Knocking down the fire

Hereford firefighters attack a trash fire on two fronts on Tuesday, generating a thick cloud of white steam that contrasted with the black smoke from burning tires. Firefighters were called to Bob Campbell's House Moving Co. on South Avenue K at 3:26 p.m. Tuesday, where trash, tires and other items were set on fire when a worker operating an acetylene cutting torch accidentally cut through the acetylene line, igniting the blaze. No injuries were reported.

comments made about Ann presented her as the campus Teacher One of the two women honored Cummings and Linda McLain, named as Teachers of the Year for the Hereford Independent School

The annual honors were announced during the district's Employee Appreciation Banquet, held in the HISD Administration Building banquet hall.

Assistant Superintendent Nena Veazey made the announcements of Mrs. Cummings as Elementary Teacher of the Year and Mrs. McLain as Secondary Teacher of the Year.

She said a committee of 23 people examined the nominations of each campus Teacher of the Year to determine the district winner.

The committee, made up of teachers, parents and members of the community, examined nomination packets from which all identifiable comments had been removed, in order to make it an anonymous selection based on qualifications alone.

In announcing the selection of Mrs. Cummings -- a first-grade teacher at Northwest Primary School -- Mrs. Veazey said she "believes that books may hold the knowledge," but teachers unlock it for students.

Elementary teachers, Mrs. Veazey went on, are "jacks of all trades." "When asked if our teacher likes

In introducing Mrs. McLain as Secondary Teacher of the Year, Mrs. Veazey noted that the SOAR High English teacher believes failure is "not a natural thing. It is a learned behavior."

Students at SOAR, Mrs. Veazey said, "love Linda McLain."

Sara Gallagher, vice principal at Stanton Learning Center, introduced Mrs. McLain as that campus Teacher of the Year.

Gallagher said she was the overwhelming choice of the faculty for the honor, noting, "Mrs. McLain, you are truly a hero.'

Pre-K, K5 registration set

The Hereford Independent School District will hold registration next week for children who will be in Pre-Kindergarten and 5-year-old Kindergarten for the 1996-97 school year. Registration will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 14 and 15, in the HISD administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue. Parents need to bring their child's birth certificate, Social Security card and immunization record. Students registering at this time will get priority placement in the limited number of classes at each campus.

Hot, dry and, yes, windy Thursday

Hereford recorded a high temperature of 94 degrees on Tuesday, with an overnight low Wednesday of 65 degrees, according to KPAN Radio. For tonight, the forecast is calling for clear skies and a low near 60 degrees with south winds of 15-20 mph and occasionally gusty. For Thursday, look for mostly sunny skies, a high near 90 degrees and south winds of 15-25 mph and gusty.

MARY SUE JAMES May 8, 1996

Mary Sue James, 85, longtime Hereford resident, died this morning at Hereford Regional Medical Center. She was a resident of Westgate Nursing Home.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. in Rose Chapel at Gililland-Watson Funeral Home with the Rev. Terry Cosby, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in West Park Cemetery.

Mrs. James was born July 11, 1910, in Valley Mills. She graduated from West Texas State in 1930. She came to Hereford in 1955 as a bookkeeper for her brother, Henry Sears, at Sears Grain Co.

In 1959 she went to work at First National Bank when Sears bought controlling interest. She retired in 1975. Many of her contributions to civic affairs in the community came after retirement.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I recently found a copy of one of your columns that is almost 10 years old. I think the advice is as appropriate now as it was then. Please reprint it. -- Jack in New Buffalo, Mich.

Dear Jack: With pleasure. Here

Dear Ann Landers: You printed a letter from a woman who didn't get along with her 11-year-old daughter.
Your advice was fine, but it's not Mom's authority or the daughter's behavior that caused the problem. It's the way they interact.

I saw our family in that woman's letter. I loved my daughter, but I was beginning to dislike her. I also had become highly critical.

I decided to try a one-month experiment. During that time I would refrain from all negative comments. I would offer only compliments and praise and point out her good qualities. I forced myself to hug her at every opportunity. It wasn't easy. I was never a hugger. At first, she reacted stiffly, but by the end of the month, a miracle had occurred. Our relationship had turned around completely. I liked her. We enjoyed each other. We listened and talked to one another.

She is almost 15 now and still sits on my lap and wants a hug. I never miss an opportunity to let her know love her.

