Homecoming: Herd wins; Queen, King, crowned; Simons honored

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

The Hereford Whitefaces scored an exciting 26-21 victory over Randall here Friday night to put the icing on the cake for HHS Homecoming, 1996.

Andrea Scott and Josh Alvarado were crowned Homecoming Queen and King, and sports broadcaster Tom Simons was honored in other highlights of the activities.

The selection of the Homecoming Queen and King was the highlight of the pep rally, which had a theme of "Rock the Herd with Disneymania". Students, teachers and local supporters packed the high school gym, which was covered with banners supporting the football team.

As loud as the pep rally was, the crowd was able to make even more noise when the Homecoming Royalty was announced.

Scott, 17, is the daughter of Lisa and Andy Scott.

Alvarado, 18, is the son of Elvira and David Alvarado.

Scott plans to major in physical therapy in college.

Alvarado is a captain of the varsity football team, Key Club member and Fellowship of Christian Athletes member.

Alvarado plans to major in music and physical therapy in college.

Cassie Abney, Stephanie Bixler, Rob Reinauer and Brian Thomas were the Senior Class Attendants.

The Junior Class Attendants were Wendy Brisendine and Tate Head.

Mary Lou Enriquez and Abram Hill were the Sophomore Class Attendants.

The Freshman Class Attendants were Nancy De La Cruz.

In appreciation of his service, County Judge Tom Simons, "Voice of the Whitefaces," was presented a football helmet and Homecoming mum from Athletic Directors Craig Yenzler and Brenda Reeh to a standing ovation from the crowd.

Mayor Bob Josseland proclaimed Friday as "Tom Simons Day" in Hereford.

Simons was recognized for his 25 years of broadcasting Hereford High School football games and other sports events.

"I love doing it," Simons said.

At the end of the pep rally, maroon, gray and white balloons were dropped from the gym ceiling.

Candidates in contested county races issue voter statements

With early voting for the 1996 elections already underway, 8,886 Deaf Smith County residents have registered to vote, according to the county clerk's office.

Four years ago 8,277 residents registered to vote. Of them, only 68 percent -- 5,621 -- actually turned out at the polls to cast votes. Nearly half voted early in that election.

County Clerk David Ruland, who oversees voter registration, recently said he thinks he knows why so many declined to vote in last election.

"The indication I get from a lot of the residents," Ruland said, "is that they're tired of voting against someone; they don't have anyone to vote for, so they don't vote."

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and Hereford Educators Association in April jointly sponsored a "Meet the Candidates" forum where candidates discussed city and county issues publicly.

The forum included candidates for city commission, hospital board, school board and county races.

Tommy Weemes, Chamber president said there are no plans to hold another forum because there are so few contested county races. The Hereford Brand recently asked each candidate to address Deaf Smith County voters regarding their merits and plans if elected.

The Sheriff's office and County

Precincts 1 and 3 are contested races this year. Following are the candidates for each office and information about each.

By GARRY WESNER Managing Editor

Hereford police, faced with a dramatic increase in the number of people injured when they were struck by motor vehicles while walking or riding bikes, are turning to public education to try and stem the tide.

Capt. Pat Michael, joined by Officers Brian Burzynski and Ron Taylor, announced the "Hereford Police Department Pedestrian Safety Program" this past week in conjunction with Child Accident Prevention Week that starts today.

"We're using this (special week) as an opportunity to kick off our public safety campaign on pedestrian and bicycle safety," said Michael.

"The reason we're doing this is we are alarmed at the recent trends that we see in pedestrian- and bicycle-related accidents," Michael continued. "We feel it is time for some public education to remind the citizens of the right of way laws and safety procedures that pedestrians and bicyclists need to use when they're on the roadways."

The effort has been spearheaded by Burzynski and Taylor, who researched Hereford traffic accidents since January 1995 through October 7 to determine trends in the numbers of accidents involving pedestrians and bicyclists.

They have created a public education program that they will present to everyone in the city they can reach -- schools, service clubs, study clubs, church groups, or other gatherings.

Michael said the presentations likely will be conducted at least through the end of the year.

Anyone interested in setting up a date for one of the officers to speak may call the Hereford Police Department at 363-7120 and speak with Capt. Michael.

During the time period of their traffic study, Taylor said, there were 20 traffic accidents involving pedestrians or bicyclists.

However, he noted, only six of those occurred during all of 1995. The remaining 14 happened during the first nine months and one week of 1996 -- a 233 percent increase over the 1995 statistics.

Taylor also noted that there were 17 people injured in the 14 accidents so far this year -- a 283 percent increase in the number of pedestrians injured in accidents.

Of those 20 accidents, Burzynski said, "only two resulted in the vehicle being at fault" and one of those two was not technically a traffic accident, since a person driving a vehicle was deliberately attempting to run over a pedestrian at the time.

The remaining 18 accidents, Taylor said, were the fault of the pedestrian or bicyclist.

Further indication that public education was needed, Taylor said, came when the officers discovered that there were no vehicle-pedestrian accidents in which the pedestrian was in a crosswalk, at an electronically-controlled crossing signal" or where they're supposed to be."

"It seems to be the understanding of the community that once a bicyclist or a pedestrian is on the roadway, they do feel like they have the right of way," Taylor said.

Anyone who does not believe this, Michael chimed in, can "watch the kids casually stroll across the highways" on their way home from school, or can slow down to avoid striking a jogger trotting along the roadway at dusk.

Of the 23 people injured in bicycle or pedestrian traffic accidents since the start of 1995, Michael said, nearly 50 percent -- 12 people -- suffered critical injuries.

"Basically they don't win the battle when that car hits them," he said.

