Few students pass new test

28 percent clear algebra exam

By PEGGY FIKAC Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Only 28 percent of Texas students passed the new Algebra I end-of-course test, and education officials said they are looking at pilot projects, a curriculum rewrite and teacher training to help improve matters. 'There is a lot to be done. I suppose at that low passing rate, I would at least be concerned about whether or not the test reflects what the kids are being taught," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Committee chairman. Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said Wednesday there may be "a disparity between what we're testing for and what the teachers think they're supposed to be teaching.

The algebra test results show a real need for improvement, according to Gov. George W. Bush. "Gov. Bush believes that the algebra results are unacceptable.... The school districts must do a better job to raise the algebra results," said Bush spokesman Ray Sullivan.

Education Commissioner Mike Moses didn't return a phone call from The Associated Press.

The TEA also released scores on the Biology I end-of-course test, showing 76 percent of the 202,061 students taking it passed.

Students who pass end-of-course tests in various subjects, beginning in 1998-99, will be exempt from having to pass the exit-level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills exam to graduate.

When state officials approve a math curriculum rewrite for lower grades, they hope to reinforce skills students will need for algebra, said Felipe Alanis, deputy education commissioner.

Teachers focus of new report

By DEB RIECHMANN AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Teachers as well as students must meet higher standards, according to a study that calls for an overhaul of the way the nation recruits, trains and rewards good teaching.

The report, issued today by the National Commission on Teaching and America's Future, said unqualified teachers are routinely recruited, teachers are not given adequate support once they're on the job and professional development is lacking.

"It seems our society does not place a premium on teacher salaries. If you want to get qualified people, you have to pay for them," said Peggy Jeens, a history and government teacher at Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, Va. "A man I know gets more to drive a beer truck than a new teacher does in many communities in Virginia.'

The report comes at a time when the Education Department projects the public school teaching force will grow from 2.8 million teachers in 1991 to 3.3 million by 2002.

Gerald Boardman, principal at Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Greenbelt, Md., said that as the demand for school teachers rises, it's getting harder to find good, qualified instructors. He's been looking for a physics instructor since May.

"The teachers I have are excellent, but if you lower your standards, the quality of schools will go down," Boardman said.

The report is the culmination of two years of work by a group of 26 policy-makers and educators. Support for the commission and its report came from the Rockefeller Foundation and Carnegie Corp.

"This is not a teacher-bashing report. It says the profession of teaching needs a lot of support," said Linda Darling-Hammond, professor at Teachers College, Columbia University and director of the commission.

The report calls on states to set high standards for teacher education and licensing and stop issuing emergency and substandard licenses. It also says professional development programs need to be expanded, young teachers should be mentored and school districts should spend more on teaching and less on administration.

"No more hiring unqualified teachers on the sly," the report says. "No more nods and winks at teacher education programs that fail to prepare teachers properly. No more tolerance for incompetence in the Implementing the commission's key recommendations would cost about $4.9 billion a year, much of it through reallocation of existing federal, state and local funds. The money would be used for recruiting teachers in high-need fields, teacher internships, mentoring support and professional development.

Christopher Cross, president of the Council for Basic Education, a nonprofit group that argues for rigorous liberal arts education, high academic standards and school reform, said the report was

"We can't expect the best from our young people if we don't have teachers who are masters of the subjects they teach," Cross said. 'States and districts must invent new ways to honor and reward excellent teachers."

Giuliani blasts new welfare legislation

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Plenty of Democrats don't like the new welfare law. Add to that list a prominent

Clinton Giuliani called the legislation a "massive unfunded mandate" that money than they need to carry out the bill's aims.

The president has been widely criticized - especially by liberal Democrats - for signing the welfare legislation, which is designed to cut federal spending by replacing the current Aid to Families with Dependent Children program with block grants to states.

It also caps lifetime welfare benefits at five years, ends benefits after two years for adults who do not go to work and restricts benefits for some legal immigrants.

