, began to decline. Rain upstate from the city > had been in short supply. For years, the city had been very selective about where the water came from and they were paying dearly for that policy. New resources had not > been exploited. So, the city undertook a conservation program. People were not used to such inconvenience. Since they didn't pay for their water, they weren't concerned.

> Much to my amazement, I learned there were no water meters in the entire City of New York.

But the city found ways to get the attention of New Yorkers.

Air conditioning in buildings, even giant skyscrapers, was reduced to a few hours a day. Some companies sent office workers home early because the buildings became unbearable after the cooling was shut

Apartment buildings put off turning on air conditioning until late in the afternoon so cool would be provided until bedtime.

The coup de grace was the regulation that restaurants should not automatically serve water with meals. Only a request from the customer would be honored.

That may happen in lots of cities and towns, and soon, unless Someone turns on the spigot.

A few tips for our elected officials

By the time you read this, the 1996 municipal elections will be over (or nearly so) and our city commission, school board and hospital district board will be set for the next year.

I certainly hope you voted in whichever elections you were qualified for, since that is our opportunity to have a say in government.

But I don't want to talk about the election here, I want to go over some things I've gleaned from the past 12 years I've spent covering public meetings as a news reporter.

I have sat in countless city council, county commission, school board, hospital district and chamber of commerce meetings and I have carned some things I hope will be a help not only to our local elected leaders, but to you, as concerned citizens of Hereford.

First, some tips to those who serve. 1. Be honest and above board in everything.

Public boards get into more trouble by withholding information from the

Many years ago I attempted to report on some controversy in a county government (not here). Nobody would speak to me and county officials did their best to cover up their actions.

What could have been cleared up in one quick news story instead turned into a major expose that cost several elected officials their jobs.

2. Don't try to undo everything they are doing the right thing before the previous board did.

Out of the Blue

This is particularly important in cases where a majority of the board turns over in one election (or two in

What happened in the past is passed and you don't need to spend valuable time going back over plowed ground in a different direction.

Too many elected boards spend their first several months undoing what their successor boards accomplished, so that the net result is the governmental entity ends up behind where they began.

3. Don't beat everything to death. At the same time, don't blindly agree to something if you don't understand it or have a problem with how the plan will be implemented or how much it will cost.

A strong board leader (president, chairman or whatever) can make sure this doesn't happen by cutting off debate when it appears the same things are being said repeatedly.

I appreciate boards that make sure making a choice, but there really does come a point when the board needs to vote and go on to other things.

4. Remember why you were elected and let the paid staff members do their jobs. The voters put officials in office to accomplish specific things -- whether it be to make sure the hospital moves smoothly, or to oversee the education of our children, or to make sure our city tax money is spent properly. Each of these entities have excellent people on staff to take care of day-to-day business (City Manager Chester Nolen, hospital CEO Jim Robinson and Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt) I've seen boards spend so much time trying to change other bodies that they don't do what they were elected to do.

Still other boards over the past 12 years have tried to get involved in actual management, which is an area with which they have no experience, training or business.

5. Don't forget the people who put you there. Again, some governmental bodies get their minds made up what they will do, but ignore constituents who may not agree. To do this puts you at risk of a very short political career.

Now, for those of you who voted, a charge as well:

1. Don't assume that now that the election is over, everything will proceed smoothly until the next election.

Local media coverage of public meetings is very good here (if I can stop for a moment and boast slightly), but we're not perfect.

The best way to find out exactly what happened in a meeting is to attend that meeting in person.

2. Stay in contact with your elected leaders. If you have a concern about something, make it known to those people who are elected to represent you before the governing bodies of this community.

3. Don't go to the board as a whole whenever you have a question.

While public appearances are allowed, many times questions can be answered quickly and easily by a paid staff member or an individual board member.

Then, if you don't like the response you got, you can appeal to the elected board.

4. Remember, these people have volunteered their time to make this community the best it can be. Support them as they do that work.

Rushing in with gas price remedies

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Many energy experts suggest gasoline prices, which have climbed to their highest levels since the Persian Gulf War, may soon start to ease on their own. But that hasn't stopped either President Clinton or Sen. Bob Dole from rushing in with remedies.

Both the president and his presumptive fall rival are maneuvering for political gain in the recent surge in prices. But their efforts may have little significant impact on prices at the pump. Dole's answer comes in the form of a repeal of the 4.3 cent-a-gallon increase that Congress enacted in 1993 as part of Clinton's overall deficit-reduction package.

"We believe with the skyrocketing prices of gasoline, jet fuel and other fuels that the most certain way to give consumers relief is to repeal the gas tax," he said Tuesday in a Senate speech.

Both he and House Speaker Newt Gingrich - who went to a California gas station last weekend to blame rising prices on that 1993 tax hike have promised a vote before Memorial Day, traditional start of the summer driving season.

Electoral-vote-rich California has been hardest hit by the increases, with gas in some areas approaching $2 a

Clinton, not to be outdone, announced he would sell 12 million barrels of oil from the nation's strategic petroleum reserve to help stabilize the oil market. "Action speaks louder than rhetoric," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Tuesday.

At the same time, the Justice Department announced it would investigate the causes of the increases - on the order of 20 cents a gallon since the start of the year - and determine whether there has been any illegal collusion by oil companies. The Energy Department is undertaking a similar study.

Price gouging and oil-company greed are natural campaign issues because everyone blames the oil companies for gas-price increases, suggests Democratic pollster Mark Mellman.

But, he added, "I'm not sure that repealing part of the gas tax on the one hand or selling oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve on the other will be seen by people as solving the problem."

Even if Dole and Gingrich can deliver on deducting 4.3 cents from the current 18.3-cent-a-gallon gas tax, "they can't guarantee that consumers will see any of this," said Ed Rothschild, an energy analyst for the consumer group Citizen Action.

"The companies could just pocket," Rothschild said. He called the GOP ploy "a master political short-term stroke, but I think it will come back to bite them.'

As to Clinton's proposal, selling 12 million barrels from the strategic petroleum reserve would account for less than what the country consumes in a single day (18 million barrels).

The reserve was set up in 1975 to serve as a cushion against oil shortages but has been used more as a political reserve - for presidents to draw from mostly for symbolic repeal as an attractive pocketbook purposes.

President Bush in late 1990 sold 5 million barrels of crude oil from the reserve as a "signal" to warn oil companies from profiting from the Persian Gulf crisis.

Furthermore, the oil Clinton would sell - actually authorized in a recent appropriations bill - would come from a low-quality part of the reserve and do not generate much revenue or do much to hold down prices, Rothschild minimum wage," Dole said Tuesday. Even with the recent increases, gasoline prices in the United States are among the lowest in the industrial-

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropria-tions Committee, accused Clinton of 'slippery rhetoric."

Industry analysts blame the increases on a combination of factors: tight inventories at refineries, uncertainties over whether oil from Iraq would enter world markets, more demand because of higher speeds under relaxed speed limits and popularity of low-gas-mileage recreational vehicles.

"I don't know if this issue has legs in the campaign. It may go away in a week," said James Thurber, a political scientist at American University.

'Whatever' is familiar part of Dole

By MIKE FEINSILBER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Whatever else you know about Bob Dole, listen a to him for a while and you'll hear him say "whatever." Whenever.

It's a verbal tic, like the teen-ager's "you know." Linguists call it a "filler" or a "hedge."

Here's Dole talking at various times and places:

-At a rally in Jacksonville, Fla., as supporters chanted his name: "Thank you, I accept the nomination, whatever it is."

-At a rally in Houston: "President Clinton says, 'I share your pain.' I can say, 'I feel your pain' or whatever."

-In a Washington speech to the National Association of Realtors, acknowledging applause: "I accept your nomination, and whatever."

-In the same speech, talking about the tax code: "It can also encourage home ownership, encourage contributions to charities, whatever."

-Talking with reporters in New York City about selecting a running mate: "I'm going to wait until I'm the nominee before I start making judgments on running mates or whatever."

-Describing an enthusiastic rally in Miami's "Little Havana" district: "They were all shouting, 'Viva, Viva Bob Dole, viva, viva, whatever."

-And just Friday, testifying on why he thinks the gasoline tax should be reduced: "It puts additional burdens on drivers, consumers, buses, railroads, whatever."

You get the picture. Dole may have been talking this way for years; his speech patterns, like everything else, are coming under scrutiny now that he is now on the cusp of a presidential nomination.

Any deep meaning here, or is it just a habit? Donald Moine sees deep meaning. He is a psychologist in Palos Verdes, Calif., who consults with Fortune 500 companies on their communications problems and wrote "Modern Persuasion Strategies." "The problem is that it contributes to the perception that Dole is old and tired and that he lacks mental energy," Moine said. "It is also a sign of verbal laziness."

"It's sad, because I think Dole is very honorable person who has much to offer. But people frequently reject ideas because of their packaging. We have to clothe our ideas in the proper words."

