By JEAN PAGEL Associated Press Writer AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The nation's nuclear bomb dismantling plant will gain a national research lab if Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary gets her way.

Ms. O'Leary announced plans Thursday for a program to study safe means to take nuclear bombs apart and handle their radioactive, explosive parts.

conjunction with Pantex, a 16,000-acre facility where workers already are storing plutonium they remove from retired weapons.

"Nobody in America clearly has the idea of ... how best to manage and dispose of the materials used to build the nuclear weapons," Ms. O'Leary said after addressing a crowd of about 250 at a fund-raiser for U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo.

'We have proceeded to dismantle, without clearly understanding over the long term, what is the best way to accomplish that. The research work will focus us on how to get that done: how to manage the plutonium as well as how to manage the high explosives that are part of these weapons."

When asked how much the lab would cost, she said: "Our commitment in this administration as we plan for a five-year cycle is for in excess of $60 million. But the scoping work will tell us what is required beyond research at UT, said the consortium's that."

move that would only duplicate the expertise of labs already in place.

"I just can't say that I think this is truly a valuable use of our resources, the nation's money," said Beverly Gattis, president of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping. Doris Smith, who lives near the plant, criticized what she saw as The lab would be built in Sarpalius agreeing to support the North American Free Trade Agreement in exchange for Pantex landing the lab. Sarpalius has not announced how he stands on NAFTA.

> "It looks to me like we're mixing politics and policy together." Ms. Smith said. "This lab announcement is being made strictly in exchange for a vote. ... The integrity of the American citizens is being squandered.'

Ms. O'Leary wouldn't divulge estimates of the number of new jobs. But she said they would be scientific and technological.

Department of Energy officials later this year will issue a request for proposals for an operator, she said. A consortium composed of Texas Tech University, the University of already has bid to run such a lab.

Ms. O'Leary met for one hour Thursday afternoon with about three dozen people concerned about Pantex, located 17 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Methodist bishop urges respect for elderly during visit to Hereford

By GARRY WESNER Managing Editor

Although not expressed in its original Biblical form, "honor thy father and mother" was the sentiment brought to Hereford Thursday night by United Methodist bishop Alfred Norris.

Norris, head of the Northwest Texas/New Mexico area, was keynote speaker at the King's Manor Founders Association Dinner, one of two fundraisers for the Methodist Church-affiliated facility.

A full-house audience of more than 300 people heard Norris relate how he wrote a letter to his mother, who celebrates her birthday today.

The letter, he said, talked about his mother, "who brought me into the world and gave me a foundation on which to build my life. ... Who made sure when I came home from school, even if I said I had no homework, she said, 'You're home, I have some work for you.'

His mother, Norris said, got him into church and made sure he stayed there

"I get a little upset with some people who forget mama and daddy," he said.

Two groups in society, Norris said, to not receive as much concern as they should -- children and the clderly.

"Oh, we say we care about them and maybe we do," but "don't we understand that the little ones are our children -- our children -- and the older ones are our parents?"

"Whenever you see an elderly person who can barely walk, I want you to remember there is nothing wrong with their mind and the wisdom that's in there," he said.

"How dare we mug them in the street. How dare we treat them like they are nothing more than useless property. We are their children," Norris said, his voice filled with emotion.

"I want it never to be said that any institution that is supported by the United Methodist Church is guilty of treating any of its people in a way that is un-Christian."

Norris concluded his remarks with the closure to a letter: "Dear Mama, Thank you, Love, Alfred. Dear residents of Kings Manor. Thank you. Love the United Methodists of Northwest Texas."

The message was the highlight of a meeting that featured a dinner catered by K-Bob's and served by the HHS Key Club and included musical entertainment by Pamela Pauling of Friona and a visit by the Rev. Eddie Allsup, Amarillo District Superint dent for the church.

Books adopted despite concerns SBOE hears criticism of texts' sexual references

AUSTIN (AP) - New high school health textbooks have won tentative approval from the State Board of Education despite concerns raised about their references to sex, homosexuality and birth control.

But the board, in a 10-5 vote, made adoption of the books contingent on changes it might want to make in them and a staff review of concerns that were raised in lengthy testimony Thursday

Final action was scheduled for today. Any changes, along with the staff report, would be considered in January.

"I don't think the people of Texas are supportive of what we have in these books," said board member Monte Hasie of Lubbock, who voted against adopting the five textbooks.