Taylor pointed out that critical injuries happen regardless of the speed of the motor vehicle involved, because he and Burzynski discovered

Mauro to be here Tuesday for Demo campaign rally

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who also serves as chairman of the Texas Clinton/Gore '96 Advisory Committee, will be in Hereford on Tuesday for a Democratic campaign rally, according to an announcement Friday.

Mauro will be in Hereford as part of a statewide tour touting economic gains produced by Democratic economic policies.

Mauro will hold a news conference at 10:15 a.m. Tuesday in the Hereford Community Center banquet hall.

"The number of business leaders endorsing the Democratic ticket from all over Texas keeps rising all the time," Mauro said in a news release from the Texas Victory Democrats '96. "From Hereford to Victoria, from El Paso to Texarkana, these Texans have worked hard to achieve the American dream. That's why they will cast their vote in 1996 for four more years of Democratic national leadership."

Mauro will be joined at the rally by local Democratic supporters.

Cancer-causing gene is debated

WASHINGTON (AP) - A chemical compound linked in a new study to the genetic changes of lung cancer can come from many sources other than cigarette smoke, a tobacco company said Friday.

The study, published in the journal Science, is the first to describe the specific parts of a cancer gene that are damaged by benzo(a)pyrene, or BAP, a chemical common in cigarette smoke.

Anti-smoking groups described the finding as a "smoking gun" link between cigarettes and lung cancer that gives plaintiffs a powerful new weapon in lawsuits against tobacco companies.

But Brown & Williamson, makers of Viceroy and Barclay cigarettes, said in a statement that BAP is very common in the environment and can originate from many sources.

POLICE

Several accidents in which the motorist was driving the speed limit "or well under" when a biker or pedestrian was struck.

At the same time, he continued, motorists have a responsibility -- even though they have the right-of-way -- to exercise caution while driving.

He said motorists should practice defensive driving and be aware of situations where children are likely to be in or near roadways -- such as when buses are loading and unloading, when ice cream trucks are traveling through a neighborhood, or when a ball suddenly rolls into the street.

The officers have created a seven-point safety checklist they determined by reading the accident reports.

The "First Deadly Sin," "Never run across the street," Burzynski said, "is taken from the accidents -- this is cause and effect in the accidents. This is Number 1. Kids flying across the street."

Taylor said children who run into the street without looking often have one thing on their minds -- getting to the school bus or leaving it, getting to the ice cream truck, or getting to a runaway ball or other toy.

Running from between parked cars, the second item on their list, also was a factor in some of the local accidents, Taylor said.

The other five "deadly sins," he said, either came from actual causes of accidents or from complaints to police by people who narrowly avoided an accident involving a pedestrian or bicyclist.

Michael urged parents who hear the programs in the public to go home and tell their children about the need for pedestrian and bicycle safety, and to reinforce the message when it is delivered to children in school.

"We're going to educate the adults. We're going to educate the children and we're going to go out and ask the adults to go home and educate the children," he said.

The Seven Deadly Traffic Sins

- Never run across the street! Don't expect a car to stop for you. A car travelling the speed limit in a residential area will skid almost 50 feet before coming to a stop.
- Never cross the street near a parked car! Cars on the street can't see you and you can't see them. Get far away from parked cars before crossing the road.
- Stay off the street when you are not crossing! The street is not a soccer field, a football field, or a skateboard plain. The street is for motor vehicles only. If you are not crossing the street, you should be on a sidewalk or nowhere near the street. If a ball goes in the street, be careful. It is better to lose a ball than your life.
- Bicycles must obey traffic laws! Traffic signs are for anyone using the street. If you are riding a bicycle on the street, those signs are for you, too. Remember, anyone on the street is subject to traffic law for everyone's safety.
- Stay on the sidewalk! When a pedestrian-vehicle accident happens, the driver of the vehicle universally says, "I never saw him." By the time the driver does see the pedestrian, it's too late. The driver of the car is travelling in the roadway, not on the curb or the sidewalk. It is the pedestrian that ends up in front of a vehicle legally traveling in the street. Stay on the sidewalk. In the absence of a sidewalk, stay as close as possible to the curb. Bicycles may ride two abreast, but they must do so as close to the curb as possible.
- Watch for signs of children! There are times when a driver of a car has a clear sign a child is in the area and might run into the street. Ice cream trucks, balls rolling in the street and school buses (stopped or moving). Drivers must slow down and use extreme caution when any sign of a child is observed. Almost every accident where the car was traveling under the speed limit resulted in a critical injury.
- Joggers and walkers beware! There is nothing wrong with exercise, but there is a time and place for everything. Joggers and walkers should use tracks, parks or sidewalks to stay off the street. When jogging or walking on the street, state law mandates that you stay as close to the curb as possible. Joggers are flirting with death when they run through a stop sign intersection without stopping and looking both ways first. Joggers and walkers should avoid streets and alleys at night.

Best business float

enforcement experience in Deaf Smith County he has fostered a strong co-operative spirit with other law enforcement agencies.

According to Brown, "The citizens benefit with Joe Brown as Sheriff." Brown, a Democrat, said if re-elected he will continue his tough policy on narcotics in the county.

Mike Morrison

Mike Morrison, 40, opposes Brown under the Republican banner. Morrison, a life-long Deaf Smith County resident, is the warehouse foreman at Oglesby Farm Equipment. He is also a self-employed farmer.

He has a total of 10 years experience in law enforcement, five years each in the Hereford Police Department and the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department.

Morrison graduated from Hereford High School and has nearly completed an Associates Degree at West Texas A&M University.

If elected, Morrison said he would cut the sheriff department's budget and implement a policy of prevention as a means to lower crime in the county.

"I'll have more patrol cars on the street and show a stronger law enforcement presence to the community," Morrison said. "I'll have a systematic-type patrol given to each officer."

