225 maroon-clad HHS seniors say farewell

Whoopiee!

Following a time-honored tradition unchanged in the face of brisk south winds, the members of the Hereford High School Class of 1996 celebrated the end of commencement exercises Friday with the tossing of their mortarboards. This was followed by another time-honored tradition -- chasing around the football field to recover said mortarboards in time for the recessional.

Area drought rivals that of 30s Dust Bowl

Storms hit Panhandle

AMARILLO, Texas (AP)--Fierce thunderstorms struck parts of the Texas Panhandle on Friday, dropping large hail and snaking as many as two tornadoes over open country.

There were no immediate reports of severe damage or injuries.

About 4:45 p.m., Ochiltree County sheriff's deputies reported a tornado touched down in open country 21 miles south of Perryton in the northeast corner of the Panhandle.

Almost an hour later, a tornado was reported just north of Skellytown, about 45 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Two men were taken to Columbia Medical Center in Pampa after their semi-tractor trailer was blown over on Interstate 40 in Gray County, 10 miles east of Groom.

The men, who were not immediately identified, were in stable condition Friday night, a hospital spokeswoman said.

At 8:13 p.m. golfball-size hail was reported in Canadian. Large hail also was reported in Swisher, Hale and Carson counties.

Also, baseball-size hail was reported by the sheriff's office in Roberts County, 12 miles north of Pampa.

As much as six inches of rain fell on parts Ochiltree, Hutchinson and Roberts counties in the northeast corner of the Panhandle.

bloom. Instead, their tips are a deadly brown.

"That's burning up," Heath said Friday. "You work a year just to sit and watch it do that. It makes me sick."

"It's a shame. You feel for those plants," he said. "It's like having a flower pot with a pretty flower in it and you don't put any water on it. It just wilts and dies."

From Heath's South Texas farm to the wheat fields of Kansas, one of the worst droughts of the 20th century is wilting both the crops and spirits of farmers across the nation's midsection. Experts say the dryness rivals that of the 1930s Dust Bowl in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Farmers and ranchers face crop failures and financial ruin. And the effects aren't confined to the countryside, either. Shoppers around the country could see higher prices for such items as milk, bread and eventually meat.

Texas officials said the drought is the state's second-worst natural disaster economically, behind the $3 billion damage done by Hurricane Alicia in 1983. It already has cost farmers and ranchers $2.4 billion, and related industries stand to lose $4.1 billion, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said.

And the always-dry summer months still lie ahead.

"Every region in the state of Texas is either in incipient or extreme drought," said Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "The economic impact is great."

The Texas wheat crop is ruined, with the lowest yields since 1978, the corn is struggling and the cotton is so poor that Texas could lose its spot as the nation's No. 1 cotton grower. Parched pastures, combined with

Faculty selects Bao Nguyen as Highest Honor Graduate

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The American and Texas flags were blowing in the wind Friday as the graduates -- resplendent in their Herd Maroon robes -- solemnly marched into Whiteface Stadium to say their fond farewells to high school.

Led by escorts Cassie Abney and Rob Reinauer, the 225 graduates were cheered by family and friends as the band played "Pomp and Circumstance" in the background.

Waiting from the platform were Principal Terry Russell and other dignitaries whose job it was to certify the students ready to graduate and to present them with diplomas to mark the end of their compulsory education.

But before the diplomas were taken from the table and handed to the graduates, there was business to take care of.

Following addresses by Valedictorian Jeb Skiles and Salutatorian Selena Varner, Russell made the final award presentation of the year -- that of Highest Honor Graduate.

The recipient, Russell said, is nominated by the HHS faculty and voted on by them.

The winner is chosen based on scholastic achievement, character and dedication.

This year's winner was Bao Nguyen, a student Russell said was "truly a joy to have in class."

Nguyen was a member of the National Honor Society, Orators, National Forensic League and Academic Decathlon. He also has been selected to represent Texas in a national speech competition this summer in North Carolina.

He graduated with honors. Nguyen was presented a plaque of recognition while his classmates and those in attendance applauded his accomplishment.

In her address to the class, Miss Varner -- suffering the effects of a summer cold -- asked the question, "How do I say goodbye?"

She noted that, through the past 12 years, the members of the Class of 1996 has "worked to get to this point in our lives."

In junior high, she said, the group came together as a whole, while in high school, "nothing seemed the same anymore," although teachers and parents were always ready to help in time of need.

"Procrastination just became part of our lives, then stress joined procrastination," she said.

But, she continued, "No matter what the assignments, our class determined to conquer them."

Skiles recounted some highlights of the senior year when noting that "we have what it takes to compete."

He hailed the success of the volleyball team, John Messer's third-place finish in the state speech meet, Nathan Diller's appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy, Brent Marnell's winning of the first-ever best in state woodworking award, the academic decathlon team's scoring the most points in school history, and tennis players Paige Robbins and Nicole McWhorter going to the state tournament.

This class, Skiles said, has the drive and determination to succeed, but also is a close-knit group of friends.

"The future," he concluded, "belongs to those who believe in the beauty of their dreams."

The last bit of business to take care

Graduating senior Bao Nguyen steps away from the podium after accepting his award as Highest Honor Graduate at commencement exercises Friday night. Nguyen was selected for the honor by the faculty of HHS. He was chosen, principal Terry Russell said, for academic achievement, character and dedication. Applauding him from the stage are, from left, assistant principal Ken Cole, Russell and Jim Marsh, who was president of the HISD board of trustees during the 1995-96 school year.

Bush panel to study property tax situation

AUSTIN (AP)--Gov. George W. Bush says he knows Texans are hot, but he wants to know how hot they are over property taxes.

Bush on Friday swore in the 16-member Citizen's Committee on Property Tax Relief. The panel is charged with taking public testimony and determining whether Texans want their rising property taxes to be replaced with a different taxing system.

Bush said a state income tax is not an option.

"The job of this commission is to determine whether the people are hot enough about property taxes to replace them," he said. "There are alternatives without an income tax."

After promising to deal with the issue as fairly as possible, the group got an introduction to the issue.

According to state figures outlined for the committee, property tax rates are up at the same time property values are rising. That means people are paying a continually rising property tax.

The governor said he believes that is a problem that should be addressed. But he said Texans will have to show a public will to deal with the issue and a consensus will have to be built on a plan to replace with other taxes the nearly $10 billion raised each year through property taxes.

He noted that he would not support any plan that raised more or less money than the property taxes. "This has to be revenue neutral," he said.

Last month, Bush received a report from a special task that studied the property tax issue. It suggested three possible options: creating a business activity tax; imposing a gross receipts tax on all business and investment income; and making changes in the current 6.25 percent state sales tax, such as expanding it to items not now taxed.

The new committee has until the end of September to report back to the governor. It plans 14 public hearings across the state to "take the temperature" of Texas residents.

Texas Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer, chairman of the committee, said he believes the committee will not give the governor a list of possible solutions, but will tell him which options Texans support and which they do not.

"I think there is a will out there to enact school property tax reform by a wide margin. I just don't know what the selection would be for the alternative," he said. "We're going to report back to the governor what the people think."

City awards bid for well

Hereford City Commission Friday accepted a low bid of $48,469.84 from Big T Pump Co. for conversion of an agricultural well to a municipal water well.

The city received three bids for the project and City Manager Chester Nolen reviewed the bids during the special commission meeting at noon Friday.

The well is located on 200 acres of land leased by the city from Bud Paetzold. The well tested to yield 700 gallons a minute. Paetzold will be paid 15 cents per 1,000 gallons for water pumped from the well. The city already has one water well on the land, yielding about 550 gallons per minute.

In the only other business, commissioner Joe Soliz asked about the status of ropes and posts on the city golf course. Nolen reported that the ropes and posts are to be removed.

Mayor Bob Josseland also announced that L'Allegra Study Club had donated $2,012.23 to the Aquatic Center Park project. The funds represented proceeds from a flower sale.

Attending the meeting were Josseland, Soliz, Roger Eades, Carey Black and Scott Hall. Also present were Nolen and City Atty. Terry Langehennig.

Remembering the sacrifices

Hereford residents Grant Hanna, left, Ruth King and Lester Wagner were among the veterans and spouses of veterans who turned out Friday at county cemeteries to place flags on the graves of deceased veterans in honor of Memorial Day on Monday. The flags are placed each year to help keep alive the memory of the sacrifices given by those who served in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Study explores reasons Latino students drop out

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)--A study of Latino students at risk of dropping out says schools should do more to motivate pupils whose parents may not have the skills or confidence to become involved in the system.

"Latino High School Graduation: Defying the Odds," a book published by the University of Texas Press, is based on a study tracking 100 students beginning at age 15 at Austin Independent School District from 1988 to 1993.

All were children of Mexican Americans or Mexican immigrants and had been designated as being at risk of dropping out.

Only 31 ended up completing high school. None succeeded in four-year universities after graduation, according to the book by Harriett Romo, an associate professor of sociology at Southwest Texas State University, and Toni Falbo, a professor of educational psychology and sociology at UT-Austin.

AISD spokeswoman Della May Moore said the school district currently has programs in place that aren't taken into account in the three-year-old study.

Other groups pointed out statewide education changes that have occurred since the study was done, including refinements in a statewide testing system.

The books says, "During the time we observed them, most of the parents were doing the best they could for their children. And yet, in many cases, their 'best' was so constrained by their own lack of education, mental and physical health, and financial resources that they could do little to help their adolescent children."

It said the schools "had overestimated the educational, financial and emotional resources of the parents in this sample."

The authors also said school officials impeded students' progress in such ways as having students repeat whole courses or school years rather than offer after-school tutoring, Saturday classes or other alternatives.

Ms. Moore said among programs currently in place are tutorials for the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, and the chance for students to make up class absences through Saturday school or evening sessions.

Ms. Romo, who this fall will be an associate professor at UT-Austin's School of Education, said Friday that the study began as a focus on strategies used by parents and schools to try to keep youngsters in school.

But she said she found the schools "were really putting too much responsibility on parents." Most of the parents in the study group had less than a high school education.

As an example, Ms. Romo cited a mother who got a note from school saying that she needed to take responsibility for her daughter being absent.

"When I visited with the mother and interviewed her, I realized she didn't have the communications skills to go to the school and explain what happened," said Ms. Romo.

She said the mother believed she was doing her job by getting her daughter to the school.

"The classes need to be interesting enough to engage the students to stay and want to learn," Ms. Romo said.

Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said the overall trend in Texas is for improved test scores. He said school districts are trying to meet higher standards for all students.

Richard Kouri of the Texas State Teachers Association said the study shows what teachers have observed for years: Schools are having to pick up responsibilities that have traditionally been the role of parents.

"It's going to take additional resources to deal with at-risk student populations," he said.

Amarillo cattleman sues Oprah, guest

AMARILLO, Texas (AP)--A cattleman has filed a lawsuit against TV talk show host Oprah Winfrey and one of her guests for implying that the public "should be very afraid of the beef that is produced in this country."

Paul Engler, owner of Cactus Feeders Inc. of Amarillo, filed his lawsuit because of statements made on Winfrey's April 16 show.

The lawsuit says the defendants allowed false, disparaging and misleading remarks to be made about the safety of American beef and about Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE), the "mad-cow" disease in British cattle that has been linked to an incurable brain disease in humans.

Engler filed the suit Thursday against Winfrey, talk-show guest Howard Lyman, Harpo Productions Inc., and Cannan Communications Inc. in Amarillo's 320th District Court.

The suit was filed under Texas' 1995 False Disparagement of Perishable Food Products Law.

That law allows agricultural producers to sue people who falsely disparage food products.

A spokesperson for Harpo Productions, which produces the Oprah Winfrey show, said the company has not received notice or any information on the lawsuit and declined comment. Phone calls to Cannan Communications were not returned on Friday.

Lyman, who was identified on the show as the executive director of the Humane Society's "Eating With Conscience" campaign, could not be reached for comment. His address was listed as unknown in the lawsuit.

Engler is out of the country. But a statement from his office said:

"The defendants allowed anti-meat activists to present biased, unsubstantiated and irresponsible claims against beef, not only damaging the beef industry, but also placing a tremendous amount of unwarranted fear in the public."

Earlier this month, despite urging from Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, Attorney General Dan Morales said he wouldn't sue over the incident.

Morales told Perry that it would be best if everyone just quit beefing about the issue.

"The more public attention focused upon his (vegetarian Howard Lyman's) outrageous claims, the greater the prospects for real harm being done to our beef industry. I suggest we simply ignore this foolishness," Morales said in a letter to Perry.

According to the lawsuit, statements Lyman made on the show included:

--"One hundred thousand cows per year in the United States are fine at night, dead in the morning. The majority of those cows are rounded up, ground up, fed back to other cows."

--"What I know about what is happening out there with cattle, like feeding cows to cows, I look at it and say that that's a risk that I'm unwilling to take."

The plaintiffs, Engler and Cactus Feeders, are seeking unspecified actual and punitive damages, according to the lawsuit.

The National Cattlemen's Beef Association and the Texas Cattle Feeders Association fired off letters to "The Oprah Winfrey Show" the week the program aired, condemning the statements about BSE and the safety of U.S. beef.

Live cattle prices plunged sharply as lower beef prices, soaring grain prices and Oprah all took their toll on the market, according to cattle industry experts.

DROUGHT

soaring feed costs, are forcing ranchers to sell calves earlier and at lower prices.

"Cattle have to be fed, and they have only certain things they can eat. If they don't have grass or hay or wheat pasture, what do you feed them?" said Steve Munday of the 15,000-member Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Since 1939, rainfall totals for October through May have been recorded at an agricultural research station near Amarillo. The worst on record was 3.03 inches in 1945-46. So far, this year's total is 2.04 inches.

"People in town, they don't have any idea where their food comes from. They think they'll just go to (the grocery) and it'll be there, and it's not," said Randy Reavis, a grain and cotton farmer in Texas' Rio Grande Valley.

Western Oklahoma is having one of the driest springs since 1895. Winter wheat that should be waist-high barely reaches the top of a farmer's boots.

And drought-stunted pasture in the Oklahoma Panhandle is forcing ranchers to take the last-resort measure of selling off their breeding stock, said Betty Skaggs, an owner of the Beaver City Stock Yards in Beaver, Okla.

"If we don't get any rain soon, we're going to be out of grass by midsummer," Mrs. Skaggs said. "It's not a pretty picture this year."

Wheat farmers are even worse off, she said: "They're done. It's total disaster, even if we get rain now."

Oklahoma Agriculture Commissioner Dennis Howard said as many as 10,000 of the state's 70,000 farmers could lose their farms. The state predicts crop and cattle losses of as much as $1.2 billion.

In Kansas, where the five-year average wheat harvest of 367 million bushels a year usually makes it the nation's leader, officials predict a crop half that size. At current prices, that's a $1.1 billion blow.

She said the mother believed she was doing her job by getting her daughter to the school.

"The classes need to be interesting enough to engage the students to stay and want to learn," Ms. Romo said.

Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said the overall trend in Texas is for improved test scores. He said school districts are trying to meet higher standards for all students.

Richard Kouri of the Texas State Teachers Association said the study shows what teachers have observed for years: Schools are having to pick up responsibilities that have traditionally been the role of parents.

of was the certification of the class.

"On behalf of the board of trustees, the administration, the faculty and staff, we congratulate you on this your day," said Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt.

The members of the class, he said, have met all state and local qualifications to graduate and were thus certified to receive their diplomas.

"Seniors, you may now turn your tassels," he said.

Finally it was time for the presentation of the diplomas, beginning with Amy Gutierrez Acosta through Armando M. Zambrano.

When it was all over, Hereford High School had a new crop of alumni. The students recessed -- with quite a bit less formality and order than they had when entering the stadium.

They hugged each other in the parking lot, posed for pictures with family and friends, then headed off to celebrate the beginning of their new lives.

Memorial Day weekend hot, no relief seen

By The Associated Press

No relief is in sight for the Memorial Day weekend in Texas. The National Weather Service says it will be hot, hot, hot.

The high temperatures set the stage for severe weather in the South Plains and Panhandle Friday night. Thunderstorms in the late evening hours produced hail the size of baseballs south of Amarillo and north of Pampa, and hail the size of golf balls in several other locations.

Some thunderstorms could occur again in the northern portions of West Texas.

Highs on Sunday should be in the 80s and 90s, except from 100 to 105 along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend. Night-time lows should be in the 60s and 70s.

Skies were clear Saturday morning across North Texas with temperatures in the 70s. Winds were 10 to 15 miles an hour.

In South Texas and Southeast Texas, skies were partly cloudy to cloudy with southeasterly winds 5 to 10 mph and temperatures in the upper 70s and lower 80s.

Fog was reported in the Lufkin and College Stations areas, restricting visibilities to about 5 mph.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says most of us would like to have an occupation that doesn't keep us too occupied.

Dad to teenage son: "Sure you can use the car...once you've demonstrated your ability to use the power mower."

Paul Hamilton, Hereford's Community Hero who ran a leg of the Olympic torch relay, says the experience was "unbelievable." His moment of glory came Monday morning in Grand Prairie and it's an experience he'll never forget.

As he waited his turn to take the torch, people gathered around to shoot his picture--often with a member of their family. "There's no telling how many times I was photographed," said Paul. People also wanted to touch him, the torch, and find out who he was.

Paul said the planning and preparation for the relay was mind-boggling. "Everything went like clockwork with someone always there to make sure we were in sync." Hamilton was runner No. 24063--the 24th day and the 63rd runner that day.

He noted the Georgia Highway Patrol is escorting the run all the way to Atlanta "in new cars provided by BMW." Paul said he was told that Coca Cola, who provided his running clothes, is spending about a half a billion dollars on the project. Paul's expenses included only getting to Grand Prairie and buying his torch for $275. Only the torch bearers have the opportunity to purchase a torch.

"It was great! I'd do it again tomorrow without hesitation," Hamilton said as he showed us his torch.

"I know it's true--I read it in the newspaper." That's been a popular phrase over the years but, of course, it's not always the case. Newspapers quote people, and not everyone tells it exactly like it is.

What brought this to mind were statements we read the past week about traffic fatalities in Texas. Some spokesmen for statewide organizations made much of the statistics released by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

For the year 1995, they point out, the speed limits were raised and traffic fatalities increased. But they left out part of the formula. The driving population increases daily as do total miles driven.