If this worked for us, it can work for others. Please tell your readers about this "miracle." -- It Happened in Indianapolis

Dear Indy: Brilliant approach. And the rewards can be enormous. I have always believed that children will live up (or down) to your expectations. If you treat them as if they are lovable and honorable, they will break their necks to be just that.

A child who is told repeatedly, "You're no good," will fulfill the prophecy because he will believe it and get stuck in that mold.

Love is the strongest force in the world, and it's one of the few things you can give away and still have more

Dear Ann Landers: I took my mother to a light lunch today. The tab was only $8.61. I put a $20 bill in the bill jacket (I don't know the proper name for the small, usually leather envelope). change back. I did leave a proportionate tip, but it wasn't $11.39.

Later that day, I got a plain $11 haircut -- no blow drying. I gave the beautician $15, and she asked, "Do you need your change back?" Please, Ann, tell me if I'm too old for the times (I'm only 39) or if things have changed so much that I haven't kept

I worked as a waitress one summer 10 years ago, and it would never have occurred to me to ask a customer, Do you want your change back?" If a customer wanted me to keep the change, he or she would have said so. Ann, this is not an age-related response of those who performed the services. One was a teen-ager, and the other was about my age. Since this has happened on several occasions recently, I would appreciate your opinion. Am I out in left field or totally out of the game? -- W.M.,

Parkville, Md. Dear W.M.: You are neither out in left field nor out of the game. An appropriate tip in a restaurant these days is 20 percent. According to Mr. Ken David, my hair stylist of many years, the gratuity for a hair stylist should be 15 percent to 20 percent, depending on how pleased you are with the work.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Hereford ends season with win over Caprock

The Hereford baseball team closed out at the plate. its season Tuesday with a 7-5 victory over Caprock in Amarillo.

It was the Herd's first win in District 1-4A in its last chance.

"These guys have been playing well the last couple of weeks," Herd coach Pete Rodriguez said. "They needed a victory, and they got one today."

Hereford got three RBI from senior Tanner Murphey - a three-year varsity player who was playing his last game for the Herd.

The Herd also got a clutch pitching job from junior Eric Ambold, who gave up four runs in a rocky first inning, but shut out the Longhorns over the next five innings. He pitched the complete game, giving up a meaningless run in the seventh inning.

"The next five innings (after the first) he settled down," Rodriguez said. "He got on top - that was the main thing. He made Caprock hit his pitches, and we made some good plays defensively - in fact, we made one error (meaningless) on the day."

Hereford took a 2-0 lead in the first after Murphey's single scored Dustin Hill and Ronald Torres.

Caprock answered in a big way in the bottom of the inning. Ambold hit the first batter and walked the second, then gave up four straight hits, each of which drove in a run. It could have been worse, but Herd centerfielder in district and 5-21 overall. Caprock Wade McPherson threw one runner was 3-9 and 12-15.

The Herd took the lead right back in the second inning. Tate Head walked, Joseph Artho singled and Hill walked to load the bases with one out. Torres grounded to short for what might have been a double play, but the Caprock shortstop threw the ball into rightfield. Head and Artho scored on the play, and Hill moved to third. McPherson drove him home on a groundout for a 5-4 lead.

Ambold started his string of shutout innings in the bottom of the second. Hereford got insurance runs in the third and seventh innings.

In the third, Hereford started a rally with two outs. Head walked, and Artho executed on a hit-and-run play for a single. The Caprock rightfielder misplayed the ball, allowing Head to

In the seventh, McPherson walked with one out and went to third on John Marty Galan's double. Murphey drove McPherson home with a single.

"That's the hitting we haven't been getting all year long - until the last couple of games," Rodriguez said.

Hereford led 7-4 going into Caprock's last turn at bat, but the Longhorns threatened. A.J. Moore led off with a single and advanced to third eventually. He scored when Marcel Daigle beat out an infield hit with two outs. Ambold coaxed a grounder to himself for the final out.

CHICAGO (AP) - After seven quarters of missed dunks, longdistance airballs and bungled fast breaks, after seven quarters of Michael Jordan getting no support Knicks were 0-for-4 with five from his supporting cast, the Chicago Bulls finally played offense like the NBA champions they expect to be.

The ball zipped from one Chicago player to another, players were open in prime scoring positions, and shots began falling for Scottie Pippen and Jordan's other helpers.

The result? A fourth-quarter TKO of the New York Knicks, a 91-80 Bulls victory Tuesday night and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals.