The requirements I can support, and are steps in the right direction," Giuliani said. "But you have to support those steps with funding. If the federal government walks away from its responsibility, New York City can't.'

Meanwhile, two top officials at the resigned in protest.

Peter Edelman resigned as assistant secretary for planning and evaluation, and Mary Jo Bane quit her position as assistant secretary for the administration for children and family. Both will leave Sept. 28. They are the second and third to depart; last month, Wendell E. Primus resigned as the agency's deputy assistant secretary in the Office of Planning and Evaluation. He prepared a study that said the welfare legislation would plunge 1 million more children into poverty.

Primus worked for Edelman, who ine nusband of Ma Edelman, director of the Children's Defense Fund. She, like her husband, is a longtime friend of the Clintons, but a sharp critic of the new welfare

"I have devoted the last 30-plus years to doing whatever I could to help in reducing poverty in America," Peter Edelman said in a short memo to colleagues Wednesday. "I believe the recently enacted welfare bill goes in the opposite direction."

In a four-paragraph memo, Bane said: "My deep concerns about the welfare bill that the president signed on Aug. 22 have led me to conclude that I cannot continue to serve as assistant secretary."

Giuliani estimated that a shortage of day-care and job-training funding plus cuts in benefits for legal immigrants - could end up costing New York taxpayers between $500 agency that administers welfare million and $600 million.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: The two women in Washington, D.C., who were conned by the story about a stolen wallet are not alone. Con games have spread from large cities to small towns, and the stories are as varied as the storytellers.

I was approached in a grocery store parking lot by a man who said his battery was dead and he needed taxi money to get his ice cream home for his daughter's birthday party. I was parked: He wouldn't show me. container, but sad to say, I've gotten I hope this works. Another time, a man knocked on my door near midnight, claiming he was house-sitting for his grandmother down the block. He had just gotten home to find that his sister had wrecked his truck and asked if I would lend him $20 to have it towed. He offered to give me his grandmother's name and phone number so he could repay me in the morning. When he could not walk me to his grandmother's house and open the door, I suggested he try some other approach.

There is a sad change in the United States these days. America used to be a country of trusting, generous people. Then, some scum realized they could take advantage of our trust and generosity by making up sad tales. These days, there are too many fakers on the streets who could win an Academy Award. Those of us who used to be glad to help now won't give strangers the time of day.

I wish I had a solution, but I hope those who are really in need will understand when I turn away without listening to their story. I've been burned too often. -- Disillusioned in Durham, N.C.

Dear Durham: With so many excellent service agencies, there is no need to panhandle. I'm glad you

A few years ago, several women dressed as nurses used to approach people at O'Hare Airport and ask for donations. They held signs saying, "Mosquitoes spread AIDS. Can you help?" When one of those women followed me down the corridor, I told her mosquitoes do not cause AIDS and suggested that she get a legitimate job. I then issued a complaint with the airport authorities, and within a few days, the "nurses" were gone. That is what needs to be done.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife, "Nancy," abhors a vacuum -- any unoccupied space in our house or garage. She also cannot throw anything away.

Nancy's car is full of trash, as is the back room of our garage. In addition; her side of our bed, and under it, is cluttered with books, baskets, various old newspapers and magazines. We also have a vast collection of family "keepsakes" of sentimental value. More junk.

Finland has two official languages-Finnish and Swedish. Swedish is spoken by about seven percent of the people.

The first successful artificial fiber was patented in 1884 by French chemist Hilaire Chardonnet.

We have held a few garage sales, but they are always an ordeal. At the last one, Nancy ran after a startled woman, snatched away an old lamp she had purchased and said, "Sorry,

I can't part with that. I am a neat kind of guy, and disorder drives me bonkers. I regularly clean out and organize my closet, drawers and files. Cornelius is honored in Amarillo

Hereford volleyball player Danielle Cornelius has been selected as the area volleyball player of the month by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

She was to be honored at a noon luncheon today at the Holiday Inn in Amarillo.

Cornelius, a three-time all-state selection, has been honored by the Amarillo chamber before. She was the area player of the year last year, and she's been named player of the month at least once before.