Using those factors as a base, the DPS also produces a statistic on the rate of death per 100 million miles driven. That rate in 1995 was 1.7, the lowest in the history of the state!

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

As children of the Depression, my sister and I invented games and used available materials for the props. We didn't have many store-bought toys, but neither did most of our friends. We made do with what we had.

It's easy to remember those days with fondness. At the time, we might have felt we were deprived, but I doubt it. Simply put, it was a fact of life.

The games we played often were offshoots of the newspaper comic strips or, sometimes, radio programs. Building a game from a radio show required lots of imagination. After all, we couldn't see the actors and actresses. In later years, I came to realize that they weren't doing anything but reading scripts into a microphone.

But, I digress... Comic strips were the best resource for games. Motion pictures were good, too. Cowboy and Indian games developed from Saturday afternoon movie matinees.

Occasionally, a really good show came along with knights, sometimes in the person of Errol Flynn, who duelled with bad guys up and down stairs, across parapets and through great halls.

My parents were opposed to providing their daughters with toy guns but we had friends who supplied us with their spares. Swordplay was another matter. Prince Valiant in the comic strip had a sword. We read stories about King Arthur and his magical sword.

So, it came to pass that we shoved aside the cowboy and Indian genre in favor of knights and musketeers.

While it may sound strange that two girls were addicted to such games, remember we were in rural America where no one laughed at us or made fun of our fun. In retrospect, it seems there were gender-specific roles. All of them were male so the boys would be boys and the girls would be tomboys. Once in a while a really prissy girl would insist on being the queen of the world, or something like that.

Making the instruments of our games was not too hard. The last swords my sister and I made were fashioned from slats removed from some old window shades. Though not sharp, they were limber and we could engage in a glorious duel without hurting each other.

Whipping those swords around was a joy. We just had to remember not to hit each other because a flip of the wrist could raise a welt pretty quickly.

The end of that particular pair of swords may be blamed on my mother. It wasn't that she objected to the dueling we did. It was just that she insisted on discipline.

To explain... Summertime also meant wheat harvest in our country. My sister and I loved to go to the farm to watch the combines cut through the wheat fields and dump the golden grain into the bobtail grain trucks.

(Wheat harvest in those days was not as sophisticated as it is today. The combines had no enclosed cabs, there were no grain carts and semi-trucks weren't parked in the field to haul the wheat to the elevator.)

On a particularly hot June day, my mother relented when my grandfather came by the house to see if my sister and I could go to the farm with him. She tied our sunbonnets and shook her finger in our faces: Wear these bonnets so you don't sunburn.

Based on skin cancer statistics today, my mother was right on with the sunburn admonition, but we didn't know it.

There was absolutely no item of clothing that was as hated as the sunbonnet. It was hot and uncomfortable. The next step is obvious. We took those bonnets off and tossed them in the backseat of the car.

The 17-mile trip from the farm back to town was glorious. We rode in the truck, atop the wheat going to the elevator. By the time we reached our destination, we were sunburned and filthy dirty, a sight that appalled my mother.

When we got home, the first potential instruments of discipline that caught her eye were our swords.

Need I explain any further?

Take a deep breath, school's out

The end of school for us at The Brand means a time to sit back (briefly) and take a deep breath.

We enjoy covering school events and recognize that the schools are probably one of the most important facets of community life and, as such, are very deserving of media coverage.

I personally enjoy visiting the campuses, talking to the children and their teachers and taking pictures of the hustle and bustle that goes on every single day.

But on the other hand, May is probably the single busiest month for school coverage from a newspaper standpoint.

Not only do we have regular school stuff such as sporting events, school board meetings and the like, we also have elections, awards ceremonies, banquets, receptions, teas, student council elections and end-of-year parties, projects and plays.

(I need to give most of the credit for our coverage to teachers, students, parents and administrators for letting us know what is going on in the schools every day. It isn't possible to know everything that's going on out

By Garry Wesner

Out of the Blue

there, so I rely on all you to help out.)

Anyway, just for chuckles I got out my handy-dandy ruler and checked back through every issue of the Brand that has been published this month (through Friday's paper) to see how much school copy we have published.

I measured photos, news stories, feature stories, announcements and the like about events directly related to the public schools (in other words, I passed on 4-H, YMCA and other non-school events involving school children). I also did not count stories and pictures dealing with the private schools or Walcott.

While some of the stories and photographs deal with such things as the election and school board meetings, the lion's share is dealing with classroom-related activities.

The results of my "survey" is a testimony to the work of the teachers and administrators of this district, not a means of patting myself and our staff on the backs.

I think you'll see that the teachers in this district have pulled off an Herculean task in staying so active the last month of school!

The busiest day for news copy was May 7, which had 247.5 column inches (including more than 80 inches of copy for the HHS H-Awards).

Our lightest day was May 2, in which we had 24 inches of copy.

Overall, there was something in every paper in May about the schools.

Total copy for the month was 1,854 inches! (I, for one, was shocked!)

To put this in perspective, a single page of the newspaper contains a total of 129 column inches (that's 12-1/2 inches up and down times six columns across).

The amount of school-related news published in May would completely fill more than 14 pages of newsprint without any advertisements or anything!

By the way, this does not include the 26-page "Salute to Seniors" section published last Sunday.

I have enjoyed covering activities of the Hereford ISD (and Walcott, St. Anthony's, Nazarene Christian Academy and Community School) this past year and look forward to the 1996-97 school year.

Congratulations to all the Senior Class of 1996 and thanks to all the dedicated teachers, administrators, aides, professionals, paraprofessionals, students, parents and others who have helped us chronicle the past school year in print.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to share an observation with the community.

We have been watching a city employee for quite some time working very diligently and conscientiously all around our town, most especially in our parks. Her name is Nancy Hill.

Thank you, Nancy, for doing such a great job and working so hard to make our city more beautiful.

Sincerely,
Linda Fitzgerald, and Christy Wright

Dear Editor:

Two events that occurred recently stand out in the stark difference between them. In January of this year, a newborn baby's body was found in a dumpster in Wellington. The mother was found and charged with murder. Last week she was sentenced to life in prison.

A few days ago, President Clinton vetoed legislation, which both house of Congress had approved, that would have made a specific type of late-term abortion illegal. This in spite of the fact that several prominent medical people, who's names I can provide, testified that there are no known situations when this would be necessary. In plain language, these abortions are performed to "eliminate", kill an almost full-term unborn baby.

I am, in no way, condoning the killing of a baby before nor after birth, but consider this fact: Had that mother in Wellington paid a "legal" doctor to abort her baby--and in accordance with the procedure Mr. Clinton approved, kill the baby just before it was born, she would be legally free, even though her baby would be every bit as dead.

How far toward absolute irresponsibility and absurdity can we go?

John Grabber,
Umbarger

Dear Editor:

Following is a letter to my son, who graduated Friday night. Maybe you would like to share it with your readers:

To my Pal:

There are those who say I have made a clone of you, son. If so, it is because you and I have had the two very best mothers in the world. They were so very much alike. Both of them were the strongest Christians I have ever known. They were and still are fighters. You and I have been so very blessed to have their guidance and prayers throughout our lives.

Not once has your mom gone to be bed before you or your sisters got home, nor has she failed to be there for our every beck and call. She has always sacrificed for all of us, giving without receiving. That is Agape Love, and that is your mom's love for us.

I have heard some people say they were afraid of both our moms. I would have been also if I had harmed one of their chicks. You never have to worry where you stand with mom; there is no gray area, but she will do anything in the world for anyone.

People say that you are not to live through your children's eyes. That's a lie; parents can't keep from it. I have enjoyed so very much watching you mature into a strong, handsome Christian young man. (Although I do question your recent haircut.)

People felt I would push you in athletics, but I probably did the opposite by letting you do your own thing. I was so very proud of your leadership on the football field as you excelled and got stronger each game, and became one of the finest linemen I have ever seen.

Football is the same as the game of life--and it has become an important part of both of our lives. As I have often told you, and you will realize this later in life, it's not whether you win or lose the game; it's more important how you fought the fight.

Son, deep down you have one of the most tender hearts I have ever seen and I guess I love that about you as much as anything. I have observed you around those less fortunate, around younger friends, adults, and your tender spirit is often released and revealed through your sometimes macho "Polo" attitude.

You have so many peers who look up to you for your strong Christian walk as role model; don't let them down and always know that the good Lord is on your side and watching.

Son, your mom and I love you and your sisters more than anything in the world other than the good Lord Himself, and we always will. We will continue to pray daily for the blood covering of the Lamb, the Blood of Jesus Christ over each of you.

And I ask that the good Lord, at this time, is preparing that special

Christian partner for you and your sisters, just as he prepared your mom for me. Our family has been so richly blessed with the most important things in life, our friends.

We should thank our church for the strong Christian foundation it has given our family through the establishment of Praise and worship, but more of all thank the Lord for fulfilling of the Holy Spirit that resides in our family.

Thank you Jesus for allowing us to have this time with our son. We now release him totally to You. This is a special day.

God bless you son,
Dad

San Antonio Express-News on fighting crime and rhetoric: If anything has become clear over the years about crime, it's that stricter laws and prisons alone are not enough to curb it. Tough talk, such as that recently lobbed by President Clinton and U.S. Sen. Robert Dole, won't cut it either.

But because it is politically expedient to play to American voters' fears of crime and violence, we probably haven't heard the last of it. Nor have we seen substantive ideas that are more than just quick fixes.

As law enforcement agents on the front lines of fighting crime well know - and no doubt the politicians know it, too - that's a sorry and irresponsible approach.

Time and again, police, especially those who deal with drug and gang enforcement, sweep up the streets only to watch new thugs fill the void - legal interdiction apparently not a deterrent.

Some observers rightly point to the need for more prevention programs, particularly for juveniles, in the war against crime.

Such programs should not be limited to the criminal justice system. Indeed, young delinquents often are shaped by social factors, such as poverty and abuse, that are beyond their control.

The National Criminal Justice Commission notes that children born into a low-income household have a greater risk of becoming violent. It is no coincidence that the United States, which has the highest rate of child poverty among industrialized countries, also is facing a boom in juvenile violence.

That's a gaping wound that will take more than a Band-Aid to heal.

Government proposes security plan to ensure privacy of Internet surfers

By ELIZABETH WEISE
AP Cyberspace Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Internet users would be asked to give the government the digital "keys" to their computers in exchange for more security when doing business online, under a White House draft proposal.

The plan would help ensure secure online communication, which is essential if the Internet is to become a commercial marketplace.

The plan calls for the development of an encryption system that would let Americans - individuals, companies and universities alike - transact business online without worrying about someone stealing their credit card number or otherwise invading their privacy. Their transactions would be protected by an unbreakable code.

In return, however, the government wants possession of the encryption "keys" that are necessary to decipher the code. Otherwise, it fears terrorists and other criminals might use such codes without fear of getting caught.

The encryption keys would be available to law enforcement authorities, who could obtain them via a warrant in the same way they now can tap telephones.

That prospect alarms some Internet users.

"Nobody's going to give up that kind of control," said Jim Bidzos, president and chief operating officer of RSA Data Security of Redwood City, Calif.

In addition to complaining about the risk to privacy, Internet users say the central bank of key codes would become the ultimate target for computer hackers. The database "would be like a big bull's-eye," said Marc Rotenberg of the Electronic Privacy Information Center in New York.

The Clinton administration's draft policy paper was released by the Office of Management and Budget last week. The administration hopes to produce a report on how to move forward with the security plan within six months.

The best online security method yet devised is a mathematical system called public key cryptography. In public key systems, a mathematical process generates two related "keys" for each individual - one public, one secret. A message encrypted with one key can only be decrypted with the other.

Under the White House proposal, in order to enjoy such security, users would have to place their private keys in a depository accessible to the government. Law enforcement authorities would then be able to read a user's encrypted messages and documents.

Up until now, the government has restricted the sale of these codes to the United States for reasons of national security. The government fears such codes could be used against American military or government operations.

Government reviews snack food industry

By ROB WELLS
AP Business Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Justice Department watchdogs are sniffing around the potato chip and cheese puff aisle of your grocery store.

The agency's antitrust division has opened an investigation of the salty snack food industry and is asking if Frito-Lay Inc. is gaining an unfair advantage by gobbling up shelf space in grocery stores.

Bill Brooks, a Justice spokesman, declined to name specific targets Friday but confirmed that antitrust investigators are "looking into the possibility of anti-competitive practices in the snack food industry."

The Justice review is in a very early stage, but several industry officials have been answering questions about the highly competitive business of obtaining optimal placement on store shelves for snacks most cardiologists and dietitians would have people avoid.

Nicholas Iammartino, vice president of public affairs at Borden Inc., a Frito-Lay competitor, said Justice investigators have contacted his firm about Frito-Lay.

"They raised some questions about the Frito-Lay acquisition of former Eagle Snack plants and more general practices in the industry," Iammartino said. He would not comment further except to confirm that Borden is not a target of and did not initiate the government investigation.

"We've simply responded in recent months to questions asked by Justice," Iammartino said.

An executive of another leading snack food maker said he too was contacted by Justice investigators asking about Frito-Lay and about snack makers' payments to grocers for display of their products.

"It's hard to talk about snack foods without talking about Frito," said the executive, who spoke on condition his name be withheld.

Frito-Lay, based in the Dallas suburb Plano, is the country's largest snack food company, holding more than half of the nation's $15 billion salty snack market. It has a network of 42 plants producing Fritos, Doritos, Rold Gold Pretzels and Lays potato chips. Recently, it has expanded into lower-fat snacks, including Baked Lays and Baked Tostitos.

A person familiar with the investigation, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Justice review is examining so-called slotting fees paid to grocers for space on their shelves and whether some firms buy excess space on store shelves in order to keep competitors out. Such fees are a substantial business cost for snack producers, an industry official said.

Frito-Lay spokeswoman Lynn Markley said Frito-Lay worked closely with Justice investigators to put to rest questions over its Eagle Snacks acquisition. Justice officials haven't contacted Frito-Lay about payments to grocers or possible anti-competitive actions in the industry, she said.

"While we have not been accused of any wrongdoing, we will fully and openly work with the department or anyone else," Markley said.

The Justice Department emphasized the Eagle Snack review has been completed and the investigation of the snack food industry was separate.

Pitino mulls options: Kentucky or Jersey

By MIKE EMBRY
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Will he stay or will he go?

Kentucky coach Rick Pitino is going to give a lot of thought to leaving his national championship program after the New Jersey Nets made an offer Friday that would make him coach, general manager and part-owner of the NBA team.

Pitino discussed the offer with Nets officials Friday and planned to leave Sunday on a week-long trip to Ireland. He said he would not announce his decision until after he returns.

"Do I want at my age right now to take on this challenge and try to make that a model of excellence at the next level?" said Pitino, a New York native who coached the Knicks from 1987-89. "That's something I've got to decide. You're going to hear a lot of high figures, but money will not come into the equation."

Nets president Michael Rowe said Friday night that he, team chairman of the board Henry Taub, Pitino and his agent, Rick Avare, met near the Cincinnati airport for three hours. Rowe said the latest offer would make Pitino "the highest-paid coach in the NBA" and was one "that there would be no need for further negotiations."

Pitino, who last month turned down a five-year, $20 million offer to coach the Nets, said he addressed the subject because of a report in the New York Daily News on Friday.

"This is not a coaching change," the 43-year-old said. "This is a career move. I've been here seven years, six years longer than many of you thought."

Rowe confirmed the latest offer

UT edges Sam Houston

AUSTIN (AP) - A two-run sixth keyed by Trey Salinas' RBI triple and a Blake Davis sacrifice fly lifted Texas to a 4-2 victory Friday over Sam Houston State, keeping the Longhorns alive in the NCAA Central I Regional baseball tournament.

No. 3-seed Texas (38-23) already led 1-0 going into the sixth when Jason Layne laced a one-out ground-rule double. Salinas scored Layne with a line drive to center. The Bearkats' Brad Prihoda failed to hold the ball when he slammed into the wall, and the hit went for a triple. Salinas scored on Davis' sacrifice fly to center.

No. 6-seed Sam Houston State (31-31) rallied in the bottom of the sixth when, with two out, Brian Gaffney singled and Ryan Rosplock smacked a home run to left, his 12th of the year. But Kendal Adare (3-0) was about a lot more than money.

"Rick Pitino is looking for a perfect situation in the NBA that could take advantage of his talent," Rowe said. "He is looking for an ownership committed to supporting him, winning and we believe today that Rick Pitino and the Nets fit that combination."

Rowe said he wouldn't be shocked by a no answer.

"I am not overconfident that the answer would be yes," he said. "I believe we made a good offer, I believe it is an offer that can be accepted, but I can't get inside Rick Pitino's head as to why he might or might not turn down a job offer. I know the situation at Kentucky is an absolutely wonderful situation and he's made it that way because of his abilities. If his drive is to stay at Kentucky, he will."

Before arriving at Kentucky in 1989, Pitino developed the reputation as a coach who jumped from one job to another. He has often said that he regretted leaving Providence, just weeks after signing a new contract, to go to the Knicks.

And at Kentucky every spring there has been the ritual of NBA teams asking for his services. He came close to leaving a couple years ago when the Los Angeles Lakers came knocking.

"I don't want to make a mistake in my life by leaving a place I love," Pitino said of the current offer. "I have tremendous friends here at Kentucky, as close a group of friends as any place I've been. I'm not looking to go back home."

While Pitino called the Nets' latest offer intriguing, he said, "I've got to temper my excitement because I love this place dearly."

UT edges Sam Houston struck out Ron Thames to end any further Bearkats scoring.

In the ninth, after Adare gave up a two-out triple to Thames, reliever Eric French came on to strike out pinch-hitter Jason Hurta on three pitches. The Bearkats' Scott Davis (5-3) gave up eight hits while striking out four.

The Longhorns advance to face top-seeded Miami (44-13) in an elimination game at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. Miami, who lost to Sam Houston in the opening round of the double-elimination tournament, eliminated second-seed Long Beach State with a 5-2 win Friday.

Sam Houston goes on to a loser's bracket game at noon Saturday against UCLA, which fell 13-2 to Southwest Missouri State on Friday night.