"You're not going to hold a team like Chicago down, a guy like Scottie down," said New York's Derek Harper, whose team plays host to Games 3 and 4 on Saturday and "They rely on you to turn the basketball over and they push the ball up the court to get their easy baskets. That's what happened in the fourth quarter. They got a lot of comfortable baskets and everything came extremely tough for us.' The Bulls, who shot 38 percent in Game 1 and won only because Jordan scored 44 points, were at 36 percent through three quarters Tuesday. Pippen, 4-for-15 in the opener, was 3-for-16 entering the fourth quarter of Game 2.

Chicago certainly didn't look like the team that won an NBA-record 72 games this season, and Pippen wasn't playing like the all-star he is.

Old Tucson Studios rebuilding following fire

Facility serves as western theme park and working movie studio

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Five weeks into his new job as general manager of Old Tucson Studios, Bob Kenniston watched helplessly as flames destroyed nearly half of the complex and a chunk of the city's entertainment history.

After a year of cleanup, insurance settlements and planning, Old Tucson is a Phoenix, ready to rise from the what Kenniston insists will be a better, safer, version of Old Tucson, by early next year.

"It's Old Tucson - Take 2," says Kenniston. "We will continue to be a western themed, family entertainment park" - and once again a location for Hollywood to film movie and television westerns.

The operators of Old Tucson hold a lease from Pima County through hes again. 2003, and as part of a planned Ground was broken last month for renewal they have committed to

The arson fire - still unsolved destroyed a soundstage that won't be replaced and a valuable collection of props and wardrobe ranging from John Wayne's pants to Michael Landon's possessions from "Little House on the Prairie." The fire also cooked the Reno, a narrow-gauge steam engine whose real-life passengers included Ulysses S. Grant.

But the signature mission seen in movies ranging from "The Bells of St. Mary's" to "Three Amigos" will rise again.

'It really is an icon to us," Kenniston said.

Even before the April 24, 1995, fire, management was wrestling with problems. Operators were especially concerned with improving the customer's experience at what had evolved from merely a movie set into an attraction drawing 440,000 visitors

Kenniston thinks the fire helped answer questions and sharpen operators' focus.

"We wanted to bring everything up to the next plateau," he said. "We wanted to have people go away with not only a better day but also with more meaning to that day.'

Doing that means coming up with better defined themes, and more entertainment and interpretation.

'We want to 'edutain' them - a mix of entertainment and education a multimillion-dollar rebuilding, and yearly capital improvements.

Many movie-makers thought the fire gutted the park, which was 60 percent untouched. But Kenniston said the perception has been hard to overcome.

Old Tucson's oldest adobe structures dated to 1939, built for the movie set of "Arizona," which starred William Holden and Jean Arthur. The town-like setting grew piecemeal as other productions followed. It opened to the public in firefighting, which is three times the amount that was available but largely inaccessible a year ago.

and also we want to 'centertain' them, in other words, have things that are going to really clutch at the heart" by

"The last thing I want to do is stand out in the middle of my park and have glass blown out at me from buildings that are so hot in the interior that they're exploding. I never want to do that again, ever," Kenniston said.

Better food, air-conditioned buildings, misted patios and food areas, shaded rest areas - all are part of the improvement plans.

And shows will be performed at six sites spread throughout the park, replacing the five that were clustered together before the fire.

One show may focus on Western medicine, another on Indian life. The crowd-pleasing mock gunfights will continue.

'We don't want to be a museum.' Kenniston said.

By scattering the show areas around the park, people will be entertained longer and tourists and filmmakers will have less chance of interfering with each other.

"We're going to be the same but different," says Helaine Diamond Levy, president of Old Tucson Co.

Prom, graduation night drinking hazardous to young adult's life

COLLEGE STATION -- Drivers are killed everyday in drinking and driving crashes, but there are a number of young drivers involved in illegal recreational drinking who die as well. Many of these deaths will occur around prom or graduation activities, tarnishing a young adult's

The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) reported a person was killed every seven hours and 29 minutes in 1994. This includes 379 drivers under the age of 25 reported as "driving while intoxicated" or "D-W-I," who were in fatal accidents.

Nationally, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports more than 22 percent of all fatally injured 15- to 20-year-old drivers had a blood

"If you've waited until prom or drinking, you've probably waited too want to help their children avoid late," said Dr. Sarah Anderson, unfavorable circumstances, according program leader for family develop- to Anderson. This may be school ment and resource management with sponsored events or parties at their Service. "If a child is drinking and driving, they've probably done it before the night of the prom. Parents need to be aware of this and not wait too long to talk to their children.