The senior middle blocker led the Lady Whitefaces to a 11-0 record in August - the month for which she is being honored; they are now 15-0.

Cornelius recorded 139 kills in 11 matches and six tournament pool play matches during August. She had a kill percentage of .530 and a successful attack percentage of .850. She served for 18 aces and had 38 digs and 45 stuff blocks.

HJH gridders sweep Borger

Hereford Junior High's eighth grade football teams swept Borger Tuesday in Borger.

Hereford won the A game, 6-0, as Cody Hodges threw a 30-yard touchdown pass to twin brother Slade Hodges for the only score.

Cody Hodges also had an interception to kill a late Borger drive.

Hereford routed Borger in the B game, 22-0. Ramiro Zambrano scored first on a 35-yard touchdown run, and Toby Torres ran for the two-point conversion.

Escamilla added long scoring runs of 70 and 80 yards to make it a blowout (no first name was available for Escamilla). William Shows caught a pass for a two-point conversion after one of the scores.

The seventh grade teams from Hereford and Borger met Tuesday in Hereford, but they were listed as scrimmages on the schedule, and no results were provided.

Indianapolis must play in Dallas without several injured players

By HANK LOWENKRON AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The Indianapolis Colts welcomed back linebackers Quentin Coryatt and Elijah Alexander to practice Wednesday. On the other hand, running back Marshall Faulk was in the treatment room and Tony Bennett was on a lengthy list of players unable to work out.

The Colts had 17 players on their initial injury list for Sunday's game against defending Super Bowl champion Dallas, and coach Lindy Infante said he was uncertain how many of the injured players would be able to play against the Cowboys.

"There's a few guys that are more optimistic themselves about their chances of suiting up," Infante said after sending his team through a noncontact practice. "We're going to do this for the rest of the week. We just don't have the numbers for contact. We're short defensive linemen, linebackers, defensive backs, running backs and the offensive line.'

Infante said he won't know about the availability of some players until Sunday, but he was encouraged that magnetic resonance imaging tests performed on Faulk, Bennett, Jay Leeuwenberg and Vickers were both walking around the practice field with the aid of crutches.

"There was concern that Marshall had torn a capsule around the toe," Infante said. "It will just be one of those things, how fast does it heal."

"Jay has a fairly good (ankle) sprain. ... Tony (anterior knee ligament) is the same," Infante said. 'It will be just a matter of how everybody heals. Everybody heals at different paces.'

Infante said that Faulk was one of the most likely players to miss the game Sunday, while defensive back Derrick Frazier is definitely out after breaking an arm. Linebacker Stephen Grant, defensive back Derwin Gray and defensive lineman Richard Dent were among the players who weren't able to practice. Cornerback Ray Buchanan limited his activity to some running.

Meanwhile, Infante was encouraged by having Coryatt and Alexander practicing. It was the first time Alexander has practiced since injuring his hamstring on Aug. 6

"We got Alexander at an opportune time. We're sitting here with Coryatt having a shoulder still dinged and Steve (Grant) out," Infante said. "The timing really worked out to our benefit."

"It felt good. It was frustrating spending so much time on the side right after joining the team," said Alexander, who started 24 games for Denver the past two years and was signed as a free agent. "Being out there and being able to run was a relief.'

Alexander said he is anxious to play his first game with the Colts.

As practice went on, it loosened up, and after a while I didn't feel anything. It was just a matter of stretching, keeping it loose. It felt great he said.

Coryatt also was confident he'd be able to play.

"Last week I wasn't supposed to play, but I played anyway. I feel better this week than I did last week," Coryatt said. "I've had a rough start this year with some little injuries, but I'm dealing with them, and it's just a matter of them slowly getting better."

Train passengers lament plans to cut Texas service

Enthusiasts vow to fight plans to eliminate Texas Eagle in cost-saving move

By BARBARA KESSLER and CHRISTOPHER KARADJOV

The Dallas Morning News DALLAS - Mary McNeil was a sad figure lugging an overstuffed suitcase across the grand, gaping lobby of Union Station in downtown Dallas.