Jazz get 1st win against Sonics

By BOB MIMS
AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The Utah Jazz have the rap of being a three-man team: Karl Malone, John Stockton and Jeff Hornacek.

A new face joined the trio Friday night: Bryon Russell, with a playoff career-high 24 points as Stockton, hampered by hamstring and elbow injuries, endured another subpar performance.

Malone and Hornacek each had 28 points for Utah, but it was Russell's 8-for-14 shooting - including three 3-pointers - that made the difference in Utah's 96-76 breakthrough after losing the series' first two games Seattle. Game 4 is Sunday at Delta Center, where the Jazz is 7-0 in the playoffs with an average victory margin of 21.8.

Gary Payton led the Sonics with 25 points, 19 of them in the first half, while Detlef Schrempf had 17. Shawn Kemp, who averaged 18 in the first two games, had just 10 Friday night, as did Hersey Hawkins.

Stockton ended the game with just seven points and six assists, roughly half his season averages. He managed just 2-of-9 from the floor in 37 minutes, two less than Russell played.

Utah's All-Star point guard was one of the first to praise Russell's contributions.

"Besides the points, he did a lot of things offensively and defensively that gave our team life ... He always makes something happen," Stockton said.

Russell, who began the playoffs at the end of the Jazz bench, also had 10 rebounds, giving the Sonics something new to worry about when the best-of-7 matchup resumes.

"I just came out and played hard - that's all I did," Russell said. "I just stayed ready to play. I'm not saying I'm good, but I'm getting there."

Jazz coach Jerry Sloan, seldom prone to superlatives, had plenty for the third-year forward out of Long Beach State.

"Bryon played a terrific game for us; he played a sensational game. He was a terrific bright spot."

"He came out and gave us that lift that we needed," Malone said of Russell. "We need different heroes every night. He was great."

Added Seattle coach George Karl: "I think we expected someone on their bench to hurt us. We like Russell and we probably had him as high on the list as anyone."

Karl likely became a believer midway through the final period, with the Sonics down by six points and the momentum shifting. Russell's first of two fourth-quarter 3-pointers sparked an 11-0 run that broke the Sonics' back. Another 3, with 2:23 to play, put Utah ahead 91-74.

Still, Russell preferred to talk about his defense.

"I love playing defense. I came out playing aggressively - I just wanted it," he said, adding a direct challenge to Seattle's Gary Payton, recently named to the All-NBA defensive team for a third straight year.

"He's great, he got to be Defensive Player of the Year - but one day, I'm going to get him," Russell said.

Hornacek gave Russell his due, but also credited Utah's success to another factor: deciphering Seattle's perplexing set of traps and double-teams, which led to 30 Jazz turnovers in the first two games.

Friday night, Utah had 17 turnovers leading to 10 Sonics points. Seattle, never able to get into the fluid running game it loves so, had 26 turnovers leading to 27 Jazz points.

"We're starting to get the hang of it (Seattle's trapping defense). We've prepared for it," Hornacek said, adding that Utah's own defense was "a little quicker to (loose balls)."

It was the turnovers that ended the Sonics' eight-game playoff winning streak, insisted Seattle's Nate McMillan.

"To have 26 turnovers, with probably 10 of them offensive fouls, is unbelievable," he said. "But we know what we have to do now - we have to play through that."

For Hawkins, the counter for the Jazz resurgence is tougher play, period.

"The bottom line is that they were more physical than we were; we didn't really push and bump back. So it was a learning experience."

Malone, who had 18 rebounds to go with his 28 points, cut short the Jazz celebration, reminding teammates the Sonics still enjoy homecourt advantage in the series.

"We knew Game 3 was crucial for us, but there's one more game here and if we win it, we still have to go back to their place," he said.

Seattle led 27-24 after one period, but trailed 51-47 at halftime and by seven going into the final quarter. The Sonics shot just 40 percent - the first time in the series they missed more shots than they made - and were outrebounded 45-37.

Early on, it looked like Payton's dominant play would lead Seattle to a 3-0 lead in the series. He had three 3-pointers in the first six minutes of the game, finishing the opening period with 13 points, four rebounds and two assists.

But Seattle's poise evaporated in the second quarter as McMillan and Vincent Askew drew technical fouls and Frank Brickowski was whistled for a flagrant foul for elbowing Malone to the floor.

USC tops Arkansas Tech survives

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Falling behind early was little deterrent for top-ranked Southern California (43-14-1) against Arkansas in the NCAA Central II Regional baseball tournament.

The Trojans scored 10 runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings and remained unbeaten with a 15-5 victory over Arkansas on Friday.

Southern Cal advanced to an 11 a.m. Saturday game against Oklahoma State, which beat Fresno State, 12-5, Friday.

Texas Tech, the host and No. 2 seed, stayed alive in the double-elimination tournament by beating Akron, 7-2.

The Red Raiders (48-14) moved on to a 3 p.m. game Saturday against Fresno State (36-22). The same two teams played Thursday in an opening round matchup. Fresno State beat Tech, 12-5, in that contest.

USC pitcher Randy Flores ran his record to 9-1, controlling every Arkansas batter except Kit Pellow, who went 2-for-3 with a homer and 5 RBIs.

Greg Walbridge was 5-for-6 with a homer and 3 RBIs, and Marc Mirizzi was 4-for-5 with 4 RBIs. The Trojans pounded 21 hits.

Oklahoma State's Jamey Wood hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning to break a 3-3 tie and lead the Cowboys past Fresno State.

Wood's blast scored Jeff Guiel, who had reached on a walk.

The Cowboys (43-19) went on to break open the game, scoring nine runs in the final five innings. Rusty McNamara had a two-run triple in the seventh, and Ted Salhani had a two-run homer in the eighth.

Heath Askew (7-3) relieved Oklahoma State starter Jay McCullough in the fifth and went on to record the win.

Oklahoma State now advances to the winner's bracket final where they will face No. 1-seed Southern Cal at 11 a.m. on Saturday. Fresno State (36-22) moves into the loser's bracket where they will meet No. 2-seed Texas Tech at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Matt Kastelic drove in two runs and Ryan Brewer pitched a seven-hitter, leading Texas Tech over Akron.

Brewer (10-3) struck out four and walked one in his complete-game performance, not allowing a baserunner past second base in the final five innings.

Cal St.-Fullerton defeats Rice, 7-3

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - The Rice Owls couldn't stop Cal State-Fullerton's Mark Kotsay, and so they're on the brink of elimination in the NCAA Midwest Regional baseball tournament.

Rice fell, 7-3, on Friday, getting just two runs in six innings off Kirk Irvine (12-3).

Kotsay got on base four times. He singled, walked twice and was hit by a pitch from Shawn Onley (7-3), who took the loss for Rice. Kotsay had reached base 10 straight times in the tournament before a diving catch by right fielder Jeff Venghaus ended the streak.

"Our team responded well to what they had to do," Titan coach Augie Garrido said. "We had to play a good defensive game and Kirk pitched really well."

Tim McLaughlin was 3-for-4 with two doubles for Rice (40-22), and Venghaus had two hits and one RBI.

Cal State-Fullerton (45-14), which pounded out 18 hits against Delaware in the opening game, got only seven hits off three Rice pitchers.

The Titans play Wichita State at 11 a.m. Saturday in the winner's bracket. Rice was paired against Indiana (43-17) at 2:30 p.m. in an elimination game.

Ben Thomas allowed five hits and two runs over 6 1-3 innings as Wichita State knocked Missouri out of the tournament with a 9-2 victory.

Thomas (9-1) struck out eight and walked three. Marc Bluma allowed one hit over 2 2-3 innings for his fourth save.

"I was very pleased with the way we went about our business," said Wichita State coach Gene Stephenson. "Ben Thomas was in command and set the tone for the game."

Wichita State (52-9) scored five runs off Missouri starter Aaron Akin (8-2), who gave up four hits and four walks in six innings. The Shockers took a 1-0 lead in the first when Travis Wyckoff was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on an error.

Randy Young, Casey Blake and Jeff Ryan homered for the Shockers, and Young had three RBIs.

Griffey blasts Yankees with 3 homers

By The Associated Press
One milestone wasn't enough for Ken Griffey Jr. this week.

Three nights after becoming the seventh-youngest player to hit 200 homers, Griffey had the first three-homer game of his career, leading the Seattle Mariners over the New York Yankees 10-4 Friday night.

"That's the first time I've hit three homers in a game since I was a senior in high school," Griffey said, "so I wasn't even thinking about it."

Griffey hit a two-run homer in the fourth off Scott Kamieniecki, a three-run drive in the sixth off Jeff Nelson, and a solo homer in the eighth off Steve Howe.

He went 4-for-4, matching his career high with six RBIs. He also set a Mariners record with five runs scored.

"Once he got his 200th homer out of the way, Junior started to swing the bat real well," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "That kind of milestone would be on anybody's mind."

In other AL games, Cleveland beat Detroit 6-3, Kansas City beat Texas 8-0, Baltimore beat Oakland 5-4 in 10 innings, California beat Boston 3-1, Minnesota beat Toronto 4-0 and Chicago beat Milwaukee 4-3.

At the Kingdome, Griffey's first homer put the Mariners up 6-1 in the fourth and chased Kamieniecki (1-2).

"I'm not trying to hit the ball 700 miles," Griffey said. "I'm just going up there to see what's pitched and try to hit it that way and start something."

Sterling Hitchcock (4-2), acquired during an offseason trade with the Yankees, allowed eight hits and three earned runs in seven innings.

Orioles 5, Athletics 4

Gregg Zaun singled home the winning run off Carlos Reyes (3-8) with two outs in the 10th at Camden Yards, giving Baltimore its 10th win in 13 games.

Jeffrey Hammonds' three-run homer in the eighth tied it at 4.

Roger McDowell (1-1) pitched two scoreless innings.

Indians 6, Tigers 3

Albert Belle homered twice at Tiger Stadium, raising his major league-leading total to 19 and sending Detroit to its ninth consecutive loss. The Tigers have lost 29 of their last 32.

Manny Ramirez and Kenny Lofton also homered for Cleveland, which won for the 10th time in 12 games.

Eric Plunk (1-0) pitched two hitless innings, and Jose Mesa got three outs for his 18th save in 18 chances. The game was tied 3-3 before Belle connected off Randy Veres (0-3) in a three-run eighth.

Royals 8, Rangers 0

Mark Gubicza pitched a four-hitter for his 16th career shutout and 41st complete game.

Gubicza (4-6) retired 14 consecutive batters - 11 on grounders - before Warren Newson doubled with two outs in the fifth. He struck out two and walked none.

Bobby Witt (4-4) was knocked out with two outs in the fourth at Kauffman Stadium. He allowed five runs and six hits.

Angels 3, Red Sox 1

Chuck Finley (6-2) allowed four hits in seven innings and Garret Anderson hit a two-run single as California stopped a nine-game losing streak against the Red Sox.

It was the Angels' first home game since The Walt Disney Co. took over operation of the team. Troy Percival got six outs for his 13th save in as many opportunities.

Aaron Sele (2-4) allowed three runs and seven hits in six-plus innings.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 0

Rich Robertson (1-7) pitched a four-hitter at SkyDome for his first career shutout. He struck out eight and walked three.

Chuck Knoblauch went 3-for-4, scored Minnesota's first run and made it 4-0 with an RBI single in the fifth. Erik Hanson (5-4) gave up four runs and nine hits in five innings.

White Sox 4, Brewers 3

Ron Karkovice hit a solo homer off Steve Sparks (3-5) with two outs in the eighth at Comiskey Park as Chicago stretched its winning streak to six.

Larry Thomas (2-3) got one out for the win, and Roberto Hernandez pitched a scoreless ninth for his 13th save.

Smoltz grabs 10th victory

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Fernando Valenzuela knows how it feels to be a 20-game winner. At this rate, John Smoltz will find out, too.

Smoltz won his 10th straight start Friday night and also earned his 100th career victory as the Atlanta Braves beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3.

Smoltz left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning down 2-0, but the Braves saved him by scoring three runs.

"They did it. This is the guys' win," he said. "That's a lucky win. Pitchers get the wins and losses, and sometimes you get losses you don't deserve. You get wins you don't deserve, too. This is probably the bonus game, a big-time bonus."

Smoltz (10-1), leading the majors in victories, has never won more than 15 games in a season. He became just the sixth NL pitcher to win 10 games by the end of May.

Valenzuela, meanwhile, showed the form that made him a 21-game winner back in 1986, pitching the San Diego Padres past the New York Mets 13-1.

Valenzuela (3-2) allowed only one run in eight innings. He also contributed an RBI grounder.

"I'm not the same guy that I was 16 years ago," Valenzuela said. "I use all of my stuff and I have a great deal of confidence in myself."

In other NL games, Cincinnati downed Colorado 11-9, St. Louis beat Florida 4-2, Los Angeles edged Montreal 5-4 in 11 innings, Houston defeated Chicago 8-7 in 10 innings and Philadelphia stopped San Francisco 5-1.

Atlanta won for the eighth time in 10 games, while host Pittsburgh has lost five in a row and 12 of 14.

Smoltz gave up six hits in six innings, struck out three and walked three. Mark Wohlers worked the ninth for his ninth save, giving up an RBI single to Carlos Garcia.

"He's been better a lot of times this year," Braves manager Bobby Cox said of Smoltz, "but he still had great stuff tonight."

Padres 13, Mets 1

Brian Johnson hit his third career grand slam, highlighting San Diego's 16 hits at Shea Stadium.

Johnson is 6-for-16 (.375) with the bases loaded lifetime, including the three home runs. Two of his slams have come against New York.

Chris Gwynn, who replaced his brother, Tony, late in the game, delivered a pair of RBI singles. Jason Isringhausen (2-6) lost his fourth straight decision.

Astros 8, Cubs 7, 10 innings

Ryne Sandberg hit his first grand slam in four seasons and Sammy Sosa hit a three-run homer, but Houston rallied to win at the Astrodome.

Sandberg's 10th homer put Chicago ahead 7-4 in the seventh. The Astros tied it in the ninth on Craig Biggio's two-run homer and Sean Berry's two-out single, and won on John Cangelosi's RBI single with two outs in the 10th.

Reds 11, Rockies 9

Eric Davis went 4-for-4 with two home runs and a double, driving in five runs as Cincinnati won at Coors Field.

Barry Larkin had three hits and three RBIs as the Reds took a 9-0 lead in the fourth inning and hung on for their third straight win.

Cardinals 4, Marlins 2

Mike Morgan won for the first time since undergoing shoulder surgery in the offseason, and St. Louis extended its longest winning streak of the year to four games.

Longhorns trade fake turf for low-maintenance grass

By SUZANNE HALLIBURTON
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN - The lush, green grass that blankets the football field in Memorial Stadium will no doubt be coveted by every homeowner in Central Texas. After all, the grass is so smart that it waters itself without prompting, and it never gets muddy.

It conserves water, so there is no excess charge on the monthly water bill. And it would take a thunderstorm of Noah's Ark proportions to turn the field into a quagmire.

"I'd love to have it in my front yard," said DeLoss Dodds, the University of Texas men's athletic director. "But $1 million may be a little too high for my front yard."

The price was right for UT officials, however, who in mid-January decided to spend $1.25 million on a new grass surface for Memorial Stadium. The project came in $300,000 under budget. The grass field is the first phase of a planned $70 million stadium renovation project.

The Longhorns football team has not played a home game on grass since 1968. The Longhorns have worn out five artificial turf fields since then. A sixth replacement would have cost $1 million, roughly the same as the grass.

UT athletic officials previously had considered grass, so en vogue among many of the nation's top football programs, but tabled action on the idea until Texas A&M began pulling up the artificial turf at Kyle Field on Dec. 3.

Dodds said the school specifically wanted the state-of-the-art Prescription Athletic Turf, which is produced by the Motz Group, a Cincinnati company. Texas officials preferred that turf because it is managed by a computer that controls both watering and drainage. The UT soccer field and the football practice field have less-advanced prescription turf systems.

The Memorial Stadium field can be drained by gravity or by a vacuum suction system. The turf is watered underground, conserving water because all moisture goes straight to the roots. When grass is watered from above, only 60 percent to 75 percent of the water actually reaches the roots before it evaporates or blows away.

"We feel it's the best system in natural grass available," said Doug Wilson, UT director of facilities.

Memorial Stadium is the fourth in the country to use this system, the most sophisticated turf system available. The others are Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami, Dodgers Stadium in Los Angeles and the University of Virginia's David E. Harrison Field in Charlottesville, where Texas will play Sept. 28. The Motz Group also is installing the turf system in a multiuse stadium in Amsterdam, Netherlands.

The Motz Group has been producing different variations of the turf system for the past two decades. The largest stadiums in Texas, which have had artificial turf since the late 1960s and early 1970s, were slow to come back to grass. The Cotton Bowl, in 1994, was the first to return to grass. Memorial Stadium and Kyle Field since have followed suit.

Longhorns fans, who want to stay a step ahead of the Aggies, are wondering how the grass will compare to artificial turf.

- Will the field be fast?
Yes, according to Mark Heinlein, senior vice president of the Motz Group. He said the surface will be cut to five-eighths of an inch, about the same as a putting green. "It will be fast because the surface will be uniform and flat," said Heinlein, who was in Austin to direct the project. "The footing will be much closer than playing on artificial turf."

UT football Coach John Mackovic said: "Many people feel that natural grass isn't as fast as artificial turf, but I believe we will have the fastest natural turf in the country."

Memorial Stadium's artificial turf had an 18-inch crown - the difference in height from the sideline to midfield. The grass has a half-inch grade. Running backs and would-be tacklers no longer will have to run uphill if they cut back upfield.

- Will the grass stay green in August and September?

The grass is a Bermuda hybrid (Tifway 419) that was grown in sand in Palm Desert, Calif. The grass grows best where the night temperatures are at least 60 degrees. It also thrives in 100-degree heat. Joe Robbie Stadium also has this type of Bermuda.

"It's going to look it's best in August," Heinlein said. "We'd probably hesitate to put it anywhere north of here. We maybe could get it to grow in northern Texas, maybe Oklahoma, but I don't know. It likes it as hot as you can get it."