Another opponent, Robert Offutt of San Antonio, said, "This is not New York City and this is not San Francisco, California. This is Texas, and this is middle America.'

But board member Will Davis of Austin said youngsters receiving the books would be at least 15 years old and are aware of sex.

Why do we have to withhold facts from almost-adults?" he asked. "Why do we want them to find it out in the back seat of a Ford pickup?"

The preliminary vote came Thursday night, after the board heard from supporters and opponents of the books.

"Parents don't send their children to school to debate homosexual adoption of create a 'safe sex' ad campaign, yet that is exactly what these textbooks call for," Jeff Fisher, executive director of the American Family Association of Texas, said before the hearing,

Anne Newman, executive director of the Texas Council for Family Values, added, "Students may not be able to locate Europe on a map, but they will be able to locate erogenous zones and sources of condoms and contraception.'

But gay and lesbian supporters said the textbooks should present homosexuality in a sensitive non-judgmental way. And the Texas Family Planning Association advocated information that would help students make responsible choices and avoid unwanted pregnancy.

Jonathan Bell, a representative of Out Youth Austin, said gay and lesbian students often feel isolated and fearful at school.

"Schools need to be a safe place for all students," he said, and a proper discussion of homosexuality as parent-child divorce and physician in a textbook could help that.

The board considered $103 million in textbooks in various subjects, including health, up for adoption for use beginning next school year or later.

Most would have to be put into classrooms later because board members expect to have only up to $10 million for new books in the 1994-95 year.

The board voted to give grade 7 science books top funding priority. They cost $9.4 million, while the health books would cost $7.5 million. Other subjects include pre-calculus, analytic geometry, business law and supplementary readers.

Many of the textbook contents that conservative groups objected to were in the teacher's editions, although some were in student books.

Among teacher edition examples were a suggested student game that uses such terms as foreplay, and a discussion of adoption by homosexuals. Fisher also objected to a student edition excerpt that said, "More than ever before, the single word that described families today is diversity.

Ms. Newman and Fisher also objected to such topics in the books -assisted suicide.

In other action, Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said he has recommended that school districts stop using optional, state-developed AIDS education materials. He said they require substantial rewriting.

The Education Board didn't approve the materials before they were sent to elementary school campuses. The materials also were made available to middle schools, but the high-school version wasn't sent out.

Controversy erupted this spring after a 7th-grade teacher in the Houston area mistakenly distributed to students explicit information that was intended only for teachers.

Meno said he was concerned with "medical inaccuracies" in the materials, mainly due to new research since they were written, but didn't have an immediate example. Meno also said he wanted to ensure parents had the option of removing their children from sex-education discussions.

The commissioner said he plans to submit redesigned education materials on acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the board possibly as early as February.

Winter driving tips are given

Winter driving on wet, icy or snow-covered roads is different and drivers should prepare themselves by "cold proofing" their vehicles and adjusting driving habits, said Trooper Wayne Beighle of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"Batteries, tires, windshield wiper blades and anti-freeze are items that need to be checked. Weak batteries should be replaced, tires should have good deep treads and good wiper blades are vital in winter when visibility is poor," he said.

Safe driving in winter requires more patience, Beighle said, advising motorists to start early, adjust speed for road and traffic conditions and to avoid sudden driving maneuvers.

"Skidding on slick roads is a major accident factor and is usually caused by driving too fast for conditions or from locking wheels when drivers slow down," he said.

Capt. Joe Hughes of the Harris County Sheriff's Department said that when Lamas and the other man fled, Lamas jumped over a fence and landed in the pig pen with Mona.

Lamas, who has been charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, theft by receiving and burglary, was driven from the pig pen to the Harris County Jail by an unlucky officer, Hughes said.

Charles, 33, said he originally intended to slaughter the pig when he bought her five months ago. Her full name is Jamona, which is Spanish slang for bacon, but everyone just calls her Mona, he said.

Mona missed being slaughtered because his children came to love her, Charles said.

Herd spikers to face strangers in regional finals

By JAY PEDEN Sports Editor their intense volleyball rivalry Saturday in ...

What's that? Justin Northwest beat Dumas?

Never mind.

After three years of the District 1-4A enemies meeting in the regional finals for a trip to Austin, it seems as much an annual event as the April 15 tax deadline. But Northwest knocked Dumas from the playoffs, seemingly stealing the right to play Hereford, the defending Region I-4A champion, for a state tournament berth.