Robin Ruland

Robin Ruland, 33, seeks the Sheriff's office as a write in candidate with the slogan "Write In The Right Choice." He has no declared political affiliation.

This is Ruland's first run at elected office. Although, for the past two years he has been a Hereford Police Officer. For approximately eight years before that he worked for the Sheriff's Department, achieving a rank of Lieutenant Investigator.

Ruland said his experience in law enforcement is his greatest asset.

"I know from a patrol perspective to management how the office should be run," Ruland said.

Ruland also said he would be a working sheriff, out on patrol.

COMMISSIONER, PCT.1

Tony Castillo

Democratic incumbent Precinct 1 Commissioner Tony Castillo is making a bid for his seat on the Deaf Smith County Commission a second time under the campaign slogan of being "a hands on commissioner."

In his term, Castillo said he is most proud of the introduction of the SPA program and the Deaf Smith County Youth Home.

"The youth of this county are my top priority," Castillo said recently.

Castillo, a self-employed trucker by trade, identifies himself as the head of a working class family.

The proud father of one recent college graduate and another due to graduate this Spring, Castillo said his philosophy is "If I can raise good, successful kids, anybody can."

If re-elected, he said, he will continue to "do everything in (his) power" to continue improving the condition of the youth in this county.

Wayne Betzen

Republican Wayne Betzen has lived in Deaf Smith County all his life.

If elected Precinct 1 Commissioner, Betzen said he will concentrate on getting "some bang from the buck" with county tax dollars.

"I'm a firm believer in operating under a balanced budget," he said.

The 41-year-old farmer also said if elected he would propose a shift in the county's tax structure.

"Generally," he said, "I'd like to propose (property) tax raises stop."

"Property owners are overburdened now," he said, "I think we can raise revenues in other ways."

As an example, Betzen points to the court system. Raising court costs, Betzen said, would be a start.

COMMISSIONER, PCT.3

Troy Don Moore

Troy Don Moore, the Democratic incumbent in the Precinct 3 Commissioners race this year finishes his third term in office.

The 52-year-old Moore was born and raised in Hereford. He graduated from Hereford High School, received a Bachelors and a Law Degree from Texas Tech University. He served two years in the military. He worked in an Amarillo Court as a clerk and in the Lubbock offices of the Internal Revenue Service before returning to Hereford, where he has lived and worked since 1975.

Currently, Moore is a loan manager at the Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union.

His "conservative approach to the business of the county," Moore said, has served him well. He pointed to his recent participation in the year-long overhaul of the county's personnel policy manual and his oversight of the road and bridge department in his precinct.

parking lot, parade participants put the finishing touches on their floats. Shortly after 3 p.m., the parade began slowly to pass through the city streets.

The parade was lead by the Mighty Maroon Marching Band and Simons, who served as parade marshal.

With their version of Captain Hook, the Junior Class took the prize for the best overall float.

The best theme float went to the Senior Class and the HHS Student Council and Hereford Plaster and Paint won the prize for the best business float.

The float with the most school spirit was claimed by the Freshman Class, while the most creative float was captured by the Sophomore Class.

Judging the parade entries were Lt. Israel Silva of the Hereford Police Department, Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turantine and Church of the Nazarene Youth Minister Jim Pope.

Following the parade, Herd fans headed to Whiteface Stadium, where the football team prepared for their match against the Randall Raiders. Leading up to Friday, several activities were held at the high school during the week.

In the second period door decorating contest, Cherie Zinck's class won first; Becky Gerlich's class won second; Jana Huston's class was awarded third; Becky Weatherly's class won fourth; and Karen Abney's class was fifth.

Cumpton to attend UIL council meet

AUSTIN--Assistant Supt. Don Cumpton of the Hereford Independent School District will represent Conference 4A, Region 1 at the University Interscholastic League Legislative Council meeting Oct. 20-21 in Austin.

The UIL Legislative Council meets annually to review UIL rules and regulations and to hear testimony from interested parties. Several proposals and one survey item will highlight the agenda at this meeting.

All superintendents were asked in a September survey if they favored allowing home-schooled children to represent UIL schools. In addition, they were asked to indicate some method that would need to be adopted to satisfy no pass, no play provisions for home-schooled children.

In the area of athletics, an amendment is being proposed that would disqualify a team from district honors if that team plays against a non-school team which consists of one or more high school students with remaining eligibility, whether or not academically eligible.

Another proposed amendment would prohibit coaches from scheduling matched games or contests for non-school athletic activities during the school year. Coaches would be prohibited from interacting with or coaching students from their school team during a non-school activity. Coaches could continue to organize, schedule, and officiate bona fide summer leagues.

Other items on the agenda in the area of athletics include adding wrestling as a UIL sport, allowing a coin flip in baseball to determine whether to play one game or a series when the two schools do not mutually agree to a two-out-of-three series, allowing a maximum of four - rather than two - football teams to participate in a scrimmage, allowing the two top golf medalists who are not on advancing teams to advance from district to regional and to state competition, and allowing three teams and 10 individuals to qualify from district to the regional cross country meets.

In academic-related issues, an amendment has been proposed that would allow contestants to enter all four journalism contests, eliminating the present restriction to three; reducing the time allotted for taking the Computer Applications contest from 50 to 30 minutes; and add a team component to elementary and/or junior high contests in calculator applications, dictionary skills, maps, graphs and charts, mathematics, number sense, science and spelling.

In the area of music, there is a proposal that would establish an orchestra sightreading contest pilot project in 1997. Another proposal would modify the scoring system for the area and state marching band contest, changing the length of marching contest shows from 10 to 8 minutes.

Cumpton also serves on the Council's standing committee on music.

Velvet Fog loves hospital food

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Mel Torme is singing the praises of hospital food.