The grass goes semi-dormant in winter and is not expected to be affected by the freezes that can occur here in January and February.

- What happens when it rains during a game?

Nothing, unless it pours buckets. The computer automatically turns on the vacuum drainage system if it determines that the grass is too moist. The pumps can get rid of five inches of rain an hour. The rain drains into a giant plastic tub underneath the turf, and the excess water will dump into the storm drains around the stadium.

There will be no mud, mainly because the grass is planted in sand.

- Will it help recruiting?
It can't hurt. Recruits, especially running backs, want to play on grass because they believe it's less stressful on their joints, particularly their knees. However, Texas officials, before their about-face to grass, quoted studies showing that teams which played on artificial turf had one more significant knee injury than those that played on grass.

A number of top football programs - Michigan, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Florida State, Auburn, Oklahoma, to name a few - have grass. And no one is digging it up to install artificial turf.

Chemistry helps Rangers win

By DAVE CALDWELL
The Dallas Morning News
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - It is late. Another Rangers game is over, and another waits to be played the next day. A wave of reporters has swept into the clubhouse, then has swept back out.

The Rangers have put in an eight-hour shift, and then some. They can go home now. But they don't. Red folding chairs are parked in a corner of the clubhouse, near where the pitchers get dressed. Players, some of them still half-dressed in their uniforms, slump in the chairs. Some of them grab beers. Players who wander past the group on the way to the showers are invited - or told - to join in.

And then the Rangers do something that you might think highly paid, big-league ballplayers just don't do anymore.

They talk baseball. But they talk about other things, too. No topic is off limits. They stay to talk almost every night when the Rangers are at home. Sometimes, they talk deep into the night. The group started with three players. Now, it includes as many as 10 or 12.

"It's just sort of blossomed," first baseman Will Clark said. The Rangers have jumped to the best start in club history because their starting rotation has been consistent, because their defense has been dependable, because their offense has found a way to generate runs even when the Rangers are not thumping baseballs out of the park.

But the deeper secret to the team's early success can be found in the clubhouse, its inner sanctum, long before a game and long after. The Rangers, it seems, genuinely like each other.

"It's a baseball club, right?" shortstop Kevin Elster said.

This is unusual - and not just for the Rangers, either. Baseball players are known to disappear after games. The Rangers never have been known as a particularly chummy team. Now they are. Now, they get together to talk, and some grizzled veterans are a little surprised.

"This is the first time I've ever been on a team that did that," said reliever Dennis Cook, who has been in the big leagues since 1988.

The team has only played one quarter of a long season, but every veteran on this veteran-laden team will tell you the Rangers already have developed an uncommonly close team.

Ask someone like Kevin Gross about the quality of the team's chemistry, and the pitcher who played his first major league game nearly 13 years ago will smile and reply: "Best I've ever been on."

Designated hitter Mickey Tettleton, who played his first big-league game in 1984, will say: "We've got 25 players, coaches and the manager all going in the same direction. There are a lot of good relationships in here. Look around. There are a lot of good people in here."

That chemistry goes far beyond the usual clubhouse and road-trip pranks. The entire team is usually dressed and is in the dugout at least five minutes before stretching exercises, a normally dreaded daily staple.

When shortstop Benji Gil, recovering from back surgery, rejoined the team Wednesday for batting practice, the team spontaneously broke into applause. The first person to hug Gil was Elster, the person who could lose his starting job if Gil returns and plays well.

"There are no little groups, no cliques," Gross said. "Nobody's saying anything about anybody else. Nobody's complaining about the defense or pitching or offense. That's started from day one."

The Rangers like to go out to dinner together. When they were in Chicago in April, a pack of 12 of them descended on Harry Caray's restaurant. Any Ranger who wears a cheesy sportcoat or something "a little funky", as Tettleton puts it, might as well just be asked to be razed mercilessly. The Rangers like to think of themselves as champion razzers.

"I've been around great teams who have had great chemistry when they're winning," said Rangers manager Johnny Oates, "but the chemistry went out the door when they started to lose."

Elster was a 22-year-old rookie on the 1986 New York Mets, a team that was a lot like the 1996 Rangers - experienced, aggressive, resourceful. That team, he said, was as close as the Rangers are this year. That team won two of every three regular-season games (108-54), the National League Championship Series and the World Series.

"We're all veterans," he said of the Rangers. "We've all been there. We all know how to win, what it takes. I think that's our biggest advantage."

Oates likes to think the team got off to a good start when all nine projected opening day starters showed up early for spring training. But the Rangers really got the jump long before that.

Oates is a disciple of Sparky Anderson. Oates does many things like the former Cincinnati and Detroit manager, say those who have played for both. But one of the most important things Oates did has nothing to do with baseball.

"Sparky was a firm believer that when you walk into the clubhouse, this should be your home," said Tettleton, who played in Detroit for four seasons before coming to Texas in 1995. "Johnny's done the same thing."

Oates has succeeded in creating an aura. The Rangers' clubhouse at The Ballpark in Arlington has the cozy feel of a den.

Music, rarely loud, is piped over the stereo. Oates often wanders in and out. Players have many places to hide before a game, like the trainer's room or the equipment manager's office, but most usually stay in the room and shoot the breeze with each other. And they usually talk baseball.

The Rangers are a team of veterans - 17 players are over 30, and 13 players have at least five years of big-league experience - and veteran ballplayers know forced activities rarely work.

As he sat in the dugout one day last week and watched his team take batting practice, Oates was asked what he thought the personality of his team was. He thought for a second.

"It's one of professionalism," he replied. Two nights after the Rangers rallied to beat the Royals, they played listlessly against Kansas City, making a few defensive lapses, and lost, 3-1. It was quiet in the clubhouse that night.

"It was a tough game," Clark said.

But by the next afternoon, when the Rangers played an exhibition game against the Tulsa Drillers, their Class AA farm team, you would have never known the Rangers had lost a tough game the night earlier.

By then, Clark said, the loss had been reshaped, then forgotten. It was time to move on to another game.

Big 12 could rise to dizzying height

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Eight years from now, 2004 by my calculations, it will be very, very interesting to see just how much the baby Big 12 has grown.

Listening to Steve Hatchell speak to The Associated Press Sports Editors the other day one got the feeling the league could rise to dizzying heights, both in money and prestige.

Hatchell, the hot-wired "Let's Make a Deal" energetic commissioner of the new league, could produce a monster that would have numerous other schools clamoring to climb aboard not to mention television networks in High Noon rights bidding wars.

Hatchell peppered the air with facts and figures for the upcoming Big 12 grand opening of football and basketball and it was a bit mind-boggling to those assembled.

There have been announcements in bits and pieces about the Big 12 operation.

Hatchell underlined some of the big stuff coming.

Because of the heavy money coming down from ABC television, the Big 12 is going to be an eight-year deal - not five as everyone had presumed.

The big carrot for ABC was the Big 12 championship game between the North and South zone teams. All four Texas teams will be in the south along with Oklahoma and Oklahoma State.

The game will be played on Dec. 7 in St. Louis and ABC-TV will give the league enough money to provide over $500,000 for each Big 12 school.

This is just the start. Give Hatchell more time with sponsors and suite owners and one of these days the game will mean $1 million to each school.

Anyway, the first year the game will produce $7.5 million and that's not exactly hay in this day of the tight athletic dollar.

There are big bucks coming to the Baylor, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Texas because of their association with the new league.

And this doesn't even count the regular season where each Saturday there will be a Big 12 tripleheader on television. ABC has pledged $126 million for an eight-year package. Then there is the Liberty Prime network which will televise a game starting at 11:30 a.m. on each Saturday in an "early window" as Hatchell calls it.

So, we'll have Big 12 football in the morning, in the afternoon, and at night on television.

There are a couple of nitpicking drawbacks. Like the Big 12 title game will start at noon and Texas A&M and Texas will play on the morning (10 o'clock) after Thanksgiving.

"Nobody is excited about that but ABC is paying us a lot of money," Hatchell says.

Society searches for rapidly-disappearing horny toads

In years since designation as state's reptile, population has suffered rapid decline

By JOHN MacCORMACK
San Antonio Express-News
BENAVIDES, Texas - Spaced a few yards apart, eyes scanning the ground, the searchers shuffle-stepped across a bumpy South Texas field, probing with all the intensity of rookie federal agents assigned to the Unabomber case.

But it was not forensic evidence they sought. Rather, it was that endearing reptilian gargoyle known to scientists as the "Texas Horned Lizard," and to the rest of the world as the horny toad.

"This is one of their scats," said Scott Fair, a Texas A&M-Kingsville graduate, plucking a coffee-colored lizard dropping from the dry ground.

"You can see all the bumps in it. Those are ant heads and ant bodies. But you can usually find scat faster than you can find the lizards," cautioned Fair, whose thesis involved tracking horn toads by radio in the South Texas brush.

On this recent field trip of the Texas Chapter of the Horned Lizard Conservation Society, the old toad hunter's axiom largely held true.

During two morning sweeps at the Bomer Wildlife Management Area, only five horny toads were flushed from hiding among the gopher mounds, prickly pear and buffalgrass.

The 130-acre wildlife site is 12 miles south of Benavides and has been used by Texas A&M-Kingsville graduate students such as Fair for quail and toad studies.

In these times, the horny toad is a creature of fantasy and fable for many. And although the catch seemed meager, to the young Texans and the foreign-born, was an abundance.

One boy was lucky enough to even catch one.

"I was just walking. I saw this thing move a little bit and I tried to grab it. It went off, and I grabbed it again, and it sprayed blood out," said an awed Curtis Hill, 8, whose parents traveled from La Vernia on the chance their children would see the legendary beast.

The horned lizard was designated the Texas state reptile in 1992, by unhappy coincidence, the same year a study was published documenting its precipitous decline in many areas.

As quintessentially Texan as the armadillo, as Lone Star as the longhorn, and once as common as grasshoppers, the Texas horned toad is now only a memory in many places.

Pesticides, loss of habitat, the displacement of red ants by fire ants and other causes are suspected, but so far no one has conclusively determined what is behind their decline.

"It's a cold reality. The Texas Horned Lizard doesn't exist in East Texas anymore, except for a few informal reintroductions, and the species will continue to decline in Central and Northern Texas as cities continue to grow," said Wendy Hodges, a University of Texas at Austin graduate student who co-authored the 1992 study.

"In South Texas and West Texas, the populations appear stable unless there are landscape-scale changes," she said.

Once made into curios, traded at Boy Scout Jamborees and collected for the pet trade, the lizard now is listed as a threatened species by federal authorities. It is illegal to collect, possess or remove Texas Horned Lizards from their habitat.

It was in response to the alarming trends that the Texas Horned Lizard Conservation Society was founded in Austin six years ago. Its mission is to publicize the horny toad's plight, to preserve existing habitats and to research the feasibility of reintroduction into its former range.

The society has 300 dues-paying members from across the state and puts out a periodic newsletter addressed to "phrynosomatics," a word derived from the horned toad's latin name, phrynosoma.

The society went national three years ago when a second chapter opened in Southern California where the Coastal Horned Lizard, a related species, is likewise imperiled.

Most who join are inspired less by science than by nostalgia.

"When I think of them as playthings, I call them horny toads. When I think of them as a zoological phenomenon, I call them horned lizards," said Clare Freeman, 59, the society's treasurer.

"We get letters all the time from people who say I played with these when I was a kid and they're gone now. You might say our members are kids, but kids in their 50s, 60s, 70s and 80s," she said.

"Women will write and say, 'When we were girls, we made dresses for horny toads.' Other people will write and talk about making little wagons out of matchboxes and hauling them around," she said.

And like the letter writers, Freeman, who grew up in Snyder, south of Lubbock, recalls with fondness a Texas childhood enriched by the fierce-looking but harmless creatures.

"And when I was a kid, they were everywhere. Everyone knows about hypnotizing them. You put them on their backs and stroked their bellies. We thought you had to rub them in a counterclockwise circle," she said.

"They'd get really still and sometimes they'd stay that way for a few minutes. We'd put little sticks in their paws. Some people did dreadful things to them, boys mostly, but you don't want to put that in your paper," she said.

After the toad hunt, the society held its quarterly meeting under the mesquites, while several small boys kept close watch over the five toads being held in a 10-gallon tank before release.

Beyond the usual business of account balances and correspondence, a surprising proposal was put forth by a visitor, Don Ickles, a field representative of the Texas Education Agency from San Angelo.

"We have a new state park in San Angelo, and its whole focus is to be an education and research center. The park is prepared to dedicate 500 acres for a horned lizard center, and we would welcome your consideration of the area," he told them.

Ickles' offer came with a caveat, however: "The state will not get involved with fund-raising."

Society Vice President Carolyn Todd said the proposal was both unexpected and intriguing.

"I believe it's very serious. We'll be doing a site survey in San Angelo on June 22. I think it's a tremendous opportunity for us to educate the public and have a protected habitat for horned lizards," she said.

Contacted later by phone, San Angelo State Park Superintendent John Culbertson said he is eager to explore the possibilities of a collaboration.

"We've got quite a few horned toads out here. I saw one yesterday in fact. We've got plenty of red ant beds and undisturbed areas. We could create a study area," he said.

"If we could get a plan in writing as exactly what they need, we could run it through master planning and I feel we could get it approved," he said.

After the meeting was over, some members paused to reflect before starting on the long drive home.

Among them was Larry Wisdom, 59, who came 400 miles from Blooming Grove to attend his first meeting as a member of the Horned Lizard Conservation Society.

"My grandfather was a Methodist minister in the Central Texas Conference, and as a boy I'd spend the summers with him in little towns like Venus, Grayford and Moody," he said.

"The first thing I would do would be to build a little stone corral about three feet in diameter and eight inches high, and start collecting them. You literally could find hundreds of them," he said.

"They'd be all gone the next morning, and I'd start out all over again. That was the fun of it. After you had caught one two or three times, you'd recognize it. Sometimes their horns would be different, just like longhorn cattle," he said.

Asked what essential quality made horned toads so attractive to him as a child, Wisdom first mentioned the odd shape, but then seized upon another characteristic.

"Texas has an abundance of lizards, but the only one I could catch almost everytime was the horned toad. He's just not that fast," he said.

Wisdom, a retired Frito-Lay Co. researcher who helped bring the world Doritos, Munchos and Funyuns, is now building life-size horned toad replicas for his grandchildren, some of whom he fears may never see the real thing.

"I had literally thousands of encounters with horned toads. My children had dozens," he said. "And last year I took my four eldest grandchildren to a dude ranch in Bandera, and they saw the first one they'd ever seen in their lives."

The Horned Lizard Conservation Society can be contacted at Post Office Box 122, Austin 78767.

Stolen ring located three decades later

By DAMON CLINE
Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas - On a Sunday afternoon in late April, 600 miles from Odessa near the gulf coast town of Jones Creek, Larry Cissna, his brother and a friend were combing a 16,000-acre pasture with metal detectors in search of Republic of Texas-era war relics.

The serenity of the afternoon was disturbed when, under a large oak tree, Larry's metal detector went off. Cissna scraped away about three inches of dirt to reveal a shiny gold nugget.

After a little spit and some rubbing, the 33-year-old amateur treasure hunter and print shop owner discovered his find was a ring - a 1967 Odessa High School class ring with the initials "G.V." engraved on it.

"I said to myself, this is a long way from home," Cissna said. "This has been lost for a quite a while."

A day later, Cissna called Odessa High School to find the ring's mystery owner. School Secretary Kathy Holloway took the call and later consulted a 1967 yearbook in search of "G.V."

"She said there was only one G.V. in the whole class," Cissna said, recalling how easy it was tracing the ring to its owner. "I asked if he was still around, and she said he worked for the school district. I couldn't believe it."

Neither could the ring's owner, ECISD Human Resources Administrator Gilbert Vasquez, who lost the ring 28 years ago.

In 1968, Vasquez was fresh out of high school and living with his wife when their Odessa apartment was burglarized.

Among the items stolen was Vasquez's prized class ring.

The theft of the ring was particularly heartbreaking because his parents, uneducated and poor, struggled to pay for the ring - a special gift to their first-born for finishing high school.

Zales Jewelers let Vasquez's parents have the ring before it was paid off, just so he could wear it at graduation, he said.

"It was just so devastating to me," Vasquez recalled. "I knew what they went through to pay for it because of their limited income. They even made sure they made all the payments on time so I could have it for graduation."

Vasquez said he is still a little bewildered about where and how the ring was found, but said the important thing is that he has it back.

Since getting his ring back, he has only taken it off once - to show his parents.

"My mother let out a yelp of excitement and cupped it in her hands," Vasquez said. "She just started praying. I don't know how many prayers went into that ring."

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

Going to the grocery store is not one of my favorite things to do. Maybe that's part of the reason I frequently forget an item or two that I need when I buy a big bill of groceries.

But my real problem is when I go to the store to pick up two items -- and can only remember one of them.

I always repeat the names of the items to myself numerous times on my way to the store. I have even devised methods to help me remember, like using the first letter in the name of each item to create a catchy word.

Then I walk in the door, pick up one item and go completely "brain dead" as to what the other item could have been.

So I think, "It will come to me in a minute. I'll just walk down a couple of aisles and I'll see something to jog my memory."

Then the trek begins. I walk up and down every aisle in the store -- repeatedly, all the time mentally reviewing things in the cabinets at home, checking off items that I know I'm not out of.

And if I can even remember the first letter in the name of the item, I can't remember what the letter stood for.

The new stocker (and there is always somebody new) doesn't know me, so after the third time I pass him, he becomes suspicious of this lady wandering through the store with a crazed look in her eyes.

(He probably wonders if I'm casing the joint.)

When he goes to the manager, the situation is instantly cleared up.

"Oh, don't worry about her. That crazy lady frequently comes here and wanders the aisles but never seems to be dangerous."

Well, sometimes I'm successful and actually remember what the second thing was that I needed to buy.

But -- sometimes I meekly pay for the one item I can remember and leave the store feeling that all eyes are on me.

After I get in the car, I make the resolution I've made so many times before: Next time I go to the store, regardless of how many items I need to get, I will WRITE IT DOWN.

Isn't it funny how time dulls the memory? In a few days I'll need two or three things from the store and I'll think, "Oh, I can remember that. I don't need to make a list."