Another expert in communications, Linda Carli, who teaches psychology at Wellesley College in Massachu-setts, said research "suggests that people who hedge a great deal are perceived as less authoritative and competent," but she also sees an upside to Dole's habit.

"It has the advantage of softening a statement, particularly when you're making controversial statements that you might want to seem less extreme.

"It's colloquial," she said, and that's good. "People find an informal style less threatening.'

Dole isn't the only public figure with a speaking peculiarity. President Clinton salts his speeches with homespunisms - "a load of hooey" or "this is a really big deal."

Ronald Reagan began sentences with a drawn-out, "Well!..."

George Bush committed

coldblooded murder on syntax. He once delivered his message exactly as it was given him, reading from his cue card: "Message: I care."

And Bush hated to speak of himself in the first person. As a consequence, his speech writer, Peggy Noonan, said in her memoirs, "Instead of 'I moved to Texas and soon we joined the Republican Party,' it was, 'Moved to Texas, joined the Republican Party, raised a family." The result made Bush sound like he was delivering a telegram, not a Psychologist Gerald Goodman at the University of California at Los Angeles saw Dole's habit as "a combination of "et cetera and 'I'd rather not go into the details because they're not important.' It's a little lofty; the boss can say it more than the staff member."

Wayne Fields, a Washington University English professor who followed Dole around in 1988 and studied his speaking patterns, said

The Hereford pair's first round opponents this year are Lauren Kingsriter and Margaret Henry of Dallas Highland Park. They play at 10:15 a.m. Monday at the University of Texas' Penick-Allison Courts.

One thing that may work for the Hereford girls is their seeding. Although seeds aren't released, it is known that the first-round opponent of a regional champion is always the runner-up from another region. Last year, the Herd duo went in as the regional runner-up; this year, they're regional champions.

"What you hope is that they have a good draw in the first round," Coplen said. "In the semifinals, it's just going to take real good play, because that's the four best teams in the state."

McWhorter and Robbins didn't necessarily get a good draw. They're playing the runner-up from Region II, which includes Wichita Falls and Dallas Highland Park. Wichita Falls plays in Region II in the spring and in Region I in the fall; Wichita Falls defeated Hereford in the finals of the Region I-4A team tennis tournament in November.

The other first round match-ups in Class 4A girls' doubles are:

-- Jill Lytle and Michelle McNutt (Rosenberg Lamar Consolidated) vs. Catherine Olsen and Lindsey Callum (San Antonio Alamo Heights).

-- Andrea Ulrich and Abbe Ulrich (Wichita Falls) vs. Kim Donaldson and Regan Schneider (Friendswood Clear Brook).

San Antonio's 10 3-pointers also set a team record.

Charles Barkley led the Suns with 21 points and nine rebounds, but was only 6-of-15 from the field. Reserve Chris Carr added 17 points for Phoenix, which was 41-41 in the regular season.

"It's no fun to lose in the first round," Barkley said, "and it's no fun to play on a .500 team."

Barkley said he plans to play next season, but isn't sure where. He called himself "one of the Suns' few tradeable options" and said he would understand if the team tried to deal him in the offseason.

El Camino Real and Route 66 to be commemorated in art

By T'RACY DINGMANN Alt uquerque Journal

ALBUI QUERQUE, N.M. (AP) -Before the automobile, adventurers on horseback traveled El Camino Real in sea rch of better lives in the land called New Mexico.

After Am ericans put a car in every garage, m odern explorers in convertibles got their kicks on Route 66 and famili es stopped in the Land 66 and famili es stopped in the Land
State officials hope the artworks convenient but impersonal interstates that have re placed the fabled highways, but some still search for a sign of the his tory and culture the original roads re-present.

tion Department and the New Mexico Arts Division want to make sure today's travelers find what they're looking for.

Through a five-year, two-part plan called "Cultural Corridors: Public Art on Scenic Highways," the two agencies will place large-scale outdoor works of art in nine New Mexico cities and towns along Route 66 and El Camino Real.

Today, tourists zip along tourism as well as renew New Mexicans' sense of connection with the roadways that shaped the state.

Phase One of Cultural Corridors began last winter, when a committee ginal roads re-present.

Of Tucumcari residents selected a 20-square-foot by 30-square-foot monument of cast stone and polished aluminum that'll go up this fall near the Tucumcari Convention Center on Route 66. It is designed to resemble the tail fins of a late-'50s model car.

Locals in Las Cruces, Belen and Gallup - the three other Phase One towns - already have chosen sites and are meeting to select the art.

Phase Two of Cultural Corridors will kick in next year, when residents of Albuquerque, Truth or Consequences, Socorro, Moriarty and Grants launch similar meetings.

Each of the nine artworks will cost roughly $100,000 to complete.

New Mexico's highway department is funding the bulk of the Cultural Corridors program with more than $800,000 from a federal highway funding bill called the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991. The money, which can't be used for construction projects, comes from a provision in the bill that requires all states to spend 10 percent of their federal highway funds on enhancements such as landscaping or bicycle paths. The state highway department and local governments in the towns involved will pay the remaining costs. "It's probably the largest and most ambitious public art intiative ever undertaken in the state," said Richard Hooker, who coordinates the Cultural Corridors program through the state arts division. "It really is about looking at the highway as a cultural resource."

No other state highway department has decided to use its enhancement money in such an innovative way, said Hooker.

Planning such a large public art project was daunting, said Richard Montoya, head of regional planning for the state highway department. However, he said, the department has benefited by turning to the arts division for help.

"It was a little scary, to some extent, but doing it with the art division made it less so," said Montoya. "One of the things that we're getting out of this (partnership) is help from people who know what they're doing.'

While the rare collaboration between the two state agencies is worth noting, perhaps the most worthwhile feature of the program is its emphasis on input from regular

Tucumcari site coordinator Betty Bryant knows. The former schoolteacher and current president of the Quay County Council for Arts and Humanities spent hundreds of hours evaluating sites and proposals with her fellow residents.

When she wasn't huddling regularly with the 12-member Cultural Corridor committee, she was gathering public opinion about the project. A public hearing on the project in Tucumcari netted only positive responses, she said.

"We advertised heavily and had about 150 people attend. No one complained - everyone was just delighted."

Bryant's committee had the final word on the site and on the 109 proposals that came from artists all over the country. The group finally decided on a towering, stylized stone pyramid by former New Mexican Thomas Coffin.

"I feel like this particular project will be an icon and will have a great impact on tourists," said Bryant. "It is a majestic piece of art."

Coffin, who now lives in New York City, came to Santa Fe in 1974 to study at the Institute of American Indian Arts. He lived in Santa Fe until 1989, when he moved to New York.

Coffin's parents were teachers for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, so he did a lot of traveling while growing up. "I have this thing for Route 66," said Coffin. "I was born to do this (art) - that's what I put in my application." Meanwhile, committees in the other Phase One sites have chosen locations but no artworks yet.

The Las Cruces committee has voted to place art honoring the Camino Real on the city's downtown mall. The mall is being renovated and the artwork will complement the revision, Hooker said.

Belen's committee has chosen a one-acre site at the base of Tome Hill along the Camino Real. The land will be converted into a low-maintenance park containing the artwork, Hooker Gallup's committee picked a spot in the middle of Gallup along Route 66, Hooker said.

In the near future, the arts division plans to ask the state highway department to sponsor a Phase 3 of Cultural Corridors project, which would add five more sites for a total of 14, Hooker said.

Sailing trips get moderns in touch with past hours all the while risking seasickness?

Good question.

The answer? How al bout 40 people hungry for the opportu nity to sail on and crew the 19th-cen tury tall ship Elissa on a three-day voyage from New Orleans to her home berth in Galveston.

"Sailing is the reward for the nasty, dirty, hard vvork" the volunteers do during the year, said Texas Seaport Museum Di rector Kurt Voss, a former volunteer. "We could not sail her without volunteers, but nowhere else can somecine spend three months and be sailing a 19th-century ship."

In a unique program run by the museum and the Galveston Historical Foundation, people from all walks of life participate in a three-morth sail training program learning safety, first-aid, man overboard drills, operational procedures and the 187 lines that make up the seven miles of

Built in Scotland in 1877, Elissa was rescued from a Greek scr ap yard by the GHF in 1974. The foundation was looking for a ship with Ga lveston ties to restore and exhibit. The uare-rigged merchandise barque fit the bill having stopped at the island port with a load of bananas in 1883 and again in 1886.