For the first time since he suffered a stroke in August, Torme is dining on solid food and passing compliments to a hospital chef for a meal of mashed potatoes, turkey and spinach.

"Doctors are thrilled with his progress," publicist Rob Wilcox said Wednesday.

The 71-year-old singer known as the Velvet Fog because of the smooth, silky sound of his voice, suffered a stroke Aug. 8 that caused slurred speech and weakness on his left side. The name of the Los Angeles-area hospital where he's being treated wasn't released.

ATTENTION PUBLIC

Dear Friends,
We have a problem in our city...our library and new carpet for it. It is a fact that the library needs new carpet. It is a fact that new carpet is expensive. It is also a fact that public money must be spent wisely.
A cheaper carpet can be bought for $20,000 that will last for 10 years; a better carpet can be bought for $25,000 and will last for 20 years. (20 years of cheaper carpet costs $40,000) If one-fourth more money will double the time of use, is that not the better bargain?

Please think about this and talk to your commissioner, friends, neighbors or anyone else. Let's try to get the most for our money.

Estimados amigos,
Tenemos una problema en nuestra ciudad...la libreria y una alfombra nueva. Es la verdad que la libreria necesita una alfombra nueva. Es la verdad que alfombra nueva es muy cara. Es tambien la verdad que el dinero publico debera gastado con sabiduria.
Una alfombra mas barata cuesta $20,000 con una vida de 10 años; una alfombra mayor cuesta $25,000 con una vida de 20 años. (20 años de la mas barata cuesta $40,000) Si un cuarto mas dinero compra doble el tiempo, no está la mayor compra?

Por favor, piensen en esta problema y hablan con su comisionado, sus amigos, sus vecinos o quienquiera que hablar. Probamos la más por nuestro dinero.

Homecoming Week in Hereford ended on a perfect note Friday night as the Herd scored a hard-fought 26-21 win over Randall. Individual stars were too many to mention, so hats off to the Herd on a great team victory!

The triumph also capped a memorable day for Tom Simons, who was honored for being the "Voice of the Whitefaces" for 25 years. Simons was recognized at halftime with special presentations from the Whiteface Booster Club and KPAN.

County employees also hosted a reception Friday morning at the courthouse. Special gifts from friends in the community included balloons, a huge, gaudy mum for the judge to wear, and a turkey (any special significance?).

One of Tom's daughters, Julie, called and said, "Dad, this is the first time I've heard of a special day for someone who wasn't dead!"

International Carrier Day was observed last Saturday, and we let it slip by without expressing appreciation to our carriers. These "Little Merchants" put forth a lot of hard work and effort in delivering The Brand to subscribers in the community.

Most of us take them for granted—until we miss our paper. We would encourage those subscribers on home delivery to get to know their carriers. Most of them will go above and beyond what is expected.

We get some complaints when people miss their papers, however, we also have many subscribers tell us that they have "the best carrier in town." Many adults in town are former Brand carriers, and they still testify that the job was a valuable learning experience.

We've got an entertaining story to pass along!

A man was idly walking through a junkyard on the outskirts of Fort Worth. A motorcyclist by hobby, the man had an abiding interest in those made by Harley-Davidson.

He spotted an old, rust-covered frame among a pile of debris and walked over for a closer look. The frame was that of an old Harley-Davidson. It was in terrible shape but still had the motor intact.

He offered the owner of the junkyard $1,200 for the decrepit machine and the owner readily accepted. With the owner's help, he loaded the motorcycle in the back of his pickup and headed home.

The next day, he called the home office of the Harley-Davidson company and inquired about original parts for the restoration of the machine.

The company asked for the serial number off the frame and the motor. After using a wire brush to scrape away the rust, he was able to find the numbers on both parts and called the company back. A few hours later, he received a call from the company seeking verification of the serial numbers.

"Are you sure you've given us the correct serial numbers?" asked the company rep.

"Yes, I'm positive about those numbers," the man replied.

"Tell you what," the caller said, "If those serial numbers are correct, I'll give you $25,000 for the cycle, as is, sight unseen."

Perplexed and puzzled by the call, the man pondered the offer for a few minutes, then decided not to accept the bid. He still wanted to restore the machine to its original state.

Two days later, his phone rang again and the caller said, "This is Jay Leno from the NBC studio in Burbank and I understand you have an old Harley-Davidson that you want to restore."

"That's right, I do."

"And the serial numbers are those you provided the Harley-Davidson people?"

"Yes, I've verified the numbers."

"Tell you what. I'm taping this call to you. I'm going to make you an offer for the machine and if you accept, we have a contract to sell and buy. You understand?"

"Why sure, I guess so," replied the puzzled man.

"I'll give you $500,000 for the cycle as is. And if you say yes, then we've got a deal. Right?"

The man didn't hesitate this time. "I believe I'll accept your offer."

"Good. We've got a deal, haven't we? You're selling and I'm buying, right?"

"That's the way I understand it. You're giving me $500,000 for the cycle as is."

"Good, now do me a favor. Go take the gas cap off the tank, turn it over and tell me what it says on the back side."

The man did as he was told, took the cap off, turned it over and read the inscription which read:

"To Priscilla, from Elvis."

We don't know if this story is true or not, and neither did Andrews County News Publisher James Roberts, who had the story in his column. But he did call the NBC studio and talked to a publicist for Jay Leno. Roberts reports the man would neither confirm nor deny the story.

Dear Folks,

About 25 years ago, I flew into Hereford and was greatly impressed with the hospitality and progressive attitude I found in the town all the way from the airport to the feedlot.

Recently I returned. You haven't changed much. I still found the same warm generosity and helpfulness that I'd admired previously.