Hereford (26-6) and Northwest (31-7) will meet at 4 p.m. Saturday at Vernon High School. The winner advances to the state volleyball tournament Nov. 19-20 in Austin.

After Hereford beat Granbury Tuesday and it was learned that Dumas had lost to Northwest, the big thing seemed to be not who Hereford would play, but who Hereford would not play.

Hereford coach Brenda Reeh talks as if the anxiety involved in preparing for Dumas makes preparing taxes seem like a trip to Disneyworld.

"It has been such a great rivalry," Reeh said. "We really spend a lot of energy before the Dumas match, being worried about the Dumas match. Sometimes we think too much about it. I'm glad to be playing Northwest."

Rech is familiar with Dumas but knew little about Northwest--other When Hereford and Dumas renew than that the Lady Texans are the No. 1 team in Class 4A--until Dumas coach Jack Wilson gave her the tape of the Dumas/Northwest match.

"Their main go-to girl is a girl named Kim Coffey, a 5-foot-10 outside hitter," Reeh said. "She's just an awesome athlete. As a volleyball player, she can hit the line, sharp cross-court angles, and a couple of times on the tape, she hit the deep corner. She's got good court sense and she seems to be able to read the defense well. She's someone we'll have to block well.

"Their other outside hitter is a 5-9 senior, Misty Burns," Reeh said. "Coffey is the main one Dumas had trouble with, but all of their hitters hit pretty well."

Rech sees one edge Hereford might have over Northwest.

'I think we have a little better shot than Dumas had against them because we double block everything," she said. Dumas uses a single blocker and Northwest "tore that up," Reeh said.

Hereford's and Northwest's paths nearly crossed back in August when both were in the Amarillo tournament. Northwest was put in a tough pool which included Dumas-they split two games -- and Northwest ended up going into the consolation bracket and winning it. Hereford won the winners' bracket.

New Jersey retires Petrovic's jersey

By The Associated Press

Even the Indiana Pacers were moved by pregame ceremonies honoring the late Drazen Petrovic. The New Jersey Nets paid tribute to their leading scorer from last season before their home opener Thursday night. It took some time for the Pacers to get untracked, and they finally won 108-105 in overtime their first victory in four games this season.

"It was tough sitting through those ceremonies," Indiana's Reggie Miller said. "You couldn't help but get involved. In the first half, I took good shots, but just wasn't knocking them down. But you've got to play through that."

Petrovic's parents Jole and Biserka, his brother Aleksander and former Croatian teammates Dino Rajda and Stojan Vrankovic joined NBA commissioner David Stern. Nets general manager Willis Reed and coach Chuck Daly in the ceremony. The Nets retired Petrovic's No. 3 jersey.

Petrovic was killed in Germany on June 7 in a traffice accident.

"His ceremony was very touching," said the Nets' Derrick Coleman, who finished with 35 points and 16 rebounds. "We used to have him out there with us. But when it came down to gametime, we tried to block it out. We didn't execute down the stretch."

Miller scored 17 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter on 6-for-7 shooting in the period. Rik Smits and Pooh Richardson made two key baskets each in overtime for the Pacers.

The lead changed hands seven times during overtime. Smits and Richardson, who scored 17 points

Alonzo Mourning took advantage of Shaquille O'Neal's foul trouble, scoring 18 points and grabbing 10 rebounds as Charlotte beat visiting Orlando for the 10th time in 13 games.

Mourning, 4 for 6 from the field and 10 for 14 from the free-throw line, scored 18 points in just 18 minutes.

O'Neal was assessed three fouls in a four-minute span of the third period and went to the bench with five. He didn't play the fourth quarter and finished with 19 points on 6-for-15 shooting.

SuperSonics 115, Cavaliers 102 Ricky Pierce and Detlef Schrempf scored 22 points each and led a key 11-0 run starting late in the third quarter.

Visiting Cleveland trailed 81-66, but used a nine-point run to close within six points with 1:20 left in the third quarter. Mark Price led the Cavaliers with 20 points. as Miami sent visiting Milwaukee to its fourth consecutive loss.

Rockets 107, Timberwolves 99 Hakeem Olajuwon made 15 of 17 shots and scored 36 points as the Rockets won their fourth straight game.

Olajuwon made seven of eight shots in the first half and didn't miss a basket in the second half until 2:42 remained. He finished with 17 rebounds and made 6 of 9 free throws.