Elissa also fit within the foundation's budget. Backers of the So what kind of person volunteers to Galveston where the real restorato scrub toilets, mop floors, polish tion would begin. One year and $1 brass, sleep in a cramped space with million later, the rusting bare hull was 15 other people, leaves a warm bed at towed into port and "everyone 3 a.m. to brave the clements for four thought we were crazy" for what they were about to undertake, Voss said. Over the years, the ship had gone through a succession of owners and changes. Her once majestic sails were reduced and eventually eliminated. The GHF planned to restore the ship to her original beauty with no corners

Because of the quality the group insisted on the "project went through fits and starts" and detractors

Persistence and determination won out along with eight years of work and $5 million. Elissa billowed her sails and headed out into Galveston Bay in 1982. Unlike other historic ships, she's a museum that sails.

We're dedicated to making sure the Elissa sails," Voss said. "Sailing her keeps her in the best possible condition."

Some years that can mean just one day-sail in a year. This spring Elissa celebrated the GHF's 125th anniversary with a trip to Baton Rouge and New Orleans, her first offshore sail in seven years. It was pay back time for the volunteers.

In late 1980, the volunteer program was started with a leery foundation board expressing its' "expected us to lower our standards misgivings. Once the restoration work trained group to maintain the ship.

items in the drawers of the kitchen cabinet, I emptied a drawer which contained dishcloths and hand towels -- and aprons.

Those aprons -- virtually forgotten items from long ago -- suddenly brought back a flood of memories.

I'm not sure my children have ever seen me in an apron, but when I was a child my grandmother was never without an apron. She had "everyday" aprons she wore over her house dresses and she had "Sunday" aprons she wore over her dresses while cooking lunch after church on Sundays.

and I also had to don an apron over our Sunday best.

Everyday aprons were just squares of cloth (often remnants of dresses made earlier) with strings attached that tied in back. However, Sunday aprons were real craft items. They were made a fabric bought specifically for that purpose and often were decorated with ruffles, ribbon, ric rac and even embroidery. I remember one particular pattern that was my grandmother's favorite ' for a long time. A doll wearing a dress with a full skirt was appliqued on the apron. The best part about this doll was the full skirt could be raised to show matching pantaloons.

Aprons were an important part of Christmas giving. My mother and my grandmother would make elaborately decorated aprons for those hard-tobuy-for females on the gift list.

One particular aunt liked her aprons with a bib, not just the kind that tied around the waist. This presented a dilemma since a bib required another string around the neck and the question always arose as to whether this should be a solid string that slipped over the head or one that tied and could, therefore, be adjusted.

I studied the aprons that I found during my cleaning and debated if I should put them where they would be readily available to use.

But I decided against that. I doubt that jeans really require an apron for My husband is a fairly good cook when it comes to cooking things he likes. Last Sunday, he added one more item to his personal recipe file.

I was beginning to make an apple pie when he came into the kitchen and offered a suggestion.

He likes cobbler better than pic, but doesn't care for the doughy texture of crust in a cobbler. So he When we would visit her for suggested that I cut the dough for the Sunday lunch, my mother, my sister crust into strips and bake them before

Week emphasizes suicide prevention

AMARILLO -- Suicide is the eighth leading cause of death in the United States with a suicide occurring every 17 minutes.

Data from the National Center for Health Statistics at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention note that more people die from suicide than from homicide in the United

On an average day, 84 people die from suicide and an estimated 1900 adults attempt suicide. Males are at least four times more likely to die from suicide than are females. However, females are more likely to attempt suicide than are males.

Local suicide specialist, Angie Mitchell, M.A., reports that Texas ranks 19th in the nation for its suicide

The Suicide and Crisis Center in Amarillo announces Suicide Prevention Week set for May 6-11. This year's theme is "Safe Homes -- Safe Communities."

According to Mitchell "most suicides occur in homes."

During this week the staff at the Suicide and Crisis Center asks communities to increase their awareness of suicide prevention and intervention.

Mitchell, who is on staff with the Suicide and Crisis Center, says, "Suicide rates are generally higher than the national average in the western states. Also, spring months consistently rank highest in the number of suicides.'

She also states, "Although there are no official statistics on attempted (nonfatal actions) suicides, it is generally estimated that there are at least eight to 20 attempts for each death by suicide."

Mitchell says that according to recent statistics, suicide rates increase with age and are highest among Americans 65 years of age and older. She says that suicide is the third leading cause of death in young people age 15-24.

If you are concerned that someone you know may be considering suicide, the Suicide and Crisis Center encourages persons to be aware of some warning signs of suicide. These

1. Inability to concentrate, orgetfulness. 2. Confusion about duties and priorities. Indecision/procrastination. 4. Increased errors and decline in productivity. 5. Frequent crying, withdrawal, running away. 6. Increased use of caffeine, alcohol, drugs.

7. Disinterest in pleasurable activities. 8. Neglect of health, habits and hobbics. 9. Obsession with death. 10. Giving away possessions; making final plans. Verbal clues may be: "No one understands..." "I wish I could go to sleep and not wake up." "Life is unbearable." "I'm not sure I want to live." "No one cares..."

"I'm no good..." "There's no way out..."

Physical signs: 1. Shortness of breath, sighing. 2. Frequent illness; vague symptoms. Sleep deprivation.

. Fatigue and exhaustion. 5. Racing heartbeats, high blood

6. Hyperventilation. 7. Changes in sleeping and eating habits. 8. Loss of sex drive.

9. Preoccupied with health. 10. Neglect of physical health.

A person may be at risk if he/she has experienced stress situations such as career or job difficulties, physical health problems or school pressures. Losses such as a relationship breakup or financial loss can add to suicide

Significant gains and successes can also be a warning sign that one is experiencing tremendous stress. Remember, a sudden lift in spirits, especially after depression, could indicate a decision to end the pain.

How can a suicidal individual be helped? The Suicide and Crisis Center suggests the following:

, 1. Be aware. Learn to recognize the warning signs of suicide.

2. Show interest and support. Be available and express caring openly.

3. Offer empathy. Try to see life from the person's point of view. Don't offer false reassurances like "everything will be okay." Express a desire to understand. 4. Be direct and ask about suicide. "Have you thought about suicide? Do you have a plan?" You won't be giving them the idea by mentioning suicide.

Listen. Allow expression of feelings. Accept the feelings.

6. Don't dare, or ridicule. 7. Don't act shocked or disgusted. Don't argue or lecture.

8. Don't be sworn to secrecy. Seek support for both of you. Involve significant others. 9. Persist with statements indicating a better solution can be found. Focus on strengths rather than helplessness. Explore alternative solutions.

10. Emphasize seeking help. Give the person the 24-hour hotline number 1-800-749-9026 or 342-0000. Suggest counselors, clergy, or family doctors for professional help. Mitchell encourages, "Above all, take suicidal individuals seriously. Law enforcement is available at 911 in an emergency if someone is a threat to themselves. If you are afraid of offending the individual, remember that it is more important to take action and intervene for his/her life."

The Suicide and Crisis Center is a non-profit program of the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority which provides service to the top 21 counties of the Texas Panhandle.

The Suicide and Crisis Center not only sponsors National Suicide Prevention Week, along with the American Association of Suicidology, but also offers Survivors of Suicidethe support group for persons who have lost a loved one to suicide.

The groups meets for eight sessions and is offered twice a year, during the spring and fall.

According to Mitchell, a survivor's grief is highly individual, but all survivors have the constant companions of guilt, anger, fear and shame.

Like all people in mourning, survivors of suicide are more susceptible to emotional and physical problems. Without help, they are often more open to the act of suicide as a means of ending their own pain.

Mitchell invites anyone who is a survivor of suicide to contact the Suicide and Crisis Center for more information at 342-0000 or 1-800-749-9026.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

The truth about a lie is that if you let it alone, it will chase itself to death.

For the sixth time this school year, the time has come for parents to receive progress reports. Students who have a 75 average, or less, will have progress reports mailed to their parents. This gives the parent and student an additional "prompt" to show a grade improvement within the next three weeks. We do hope that these reminders will be taken seriously! Pride Certified students were treated to the movie "Babe" this past

Friday afternoon. That was also a relief from TAAS.

Twenty-five of our HJH Industrial arts students not only won awards at the regional contest but represented HISD and HJH well at the state meet in Waco. Details of that event will be reported in The Hereford Brand later this week. Congratulations to these fine young people and to their teachers. They have all put in many hours on these projects.

Congratulations, also, to our HJH band members who performed well at their contest. The eighth grade symphonic band received Sweepstakes with a "I" in both concert and sightreading. The seventh grade symphonic band received a "I" in sightreading and a "II" in concert. The full band, seventh and eighth grades, received a "II" and a "III" on their performance. You should never wonder how and why the HHS band continues to receive

Sweepstakes honors -- we "start 'em young."

HJH students and teachers survived TAAS and if the scores are as good as the way the week went, our students should receive good scores.

HJH will have displays in the HISD Administration building throughout the month of May. We invite you to take time to view this display of our students accomplishments. While you are in the building, take time, also, to enjoy the student art work displayed in the main hallway. Featured this month is work from HISD third and ninth grades.