"Parents have to take advantage of situations that occur to point out to the child the consequences of various behavior," she said. "When there is an accident, parents need to talk about other choices that could have been made to avoid the accident.

"One choice is not to drink at all,...the choice that most of us as parents would chose for our children," Anderson said. "Unfortunately we don't get to do the choosing.

Anderson said parents need to tell their children if they do drink to make good decisions like having a alcohol content of .10 or greater in designated driver or calling someone to pick them up.

Parents should make their children's friends feel welcome in their home by giving them privacy, providing snacks or letting them play their own music, she said.

"Show kids that they can go out and have a good time without drinking," she said. "Sometimes going out and getting drunk is seen as being the fun part and in reality, it's probably not fun at all.

"Teenagers tend to think nothing bad will happen to them, that they are magically protected....It's a reflection of the adolescent egocentrism," she said. "Helping a teenager see that bad things can happen to them can help

Anderson said there is no point in yelling at your child if they come home drunk. The best advice is to put them to bed and deal with the problem in the morning

She advises parents to take time to cool off when their child has made a wrong choice, then sit down and talk to them, in a calm, rational

She stressed that parents tell the child their concerns and why they feel this way. It also is important to discuss what are the safe alternatives to drinking. Explaining what happens to a person when they drink is more effective. > "It goes back to being honest," she said. "Parents need to tell their children, this is the reality....when you make this choice, this is what could happen.

"Kids are going to learn from their mistakes, not from mistakes we made as teenagers," she said. "The sad thing is that sometimes those decisions are life-threatening. Whether it's smoking, drinking or sex, we keep looking for simple solutions to complex problems and the solutions aren't really simple. There are lots of contributing factors.

HOW DO YOU WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT GETS RESULTS?

BE THOROUGH

Sure you want your ad to stand out from the rest, but don't skimp on the sort of information that sells. The items condition, size, age, brand name, and color are some of the basics readers want to know. Without them, your ad may be passed

STEER CLEAR OF ABBREVIATIONS OK, so you want to include all the important basics, now don't confuse your reader by using strange abbreviations. What is perfectly clear to you may be perfectly unrecognizable to someone else! BE HONEST

Exaggerating your items's finer points may bring in a lot of responses, but a buyer who's misled won't appreciate it - and will take this business somewhere else. STATE YOUR PRICE

The cost of an item is one of the most important concerns of Classified readers. Ads showing prices are one which get results. Giving a price also serves to "weed out" those buyers not in your price range. BE ACCESSIBLE

Including a telephone number or address puts you in touch with potential buyers. Be sure to state the hours you can be reached; a caller who can't get through the first time often won't call again.

Classifieds 'Word Detective' thinks state name derived from tribe known as 'Teyas' be so friendly in name only after all.

"There's this myth that Texas means friendly coming out of East Texas," said John Miller Morris, a UTSA historical geographer and self-described "word detective" who has a new theory about the origin of the state's name.

Morris' retranslated accounts from Francisco Vasquez de Coronado's 1540-1542 expedition and rediscovered what some scholars contend is the first written reference to the word "Texas."

And if Morris' interpretation of an overlooked passage is correct, then the word Texas originally had an altogether different meaning than that told to Texas schoolchildren and what is conveyed in the state's official motto.

Pedro de Castaneda, whose chronicle of the Coronado expedition historians consider to be the most complete of all accounts, described an encounter with a group of American Indians in the Texas

The Teyas were portrayed by the Spaniard as intelligent, large and attractive. Though they were friendly ate the meat raw. Their eyes and chins were distinctively tattooed with cuts filled with charcoal. They gathered wild plants and fruits and may have grown some crops including beans.

But if Morris is right, the Teyas' name had more to do with their heroism than their hospitality.

"Castaneda tells us that Teya or Teyas meant fierce or warlike a much bolder kind of attitude and projection," said Morris, who has written a book the Texas State Historical Association plans to publish this fall.

'Or, as I suggest in my manuscript, Teya to some degree meant 'Don't Mess with Teyas.' These are tough guys or 'Teules,' an old, old Aztec word that (Spaniards) used meaning fierce, godlike men.