"Water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink," from one of my favorite poems, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," beautifully describes a problem that has plagued mankind since the first fishing and hunting trips.

Water comprises 60 percent of our total body weight, and the average person needs two to four quarts of water every day. An active hunter or angler requires even more liquid.

No matter how clear and pure water may appear, it is a sad fact that untreated water from many of America's streams, rivers and lakes contains carriers of dangerous illnesses such as giardiasis, salmonellosis, amebiasis and traveller's diarrhea. According to Dr. Cynthia Chappel of Baylor School of Medicine in Houston, the common water-borne Giardia parasite can cause stomach cramps, nausea, diarrhea and bloating. Worse yet, these symptoms may recur for years!

Thanks to modern technology, several companies now market pocket-sized systems that can filter out most dangerous bacteria and parasites. Available at many sporting goods stores, Katadyn's First Need filters down to the .45 micron level. Their new Minifilter system uses a Swiss-made ceramic filter effective down to .2 microns.

A pocket filter system would make a perfect early Christmas present for anglers and hunters alike.

Looking for a great place to go pheasant hunting? The Hart Lions Club is conducting their 13th Annual Pheasant Hunt from Dec. 11-26. Permits sell for $100, and also allow the hunting of duck and quail. Just before the season opens, the Hart Lions Club will release 100 specially tagged cock pheasants. Hunters returning these tags will enter a bonus drawing for some great prizes.

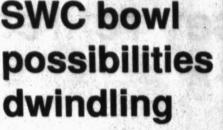

Proceeds from this hunt will help fund some of the Lions Club's special projects such as the High Plains Eye Bank, Crippled Children Camp, and the War on Drugs. To support a good cause and to have a great hunt, call tony Leibel at 938-2443 or Bob Reed at 938-2359.

Other organizations that have traditionally offered some good pheasant hunting include the Dallam County 4H Club, Dumas 4H Club, Tulia Kiwanis Club and the Stratford Chamber of Commerce.

Warning--If you plan to combine pheasant hunting and some duck hunting, make sure that you use only steel shot and leave the lead shot at home. The mere possession of lead shot while hunting waterfowl is a violation of the law.

Have a great hunting season, but be careful.. In 1992, six hunters came back feet first, and 56 others were injured in hunting accidents.

The road to post-season bowl games is getting very narrow for Southwest Conference teams.

The SWC's current list of six eligible bowl teams could be reduced to three by the end of Saturday's games.

The No. 11 Texas A&M Aggies (7-1, 5-0 Southwest Conference), who already have clinched a bowl berth, will host No. 20 Louisville at Kyle Field, where the Aggies haven't lost since 1989.

The elimination derby goes like this:

-Baylor (4-5, 2-3) or Rice (5-4, 2-3) will be eliminated in their battle in Waco.

-Texas Tech (4-5, 3-2) must extend its winning streak to four or it will be out with a loss at Southern Methodist (1-6-2, 1-4-1).

-Texas Christian (4-5, 2-3) is out with a loss to Texas (3-4-1, 3-1). The Longhorns could lose and still reach the Cotton Bowl, although it would be a long reach.

Texas could get to the Cotton Bowl if it beats Baylor on Nov. 20, and Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Night at Kyle Field IF the Aggies lose to TCU on Nov. 20.

None of this matters to Houston (1-6-1, 1-3-1), which hosts Cincinnati (6-3), and SMU. They already are eliminated from post-season consideration.

The Aggies are pleased to be playing before the ESPN cameras because they have a 9-game winning streak on ESPN games, dating back to 1988.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: A while back, I printed a letter from a reader who signed himself "85 and Waiting." He wrote of approaching old age with fear and trepidation. He had seen friends and relative sin nursing homes in various stages of deterioration and dreaded the day when he might be in a similar condition. He then spoke about his hope that in the not-toodistant future, people would be allowed to exit this life in a painless, dignified manner. I responded, "What you have suggested is a sane, sensible, civilized alternative to existing in a nursing home, draining family resources and hoping the end will come soon. Too bad it's against the law." Since that column appeared, I have been hit with an unprecedented firestorm of passionate responses, both pro and con. here are some samples of what I've been getting in the mail:

DEAR ANN: Your response to "85 and Waiting" was terrific. It took a lot of courage on your part to come out for a person's right to choose. You are sure to receive a flood of criticism from people who want to impose their religious beliefs on you and everyone else. Ignore 'em. -- J.K. in Cleveland

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 70 years cases where the cancer is more adold and was diagnosed three years vanced or has already spread. There ago with prostate cancer. I have not are many options to treating prosbeen given any prescribed medication for this condition, and I'm won- I'm sending you, which includes surdering if all prostate cancer patients gery, radiation and medications. are treated or, as in my case, not treated. A common belief is that most men die with prostate cancer as opposed to dying of it. Is there any medication for the treatment of prostate cancer in order to inhibit its spread to other organs or to eradicate it totally?