She'd just heard that Amtrak's train to Chicago, the Texas Eagle, is slated to shut down in the fall, and she needed a minute to digest this unexpected bad news.

'OK, the train's not going to be coming through here," Mrs. McNeil muttered as she eased onto a bench and unwrapped a mint. "Where's it going to be?'

Told the train could be kaput killed as part of a plan by Amtrak to make up for congressional budget cuts - the 69-year-old retired registered nurse frowned and contemplated a future without the train she rides twice a year between her Chicago home and native Texas.

"I don't like flying at all. And I'm not too fond of the bus," she said, stretching her toes to demonstrate the superior leg room of trains. "Where can I go to picket?"

For many train travelers and rail enthusiasts, who believe civilized nations should be connected by more than highways and plane routes, it may come to that.

Many were indignant about Amtrak's announcement that it is putting the skids on the San Antonio-St. Louis leg of the Eagle to help cover a projected $50 million shortfall.

We're going to go out fighting on this. That train is not gone yet,' said Robert LaPrelle, executive director of the Age of Steam Railroad Museum in Fair Park and a member of the Southwest Railroad Historical without passenger rail service, would be a loss to vacationers who enjoy leisurely train travel and to business people who find overnight rail service as accommodating as planes, he said. "It's just part of an infrastructure that any industrialized nation should have. People should have the choice to drive or fly or ride," LaPrelle said.

The shutdown, which would make Dallas the largest city in the nation

The death of the Eagle, too, would be mourned by some of the small towns that will never welcome a 727 and whose quaint depots sustain the romance of train journeys. Towns such as Mineola, which just celebrated becoming a stop on the Eagle route in April.

It was a big thing for this little town," said Lenny McKinney, a Mineola businessman and former Dallas restaurateur. "I think it's going to be missed by a lot of people.

McKinney's nieces and nephews, some of whom recently ventured to the Fort Worth Zoo via the Eagle, would lament the loss, he said.

As would the school and day-care classes that often ride the Amtrak on a lark and Girl and Boy Scouts who ride to earn railroading merit and proficiency badges.

Many children take the short hop between Dallas and Fort Worth, an $8 ride, just for the thrill, Amtrak workers said.

The closure also would break an increasingly fragile link with railroad history.

"Railroads are part of the American tradition. Our fathers built them," said passenger Stella Lampos of Chicago, whose immigrant Greek father really did work on the railroad.

Lampos was taking the Eagle back home after a visit to Texas. Dallas had already lost passenger rail service once before after years of steadily declining train travel in the train pulled out in May 1969, ending a decade that saw train travel careen from about 12 passenger trains daily to none, said Dale Walker, former Union Station general manager.

Amtrak resurrected train service to the city in March 1974. Since then, train travel has built a steady following of riders who enjoy a mode of travel that frees them from driving, allows them to pace or sleep, eat peanuts and watch TV or savor gourmet meals served on linendraped tables in elegant dining cars, advocates said.

In Dallas, the 1970s featured the 'Daily Double" - two trains barreling to Chicago from Dallas, one through Kansas City and the other by St. Louis.

"With two trains, there were better connections and the trains were daily. It increased passenger demand exponentially," said Garl Latham, a former Amtrak worker and ex-officer of the Southwest Railroad Historical Society.

But by 1979, Amtrak had discontinued one of those trains, the Lone Star, reducing rail access to and from Dallas and Fort Worth, Latham said.

Similar cuts in other cities, the product of Amtrak budget cuts and uneven political support for a national rail system, have blighted train travel ever since, he and others said.

The maddening aspect is that the trains are not shutting down for lack. of ridership, said Marc Lowrance, a train devotee and minister of First United Methodist Church in Watauga.