Some people never learn.

Once again this year the Deaf Smith County 4-Hers performed well in county and district competition and numerous youth will compete in state competition the first week in June on the Texas A&M campus.

Congratulations to all of you and good luck at State Roundup.

Remember, regardless of what happens at State Roundup, you are already a winner!

Dear Ann Landers: Computers may be the wave of the future, but I can attest to the fact that they are going to break up many marriages. Mine is already a near casualty. Mark my words, Ann, mid-life and the Internet are an explosive combination that spells double trouble.

My husband, who is 39, started chatting on the Internet "just for fun." Eventually, he was on it every free minute, both day and night, often until 2 or 3 a.m. In a matter of a few months, he announced that he was leaving me. We already had been through three years of counseling, so he decided a separation would be best. He assured me that he loved me and wanted to keep our marriage together but felt he needed "more space." He found an apartment and moved out.

Less than two weeks later, he decided he needed to get out of town for a while and "clear his head." He told me he was going to visit his sister in Wisconsin, which was a lie. Instead, he drove to Maryland and spent two days with a woman he met on-line.

A month later, he met another woman on-line who lived only a half hour from our house. She turned out to be nutty as a fruitcake. This lulu telephoned several times a day and harassed me for a month. Finally, I had to file a complaint with the police to get her to stop. She told me she had been having an affair with my husband. He said that she was lying, that he had taken her out for dinner and dancing a few times and that there had been no sex.

His most recent on-line chat pal is from Georgia. She mailed him his favorite cologne, a bottle of cognac, some body lotion and her black bra. He kept insisting that nothing was going on, that he had never actually met her, and that she obviously misunderstood their relationship.

My husband and I are currently living apart, but we are in counseling, taking life one day at a time and trying to save our marriage. If you are wondering if he still chats on the Internet, the answer is yes. What do you think of our chances? -- Southern Illinois Wife

Dear Wife: I think your chances are about the same as that proverbial snowball in hell -- unless Romeo agrees to get off the Internet, which is unlikely. It sounds as if the man is addicted.

Another problem -- he lies a lot. Are you sure you want him?

Dear Ann Landers: My daughter, 23, is very serious about a fine young man. "Belinda" is hoping the relationship will lead to marriage.

I am concerned about one thing. This young man shaves his legs. I was under the impression that only gay males and cross-dressers shave their legs. Belinda says that he shaves because he is a tri-athlete and that most competitive swimmers and bicyclists shave their body hair. But her boyfriend keeps his body shaved even when he doesn't compete. Belinda says this is so she doesn't have to feel stubble when they are intimate. She appreciates the fact that he is so considerate.

Do straight men shave their legs? Or could this young man be gay and using Belinda's friendship as a cover? I'd appreciate your input. -- Suspicious in Santa Clarita, Calif.

Dear Santa Clarita: Many male athletes, especially swimmers, shave their body hair, including their heads. If you should discover that he wears nylon pantyhose, THAT would be a legitimate cause for concern. Otherwise, not to worry.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teen-ager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Freeman, Crofford exchange wedding vows in afternoon ceremony in Amarillo church

Jana Michelle Freeman and Cory Blane Crofford were married May 11 in an afternoon ceremony at Bolton Street Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Dale and Jenny Freeman of Amarillo. Parents of the groom are Dean and Billie Crofford of Hereford.

The Rev. Johnny Griffith, of Hereford, and Dale Freeman, father of the bride, officiated.

The altar was decorated with an heart-shaped arch covered in greenery and rose colored ribbons and flanked by heart-shaped candelabra. The pews were accented with royal blue and rose ribbons.

Maid of honor was Amy Zellner of Amarillo. Best man was Randall Keyes of Hereford.

Bridesmaids were Lori Crofford, sister of the groom, and Monica Freeman, sister-in-law of the bride. Groomsmen, who also served as ushers, were Chris Matthews and Nathan Keyes, both of Hereford.

Kara Stranczyk served as flower girl and ring bearer was Christopher Walker.

Candle lighters were Jerry Freeman, brother of the bride, and Tracy Mason, cousin of the bride.

The bride wore a traditional gown of white satin with a pearl beaded bodice, a high collar which sloped into a vee neckline and beaded lace sleeves. The bodice back was open in a heart-shape. The full cathedral length skirt was decorated with lace and pearls.

She wore crown shaped, shoulder length veil of illusion, also decorated with lace and pearls.

The bridal bouquet was of silk white roses, lilies and baby's breath accented with greenery and tied with white satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids wore tea length royal blue gowns which featured an open heart-shaped back. They carried rose bouquets in shades of royal blue and rose, accented with matching netting and satin ribbon.

A reception for the couple followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

Karen Goldsmith, Nancy Freeman, Donna Walker, Deidra Whipple and Mary Fran Copeland assisted with serving cake, punch and coffee.

Whipple also invited guests to register.

The three tiered wedding cake was decorated with rose colored roses and topped with a Precious Moments bride and groom figurine.

The groom's cake, made by Evelyn Crofford, grandmother of the groom, was a two-layered, heart-shaped red velvet cake.

Following a wedding trip to Carlsbad, N.M., the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

The bride attended Amarillo College. She is employed by Jack B. Kelley.

The groom received a truck driving degree from Texas State Technical College and is employed by Holmes Construction.

HJH Roundup

BY CAROLYN WATERS

"It is reasonable to have perfection in our eye that we may always advance toward it, though we know it can never be reached." - Samuel Johnson
Many teachers, including myself, are known to expect "as close to perfection as possible" from our students, and, you know, it usually works. Many times the greatest learning problem that a child has is fear caused by parents and teachers. Yet when children know what is expected of them, their best, and have a safe environment and positive reinforcement they will be happy and successful.

Speaking of safe environments, I recently read an article that included an idea that might be taken under consideration for HISD. The painting of an inexpensive yellow school-bus-shaped picture at least ten feet away from the roadway at bus stops could significantly reduce the risk of injury to children. Youngsters, in studies already completed, were taught to stand in the safe zone behind the stenciled picture as they wait for the bus to arrive and again after they disembark. Children were less likely to step out of the safe zone and the accident rate was decreased.

Students and teachers at HJH "wound up" the school year with our usual "mark of success" and as usual, teachers are already preparing for the next year. Many workshops and training sessions are available with many as near as here in Hereford and at the Region XVI Service Center.

The Deaf Smith County Library will offer many opportunities for students of all ages. Parents might plan to spend some time there reading and setting an example for their children. One recommended book is, When You Worry About the Child You Love by Dr. Edward Hallowell.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to all who have shown your continued love and support for Don, my family and myself, during this long and trying time of Don's illness. Hereford people are second to none and my school family is surpassed by no other... and this includes students who have expressed their love and concern with their cards, notes, calls and prayers. Thank you, thank you thank you.....
We wish each and all a very good summer.

"When you were born, you cried and the world rejoiced. Live your life in such a manner that when you die the world cries and you rejoice."

Hereford Outreach to hold volunteer training

The Hereford Outreach will conduct a volunteer training for the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. beginning on June 4 and ending July 7.

The Hereford Outreach offers shelter for battered women and their children, advocacy and accompaniment through the medical, legal and judicial systems, and the We Help Ourselves, a children's antivictimization program and a 24-hour crisis intervention hot line for the survivors of sexual abuse and family violence.

Volunteers respond to the crisis call, to the emergency room, and are there for the survivor and/or the family.

It's their mission to empower the survivor, to let her know it's not her fault, and assist in getting the healing process started.

For more information on becoming a volunteer, call 364-7822.

By REBECCA WALLS
The month of May is quickly coming to an end, and with it comes another change in the Library Staff. After 10 years as Services Coordinator, Betty Stephan has decided to retire. During her time here Betty's children's story time has increased from four to eight regular meetings a week.

There have also been special tours and programs scheduled each month that Betty has planned and presented. Betty has also been responsible for creating the library decorations each month. She has created many wonderful settings that have made the library a pleasant place in which to visit and work. We, the staff, sometimes take the decorations for granted until the walls are left bare for a while. Each month brings a smile when the new arrangement is studied and appreciated.

Betty's talent will be missed. In recognition of a job well done, the library staff will host a card reception for Betty Stephan from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on May 31. You are all invited to come by and bring a card of appreciation to Betty. Punch and cookies will be served.

Barbara Taylor Bradford's new book Her Own Rules features 44-year-old Meredith Stratton, a successful owner of six elegant international inns. They happy engagement of Meredith's daughter is clouded only by the strange symptoms that Meredith begins to display.

The doctor cannot find a physical cause of Meredith's strange illness. Desperate for answers Meredith seeks the help of a psychiatrist. While in therapy Meredith discovers a past that her mind has fought to keep secret.

Determined to get well, Meredith searches her past and is amazed to discover that the person she is today is nothing more than a fictitious creation. Meredith's past involves a childhood experience, in another country, that dramatically changed her life, and will have a profound effect on her future.

In The Presence of the Enemy by Elizabeth George features the "King of sleaze" tabloid editor Dennis Luxford, Eve and Charlotte Bowen. Ten-year-old Charlotte has been kidnapped and according to the letter, her life depends on how well her father follows directions.

Dennis Luxford must confess publicly that he is Charlotte's father, the secret that has been fiercely guarded since before Charlotte's birth. The exposed secret would make Dennis a laughingstock, devastate his beautiful wife and son, and destroy the reputation and career of Eve Bowen. Knowing her career as Junior Minister hangs in the balance Eve refuses to let Dennis print the confession.

Dennis then turns to forensic scientist Simon St. James for help. It isn't long before New Scotland Yard is involved and Detective Sergeant Barbara Havers is close to cracking the case, if she can stay alive long enough.

Janelle Taylor's Defiant Hearts takes place during the Civil War. Laura Adams, proprietress of a gentleman's social club, has the perfect opportunity to fulfill her duties as a Union spy.

Code-named Vixen, Laura is able to use her femininity to extract information, make her way through rebel blockades, or dance away the evening while passing messages. Laura's courage is matched only by her riding and shooting skills.

Confederate Lieutenant Jayce Storm may mean the end of Laura's double life. It isn't the fear of punishment that will deter Laura, but the tender caress and kiss that proves to be Lieutenant Storm's most powerful weapon.

"There was a secret hidden in them, some secret of lostness. I saw the Girl. I thought of her that way: the Girl. Through my half-shut eyes I saw Spirit Lake...I saw her standing there on the opposite shore, just standing, arms straight down at her sides, her hair that strange color of the moon...it struck me that nothing held her down to any time or place." So begins the book Hotel Paradise by Martha Grimes.

For almost half a century the place has been neglected. The lake is now covered with water lilies and surrounded by tall blowing grass. The house is full of secrets and the memories of a 12-year-old girl dead, drowned.

Now another 12-year-old girl grows increasing obsessed with that death and with the knack for getting people, adults, to reminisce she is able to fit the pieces of the past and present together. This 12-year-old must make her own decisions, choices on her journey to adulthood. Will she make the right ones?

Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Chavez were honored on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary. Chavez and Janie Martinez were married May 29, 1971, in St. Alice Church in Plainview. Monsignor Blum was to bestow a special blessing on them during the 11 a.m. Sunday liturgy at St. Anthony's. Their children, Yolanda and husband Tommy Saucedo of Abilene; Tanya and husband Benny Dominguez of Greeley, Colo.; and Lisa Chavez of the home, honored their parents with a dinner and special gift.

Koelzer fulfills dream of becoming social worker

The fulfillment of some dreams takes a little longer than others, but the result is still the same -- excitement and joy.

For Betty Koelzer, May 11 marked the fulfillment of one part of her dream and April 29 marked the beginning of another. On May 11, Koelzer, a mother of four, and a grandmother of seven, graduated Magna Cum Laude from West Texas A&M University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Social Work. On April 29, she became a full-time employee of Hereford Medical Center as a social worker, another fulfillment of a long-held ambition.

"I've waited a long time to finish my education and get my degree, but the wait has been worth it," Koelzer said. "Having the opportunity to help patients at HRMC is really a dream come true for me."

At HRMC, her duties will include working with those individuals who meet the hospital's indigent care policies, working with other local social service agencies within the county and assisting HRMC patients in the planning of their discharge.

A long-time resident of Hereford, she owned and operated Koelzer Photography, specializing in portrait and wedding photography. However, for many years she had wanted to become a social worker.

She began her college studies in September, 1991, at Amarillo College and the AC Branch in Hereford where she received an associate degree in social work in 1994. During her years at WTAMU, where she earned a grade point average of 3.85; she belonged to several honor societies, including Alpha Chi, Phi Alpha Society, Pi Gamma Mu; WTAMU Sociology/Social Work Club, National Association of Social Workers; Panhandle Social Services Forum and High Plains Counseling Association.

During the last semester, she did social work field practice as HRMC's first social work intern. Susan Cothran, LMSW (Licensed Masters social work) of Deaf Smith Home Care Services, a service of Hereford Regional Medical Center, served as the Field Coordinator and Supervisor. Koelzer also volunteered last summer at the Westgate Nursing Home in Hereford.

She and her husband, Werner, have four children, Commander Tom Koelzer, USN, San Diego, Calif.; Jeanie Grace and Barbara Koelzer, Atlanta, Ga. and Cathy Gray, Sacramento, Calif. A member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford, she is the President of the Diocesan Pastoral Council of Amarillo Diocese of the Catholic Church.

— YOUR EYES —

Why You Need Your Own Prescription

Generations ago, the only vision correction for most people was a magnifying lens that just made everything look bigger. Essentially that is what you get in the cheap reading glasses sold at the five and ten cent store. But that's not the best bet for your eyes.

When your optometrist examines your eyes and prescribes corrective lenses, those glasses are custom-made for your needs and your eyes. For instance, the centers of the lenses are lined up to meet your pupils; those in mass-produced glasses may not fit, causing discomfort or a pulling sensation. If your examination discloses a degree of astigmatism, your lenses need to be ground to correct that distortion. If you wear bifocals, the lower, reading portion will be placed for your comfort.

There's another reason why do-it-yourself vision care isn't smart: you miss out on the important eye health tests your optometrist performs as part of your complete examination.

The medal recognizes the service member's honest and faithful service during a three-year period. To earn it, Tijerina achieved and maintained a satisfactory level of performance and an unblemished conduct record for the entire period.

Tijerina is currently assigned with Headquarters and Service Battalion, 3rd Force Service Support Group, Okinawa, Japan.

The 1969 graduate of Holmes High School in San Antonio, joined the Marine Corps in November 1974.

Navy Seaman Recruit Brook E. Wear, daughter of John R. Wear of Hereford, recently reported for duty at Enlisted Personnel Management Center, New Orleans.

Wear's new assignment is an example of how Navy and Marine Corps men and women are assigned to ships, squadrons and shore commands around the world. People like Wear are making a difference as they work to improve their knowledge and skill as part of the most highly technical naval force in history.

The 1995 graduate of Abilene High School joined the Navy in August 1995.

EXERCISE CAN BE FUN

It all started with a mad dash with two heavy bags in the airport. It was one of those connections you learn to hate. I had only 49 minutes to change planes and we arrived 41 minutes late. I had to transverse 33 gates in eight minutes.

Of course, I was at the back of plane. Everyone ahead of me had two hours before their next flight, so they were in no hurry to deplane. I arrived completely winded a they were preparing to close the door. They let me on the plane.

Everyone is scowling at me as I slump damply into my seat. I vow to get into better shape. I'll start walking every day. Maybe I'll ride the old (still new) exercise bike Sue got for me. I don't want to suffer a heart attack while hurling my body down the concourse in some remote airport.

In a few minutes I begin to breathe more normally and I promptly forget my resolve. Maybe it would be better to allow a little more time between flights and thereby ensure a nice leisurely walk to the next flight. No use getting carried away with all this fitness stuff.

Just About Average

The scene I just described actually happened and I suppose it confirms that I am an average American when it comes to caring for my body. Most of us procrastinate instead of getting into shape.

I consider a good dinner my reward for a hard days work, and of course one piece of pie won't hurt much. I balance and justify the morning donut and afternoon candy bar with the mad dash in the airport. I can't really understand why my weight keeps easing up.

Other folks I visit with share similar stories. Weight just seems to find some of us. There are many theories regarding the assimilation of fat, and recent research seems to point to our genes. I like that theory, it's better than admitting any fault of my own.

You can't convince me that running and jogging are worth the trouble and effort. I'm almost certain you can develop serious medical complications from those activities, too. I'm sure that shin splints, knee strains, bone spurs and foot odor are common runner's problems. I know a man who was nearly killed by a car while walking or jogging. There, I'm certain that proves my theory that exercise can be hazardous to your health.

For Serious Losers

I know some of you are serious about losing some weight and getting into shape. Here is a helpful list of calorie-burning exercises. I borrowed and modified some of them from the Guyton, Okla. Chamber of Commerce newsletter. You may be burning more calories than you thought!

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I'd like to share a tip for owners of animals that shed. I discovered a tip for families with furry pets and children with allergies.

Take a chamois, like they dry cars with (the real ones; the fakes didn't work very well for me). Saturate it, then wring it all the way out. Wipe the dog or cat all over with the chamois. This picks up loose hairs and it gets most of the dander (which is the stuff the kids are allergic to) off the animal. By using a chamois before the dog is permitted in the house, you have eliminated the majority of the problem.

I have an Akita that sheds a very thick winter coat and a reasonably thick summer coat, so this hair thing has been quite a problem that I have been working to resolve twice a year for five years now. — Deanna La Cava, Moreno Valley, Calif.

This is going to be a great help for everyone with long-haired pets. Thanks so for writing.

SPRING TENSION ROD

Dear Heloise: Here's a great solution for anyone who has a freezer or refrigerator with storage space in the door but the bar that goes across to hold the food from falling out every time the door is opened has "bit the dust." It worked for me.

A spring tension curtain rod can be adjusted to fit the opening and comes in a wide variety of sizes, is easily available from hardware stores, curtain stores or curtain departments of major retail stores, and it really does work.

I'm waiting for my husband to notice that the frozen peas are no longer hitting his toes, but that hasn't happened yet! — Barbara K. Walker, Philadelphia

KEY RING

Dear Heloise: I had lost so much time searching for my keys in my purse that I took drastic measures.