Floydada Middle School will have teachers at HJH Monday to learn about Academic Teaming. We have had several schools in the area to visit this school year for that purpose.

Parents, please work with us as this school year draws to a close. Students need to be at school every day. They should take each of these last weeks as seriously as any other of the year. We are already seeing some of the students at a standstill and that is not good! School is not over until the last bell has rung on the last day of school. We would like nothing less than perfect attendance, perfect attitude and perfect attention, and with parents helping, we can have a perfect ending to the school year.

acute. Therefore, it is important for people to know there are financial options that they can explore.

Before making a decision you could regret, gather the facts and assess the impacts of any financial decision you are considering, says Nancy Granovsky, professor and family economics specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Be sure to get professional advice

Be sure to get professional advice from experts such as your attorney, accountant or financial planner, adds Granovsky, who is also a certified financial planner.

Options associated with life insurance, including accelerated benefits and viatica settlements have been in the news lately. Accelerated benefits, sometimes called living benefits, are the proceeds of life insurance policies paid to policy holders before they die. Sometimes these benefits are included in life insurance policies when they are first sold, but usually they are offered as riders or attachments to new or existing policies.

Companies may offer from 25 percent to 100 percent of the death benefit as early payment, but collecting the payment may occur only under very specific circumstances. There are many variations in method of payment and cost of the accelerated benefit to the policyhold-

Viatica settlements are different.
They involve the sale of an existing life insurance policy to a viatica settlement company in exchange for a lump sum cash payment that is a percentage of the policy's face value. The viatica settlement company becomes the sole beneficiary of the policy in consideration for delivering a cash payment to the policyholder and paying the premiums.

After the death of a terminally ill

After the death of a terminally ill policyholder, the company collects the face value of the policy from the insurance company. Viatica settlements involve complex legal and financial transactions and can take several months to complete.

Every viatica settlement company has its own rules about which life insurance policies it will buy. Common requirements include owning your life insurance policy for at least two years; having a life insurance policy with a reasonably large face value; securing a waiver from current or potential beneficiaries; being terminally ill, meaning that death is expected to occur within two years.

There are financial implications to selling your insurance policy. You may owe federal capital gains tax on the difference between the payment you receive and the amount you have paid in premiums.

Your eligibility for public assistance programs based on financial need, such as Medicaid could be affected, especially if the money is counted as income from the policy is counted as income for Medicaid purposes. However, Congress has been working on a proposal to change the tax code so that accelerated benefits and viatica settlements would be excluded from taxes. Consulting your tax advisor is critical in knowing how a decision will affect you personally.

The Federal Trade Commission has issued consumer guidelines to help you make a choice appropriate to your needs and avoid costly mistakes. Request the publication, "Viatica Settlements" from the Federal Trade Commission, Public Reference, Washington, D.C. 20580. Internet access to FTC consumer publications is through the FTC ConsumerLine gopher server (CONSUMER.FTC.GOV) or through the World Wide Web (http://www.-ftc.gov) ftc.gov).

The Texas Department of Insurance is developing regulations concerning viatica settlements sold in Texas. They may be reached by telephone (512-463-6169).

This financial option is an emerging issue. Changes in financial offerings as well as regulations governing them are likely to occur in the future. Individuals are encouraged to obtain expert legal and financial assistance before making final decisions. Any decision affecting life insurance benefits can change probate and estate considerations, so professional legal counsel is essential.

Parents are somewhat of a disappointment to their children. They don't fulfill the promise of their early years.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: As a longtime against anyone violating the confidentiality of adoption records in order to trace family members. How right you are. Please hold fast to your position. It is morally sound. The following Associated Press item appeared in the Lorain, Ohio, Morning Journal, Jan. 8, 1996. --Cleveland biological father supposedly stabbed her mother with an ice pick and threw her out a window while she was pregnant with Carol.

Dear Cleveland: Thanks for sending the story. Here it is:

'She didn't want to know she was beaten in the face with a saucepan and burned with cigarettes as a toddler. She didn't want to hear that Shuey didn't return calls to his office. her biological family members accuse each other of rape, murder, beatings and infidelity.

"Sandusky, 26, learned the details because a government caseworker violated her wishes -- and the law -by helping a sister track her down. What's worse, she said, the same agency might have saved her from a tormented adolescence had it disclosed the abuse to Jeanne and Thomas Sandusky when they adopted Carol in 1973 at the age of 3 1/2.

'The state made a decision to take me out of this environment, then they decided 20 years later to bring it back to me,' Sandusky said. 'My file was supposed to be really private.

"In telling her story and advocat-ing privacy laws, Sandusky stands among the few trying to counter a believe she's not dealing with her adoption and must hear the grisly details to heal emotionally.

"They thought this information. was going to help me. I wasn't even born yet. What's this information going to do for me?' Sandusky said.

The average age of a first time mother is 23.7, only slightly higher than the average age of first-time mothers in 1940 but nearly two years higher than in 1960.

"Sandusky, her parents and her reader, I am aware that you are husband recently filed a federal lawsuit against the Cumberland County Children and Youth Services, administrator Gary I. Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: We are proud owners of three beautiful German shepherd dogs, two of which weigh more than 80 pounds each.

Our major problem was finding durable, easy-to-clean and comfortable bedding for them that doesn't have to be replaced often and is not expensive. My answer is chaise-longue cush:

ions. They are easy to clean, very durable, don't seem to hold odors and won't mildew or discolor. They are very long, lightweight and cheaper than dog beds. In fact, at the end of the summer they go on sale at a very good price.

I hope this idea can help other owners of large dogs to economize on bedding for their dogs. — Willma Wilhite, Edgewater, Md.
Thanks for writing. It's always great to get good money-saving ideas, especially for pets.

I have compiled a pamphlet full of ideas and hints that are helpful to dog owners. If anyone is interested in getting one, please send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Dogs, PO Box 75001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. - Heloise

MOTEL DRAPES Dear Heloise: When you're traveling and staying in motels, they always have bright, glaring lights outside the doors. I always take pushpins, thumb-tacks and wooden (or plastic) elethes-pins along, and I pull the center of the drapes together and fasten with the clothespins.

I use the tacks to keep the drapes pinned to the wall. This makes for a nice dark room for a good night's sleep! — Becky P., Colorado Springs, Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Your Glasses & Your Golf Game

Want to improve your golf game the easy way? Consider getting new glasses to help you keep your eye on the ball.

If you wear bifocals—and many golf fans do-you're probably aware that the top portion of the lens is designed to help you see distances and the bottom portion to facilitate near-vision tasks like reading. No wonder that the ball on the tee, three feet away from your eyes, is going to look kind of blurry. Squinting may help you see the ball better, but that will tend to tense up shoulders and neck-adversely affecting your golf

A happy choice for the serious golfer is a special pair of "reverse" bifocals to use on the golf course. They have a small reading lens built into the top part of the glasses and a distance prescription below. The player can look down to see the ball clearly-and never have to put on his or her reading glasses to mark the score card!

ANSWER: Thalassemia is not like leukemia. It is not cancer. It's an inherited trait that can produce a mild anemia.

It is most prevalent among peoples of the Mediterranean rim. You're right on that part. "Thallassa" means 'sea" in Greek. Thalassemia comes in many forms. Your minor form is common and requires no special attention or treatment.

Too often, incomplete understanding can lead us into treacherous territory, and you seem to exemplify that. For instance, you are engaged in some flawed logic if you are assuming that all anemias stem from iron deficiency. Not so. In fact, your iron supplements can be worse than unnecessary; they can be harmful, given iron's reputation for buildup in organs.

In summary, you have a mild form of an essentially harmless metabolic irregularity. Stop worrying.

A follow-up appointment can settle any lingering doubts. And, please, check out your use of iron supple-

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will you please tell me what a renin test is? What is its importance in blood pressure? — Mrs. M.J.

ANSWER: Renin is a chemical made in the kidneys. Its purpose is to convert another chemical, angiotensin, into a state that keeps blood pressure at a functional level. The kidneys produce renin when blood circulation fails to keep up with body needs, responding with a renin surge. The blood pressure rises appropriately.

It's May!! Graduation is just around the corner. Have you parents sent those announcements? What about the prom? Have you found out for sure the date of the prom and graduation? I am a parent of a senior who doesn't know the date of anything, nor does he seem to care. I think he is graduating because he has begun to make plans to leave home and go to Wyoming Technical next fall. Right now the thing that concerns him most is finding a vehicle that will make the trip all the way to Laramie, Wyo. My concern tends to be financial.

The library staff is planning another Summer Reading Club. We are storing up our energy and hoping for a good turnout. Parents remember us as you begin to make some tentative summer plans. Grandparents remember us when you plan to have the grandchildren come for a visit.

