County still 'Cattle-feeding Capital of the World'

Fed cattle tops 900,000 for second time ever

Feedlots — 1995

Cattle Fed in Southwestern Public Service Area — 6,209,678

The number of cattle fed in Deaf Smith County topped the 900,000 mark for only the second time in history last year, according to the annual Fed Cattle Survey conducted by Southwestern Public Service Co.

The report shows 901,374 cattle were fed at county stockyards during the year. The economic picture was dimmed, however, due to low market prices for the year.

The total was above the 862,887 reported in 1994 -- a figure that at the time was the second highest on record.

In 1993, the county fed 918,887 cattle. Before that the record was 843,276 head in 1992.

The annual survey tracks the number of cattle that passed through feedyards in the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles, the Texas South Plains, eastern and southeastern New Mexico and southwestern Kansas.

Once again, Deaf Smith County came out head and shoulders above the rest of the region when it comes to cattle feeding, ratifying the county's claim as being "Cattle Feeding Capital of the World."

The closest competitor to Deaf Smith County remained Castro County, which last year fed 655,258 cattle, according to the report.

That was up from the 651,645 reported for 1994, but below the 666,645 reported in 1993.

The second closest competing county was Texas County, Oklahoma, which reported feeding 579,720 head of cattle in 1995, according to the report.

The fourth highest cattle-feeding county in the SPS region was Parmer County, which reported feeding 493,540 head of cattle, which was a dropoff from the 533,345 head reported in 1994.

Fifth highest was Hansford County, with 372,244 head, followed by, in order, Hartley County, 343,500; Swisher County, 315,000; Moore County, 293,500; Sherman County, 281,720; and Lamb County, 234,696.

The only other counties that reported feeding more than 200,000 head of cattle were Dallam County, with 223,500 last year, and Randall County, with 220,000 head.

The survey included figures from 126 feedyards in the SPS area. Of those, 108 were reported as having lot capacities over 5,000 head -- 91 in Texas, five in New Mexico and 12 in Oklahoma.

In addition, there were 18 additional feedyards listed as starter lots or having capacities under 5,000 head.

As usual, Deaf Smith County led the list, with 15 lots having capacities over 5,000 head. Those lots -- one more than were reported in the 1994 survey -- had a total capacity of 458,600 head. Overall, the county was reported as having a total lot capacity, including starter lots, of 477,600 head.

Total feedyard capacity in the three-state SPS service area at the end of 1995 was 3,198,250 head -- up from 3,090,650 in 1994. Those figures include starter lots.

The lots in Deaf Smith County and their capacities are:

Barrett & Crofoot East, 45,000; Barrett & Crofoot West, 65,000; Bartlett #2, 45,000; Beef Tech, 21,600; Champion Feeders Inc., 32,000; Circle 3 Feedyard Inc., 24,000; Dawn Cattle Feeders, 18,000; Frio Feeders, 7,000; Great Plains Cattle Feeders, 26,000; Hereford Feedyards, 48,000; Keeling Cattle Feedyard, 20,000; MC-6 Cattle Feeders Inc., 22,000; Southwest Feedyard, 42,000; Sugarland

Friona man dies near Hereford as result of freak truck accident

The death of a Friona man Friday has been ruled an accident by Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine.

Emergency workers were called out at 9 a.m. Friday to the accident six miles west of Hereford on U.S. 60.

On arrival they found Graig Lloyd Lookingbill, 34, of Friona, who was dead of multiple injuries.

Turrentine pronounced Lookingbill dead at 9:35 a.m. at the scene of the accident a mile inside Deaf Smith County.

Turrentine said Lookingbill was traveling east on U.S. 60 with a truckload of wheat when the right dual wheels blew out.

"I don't know if he though it would explode," she said, or if the victim thought the vehicle might roll over.

"He stood on the running board and jumped," she said.

The distance, she said, from the spot where the tires blew to where Lookingbill's body was discovered was about 40 feet.

Turrentine said an ambulance from Clovis, N.M., happened to be traveling through at the time of the accident, en route to Amarillo with a patient being transferred there. Emergency workers stopped and attempted to give aid, but Lookingbill was already dead, she said.

Turrentine said Lookingbill died of blunt force trauma to the head. He also suffered other blunt force injuries.

She said Lookingbill apparently loaded his truck in Black and was traveling to Hereford Grain Corp. when the accident occurred.

She said the truck never did roll, but drifted off the road and over to the railroad tracks, where it traveled up the embankment, then rolled back down and came to a stop.

The body was taken by Rix Funeral Directors to Friona for services.

Local probation officers ranked high by state team

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When defendants in 222nd District Court or Deaf Smith County Court are placed on probation, they will get to know a supervision officer of the Community Supervision and Corrections Department, and know that person very well.

Supervision officers are the lifeline of a defendant to a world without further problems with the law.

The CS&CD has more than 1,000 men and women on rolls -- men and women who have run afoul of the law and are being given an opportunity to rehabilitate their lives.

The department must function under certain standards, monitored periodically by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Community Justice Assistance Division, as provided by law.

Recently, the 222nd District CS&CD earned high marks from a monitoring team for the work of the staff.

The three-member team that came to Hereford was highly complimentary of the department, reported Larry Sheffield, director.

"They said things like 'it is refreshing to see the quality of casework you have' and the 'CS&CD staff is to be commended on their case management practices' when they were here," said Sheffield.

The team spent two days at the Deaf Smith County courthouse, reviewing a computer-generated random sample of case files, Sheffield added.

Before arrival of the monitoring team, Sheffield was notified about the files to be inspected. When the team arrived, materials were readily available.

CS&CD for the 222nd Judicial District is responsible for probation supervision in both Deaf Smith and Oldham Counties which constitute the district. A supervision officer goes to Vega to meet with probationers in Oldham County.

Sheffield said the department is operating on a budget this year of approximately $489,539. State funding accounts for $256,047 and fees paid by probationers amount to $208,333.

Pre-sentence investigations are paid by defendants at $50 each, adding a total of $7,200 on the revenue side and smaller amounts are received through other sources.

The primary expense of the department is in personnel, more than $370,000 in the current budget. Other expenses are incurred for travel,

CofC to serve watermelon at July 4th party

No fireworks, but citywide party set at Aquatic Center

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

There may not be fireworks in the offing this Fourth of July, but Hereford residents will still have the opportunity to celebrate the 220th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence with a citywide party.

This year's Fourth of July Celebration will be held at the Aquatic Center Park and will include an afternoon of food, music, fun -- and swimming.

Hereford residents are invited to bring picnic suppers, blankets, lawn chairs and outdoor toys and join the party.

Janie Nino, one of the organizers of this year's celebration, said several new twists have been added to the 1996 edition -- including the new location.

The annual celebration will be held this year from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Aquatic Center Park, located on East 15th Street.

Beginning at 5 p.m., local performers -- including bands, soloists and small singing groups -- will perform on a stage located in the parking lot near the park's pavilion.

Also at 5 p.m., booths sponsored by local non-profit organizations will open, with volunteers selling food, drinks and games to raise money for a variety of charitable causes.

Mrs. Nino said local performers interested in taking part in the celebration may call her at 364-0231 to be placed on the performance schedule. Non-profit agencies interested in reserving space for their booths need to call her at the same number to register their group name and what they will be selling.

A list of performers and the times they will be on stage will be announced at a later date, as will a list of vendors and the wares they will offer.

Also on the Fourth, the Hereford Aquatic Center will be open from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., with the entire time reserved for Family Swim time.

A special admission price -- $1 a person -- will be offered.

During Family Swim time, parents must be in the water with their children at all times.

At 6 p.m., the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will begin serving watermelon -- a treat that has become an annual tradition at the Fourth of July Celebration.

This year, however, there will be a twist to the watermelon.

For those who want to do more than just settle down in their lawn chairs with a hunk of cold, wet fruit, a watermelon-eating contest will be held at 6 p.m., with contestants paired off in age group divisions to see who can eat the most watermelon.

The contest will be held under the pavilion and is open to anyone. There is no entry fee and those wishing to

United Way volunteers here start work on '96 sustaining campaign

Volunteers have begun working on this year's YMCA Sustaining Campaign, according to an announcement by the agency.

This year's goal is $25,000, which would be about $3,000 more than was raised in 1995.

Funds raised in the campaign help support the cost of youth participation in the various programs offered by the YMCA.

A donation to the sustaining campaign makes many things possible -- the experience of a young boy being on his first organized football team, a young girl learning how to play volleyball, or youngsters developing confidence in their own abilities through wrestling and gymnastics.

Volunteers in the campaign are made up of volunteer board members, YMCA members and participants. The 1996 campaign is scheduled to run through July 25.

Anyone who is not contacted by a YMCA volunteer but is interested in supporting the campaign may call the YMCA at 364-6990.

Authors say patients should not be deterred from surgery despite findings

Study: Lumpectomies less successful in young women

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
AP Medical Writer
CHICAGO (AP) - Surgery to remove cancerous lumps from women's breasts is less successful in women under 35, although that should not deter younger patients from having it, a study found.

"We don't want to discourage lumpectomies," Dr. Armando E. Giuliano, co-author of the study, said Friday. "The purpose of our paper was to make surgeons and ultimately the patients aware that it is more difficult and requires more effort. Don't be discouraged - be willing to try."

The goal of a lumpectomy is to remove only cancerous tissue and a small layer of healthy tissue around it rather than the entire breast, as in a mastectomy. Younger women have denser breast tissue and less fat in their breasts than older women, making malignancies more difficult to see on mammograms and more difficult to feel and remove precisely in surgery. Also, tumors tend to be more advanced in younger women because they often are detected later, Giuliano said.

The study compared the results of breast surgeries in 59 women under 35 and 745 women over 35. Excluding mastectomies performed because of patient preference, 50 percent of the younger women ultimately required mastectomies to control their cancers, compared with only 21 percent of the older women, the researchers said.

But a breast-cancer expert not associated with the study took issue with the findings and said her experience is that women under 35 who undergo lumpectomies rarely require subsequent mastectomies.

"I don't know what's going on there. I don't know if those surgeries (in the study) were just inadequate surgeries or what," said Dr. Melody A. Cobleigh, director of the Comprehensive Breast Center at Rush Cancer Institute, Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, in Chicago.

The study also found that the younger women who underwent lumpectomies required a total of 22 additional procedures - either removing more tissue around the lump or taking out the whole breast - to stop their cancers.

But Cobleigh noted that the study itself shows that only 13 percent of the women under 35 who got the "definitive" breast-conserving treatment - a lumpectomy followed by radiation - later required a mastectomy. The rest of the under-35 group who got lumpectomies never got radiation because their surgery failed to remove all of the tumor, she said.

In the older group, only 5 percent of women who got lumpectomy and radiation therapy required subsequent mastectomies, she noted.

"I think most younger women would accept that" difference, Cobleigh said. Previous studies have already shown lumpectomies are associated with no higher death rate than mastectomies, she added.

Findings of the study are published in the June issue of the American Medical Association's Archives of Surgery.

Researchers concluded that younger women should be encouraged to consider breast-conserving surgery but should be aware of the possible difficulties and the potential need for additional surgery.

"In our practice, we do 85 percent lumpectomies," said Giuliano, director of the breast center in the John Wayne Cancer Institute at Saint John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif. "So we're very committed to breast-conserving surgery."

Group says motor oils pretty much the same

NEW YORK (AP) - Premium motor oil and fancy additives are nothing more than slick sales, Consumer Reports says.

The consumer watchdog tested 20 types of motor oil under the most grueling conditions - in a fleet of 75 New York taxis - for nearly two years.

The results: There is little difference among brands as long as the container carries the starburst symbol, which means the oil meets a standard set by the American Petroleum Institute for additives needed to keep modern engines running.

The study also found:

-Changing a car's oil every 7,500 miles, or at the automaker's suggested interval, is sufficient. Although some mechanics recommend oil changes every 3,000 miles, that only wastes money and adds to the nation's oil-disposal problems.

-Expensive synthetic oils worked no better than conventional motor oil in the taxis, which drove 4.5 million miles in stop-and-go traffic.

20,000-pound boat taking shape in yard of Houston resident

By CHERYL LAIRD
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - Robert Penick is a modest man, a dreamy sort who seems surprised when he becomes the subject of conversation. He prefers privacy but is too polite to say so.

That's why a first glimpse of his backyard hobby can be shocking. It's so out there. Attention-getting. It's so, well, big.

His creation is a 20,000-pound boat, specifically a trimaran, which is like a catamaran with three hulls instead of two. Picture a civilized version of Kevin Costner's junkyard vessel in last year's Mad-Max-on-the-sea movie, "Waterworld."

One day soon, when Penick sails it, surrounded by endless ocean, toward a Caribbean island, the trimaran - 50 feet long and 30 feet wide - will seem tiny. But at its present location, the appropriately named Spirit of Texas looks Lone Star-size indeed.

For two decades, it's been emerging, bit by bit, in full view under an open-sided shed, where it sits like a nesting bird among its unlikely neighbors, flower-fronted cottages in the Heights.

Longtimers in this neighborhood just north of downtown Houston don't even turn their heads any more when they drive by. But newcomers are predictable. Brake lights glow as they slow to gape, and occasionally stop to quiz Penick.

"I said, 'Wow, man, that's a big ol' boat,'" recalls new resident Angie Tejeda. "It's a big ol' boat. A big ol' boat. I was wondering how he was going to get it out."

Penick has been wondering that, too. After 20 years of off-and-on hammering, molding and painting, his baby is almost complete.

If all goes according to plan, around 11 a.m. Sunday (June 23), Cherry House Moving workers will build a protective steel cradle under the trimaran's belly and haul it down back roads and through downtown behind the flashing lights of police escorts.

If traffic cooperates, it will arrive an hour later at General Stevedores off Navigation, one of the few docks on Buffalo Bayou with gates wide enough to accommodate the boat's floats.

Under Penick's nervous gaze, crane operators who normally unload cargoes of steel will swing the delicate trimaran down to float on the murky water below.

And when Penick climbs aboard to motor down to Seabrook Shipyard, where he will install a 52-foot mast, the Spirit of Texas will dip and bounce the way a boat - homemade or not - should.

"Homemade?" Penick objects gently with a hint of pride. "I try to avoid that word. Oh, let's call it custom-built."

At 58, Robert Penick is a lanky, middle-class real estate broker whose soft eyes and baggy jeans contrast with sharp cheekbones and slicked graying hair. He comes across as an old-fashioned, absent-minded professor with just a splash of hippie in him.