"My friends who work in ticket counters on this route are depressed and discouraged because they're turning away 70 percent of their business, said Lowrance, who estimates he spends about $11,000 yearly on train fares for business and pleasure trips because he enjoys the solitude and comfort of

And he knows he's not alone. On his last outing earlier this month, he noticed that passengers wanting to get on the sold-out Texas Eagle were offered seats on a lounge car.

Lowrance and others said cuts in destinations and daily routes have sabotaged Amtrak, the quasipublic agency that runs the nation's passenger rail service and gets about one-third of its budget from the government.

Amtrak acknowledged in a statement last week that cutting several daily routes in 1995 made travel cumbersome and chased off some patrons.

"At first, these three- and four-days-per-week trains sold well. Subsequently, they proved to be unproductive in many markets because of complex schedules," an Amtrak statement said. "Meanwhile, operating costs remained nearly the same as daily

As part of its response to the coming budget shortfall, Amtrak is restoring daily service to airline competition in Texas and Chicago-Seattle, Salt Lake cannot count on heavy vacation travel City-Oakland, Atlanta-New Orleans and Chicago-New Orleans routes.

But it is cutting the Texas Eagle and portions of three other interstate routes. The pullout will leave only one Amtrak route in Texas, a service that connects Houston and El Paso and continues on to Los Angeles.

The Eagle landed high on Amtrak's list of expendable routes because it loses more money than many trains, faces "murderous"

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

-- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

-- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Although she had a breakthrough role as June in "The Joy Luck Club," Wen welcomes projects that don't specifically call for a Chinese or Asian actress.

"Single Guy," which makes no issue of Trudy's ethnicity or the fact she's in an interracial marriage, is such an opportunity.

"That's what I love about it," she says. "That's how it was in 'ER,' too, which is great. It was never an issue that the character was Asian."

Wen got a kick out of playing an ambitious doctor on the medical drama, rival to Noah Wyle's Dr. Carter, but says "The Single Guy" is even more to her liking.

"On 'ER' the cast members were Hawaii great, but it was like I was a visiting relative. And I wanted to have my own family," she said.

Playing a young wife is a nice fit: Wen has been wed a year to actorwriter Eric Michael Zee - she proudly displays a magazine featuring a photo of the couple on their wedding day in

That's Eric with a "c," she says. "Not Eriq with a 'q,' like Eriq LaSalle," she says of the "ER" star who plays surgeon Peter Benton. "I always make fun of him for that."

And if LaSalle objects, he may just find himself with an after-school appointment.

Birthdays

By The Associated Press Natural Born Filmmaker Oliver Stone

The year: 1946. The city: The Big Apple. A woman is nine-months pregnant - about to deliver a son who will go on to be a controversial filmmaker - or so she says. Ask yourself, did Oliver Stone's mother have the means, motive and opportunity to bring into the world the writer-director and JFK conspiracy theorist? What did the mother do and when did she do it?

If you believe the biographical material circulating about the auteur, it would look as if Stone turns 50 on Sept. 15. But you can never be too sure. That birth certificate could have been forged. Or removed and then returned. And did anyone actually see the newborn? Can those eyewitnesses be corroborated?

Let's be honest: The single-fetus final - time, the evil dreamstalker theory just doesn't hold water.

Before becoming a big-shot, Academy Award winning filmmaker ("Midnight Express," "Platoon" and "Born on the Fourth of July"), Stone held a variety of jobs, such as serving in the U.S. Merchant Marine, driving taxis in New York and then having his seminal experience as an Army soldier in Vietnam in 1967 and 1968. He was awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Stone, whose films also include "Nixon," "Natural Born Killers" and "JFK," was recently awarded a star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame. At Stone's request, his star was placed next to that of another director he admires, Alfred Hitchcock.

No word on what sort of intrigue might lie below Stone's star or if any Primus, 28. excavations will be ordered.

angel in the Radio City Christmas show. Smart, of TV's "Designing Women" fame, plays the mother, T. Scott Cunningham the son and Matt Keeslar the heavenly body. Previews start Sept. 20; the play opens Oct. 15 at Playwrights Horizons.