"My reading of the semantics suggests that it didn't mean, 'Hi! Come on in. We're a friendly state!' It was more like tough fellows or what is meant by 'Goodfellas.' "

Excerpts from "El Llano Estacado: Exploration and Imagination on the High Plains of Texas and New Mexico," were provided to the San Antonio Express-News.

Morris' novel interpretation of the to the expeditionaries, even assisting meaning of the word Teyas, which was the first reference to the word Texas, according to "Sixteenth Century North America," is not the Texas, according to "Sixteenth Century North America," is not the focus of his book.

Growing up as an Eagle Scout near Lubbock, Morris' love for landscape, language and history led him to examine how Spanish and Anglo explorers and settlers perceived the Llano Estacado or Staked Plains.

Morris also is the latest in a long line of scholars to try to determine the route Coronado took through Texas as he led a force of 1,800 people from Mexico into the Southwestern United States in search of gold.

Independent of recent discoveries of artifacts, Morris concluded Blanco Canyon was likely where the hungry and confused Spaniards camped near the Teyas and decided whether they would travel deeper into unknown territory.

Scholars believe the Teyas later became known as the Jumanos before their culture perished when they were absorbed into both Apache Indian tribes and Spanish society as mine and ranch workers.

A draft copy of the New Handbook of Texas, also to be published this summer, states that Texas' name "apparently" was derived from a word used by the Hasinais Indians in East Texas to greet an ally or a friend.

Texas' official motto, "Friendship," is inspired by the Hasinais' usage of what alternately has been spelled as "tejas," "tayshas," "texias," "techan," "teysas" and 'techas."

But the Hasinais, sometimes referred to as the Tejas, were not encountered until almost 150 years after Coronado's expedition.

By then, the notion of a "great kingdom of Texas" already had spread throughout Spanish Mexico, according to an excerpt from a draft version of the New Handbook furnished by the state historical association.

Although Morris' interpretation is not reflected in the New Handbook, his theory that the first use of the word Texas meant more of a warning than a welcome has won at least one potential convert.

In "The Indians of Texas," W.W. Newcomb Jr., formerly a UT-Austin anthropologist and director of the Texas Memorial Museum, wrote that the state's name was "in fact" derived from the Hasinais.

But told of the new interpretation of "Teyas," Newcomb said Morris "may be on the right track."

TV is starting to look at new millenium

By FRAZIER MOORE AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Time to be thinking about the new millennium. After all, television is beginning to.

Earlier this season, an "Alien Nation" TV film took place on New Year's Eve, 1999. Similarly, next week's "Doctor Who" film is set at the turn-of-the-millennium.

You know how the millennium works. The numbers flip over like with a car's odometer, which itself is an event deemed highly significant even if it really only means the car is that much closer to the scrap heap.

When it happens on a more cosmic scale this sort of thing is celebrated serves, it was last time. Made all the to the new millennium from a

You can bet there will be lots of millennium-oriented programming: "Bob Hope Presents the New Millennium;" "A Thousand Years of Bloopers, Bleeps and Laughs;" "MTV Counts Down 10 Centuries

We can look forward to all that and more as we approach what might accurately be termed the DM -Designated Millennium - since the real anniversary is marked not at 2000, but 2001. But never mind that.

As of this morning, there were about 115,152,348 seconds to go (there's a "millennium" World Wide Web site that computes the time for you).

The more TV-pertinent statistics

And the number of times "Saturday Night Live" executive producer Lorne Michaels can apologize for the season just past while promising a better season next time (four).

Surely TV will ring in the new millennium with great fanfare ("Dick Clark's Rockin' Millennium!"). But when the big moment arrives, what suitably befitting the occasion might drop in Times Square? Dick Clark?

Maybe NBC will whip up a "Must-See Millennium" promotion. And, over on ABC, there's an outside chance Dana Carvey might try to sell it as "The Taco Bell 21st Millennium."

I can't swear to any of that for the millennium to come. What I can do is offer some suggestions for what could happen in the time remaining for this wheezy old millennium we'll soon have to say goodbye to.

Before we count out 1999, there's still time ...

-For something, anything, funny to happen on "Ellen."

-To figure out what "interactive

-For Charlie Rose to learn to sit up straight. -For the Walt Disney Co. to insist that all ABC network stars wear three-fingered white gloves. -For the Fox network to make several more abortive attempts to establish a news operation, going through more executives in the process.

-For several more "Lonesome Dove" sequels.