"I think he is probably one of those analytical geniuses," says General Stevedores' Mike Graves. "What he's done there is not just turn the page and glue A to B to C to D and put them together and you have a boat. That thing's way more complicated. Let him tell you about the foam that is lighter than air and stronger than steel."

Penick grew up in landlocked Chariton, Iowa, where his dad owned a gas station, his uncle was mayor and his grandparents had a farm.

Penick's grandfather had a small rowboat, and little Robert used to dream about something grander. "Something bigger."

In the late '50s, he ended up near Houston as an Air Force airman stationed at Ellington Field. Through a friend, he landed a part-time job at Coastal Fiberglass in Pasadena.

Owner Harold Sharp took a liking to the young man he called "Fly Boy." "He always wanted to build a sailboat, but I don't know what got him started on that monster he's built," says Sharp, now owner of Northshore Marine. "It's not my dish. I don't like that rocking myself."

But he taught Penick to work with fiberglass. "Fly Boy" painted on resin, spread out sheets of Fiberglass cloth, rolled out all the bubbles and sanded the surface until it was as smooth as a blackboard. One gallon of resin at a time, he also worked on his own creation, a 17-foot catamaran. A year later, he sailed it across Galveston Bay.

After a stint in business school at the University of Houston, he spent several years working for a mortgage company, which, as it happened, owned a glamorous deep-sea fishing boat. Penick loved taking clients out to fish for snapper 50 miles off Freeport.

During the following years, through two marriages, the raising of two sons, real estate in vestments and a stint as a pilot, Penick dreamed about his big boat. He got friendly with enthusiasts of multihulled crafts in Kemah and became excited by the idea of a vessel that he could keep in a Clear Lake marina for nearby weekend jaunts and occasional ocean-crossing voyages. Unlike his old company's fishing boat, this one would run strictly on the wind with no strain on the environment.

First thing Penick needed was a building to protect himself and his creation from the weather. He decided to use the back yards of two of his rental houses in the Heights and hauled in a warehouse salvaged from a freight yard off Old Liberty Road that had been destroyed in a propane explosion. "It had blown up the complete plant, and this was the only one standing," he says. "I said, 'That's the one I want. It's already been tested.'"

In 1976, he found a trimaran

Tips offered to keep cattle cool

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Nearly a year after summer heat led to the death of several thousand cattle in the Midwest, experts are meeting with cattlemen to discuss ways they can prevent a repeat occurrence.

Last year, during severely hot, humid days in mid-July, an estimated 3,750 head of cattle died from heat-related stress in 17 western Iowa counties. Other deaths were reported in feedlots in eastern Nebraska and in parts of surrounding states.

In addition to the $2.8 million losses from cattle deaths, experts have calculated that the heat wave cost the livestock industry $28 million in lost weight or weight gains among surviving livestock.

Darrell Busby, Iowa State University extension livestock field specialist, said the combination of heat, humidity, cloudless skies, no wind and warm nights led to the cattle deaths. A similar combination of conditions has been recorded in Iowa only five times in 101 years.

Before the conditions occurred last July 11-12, they were reported Aug. 3, 1930, which is why most cattlemen can't recall a similar event. Busby told a group of 150 cattlemen in Council Bluffs on Thursday. And in 1930, cattle weren't confined in large feedlots and probably were hand-fed a lower-energy ration on small farms.

A survey of cattle feeders after the weather-related losses provided information others can use to prevent future losses, said the experts. They include:

- Pens with adequate shade for cattle reported no loss. Losses were higher among black cattle and to a lesser degree among red cattle. Fewest losses were among light-colored animals.

- Cattle in lots with no shade sloping to the south, southwest or west had higher losses than lots sloping other directions.

- Heavier-weight animals were more susceptible to heat stress.

- Heifers on feed receiving an estrus-suppressant had fewer losses than ones that did not.

- Sprinkling animals with water helped prevent losses.

- Cattle that could lick as much salt as they wanted had higher losses than those with limited salt intake.

- During the loss period, cattle acted abnormally, milling around, not eating, trying to climb into the water tanks or monopolizing the space to the detriment of other cattle in the pens.

Cattlemen need to anticipate heat stress, the experts said. Periods of high temperatures, high humidity and little air movement are particularly dangerous.

Other suggestions from the experts are:

- Provide multiple comfort locations to reduce the cattle bunching for relief. In an emergency, wetting the ground so cattle have a cool place to stand will ease their distress quicker and with less water than wetting the cattle.

- Feed early in the morning and late at night, or only late in the day. Otherwise peak heat energy from digestion will coincide with peak heat of the day and add to discomfort.

- Cattlemen may want to limit amounts of feed cattle receive when a heat wave is forecast.

- Remember windbreaks and structures that protect feedlots from winter chills can add to discomfort in summer. Compensate with shade and other forms of cooling.

The Victoria Advocate
VICTORIA, Texas - When athletes from 200 nations compete this summer in Atlanta, they'll be accompanied by a different kind of team making its Olympic debut. More than 2,400 police officers from 54 nations will be on hand to assist with security, and Sgt. Abel Arriazola of the Victoria County Sheriff's Department will be among them.

"This is a big thing for me," Arriazola said. "It's, to say the least, one of the greatest opportunities in my career in law enforcement and I am going there with the intent of representing this department and this community. I am extremely elated, extremely happy for the opportunity."

Arriazola leaves for Atlanta July 3, then will spend about two weeks in training. Opening ceremonies are scheduled for July 19, and he will return to Victoria on Aug. 5.

Arriazola's road to the Olympics began last summer. He and Deputy Scott Townsend saw an advertisement in a law enforcement magazine indicating that officers were needed to assist with security at the Olympics.

"There was very little information on the ad, other than that it was a chance of a lifetime for an officer and that we would receive a commemorative uniform and a badge from the Olympic games if we were chosen," he recalled.

They each filled out the attached form and mailed them in, never really expecting to be selected.

Jerry Cogan, security team program manager for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, said almost 9,000 applications were received from 54 countries, out of which 2,400 officers were selected.

"We're real excited. The caliber of people that we have in the program is just incredible. We've got law enforcement executives, chiefs of police, other high-ranking officers," he said.

Although the selection process has been ongoing since late 1994, Arriazola wasn't informed until late April that he had been chosen. The final step was getting an OK from Sheriff Mike Ratcliff, who happily endorsed the application.

"He's an extremely good supervisor. He was a patrol sergeant and, now, of course, we're getting seeing a shift in his talents in investigations," the sheriff said. "He is very fond of physical fitness, always interested in training and advancing his (education) within the office. All of those qualities put together created a good candidate."

Although the security team is a volunteer effort, Ratcliff said Arriazola will be paid for his month in Atlanta rather than take an unpaid leave or use vacation time. "He's going to be able to bring back some things for this department. His insight into the security of an operation like the Olympic games, and hopefully some worldwide information that we can use," he said.

Only 30 percent of the officers hail from the United States, Cogan said, with the largest foreign contingent coming from Australia, site of the 2000 games.

"We thought of the international group because of their language capabilities," he said, adding that most of the American officers - including Arriazola - also speak at least two languages.

This year is the first time such an international security force has been formed for the Olympics, and Cogan said the idea behind the team was to introduce a degree of professionalism to the volunteer security force at individual events.

"We'll be inside the fence lines at all the venues, but there will be a law enforcement presence right along our people. So if there's any law enforcement action required, law enforcement will handle it."

LL Alex Keeney of the Atlanta Police Department's Olympic Planning Office said federal, state and county law enforcement agencies, as well as the U.S. military, all will provide officers to assist his department with the games. The department has about 1,550 sworn officers, but Keeney said he could not disclose how many officers will work the Olympics for security reasons.

Cogan said the volunteer officers will be uniformed, but unarmed, and the number of volunteers they supervise will vary depending on their assignments.

BOAT

designer, a British man named Andrew Simpson. Simpson made a rough sketch of the boat, along with a list of dimensions, and Penick set about filling in the many blanks in the design. At one point, he built a table 17 feet wide and 13 feet deep just to hold the plans. He later turned the table into walkways 12 feet above the stone-hard dirt floor.

He started building the boat upside down, bending a mile's worth of redwood strips into curved forms for the main hull and the two side floats. He scavenged for low-cost deals: glossy teak from a close-out sale up East; warped leftover timbers from Olshan Lumber Co. that fit just the curves he needed; stainless-steel pipe from area salvage yards.

He won't say how much it all cost him, but he estimates it would have cost at least two-thirds more if he had hired someone to build it. "You'd have to have it custom-built, and I don't think there's anyone on the Gulf Coast who can build boats like this," he says matter-of-factly.

Penick built the boat almost entirely by himself, with only occasional help from his family, friends or work crews. It was a sporadic love affair. At times he'd work every day, at others just a few months a year. During the '80s, he took a four-year break while he contended with a divorce and a real estate slump.

Over the years, he's had run-ins with neighbors angered by what they see as a cluttered and chemical-filled blight on an otherwise improving neighborhood. "That eyesore?" next-door resident Lad Hornak says in disgust. "It didn't beautify the neighborhood, I tell you that. He's got all that junk in there. It would be a blessing to see it leave. I may lead the parade."

But others see a feat of construction and the fulfillment of a Renaissance man's dream. From across the city, they've come - Brown & Root engineers, NASA scientists, boat builders and at least one stranger in need of a little inspiration.

Penick's younger son, Michael, who just graduated from Lamar High School, hadn't been born when his dad started working on the trimaran.

His older son, Paul, was just a baby. Paul, now 20, remembers the early wooden skeletons that would become the trimaran's floats. He remembers puzzling over his father's obsession with boats when he preferred guns himself.

On a recent afternoon, Paul balances on-board 12 feet above the ground with a paint can in his hand. "It's been his dream for a long time. I guess I've never really thought about it much before, but I'm proud of him for sticking with it. I've told him a couple of times maybe he should sell it. But I'm glad he kept it. That's 20 years of your life. How do you put a price tag on 20 years of your life? I know I couldn't sell it. It's my whole life."

Nearby, his father steps out of the main cabin through a teak-rimmed doorway it took him three days to build. The cabin holds a table, upholstered sofas, two double-size bunks, a bathroom, a kitchen and a navigation center presided over by a portrait of Christopher Columbus.

Upon request, Penick leads a tour. He can't resist a grin when he points out hidden closets and a toilet-turned-bench in his bedroom. Then he walks to one of the side floats and opens a trapdoor, revealing a dark and narrow cave that will house another sleeping bunk - for guests who aren't claustrophobic. Most of the time, he says, they'll be hanging out up top, fishing or sunbathing on hammocklike nets stretched between the hulls.

Is he proud?
 He becomes modest again.
 "I'm mostly just tired and ready to get it in the water."
 Does he worry that it will sink or lean over?
 "Nah. That English designer is pretty experienced."
 Would he ever build another one?
 "No, no, no, no, no, no. One's enough."

Introducing The Ambassadors Program

The Ambassadors Program has been implemented to broaden the business recruiting efforts of the HEDC, encourage volunteerism and promote the aggressive business perception of Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Their program is designed to encourage local citizens who travel outside Deaf Smith County to assist the HEDC in recruiting businesses from outside the area.

The HEDC will pay a fee to any local citizen responsible for recruiting any basic business that locates in Deaf Smith County. A basic business is one that derives at least 75% of its revenues or sales from outside Deaf Smith County.

Includes 16 players on 7 different teams Hereford basketball players going to AAU tournaments

Seven teams with Hereford players qualified for National AAU basketball tournaments this summer, and the Hereford Sports Association Wednesday contributed $8,000 towards travel expenses for the athletes.

The HSA contribution will provide $500 each for 16 players to help defray expenses to the nationally-ranked tournaments. Another four chose not to participate in the tournaments. Elaine McNutt, who announced the HSA contribution, said the funds were raised from the Cuby Kitchens Basketball Classic of 1995 and 1996.

McNutt said other funds used by HSA included organization of the 1995 Pee Wee League, basketball programs and Fan of the Week, equipment and jerseys for YMCA programs, a four-day varsity summer team camp, and a $2,000 contribution to HISD athletic programs.

The Hereford basketball players will be going to AAU sites from Utah to Florida.

Bryant McNutt, a member of the Amarillo Stars, will go to the Nike Shootout in Dallas in mid-July for a boys 16-under age division tourney.

Isaac Walker will be a member of the Lubbock Warrior team that plays at a tourney in Denver, Col., in mid-July.

The West Texas Heat, a 15-under girls' team, will go to Nashville, Tenn., for a tourney starting July 19. This team includes Julie Rampley, Kendra Wright and Makesha Rives of Hereford, and 10 other Panhandle players.

Chayse Rives and Cody and Slade Hodges are on the Texas Trojan team which goes to Memphis, Tenn., for a 13-under boys' tourney. The tourney is scheduled June 21-29. The Trojans finished eighth in the 12-under national tourney last year.

Tori Walker and Valerie Guzman are members of the Texas Tarheels, a 13-under girls team that will compete in the nationals at Cocoa Beach, Fla., starting July 9.

Sarah Griffin will play with the Metro Stars in a 11-under girl's tourney in Ogden, Utah, June 28 through July 6.

The West Texas Stars included eight Hereford boys on a 10-under team, but four decided not to participate in the national tourney, scheduled Aug. 3-10 in Greensboro, N.C.

Members of the team making the trip will be John Griffin, Marc Wells, Mitchell Sanders, Taylor Tice and Landry Lloyd. Eligible but not advancing are Keeton Walden, Clay Yenser, Tanner Black and Christopher Kerr.

Torrence slowed by injury; Slaney misses 1,500 quest

ATLANTA (AP)--Gwen Torrence will have to overcome a thigh injury to have any chance of continuing her quest for two individual Olympic gold medals this summer.

Torrence, who already has qualified in the women's 100, advanced to the quarterfinals of the 200 Friday evening in the U.S. track and field trials despite the leg problem.

Torrence, the 1992 Olympic champion in the 200, said her thigh began hurting in the final of the 100 last Saturday. She won that race in 10.82 seconds, tying her personal best and setting the world's best mark this year.

While Torrence is trying to preserve her chances of running in two individual events in the Olympics, Mary Slaney will have to settle for only one.

Slaney, who on Monday used a dramatic kick to finish second in the women's 5,000 and claim a U.S. Olympic team spot in that event, faded to eighth in her semifinal of the 1,500 Friday evening and failed to reach the final.

Slaney, 37, was among the leaders with little more than a lap to go, but seemed unable to cope with the 104-degree heat and 48 percent humidity.

Kathy Franey had the best time of 4 minutes, 10.76 seconds in the 1,500 semifinals. Slaney finished in 4:15.85 and Wysocki in 4:25.09.