Because this month is so full of activity and deadlines, when I get home I'm ready to relax with a good book (even if it is for only 30 minutes). If you are looking for something that won't take much time to read, check out I Was Amelia Earhart, a novel by Jane Mendel-

Barbara Wood, author of Green City in the Sun and Domina, has a new book titled The Prophetess that promises to be the best yet. In December 1999, archaeologist Catherine Alexander discovers a cache of six ancient papyrus scrolls in the Sinai Desert. The millennial fears of the apocalypse being at hand holds the world in its grip.

Catherine thinks she may have uncarthed the legendary Wall of Miriam, named after the ancient prophetess who was the sister of Moses. The scrolls reveal a hidden history of the land and its religions and in the seventh scroll Catherine discovers the secret of almost unlimited power.

As Catherine struggles to translate the scrolls, governments fight to keep everything quiet, and billionaire Miles Havers will do anything to possess it.

Riding Shotgun by Rita Mae Brown gives the reader a chance to travel back in time with the main character Pryor Dehyle Blackwood or "Cig" to her friends.

At last, success story for the little railroad that couldn't

By ALLAN TURNER

Houston Chronicle RUSK, Texas -- For many of its 100 years, the Texas State Railroad was the little train that couldn't.

It couldn't make a profit. It couldn't be sold.

Born in a wave of turn-of-the-century boosterism to serve the East Texas iron industry, the prisoner-built 30-mile line between Rusk and Palestine was an embarrassment almost from the start. It lost money like steam, and when the iron business cratered, it was reduced to hauling tomatoes and animal feed.

For a time, it didn't run at all, quietly rusting and rotting in the dogwood-flowered hills of Cherokee and Anderson counties.

"The TSR never was a profit-maker for any operator," said Rusk historian John Templeton. "The TSR was a sure thing on paper, a born loser in fact."

Today, though, the little railroad that couldn't has become the nation's longest, narrowest state park, and its vintage steam engines have chugged their way into the hearts of Texans and would-be Texans around the world. More than 40,000 passengers have ridden the restored railroad since it resumed operation 20 years ago under the aegis of the Texas Department of Parks & Wildlife.

Last weekend, the railroad celebrated its 100th anniversary with the christening of Engine No. 300, a recently refurbished 83-ton locomotive built in 1917. It will be one of two engines pulling trains on the line this summer.

At the celebration were hundreds of hard-core railroad enthusiasts, a group operations superintendent Mark Price noted with a hint of bemusement, "live and breathe trains."

"I know of avid rail fans who go out and videotape passing box cars," he said. "They'll do this for hours. Then they'll go home and watch it."

Though such railroad love may seem extreme, Price said, the appeal of steam is undeniable.

"Recently, we fired up an engine," he said. "It was about 40 degrees, clear but damp, and the steam just rolled out. It was just beautiful. The steam pouring out -these are living, breathing creatures. When they're moving, there's constant moaning and groaning. You feed and water them -- it's almost as if you were dealing with a living animal.

"With the whistles and bells, it gets addicting. It can go to your head."

The Rusk-to-Palestine railway, with its five antique engines, the oldest built in 1901, is the envy of others in the antique railroad field.

"It's crucially significant to the portrayal of its era," said John Dundee, executive director of the Galveston Island Railroad Museum and Center for Transportation and Commerce. "There is almost no other place in the country to see what you can see there. Steam train excursions are becoming a rarity and that's a pity. They are so much a part of our heritage."

The trains, departing from stations in Rusk and Palestine, make their 90-minute runs on varying seasonal schedules from March to November.

Though praised today, for much of its existence the Texas State Railroad has been a steaming, huffing white elephant -- a classic example of how not to run a railroad.

In the heady 1890s, when it appeared that the Rusk area would rival iron mining and smelting centers milk truck once, but that's only one short rail line to woodlots and mines seemed a magnificent idea. Commercial smelters long had exploited the region's ample supplies of low-grade ore, and foundries at the segregated state prison in Rusk used African--American inmate labor to make water pipe, bathtubs and construction materials. The dome of the new state capitol building in Austin was manufactured by Rusk inmates in the Despite some concern over the Texas iron industry's future, Cherokee County-born Gov. James Hogg and other boosters in 1894 called for creation of the railroad to bolster prison operations.

By 1896, said Templeton, chairman of the Cherokee County Historical Commission, the first 4.73-mile segment to the mines was completed. Inmates were paid 50 cents a day for the backbreaking chore of clearing right of way through dense forests and laying

If a short industrial railroad was good, backers reasoned, a complete line to Waco would be better.

By 1909, the line had reached Palestine.

That's as far as it got.
Thus joined by rail, Rusk and Palestine seemed the commercial center of the East Texas universe, with a combined population of their counties topping 50,000. With the line in place, Rusk residents now had access to Palestine's International & Great Northern railway connection and Palestine residents had access to the Cotton Belt in Rusk.

But the Texas State Railroad nonetheless was an almost immediate disappointment.

The railroad lost $11,300 in fiscal year 1907-08, Templeton said, and continued to lose ground. In 1910, the state tried to sell the line for $529,190 -- its book value. "The offer drew exactly zero response from commercial railroads and forced the state to continue operating a losing venture," Templeton said.

Then things got worse.

In 1913, advances in smelting technology led to the closing of the furnace at the Rusk prison. Four years later, the prison became a facility for the mentally ill. And although a Beaumont company tried to run the prison smelter on a contract basis, the plant closed for good in 1921, Templeton said.

After another unsuccessful attempt to sell the railroad, the state leased it to the Texas and New Orleans Railroad, which ran between Dallas and Beaumont. T&NO operated the line until 1961, dropping daily passenger service in 1936 and daily freight service in the late 1950s. For a time, the train operated only when there was enough cargo to justify the run.

Later, the tracks were used by a timber company. The state's rolling stock and engines long since had been

By 1969, the Texas State Railroad was dead.

But its memory and romance lived, and for three years locals made do with stories until efforts to convert the railroad into a state park succeeded in 1972.

Its current shop superintendent, Blair Lavell, 68, a reticent man who oversaw the eight-year effort to refurbish Engine No. 300, admitted that some find the Texas State Railroad a "boring" railroad.

'They had a wreck or two," he said, "but there were no spectacular

The Texas State Railroad, though, historically has been tough on civil engineers, Lavell noted.

One early engineer developed 11th-hour doubts about the soundness of his bridge across the Neches River and paid with his life.

"He was out on the bridge waiting for the first locomotive to come across it," Lavell said. "But, when the engine moved onto the trestle, the bridge began to shake violently. When the state parks officials took control of the railroad -- initial plans called for converting it into a hike and bike trail -- they found themselves saddled with a blessing and a curse. While they acquired right of way through one of the most scenic and historic areas of the state, they also became owners of a cheaply built railroad sadly in need of repair.

"Some of the purists are critical of us for painting our locomo-tives,"Lavell said, alluding to the deep maroon of some of the engines. "They expect them to be all black. But this is all authentic. The B&O (Baltimore & Ohio) painted its engines blue. The T&P (Texas & Pacific) was green. I think the Southern painted some engines

In addition to the steam engines, the Texas State Railroad owns three 1940s-era diesel locomotives, which are not used on the line.

"They are beautiful antiques," operations superintendent Price said, "but a decision was made that running diesel would just diminish the railroad. We want to be known as a 100 percent steam railroad."

The Texas State Railroad operates March 23 through Nov. 16, observing varying schedules depending on the season. Adult admission is $10 one-way, $15 round-trip. Children's fare is $6 and $9. Two-dollar discounts apply on all fares in June, July and August. Train cars are not air-conditioned or heated. Reservations are recommended. Telephone: (903) 683-2563.

Ex-senator's fence building 'keeps me out of trouble

Abilene Reporter-News SWEETWATER - Former state senator Temple Dickson has been on the back of a horse since breakfast.

Spurs still ride on the back of his boots as he sits down to lunch at his 69 Ranch 20 miles south of Sweet-

"At least I think I was on horseback all morning. If I wasn't, I sure feel like I was," Dickson says in response to a question.

Four men who also wear spurs and eans sit down familiarly with Dickson at a narrow, window-facing table. Plates are laden with steaks, beans, potatoes, biscuit, and the apple pie that Kathy Dickson, his wife, has spent the morning preparing.

Through the wide, ranch house window, a portion of the hundreds of yards of limestone fences that Dickson has spent years erecting can be seen curving through the property.

"(Building) those fences is what keeps me out of trouble," Dickson says.

Also out the window, dozens of finches flutter to a feeder that swings wildly in the West Texas wind.

"Oh, Temple feeds all the birds," Kathy Dickson says.

The men at the table, including the gray-bearded and relaxed Dickson, have spent the morning working cattle. They eat heartily and gladly tell stories, laughing loudly and without inhibitions.

Tales are told of cowboys getting thrown by recalcitrant horses. Another story is told about a seasoned ranch hand shying away from a rope that is placed just so to look like a rattlesnake.