-For us to mull over all those TV commercials where the product is On the other hand, the Fox imbibed by dogs, ants, polar bears in a big way. At least, if memory network may snatch exclusive rights and frogs - and maybe finally figure out what all that has to do with us human beings.

-For any one of the characters on "Melrose Place" to get a clue.

-For John Tesh to start making -For Ricki Lake to grow up.

-For Jerry Springer to grow up. For the networks to ban the irritating laugh track from sitcoms. Or, to give the audience similar assistance in another genre, for them

Efforts to keep blaze from advancing appear to work

By BARRY MASSEY Associated Press Writer

RED RIVER, N.M. (AP) -Residents of this mountain ski resort town returned to their homes after firefighters said a 7,200-acre blaze that burned into its fourth day wasn't an immediate threat.

But fire crews warned the 450 residents who had been evacuated that they might have to leave again in a hurry if the fire, slow-moving and six miles from town, picked up.

"It's scary to think that this might all go up in smoke," Billye Fagerquist said Tuesday after she and husband Ed returned to prepare for the summer opening of their campground and restaurant.

Efforts to keep the fire from advancing into the northern New Mexico communities of Red River and Questa appeared to be working.

Helicopters dropped some 250,000 gallons of water over two days on the flames in a steep canyon of the Carson National Forest as ground crews using hand tools chopped and

"At this point, there is some hope the fire would be contained by the weekend," Gov. Gary Johnson said in Santa Fe on Tuesday.

About 600 people were evacuated from Questa, a ranching town of about 1,700 people a few miles from Red River, and from the New Age spiritual community of La Lama, and Arizona weeks ahead of the where flames destroyed 27 buildings, 18 of them homes.

La Lama is about five miles north of where the fire was started Sunday when embers flew out of a barrel being used to burn trash.

A San Cristobal man "readily admitted he burned the trash," said Paul Ney, director of investigations for the state fire marshal's office.

The man could face misdemeanor charges of improper handling of a fire or felony charges of negligent arson, as well as be sued by the U.S. Forest Service for the cost of fighting the wildfires it caused, authorities said.

A serious drought, exacerbated by below-normal winter snow accumulation, has contributed to the fires. which have flared across New Mexico region's usually severe fire season.

Having sex unlikely to trigger heart attack, according to study

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Heart disease needn't ruin your sex life. A new study found that sex is highly unlikely to trigger a heart attack, even if you've had a heart attack or chest pain before.

Sex is about as risky per episode as getting angry or waking up in the morning, while heavy exertion can be three times riskier than any of those activities, said Dr. James E. Muller, lead author and a heart specialist at Deaconess Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston.

"There are finally numbers available to reassure these patients that sexual activity is safe," Muller said.

Heart patients and their partners often have unspoken fears that sex will trigger a heart attack. Before this study, doctors could offer patients little more than a rule of thumb: If the patient can climb two flights of stairs without symptoms such as chest pain or shortness of breath, sex is probably safe, Muller said.

"It wasn't very reassuring," he said. "It left people kind of uncertain as to whether it was really safe."

The study, published today in The Journal of the American Medical Association, involved 1,774 patients who had suffered heart attacks, including 858 who were sexually active in the year before. Among them, 27 reported sexual activity in the two hours preceding the attacks.

By having sex, patients temporari-ly increased their chances of suffering a heart attack from 10 in a million to 20 in a million. But the starting risk is so low that doubling it isn't dangerous, Muller said.

Sex did not increase the heart-attack risk at all among patients who got regular exercise, such as playing mild singles tennis.

The study did not look at how vigorous the sex was or what positions were used.

Patients should consult their doctors about whether they are like the patients in the study and it is safe for them to have sex, Muller said. Eleven million Americans have suffered a heart attack or have chest pain, he said.

Dr. Robert F. DeBusk, director of Dr. Robert F. DeBusk, director of The first adhesive postage the Stanford Cardiac Rehabilitation stamps went on sale July 1, 1847.

Program in Palo Alto, Calif., agreed that the study indicates that the actual risk of a heart attack is quite low.

"Physicians and patients are too often burdened by the misconception that sexual activity after (a heart attack) is dangerous," he said.

Previously, Muller's team found that sex raises the heart-attack risk for people without known heart disease, but the danger is negligible. Before sex, their chances of a heart attack are one in a million; after sex, the chances go up to two in a million.

Sexual activity triggers only 1 percent of all heart attacks, he said. Awakening accounts for 10 percent, physical exertion about 4 percent and anger about 2 percent, his team has reported.