Also bothered by the heat was decathlete Dan O'Brien, who was so dehydrated that he needed a liter of intravenous fluid earlier than expected.

After three events in the decathlon, world record-holder O'Brien was trailing Chris Huffins - who ran the fastest 100 in decathlon history to take the early lead in the grueling two-day competition.

Junior PGA Golf Tourney Monday

The Northern Texas Junior PGA Golf Tournament will be held here Monday, June 24. The tourney starts at 8 a.m. and the course will be closed to open play until 1:30 p.m.

More than 80 junior golfers from the area participated last year, and a full field is expected this year.

Local girl on team shooting for AAU title

SARAH GRIFFIN
...going to National AAU tournament

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Hereford has 16 athletes on 7 different basketball teams that will be participating in national tournaments this summer.

Among the local all-stars is Sarah Griffin, the lone Hereford member of the 11-and-under Metro Stars. She and her teammates have defeated an impressive list of opponents this year, beating champions from five different states.

They'll try to take care of the other 45 this week.

The girls' basketball team goes to Ogden, Utah, this week for the National 11-under AAU Tournament. They'll play the nation's best teams in a week-long battle for a national championship, starting June 29.

Griffin joins nine other girls from the area in a combination that has proven to work.

"During the past year, they have beaten the state champions from Colorado, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, and finished second to the state champion from Louisiana," said Frank Griffin, Sarah's father. "And they beat the 13-under champion from New Mexico."

The Metro Stars' latest big victory came in mid-May at the West Texas AAU Championship Basketball Tournament. They defeated the Amarillo Lady Texans 69-23, earning the right to represent the Texas Panhandle at the national tournament.

"I feel like all the practices we've had paid off," said Sarah Griffin, who sometimes gets up at 5:30 a.m. to practice her shooting. "It's all the things you've been practicing for."

We've been counting down the last few weeks at practice - "Only two weeks to the national tournament." Everybody's excited."

Griffin is joined on the Stars by girls from all over the area:

--Randall: Kara Cornelius and Kami Webb. Kara is the daughter of Alan Cornelius, a Hereford High School graduate who is currently Randall High School's head football coach.

--Amarillo: Deanna Lampkin.
--Wildorado: Kelly Cleavinger.
--Kress: Chelsea Welch.

--Happy: Calla Lair - her father Tom is the Happy High School girls' basketball coach.

--Canyon: Brooke Baughman, Kalee Carey and Skylah Monreal. Kalee's father Darrell is the Metro Stars' head coach, and Brooke's mother Betsy is the assistant coach.

"Seven of the girls have been playing as long as three or four years together," Frank Griffin said, "and Sarah's been playing with them for two years."

The national tournament starts officially with opening ceremonies June 28. The Stars play the first of three pool games on June 29. The top two teams in each pool advance to the championship bracket, while the other teams get to play in a consolation bracket. The championship game is July 7.

Sarah, a shooting guard, is a big part of the Stars' success. She led the team with 18 points in the regional championship game in Amarillo, hitting four three-point shots.

"She scored 40 points in four games and led the team in scoring at the regional tournament," Frank Griffin said. "She averaged 10 points a game, and three other girls averaged nine points a game, so they've got pretty good balance."

Sarah isn't shy about launching shots from behind the arc.

"Our coaches are always telling us, 'If you have the three, take it,'" she said.

The Stars' coaches make a good team, Frank Griffin said - Carey, the head coach, has taught Sarah many of the fundamentals of basketball, while assistant Baughman offers all the encouragement she needs. Sarah also has had help locally in her basketball development. She'll be a sixth-grader next fall at St. Anthony's School, where coach Amy Noyes has been a good influence.

Sarah also has become a protege of current Hereford High School star Julie Rampley.

"Julie has been quite a tutor for Sarah - especially helping her with her moves to the basket," Frank Griffin said.

Rampley has been to three national AAU tournaments and will go to her fourth national tourney with the West Texas Heat in late July. She's had experience that she's shared with Sarah.

"She said not to get all worried, I'll do fine, just relax," Sarah said.

Hopefully, that advice will work and carry over to the Stars.

"We work pretty well as a team," she said, "and if we do that, we can win the national tournament."

Hereford Open starts July 5

Signup is underway for this year's Hereford Open Golf Tournament, scheduled July 5-7 with Great Western Distributing as corporate sponsor.

The format for the 54-hole tourney will be low gross/low net three-day total, except for the championship flight which will be low gross. All players will be flighted by handicaps. Entree fee is $80 and includes green fees, range ball, meals Friday and Saturday nights, and refreshments. There will also be an optional skins game for each flight.

Based on a full field, each flight using handicaps will pay three places in both gross and net. No player will be allowed to win in both divisions.

A separate flight for women and seniors will be set up if there are enough entries.

To sign up, call the golf course at 363-7139.

Johnson aims for gold in both 200, 400

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

He looks like God's own vision of a sprinter - sleek, muscular, serious, confident and fast. Oh, so fast. No flash. Lots of dash.

If Olympic immortality comes to Michael Johnson this summer, it will come without flamboyance. Not that this guy is a bore. Off the track, he likes to ride jet skis and owns a purple sports car.

But on the track, he's all business. "That's me at my job," he said. "That's not the time for me to be flamboyant or put on a show. It's time to do my job."

And he makes no apologies. If track and field wants a showier superhero, that's too bad. At the Atlanta Games, Michael Johnson will have to do.

"Over the past six years, I've established myself as the premier track and field athlete going into the Olympics - 'the story' of the Olympics," Johnson said. "I've done that by being myself. If people want me to be a Dennis Rodman, that's their opinion."

The Olympic goal that Johnson has set for himself is unprecedented. He wants to become the first man to win the gold medal in both the 200 and 400 meters, two very different races, one a rush of sheer speed, the other a crushing challenge of sprint endurance.

"Basically, 300 meters is the limit where a human being can sprint all out," said John Smith, once one of the best 400-meter runners in the world and now a coach of some of the sport's top sprinters. "The last 100 meters is conditioning. That's where we talk about the bear or the refrigerator on your back, all the things we use to describe the uncomfortable feeling that you have."

One woman, American Valerie Brisco-Hooks, accomplished the 200-400 double in the 1984 Olympics, but her accomplishment was tainted by the absence of two of the world's best, East Germans Marita Koch and Marlies Gohr, because of the Eastern bloc boycott of the Los Angeles Games.

Johnson first accomplished the double at last year's world championships. To do it in the Olympics, at age 28 and with his abilities at their apex, seemed a natural progression, he said.

"It makes it more fun, more of a challenge to do something that hasn't been done before," he said. "Every four years, there's going to be an Olympic gold medalist in the 400 and in the 200. We all want to do something special."

To win both races requires a rare blend of abilities.

"You have to be lucky enough to be blessed with speed and endurance and that's an unusual combination," Johnson said. "Most athletes have one or the other."

Ten years ago, no one could have known that Johnson had either. He grew up in the Oak Cliff area of Dallas, where his mother, Ruby, is a teacher and his father, Paul, a truck driver.

The youngest of six children, Johnson is the only one who excelled in athletics, and that excellence came relatively late in life. The Johnsons emphasized education, and all six children have graduated from college.

"I'll put it this way," Johnson said. "My parents took responsibility for their kids."

Michael was sent to Dallas Skyline High School, a school 20 miles from the family's home and known for its academic excellence.

As a junior, Johnson showed up to try out for the track team, and Skyline coach Joel Evar wasn't instantly impressed.

"He didn't strike me as really an athlete when you first looked at him," Evar said. "He looked like some Rhodes scholar. He had the glasses and he really wasn't built up."

After a couple of meets, though, it became apparent that Johnson was fast. Evar put him on both the 400- and 1,600-meter relays.

"It was just unbelievable how he was getting out on the curve," Evar said. "That son of a gun was running 10.3 when he handed the stick off. I thought my watch was broken."

Between Johnson's junior and senior year, he began drawing the attention of college coaches. In his senior season, Johnson was undefeated in the 200 until the state meet, when he finished a close second in the final.

And that trait of quiet, intense competitiveness on the track that would carry him to world domination was beginning to show.

"He's the type of kid who had that inner conceit," Evar said. "He knew he was good, but you never knew that by him talking. He'd never go and taunt somebody."

At Baylor, track coach Clyde Hart offered Johnson a full scholarship but felt he was somewhat of a gamble.

"He wasn't a state champion. He didn't have nationally ranked times," Hart said. "But he was a good student and he had excellent character."

Thus began a coach-athlete relationship that continues to this day. "Clyde Hart and Clyde's system matches perfectly with Michael's temperament," Smith said. "It's fascinating for me as a coach to look at that and see what they have done as far as challenging what is humanly possible at these games."

To this day, Johnson believes a key to his success has been his long relationship with Hart, who just finished his 33rd year at Baylor.

"Definitely one of my strengths, one of the reasons why I think I've been able to do so well over the past six years, is I've been consistent," he said. "Part of the reason for that is the consistency of my training program, being with the same coach and not moving across the country."

Injuries slowed Johnson in college, but as a senior in 1990, Johnson won the NCAA indoor and outdoor 200 titles and anchored Baylor's collegiate championship 1,600-meter relay team.

Johnson planned to get his degree in finance and go to work. But as his times improved, he decided he had a world-class future in track.

By 1992, Johnson was the runaway favorite in the 200 at the Barcelona Games. But just after his last tuneup meet in Spain, he came down with food poisoning.

"He was extremely sick," Hart said. "He lost seven or eight pounds."

At Barcelona, a weakened Johnson didn't even make the 200 final, but he did come back to help the United States win the 1,600-meter relay and break the event's 23-year-old world record.

His Barcelona disappointment is not the motivation for his Olympic double, Johnson said.

"It's just a path for my career," he said. "This is what I want to do."

He needed some help, though. The original schedule for the Atlanta Games made it virtually impossible to compete in both events.

Under the old schedule, Johnson would have had to run qualifying rounds in both the 400 and 200 on the same day, and the 400 final and 200 semifinal on the same day.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation agreed to change the format so there would be no overlap. Johnson will run the 400 on the first four days of the competition, then the 200 on days six and seven. Why was the often-inflexible IAAF so cooperative? Officials of the sport realize that they need a hero.

Johnson hardly could have put more pressure on himself.

Running with a trademark upright style, his torso barely moving and his legs churning in a style reminiscent of Jesse Owens, Johnson ran his 400-meter victory string to 53 by winning the event at the U.S. Olympic Trials. His time of 43.44 seconds just missed Butch Reynolds' world record of 43.29. His victory streak in the 200 stands at 20.

While the supremely confident Johnson insists he's not overwhelmed when he looks back at his improbable journey toward Olympic greatness-- "I'm really not that surprised," he said-- his old high school coach can't help but think of that skinny kid he met slightly more than a decade ago.

"Each time I see him run," Evar said, "it sends chills up my spine."

Cook leads St. Jude golf

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)--John Cook thought about scoring 59 for a few minutes Friday. He had to settle for a 62 and a three-stroke lead at the $1.35 million St. Jude Classic.

"If there was ever a day that it could have happened to me, today was the day," Cook said of trying to match the PGA Tour's lowest score turned in by Al Geiberger in 1977 and Chip Beck in 1991.

Six straight birdies and 10 on the day had Cook at 9-under par with five holes left.

Then he hit his drive in a hole and realized his first victory since 1992 would mean more. He parred his way out and finished with a nine-under-par 62 and two-day total of 16-under 126 for a three-stroke lead over John Adams.

Adams, who has never won on the PGA Tour, shot a 64 that kept him at 13-under and 129 total in the tournament sponsored by FedEx.

Nike Tour player Patrick Lee, who shared a four-way lead with Cook after the first round, shot a 67 and was tied with Kenny Perry (64) five strokes back at 131. Stuart Appleby (67) was at 10-under 132.

Tohm, Giordano exchange wedding vows Wedding timetable in afternoon ceremony at St. Anthony's Jo Ann Tohm of Hereford became the bride of Dean Anthony Giordano of Sacramento, Calif., in a ceremony Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Sacramento are parents of the groom. Monsignor Orville Blum, of the church, officiated at the ceremony. Flower arrangements in mauve, teal and burgundy flanked the altar along with cages containing white doves. The doorway was draped with garland and the wrought iron entrance was entwined with greenery. Smaller cages with doves were placed behind the pews which were accented with bows of white satin and mauve tulle. Matron of honor was Carolyn Rieves Gonzales of Odessa. Best man was Carl Giordano, brother of the groom, of Sacramento.

Serving as bridesmaids were Kelly Tohm, sister-in-law of the bride, of Lubbock; Kim Meeks of Lubbock and Angela Giordano, sister-in-law of the groom, of Sacramento. Groomsmen were John Tohm, twin brother of the bride, of Lubbock; Tom Giordano and Paul Giordano, brothers of the groom, of Sacramento.

Guests were seated by Willie Jagers, Tom White of Houston, Donnie Rieves and John Tohm. Flower girls were Shelby Robles, goddaughter of the bride and daughter of Ronnie and Zulema Robles of Uvalde and Kellie Giordano, niece of the groom and daughter of Paul and Angela Giordano of Sacramento.

Samuel Zapata, cousin of the bride and son of Steve and Becky Zapata of Uvalde, served as ring bearer. Altar servers were Richard Robles II, cousin of the bride and son of Richard and Cynthia Robles of Uvalde and Adrian Alejandro, son of Joe and Janie Alejandro.

Denise Wieck was organist and Bill Sava performed vocal selections. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white regal satin with a sweetheart neckline, Edwardian sleeves and elongated Princess style bodice encrusted with pearls and jewels. The gown plunged to a low back, centered with a designer bow and a runner of satin covered buttons.

The full, flowing skirt fell to a cathedral length train studded with pearls and jewels, decorated at the hemline with borders of European lace. She wore a crown shaped headpiece, designed and made by the bride's mother and Jane Joyce, encrusted with pearls, beads and sequins and held a double veil of illusion which was edged with pearls. Her bouquet, designed and created by Joyce, featured a cross formed of white silk roses and the wedding ring belonging to the groom's grandmother was attached with satin ribbon. White calla lilies with pearl sprays and sprays of mauve, teal and burgundy with white tulle completed the arrangement.

Bridal attendants wore tea length dresses of mauve moiree with a princess style bodice and short, puffed sleeves. They carried silk bouquets in the bride's chosen colors.

A reception and dance were held in St. Anthony's gym and cafeteria following the ceremony.