DEAR READER: The decision whether to treat or not depends on the person's age, health and how malignant the cancer is. Some cancers of the prostate are so slow-growing that it takes years before they create problems. Others are so malignant that they advance rapidly. How malignant a cancer is must be determined by studying the cancer cells under a microscope. In those cases, treatment is certainly indicated. One rule does not apply to every man. The cancer tends to grow slowly for the first 10 years and after ment - usually 1,500 mg. Women that it begins to grow more rapidly. The more cancer cells you have, the more rapidly they will spread.

Now that men in developed countries live longer, the practice of ignoring prostate cancer is questionable. If a man who is 55 years old is found to have a small cancer of the prostate, in 10 years, the cancer may multiply to the point that he cannot be totally cured and may have significant complications. If he would have lived to 80 otherwise, it is likely that he will die from cancer before males, complete removal of the prostate gland can provide a complete cure and prevent that unfortunate outcome.

I have provided data on this controversial subject in Special Report 130, Update on the Prostate, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/130, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

Lupron (leuprolide) and Eulexin (flutamide) are used to prevent the progression of prostate cancer. They neutralize the effects of testosterone, which supports prostate cancer progression. In a sense, they are a form of medical castration. These medications are more commonly used in common.

DEAR DR. LAMB: A friend, an intelligent professional woman, lapsed into coma and died recently from a buildup of calcium due to her constant ingestion of Tums. Obviously there is a level beyond which we should not go in calcium supplements. Please tell us what the recommended dosages are for older women, particularly those who are lactose intolerant or for other reasons do not get enough calcium in their daily diet. At what point does it become too much of a good thing?

DEAR READER: I suspect there is more to the story than your letter indicates. In a normal person, intakes of as much as 2,500 mg of calcium a day should not pose a problem. That is far more than recommended for menopausal women who do not take any estrogen replacetaking estrogen replacement may be managed with 1,000 mg a day.

Your friend may have had overac tive parathyroid glands that increased calcium absorption. But the incident points up the need for a medical examination before prescribing calcium supplements in large doses for yourself. The examination should include testing for blood calcium levels

DEAR DR. LAMB: I sure would like to know what causes mono and what it is. Our doctor says a 5-yearthat age. In small cancers in young old has mono. She has a sore throat and swollen glands. Is it serious? Can it be treated?

> DEAR READER: Mono refers to infectious mononucleosis, also called Epstein-Barr virus infection. The virus that causes it belongs to the family of herpes viruses. A sore throat, fever and enlarged lymph nodes characterize the illness. These non-specific symptoms fit many diseases, but blood tests that show a rise in antibodies produced against the virus confirm the diagnosis.

> It is sometimes called the kissing disease, because it is commonly transmitted by kissing. The virus is in the saliva. Often the disease in young children goes unrecognized and is simply regarded as a respiratory infection. In young adults, those likely to be kissing, the disease is fairly

Children who have diabetes must learn to follow diets

For children who have insulin- fruit, milk and fat. dependent diabetes, learning to eat right is crucial, especially since it can help them control their illness.

Since diabetes interferes with the way the body uses food, diet becomes one of the major cornerstones of diabetes management," said Dr. Mary Kinney Bielamowiez, professor and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University. "When children who have this disease learn to eat right, they become more conscious of their overall well-being and learn how to take control of their health.'

Dietary goals for children with insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (IDDM or type I) are to maintain normal growth and development, consistency and balance, she said.

"Parents of children with diabetes must pay special attention to their child's eating habits," said Bielamowiez, who is also a registered dietitian. "This means looking at food choices and portion sizes. In addition to balancing food with insulin, the child's diet also must provide the calories and nutrients needed to maintain normal growth and development, as well as a esirable weight."

How much a child eats is as important as when the food is eaten, she said. A meal plan will help a child maintain a day-to-day consistency in the amount of carbohydrate, protein, and fat eaten as well as establish a schedule for meals and snacks. The meal plan guides a child's food choices to provide a consistent variety.