Twenty-two-year 69 Ranch manager Rex George tells of the time years ago that he placed turtle eggs in one of Dickson's bluebird houses. He had hoped, he says, that Dickson would run to his bird books to try figure out what sort of bird had laid those particular eggs. The prank had been disrupted, however, when one of Dickson's young daughters, not understanding the prank, innocently let her dad in on the joke.

"I could just imagine Temple looking through his bird books trying to find those eggs," George says while everybody, including Dickson, laughs.

Dickson, a biscuit in hand, says he so good." had just learned something interesting in a book he had been reading about the explorers Lewis and Clark.

"Yes," he says, according to the book, "Indians used to cut (castrate) their stud horses."

George says, "I'd often wondered about that myself. Of course, it would have been something trying to control those horses if they hadn't."

There is also talk of sheep-worming chemicals, rabid skunks, whether the dead animal down the road was a javelina or something else, and the recent deep, life-renewing snow. One subject does not merit conversation. There is no mention of politics, even in this election year. Dickson, 61, once had lofty political ambitions. As his father before him, he had been a state representative. He served from 1965-71 as state representative. In 1988, Dickson defeated the politically powerful Grant Jones and became a state senator. Maybe, Dickson hinted in a newspaper article at the time, some sort of statewide office was within his reach.

Those ambitions were brought to an end when he was defeated in the 1992 state Senate Democratic primary race by current state Sen. Bill Sims, who will retire this year. A federal court in 1992 had ruled in favor of a redistricting plan that hurt Dickson's election chances.

'The court took my damn district. still bitterly resent that damn court," Dickson says, but adds that it did not matter. He was through with running for office.

"I'm just a citizen," he says. "It is neither deep as a well or as wide as a barn door, but will suffice," he added, loosely quoting Shakespeare.

He says his primary loss to Sims may have, ironically, saved his life.

Shortly after the loss to Sims, a small, malignant tumor was discovered in Dickson's right lung. Dickson, then a smoker, said had he won the primary he would have been too busy running for office to pay attention to his symptoms.

Surgery in 1993 for the small tumor was successful.

But only because they caught it so early," Dickson says. "And so far,

Dickson, an alcoholic who has not had a drink in 23 years, says quitting smoking was far more difficult than stopping his drinking. He has become an activist against the tobacco industry and is a charter member of the Tobacco Education Project, an association dedicated to the support of and election of legislators who are anti-tobacco.

"I have never engaged in a more important effort. Please help today. There is nobody else but you and I,' Dickson wrote in a February mailing that asked for contributions for the association.

But that's as far as he goes politically, he says.

The real reason he ran for office in 1988, he jokes, was that, "The dogs had died and the kids had graduated.'

But there remains, on occasion, the itch to participate in the Legislature, he admits.

"I've been imbued with it by my daddy and granddaddy before him. And sometimes something comes up and I'd sure like to have something to say on it and there have been several issues that I would like to have a vote on," he says. "But it's not even close. It's not enough to make me want to go back to Austin."

Sitting on his porch, Dickson reflects

"Politics is a hard game ... a young man's game. You're doing something every night and every day. You work hard in a pressure cooker, night and

That game, he says with a smile, might even be hazardous to one's

"After all, I got lung cancer and Sims had a stroke," he quips.

Dickson now divides his time between his Sweetwater law practice and the ranch.

Politically, he is unwilling even to endorse candidates.

"If somebody asks, I'll give them my-opinion," he says. "People don't much want anybody telling them how to vote, but I do support my friends."

Now, Dickson savors his less hectic life.

"I'm doing some things I wouldn't have had time for," he says. "I'm-learning the land, smelling the flowers, and identifying the flowers."

He has become, he says, more and more a conservationist and environmentalist.

"We try to use as few chemicals on the ranch as we can," he says. "We're not chemical free, but we do the best we can.'

Kathy Dickson, too, is mindful of nature. She owns a small shop in Sweetwater, which is open Fridays only, where she specializes in ordering environmentally safe garden products for clients.

Dickson, himself, has become a lover of trees.

"I used to kill a lot of trees, but not anymore. Especially big trees," he says. "If there is any rationale to save them, I do it."

A big mesquite in his yard bears testimony. Dickson has propped up the tree's old and weakened limbs.

In addition to birds, Dickson also feeds deer and smaller mammals just outside his glassed-in den, which he calls a "bhind." In the den, Dickson treats himself to classical and country music, and watches the wildlife. He says he is occasionally a casual observer of the night sky.

Dickson has time now for reading. His shelves contain good books, including several volumes of Shakespeare.

"Shakespeare said everything there was to say, and he said it better than anyone else," he says. There is also time for Kathy and Temple Dickson to spend with the families of their four grown daughters. The Dicksons are considering expanding their home, which is too small for family gatherings, Kathy says.

The oddest, and possibly most compelling, of Dickson's activities is his continual construction of the rock fences that meander throughout the open spaces near the house and keep him, as he says, out of trouble.

"Temple's got an artist's eye," Kathy Dickson says as she talks about the fences while cleaning up after Later she looks down a line of stone that curves in and out and runs downhill to a little well-kept ranch park and says, "I just think that is so pretty the way that he has made it (the

The rock walls run everywhere, but are purely aesthetic, keeping no creatures in or out.

"They do not open or close," Dickson says.

He says he has never measured the combined length of his rock fences. But to the casual observer the fences, which are more than three feet high and two feet wide, appear to wind at least half a mile. They represent 15 years of labor, Dickson says.

The work will go on. "You kind of get hooked on it," he says. "I can't stop building fences. I'm the maestro of the rocks."

Manufacturers use more than 5,000 ingredients in making cosmetcs-including alcohols, alkalies, dyes, glycerol, oils, talc and waxes.

Life-Long Learning

nere were two times in my life when I felt that I pretty much knew what needed to be known. The first was when I was The second was about the time I turned 30.

Some learning years have passed since then, and I've gained a little wisdom in the passing of those years. For example, I've learned that my mother is not nearly as ignorant as I thought she was when I was 16. I also know now, that though I was moderately successful at age 30, fortunes can come and go quickly. Riches are fickle, but knowledge will be your servant until you die.

Therefore, as I grow older I'm becoming more of an advocate of life-long learning. I now understand the value of acquiring knowledge. "What you think" will never be a very good substitute for "what you know." What you know can never be taken from you.

I'm aware that some folks get paid very well for just saying what they think. A few are fortunate enough to travel around the world and tell others what they think.

Personally, I find it easier to sell what I know. Oh sure, I throw in some opinion from time-to-time, but I get paid for what I know. When I started focusing my efforts on knowing more about a specific subject than most folks, my paydays improved.

I don't know it all. In fact, I know only a little about the areas I've studied the most. However, I know I need to know more, and that knowledge coupled with the desire, is what life-long learning is all about.

Yearning to Learn

Recently, I watched a television program where several business owners discussed their journeys toward success. As they detailed their struggles, each mentioned a period of intense study, or a time when they acquired knowledge at an accelerated

One described his study of the competition by saying he "had to know exactly what they were doing." Another described her experience as "...my only chance to overcome my early failures was to get a lot smarter, real quick."

Later in the same show, all of these bright men and women admitted they were still learning. One summed up the feelings of the group with this statement: "You better be learning every day. As fast as the rules of business are changing, if you aren't learning every day you'll soon be out of the game."

Learning Opportunity

On May 14 business owners will have a great opportunity to continue their life-long learning process. The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce is holding their Fifth Annual business Connection Trade Show. This one-day event allows areas businesses to showcase their products and services.

We will once again provide solid learning opportunities by bringing in quality speakers to address current business issues. This year's line up includes workshops and seminars in the areas of "Exporting Basics," "Surfing the Internet for Profit," "Business Growth," "Health Fitness," "Win-Win Negotiation" and "Leadership Styles."

Some of these sessions will run concurrently, so check with the Chamber for times and registration details. All workshops are free, if you have an admission ticket. The tickets are also free. You can pick up tickets at the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce (10th and Polk), our office at the WTAMU Small Business Development Center (1800 S. Washington, Suite 209) or any of the nearly 200 area businesses who will have booths at the show.

John Wooden, retired coach of the UCLA basketball team, made this statement a few years ago. He said, "It's what you learn after you know it all counts." Don't miss Business Connection '96 — you might just learn something.

-Native American saying

Is it a plant or an animal? Euglena is a group of microscopic organisms that scientists classify as both. About 150 species live in fresh water and are common in warm seasons when they form a green scum on the surface of small ponds and drainage ditches. Euglena contain chlorophyll, get energy from sunlight, but move like animals.

Drought forcing cattlemen to buy feed, search for grazing

By EDUARDO MONTES Associated Press Writer

ALPINE (AP) -- When the weather cooperates with a little water, Tom Beard's ranch is as good as any cattle country in Texas, its fertile rangeland readily capable of sustaining a foraging herd.
"If it doesn't rain, it's a lot of rocks and dirt," said Beard. Lately, to his dismay, he has seen much more of the latter. A far-reaching drought has gradually been drying up many Texas ranches, forcing cattlemen to buy expensive feed or scour their depleted lands for patches of vegetation that will nourish their livestock.