Assisting at the reception were Jill Jagers, Rachel Rieves, Carolyn Gonzales and Kim Meeks. The three-tiered cake was decorated with mauve and burgundy roses and teal leaves and featured a colored fountain. It was attached to a second two-tiered cake by a white stairway with cherubs. A second stairway was attached to a smaller cake. The cake was topped with a lace and pearl trimmed gazebo holding a bride and groom.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will be at home in Los Osos, Calif.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School. She received a degree in occupational therapy from Amarillo College and is currently working as a certified occupational therapy assistant in Waco.

The groom graduated from Christian Brothers High School in 1987 and received a double major in business from Chico College in California. He presently owns and operates a computer business called Corporate Alliance.

The Brazosport Facts
CLUTE, Texas -- You've seen all those guides with timetables to plan your wedding -- more dictatorial than Mussolini, less forgiving than your seventh-grade algebra teacher.

Most of the instructions make a wedding seem like a noxious, duty-filled rite. Are the bride's parents (or even the bride, stockbroker that she is) shelling out a total of $11,893.48 so that everyone concerned can be miserable? Certainly not.

In this spirit, here is a relaxed but realistic wedding time-table. Follow it, or don't.

*1-48 years before the wedding: Find Spouse.

You're on your own here. Pay no attention to that silly Yale study that showed a woman of a certain age was more likely to be killed by a terrorist than find a husband. They proved that was bogus, and we're supposed to have gotten past the belief that men had to be snared like unintelligent rabbits.

Men who are on the right side of the supply-and demand curve can gloat, but don't ask for sympathy when your hairline recedes.

*Eight months before wedding: Tell relatives. Bring smelling salts.

The old rituals, like asking the bride's father for her hand, are marvelously camp. But a sudden dropping to the knees in these times might lead a suspicious father-in-law to assume that the gentleman needs a knee replacement, or indulges in recreational drugs. A simple verbal announcement, perhaps with a paramedic standing by, is enough.

There has never been a family in the history of the world that totally approved of any future spouse. Even in ancient Egypt, where brother married sister and cousin wed cousin, a stray relative could always be heard to say, "I just don't like that narrow space between her eyes," or "What do we really know about his family?" So the rule here is please yourself, and let the chips and the chromo-

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS
Research reported in the January issue of Journal of the American Dietetic Association may provide a new light to the question of overweight and obesity.

Are persons overweight or underweight more likely to die over a 30-year period than persons of average weight? According to this recent study conducted at Cornell University, people at least 20 to 30 pounds overweight were not more likely to die over a 30-year period than persons of average weight. Health risks of being underweight now appear more serious than previously thought.

Data on body weight and mortality from all causes gathered from 357,000 men and 249,000 women from 19 studies at Cornell university refute the previous notion that overweight persons were more likely to die during a defined period than average-weight persons. In fact their findings indicated that standard weight tables may be too low by as much as 15 pounds. They cited an example that the insurance companies current weight recommendation for a medium-frame, 5 foot 10 inches man is 149 to 161 pounds. The data analyses show that for a 50-year-old nonsmoking white male of this height, the mortality during 30 years of follow-up was higher only when these men weighed more than 195 pounds or less than 160 pounds.

Despite the common notion that weights even slightly above average result in a shorter life span, the real truth is that weight levels slightly below these current recommendations are associated with a greater risk of mortality. Although this is one study on a selected population, it would be inappropriate to recommend that persons considered moderately overweight should lose weight to increase their life span, especially given the poor success people have in maintaining weight loss.

What is of real concern is to start living more healthfully. And here's how to do it:

*First, try to make wise food choices that will lead to a more healthful lifestyle such as eating by the recommendations of the newly revised U.S. Department of Agriculture dietary guidelines such as reducing fat consumption, reducing dietary sugar and sodium content, eating more complex carbohydrates found in deep green leafy vegetables, bread or grain products, and in other fruits and vegetables, and reducing alcohol consumption.

*Secondly, drink at least six to eight glasses of water daily.

*Finally, exercise some everyday. By making these simple lifestyle changes you can prevent or delay the onset of some degenerative diseases affected by overweight or obesity and perhaps even feel much better.

Nothing shows a man's character more than what he laughs at.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Remember that the more a child feels valued, the better his values will be...

Licenses and/or permits have to be obtained to drive a car, carry a gun and even to go hunting or fishing. The only qualification for parenthood seems to be biology...there is not even a required reading list!

Even though parents have access to help with child rearing from teachers, coaches, church leaders, friends and family, it is in the home that children should best learn self-discipline, courage, compassion and responsibility. These are the tools that will help them to be adults of strong and admirable character.

Not only are teachers and coaches involved in in-service and workshops to help them in the classroom, many will be attending school bus and van driving certification classes. Some of the topics on the course schedule include the bus drivers' image, preventive maintenance, traffic regulation and driving procedures, defensive driving, first aid, the special education child, safety and emergency procedures. The 20-hour course will be taught by David Morris.

Hopefully our students, of all ages, will work on their reading skills during the summer. Spending time each day reading the newspaper with parents and discussing current events will help with both reading and social studies skills. Having them write an episode for their favorite TV show will help with reading and writing, while preparing family meals, using recipes, paying bills and balancing a checkbook will help with both reading and math. These are inexpensive methods that parents can practice which will also provide some quality time for parents and their children.

If you find your young teen wants to sleep late, or sleep more, let them, when possible. There is scientific evidence that their bodies require more sleep than usual because of the rapid physical, hormonal and emotional changes that they are going through. This applies especially to boys in this age group. I experienced this with my own three boys, so surely it must be factual!

"Live so that when your children, or students, think of fairness, caring and integrity, they will think of you."

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I think biology is interesting, especially the chemicals involved. I want to be a science teacher some day. I am 15 now. Albumin seems to be an important part of it all. How important is it, and how does a person find out if the body has enough albumin? — J.T.

ANSWER: You could hardly pick a better topic with which to begin understanding how the body performs day-to-day chores.

Albumin, a protein that is produced by the liver, has important missions in life. Albumin molecules transport hormones, drugs and certain metals, distributing them far and wide via blood circulation.

Albumin's sponglike quality helps it hold onto fluid carrying the precious chemical passengers. That prevents any undue or wholesale leakage of fluid from inside the vessels into tissue — a potential catastrophe.

Photographs of starving refugees remind us what happens when protein intake plunges. Malnourishment begins a grisly progression to starvation. The grossly swollen abdomen presents graphic evidence of a massive escape of fluid from blood vessels into body tissue.

You measure albumin by sampling the blood. Most tests measure it among a dozen or so blood constituents.

A physician learns to recognize low albumin levels as evidence of kidney or liver disease.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Someone told me that if a person's metabolism is too low, he will find it impossible to lose weight by dieting. Is that true? I have been getting only 1,200 calories daily for the past month and have not lost any weight. How do you increase metabolism? — A.A.B.

ANSWER: You have the metabolism story right. Some people are born with a metabolism that sets them up for weight problems throughout their lives. Such people need to keep an eye on the scales. More than others, they need to control calorie intake.

Controlling calorie intake might be a failed exercise for someone like you, however, for you seem to have gone to the edge in that direction. A 1,200-calorie intake is pretty Spartan by any measure. If you were to drop below that number, you could shortchange yourself on vitamins and minerals.

One answer, as you might have guessed, is exercise. That revs up metabolism and maintains some residual calorie burning for a significant time after you stop the exercise.

Please understand that we are indulging in some pretty gross simplification here. Many other factors can be involved in metabolism, and they must be taken into account. A thorough physical is the sensible way to do that.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Military Muster

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Christopher E. Wear, son of John R. Wear of Hereford, has returned to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, after completing a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean and Persian Gulf aboard the fleet oiler USS Willamette.

Wear is one of 333 sailors aboard the ship who completed the 29,000-mile voyage.

While in the Persian Gulf, Wear's ship supported the USS Nimitz Battle Group, which was helping to enforce the international no-fly zone over southern Iraq.

During the deployment, Wear visited Bahrain, Hong Kong, Japan, the Philippines, Singapore and the United Arab Emirates, and participated in several community relations projects.

The 1993 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Navy in November 1993.

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Alfonso Escamilla, son of Rosa M. Elizonda of Hereford, has returned to San Diego, after completing a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean and Persian Gulf with Fighter Squadron 24 (VF-24) embarked aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz.

Escamilla is one of 239 squadron members aboard the carrier who completed the nearly 45,000-mile voyage.

While on deployment in the Persian Gulf, aircraft from VF-24 flew nearly 1,000 missions to enforce the international no-fly zone over southern Iraq. In response to Chinese military exercises near Taiwan, USS Nimitz and VF-24 shifted from the Persian Gulf to the East China Sea, relieving the aircraft carrier USS Independence and its airwing.

Escamilla joined the Navy in March 1988.

Las Vegas is site of wedding

Kyla Struve and Lanny Edwards, both of Lubbock, were united in marriage June 9 in the Las Vegas Wedding Gardens in Las Vegas, Nev.

The bride is the daughter of Kerry and E.J. Struve of Hereford and the granddaughter of longtime Hereford residents W.V. and Florene Struve.

The groom is the son of Ron and Glenda Edwards of Slaton.

Rev. David Bowers officiated at the ceremony set before a small waterfall surrounded by tropical greenery and flowers. The pillars and door frames were entwined with ivy and potted plants and flowers adorned the pews.

Cami James of Hereford, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor.

Best man was Collin Edwards of Lubbock, brother of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of natural silk and Venice lace. The bodice was adorned with lace and pearls and featured a halter neckline highlighted in back with lace straps and a peplum. The full flared skirt flowed into a court length train.

Her headpiece was a silk bow adorned with flowers and pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of red and white roses, ivy and baby's breath.

She wore a diamond lavalier which had belonged to her great-great-grandmother and her mother's opal and diamond ring.

The matron of honor wore a floor length gown of red matte satin with a halter neckline, a-line skirt and a bow at the waist in back. She carried long stemmed red and white roses tied with white ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception at the Luxor Hotel.

Carri Edwards served cake and Beth Harlen served punch and coffee while Sarah Ann Englert invited guests to register.

The Bavarian cream cake with lilac roses and greenery was served from a table covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a vase of lilac roses.

Following a wedding trip to Los Angeles the couple will be at home in Lubbock.

The bride attends Lubbock Christian University and is employed by Dillard's in Lubbock.

The groom attended South Plains College and Texas Tech University. He is employed by Edwards Ready Mix in Slaton.

New Arrivals

Tim and Sharon Martin of Dallas are proud to announce the birth of their daughter, Chase Kendall, on June 18.

She weighed 8 pounds, 15 ounces and was 20-3/4 inches long.

Grandparents are Danny and Betty Martin of Hereford and Richard and Diane Mendenhall of Tyler.

Great-grandparents are Louise Ferguson and J.F. and Dorothy Martin, all of Hereford.

Fleur de lis is a French name that literally means flower of the lily, but it actually refers to the iris. Some historians believe the iris was once called a lily.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have been happily married for six years and have two children. Nothing threatened my "perfect" marriage until two months ago. That's when I was shocked to discover that my husband was having sex with my unmarried older sister. She is an amputee with only one leg.

My sister lives out of state but travels on business. When she was in our area, I always insisted that she stay with us in our spare bedroom. We even kept a pair of crutches on hand especially for her visits so she could get around the house without her artificial leg.

During her last visit, I woke up at about 3:00 in the morning to find my husband missing from our bed. I heard noises from my sister's room, and when I investigated, I was shocked to find him in bed with her. After a stormy confrontation, my husband's defense was that he felt sorry for my sister because she had no man in her life and probably never would. He begged my forgiveness and swore it would never happen again. My sister said very little, but it was obvious that she was very uncomfortable. Her face was red as a beet.

If it were not for our children, I would have left him on the spot. I am baffled as to how my husband could possibly be attracted to my sister, who not only is missing a leg but is eight years older than I am and about 30 pounds heavier.

My husband and I have slept in separate rooms since that night, and I have broken off all contact with my sister, who is no longer welcome in our house. My husband keeps begging me to forgive him and to resume our sexual relationship, which he misses.

I don't want a divorce, yet I find it very difficult to trust my husband after he cheated on me with my own sister. I need your help. -- Brockton, Mass.

Dear Brockton: I know this is going to be difficult to do, but you must somehow find it in your heart to forgive both your husband and your sister.

I realize your faith has been shattered, but to carry this baggage for the rest of your life will be enormously destructive to you and your children. I strongly recommend that you and your husband get joint counseling. The sooner the better.

Your husband's defense that because your sister is an amputee, he felt sorry for her and concluded that she would never have a man in her life is absurd. Many amputees have very satisfying sex lives, according to Dr. Henry Betts of the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

Dear Ann Landers: Two weeks ago, I hosted a 50th wedding anniversary party for my parents. They renewed their marriage vows at the church where they were married. The ceremony was followed by a lavish dinner party attended by 150 family members and friends.

The evening was ruined by my youngest sister, age 38, who has been a heavy drinker since high school. She and her escort got into a fight when she decided to dance in nothing but a blouse and pantyhose. I was mortified.

Should I write notes of apology to the guests? -- No State or Town
Dear N.S., N.T.: No notes, please. The less said about this, the better. Your sister needs Alcoholics Anonymous. Hand her this column, and urge her to go to a meeting. AA is in the phone book.

ATLANTA (AP) - The David Justice-Halle Berry divorce trial may turn into a road show.

A Superior Court judge in Georgia has refused Berry's request to dismiss the Atlanta Brave's divorce case. Justice filed for divorce on April 26, two weeks after Berry filed in California.

Unless Justice's lawyers are successful in getting the California case dismissed, the divorce may have to be worked out in both states.

Justice wants to keep the case in Georgia because its divorce laws call for equitable division of property.

California law considers all of a couple's assets to be community property.

Justice, 30, and Berry, 27, married in 1993 and separated earlier this year.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Brad Pitt has donated $100,000 to a science museum for children in his hometown.

The Discovery Center, a hands-on interactive museum, must raise $1.3 million by June 30 to secure a $550,000 foundation grant. Without the grant, the center's full-time opening could be delayed for years.

"He was wanting to do something to help kids and was based on education and when this opportunity came about, he felt this was it," Doug Pitt, the actor's brother, said on Wednesday.

Doug Pitt owns a computer business in Springfield; his brother is a 1982 graduate of Springfield's Kickapoo High School.

About 40 percent of U.S. households contain computers.

Engagement announced

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boggs, Jr. of Dumas announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Lisa Raelynn Boggs, to Stacy Lynn Cook.

Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cook of Sunray.