"The diet prescription ordered by your child's physician is given in measured amounts of carbohydrates, protein, fat and calories," she said. "For the diet prescription to be meaningful, it must be translated into a meal plan by a dietitian. The dietitian may use the Exchange Lists for Meal Planning booklet, which can be obtained from the American Diabetes Association regional offices, the American Dietetic Association or local dictitians and hospitals."

Meal plans are not written in stone. so if the initial plan isn't right for your child, don't hesitate to go back and work out another plan that fits, she said. Each list contains foods that have about the same amount of carbohydrate, protein, fat and calories that can be substituted or exchanged one for another. The list contains starch/bread, meat and meat substitutes, vegetables,

With the exchange lists, children can enjoy balanced meals that are appealing and appetizing, Bielamowiez

"Giving children choices about what they can eat will encourage them to follow their meal plan," she said. Choices and flexibility may also help foster healthy attitudes about eating, which could last a lifetime."

Balance in a meal also is important because consistent food intake helps ensure that glucose is in the bloodstream at the times when the child's insulin is peaking--working the hardest--or when the child is most active, such as during a school recess, she said.

A child with diabetes should never skip a meal, Bielamowicz cautioned. Children who attend school should carry snacks -- a carbohydrate source, such as crackers or bread sticks--to prevent blood glucose from dropping too low when the child cannot eat on schedule. It's also a good idea to remind teachers the importance of maintaining consistent meal times. According to the American Diabetes Association, special considerations must be made for illnesses because many children do not feel like eating when they are sick. Even so, illness puts the body under stress, which can cause blood-glucose levels to soar in children with diabetes. Vomiting poses a serious threat and should be treated by a physician if it persists.

"For times like these, make sure the doctor has worked out a plan to help the child handle medications on sick days," Bielamowiez said. "The dictitian can help establish eating guidelines."

What is it that keeps a woman protected from heart disease until menopause? So far, the best guess is hormones.

More than 15 percent of all postmenopausal women are on estrogen replacement therapy (ERT).

"With regard to heart disease, estrogen replacement therapy is wonderful," says Dr. Marcella Ritter, who recommends it to her own patients.

Estrogen has proven to reduce a woman's rate of cardiovascular disease--including strokes, high blood pressure, and heart attacks--about 50 percent.

"When a woman stops producing estrogen after menopause," says Ritter, an OB/GYN at the Methodist Hospital in Houston, "she becomes like a man with regard to her risk for heart disease."

Exactly why estrogen protects women isn't known, but researchers suspect that it makes arteries more resistant to cholesterol deposits; it has a positive effect on blood pressure and increases the good (HDL) cholesterol levels. Estrogen may protect blood vessel walls from accumulate Many women think that if they are hypertensive and couldn't take birth control pills when they were younger, they're not candidates for ERT. That's not the case.

"Someone who takes medication for hypertension is as much a candidate for estrogen as anyone else," says Ritter. "Birth control pills are synthetic. The estrogens in ERT are natural hormones, and they're just replacing what your body gave your prior to menopause."

But there are some drawbacks to consider. For example, ERT does increase the risk for cancer of the endometrium, which lines the uterus. Taking another hormone, progesterone, protects against this, but it also drags down the good effects of estrogen on HDL cholester-

So women without a uterus can take estrogen without progesterone and don't have to worry about endometrial cancer.

River land ownership is settled

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A dispute over the boundary line dividing private land from the state-owned riverbed of the Canadian judge's ruling.

The judge ruled this week that the Sanford Dam in 1965. boundary line dividing private land from a state-owned riverbed should be based on the river's current flow.

At issue was a 37-mile strip of land along the Canadian River in Hutchinson and Roberts counties. Landowners who own property on both sides of the river sued the state in 1989, alleging that the state's boundary deprived them of thousands flowed freely; after the dam gates of acres of land.

District Judge M. Kent Sims' decision this week settled the main legal question in the dispute when he dispute. granted the landowners title to the surface land in question.

Sims determined that the boundary should be based on the Canadian River's current flow. Until Wednesday, when the ruling was issued, that River has been resolved with a boundary had been based on the river's flow before the closing of the Sims issued a partial summary judgment in favor of the landowners, meaning he granted them ownership of the surface land. He has not ruled on who will own the mineral rights beneath the surface.

At present, those mineral rights belong to the state of Texas.