Late in the afternoon while I was driving out of town, I noticed a sound in my brakes. I called the Jossers and asked what their advice might be and they directed me to Stagner-Carr Motors. They even went so far as to call the motor company to see if they could get me in since it was almost 5 p.m.

Jay Gamblin, the service manager, and Michael Carr were there waiting, took me in and graciously replaced the brake pads. Even though it was after hours, they were unfailingly kind and helpful (even when I wandered into the shop to ask stupid questions). They got me on my way quickly, kindly and graciously.

I don't know how you do it, but everybody in Hereford seems to have the same spirit. You and the folks who live there are to be congratulated. It's a pleasure to know that there are so many good people in the world, and Hereford has more than its fair share.

A serving of crow; meet my hero

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

First things first, folks -- I must serve up a helping of humble pie. Last week, I wrote about the need for the City of Hereford to take care of the city's streets.

I suggested that commissioners look at Lubbock's ordinance that requires all bricks removed from a street for utility work be replaced when the work is done, and that the city work on replacing areas of asphalt and concrete with bricks.

Well City Manager Chester Nolan caught me during the week and informed me that the Commission has already brought up the subject of the brick streets and what can be done for them.

I checked with Mayor Bob Jossersand, who told me that plans are for Don Kundert and his Construction Department to look at going around this winter and pulling up bricks in areas where the base has collapsed and replacing it to level the streets.

Jossersand also said the Commission realizes the importance of the brick streets and the value they add to Hereford and that they want to keep them nice.

He also said they would like to replace bricks in areas where they are gone now.

So, I guess I missed the boat on that one!

Thanks, Chester and Mayor Jossersand for pointing out my error. Thanks, also, commissioners for your commitment to keeping these horizontal treasures intact rather than just paving over them.

Now to my regularly-scheduled subject.

With the sports scene really heating up right now (the World Series is just starting, the NFL is in full swing and hockey and basketball are just starting), there are a lot of people running around who can be considered role models and heroes for young people.

You know, people like Michael Irvin, who was arrested in a motel room with two topless dancers and a batch of drugs; Dennis Rodman, who wears colored hair and eye shadow and whose arsenal of profanity rivals anybody alive today; and TV stars Kelsey Grammar and Brett Butler, both of whom are undergoing treatment for various addictions (him alcohol and her prescription drugs).

I'd like to tell you about the only man I've ever considered my hero -- a person who should be a role model for all young people today.

His name was Philip and he lived nearly 2,000 years ago.

Philip has a very small role in the Gospels -- he is mentioned on every list of the 12 Apostles and a few other places, but that's all.

However, it is in the eighth chapter of Acts that he really comes into his own.

What I like so much about Philip is that he was willing to do what had to be done, and he did it without argument or question.

In Acts 8:26, we see that an angel of God appeared to Philip and told him to travel south from Jerusalem into the desert.

Most of us would probably have argued that we could be more effective if we stayed in Jerusalem, where it was cooler, more comfortable and considerably cleaner.

Philip, however, went, and had the opportunity to tell a passing eunuch about Jesus Christ and the way to salvation.

It was through that "chance" encounter that the Gospel was carried all the way to Ethiopia.

So Philip's willingness to follow where God sent him -- even though it would have seemed more profitable and important to stay in Jerusalem -- made a difference in the lives of countless people living on the continent of Africa.

It is that total obedience to God that has always attracted me to Philip.

While I don't always follow God's leading with such single-minded devotion, I long to have the faith of Philip.

My life's verse, I Cor. 15:58, sums it all up -- "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

An AP news analysis

Dole stresses integrity, trust issues

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
SAN DIEGO (AP) - This time it's a Republican war. And Bob Dole is waging it himself, with a combative closing offensive against President Clinton aimed at undoing odds no White House candidate has overcome before.

In the second and final presidential campaign debate, Dole was on the attack, sharply and persistently, on questions of integrity and trust. But he did it carefully, trying to avoid the hatchet-man image turned against him in past campaigns.

Clinton chose the lofty presidential role, saying that insults and attacks don't solve anything.

Although the instant debate polls rated Clinton the winner, the longer term impact of the rival high-road vs. harsh-road campaign strategies will unfold over the 19 days before Americans choose a president on Nov. 5.

After a week of public worry about the tactic, Dole had toughened his line against Clinton in the buildup to the debate, then tried to tackle him face-to-face in the 90-minute showdown.

Even after setting that course, Dole's campaign seemed a bit defensive about it, issuing a statement recalling that Clinton had raised ethics and official behavior as points against George Bush four years ago.

And if the aggressive strategy backfires, Dole may change course again.

Dole, after all, learned a hard lesson about attack tactics as a debater 20 years ago when, running for vice president, he said all the U.S. military conflicts of the 20th century were "Democrat wars." His opponent called him a hatchet man, and long afterward Dole ruefully joked that he'd gone for the jugular and gotten his own.

Hence the caution as Dole honed his attack in a presidential campaign in which he has trailed Clinton all year, now by double-digit polling margins no candidate ever has overcome this late.

He'd passed up an opportunity to hit Clinton on character when it was the first question in their first debate. But he raised it this time in response to a question that suggested national unity, not fighting politicians. In the town hall format, a woman audience member asked why blacks and whites and Democrats and Republicans couldn't "unite" in America.

Good question, Dole said, then used it his way, to keynote his attack on Clinton. "There's no doubt about it that many American people have lost their faith in government," he said. "They see scandals almost on a daily basis. They see ethical problems in the White House today ..."

Again and again, Dole fit his answers to his strategy, whatever the questions. He pressed his tax-cutting plan - although asked directly how he'd balance the budget at the same time, he simply said he would, not how.