Grandmothers of the bride are Betty Boggs of Hereford and Virginia Easley of Dumas, formerly of Hereford.

Lisa is a 1994 graduate of Dumas High School. She attends West Texas A&M University and is employed by Bivens Memorial Nursing Home.

Stacy is a 1992 graduate of Sunray High School. He attends West Texas A&M University and is employed by Straus-Frank Inc.

The couple plans a garden wedding on July 13 to be held at the home of Lloyd and Donna Mills.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

Summer, of course, is the time for vacations and family reunions and other such long trips. We just got back from an 800 mile trip to a family reunion (our second already this summer) and along every mile of it I wish for a tape deck and some talking books from the Deaf Smith County Library.

I got the idea from the many creative patrons who come in each week to get talking books to take with them to Dallas or wherever. We have titles to appeal to everyone. There are novels, children's books, nonfiction and even Japanese lessons.

For the uninitiated (like me), talking books are all kinds of books read on tape by famous people, authors and others. So, you can listen to your favorite book or that book you just haven't had time to read yet.

It's an alternative to playing the alphabet game with road signs and trying to find all fifty states on license plates or (oh my aching head!) trying to actually read a book while riding in the car.

Not only does the Deaf Smith County Library own a collection to which we add regularly, but we also receive talking books on loan from the Texas Panhandle Library System about four times a year.

The latest group has just arrived and contains a variety of titles. See your travel agent, then come see us. We'd love to help make your trip pleasant, interesting and informative.

One of our summer displayers is our very own LaJuan Fowler. It seems that LaJuan is a Miami Dolphins fan from way back. Did she really tell me 36 years? She has displayed some of her Dolphin memorabilia, and, a little grudgingly, some of her husband Roy Raiders stuff. Do the Raiders and the Dolphins ever play each other? If they do I wonder how things go in the Fowler household then.

Chris Hendershot is displaying his sports card collection. He says that he has over 15,000 cards, including several Michael Jordan cards. The oldest cards are the baseball cards that came out of chewing tobacco (his uncle's) packages. I didn't know chewing tobacco had sports cards. Anyway, if you remember Warren Spahn (or not) you might want to drop in and see Chris's collection.

Speaking of displayers...Do YOU or someone you know have something you would like to display at our library? Do you have something that would be a wonderful display, but you think no one would be interested?

Most likely, if you are interested in something, others will be, too. We are talking about collections, artwork and crafts of all kinds. Whatever it is, we would like for you to share it with us. Please come by or call and let us know. Our list of potential displayers became lost several months ago, so we need to establish a new one.

The summer reading club, READY...SET...READ continues with over 550 children registered. It's still not too late to get in on the festivities.

If you have a pre-schooler who is not yet old enough for the summer reading club, but feels left out watching big brother or big sister, bring him or her to the pre-school story time on Thursday morning at 10:00. This is their own very special time of videos, books and activities.

New books this week include Lucille's Car Care by Lucille Treganowan. Treganowan, who worked her way up from bookkeeper into the auto repair business, gives us the lowdown on the basics of auto maintenance and repair. This guide is complete with checklists and illustrations, using simple terms and analogies from everyday life, in a fun and accessible way.

Don't let the fact that she's a woman get in your way. Lucille Treganowan now operates two Transmissions by Lucille shops and stars in her own cable TV show.

The Wall Street Journal says of her, "Behind the Mary Wofort facade is the soul of a teenage muscle car fanatic who barrels through the Pittsburgh in a souped-up 1987 Buick Park Avenue with 106,000 miles on it."

When I first read descriptions of Falling Up by Shel Silverstein I was, frankly, unimpressed. "Poems and drawings, for children and grownups, celebrating strange characters and experiences" didn't sound very interesting. When I saw the book I realized the description did not do the book justice.

This is a light-hearted, humorous, slightly off-the-wall look at life and everything in it, and many of the poems are defined by the delightful line drawings that illustrate them. In remembrance of too many family reunions this summer and the cousins we met there, I would like to share one of Mr. Silverstein's poems with you. Too bad you can't see the picture that goes with it.

THEY SAY I HAVE...
They say I have my father's nose,
My grandpa's eyes,
My mother's hair.
Could it be that my behind's
The only thing that's really mine?

Hints from Heloise

Dear Readers: Now that the dog days of summer are nearing, all of us who own dogs should think of keeping them cool. They feel as uncomfortable as we do, even more so if they are "outdoor" dogs.

Bonnie Beard, from Convoy, Ohio, sent a darling photo of her beautiful golden retriever, Dusty, lounging in his own plastic pool.

Some dogs absolutely love water! One of my assistants has a dog who jumps right in her pool and gets close to the sprinkler, running around as it turns. This dog is no dummy, as he knows how to keep cool.

People have written that letting their dogs use a small wading pool during the hot summer seems to keep them from digging up the yard.

Here in south Texas the summers are really "dog days" and I'm sure outdoor dogs suffer from the heat. We'd love to hear from readers with their "Dogs Summer Fun" stories and what they do to help keep their pets cool. — Heloise

GARDENING TIP

Dear Heloise: Newspaper is great, for easy weeding. Cover weeds with plenty of newspaper and weigh down with a few heavy rocks. Poke holes and plant your plants. Cover entire surface with smaller rocks or bark. — Vicki Swehla, Rockwall, Texas

STAY ALERT

Dear Heloise: Have you ever thought about people who could have access to your name and address when you leave your mail face-up in your vehicle?

It only takes a second to turn it over or cover it with a paper, towel, cap or whatever. — A Reader, Minnesota

It's a shame that we all have to be on alert, but your hint can help others. Thanks for writing. — Heloise

REPAIR PURSE

Dear Heloise: I came up with this while I was in a hurry. I was on my way out when the snap of my purse tore off.

I quickly opened my sewing box and came across some self-sticking fabric squares. I stuck one piece on the purse flap and the other on the body of the purse for a quick fix! — Margie Franco, Artesia, N.M.

TELEVISION GUIDE

Dear Heloise: I always look through the television guide on Sunday to see what educational shows are on that I want to be sure to watch. I keep a highlighter handy and highlight them in the guide so I don't forget to tune them in. — Mary C., Columbus, Ohio

CLOTHES HANGERS

Dear Heloise: The best use of cardboard rolls that come inside toilet paper and wax paper is to slit them lengthwise and put them over wire hangers. Staple or tape securely.

They prevent creases in shoulders. Pants stay neat when hung on the crossbar. — Janis in San Antonio

TRAVEL

Dear Heloise: Here is a travel tip. Postcards are fun to receive. To save time, ask family members to give you a few of their return-address labels.

When traveling, all you have to do is stick one on your card, jot a few lines and mail.

Quick and easy, which means you will take the time to do it, and you won't have to drag the address book along on your trip. — Shirley Divalbliss, Hagerstown, Md.

— YOUR EYES —

Eye Pain

What does it mean if your eyes hurt? What should you do about it?

Surprisingly, a sudden, sharp pain is most often harmless, merely a cramp or spasm in an eye muscle. Ease the discomfort with a warm compress for a few minutes. But if the discomfort continues or gets worse, there may be a foreign body lodged in the cornea. See your eye doctor promptly.

Dull, continuous pain—the kind that feels like a finger pressing on the eyeball—calls for early evaluation. It may indicate acute glaucoma or another disorder.

Scratchy pain is more common, with several possible causes. There may be a mild infection or something caught in the cornea. See your optometrist right away. If you wear contact lenses too much or in low-humidity situations. Remove the lenses for a few days and see the eye doctor.

TIMETABLE

somes fall where they may.
 *Four months before: Hunt down wedding clothes.
 Keep posterity in mind. That lime-green cummerbund that is the latest thing for the trendy groom may make your children and grandchildren laugh themselves into a broken rib. People who got married in the '70s know this all too well, having wed in an era when a powder-blue tux was hot stuff.
 *Three months before the wedding: Assemble a wedding party. Clothe them. Perform this procedure in the proper order, since it's considered inappropriate to choose as a maid of honor your former college suitemate, a perfect size 10, over your twin sister.
 Assume a relaxed attitude about clothes. Any bride or groom with more than two attendants is bound to pick a style that looks dreadful on some of them. Unless you are so laid-back that you can mention to your bridesmaids that it would be nice if they could show up for your wedding in the pink dress of their choice wearing shoes, accept the Unbecoming Law as an unfortunate reality.

 *Two months before the wedding: Invite some people.
 Choose guests who have actually laid eyes on the bride or groom since they entered elementary school. Otherwise, the happy couple will spend half of the reception whispering things like, "Who was that man in the purple suit?" when they should be dancing.
 *Six weeks before the wedding: Plan your honeymoon, or getaway, or whatever you call it.
 Pick a place where you can (a) speak the language, (b) eat the food and (c) return with enough money to take a taxi home from the airport.
 The day itself: Wed.
 Have bliss. This will best be accomplished by observing the following rules:
 Never discuss politics, sex or ex-spouses with anyone.

Be punctual. Worrying that your intended has left you tapping your foot at the altar makes any bride or groom cranky.
 Don't squash slices of the cake into your spouse's face. Or threaten him or her with the cake knife.
 Keep a straight face during the toast.
 Never make finger horns behind the back of your mate's head while the formal portrait is being taken.

Mercer selected as member of TALL leadership program

Jeff Mercer of Hereford, has been selected to be a member of the next class of the Texas Agricultural Lifetime Leadership Program. Jeff is among thirty men and women from across the state to be accepted into the next class of TALL. The program is eight years old, and has provided leadership training to 103 individuals from throughout Texas.

 The Texas Agricultural Lifetime Leadership Program is designed to build the next generation of leaders in Texas. The program exposes young Texas leaders to people, ideas and issues they may not otherwise encounter, and helps them broaden their understanding of local, state and national systems, Dr. Dick Cummins, TALL director, said.

Additionally, TALL provides training in communication skills and other areas of personal development.
 "True leadership is the pivotal force in business today. There are many challenges facing business and agriculture in the 90's and beyond," Cummins said. "Challenges such as regulations, globalization, new technologies, new financial climates and more. For creative solutions to become a reality, they must be developed, accepted, put into practice and given a proper chance to work. That's the role of leadership," he said.

Two years of extensive training are required as part of the leadership program. Participants attend 9 seminars on various issues within the state, a national seminar in Washington, D.C., and an out-of-state seminar. Class members also will be able to study the global implications of agriculture and other business interests by participating in an international study tour.

"The applicants for TALL V were all talented agricultural people," Cummins said. "The competition was strong and it was difficult determining the class participants. We are thrilled with the calibre of young men and women chosen to make up this class."
 Other participants from the area include Troy Dodd of Canyon and Coby Gilbreath of Dimmitt.
 Besides making the time commitment, participants also must pay a $1,500 tuition fee, with other participant costs coming from private contributions to the program.

In each location, participants will study the economy and industry of that area and subjects that might encumber area business. Issues include water control, environment, food safety, animal welfare, education and other social issues.

THE GROWING CHALLENGE

(Last of three parts)

There is a strong sense of accomplishment in growing an idea into a profitable business. However, there are many pitfalls that can spoil our progress and limit our success. The purpose of this three-part series is to guide you safely along the path toward growth.

In part one, I identified barriers to building a growing concern. In part two, I detailed how to lay a solid foundation for growth. In this, the final part of the series, I will focus on shortcuts that will help you achieve rapid growth.

Accelerating Growth

- Hire people who know more than you do. Sam Walton became the richest entrepreneur in the United States by hiring brilliant business specialists. President

Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote his name indelibly in world history by relying on his "brain trust." Despite the obvious common sense in this approach some small-business owners are reluctant to hire smart. Perhaps they feel that someone smarter may learn their trade secrets and later become their competitor.

The best advice to hire well, give them lots of responsibility (delegate), pay them fairly and make them stakeholders in your company. You'll get back more than you give up.

- Build a power position in the market place. A power position is a business area where you can offer benefits and advantages to your customers that no one else can match. To achieve this district advantage you must know both your customers and competitors very well. You can establish many positioning strategies, however, the most effective are those which focus on meeting customer's needs and wants, and exploiting your competitor's weaknesses.

- Watch your overhead costs. You can either outsmart our outspend your competitors.

Wait as long as possible before adding overhead costs. Out source labor, skills and specialties until your growth creates full-time need. Ask yourself three questions before you buy new equipment, vehicles or fixtures. First, "Do we really need this?" Second, "Can we by serviceable items used?" Third, "Could we postpone purchasing these items by renting or borrowing short-term?"

- Seek outside advice. It is often wise to seek the counsel of trusted advisers before making growth decisions. In our first retail business, our banker was a trusted, objective ally. Because we had a very good working relationship, he would ask tough questions and help us think through tough decisions.

Other good sources include Small Business Development Centers, Certified Public Accountants and business consultants. Before you hire anyone, outline your expectations and know the costs involved.

- Swim with the current. It is easier to grow your business if you understand and capitalize on current business and consumer trends. You can only spot consumer trends by being close to consumers. Your own customer base is a great place to start.

- Find accessible customer clusters. If you need more customers to expand, try to find groups or clusters that you can target easily. For example, as I market this column I would use my time more effectively searching for newspaper publishers who own more than one newspaper.

- Develop and use key contracts. Harvey Mackay recommends a rolodex. I use topical files. Others collect business cards. Whatever your method, use these key contracts to network and grow your business.

- Think "better" not bigger. Better businesses grow. If not in sales volume, certainly in profit value and longevity. The fastest growing companies in America got good before they got big. You can, too!

If you missed any part of this series, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Growing Challenge, c/o Don Taylor, PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105. We'll send you a copy of all three parts.

Elegant columns are set off from the foyer, while arched windows in the dining room and in the bedroom across the hall echo the detailing of the covered front porch.

Straight ahead, the family room displays a wall of French doors that overlook a covered back porch and a large deck. With its raised brick hearth, the fireplace is a fitting centerpiece of the room. There are built-in shelves and cabinets to the right of the fireplace and a plant shelf above them.

A curved island snack bar connects the gourmet kitchen to the sunny breakfast area, which features a 15-foot vaulted ceiling with skylights.

A country flair graces the facade, which features dormer windows set into a simple roofline, columned arches framing the railed front porch and shuttered windows.

All the other rooms have 9-foot ceilings. A nearby computer room is a spot for surfing the Internet and keeping up with business.

The master bedroom has a window arrangement overlooking the backyard. The private bath includes a dual-sink vanity and a floor-to-ceiling storage unit with a built-in chest of drawers. Other extras include a step-up spa tub and a separate shower.