I bought a large split-ring and hooked it through my key ring and through a very large fluorescent orange (potato-chip-type) bag clip. Not only can I find my keys, but my outgoing mail stays in the clip until I reach the post office. — Sandra Weinhardt, Bluffton, Ind.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have learned about so-called stem cells, and would like to know more. I understand that stem cells are special and are found in bone marrow, also that they are important for fighting illness. Are stem cells ever transplanted into a person who has leukemia? — K.B.

ANSWER: As you know, bone marrow produces the cells that circulate in the blood — red, white or whatever. Marrow production responds to changing blood demands. It is a never-ending process as certain blood cells die of old age and other kinds dwindle in number — during infections, for example.

Stem cells are immature marrow cells, sufficiently undeveloped to be transformed into the kinds of blood cells in demand at the moment. Example: Say your white cell count drops off, which can happen during a body infection. Stem cells stand ready to meet the emergency as they become transformed into replacement cells — in this case, exact substitutes for the diminished white cells.

The hope in bone marrow transfusion is to introduce enough stem cells to replenish the blood cell population.

Some leukemias are successfully treated with marrow transfusion.

In answer to another reader, Mrs. J.W., yes, transfusion of marrow demands a living donor. Yes, it is truly the marrow that is transfused.

I hope your interest in the subject is sufficient to make you want to be a marrow donor. Readers so inclined can contact a local hospital to volunteer. The more donors the better, and the greater chance that blood type demands can be met for someone on the waiting list.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Recently,

I overheard a doctor talking of rheumatoid arthritis. All I caught were the words "we can stop rheumatoid arthritis." My wife, who is 51, has rheumatoid arthritis, and has seen several rheumatologists. She still suffers and takes the following drugs: Deltasone, Naproxen, methotrexate and amodiaquine. What was the doctor referring to? My wife could use it. — GA.

ANSWER: There's no single pill for rheumatoid arthritis. There are groups of arthritis drugs.

One is made up of anti-inflammatories such as aspirin, ibuprofen and indomethacin. They don't stop the disease process.

A second, more potent class of arthritis drugs is made up of disease "modifiers." They can slow down the destructive aspects of rheumatoid arthritis. Gold, hydroxychloroquine, penicillamine and methotrexate are examples.

Other categories of drugs have been tried. For example, minocycline, an antibiotic, has shown some promise in control.

None of this is new information.

I notice that your wife's drugs include examples of both anti-inflammatories and disease-modifying types. Methotrexate has gained favor of late among the modifier drugs for rheumatoid arthritis.

For more information on arthritis, see the report I am sending on. Other readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 2, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When being fitted for hearing aids I learned I had an earwax problem. I have a friend with the same problem. She uses hydrogen peroxide and warm water to flush out the ear canals. Is that OK? — L.C.

ANSWER: Hydrogen peroxide is not the best choice. Anything that fizzes can cause pressure buildup and can injure the eardrum.

Use warm water. Irrigate with a gentle stream.

Open ditch irrigation

Many farmers have been pre-watering cotton and milo ground in preparation for planting. Open ditch irrigation, shown above, promotes water loss due to evaporation. Ideal irrigation situations are the use of sprinklers systems or gated pipe. Unusually high grain prices and drought conditions have Deaf Smith producer using more irrigation this year than in previous years. The last measurable rainfall fell in September 1995.

Drought brings consideration of effect on Ogallala aquifer

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

The drought conditions that Deaf Smith County has experienced since 1992 have brought about serious considerations of the effect it has on the Ogallala aquifer, the main source of drinking water for the High Plains.

Area agricultural producers have been busy trying to save irrigated wheat acres by applying more underground water than usual to their crops. Dryland acres have either been grazed or disestered.

Although advanced sprinkler systems have decreased the amount of water lost to evaporation, many producers are still pumping more water out of the aquifer due to the drought.

"The situation that the Hereford farmers are in, keeps them pumping all they can," Pat Riley of the USDA Soil Conservation Service said. "Water management is not a consideration at this point."

Unbelievably high grain prices also keep farmers irrigating wheat to try and make sufficient yields.

Deaf Smith County and surrounding areas have not received an adequate amount of precipitation since 2.26 inches of rain was recorded in September by KPAN Radio -- the official weather reporting station for Hereford.

The High Plains Ogallala Aquifer Regional Water Management Plan is now examining the possibility of cost-effective use of deeper aquifers to augment the Ogallala water.

In the Texas Water Development Board report, Aquifers of Texas, the Ogallala Aquifer provides water to all or parts of 46 counties. Many communities use the Ogallala for drinking water, but according to TWDB 95 percent of the water is used for irrigation.

Since the expansion of irrigated agriculture in the mid-1940s, bigger amounts of water have been pumped from the aquifer than have been recharged.

With limited recharge and excessive pumpage, other options for water may have to be considered by municipal, industrial and agricultural water users, according to the TWDB.

The feasibility of pumping water from The Dockum/Santa Rosa Aquifer or the Edwards-Trinity Aquifer of the High Plains, is a deciding factor in the final analysis.

Since water is the limiting factor in crop production, conservation techniques may help alleviate some of the problem.

"Water must either be obtained from precipitation or by pumping ground water from the Ogallala Aquifer," said Ken Carver, assistant manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 in Lubbock. "Maximizing precipitation reduces the amount of withdrawal from the aquifer, reduces agricultural production costs associated with meeting crop water needs and has the potential to significantly increase crop yields."

Carver suggests conservation techniques such as, installing furrow dikes in fields to maximize precipitation benefits when and if it does rain again.

Furrow dikes are small mounds of soil mechanically installed in the furrow.

In most instances, area soil infiltration rates are adequate to absorb small amounts of rainfall with little runoff. But, when rainfall occurs in amounts exceeding soil infiltration rates, the furrow dikes hold the water in place until it can soak into the soil.

A three-year study at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Lubbock indicated an average annual runoff of 2.73 inches from land with varying degrees of slope.

Deaf Smith County yearly totals of precipitation the past four years have shown a pattern of decline. In 1992, 22 inches of rain were recorded. In 1993, it dropped to 18.34 inches, then to 16.98 inches in 1994 and 15.37 inches last year, according to KPAN.

If agricultural producers are to make adequate cotton and milo crops in 1996, the area must receive sufficient amounts of precipitation within the next two weeks.

Deaf Smith County Wheat Tour is slated Wednesday

The Deaf Smith County Wheat Tour will be held Wednesday and will feature tours of irrigated wheat variety trials, fertilizer application demonstrations and bindweed control trials.

The event which is sponsored and planned by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee and the Deaf Smith County Staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will begin at 8:30 a.m. with registration and refreshments at Roy Carter's Farm Store in Milo Center.

The first tour stop will be on the Jim Cavin Farm located west of Milo Center where wheat varieties are being grown under center pivot irrigation.

The tour will continue to the Donald Meyer farm, Roy Carlson farm, Raymond Schlabs farm and the 'Early-out' option for acreage in CRP draws interest in area

LUBBOCK -- An early termination program for farm acreage enrolled in the federal Conservation Reserve Program is being offered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and is drawing keen interest across the state. Additional incentive included in the 1996 federal farm bill make it important that farmers look carefully at this "early out" option before May 31, say economists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The decision is especially critical for High Plains farmers who have in the CRP some 45,000 acres of land with a history of high yielding corn production, says Dr. Jackie Smith, professor and Extension Service agricultural economist.

"The most complicating factor in deciding whether to use the early out is uncertainty about the future of the CRP program," Smith said.

Producers who terminate their CRP contracts under this early out program can also sign up for and receive a transition payment under the 1996 Far Bill, the extension economist noted. But to receive the transition payment for 1996, a producer must file by May 31 the request to terminate the CRP contract.

All landowners with a CRP contract that has a crop acreage base will be eligible to sign a production flexibility contract and receive transition payments for 1996.

"This means that for 1996 only, those who request the early out by May 31 will, if approved for termination, receive most of their 1996 CRP payment as well as their transition payment under the new Farm Bill," Smith said.

"The incentive of receiving both payments makes it necessary to look carefully at the early out option before May 31."

The CRP program was initiated in 1986 to remove from crop production acres that are classed as highly erodible. Landowners who signed contracts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to remove those acres and institute certain environmental measure then received payments at the price contracted.

In Texas, 4.1 million acres were contracted with the CRP. More than 800,000 acres of this was "nonbase" acres, on which historically the crops grown were not in federal crop support programs.

"CRP land with a corn base is the most likely to come out," Smith said. Most of the cotton acres placed into CRP won't qualify for the early out option because of erodibility restrictions, he noted.

Thirty counties have an average yield for CRP corn base above the 79-bushel-an-acre breakeven point at which the new transition payment would equal the CRP rent payment.

"Twelve of those counties had an average corn yield of over 120 bushels," Smith said. "Those are mostly the irrigated areas of the High Plains: Swisher, Hale, Castro, Lamb, Farmer, Deaf Smith, Hartley, Hansford, Gray, Donley, Sherman and Oldham."

The economist said it is likely that much of these higher yield acres put into CRP were on irrigated land where the water had declined to a marginal level for corn production.

"With the increased flexibility of the 1996 Farm Bill, these acres could easily support irrigated production of other crops requiring less water while still receiving the corn transition payment," Smith noted.

Hale County, with 11,354 acres, has the most corn base land in CRP, he said. "The average yield of the corn base acres temporarily removed from production in Hale County was 133.8 bushels. For that average yield, the first year projected transition payment would be $27.30 and the second year would be $52.32.

"With the prorated CRP (10/12 of the year) of $33.33 for this year, the income for the first two years would be $112.95. That's $27.30 transition payment and $33.33 CRP, totalling $60.63 for the first year, and a transition payment of $52.32 the second year.

"That is without allowing for any post-CRP income from the land. The annual transition payment would average about $35 an acre for the remaining five years (under the '96 farm bill), with the freedom to graze the land or produce almost any crop except fruits and vegetables."

To be eligible for the CRP early to option, the land must have been in the CRP for at least five years, have an erodibility index of 15 or less, and meet certain other requirements. County offices of the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service will determine which land qualifies. An application to terminate a CRP contract on eligible acres is filed at the local office of the USDA Farm Service Agency.

Newton selected as regional group leader

Dennis Newton, County Extension Agent-Agriculture for Deaf Smith County, has been selected to serve as Southern Regional Vice Chairman for the Professional Training Committee of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Don Drost, Vice President of NACAA of Barron, Wis., made the announcement following a recent NACAA board of directors meeting. "Dennis was selected because we believe that he has exhibited the ambition and vision the NACAA needs in leadership positions," Drost said.

Newton will coordinate professional training opportunities offered to NACAA members in the Southern Region including Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, North and South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Alabama. Drost said Newton will also have responsibility for at least one national training program and will serve on the professional training advisory committee to the NACAA board of directors.

Newton will take over his duties at the NACAA annual meeting and professional improvement conference August 31-September 7.

"I am excited about the opportunity to serve the NACAA on the national level and am honored that the board of directors have placed their faith in my abilities. I look forward to serving," Newton said.

He has been Deaf Smith County Extension Agent for 13 years and has been an Extension Agent for 25 years.

Hereford Yearly Rain Chart

(Graphic by R. Paul & Steve Coneway)

There IS a drought! ...just check records

Is it dry? Is there a drought?
Yes, without a doubt, according to Paul Coneway. He and his son, Steve, have made a study of past rainfall records and they have the figures to back it up.
Unless it rains 1.5 inches by June 1, say the Coneways, this year will be the driest October through May season in the past 100 years, with only 1.55 inches of precipitation.
Even the Dust Bowl era of the "Dirty Thirties" recorded from 3 to 8 times more rain during the October-May period. The driest year on record—a total of 7.71 inches in 1956—shows that more than half of the rain came in the October-May period.
A study of the yearly rain chart (since 1916) shows that there were 34 years of above average precipitation and 46 years below average. Average yearly precipitation for 80 years is 19.57 inches.
Since a high in 1986, there were four years of declining rainfall. After another high in 1991, there have also been four years of decline. Does this indicate the drought will be over in 1996?
If so, the summer rains will have to be good, says Coneway. If you're looking for indicators, however, you will notice the 1949 high was followed by eight years of decline, causing the drought in the '50s. Maybe the highs and lows since 1984 give a ray of hope for the future.
"You can study the records, make charts, compare monthly records in various years, pick high years followed by declines, pick low years followed by increases and analyze to your heart's content, but only God knows when a drought will be broken," says Coneway.
"Prayerfully, this will happen soon," he concluded.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON

A program giving information on the 1996 Farm Bill was held on Tuesday in the Hereford Community Center. The program sponsored by the USDA Farm Service Agency, Natural Resource Conservation Service, and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service provided details of the very complex and very changed farm bill.

On April 4, President Clinton signed into law the Federal Agricultural Improvement and Reform Act for 1996. This FAIR Act drastically changed the relationship between agricultural producers and the Federal Government. The Agricultural Policy Center at Texas A&M University stated that it is the biggest change in policy since 1933.

The bill provides for more flexibility for producers in what they will grow and how much of each crop they will grow. To allow producers a period to adjust to the new program, the Agricultural Market Transition Act passed. This act allows for transition payments to producers based on their 1995 established yields. These payments are unrelated to market prices and are not related to any production amounts or requirements.

For producers to participate in the program, they must sign Production Flexibility Contracts with the USDA Farm Service Agency. The sign up period is between May 20 and July 12. There will not be an extension on the sign up period, so producers are encouraged to contact the FSA office and sign up for the program. I would encourage all producers with questions concerning the program to contact the FSA office. The staff there is working hard to make the transition to this new program work for all persons.

We have copies of information from the Agricultural Policy Center available in the Deaf Smith County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to assist producers in better understanding the many aspects of the program.
One thing that the new FAIR Act will do is cause increased price and income instability. More flexibility may mean large year-to-year shifts in acres planted to any specific crop.

This instability coupled with lower or nonexistent price supports, tighter government stocks of grains, variability in export demand and weather will mean wider shifts in prices and more exposure to risk by producers.

Producers will have to understand and use the tools of risk management. They will have to understand how markets develop and what influences these markets. They will have to understand futures, options and contact markets. They will have to better understand the role of purchased insurance as a tool for production and income protection. Producers will have to develop marketing plans including enterprise budgets, projected financial analysis and have the discipline to execute the plans developed.

Multi-year planning will be a must. This multi-year planning includes crop rotation and planting plans that are flexible and allow for the opportunity to take advantage of opportunities. These plans must examine the financial and risk compatibility. Multi-year marketing plans will be needed including examination of alternative markets and marketing tools.

To assist producer in developing their marketing skills, the Texas Agricultural Extension service will be providing education program in risk management. One of the programs that is being developed is the use of marketing clubs where members will study and learn the techniques needed to better market agricultural products.

Producers are invited to participate in the Annual Deaf Smith County Wheat Tour on Wednesday. The tour will begin at the Roy Cater Farm Store in Milo Center at 8:30 a.m.

We have copies of the 1995 Result Demonstration Summaries available in the Extension office. If you would like a copy, please call or drop by.

Think Rain. See you next week.

SMALL HOME - BIG ON STYLE

Special Exterior Details Add Flair

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

This design satisfies the functional requirements of smaller sites while maintaining a sense of comfortable elegance. Dormers brighten a bonus room upstairs, which can be finished at a later date.

The front door is recessed for protection from the weather. A foyer directs traffic toward the large activity room with octagonal tray ceiling.

Sequestered in a corner of this room is the dining area. The kitchen is corridor type and careful planning has placed the sink overlooking a snack bar and the activity room. This enables the family cook to participate in ongoing activities. Stairs up to the bonus room are opposite from the kitchen and a pantry is included under the stairs.

A laundry closet is placed behind the kitchen.

The master suite is well separated from the secondary bed rooms and accessible from the activity room.

Another octagonal tray ceiling gives the room surprising spaces. A private luxurious garden bath is indicated and it includes a double vanity and an incredible walk-in closet.

Two additional bedrooms are off of a hall adjacent to the foyer. Both are virtually the same size and utilize the full hall bath.

Fanlight windows, both in the dormers and at ground level punctuate the facade. Multiple gables with both stone and stucco finishes give the home elegance.

Plan number 391 includes 1,360 square feet of heated space with an additional 343 square feet in the bonus room. For further information on plan number 391, write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Start talking about ice cream and it's hard to stop. Everyone has a preferred brand or flavor, a special memory, a favorite haunt. Americans eat enough ice cream each year to fill the Grand Canyon.

Let viewers of PBS' An Ice Cream Show be warned: The experience won't be complete without a trip to the freezer or perhaps even to the nearest creamery. The special airs Wednesday, May 29 (check local listings).

Whether it's Farrell's in Portland, Ore., Gertie's in Chicago or the Sweden Kream in Memphis, Tenn., expect a line to form after the show's conclusion. For if there's anything this double-dip documentary proves, it's that ice cream doesn't keep. The best of it is made fresh and served soon.

"It has to freeze at least 72 hours to be hard enough to scoop," says LeSean Cohen of Fenton's, a 60-year-old creamery in Oakland, Calif. After a few weeks around zero degrees Fahrenheit, he cautions, "it loses its integrity completely."

For serious ice cream makers, there's a school at Penn State University where recipes and techniques are perfected. Penn's signature flavor is Peachy Paterno, a blend named for its beloved football coach, Joe Paterno.

Among the school's graduates are Doris Mattus-Hurley and her husband, who run the business founded by her father, the originator of the Haagen-Dazs brand, on New York's Long Island. With help from the wizards at Penn, Mattus Low-Fat Ice Cream is constantly improving its flavor.

Producer Rick Sebak also salutes soft-serve products (called "frozen custard" when they contain egg) and "frozen novelties," which originated with the Eskimo Pie, and are undoubtedly best when eaten straight off the neighborhood ice cream truck. There's a segment on the making of cones, and a visit to the Icecreamers, folks who collect ice cream paraphernalia.

Developed about 700 years ago, ice cream was an aristocratic treat until the invention of the hand-crank freezer by American Nancy Johnson in 1843.

Flavor innovators have included Howard Johnson's (famous for 28 flavors), Dreyer's (Rocky Road), Robin Rose's (Rose Petal) and Ben & Jerry's (dozens, including Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough).