Failing that, they have been forced to sell off their cattle, sometimes even their most valued breeding stock, which in these days of depressed beef prices means few ranchers are likely to turn a profit.

Beard estimates his breeding stock is down about 30 percent and his ranch north of Alpine is operating with only about half the normal number of employees. He said he doesn't expect to make any money this year.

"You might say we haven't seen the worst yet," Beard added. "It's a continually deteriorating situation."

The $6 billion Texas cattle industry is being plagued by a threefold dilemma - the drought combined with the low beef prices and high feed costs.

Individually, cattlemen say, they can each be surmounted with some difficulty.

Together, they pose a particularly nasty problem which has now reached crisis proportions statewide, said Charles Carter, executive director of the Cattlemen's Association of Texas.

"In the last four to six weeks, we have started to see that a lot of our producers who have just been trying to hang on and hang on and hang on, all of sudden they can't hang on anymore," said Carter.

The state's cattle country has been struggling with drought for various lengths of time and to varying degrees.

Far West Texas has been in a drought for at least three years and in the last few months.

At first, longtime ranchers were comparing the situation to a five-year drought during the 1950s. More recently, they've been calling up images of the Dust Bowl of the

"We weren't making very much money to start with, but it's gotten very serious now," said Beau White, a rancher near Valentine. "It's going to thin us out. I don't know who all going to be left at the end."

Ranchers throughout Texas are faced with the problem of dwindling forage. Usually they would be able to buy feed to sustain their herds or even lease land for forage areas.

Too many pastures are depleted. however, and the cost of feed has soared.

The depressed beef prices, which are blamed largely on a glut of cattle on the market, have made it difficult for ranchers to justify the cost of supplemental feeding anyway.

"You can't afford to put $80 normally grassy plains and hills have (worth of hay) into a cow that's worth been reduced to red rock and bare $250 if you take it to auction," said earth. Other areas have gone dry just Jim Selman, a cattle producer in Gonzalez and president of the cattlemen's association.

So far the only alternatives have been either to find some other way to feed the livestock - South Texas ranchers have been burning the thistles off prickly pears so the cattle can eat them - or to sell it altogether.

Some people have sold their entire operations. Yet liquidation creates its own

Besides perpetuating the glut caused in part by an overabundance of beef from northern Mexico, which is suffering its own drought, it could potentially create troublesome situations in the future.

"Any time you have to sell your breeding stock at 50 to 60 percent of what it's worth, then it hurts," said Carter. "You feel it down the road when it does rain and we have better conditions.

'Prices probably aren't going to be low when they get ready to restock," he said. "Selling low and buying high does not create a profit picture for President Clinton recently announced he is considering steps to boost the beef market. But Congress has also eliminated an emergency feed program set up to reimburse ranchers for supplemental feeding.

Anyone who had been approved through the program before April 4 is eligible to receive benefits through the end of May, but after that the assistance will end, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The general consensus is that sustained rains throughout the region are the only thing likely to turn the situation around. There is no good way to know when that may happen, however.

Some estimates place good rainfall in some of the afflicted areas later this year, but there are gloomier assessments for others.

Charlie Hart, a range specialist with the Texas A&M Extension Service in Fort Stockton, said he has seen one estimate that foresees a drought extending into 1999. "I'm scared to death that the worst is yet to be seen," he said.

Of course, Hart also points out that there's little to be gained by forecasting an early end.

'No one dares to predict that the drought is going to break because if it doesn't happen, people get mad at them," he said. "People don't get quite so mad at you if you predict the drought is going to go on and it breaks."

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON

County Extension Agent - Ag I had the unique opportunity this plains counties. past week, to participate in a Public Issues/Leadership Seminar in Washington, D.C. The event was sponsored by the Joint Council of Extension Professionals, of which the National Association of County Agricultural Agents is a member.

I went representing the 330 members of the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

I had the opportunity while in Washington to hear officials of the USDA outline their plans for implementing the 1995 Farm Bill.

We visited the USDA Building, heard from Secretary Dan Glickman and the director of the Cooperative State Research, Extension and Education Service, Dr. Bob Robinson. Both individuals stressed the fact that with the 1995 Farm Bill and its removal of restraints on agriculture producers, that it was gong to be even more important that producers learn techniques that will allow them to better handle the risk involved in producing our food and fiber.

The theme being thrown around was "Managing Change". All that addressed our group, and in our visits to legislators, this them of change in agriculture, and the way we produce and market was a constant.

I had the opportunity to visit with representatives form Senator Phil Gramm's office, Representative Larry Combest's office and had the opportunity to meet with Representative Charles Stenholm. All expressed the need for continued education and adaptation to changes that are occurring in agriculture.

As I stated last week, we are living in an exciting time in agriculture. Technology and innovations are coming out almost daily. Information and delivery systems must adapt to meet these changes.

I noticed an interesting article int he "Texas Corn News" which is published by the Texas Corn Growers Association. The article, titled "What Does and Inch of Rain Mean", stated that one inch of rain would mean $91 million in market value for corn,

For every inch of water, an acre of corn receives 27,000 gallons of water. With each inch, the value of corn increases by $26.50 per acre, a yield increase of 700 pounds. That same inch will generate an extra 10 bushels of wheat or $25 per acre. Milo production increases $216.87 per acre or 800 pounds, cotton yield goes up 100 pound or $37.50 per acre.

The article continues by stating that when multiplier effects are taken into consideration, 1 inch of rain translates to $318 million for the region. If an inch will do all of this, imagine what a good four inch soaker would do.

The Annual Ranch-to-Rail Field Day will be on Tuesday, beg at 7:30 a.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center. The event will start with a breakfast and a trade show.

The program will feature information on the cattle that were fed in the program, feedlot management beef quality issues that can be impacted by cow/calf producers, the importance of management to improve calf value and maintain cow productivity in hard times, and an analysis of the Ranch to rail studies and management applications. For those that would like, a tour of Randall County Feed Yards is planned for the afternoon.

For more information and a complete program, please call the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573.

We have copies of the 1995 Result Demonstration Summaries available int ch Extension office if you would like a copy, please call or drop by. Think Rain. See you next week.

* * May 5-11 * *

ARIES – March 21/April 20
If you're up against a work deadline this week, discipline is the key to success. Put your social life to the side and focus on the job at hand. Don't be afraid to say "no" to an unreasonable boss. On the romantic front, a relationship that seemed to be going nowhere could take a serious turn.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Creative thinking will get you far this week. Look for a new approach to an old problem. You'll be surprised — and pleased — with the outcome. New projects will pique your interest. Losing yourself in a hobby will prove both stimulating and relaxing. Keep an open mind on Tuesday.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
Early in the week, details will be more important than the big picture. Be sure to dot your "i's" and cross every "t". A triumph in the workplace will put you in the spotlight. Be sure to credit those who helped you along. In the financial arena, look for a happy balance between spending and saving.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
With just a small effort on your part, you can make a family member very happy. A few kind words or gestures will go a long way. Feeling overly tired lately? If so, stress may be the culprit. Meditation could help recharge your batteries. A complicated question will be posed Friday.

LEO – July 23/August 23
Second thoughts may interfere with upcoming plans. Think things through carefully and figure out what you really want. Someone's act of kindness will restore your faith in human nature. A spontaneous moment this week will revive a tired romance. Single Leos find new love.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
You may have to sit patiently on the sidelines and let a loved one take the spotlight this week. Avoid domestic conflicts by keeping a low profile and keeping control of your temper. Plans for an upcoming trip may need some refinement. Use your keen eyes to spot any potential problems.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Use your time wisely, Libra. There is no room for procrastinating when you have so much to do. Make a plan and stick to it. You'll see that you can accomplish a great deal when you take an organized approach. If your finances seem to be in order, it may be time to treat yourself to something special. A dream provides special insight.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Looking for new employment? If so, this could be a promising week. Remember though, don't jump at the first opportunity that comes along. Make sure it's what you really want. If you're in a position to do so, it would be wise to hold out for everything you want. Believe in yourself.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
Try not to beat yourself up over a mistake you've made. Instead, focus on the positive. You can't change the past, but you can make the future better. A night out with an old friend will make you realize how far you've come in the past few years. Be proud of your accomplishments.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
A love relationship will reach a new, more serious stage. Don't be afraid to express your true feelings. Now you can wear your heart on your sleeve. This time it won't be broken. Don't let stress in the workplace get the better of you. If you're overloaded, don't be afraid to delegate.