Before the dam was built, the river were closed in 1965, the flow narrowed considerably. That change in the flow helped create the lengthy

Both sides agree the riverbed belongs to the state of Texas, but they disagree on what constitutes the riverbed.

The landowners - E.H. Brainard II. Ruth Wilson, Boone and Bea Pickens, the Morrison Cattle Co., the Catharine C. Whittenburg Trusts, Bonnie Harvey Loopesko, Winifred Wadle, John Ydren and J. Douglas Allen - were granted their request to have the boundary based on the narrower flow of the river.

The state argued that the boundary should be based on the river's "natural state" - the wider flow before the closing of the dam.

In his order, Sims said he ruled in favor of the plaintiffs because the state was responsible for changing the river's natural flow.

Texas Brothers are 'top dogs' in barbecue rib cookoff contest

BY SCOTT FITZGERALD The Dalhart Texan

DALHART, Texas (AP) - All motifs for yet another claim as the world's best barbecue are firmly entrenched.

Two brothers, Dale and Leland Heiskell, assisted by longtime friend Randy Pratt, are the principal characters.

An obscure roadside restaurant called "Texas Brothers Bar B-Q" is the site.

And of course there is a secret family recipe used to season meats and sauces.

Texas Brothers Bar-B-Q has a few other ingredients, however, that makes anyone in an immodest business turn their head and take notice.

The Heiskell brothers have built a stack of notable awards since their debut in competitive cooking over 10 years ago at Cleveland, Ohio. They've earned respect of peers and judges nationwide.

Their most recent achievement was first place at the annual four-day Best in the West Rib Cook-off held at Sparks, Nev., in September. Texas Brothers won a $7,500 prize.

'This is the top dog in barbecue. When you win here, you get the bragging rights for the entire West," said Stephen Ascuaga, special events a lot of people. But, it's also a lot of director for the cookoff.

"I know Dale and Leland very well. It was great seeing them here. They are a couple of colorful guys," Ascuaga added.

The contest attracted some 25 restaurants of which 15 are nationally renowned. Approximately 170,000

Ascuaga added.

When the Heiskells were contacted by telephone shortly after learning they had won top honors, Dale, who lives in Fort Worth, couldn't mask his excitement.

"After five long years, you strike pay dirt. It's like winning the World Series," he said.

Leland, who lives in Dalhart, was a little bit more subdued.

"We can consider ourselves the best cooks in Nevada," he said.

Pratt says the award speaks for itself. It's "the granddaddy of the business," he noted.

Texas Brothers is on a roll. They captured back-to-back first place awards for sauce and ribs at a Lake Tahoe cookoff in 1992. They defended their crowns earlier this year at the same locale with a first place finish in ribs and a second place in sauce.

They garnered grand prize and best-of-show at "The Great Pork BarbeQlossal" held in Des Moines, Iowa, in 1988.

They've steadily climbed the honor track statewide with honorable mention prizes at the Kraft All American BBQ Series in Dallas in 1991 and finished among the top five finalists at Fort Worth's Pioneer Days in 1988 and "Cookouts are fun. You get to meet work," Leland Heiskell said.

"It's five-day workout. Outside it was plenty warm" he said about competing in a July cookout at Chicago. Sharing ideas and working with other people is the way to successful barbecuing, Heiskell said.

"Where it starts is tender loving people attended the four-day event, care. You've got to cook with the top that keeps of people through the years and share your ideas with them. They share with you. You just don't read it out of a recipe book," Heiskell said. The Heiskell brothers initially lent their efforts to the Sutphen's Barbecue. from Amarillo and Borger in the early. 1980s.

They've made the long pilgrimage to Terlingua to compete in the chili cookoff, earning a fourth place in 1984.

Today their cooking business is mostly centered on catering for special group events around the Dalhart area. They sell their seasonings salt to:

etailers, but it's a low volume business, Heiskell said.

Neither brother intended to be a chef. eland is primarily a farmer and Dale works as a financial consultant.

They learned the food business from their parents who operated a cafe: business in Dalhart during the 1940s.

As time passed, both brothers noticed they still possessed an overwhelming desire to develop comradeship with other cooks and feed people the best meals they could create.

Today, Texas Brothers would rather go the extra mile by hauling their southern pride cooker on wheels to cater events rather than rest on their laurels within the confines of their eating establishment.

"We don't turn any invitations down. We just really enjoy people," Heiskell said.