Gorin's in Atlanta once named a flavor after a contest winner, Chris Minor (black cherries and Oreos cookies). And while Blue Bell, a Texas-based grocery store brand, was one of the first to introduce Oreos Cookie, spokeswoman Amy Warmke says Chocolate Decadence (marshmallow swirl with chocolate flakes) is a personal favorite.

The great ice cream brands each originated in a single location, and most never expand beyond it. Ice Cream Show visits several of these, from Four Seas Home Made Ice Cream in Centerville, Mass., to Matsumoto's Shave Ice on the north shore of Oahu, Hawaii. There are hundreds more in between. Take Snyder Drug in Great Falls, Mont., where pharmacist Neil Snyder still operates his grandfather's 1910 soda fountain, serving shakes, cones, sodas and sarsaparillas.

But the ice cream industry isn't just for romantics. According to Gorin's chairman Mark Kaplan, "There's no future in ice cream only." So Gorin's now offers a sandwich menu.

Still, Kaplan admits, "Ice cream is a part of the American heritage ... a family ritual. We've been raised to think ice cream is our ultimate reward."

Dick Warren, owner of Four Seas Home Made Ice Cream in Centerville, Mass., serves the summer trade on Cape Cod. It's a cash-only business, with one exception: Jacqueline Kennedy ran a tab. The Four Seas is among the small shops featured in An Ice Cream Show, airing Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ May 26-June 1 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A friend's problem will affect you in some way this week. Try your best to be supportive, but try also to keep a safe distance before you get in any deeper. The weekend will be spotlighted with a visit from family. Do your best to keep cheerful — even if you're feeling kind of grumpy.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Problems beyond your control will be the source of aggravation. Before you drive yourself off the deep end, try dealing with things you can control. There's no use crying over spilled milk. At work, changes could be made suddenly this week. Keep your eyes open for new opportunity.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

If you're not careful, you may get sidetracked into an unproductive venture this week. Be cautious of how you spend your time or you could find yourself in a tough situation later on. A social gathering will brighten the end of the week. A new friend will play a strong role.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Take care of responsibilities and obligations early in the week so you'll have free time when you need it. At work, try to keep a balance between being a team player and showing off your leadership skills. An interesting opportunity may come your way when you least expect it.

LEO - July 23/August 23

You don't have to be the center of attention all the time, do you Leo? Let someone else have center stage for a while. You might even enjoy keeping a low profile for a little while. Patience will be needed when dealing with young children this week. Don't be afraid to put your foot down.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Admitting you made a mistake will carry more weight with a loved one than trying to cover up the problem. Put your pride on the back burner and you won't be sorry. A friend's good news will inspire you in some way. Perhaps it's time for you to make a change. Wednesday will be a lucky day.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

It may be time to bury the hatchet in a broken friendship. Holding a grudge is really very unproductive. Surprising news about an old friend will make for interesting conversation throughout the week. Romantic relationships with water signs (Cancers, Scorpios and Pisceans) will go especially well this week.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Doing your best will get you far at work this week. You'll show that you're a team player who's intelligent and motivated. Romance looks good towards the later part of the week. Looking for love? This could be a lucky week. Keep an eye open for a Libra of the opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

A compromise will have to be reached if you want to get along with a work associate. Think things through, and you may find a plan that works. An innocent flirtation could turn into something more if you're not careful. Be sure it's what you want. Be aware of your diet.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

A great week! Personal relationships should thrive. You'll feel close to loved ones and able to express yourself more easily. In matters of finances, paying a little extra for a lot of convenience is well worth it. A family gathering will end the week on a very happy note.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't believe everything you read. If you're looking for facts to help you make an important decision, it would be best to consult an expert. Travel plans could be postponed until a later date. It may be wise to make an alternate plan. A friend will have some exciting news.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

A financial windfall will come at a very good time. You'll be able to do much more than just make ends meet. An unpleasant situation at work can be controlled if you take action. Don't sit back and let others walk all over you. Learn to be assertive and you'll get what you want.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: In the early '80s, I watched a sparkling production of Jane Eyre on PBS.

I know it was not the George C. Scott version, and I believe it may have come from the BBC. Can you fill in the blanks? --A reader via the Internet.

A: I wish you had signed your query, because I want to congratulate you for finding a way to use "sparkling" and "Jane Eyre" in the same sentence.

I believe you are talking about the 1983 British TV miniseries adaptation of Charlotte Bronte's brooding novel. Jane was played by relative unknown Zelah Clarke. Mr. Rochester was none other than a pre-007 Timothy Dalton.

Q: On Barney Miller, what was the first name of "Wojo"? --J.R.A., Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

A: Maxwell Gail played Detective Stanley "Wojo" Wojohowicz.

Q: Everyone thinks I'm crazy when I mention an old sci-fi-ish series called, I think, The Champions. It was about three secret agents who communicated with each other telepathically. Did I imagine it? --Mike Fairbank, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A: This 1968 NBC summer series was about three international crime fighters with special powers that had been given to them by an unknown race from a lost Tibetan civilization.

Those powers included telepathy and other mental gifts, night sight, superhuman strength and random others as needed (when the writers got stuck).

Q: My friend and I fancy ourselves TV trivia pros, but this one has us stumped. Who played the title role in the '50s TV show Jim Bowie?

He says it was Jock Mahoney, but I remember him as Yancy Derringer. Help! --B.T., Tallahassee, Fla.

Timothy Dalton

A: A now-forgotten actor named Scott Forbes had the title role in The Adventures of Jim Bowie, which ran on ABC from 1956 to 1958.

Both Bowie and Yancy Derringer (CBS, 1958-59) were set, at least partly, in and around 19th-century New Orleans, which may account for your friend muddling Mahoney into both.

Q: In what movie did Lee Marvin sing a song that went like "I was born under a wandering star"? I thought it was Cat Ballou. --Brian Amm, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

A: Marvin sang -- and I use the term loosely -- "Wanderin' Star" in Paint Your Wagon.

Q: My mother claims Kyra Sedgwick, who is married to Kevin Bacon, is Julia Roberts' sister. Even though there is a striking resemblance, I say no way. Who's right? --A reader in Binghamton, N.Y.

A: You are. Perhaps Mom is confused by the fact the actresses played sisters in Something to Talk About.

SOAP TALK

Look for big purses on daytime television

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Several big purses will be needed to hide pregnant tummies on daytime TV this summer.

A number of popular actresses are expecting. One is Colleen Dion (Loving, Search for Tomorrow, The Bold and the Beautiful and Another World), who is pregnant with her first child. She is engaged to Larry Scotti.

Tracey E. Bregman (Lauren, B&B) and her husband, Ron Recht, are looking forward to the birth of their second child. They have a 5-year-old son named Austin.

The couple separated for several months in 1994, but they are back together and happier than ever.

Also from B&B, Hunter Tylo, who plays Taylor, is pregnant. The actress intended to spend the summer filming episodes of Melrose Place, but when Melrose producers found out she was pregnant, they changed their minds.

Tylo and her husband, Michael Tylo (Blade/Rick, The Young and the Restless and Quint, Guiding Light), have two sons. She is due in November.

B&B producers aren't saying yet whether either actress's pregnancy will be written into their story line.

Dear Candace: Is Todd Manning (Roger Howarth) coming back to One Life to Live? Did he die in the accident or was it a setup? —Joy, via Internet.

Dear Reader: If Todd comes back to OLTL, the role will not be played by Howarth. The actor is not interested in returning to the role.

Dear Candace: I am a big fan of The City. I love Nick (Roscoe Born) and Sydney (Morgan Fairchild). I want them to get together on the show.

They make such a hot couple.

I was very disappointed when Zoey (Joni Allen) turned out to be Nick's daughter. She was so happy with Richard (Corey Page). I would like to know where I can write to the show. —D.N., Erie, Pa.

Dear Reader: As time goes by, the story lines are getting better.

The only tie finish in the history of the Indianapolis 500 occurred in 1941. The winners were Floyd Davis and Mauri Rose.

Good (Humor) news: Ice cream is a nutritious treat. The cold stuff is a fine source of calcium, protein, riboflavin, zinc and vitamins A and B-12.

National Ice Cream Day was instituted by President Ronald Reagan. It falls this year on July 14 — making it an all-American ice cream Sunday.

CHITTER CHATTER

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Arnold Schwarzenegger once launched a catch phrase craze with his "Terminator" threat "I'll be back." He plans to do it again this summer in "Eraser" with "Relax, you've been erased."

Since the right catch phrase can turn a hit into a cultural phenomenon, movie studios are vying for this year's "Life is like a box of chocolates."

Jim Carrey's catch phrase from the upcoming "Cable Guy" is "I'll juice you up," and Laurence Fishburne repeats "We gotta fied" in his upcoming action movie "Fled."

"You can't manufacture a catch phrase," Susan Pile, an MGM publicity executive, said in the May 24 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "But if it makes it on the streets, it definitely doesn't hurt the movie's grosses."

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Talk about a tough crowd.

Steven Bochco's was cheered wildly by graduating seniors at Carnegie Mellon University on Sunday at the mere mention of his television creations: "Hill Street Blues," "Doogie Howser, M.D." and "NYPD Blue."

But when university President Robert

Mehrabian mentioned "Murder One," there was dead silence.

Bochco acknowledged that the ABC show had ratings problems this season, especially because it competed with "ER" and "Chicago Hope." He said the trial drama will be back next season with two or three story lines, instead of the one used on "Murder One" this year.

"We'll get another swing at the plate," Bochco said.

He said he was glad to be invited to Carnegie Mellon because he missed his own graduation from there in 1966 to drive to Hollywood in search of writing jobs.

"In my haste to get where I was going, I didn't stop to consider where I had been," he said. "That was a mistake."

NEW YORK (AP) - Comedian Jeff Foxworthy - the "you-might-be-a-redneck" guy - has some harsh words for his former bosses at ABC.

Rival NBC has picked up Foxworthy's sitcom, which ABC dumped. He'll be back this fall.

The folks at ABC never got behind his brand of homespun, country comedy, then hurt his chances there despite some early successes, Foxworthy said.

And he thought winning the People's Choice award for favorite male performer in a new series should have counted for something with ABC.

"After we won the award, it wasn't even mentioned," Foxworthy says in the May 25 issue of TV Guide. "I never felt a lot of support there."

Foxworthy blames ABC for moving his series to a dead-end Saturday time slot, even after it posted respectable ratings on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

"It's my experience that if you put up good numbers, you get rewarded. It wasn't that way at ABC," Foxworthy said. "If they think I'm too country, they ought to consider that there are a lot of people between New York and L.A. who like me."

TRIVIA

Two TV families have resided at 704 Houser St. in Queens, N.Y. They are the Bunkers (All in the Family) and the Cumberbatches (704 Houser).

Benjamin Salisbury danced in a Joffrey Ballet production of The Nutcracker Suite before landing his role on The Nanny.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

This is one of my favorite times of the year. It is really wonderful to see the excitement of friends and relatives meeting and visiting after long absences. Of course by the time this paper is out, the Pioneer Holiday is over and Pioneer of the Year announced. To me it would be one of the greatest honors to be chosen since you really have to be a Pioneer.

We still have some spaces open on the tour to Branson. We leave June 21 and return on June 27. The itinere is printed in this issue of the Scene. If you can go, please call immediately.

It is planning time for the Festival of Trees. We had a meeting last week and will have another on June 17. We need all the ideas and help possible. There were some really good ideas suggested that would help with the showing of the trees if they can be implemented.

We are excited about our Thrift Store. It is just another resource for funding the programs and services of the Center. We need more volunteers and also want to thank those who have worked so hard to get the store open and also those who keep it stocked and work during open days. Also we want to thank Darla Stengel for painting the sign on the windows. She did a wonderful job. Our Shop is restocked weekly, so you will want to come by often!

Our membership dues are due in June. We have had people say the $12.50 is really a small amount so the HSCA Board voted to give each person an opportunity to pay in different categories. Individual Membership is still $12.50. There is a form and explanation printed in this paper.

Due to lack of interest the evening Diabetic Support Group has been cancelled. All interested persons will need to attend the 1 p.m. afternoon session.

You will be hearing a lot about the TRIAD Program. We have started organizing. The Hereford Police Department, Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department and our Seniors are forming the S.A.L.T. Council. The council will be needing volunteers in several areas

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

Material possessions become, after many years of ownership, a part of us. When it comes time to part with them we start to remember all that has come to pass in association with those possessions.

Juanita and I have sold our old Brownd Sheet Metal building to Phil Coker. Phil is owner of Neil's Body Shop, a real hard worker and a nephew of Floyd Coker. Phil's business has grown, he needs more room to add modern up-to-date equipment. We wish him well and hope that the location, and the space, will be as good for him as it was for us. We are really excited about the fixing up he plans to do. Watch for the big face lift.

When our sons were young they played and worked in that building. I guess you could say that the experience with tin snips led to Richard's expertise in his surgical duties. And Carl tells us that whenever he is working with mortar in his dental work he is reminded of the concrete pads he made for the condensing units. Rene, our French son, still speaks of the many barrel lids he helped make out there. Our granddaughter recalls her first bookkeeping job in the office with her grandmother.

Other young men came to work for us as helpers and learned a trade. Several are still supporting their families by using what they learned with us, some of them in this area and some moved on to other places.

We had so many special customers over the years, they supported us and we felt the obligation to do our best for them. But life goes on with its changes, we adjust and move on to other endeavors. Thanks for the memories!

People insist on confusing marriage and love on the one hand, and love and happiness on the other. But they have nothing in common. That is why, the absence of love being more frequent than love, there are happy marriages.

—Albert Camus

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

June is vacation month. School children are looking forward to a break from studying. Grandparents are anxious to see the grandchildren that live some distance away. The Hereford Senior Center is looking forward to the many visitors that come and have lunch during the summer months.

The summer activities have begun -- gardening, mowing, cooking out, biking, hiking and refreshing breaks on the patio. Remember the many activities at the Center when you are planning your summer days. We would like to have you participate in painting, quilting, doll making, line dancing, exercise classes, crafts, ceramics, choir or playing table games. When the days are too warm, come to the center for fun and fellowship.

Our new Thrift Shop is open on East Park on Thursday and Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. We would love to have you come and shop. Vitamin A helps prevent blindness

NEW YORK (AP) -- Research on a rare eye disease has raised hope that vitamin A can help prevent macular degeneration, the leading cause of blindness for older people.

The rare disease is Sorsby's fundus dystrophy (SFD), which causes the membrane at the rear of the eye to become abnormally thick, leading to loss of vision. The same kind of thickening of the eye membrane occurs in macular degeneration and is the reason why the condition causes blindness.

Researchers at the University of Iowa report that they have reversed SFD by giving patients large doses of vitamin A -- 10 times the recommended daily allowance -- in the early stages of the disease. They were led to use vitamin A because the loss of vision seen in SFD is similar to what is seen in severe vitamin A deficiency.

The hope is that vitamin A also can prevent age-related macular degeneration, which starts with night blindness and progresses to total loss of vision.

It's much too early to try self-treatment, however, partly because the value of vitamin A in macular degeneration has not been proved and, more importantly, because high doses of vitamin A can be toxic to the liver and the eyes. People should not take vitamin A supplements until they consult a physician.

The results of another study give a warning about overenthusiasm regarding the ability of vitamin A supplements to prevent other diseases.

The study, involving more than 34,000 older women who had already experienced menopause, found that vitamin A supplements did not reduce the risk of dying of heart disease. Neither did vitamin C supplements.

Vitamin E intake did reduce heart attack deaths in this group of women, but supplements weren't necessary; a good dietary intake was enough. Among the foods that supply vitamin E are nuts, margarine and mayonnaise.

In general, vitamin supplements aren't necessary for those who eat a good diet. Eating a lot of vegetables, fruits and grains has been found in many studies to lower the risk of heart disease as well, without the need for supplements.

Older people who want to take up running as an exercise but are afraid that it will damage their bones and joints can take comfort from a report from Stanford University.

Doctors there followed bone changes in people in their 60s who ran up to four hours a week. They found no difference in bone and joint damage as compared to a group of nonrunners in the same age group.

There were the expected changes in joints and bones that come with age, but running didn't cause an increase in bone loss, osteoporosis or arthritis. In fact, the runners started and ended with stronger bones.

And runners get the many benefits of regular exercise, which include reduced risk of heart attack and stroke.

My purpose is to entertain myself first and other people secondly.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: How long do I need to work to become insured for Social Security disability benefits?

A: The amount of work you need depends on your age at the time you become disabled. As a young worker under age 24, all you need is a year and a half of work in the past three years to qualify for benefits. If you become disabled between 24 and 30, you need credit for half the time between age 22 and the time you became disabled. After age 30, you need credits for five years of work out of the last 10. If you become disabled after age 41, you will also need one credit for each year after age 21.

Q: Do you automatically get Medicare benefits if you're eligible for disability benefits?

A: You have to receive disability benefits for 24 months, then you will automatically get Medicare benefits.

Q: What is the earliest age at which you can qualify for retirement benefits?

A: You can start your Social Security benefits as early as age 62, but the benefit amount you receive will be less than your full retirement benefit.

Q: I heard you can get a Social Security number for a baby at the hospital at the time of birth. Is that true?

A: Yes, you apply for a number after your baby is born and it's very easy. When your hospital representative or doctor asks you for the information needed to complete your baby's birth certificate, all you have to do is tell them to have your state's vital statistics office share the information with the Social Security Administration. If you do, a Social Security card will be mailed to you. It's as easy as that.

Q: I get SSI because I am elderly and have no income. My brother recently died and left me the money he had in a savings account. Will this extra money affect my SSI benefits? Will my SSI payments stop?

A: The money inherited from your brother is considered income for the month you receive it and could make you ineligible for that month, depending on the amount of the inheritance. If you keep the money into the next month, it then becomes a part of your resources. An individual cannot have more than $2000 in resources to remain eligible. Call Social Security and report the inheritance. They will tell you how your eligibility will be affected and what you can do to remain eligible. Remember that Social Security can be reached 24 hours a day by calling 1-800-772-1213.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to: Byron Sansom, District Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
RD/LD

What is lactose intolerance?