Home improvement may be job for contractor, or do-it-yourselfer

For AP Special Features
If you're handy, you can probably do home improvements or home repairs yourself - but should you?

To avoid having do-it-yourself become botch-it-yourself, consider the following factors before tackling any good-sized project:

- Check your local building code and ordinances. Some or part of your project may require that the work be done by licensed professionals.

- Some jobs require special tools. Though you may be able to rent tools, a professional already owns them - and knows how to use them.

- It can take quite a bit of study to equal a professional's knowledge of materials such as lumber, roofing, tiling, plumbing and heating.

- Time is an important factor. You may, for example, feel competent to remodel your kitchen. But if you can work only on weekends, the project may take months to complete. Can your family do without full cooking facilities for that long?

Farm and Ranch

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - AG
The 1990 Farm Bill mandated that all producers that are Farm Service Agency borrowers (formally FmHA) go through training in financial management. The requirements were implemented in the spring of 1994.

The regulations state that any FSA borrower (direct or guaranteed) receiving a new loan, renewing a loan or restructuring/reamortizing a loan, is required to complete the training within two years of the loan servicing date or else they are no longer eligible for FSA program benefits.

The only exception is if a borrower can demonstrate that they have had previous equivalent formal training. This requires a college transcript showing course in accounting, agricultural financing or farm management.

The regulations specified that the training provider be certified by the FSA state office. We, in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, applied and received this certification on August 1, 1994, as part of a consortium composed of TAEX, a network of community colleges and Texas Rural Communities, Inc.

When the program was first initiated, there was not a lot of interest or pressure on borrowers, so little attention was given to the program. As borrowers begin to realize that their time is running out and that the requirement is not going to be dropped, interest in the program has increased.

In our area, the consortium is using South Plains College in Levelland as the community college to provide this training. Ron Presley is program coordinator for the program at SPC. This week, I visited with Ron about the program. He stated that if enough producers were interested he could arrange to conduct a program in our county. The program is called "Bottom Line Farming."

It offers 36 hours of training in the following topics: Characteristics associated with farm and ranch problems; Family and business goals and priorities; Record keeping and farm/ranch accounting; Financial statements as a system; Balance sheets; Income statement and statement of owner equity; Cash flow budgeting and the statement of cash flow; Financial analysis; Understanding and working with lenders; Legal aspects of borrowing; Strategic management issues; Evaluations and two discussion panels.

Although the program is certified for FSA borrowers, it offers an excellent opportunity for all agricultural producers to improve and sharpen their management skills.

We are currently investigating the feasibility of offering this course in the Deaf Smith County area. Cost of the course will vary depending on enrollment, but cost should be between $300-$400, which includes all materials.

Producers interested in taking this course are asked to please call the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at (806) 364-3573. Questions concerning this course should also be directed to the extension office. Think rain. See you next week.

Wheat harvest continues

As the straw flies out of the back of the combine, Larry Walterscheid cuts a circle of wheat in the 100 acre field off of County Road 10, north of town, owned by Mark Nichols. The wheat harvest in Deaf Smith County began in early June. As of midweek, 60-70 percent of the harvest was completed. Yields are low mainly because of the severe drought.

Farmers expect low wheat yields

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

While wheat prices are their highest in more than 25 years, farmers are expecting low yields from their crops. And that means not much profit for farmers.

However, most agriculturists predicted it.

"We knew it was going to be a weak harvest," Fritz Backus, assistant manager of Hereford Grain Corp., said.

Fred Morris, a Deaf Smith County farmer, agreed that it was a bad year for wheat farmers.

"It's been a bad year all the way around," he said.

In Deaf Smith County, the wheat harvest began in early June. That's two weeks earlier than normal, Backus said.

He said wheat yields are down considerably. Most of the irrigated fields have been yielding 30-35 bushels per acre, whereas in a normal year, these fields would yield 60-70 bushels per acre.

Dryland fields have been yielding 4-5 bushels per acre. These fields usually yield 20-30 bushels in a good year, he said.

"I've heard yields of 10-35 bushels per acre on irrigated fields," Morris said. "The highest I've seen is 35."

He said most of the dryland fields were not worth cutting. Some farmers plowed their fields under and planted maize.

This year's low yields are the result of poor weather conditions.

The drought, which has lasted several months, greatly affected the wheat yield during the grain fill period. Farmers could not keep their fields wet enough, Backus said.

"We can't raise wheat without water," Morris said. It is too expensive to keep irrigation water on the wheat crop. Even though prices are high, it is not cost-effective production, he said.

"Put a pencil to it and it won't add up," Morris said.

A freeze in mid-April, high winds and hail compounded the problem. Some farmers reported 90-95 loss, Backus said.

"It (dryland wheat) would not be cut if the prices weren't high," he said.

The price of wheat is $5.50 per bushel. Last year, wheat sold for $3.50-$3.60 per bushel, he said.

"The potential for high yields wasn't out there," Backus said. "That's why we have high prices."

He said this year's wheat price can't compare to past years.

"In fact, I don't remember it being this high," he said, "and I've been here 25 years."

While the amount of irrigated wheat to be harvested cannot be estimated, less than 2,000 acres of dryland wheat is expected to be harvested. As of Wednesday, 60-70 percent of the wheat in the county has been harvested, he said.

Hereford Grain Corp. has opened only 13 of their 19 grain elevators this year because of lower acreage harvested and lower yields.

Backus expects to receive about

1-1/2 million bushels of wheat into these elevators. Normally, 2-2-1/2 million bushels are received.

Morris, who was helping cut wheat on the Mark Nichols farm, said several farmers were working together to harvest their wheat fields. They get two or three combines, tractors, grain buggies and trucks to haul grain and go to work, he said.

"It takes just as many people to run one machine as it does two," he said.

The wheat harvest should be finished by June 25. Usually farmers are still in the fields on the 4th of July, Backus said.

Hereford FFA attends leadership conference

Nine members of the Hereford FFA chapter were among 200 FFA members from the Texas South Plains and Panhandle who attended the annual Area I FFA Leadership Conference.

The conference, hosted by Clarendon College and conducted by veteran officers and formers, is intended to help members develop skills in communication, team building and people management.

"We believe that the true strength of any organization is at the local level, so our objective has been to give members tools to be effective in building local chapters," Jeremy Derington, Area I FFA president, said.

Derington, who heads the six-member officer team which puts on the conference, said that the officers chose the theme, "Building the Future--Tools for You" with that philosophy in mind.

"We're trying to help chapter leaders be bigger and better contributors to their local chapters, schools and communities," Derington said. The Hereford chapter was represented by Julie Schlabs, Jeramie Smithy, Lindsay Ward, Cassie Abney, Amy Killingsworth, Zack Wall, Stephen Wheeler, Zachary Vasek and Darrin Gilley.

The area conference is a joint effort of the Area I FFA and the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo which provides financial underwriting for the project.

The Area I FFA Association is one of ten such regional organizations in the state and includes more than 4,000 members in a 38-county region across the panhandle and cross plains.

Agriculture Briefs

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - Commercial growers of sweet potatoes in northeastern Louisiana are having to fight a pest that has plagued farmers in southern parts of the state for years.

The sweet potato weevil was discovered last year in limited numbers in a 17-parish area. The state Department of Agriculture is instituting a mandatory spraying program for the pest.

In northeastern Louisiana, the sweet potato crop in 1995 was valued at $23 million and, with more value added in processing and sales, the Agriculture Department estimates its total value at about $50 million.

A quarantine could be imposed if the infestation becomes major, said John Barnett, a farm agent in Ouachita Parish.

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) - A potentially catastrophic barley disease has been identified in Idaho for the first time. Rust race 24 was found this week in Nez Perce County, and farmers were urged to begin spraying fungicide immediately. County Extension Agent Larry J. Smith is concerned because none of the commercial spring barley varieties currently grown in the field have resistance.

The disease is known to spread in cool, damp weather and can result in crop losses as high as 40 percent after the first year.

Validation set for Thursday

Steer validation is set for Thursday, June 27 at 9:00 a.m. at the FFA Project Center. All 4-H and FFA members with steers must be present for validation. All steers must be validated no later than June 30. The cost for supplies is $5 per steer. Contact the County Extension Office if you have any questions.

Touched by an Angel concept popping up in new fall shows

By Amy Hibbert

©TVData Features Syndicate

CBS' Touched by an Angel experienced such a miracle in the ratings this year, it's getting a new time slot and influencing new fall shows.

This lighthearted drama, which stars Della Reese and Roma Downey as two angels who help people through difficult crossroads in their lives, had a rocky start when it first premiered in the fall of 1994. And there was little hope when it moved to Saturday nights for the new season.

But this year a miracle occurred. The show started the 1995-96 season in 52nd place in the Nielsen ratings, but ended up in 34th by the end of the traditional season. And the ratings may rise more this fall when the show moves to Sunday nights.

The recent increase in people's fascination with angels and what they represent seems to have gained a larger audience for the show.

"There's a great interest right now in the whole culture in angels. Angels are in right now, and this show is part of that," comments Bishop William Boyd Grove of the Albany, N.Y., area United Methodist Church.

Grove says he believes the growth of the series' viewers indicates a spiritual hunger.

"It's a response to people's spiritual yearning and a yearning for the feeling that we are not alone in the world," he theorizes. "People face a lot of problems personally as they always have and I think they find comfort in believing that there are spiritual resources that will care for them and support them."

Karen Goldman, the author of The Angel Book: A Handbook for Inspiring Angels, agrees that people, especially at difficult points in their lives, need to believe there is someone to lend them a helping hand.

"And angels are a very easy thought to hold on to. Angels are the most non-threatening, pure, caring image we can think of," she says.

Goldman says she also believes seeing these angels in human form on the show can make viewers feel good about themselves, too.

"It sort of reminds you that you can have these attitudes that are angelic, you can act as an angel and feel the same compassion an angel feels, and you can be as mindful of the goodness of life as an angel can."

This main idea of helping others in the program is a concept shared by some of the new fall shows.

Home of the Brave, scheduled to air this fall on CBS, follows the story of a family who experiences great misfortune when the father loses his job. But they decide to turn this into an opportunity to discover America.

They pack up the truck and head out in search of a new job, encountering many different people along the way.

This opportunity has a powerful effect on their lives and on the lives of the people they meet. CBS calls this show, which stars Gerald McRaney and Wendy Phillips, a spinoff of Touched by an Angel.

CBS' Early Edition, also scheduled to air this fall, stars Kyle Chandler as a young man who suddenly starts receiving tomorrow's newspaper a day early.

He decides to use this opportunity for good and make a difference in other's lives. Shanesia Davis and Fisher Stevens also star as his good friends.

And ABC gets in the act with Dangerous Minds, scheduled to air this fall. This drama, inspired by the 1995 movie, stars Annie Potts as an ex-Marine who becomes a dedicated teacher. She struggles to make a positive difference in the lives of her students.

Della Reese (left) and Roma Downey star in Touched by an Angel as heavenly helpers who assist people through life's difficulties. The CBS drama, whose ratings have risen since it was moved to Saturdays, gets a new time slot and some company this fall, as more shows with uplifting themes join the networks' lineups.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ June 23-29 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
You'll be at your most productive the first part of the week, so try to get important tasks out of the way early on. A loved one will need your support with a sensitive problem. If you feel compelled to give honest advice, do it without sounding like you're giving a lecture.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
The simple things in life will give you the most pleasure — especially if you're a parent. You won't need anything fancy to keep you happy. At work, a lesson may be learned the hard way. Think of it as a learning experience, not as a failure. A loved one needs your support.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Release your hidden talents and you will have much to gain. Don't be afraid to show off a little bit. It will only work in your favor. Seek professional advice before entering into any long-term financial agreements. There may be some important facts you need to know. Keep alert.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
When it comes to work decisions, take your own advice. Watch what you say when you're around sensitive loved ones. Something that starts off as a joke could end up being the cause of a fight. Work out the wrinkles before initiating a large project. Keep an eye on details.

LEO - July 23/August 23
An untraditional approach to an upcoming social event will work best. You'll realize that a little creativity can work wonders. Be cautious to whom you divulge important information — especially in the workplace. A new friend does something to turn you off.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Feeling a little burnt out lately? A change of scenery may bring back your enthusiasm. Even if it's a short trip, new environs will work wonders for your psyche. Go for quality rather than quantity when shopping later in the week. Take a Scorpio's advice with a grain of salt.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Forgetfulness could cause you to do some backtracking and could lead to double work. Avoid it by making a "to-do" list for yourself. Your imagination and creativity will give a project some extra flair. Put in the extra time so you can really work some magic. A romantic weekend will put you in a relaxed frame of mind.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Don't give in to your emotions — especially if they are feelings of jealousy. Be reasonable and look at the big picture. A lucky break will finally put an ongoing situation to an end. You'll feel a weight off your shoulders. A problem at work offers an interesting challenge.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Look at lessons from the past to help with a decision for your future. Try to cheer up — rather than crying with — a friend who's down in the dumps. At home, you'll find you have more time than usual. Take advantage of it and tackle some household projects.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Keep track of valuables or something you cherish could be gone for good. A problem with a love interest could be solved easily if you're willing to listen. Keep an open mind. An upcoming trip gives you a lot to look forward to. Think ahead for creative ways to make the best of it.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Another Aquarian may be the cause of aggravation this week — especially if (s)he is a romantic partner. If you're trying to win a battle, it's best to start up again next week when you'll have more energy to deal with problems. If your body is telling you to relax, listen up!

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Don't accept invitations unless you know you can go. Your reputation for being unreliable will only prove true once again. A little extra time later in the week will give you a chance to relax. Enjoy it while you can. A Taurus may try to influence you in a negative way. Stand your ground!

Mummies galore on cable this week

Mummies — the desiccated and preserved bodies of the dead — both fascinate and repel us.

"If you say 'mummies' or 'Egypt,' people will watch it," Egyptologist Catharine Roehrig says with a laugh.

Roehrig, associate curator of Egyptian Art at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, says we are naturally interested in other cultures' ideas about how the human spirit continues to exist.

"The fact that Egyptians made mummies, preserving the body, was because they believed in a material after-life," Roehrig says.

These ancient "mummifiers" are the subject of a showy A&E documentary, Mummies, airing in two parts, Sunday and Monday, June 23 and 24.

The four-hour presentation goes beyond mummification, devoting an hour each to the pyramids, King Tutankhamen's tomb and the sacred texts written in hieroglyphs.

In showing how the Egyptians gave physical form to their religious beliefs,

Mummies captures the red and gold desert sun at Giza, where the Great Sphinx gazes east and extravagant objects were buried with kings and queens for their use in the afterlife.