Then back to the offensive. "We have the worst economy in a century," Dole overstated at one point. By Clinton's account, it is the best economy in more than 30 years; the president said Dole had said so himself last winter.

But Clinton did not respond directly to accusations such as Dole's claim that presidential trust is violated because Clinton won't rule out future pardons in Whitewater cases. Nor would Clinton respond to Dole's complaints about misuse of FBI files, nor Dole's discussion of questionable foreign contributions to the Democratic campaign.

"Silence is not an answer," Dole said afterwards.

But it was a Clinton tactic. "I don't want to respond in kind to all of these things," the president said. "I could ... answer a lot of these things tit for tat, but I hope we can talk about what we're going to do in the future."

"No attack ever created a job or educated a child or helped a family make ends meet," he added. "... It doesn't solve problems."

Dole's calculation is that attacks may at least solve his.

"When you have thirty-some in your administration who have either left or are being investigated or in jail or whatever, then you've got an ethical problem," Dole said.

Guest Editorial

Amarillo Daily News on President Clinton's war on drugs: Presidential leadership, in its simplest form, occurs when the chief executive stands ready to take the heat all by himself.

On that score, it was disappointing the other night to listen to President Clinton stand in a crowd of millions of Americans in taking responsibility for the increase in drug use among teenagers.

During the first debate between Clinton and Bob Dole, moderator Jim Lehrer, a PBS newscaster, asked the president whether he deserves the blame for the 100 percent increase in teen-age drug use during the past four years. "I think every American in any position of responsibility should be concerned about what's happened. I am," he said.

OK, fine. What the president's answer seems to dismiss, though, is the role of a moral leadership that only a president can provide.

A president who is concerned about an issue, such as drug use, can use his office as the bully pulpit from which leadership flows. Indeed, the president's performance so far on the drug front has sent exactly the opposite message.

Clinton eviscerated the Office of National Drug Control Policy staff by more than 80 percent when he took office. He tried to eliminate more than 620 drug enforcement positions. He hired scores of known former drug users to the White House staff. And he did all this after joking on MTV during the 1992 campaign that if given the chance once again to smoke a little pot that he would have inhaled.

Taken together, all these acts send a terrible message to the nation's youth.

The president's performance in waging the war against illicit drug use has drawn rebuke from key members of his own party, notably Rep. Charlie Rangel of New York, who says that Clinton has abdicated his responsibility in protecting the nation's youth against the scourge of drugs.

While it is true enough that the average American child doesn't think much about the president's leadership before lighting up his or her first joint, it also is true that a head of state can exert tremendous moral leadership on just about any issue under the sun.

President Clinton has fallen short in waging the war on drugs. He should own up to his shortcomings. Such a demonstration of atonement also is the mark of a leader.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Three years ago during the great flood of 1993, Gary Kriegshauser and I delivered a truck load of relief goods to the residents of Alexandria, Missouri. This load was donated by the good people of Hereford and the surrounding area.

Gary and I returned to the scene last week. By chance, we found Mayor Robert Davis of Alexandria. Here, in part, is his story:

The damage was almost complete. Two months plus with water 12 feet deep and more covered the entire town at times and took its toll. When the breaks in the levee were finally repaired and the water pumped out, a heartbreaking sight was revealed.

There was at least six inches of fine silt through and over everything. And winter was just about there. Many individuals and organizations from all over the country donated a vast amount, including churches, civic clubs, and college student groups who joined in the cleanup.

One day seemed to stand out in the mayor's mind. On that day, he told us a gentleman came by and asked what would help most. It turned out he was from Billy Graham's organization and promptly wrote a check for $20,000. Later they gave another $20,000.

That same day a van drove up they also asked what they could do. They asked if there was some place to stay while they were there to help. The mayor said sorry, no luck on a place to stay. But they persisted until he told them they'd have to fix a place themselves if they stayed.

This they readily agreed to do and soon had the place picked out. There were three men in charge and these three stayed for one year. These people were Mennonites from Michigan. They immediately repaired

Accreditation survey set soon for Hereford hospital

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of Hereford Regional Medical Center on Nov. 25 and 26.

The survey will be to evaluate the hospital's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards, according to an announcement by the hospital.

The survey results will be used to determine whether or not the hospital should receive accreditation, and what conditions may be attached.

Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment where care is provided.

Anyone believing he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey.

Information presented at the interview will be evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process.

Interview requests must be made in writing no later than five working days before the survey begins and should include the nature of the information to be provided.

Address requests to: Division of Accreditation Operations, Organization Liaison, Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations, One Renaissance Boulevard, Oakbrook Terrace, Ill. 60181.

The commission will acknowledge requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the hospital of the request for any interview, which will in turn tell the person requesting an interview when and where that meeting will take place.

Austin churches pass on program

AUSTIN (AP) - Austin is giving churches a unique way to help underwrite programs for the homeless, but the churches aren't exactly jumping at the opportunity, say leaders of the effort.

The city-sponsored program lets organizations like churches, synagogues and church schools withhold their drainage fees from the city of Austin, directing the money instead to a coalition to help homeless people.

The exemption became available in August. It is an offshoot of the Austin City Council's banning of overnight camping on public property last year.

As of Friday, 17 religious organizations had been granted exemptions from paying their drainage fees. Another 35, including the city's Roman Catholic church properties, have submitted applications for the exemption.

Together, they represent about a sixth of about 300 church properties eligible for the fee exemption.

Monthly drainage fees by churches range from about $20 to about $400, depending on their property, said David Strychalski, a city fee administrator. The total in drainage fees for all exemptions approved and requested so far is a little more than $3,100.

The Religious Coalition to Assist the Homeless, the group set up to handle the money, could end up getting up to $290,000 if all churches apply. Rose Lancaster, who's on the coalition's steering committee, says it would be happy with $60,000.