Lactose intolerance is a set of symptoms resulting from the body's inability to digest the milk sugar called lactose. Lactose is commonly found in dairy-based foods and beverages, and is digested in the intestines by the enzyme lactase. Lactase breaks down lactose so it can be absorbed into the bloodstream. When the body does not produce enough lactase, lactose cannot be digested which results in lactose intolerance. Individuals may have varying degrees of intolerance to lactose.

Between 30 to 50 million Americans suffer from lactose intolerance. In fact, 75 percent of adults worldwide do not produce adequate amounts of the lactase enzyme, and therefore may experience some or all of the symptoms of lactose intolerance.

If you are lactose intolerant, you share this condition with many people. It is estimated that 90 percent of Asian-Americans are lactose intolerant and 75 percent of all African and Native Americans, Jews and Hispanics in the U.S. have insufficient levels of lactase enzyme and may experience some or all symptoms.

What are the symptoms?

Depending on the individual, the symptoms may vary, including cramps, bloating, gas, diarrhea and nausea. If you experience these symptoms after eating dairy products speak to your doctor for accurate evaluation.

How can I manage lactose intolerance?

Lactose intolerance can be easily managed. Because some individuals may produce small amounts of lactase, they may be able to consume small servings of dairy products or other foods that contain lactose without experiencing discomfort. A larger amount of lactase is needed to digest a larger amount of lactose, so eating a larger serving of lactose-containing foods could result in the symptoms of lactose intolerance.

Consider the following suggestions:

- *Drink milk in servings of one cup or less.
- *Try hard cheeses that are low in lactose, like cheddar.
- *Drink milk with a meal or with other foods.
- *Try yogurt with active cultures.
- *Substitute lactose-reduced dairy products, such as nonfat, lowfat, and calcium-fortified milk, cottage cheese, yogurt, and ice cream, for regular dairy products.
- *Take lactase enzyme tablets before or with dairy products.

*Add lactase enzyme drops to regular milk.

Do other nondairy foods also contain lactose?

Some nondairy foods may include ingredients that contain lactose. The ingredient list on food packages informs you of lactose or lactase-containing ingredients in the food. Although dairy products are the most common sources of lactose, some nondairy processed or baked foods contain smaller amounts.

Individuals who experience symptoms of lactose intolerance with small amounts of lactose-containing foods should look for the words such as "whey", "lactose", "nonfat milk solids", "buttermilk", "malted milk", "margarine", and "sweet" or "sour cream."

Some breads, dry cereals, cookies, instant soups, breakfast drinks, and milk chocolate contain small amounts of lactose. Always ask the pharmacist if medications you take contain lactose.

Does lactose-reduced milk contain the same nutrients as regular milk?

Lactose-reduced milk contains the same amounts of protein, vitamins

A, D and riboflavin, and the minerals calcium, phosphorus, and magnesium as regular milk. Some lactose-reduced milk is also calcium-fortified. Check the Nutrition Facts label for the amounts of nutrients in milk. Dairy products are a significant source of calcium and other minerals needed for healthy bones and teeth. Two to three servings from the milk, yogurt and cheese group help provide the calcium and other minerals you need each day.

What foods contain calcium?

Many foods contain calcium: broccoli, kale, canned salmon with bones, calcium-fortified breads, and tofu. Read the Nutrition Facts label for the amounts of calcium in these foods. A healthy well-balanced eating pattern includes foods from all food groups: bread, cereal, rice, pasta, fruits, vegetables, meats, poultry, fish, eggs, dry beans, nuts, milk, yogurt and cheese.

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

If you're currently receiving Social Security benefits, you may think that you can't get Supplemental Security Income (SSI), too. But, the fact is, you may be able to receive both if your total income and resources fall within the SSI limits.

To get SSI, you must be age 65 or older, or be blind, or have a disability. And, your income and the value of the things you own must be below certain limits.

Income refers to the money you have coming in -- earnings, Social Security benefits, other government checks, pensions, etc. Non-cash items you receive such as food, clothing and shelter are also considered income.

The amount of income you can have and still get SSI depends on whether you work or not, and where you live. The basic national payment rate in 1996 is $470 per month for one person and $705 for a couple. Some states add money to the basic payment, so they have higher SSI rates and higher income limits than other states. Your local Social Security office can tell you about the limits in your state.

Resources are the things you own, including property, cash, bank accounts and life insurance, etc. We don't count everything you own when we decide if you can get SSI.

For example, we usually don't count your car. You may be able to get SSI if the things you own that we count are worth no more than $2,000 for one person; or $3,000 for a couple. These limits are the same in every state.

Generally, if you don't work, you may be able to get SSI if your monthly income is less than $490 per month for one person, $725 for a couple. But, if you're working, you can have more income each month. Your benefit is decreased as your income increases until your benefit is completely reduced.

Keep in mind that, if you're applying for SSI disability benefits and earn more than $500 per month, you probably won't be eligible for benefits.

For more information about the SSI program, contact 1-800-772-1213.

Precautions benefit heart attack, stroke

Did you know the precautions you take against heart attacks are also effective for preventing stroke? Can you name a single symptom of stroke?

If not, you are not alone. Stroke is the third leading cause of death and the number one cause of disability in the United States. Yet in a 1991 Gallup survey, only 40 percent of adults age 50 or over could identify a single stroke symptom.

The National Stroke Association recently reported that "for the first time in 35 years, there is an increase in stroke mortality." Texas Medical Association encourages you to learn how to prevent and recognize stroke.

Strokes are similar to heart attacks, but they affect the brain instead of the heart. Seventy to 80 percent of strokes are caused by a blood clot that blocks blood flow to the brain. Blood carries oxygen to nerve cells in the brain, so nerve cells die when a blood clot deprives them of oxygen. These dead cells can cause disabilities or death.

Some risk factors for stroke can't be controlled. For instance, men, African Americans, diabetics, and those with a family history of stroke are at greater risk. However, you can limit your risk for stroke by following these basic guidelines.

*Have your blood pressure checked regularly by your primary care physician. High blood pressure is the single greatest risk factor for stroke, but often it can be treated through diet or medication.

*Keep your cholesterol low by following a proper diet.

*Don't smoke, quit smoking, or reduce the number of cigarettes you smoke.

*If you are affected by obesity, seek ways of reducing your weight.

*Don't drink alcohol excessively.

*Eat at least three servings of fruits and vegetables each day. The Framington Study, recently completed by Harvard Medical School and Boston University, indicates that men who eat three or more servings of fruits and vegetables have a 22 percent lower risk of stroke and are half as likely to die from stroke, should one occur. Preliminary results from another study suggest that women benefit similarly from such a diet.

When stroke occurs, it is important to seek medical help as soon as possible in order to prevent disability or death. The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston's newsletter, Impact, urges that you call 911 if you or someone you know experiences any of the following:

*weakness;
*numbness or paralysis of the face, arm or leg, especially when it affects one side of the body;

*sudden blurred or decreased vision in one or both eyes;

*sudden, severe headache with no apparent cause;

*sudden difficulty speaking or understanding others' speech; or *dizziness, loss of balance, or loss of coordination.

Extensive research is currently underway to develop safe post-stroke drugs that will minimize cell damage and dissolve blood clots.

In 1995, the Texas Medical Association implements its Stroke Prevention Project, designed to prevent morbidity and mortality as a result of stroke.

At his death, Samuel S. Must, 96, of Fryburg, Pa, had 824 living descendants.

Pastor/warden handles inmates with prayer

By ROY A. JONES II
Abilene Reporter-News
SNYDER, Texas -- Former Big Country pastor T.J. Medart figures he's wound up right where his former Sunday School and Vacation Bible School teachers predicted he would someday be.

Not in the pulpit. In prison. "I was pretty much of a hellion as a kid. I really dealt those Sunday School teachers, and my school teachers, misery for a while," he admits with a wince.

But the Rev. Mr. Medart is not an inmate. Nor is he a prison chaplain. He's the warden.

A 1978 Howard Payne University graduate who later pastored area Baptist churches at Zephyr, Moran and Albany, the 50-year-old Medart has been senior warden of the Price Daniel Unit, Texas Department of Corrections, near here for two years.

Say what? How can a person with the compassionate spirit of a preacher possibly handle inmates who will exploit any hint of what they perceive as a "weakness"?

"I handle it through prayer," the unique pastor-turned-warden says unashamedly. "I wouldn't dream of beginning a day out here without first asking the Lord for the wisdom to handle each and every situation as a Christian."

"And He has never let me down," Medart added, leaning back in his prison-made wooden chair and running his fingers through his close-cropped, reddish but graying hair.

"I can't imagine what it would be like to have no one besides myself to lean on when I have to make decisions that not only affect 1,300 inmates but also more than 300 employees" who look to the senior warden for leadership, he said.

Until they got to know the Beeville native the staff and inmates alike probably expected a warden whose personality would more match the gag conversation piece Medart has on the front of his desk.

Labeled "Complaint Department," the exhibit features a hand grenade with a "1" tag attached to the firing pin. The instructions say, "Take a number."

"I don't holler and scream and throw things and curse," he said. "Unfortunately, a lot of times the things I do are construed to be weak" because they are not accompanied by a fist-pounding or at least a raised voice.

How a warden is perceived is very important to good discipline among the inmates as well as the morale among the corrections officers and staff. But Medart didn't duck any tough questions during a one-hour interview.

What you see is what you get. And his record here and at Tulia, where he opened a similar minimum-security prison and served for two years, proves that compassion works better than a totalitarian approach to discipline. Neither unit has had a "major incident" during his administration, something very few prison units can claim.

It helps that Medart considers his warden's job every bit as much a part of Christian ministry as pastoring.

"I would never ever diminish the role of the pulpit minister because I found it very, very rewarding, but this really is a ministry, too," he explained. "All of the decisions I make are hopefully guided by Christian principles."

"I'm not one who can just disregard the humanity of the individuals I am dealing with. They are not animals. They are not any different than any people who are out there on the streets. They are just people who need a lot of love and a lot of understanding."

But Medart added, "I'm not naive to think that everybody is going to be saved or everybody is going to be changed. There are those who think the things I say or do indicate a weakness. They have their picture of what I ought to be as a Christian and if I don't jibe with that they want to judge me ..."

"The reality is, the Lord is the one who knows our hearts," he continued. "He is the only one. I don't know if there are any of these individuals out here who can be reached for the Lord but I do know that I am where I am because the Lord put me here. And when he is through with me here he'll place me somewhere else or he'll take me home, whichever suits His plan."

Reared in the Methodist church, Medart was baptized as a child, but said he was the scourge of teachers, perhaps a subconscious reaction to his hardworking father's frequent absence from home and bout with alcoholism.

"I was a behavior problem. I'd crawl out the window during Sunday School and go home, things like that," he said.

Once he climbed a tall water tower during a Vacation Bible School recess and refused for several hours pleas and demands by police that he come down.

"I was pretty much of a heathen, a doing-my-own-thing-type individual until my wife prayed me into the fold," he said. His personal relationship with God finally began about eight years after his 1966 marriage to Sandra.

"One day it was like somebody turned a light on in a dark room and I knew the Lord was calling me to do something," he said. At the age of 31 he entered Howard Payne in 1976 to study for the ministry.

In the pulpit the eager young pastor's appearance was as non-traditional as his age. He wore his red hair in a bushy Afro.

"I don't know why those folks in those country churches loved me, but they did. They prayed for me and helped me grow spiritually," he said. He fondly remembers how Ada Booth, then of Moran, prayed for him for hours on end.

"I think she had direct access to the throne of God," the warden said.

He pastored for nearly two years at Moran while he was commuting to Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, earning a master's degree in divinity in 1981. He was hired one Sunday after he was recommended by his former Howard Payne theology professor, Dr. James Shields, now of Hardin-Simmons University.

"Dr. Shields still says I beat him out of a job. He got to be interim pastor for just one week," Medart laughed.

Medart was pastoring First Baptist Church of Albany, 1981-83, when he met a man he still calls "my spiritual mentor," the Rev. Joe P. Self Jr.

Self, who pastored at Albany 1950-56, had been invited back to preach for the Albany church's centennial, and he spoke glowingly of his prison chaplain's job.

"Joe kinda' pulled me into TDC and became my father in the chaplaincy," Medart said. He served for several years at the unit at Rosharon before transitioning into prison administration.

When he interviewed for a warden's job Medart was asked about his ministerial background.

"I told them I was the same person that I was when I was a chaplain, but that I felt that as a warden my sphere of influence could be much greater," he said. "And I still feel that way today."

Although he does no pulpit speaking at the prison chapel he worships there with the inmates. He said to preach at the prison would be a "conflict of interest" because "you can send messages (to inmates) that you really don't know you are sending just by your actions or lack of actions" -- he worships there with the inmates.

"I really feel I am in a much better position as a warden to minister than I was as a chaplain because my role now is unlimited," he said. "My gift happens to be in administration and I am an enabler. As senior warden I can open doors and enable others to come in and have a free rein to minister."

CANNES, France (AP) - Hugh Grant and Elizabeth Hurley made a grand entrance for "Extreme Measures," then remained extremely tight-lipped about the status of their relationship.

"I refuse to talk to the press about my private life," Grant said, when he was asked if the couple's relationship has suffered from Grant's arrest with a Los Angeles prostitute. Grant and Hurley took a ship to the dock in Cannes, then waded through a sea of paparazzi and stargazers to the screening party for "Extreme Measures," a movie they made together.

The film stars Gene Hackman and Grant, and is produced by Hurley for their joint company Simian Films.

CDs fit investment needs of senior citizens

DENVER (AP) — Certificates of deposit (CDs) are a popular investment among older Americans -- and with good reason. They are federally insured up to $100,000, their principal doesn't fluctuate, and they generate a steady, though often modest, income.

Investors with CDs sleep well, which explains why many retirees and some approaching retirement have nearly their entire nest egg in these savings vehicles.

But CDs are not quite as "safe" as you may think. It may be risky to have a portfolio composed of nothing but CDs, warns Don Johnson, senior academic associate at the College for Financial Planning, a division of the National Endowment for Financial Education (NEFE). "All investments have risk, even CDs," he says.

CDs are risky? How? If the U.S. government guarantees them, their principal doesn't fluctuate. They generate a steady income. So what is there to worry about?

"The problem is that CDs don't protect you against inflation, or what's known as purchasing power risk," says Johnson. "CDs may be nice and comfortable, but after you subtract taxes on earned interest and then take into account inflation what purchasing power is left is quite low."

Johnson views risk in two broad categories: short term, or market volatility risk, and long term, or purchasing power risk. Volatility risk is what most people think of when they think of investment risk: the risk that their investment could drop in value and that they could lose some, or even all, of their principal.

Stocks and to an increasing degree bonds face volatility risk. Johnson points out that in a bear market the value of stocks could drop precipitously, which is certainly a worry for those investors in their later years who have less time to recover from such a significant drop.

But with people living 20, 30 and even 40 years after retirement, long-term risk should be taken into account as well, cautions Johnson. "Even mild inflation, such as we are experiencing today, can slowly eat away at your purchasing power. You'll be stretching your budget more and more over time."

In 24 years, at roughly 3 percent annual inflation, $1 will buy only half of what it does today. High inflationary periods, such as we experienced in the late 1970s, and high inflation in certain expense categories, such as medical care, can erode purchasing power extraordinarily fast.

Treasury bills -- the closest investment to CDs in terms of average total return -- have historically earned 3.7 percent a year, while inflation has run 3.1 percent. After taxes, that doesn't leave much. While CDs generally pay a little more than T-bills, the gap between CD returns and inflation is still small.

What's the answer to purchasing power risk? Johnson recommends that people add some equities (stocks) to their portfolio, even if they are already retired. Although stocks introduce short-term market risk, they hedge against the long-term risk of inflation. Historically, common stocks, despite fluctuations in their year-to-year values, have averaged an annual return of slightly over 10 percent, thus keeping well ahead of inflation.

"That's why it makes sense even for people over age 55 to have some representation in stocks," says Johnson.

Stock mutual funds offer the easiest and, for many, the best way to invest in equities. They provide professional management and diversification, and they can offer monthly cash flow. He recommends more conservative stock funds that provide capital growth with some income, such as equity income, growth and income, or "value-style" growth funds.

What portion of your nest egg to put into equities depends on several factors, particularly age and risk tolerance. Generally, someone who is younger can risk putting more into stocks than an older investor. Johnson says a person age 55 to 60 might consider going as high as 60 percent or 70 percent in quality stocks and stock mutual funds. A person age 75, on the other hand, might keep only 50 percent or less in stocks. "Even 30 percent is better than nothing," says Johnson.

Risk tolerance is an important factor, too. A person must be willing to ride out the inevitable ups and downs of the stock market. Says Johnson: "What's right from an investment standpoint may not be right from a psychological standpoint. If a person panics each time the market drops, and says, 'I'm getting out of equities,' then stocks are probably not a wise choice for that individual."

Johnson suggests that a person invest in the stock market only if he or she is willing and able to leave that investment in for at least five years to ride out any downturns in the market.

Social Security statements instill confidence in system

People who receive benefit estimate statements from Social Security telling them what they can expect when they retire, or if they become disabled or die generally have more confidence in the future of the program, a recent survey shows, according to Jim McDaniel, Social Security Manager in Amarillo.

After reading their Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement (PEBES), half of those surveyed had a higher "Social Security" confidence level than the members of other groups who didn't receive PEBES.

The PEBES displays a person's year-by-year earnings, an estimate of potential benefits, and general information about the Social Security program.

"The more people know about Social Security the better they feel about it," McDaniel said. "It's important that people use this information to plan their financial security."

The PEBES is considered a valuable financial planning tool. Since 1988, when PEBES first became available on request, more than 15 million people have requested one from Social Security. In 1995, Social Security began sending them automatically to people age 60 and older who have earnings posted to their record and are not already receiving benefits.

In 1996, the PEBES automatic mailings are going to people born in 1936, 1937 and 1938. And by October 1999, everyone age 25 and older will receive a PEBES each year.

If you have not already used a PEBES in your financial planning, you can call 1-800-772-1213 (anytime, including weekends and holidays) and ask for a Form SSA-7004 (Request for Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement). Or, if you access the Internet, type this address -- <http://www.ssa.gov> -- to reach Social Security Online and request a Form SSA-7004.