But it is still the mummies that draw our attention.

Also on Sunday, National Geographic Explorer presents "Mummy Hunters" on TBS. Four segments take viewers from Peru to Siberia, visiting an Egyptologist who actually mummifies a body and people who have their pets made into mummies.

"Mummy Hunters" opens with the remarkable discovery in 1995 of the 500-year-old frozen body of a young girl. Found at the icy top of Mount Ampato in the Peruvian Andes, the body is not technically a mummy, but the preserved remains offer valuable information about the Inca civilization.

"The Greeks, who we think of as our great predecessors, were very impressed with the Egyptians," says Egyptologist Ann Macy Roth of Howard University.

"They thought they were very antique, very civilized, but very weird."

SOAP TALK

Fan doesn't want Reva, Josh together

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: I like Guiding Light. I have watched the show for many years. I'm glad Reva (Kim Zimmer) is back. I knew all along she would return.

I read in your column that one lady was upset that Josh (Robert Newman) and Reva were not back together. She threatened to stop watching the show.

I don't think Reva should go back to Josh. He insulted her very badly at the New Year's Eve party. Besides, Josh is boring. Reva and Alan (Ron Raines) are much more fun. They are a little bit on the wild side. Buzz (Justin Deas) is OK, but not as much fun as Alan. -R.G.M., Laredo, Texas

Dear Reader: The pairing of Reva and Buzz is more interesting every day. Alan makes a great foe for the duo. Who knows; Alan may still win Reva's heart someday.

Dear Candace: I have watched The Young and the Restless for a little over a year.

I have watched it because I was impressed with the professional way they have handled some of life's issues, including domestic violence and AIDS.

However, recently I have been appalled by the way they have portrayed Dr. Reid (Aaron Lustig), a therapist on the show.

He has been cast as a weak person and certainly has not conducted himself as a professional. He has accepted gifts from his clients and was seduced in his client's home.

He mentioned that this was not ethical, but I am amazed that the writing staff of the soap has so little respect for the counseling profession.

I hope many professionals will register a complaint. -Mary Owensby, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dear Reader: Y&R wasn't writing about the counseling profession as a whole, only about Dr. Reid and Phyllis (Michelle Stafford).

The story was more centered on Phyllis and the way she uses men to get what she wants. But it didn't work this time, because in the end Dr. Reid came clean.

Automaking industrialist Henry Ford was born in 1863, the same year the roller skate was patented and the Battle of Gettysburg fought.

An entry fee of one shilling was charged at the first amateur tennis tournament in Wimbledon, England, in 1887.

Texas-born and -educated Barry Corbin (Northern Exposure) took up acting so he could play cowboys in the movies.

Tennis great Martina Navratilova competed at Wimbledon 22 times. She was the tournament's singles champion six times.

CHITTER CHATTER

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - When George Strait doffs his cowboy hat for a baseball cap, he wants to be plain old dad.

The country singer went incognito - sunglasses and cap - to see his 15-year-old son, George "Bubba" Strait Jr., compete in team-roping events at the Texas High School Rodeo Association finals.

"He wanted to be just a dad this week," said Cindy Hendley, who handled publicity for last week's competition. "He asked for no special treatment, and he got none."

When one enthusiastic fan tried to take Strait's picture, a couple kids stood up and blocked the shot.

"He's here as George Strait the father, not George Strait the singer," said ticket-taker Julie Bryant, adding Strait himself purchased tickets for every performance. Bubba was not among the top 10 finishers.

Strait's hit "Check Yes or No" won best single Monday at the TNN Music City News Country Awards.

NEW YORK (AP) - For the love of his art, Billy Zane got pumped up, beefed up and squeezed into a skintight fuchsia bodysuit.

The 30-year-old actor, best known for his role as the psycho killer in "Dead Calm," spent seven weeks in costume in the jungles and beaches of Thailand playing the comic-strip legend "The Phantom."

"It tended to get very sweaty," Zane said in the June 24 issue of People magazine. "But you sacrifice for your art. I just hoped that I didn't get a weird rash."

Zane said he bulked up to about 215 pounds, then lightened the load by shaving his head.

"You drag the Bic (razor) across your face, then your neck and then your skull," he said. "It seems so natural, so aerodynamic."

NEW YORK (AP) - Maybe Kristen Johnson can pull off playing the gruff, smart-alecky alien Valkyrie on "3rd Rock From the Sun" because she knows alienation.

"I was 5-foot-11-1/2 at age 13," the 28-year-old actress said in the June 21 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "I was enormous, a monstrosity, a freak. I've always been an outsider."

Thanks to the NBC sitcom, Johnson is honing in on being insider

- she'll appear this fall in the Disney movie comedy "Grosse Pointe Blank" and an NBC adaptation of Neil Simon's "London Suite."

"Kristen is Harrison Ford in a dress," said Terry Turner, the show's executive producer. "She can put them down like a man, but there's no mistaking she's a woman."

The meticulously manicured, weed-free crabgrass-proof lawn is largely a modern phenomenon. In the mid-1800s, when American novelist Nathaniel Hawthorne visited England—where the rage for solid-green lawns was in full bloom—he was distressed by the vista's artificiality and pretension. He wrote home that he longed for the more natural American front yard, rich in its varieties of weeds, nettles, clovers, and dandelions.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Al and I returned Saturday from a wonderful vacation. We went to Albany, Oregon, for our grandson, Jared Shuttlesworth's graduation from high school. This was a special joy for us since Jared was in Hereford School's LD classes. He was recognized and awarded an award from the Albany Rotary Club for the student who overcame more obstacles to graduate. We were also at Indio, Calif., for a few days. The temperature reached 118 degrees one day. Where landscaping is done and cared for is beautiful but where the desert sand is, is terrible. One good thing when we got back to Hereford, things looked great. Not so brown and burned as we expected. No place like home!

We are organizing our S.A.L.T. Council with the TRIAD program. Some of you heard or remember the Attorney General visiting us and initiating this program in our area. S.A.L.T. means Seniors and Lawmen Together. This program is to help combat the problem of SCAMS in our area, those who take advantage of our Seniors. We are all excited about this program. You will be hearing more soon. We certainly appreciate our Sheriff's Department and Police Department.

Thanks to all who have mailed in or come by the center and paid your membership dues.

Thanks to you who have participated in the giving program through special categories in the membership fees:

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

How delightful are summer days! The trees and grass have fresh green beauty, flowers lift their faces for the sun's brightest rays. We have picnics, boating, beaches, walking, sunning or doing nothing. We have beautiful sunsets, cool dawns and summer breezes.

Our country is festive for the Fourth of July with activities planned for everyone. Check the Activity Calendar and come join the fun. We will have an ice cream social the 4th with games and visiting. There will be a Watermelon Feed with the games, also.

We are starting a study of Romans on our new Bible Study class, Thursday at 9:30 a.m. Pastor Bill Weaver will be the study leader. Our line dance and exercise classes have been canceled for the month of July so you can take part in a new activity.

Remember these words?....One Nation Under God....When you plan your 4th of July celebration remember the brave people who have given their tomorrow so we could have our today. They fought so this country might be free. Proudly display your flag and remember what that flag stands for and where it's been.

Making Christmas dolls

Rosalee and Jelly McGowen, who teach porcelain dollmaking at Hereford Senior Citizens Center, clean heads and body parts for porcelain dolls that will be used to decorate a tree this November at the annual Festival of Trees sponsored by the senior citizens. The McGowens teach the class to seniors, showing them how porcelain dolls are poured, fired, cleaned, fired, sanded, painted and fired before having bodies and clothing attached. Mrs. McGowen said the dolls they are making now will be the theme of a Christmas tree at the festival.

Stay active, connected to enjoy long life

HOUSTON -- Do you want to increase your chances of living a long, healthy life? Stay active and "connected."

"Exercise can help older people stay strong and guard against frailty. Even an activity as basic as walking maintains muscle mass and strengthens bones," said Dr. Robert Roush, an associate professor in the Huffington Center on Aging at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "Staying 'connected' to other people is another vital component of longevity."

Roush says that Americans are living longer than ever before and that focusing on "functional age" is the goal.

"This means we are staying active longer and increasing the quality of our lives as we get older," he said.

Advances in public health, breakthroughs in medical technology and better preventive health are cited by Roush as the major reasons for improved health later in life. A change in attitudes among the general public and those in the medical profession have contributed as well.

"People in their 70s and 80s are running and playing golf and tennis on a regular basis," Roush said. "These are not the types of things we always thought older people should be doing. But now it's clear that an active lifestyle is one of the keys to enjoying a long, healthy life."

Roush also advises not becoming isolated.

While the life span of human beings may never change much, steps can be taken to improve the quality of life during the later years.

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

How about this lovely weather?? Wasn't the rain wonderful!!

It seems that everyone has his mind on vacation. Margie and Al have had a well-deserved trip out west and northwest. We certainly hope they had a great time.

By the time you read this we will have been out to Albuquerque, N.M., for a 13th Air Force Reunion. Each year there are fewer of the fellows to show up from the old 9th Service Squadron. They manage to come from all over the U.S. -- New York, Tennessee, California, etc. and really enjoy each other.

Of course vacation puts a load on those left here at the Center. Each one able is urged to lend a helping hand whenever possible. Those on home deliveries could use occasional relief for a day off. Then we could use more help in the Thrift Store. That place is a pretty good money maker and the Center surely can use that. Ask Peggy or Clara or Alice about a time for you to be there. Every job done and any support given by the volunteers is appreciated.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I receive Social Security retirement benefits and still work. I heard the amount you can earn without reducing Social Security benefits recently changed. Is this true?

A: Yes. If you're 65 but not yet 70 and continue to work, you can now earn $12,500 in 1996 without reducing your Social Security retirement benefits. The new law does not change the 1996 earnings limit for workers who are under age 65 ($8,280).

Q: I need to call Social Security because I lost my Social Security card but I'm unable to get to a phone during the week during normal business hours. Can I get in touch with Social Security in the evening?

A: Yes, you can call Social Security's 24-hour toll-free number service. The number is 1-800-772-1213. Just listen to the pre-recorded message and select the number that directs you to get a replacement Social Security card.

Q: What's the earliest age at which a person can retire?

A: You can start your Social Security benefits as early as age 62, but the benefit amount you receive will be less than your full retirement benefit. If you are a widow or widower, you may qualify for a Social Security benefit on your deceased spouse's earnings record as early as age 60. If you'd like more information, call Social Security and request the publications Retirement.

Q: Recently, I began receiving a Social Security disability benefit. I also receive a disability benefit from a private disability insurance policy. Will the private policy affect my Social Security disability benefit?

A: No. Your eligibility for Social Security disability payments is not affected by any private insurance you may have. However, the amount of your benefit may be reduced if you get worker's compensations or certain other public disability payments.

Q: If you retire early (age 62), what do you do about health benefits since you have to be 65 for Medicare benefits?

A: When you retire at age 62, you may be able to continue to have medical insurance coverage through your employer or, if not, you should purchase coverage from a private insurance company until you turn 65 and become eligible for Medicare.

Nutrition Notes

Every year, more than 15,000 new products reach supermarket shelves, and they mean a bounty of potential dietary delights for consumers. The American Dietetic Association membership is encouraging consumers to "enjoy the variety of food choices," and to experiment with new foods as a way to build healthful eating habits.

Variety is not only the spice of life, it also adds zest to a healthful eating style. A great way to increase variety is to use the food label on packaged foods to find new products that contribute valuable nutrients to your diet such as fiber, calcium and other minerals and vitamins. If eating out, make a point of trying a new dish, or sharing one with a friend.

According to ADA's recent Nutrition Trends Survey, there are signs that Americans are using tools such as the new food label to build a healthful diet. Seventy-one percent pay at least somewhat close attention to nutrition facts information and, more significantly, 64 percent report having changed at least some items they purchase because of the label.

In addition, awareness of the Food Guide Pyramid -- the cornerstone of a healthful diet -- is up compared to a similar survey made in 1994. Statistics provided by Nancy Schwartz, Ph.D., R.D., the director of the National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics.

When it comes to boosting nutritional variety, consumers have a myriad of options. Supermarkets offer:

- *Many nutrient-modified versions of popular foods such as "low fat, calcium-fortified or high fiber" options

- *Increased ethnic food choices
- *Exotic fresh fruits, vegetables and grains

- *salad bars and fresh foods.

Restaurant menus and popular recipes for preparation at home reflect growing interest in new food choices, blending cooking styles and creating new taste sensations.

According to Schwartz, "It's important for people to understand that they don't need to give up their favorite foods to eat healthfully. Balancing out a variety of selections over the course of a day and week, with an emphasis on grain-based dishes and fruits and vegetable, is the best approach to eating. And even old favorites like pizza and hot dogs can fit in every now and then."

While American's efforts to eat healthfully may have reached a plateau, that can change when people understand how easy it is to eat right. One can eat healthfully simply by putting into practice the principles of balance, variety and moderation. Without significant sacrifices, you can eat right and improve your health, as well as reduce your risk for common nutrition-related diseases such as diabetes, cardiovascular disease and certain cancers.

Shared memories help video project

By JAMES HANNAH
Associated Press Writer
DAYTON, Ohio (AP)--As age creeps up, memories can fade. The good old days are forgotten.

Jogging-those memories can be powerful medicine for the elderly, says Ann Biswas, who has produced a series of documentary videos featuring older people reminiscing about their shared memories of those good old days.

"It used to be you didn't want older people living in the past. Nowadays, we realize how beneficial that is," she said.

Through sound and sight, the "In Times Past" video series awakens memories in the elderly, which in turn can stimulate their minds and their desire to socialize as they talk to each other about what they remember.

"Nothing really triggers a memory or inspires a memory better than hearing someone your age telling a story," she said.

The project is the brainchild of Biswas, an English professor and director of GHI Media Productions.

She collected old photos, film and period music from museums and libraries. The footage was then combined with a historical narrative peppered with interviews of older people sharing old memories.

The tapes have become popular at nursing homes and senior centers.

"It's just amazing to watch what happens," she said. "If a person can't see very well, the sound triggers it. If they can't hear very well, the archival photos trigger it. ... And socially it's wonderful because they can develop new friendships when they realize the shared past they have with each other."

Connie Hogan, 78, watched videos about old cars and early radio at the Lincoln Park Manor in suburban Kettering. The memories came flooding back.

"I seem to not remember things that happened last week," Hogan said. "So all of a sudden I can dig back into my past and remember things. It's amazing."

At 94, Ruby M. Eck treasures the memories the videos brought back for her.