TRAINS

the way excursion routes to the Rocky Mountains and Florida can, said Amtrak spokesman Marc Magliari.

The route, whose full length runs between San Antonio and Chicago, has been long suffering, Lowrance said. In 1994, its daily service was cut to three days a week and passenger capacity was trimmed, making it harder for travelers on a set schedule to use the train:

'Amtrak cannibalizes this train to supplement other routes, and then they throw up their hands and say they're losing business," Lowrance

Weak political support also undermined the Eagle, Lowrance and other railroad advocates said. Texas does not contribute state dollars to support trains, as do other states, and congressional members have not championed the cause, they said.

That could change. U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, recently named head of the Senate transportation subcommittee that oversees Press

Amtrak, has promised to hold a hearing in September with Amtrak President Thomas Downs.

Train supporters say they'll be fervent and vocal about saying that keeping the Eagle is more than a matter of symbolism.

To them, losing the Eagle and other similar train routes would be forfeiting a low-pollution transportation option as suited to modern life as it is tied to the country's pioneer

That would leave America roaring in the skies and rumbling on the highway but without the purr of trains crisscrossing the back country. Mary McNeil would be brokenhearted. Train travel is calming, she said. "It's just like sailing."

We're really missing the boat here," Latham said, "Or the train, I guess.'

AUSTIN - Gov. George W. Bush announced new rules on ethics last week to prohibit lobbying by former staff members.

Bush asked his 184-member staff to sign a promise that if they leave their jobs, they will not lobby the governor's office for at least one year, the Dallas Morning News reported.

"My administration will uphold the highest ethical standards. We must all continue to conduct ourselves in a manner which makes Texas proud," Bush said in a memo to his staff.

In July, Diane Allbaugh, the wife of Gov. Bush's executive assistant Joe Allbaugh, resigned as a lobbyist for AT&T and Texas Utilities — corporations that have issues to be considered in the 1997 legislative session. Also that month, it was reported that three former Bush aides, Dan Shelley, Reggie Bashur and Cliff Johnson worked as lobbyists after leaving the governor's staff.

The governor said he was troubled by the appearance of a conflict of interest and said he would initiate a policy to deal with such situations. The new policy, however, does not forbid former staffers from lobbying state agencies or the Insurance companies may increase Legislature.

It has not been unusual for former legislators, aides and goverposts after leaving the state payroll.

Treasury, Treasurer Close Doors Texas Treasurer Martha Whitehead scraped her name off the win-

30, her last day on the job. The 150-year-old Texas Treasury officially ceased operations Sept. 1, in accordance with a constitutional amendment to close the agency and transfer its duties to the office of Comptroller John Sharp.

Whitehead, who campaigned in favor of closing the agency in efforts to streamline state government, was appointed to office in 1993 by then-Gov. Ann Richards.

RRC Chief Returns Money

Texas Railroad Commissioner Carole Keeton Rylander has returned more than $25,000 given to her by contributors who have had cases before the regulatory panel.

Two years ago, when she was elected to the railroad commission, which regulates the oil and gas and shipping industries, Rylander pledged not to accept money from companies with business pending before the agency.

She told the Austin American-Statesman her ethics policy "goes far beyond what my predecessors did and what the law requires."

Rail Line to Be Studied

In hopes of relieving traffic congestion along Interstate 35, the Texas Transportation Commission wants to see whether building a commuter rail link between San Antonio and the city of Round Rock, 10 miles north of Austin, has merit.

The agency approved a study that will show how much an 80-mile passenger rail would cost and how it would be operated. The state will pay half the cost of the study, which could cost up to $500,000.

The study likely will begin in the spring. Union Pacific has said it would cost about $5 million per mile to upgrade the existing track.

Committee chairman state Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, said, "Bingo licensees did not feel comfortable with the staff or the attitude of those working to regulate bingo."

The regulation transfer proposal and other suggested changes in state bingo laws will go before the Legislature in January.