The coalition is hoping to make plans for the money by January. The only mandate it has from the city is that it either increase the number of beds available to homeless people or put efforts in motion to do that.

Greater Calvary Baptist is one church that hasn't applied for an exemption. The pastor, Sterling Lands, said that he thinks it's a great idea, but the church has other pressing duties.

"We have our hands full with so many people struggling just to find affordable housing," he said.

Some conservative churches have been reluctant to join the program because of fears that the coalition might pursue too liberal an agenda, said Barbara Hudson, coalition chair.

Most of those fears have been soothed, she said, by pointing out that each church that signs up has a vote on how the money is spent.

At least one of the city's largest churches wants no part of the program. Harold O'Chester, pastor of Great Hills Baptist Church in northwest Austin, says his church is working on its own homeless project.

On the other hand, Beth Seward, lay ministries coordinator for First United Methodist, says the coalition makes much sense for her church.

"We already offer help to the homeless, but this is yet another way for us to help," she said.

Man jailed after failed murder plot, police sting

GRANDVIEW, Texas (AP) - A school board member was in jail Friday, accused of trying to hire an undercover police officer to kill his wife.

Police said a tip led officers to Anthony, a member of the Grandview school board and one-time Dallas firefighter.

Elect MIKE MORRISON Sheriff

WE NEED A JUSTIFIED BUDGET

The work done to deter drugs and gang violence is down, while the budget is increasing. Solved outstanding burglaries and protection against burglaries is down, and again, the budget is increasing.

For years the Sheriff's Department budget has gone up every year to this year's $1,244,082.00 budget. It is time that the budget for the department be a justified budget. I am committed to cutting the budget, saving you, the tax-paying citizens, from higher taxes.

We can put money back into the county by serving over 700 outstanding warrants, putting inmates to work in community service programs with stronger security to prevent escapes.

I, unlike both my opponents, live outside the city limits. I see, firsthand, what goes on in rural in Hereford. I am greatly saddened by friends' and neighbors' accounts of burglaries which never received any follow-up investigation beyond the initial filing of the report. Most of these burglaries involved possessions these people had worked a lifetime to acquire.

I am also concerned by the trash and junk which continues to accumulate alongside our county roads and highways. There is no reason for this with the population of inmates that we house in our county jail. I will put county prisoners to work in a variety of community service jobs, such as cleaning our roadways. We need to make these prisoners work to pay back the taxpayers who pay for inmate housing.

My decision to run for Sheriff was not a decision that I made over night. I have planned for this for thirteen years, and I feel I would bring effective, energetic leadership to the Sheriff's Department.

I WANT TO WORK FOR YOU.

Jurors deadlocked in landmark fetus murder trial

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Jurors have recessed for the weekend after saying they reached a deadlock on punishment of a man convicted of killing a baby born prematurely after he crashed into her mother's car. Jurors deliberated for 4 1/2 hours Friday before declaring a deadlock in the punishment of Frank Flores Cuellar.

Jurors are to return Monday to resume deliberations. Cuellar, 50, faces anywhere from probation to 20 years in prison for the death of Krystal Zuniga, who was delivered shortly after the accident but died 44 hours later. "It's just going to be a long, long, long weekend," said Juan Coronado, the father of Jeannie Coronado, who was 7 1/2 months pregnant with the baby at the time of the accident. There was no announcement

Friday of how the jury is split. Attorneys have declined comment, citing a gag order imposed by Blackmon. The jury on Thursday convicted Cuellar of intoxication manslaughter. The case is one of the first in Texas to test whether a person can be held criminally liable for harming an unborn child. Cuellar's attorney has said she will appeal.

Waco settlement reached

WACO, Texas (AP) - Two Waco news outlets and an ambulance service have settled out of court with federal agents who claimed their actions helped cause the 1993 Branch Davidian raid to go sour.

Both sides agreed to keep details confidential the financial agreement that ended the two-year lawsuit.

Waco Tribune-Herald Publisher Dan Savage said the lawsuit will have no bearing on how the paper covers the community.

"We feel like we had no liability whatsoever in this because there was no basis in fact in the remaining allegation against us," Savage said. "We have nothing to hang our head over."

No admission of wrongdoing or acceptance of liability was included in the settlement, said lawyers for the two media outlets, the Tribune-Herald and KWTX-TV.

But some federal agents said the organizations' reluctance to admit wrongdoing cost them money in the end.

"It just goes to show the arrogance of those people at the newspaper and TV station," said Fort Worth-based agent Mike Russell.

"They could have settled for a lot less two years ago with a simple admission of wrongdoing and an apology. Now it's cost them a lot of money."

The media companies and American Medical Transport were sued by the families of four U.S.

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents who were killed during the Mount Carmel raid. Other agents joined the suit, claiming the defendant's actions contributed to the tragedy.

Jay Smith, president of the Tribune-Herald's parent company, said the settlement was made "without our consent" as a business decision by AIG, Cox Enterprises' liability insurance carrier.

"I disagree 100 percent with AIG's decision," Smith said. "I regret deeply that its effect denies us the opportunity to defeat the claims, which have no basis in fact and law."

"The compromises to the secrecy of the raid were not our doing and, indeed, took place before our reporters even got to the scene of the raid," he said.

Why I'll Vote For Ross Perot

I will vote for Ross Perot for president for many reasons. The primary one being that he will put our nation and its people first in all decisions. I have worked under him as a member of UWSA (United We Stand America), and The Reform Party for the past four busy years. I have read his five books, which state the problems of our people and his approach to solving them. He is a strong leader who has answers, whether they be rural or urban issues. This is why a concerted effort is being made by the entire news media which is composed of the United Nations establishment, the Republican and Democratic Parties, and corporate America to "black out" or distort all news of Ross Perot and The Reform Party. These groups intend to maintain the power over our nation.