AQUARIUS — Jan 21/Feb 18
Because of a friend in high places, an exciting opportunity may come your way. Be prepared to make an important decision. Later in the week, an old friend will have a surprise for you. You'll feel grateful for such a good companion. In a love relationship, find a balance between give and take.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20 Taking loved ones for granted will only lead to resentment. Show your appreciation. News of a wedding or engagement may take you by surprise. Matters of the heart will never cease to amaze you. If your present living situation is getting you down, it may be time to seek out some new digs.

Bumper crop of TV movies finds art imitating life

By John Crook

OTVData Features Syndicate

Art imitates life in a bumper crop of TV movies as the networks begin the May sweeps battle for viewership.

Fact and fiction blend in A Season in Purgatory, a four-hour dramatization of Dominick Dunne's best-selling nov-

It premieres Sunday and Tuesday, May 5 and 7, on CBS.

Bonnie Bedelia, Blair Brown and Brian Denneny head a strong cast in this story of an aristocratic political family whose celebrity conceals a mother lode of dirty little secrets.

Craig Sheffer (A River Runs Through It) and Sherilyn Fenn (Twin Peaks) costar as two younger members of the powerful New England clan.

Patrick Dempsey (Mobsters) plays the idealistic friend who unearths the family skeletons.

The movie, like Dunne's book, ostensibly has nothing to do with the Kennedys.

On Monday, May 6, two based-on-atrue-story movies vie for viewers.

My Son Is Innocent casts Marilu

Henner as a mother who tries to prove her son (Nick Stahl) is innocent of the rape charges filed against him despite a mountain of circumstantial evidence. Matt McCoy (The Hand That Rocks the Cradle) and Barry Corbin (Northern Exposure) co-star.

That same night, No One Would Tell features former child stars Candace Cameron (Full House) and Fred Savage (The Wonder Years) in a very grown-up story about a high-school student whose dreamboat boyfriend reveals a violent streak Huffing and puffing to beat this summer's theatrical thriller Twister. Fox unleashes the decidedly !:ctional Tornado! on Tuesday.

Shannon Sturges (Savannah) stars as an auditor sent to close down a researcher's (Ernie Hudson, Congo) study of the killer storms, only to find herself swept up in an adventure with a tornado-chasing cowboy (Bruce Campbell, The Adventures of Brisco County, Jr.).

The week also includes the theatrical hit The Fugitive with Harrison Ford, Sunday on NBC.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels oTVData Features Syndicate

Q: Did Christopher Reeve ever play on The Secret Storm, or was it another soap? How is he doing? -Vivian Messer, Valley, Ala.

A: Reeve isn't listed among the cast roster for Storm, which aired on CBS from Feb. 1, 1954, to Feb. 8, 1974, but he did co-star on another CBS soap of the same vintage. From 1968-76 he played young Ben Harper on Love of Life, one of the earliest TV soaps, which enjoyed a 28-year run between Sept. 24, 1951, and Feb. 1, 1980.

I hope you saw Reeve's inspiring surprise appearance during the recent Oscars telecast. Now that he can spend longer periods without a respirator, he is scheduled to begin work this summer as the voice of King Authur in the Warner Bros. animated feature The Quest for Camelot.

Q: I had to drop you a note to let you know that "Sam," the affectionate nickname Rita and Chris use on Silk Stalkings, refers to golfer Sam Snead, not sleuth Sam Spade as you reported in the March 17 TV Pipeline. I think this was explained in the very first episode. I knew you would want to set the record straight. -Linda Peter, Oregon, Ohio.

A: I have to admit, Linda, your explanation sounded pretty far-fetched to me; but since I don't watch the show. I went back to USA Network publicist Karen Reynolds, who earlier had supplied the "Sam Spade" answer from a unit publicist on Stalkings. Guess what? You're right on all counts!

In the opening episode, writer David Peckinpah did introduce the "Sam" nickname linked to a comment about "a hole in one," which had, um, sexual connotations. Thanks so much for Clearing this up!

Q: Who was the lady in a '70s TV show who played a phone operator who always said, "One ringy-dingy"? My sister-in-law says Ruth Buzzi, but I disagree. -C. Douth-wright of New Brunswick, Canada,

Christopher Reeve

A: Right show, wrong performer. The astonishingly versatile Lily Tomlin, who co-starred with Buzzi on Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In, created the character of Ernestine, the operator whose professional motto was. "We don't care. We don't have to. We're the phone company."

Q: Who was the actress who played Fred Sanford's sister-in-law on Sanford and Son? Recently she has been on commercials for Church's fried chicken. -T.W., Sourlake, Texas.

A: LaWanda Page played the disapproving "Aunt" Esther Anderson on both Sanford and Son and its unsuccessful spinoff, The Sanford Arms. She subsequently co-starred on Redd Foxx's ill-fated 1977-78 ABC variety show, as well as two other flops, Detective School and B.A.D. Cats.

SOAP TALK

Perry, Wert leaving As the World Turns

By Candace Havens oTVData Features Syndicate

Fans of soap star Ricky Martin (Miguel. General Hospital) will have to head to New York if they want to see him any time soon.

Martin stars in Les Miserables through June, It had been rumored that Miguel would show up to woo Lily (Lilly Melgar) away from Sonny (Maurice Benard), but it will not happen in the near future.

Dear Candace: I agree with Patti Williams, who recently wrote to your column about As the World Turns.

I'm not interested in the characters Scott (Doug Wert). Sam (Brooke Alexander), Kirk (Tom Wiggin), Connor (Allyson Rice-Taylor), Cal (Patrick Tovatt) and Mark (Alexander

Fess Parker's rendition of "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" went to No. 5 in 1954, but Days of Our Lives star Bill Hayes took it to No. 1.

Walters). They are boring and annoying and I don't like to watch them.

I've been watching this soap for 38 years. I started taping it even when I'm at home so I can fast forward through these characters.

I need an address where I can write the producers and writers. They need to bring back the Snyders and concentrate more on the Hughes family.

They have been dragging out the story lines about Rosanna (Yvonne Perry) and Mike (Shawn Christian), and Margo (Ellen Dolan) and Hal (Benjamin Hendrickson). My daughter and her friend have already given up on the show, and I'm on the verge of doing so myself. -Janyce Eow, Ports-half the cast under the category of dislike, it is understandable that you no longer care for the show.

ATWT has gone through a lot of changes in the past year, not all of them good ones. Perry is leaving the show, as is Wert, so two characters you don't like will soon be gone. Maybe that will help.

You may write to ATWT c/o CBS-TV, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10112.

CHITTER CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP) - More and more celebrities are taking their act to the children's book section.

Debuting as children's authors this spring are playwright Wendy Wasserstein, radio host Garrison Keillor and New Age guru Marianne Jamie Lee Curtis and director Tim Burton are releasing books this fall. And, Julie Andrews and Ricki Lake have publishers expecting manu-

"I think it's a boomer thing - a group of people recapturing their youth," Wasserstein says in the April 29 issue of Time Magazine.

The inspiration for many of the books seems to come straight from is about a girl's first theater visit; Burton's is about a boy who pretends to be Vincent Price; Lake's book is about a fat girl and Williamson's title is "Emma & Mommy Talk to God."

NEW YORK (AP) - Jeanane Garofalo says she's got a plan for the premiere of her movie "The Truth About Cats and Dogs."

"I will make an appearance and then bolt. Go smoke some cigarettes in the bathroom, I don't care. But not watch the movie, because I cannot -I cannot watch my image on a movie screen," she says in the April 29 issue of Newsweek.

Garofalo, a 31-year-old alumnus of "Saturday Night Live," also has roles in two upcoming movies - this summer's "Larger Than Life" with Bill Murray and "Romy and Michelle," now filming with Mira Sorvino.

"Cats and Dogs," which opens nationally April 26, follows two women friends - played by Garofalo and Uma Thurman - who share the same man.

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Julio Iglesias was almost a soccer player.

At age 19, he had a contract with the Real Madrid soccer team and dreamed of becoming a professional goalie. Then a car accident nearly ended his life - and gave birth to his musical career.

"Without the accident I wouldn't be able to reach people the way I do today," the 52-year-old singer said in a telephone interview Friday from his office in Bal Harbour, Fla.

After the crash, Iglesias awoke from a weeklong coma to find himself paralyzed. A doctor's assistant gave him a guitar to coax fingers that refused to move, and the rest is

"I did something to survive. I The female caribou is the on started playing music," he said. American female deer that he "Without that guitar, I would not be Iglesias, who returns to Las Vegas this week to play Caesars Palace, has sold more than 200 million albums.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) -Tom Petty has turned his musical ear to the movies, writing the score for an upcoming romantic comedy.

The rocker's music will be featured in this summer's "She's the One." The movie is directed by and stars Edward Burns, who made his directorial debut last year with "The Brothers McMullen."

In addition to the score, Petty has written six songs that will be used in the movie. A Warner Bros. soundtrack album will be released early this summer, said Lindsay Law, president of Fox Searchlight Pictures.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