"It's very mind-searching. ... It does you a lot of good," she said.

"That's what older people need - instead of just sitting, is that they have something to think about," she added.

The videos feature people from Dayton, Cincinnati and Columbus reminiscing about cars, boats, planes and radio.

Linda Schuler, director of the McDowell Senior Center in Columbus, said the videotapes have been used in a popular class which meets twice a month and draws 15 to 20 people.

"It sparks old memories they get to share that they might not otherwise remember," said Schuler. "It's a great feeling to recall a great old memory. It brings back a moment in time for you."

Betty Davis, senior program specialist for the Washington-based American Association of Retired Persons, said memory stimulation allows the elderly to "realize their lives have mattered."

"Often, for older people who have had a number of losses, it helps to share the meaningful things you have done and to laugh together and to see how far you have come," she said.

The videos, shown mostly at nursing homes, also have become a hit at some middle schools and high schools.

"The videos give the basic history of the period, and you get to hear history from the people who lived it," Biswas said.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) - Bumping up against 89 hasn't really slowed Benny Carter. Maybe it's that daily ritual of his.

"I get up around 8, fool around at the piano, have a dash of cognac before or after breakfast. My doctor prescribed it about 50 years ago," the 88-year-old jazz composer, instrumentalist, orchestra leader and arranger said in People magazine.

Two months shy of his birthday in August, Carter continues to produce some of the sweetest sounds ever to spring from an alto saxophone.

After premiering his orchestral tribute to Martin Luther King in Washington this month, Carter will tour Europe. The second volume of his swinging "Songbook" sessions with jazz vocalists is set for release in October.

"I'm getting lazier," he said, "but I'm still running and making dates."

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

Social Security touches the lives of almost everyone. Most people pay Social Security taxes during their working years, and then receive payments upon retirement. How much does the average person contribute to Social Security? How much does he or she receive in benefits? Let's take a look at how "Mr./Ms. Average Social Security" fares under Social Security.

In 1995, the average worker earned an estimated $24,825 and paid $1,899 in Social Security and Medicare taxes. He/she was one of about 141 million workers who paid Social Security taxes.

For 1996, the tax rate is 7.65 percent on earnings up to $62,700 and 1.45 percent on earnings above that for Medicare. For self-employed people, the tax rate is 15.3 percent, and 2.9 percent on earnings above $62,700 for Medicare, but they can deduct one-half of the self-employment tax when filing their income tax return.

The average wage earner who retires this year will receive an estimated $720 in monthly benefits. If he/she has a spouse who qualifies for benefits on his/her record, they will receive a total of $1,215 in benefits monthly. This benefit is equivalent to around 42% of the amount he/she was earning when working.

If Mr./Ms. Average Social Security become too disabled to work this year, he/she can receive $682 a month from Social Security. If he/she has dependents, the family can receive $1,148 monthly. This disability protection is equivalent to a $203,000 private insurance policy for a worker who has a spouse and two children.

The average worker can also count on benefits for his/her family if he/she dies. The survivors benefits are roughly equal to a life insurance policy of $295,000 for Mr./ms. Average Social Security's spouse and two children. Mr./Ms. Average Social Security's widow(er) and two children would receive an average of $1,407 a month in Social Security benefits if he/she died this year. If the surviving spouse is age 60 or older with no dependent children, the average monthly benefit would be $680 a month.

The figures above are for the "average" Social Security beneficiary who is making average wages. People who make less than the average would receive less in benefits, and people making more than the average would receive more.

You can find out approximately how much you have credited to Social Security and how much you can expect to receive in benefits. Just call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, and ask for a Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement request form.

Honest criticism is hard to take, particularly from a relative, a friend or an acquaintance or a stranger.

New book by Christian writer is sample notes

By ANNE MORRIS

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN -- Living quietly in a condo in Lakeway, Joyce Landorf Heatherley writes books and songs that speak to people's pain and rejection.

She estimates she has about 7 million copies of her inspirational and Christian books and audio tapes in print. (That's nowhere near Stephen King, who has upwards of 150 million in print, but it is considerably more than star memoirist Mary Karr, with 160,000 copies of "The Liar's Club" sold.) The Austin Public Library has seven of her books -- some under Landorf, some under Heatherley, and one translated into Spanish.

Her newest is "Special Words" (Moorings, $19.99), a book of sample notes to write when you don't know what to say. In this age of e-mail and fax, Heatherley believes that people appreciate handwritten notes more than ever. She's particularly good at suggesting words for difficult situations. It's an area she knows inside and out.

What do you write to a person going through a divorce? To a woman who has been diagnosed with breast cancer? To someone who has suffered terrible rejection? To a parent who has lost a child? To a family member with whom you want to make amends?

At 64, Heatherley has had all these experiences. She's also had a share of positive ones she deals with in the book: the pleasure of grandchildren, the thrill of accomplishment, the celebration of special events.

"I'm just a woman that a lot of things have happened to," she said. Sitting in her comfortably furnished condo near the tennis courts, you would not guess it. But the truth is, her life has changed.

Three years ago, she was diagnosed with two kinds of breast cancer, and the current prognosis is not encouraging. "It's aggressive," she said, "and probably (my time) is going to be shorter than I'd hoped. It could be in two or three years. I want to bring myself to closure and my family to closure. You take care of unfinished business." Hence, the book of notes -- some written to be sent, some written to be thrown away, to express feelings rather than to communicate them.

The story behind the person who wrote "Special Words" is more dramatic than the book itself. Her career began in California. Trained at Pasadena Playhouse, the daughter of an evangelical minister began by performing Christian music and speaking at numerous mother-daughter banquets. Later, she began to write books and regularly made the Christian booksellers' best-seller list with titles like "His Stubborn Love," "The Richest Lady in Town" and "Tough and Tender."

An article in The Dallas Morning News in 1985 described Joyce Landorf as "a superstar in evangelical circles for the last 10 years... (who) has written 20 books, recorded an album of songs and hosted a radio program... (and) has lectured in most major cities, including several appearances before Christian women's groups in Dallas."

The occasion of the article was her upcoming divorce and the reaction to it by a publisher. Because the subjects of many of her books and tapes were marriage and family issues, a divorce after 32 years of marriage derailed Landorf's career in Christian publishing. (Her husband Dick filed for divorce; she did not contest it.)

"Seven of my nine publishers dropped me instantly," she said. "I went from highly visible to invisible in a matter of two weeks in the middle-'80s.

"I knew that I was supposed to keep writing," she said. "So I just kept on."

She married a Texan two years after the divorce and lived in Mexia and Waco. In 1988, she and her husband, Doc Heatherley, moved to Lakeway. They started Balcony Publishing, which began putting out her books and tapes seven years ago and reports selling 210,000 books.

Asked if she makes a lot of money, Heatherley responds: "I used to."

Randall Trainer, owner of Lgoos Bookstore here, recalls that "when she divorced she was turned out of the Christian publishing world. It was horrible the way she was treated."

"There are many, many bookstores that carry my books now," Heatherley said. "But of the 7,000 Christian bookstores, about half of them refuse to carry them -- a very shocking blow. But I write now what I want to say, and the people still read me. Each and every bad thing that's ever happened to me turns out to be the thing I can write the best about."

One book, "Unworld People" (1987), describes what to do when your world seems to fall apart.

"There's a real market for books that are inspirational," Heatherley said. "I see some softening of the rigid line. I also see lay people deeply troubled and looking for answers ... I get a lot of mail from men and women in the throes of divorce and their church won't have them any more. Or they've been pulled out of the Sunday school class they were teaching ..."

"The people never stopped looking for me," she said. "I probably have a greater readership now because the people who read me live on this same plane."

Heatherley's living room holds an electric piano. She's just finished writing a song for her husband, Doc. "He'll probably play this at the funeral," she says, sitting down to sing and play:

"I'll be missing you ...
"I know you will miss me, too.
"I know Heaven is a wonderful place, it's true.
"But until we are together, with no more storms to weather,
"I'll be missing you."

Grandmother is backbone of literacy program

LINDA FRIEDLIEB
The Monitor (McAllen)

MISSION, Texas -- A silver-haired grandmother with a blue suitcase full of hefty books, note paper and writing utensils, Peg Oliver has hit every Hidalgo County community like a small but powerful whirlwind.

The suitcase has well-worn wheels and a handle Oliver uses to pull it from class to class, community to community. She gives her students both the physical tools and the support they need to learn.

Oliver, a petite 76-year-old, is the backbone of the Coalition for Literacy. Although the organization has a board of directors, Oliver develops the budgets, writes the grant proposals, teaches the classes and spouts statistics and anecdotes to support her one-woman crusade.

However, she plans to bring her literacy program to an end with her retirement in September.

"I can't do it alone," she said sadly. "I'm afraid something will happen to me and it will just stop."

A familiar figure to many, she stands up in public meetings to discourse on the problems of adult illiteracy and lack of education. She constantly seeks funds and energy to raise education levels.

Over the past 12 years, Oliver has contributed both her own cash and her own boundless energy in teaching uncountable classes to the county's large undereducated population. Some weeks, she teaches more than 10 classes.

"I don't want it to be about me. I want it to be about the unmet need," Oliver said. "A lot of the students will never get the (General Equivalency Diploma), but there is such a hunger to learn."

As she teaches a class at Mission's Speer Library, she keeps an attentive eye on her assistants and students. She is quick to help with a math problem or make suggestions about a writing exercise. She presents a certificate of accomplishment to one man who must leave to migrate north.

"They're so totally discouraged to start with," Oliver said, surveying more than a dozen students at work. "I've always been able to say, 'I'll be here when you get back.' Now I can't do that."

Oliver, a mother of eight, moved to the Rio Grande Valley to be near two of her daughters. She got her teaching credentials late in life, after first graduating college at 22 with a degree in drama.

"I didn't want to be a teacher because all my teachers in the '30s and '40s were unmarried single women," she said.

Now, she has two master's degrees and spends most of her time imparting knowledge. Her four daughters also became teachers.

Oliver's retirement career began in a church in Las Milpas, but spread quickly throughout the area. She taught wherever she could find space and students.

"I saw that the whole county had to be my beat. I was drawn to it," she said. "Within three years, I was in the whole county."

Mission resident Francisca Nino is one of the thousands Oliver has helped.

Dedicated to improving her lot, Nino said she sometimes studies all day to learn to write well in English.

She chooses to attend Oliver's classes because they focus on individualized attention, rather than forcing her to work at the pace of other students.

"I decided to ask for help," Nino said. "Other people told me that the class is difficult. But that's why we come back to take the classes."

As Nino completes sentence exercises and essays on assigned topics, she envisions a future in business school. But she does not know where she will continue studying when Oliver's classes end.

In Hidalgo County, 106,377 people over the age of 25 need some form of adult education. That represents 27.7 percent of the county's total population, according to statistics provided by the Region One Education Service Center.

Oliver is not the only provider of GED or literacy education. The Weslaco Library has hosted classes for the past eight years, but librarian Virginia Allain said funding is in jeopardy because of federal budget cuts. The Edinburg Library has a literacy component that trains tutors, but a long waiting list often greets interested students. Region One and the McAllen Literacy Center also provide some classes.

"For the most part, Peg Oliver is trying to do it single-handedly," Allain said. "There's a limit to how much one person can do. ... She's done a wonderful job, but the thing that has to happen is the agencies already in place -- Region One and the school districts -- have to take more responsibility in educating adults."

Allain said she worries about the future of her own library's literacy program, pointing out that if it falls at the same time as Oliver retires, few options will remain for adults hoping to improve their educational status.

"Our theory is a library is a place for books and reading. If you have people in the community who cannot read, then they cannot use your services," she said. "But we cannot neglect our other duties to do literacy education."

Oliver is trying to encourage school districts to pick up literacy education, and said she is getting more positive feedback than in previous attempts.

She continues teaching, serving almost 1,000 people a year in her multitude of classes. The names, addresses and phone numbers are recorded in a small ledger.

"I don't even count them. I pace myself," she said. "When I get tired,

I just veg out at home sometimes, watching old movies."

Oliver said she finds immense satisfaction in tackling the problem of illiteracy, and she plans to continue working on the problem, even after her September retirement. She hopes to consult with whatever organizations she convinces to follow in her footsteps.

"People say to me, 'God will bless you,'" Oliver said. "He blesses me every day."

Proofreader, columnist turns 101, has no plans to retire from her job

By TRACI CARL
Associated Press Writer
INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP)--
Audrey Stubbart holds down a full-time job as a proofreader and columnist for a daily newspaper in this Kansas City suburb.

To hear her tell it, it's no big deal. Other folks make a bit of a fuss. After all, not many people keep working into their second century.

As she approached her 101st birthday recently, she had no plans to retire from her job at The Examiner.

Although, she said, "Some morning I may get up, and I might call in and tell them this is it."

Her newspaper career began when she was 65, after the publishing house she was working for told her she had to retire. Before that, she and her husband had a sheep ranch in Wyoming, where she also taught school and raised five children.

"I don't like to waste time," she said.

Mrs. Stubbart's decision to stay employed into her second century has attracted international media attention. She says she has tired of all the hoopla.

"I don't like to be singled out and made special just because I'm 100," she said.

Jeff Fox, the paper's executive editor, said the staff planned a small celebration for Mrs. Stubbart's birthday. Last year, when she turned 100, the paper sponsored a party that was open to the public and attended by several hundred people.

"She'd prefer it that we treat her like everybody else," he said. "But we don't have anybody else who is 100."

Mrs. Stubbart said she didn't have big plans for her birthday. The celebration of her daughter's 60th wedding anniversary a few days before her birthday was already enough excitement.

She hitches rides to and from work with her co-workers and still lives in a house on the two acres that she picked out in 1944 while her husband went deer hunting in Wyoming.

Although she doesn't do as much gardening as she used to, she does let a man from the retirement home across the street keep a small garden in her yard.

Coral Beach, who works at the paper with Mrs. Stubbart, said she remembered when squirrels dug up several of her flower bulbs.

"She said she wished her sons hadn't taken her guns away because she'd go after those squirrels," she said.

Mrs. Stubbart, who keeps a small library on her desk, often calls over reporters to point out errors in their stories.

Fox said Mrs. Stubbart is a stickler for using words correctly. He says that's an invaluable trait.

"Sometimes you just want to say, 'Come on Audrey, typeset it and let's go,'" Fox said. "But you can't do that."

The topics of Mrs. Stubbart's weekly columns range from her thoughts on a speech to a different memories from her life. She's developed a small following.

"If we skip a week, we get calls," Fox said.

Age is a high price to pay for maturity.