Board Wants More Regulation Allan Polunsky, chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, says the Legislature must make the regulation of private prisons in Texas its top criminal justice priority when it convenes in January. Responding to a recent rash of escapes and disturbances at private prisons, Polunsky said, There is no question that the state is going to have to have much tighter regulation on private prisons operating here, especially when it comes to bringing in outof-state inmates."

Col. James. Wilson, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety for five years, has retired. Wilson, 55, was among about 3,000 state employees who retired Aug. 31 to take advantage of increased benefits for taking early retirement. Wilson served in the DPS for 33 years.

■ Attorney General Dan Morales said he doesn't expect Texas' $4 billion lawsuit against the tobacco industry to be settled out of court, and he suggested a trial date in May. He advised private trial lawyers who are handling Texas' suit that he should be ready to begin with jury selection in May.

Tax Bill Has Big Impact On All Involved in Small Business

bill signed into law this month brings to mind the familiar dilemma of whether the glass is half-empty or half-full.

While it raises the minimum wage from $4.25 per hour to $4.75 per hour on October 1, and then to $5.15 an hour on September 1, 1997, at the same time this legislation provides the owners of small businesses with significant tax relief. What follows is a rundown on provisions of the new law that I hope those involved in small businesses will find instructive.

How does the new law affect expensing for small businesses? It increases expensing for small businesses substantially. The amount of equipment purchases that a small business can deduct in the first year, rather than depreciating over the life of the equipment, will rise each year starting from $17,500 and ending at $25,000 in the year 2003.

Does this legislation change pension rules in any way?

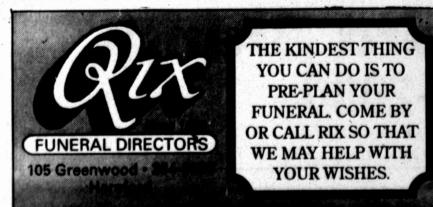

The bill makes a variety of changes that loosen current requirements for business' pension and profit-sharing plans and eases the administrative burden associated with creating these programs which benefit small businesses' employees.

For businesses with fewer than 100 workers, a new type of pension plan known as SIMPLE would allow workers to contribute up to $6,000 annually into an Individual Retirement Account or other tax-preferred pension plan. Employers would match employees' contribution up to 3 percent of the employee's salary. The amount contributed would be deductible for the employer, while workers could exclude their contributions from their taxable income. Small business owners will be able to set up pension plans for themselves and their employees in a way that is simpler, less costly and free of many of the burdensome rules and regulations imposed on current plans.

What do restaurant owners need to know about the new law? The law sets the minimum wage for employees who receive tips at $2.13 an hour. It expands the tip credit, which accrues to employers. Under current law, owners of bars and restaurants pay Social Security taxes on servers' tips as well as on their salaries, but they can receive a credit for the taxes paid on tips as long as the servers are on the premises. Under the new law, tips of workers who deliver food — such as the ubiquitous pizza deliverers — would be eligible for the credit as well. Does the new law provide for a lower starting wage for youthful, entrylevel employees? Yes, the law sets an "Opportunity Wage" for new employees 19 years of age or younger at $4.25 per hour for the first 90 days of employment.

The taxes imposed on small businesses are still too high, and our tax code remains far too complex. We must continue to look for better ways for the government to deal with the firms that create two out of every three new jobs in America.

Ask Roger Jesko and Dwight Jesko about their cellular service!

As two young farmers who work over 3,500 acres between them, they can appreciate things that offer them more control than they have over the weather and the markets.

And even though they don't partnership in their farming operations as much as they once did, their opinions about cellular phones over two-way radios are in tandem.

"Oh man, we use our bag phones a whole lot more than we use two-ways anymore," said Jesko. "With two-ways you're obviously limited to the number of different people you can talk to.

They both chuckle when he quickly adds,"Now we can call all of our other secretaries.

"XIT has offered me good service, When I first got my cellular phone, it worked fine until it got cold — then it would quit," Jesko said. I think XIT finally stuck it in a freezer to find out what was wrong — it works great now."

And we're working very hard to bring them high yields!