Seventy-six percent of Americans wanted Ross Perot and Pat Choate in the debates: A news release today, October 14th shows to what extremes they will continue the attacks. Ross Perot's strong opposition to the Clinton Health Plan has been widely documented in the news media. Yet Mr. George Carpozi, Jr. in newspapers says the Electronic Data Systems would prosper from a Clinton Health Plan; therefore, Ross Perot would prosper. Perot sold Electronic General Motors in 1984. Another allegation - that Ross helped Hillary Clinton's health care proposal through the Diebold Institute. Though Ross was a member of the Diebold Institute Commission, he had nothing to do with a paper from the Institute which found its way into the papers of Hillary's health plan.

To answer a few other charges. There was no time to debate Richard Lamm before the Reform Party's Convention. Dick Lamm understood this. The charge that Ross Perot refused to release our list of members of the Reform Party; both political parties sell their lists (one reason for all the junk mail we get), and have never made public for how much. Our list is worth at least $4 million and we told people who joined that we do not sell our list. The commotion continued so we said "O.K., you can buy the list for $1,000." Fair enough? The allegation that only Ross Perot's money funds the Reform Party. Wrong - all members contribute our money and time.

Our nation does have an exciting future in computer technology. But because of the trade deals, over one-half of our industrial base is now in Mexico or overseas. We have lost seven million good jobs which included benefits. Sixty to sixty-two percent opposed NAFTA; eighty to eighty-two percent opposed GATT. The Republicans led the fight for both, and Clinton signed it into law...after NAFTA the peso devalued, as Perot warned it would. Senator Bob Dole and Congressman Newt Gingrich urged President Clinton to use the $52 billion, which is kept in reserve to prop up the dollar, to bail out the peso. Two weeks ago President Zedillo of Mexico borrowed $20 million from Germany at a higher rate of interest, and President Clinton, when accepting the check, had the audacity to boast that we made money on the loan.

Under the Republicans' "USA Today" on September 20th revealed the middle class is working two or three jobs to maintain their standard of living. The income of working America has declined or stayed the same for 20 years. At the same time, the politicians and the rich have gained more wealth.

Bankruptcies in America are at an all-time high and the FDIC is becoming alarmed at the plastic (credit card) debt. The national debt is $5.5 trillion with obligations of $15 trillion more (a total of $20 trillion.)

Gold no longer backs our dollar. The world has warned Washington two or three times to take care of our debt. In 1995, Japan bought up dollars to prop up the dollar. Is it any wonder smart investors are buying treasury notes abroad now? If World Trade starts thinking "as good as a Japanese yen or German mark" (instead of the dollar), we will really be bankrupt.

Ross Perot knows money, has dealt with solving complex problems such as we have in Washington, is not afraid of losing votes so will cut spending fairly, and he realizes that without a middle class of people we lose our tax base. I have not heard this from Perot, but I'll bet one of the first things he will do is to cut the $167 billion a year Corporate welfare. Recently, in an interview, Phil Gramm tells us eventually $45 million will be cut from welfare but not one word about Corporate welfare. He and other politicians love the millions which flow in from Corporate America.

According to READER'S DIGEST, after the trade deals were passed, 127 federal subsidies were set up using American taxpayers' dollars. Any company maintaining an office in the U.S. and shipping U.S. commodities are eligible for subsidies. Luis Dreyfus, a Frenchman, collected $1 billion. Eleven Japanese firms received a total of $393 million. The Corporate welfare goes to such companies as Archer Daniels Midland, General Electric, Westinghouse, AT&T, Sunkist, Gallo Wines, Tyson Chicken, McDonald's, Pillsbury and others. Many of these relocated overseas for cheap labor, and no longer share our property taxes.

Since 1992, Perot's UWSA have been studying how to save Social Security ("S.S."), Medicare, Medicaid, and the remaining problems in Washington. Perot's words "within a year of our administration, the IRS will be terminated and a new and fairer tax system will be in place."

Folks, on January 1, 1997, our Congress with Perot as President and Pat Choate's help, the "Blame Game" will be eliminated and the U.S. Government will start addressing the issues. A constructive, working atmosphere will continue until the power belonging to the states will be returned and the business of the Federal Government will decrease to the extent a month or two a year will be all the time that is necessary, and then members can return home to look for work.

Paul Traux, of the Reform Party of Texas, remarked about Perot, "Why would a man who has accomplished more than most people could in three lifetimes subject himself to constant criticism and ridicule? Believe me, it's not ego but a deep-seated belief: "If not me, who will tell the American people the truth?"

Herd repels Raiders for Homecoming victory

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces came from behind twice, then protected their lead in exciting fashion to capture a 26-21 Homecoming victory over Randall Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

In the tradition of Hereford-Randall matchups from 1991-1994, Friday's game wasn't decided until the Herd's Richard Sierra picked off Brian Evans' desperation pass after time expired.

The Herd improved to 2-2 in District 1-4A and 3-4 overall with its first win at home after being outscored 91-0 in home losses to Coronado and Pampa. Those struggles seemed to be forgotten after Friday's game.

"There's no words to express this feeling," said Josh Alvarado - offensive guard, defensive tackle and newly-crowned Homecoming King. "We're on our way to turning this thing around."

"We just did, Josh," offensive tackle Scottie Brewer said, hearing Alvarado. "We just did."

Herd coach Craig Yenzen said the Whitefaces needed this win.

"I put a lot of pressure on (the players) this week," Yenzen said. "I've told them all year that we weren't worried about wins, that we just needed to get the Hereford program back to where it was. This week, I told them we needed a win for this program, and they responded tremendously. I can't say enough about how hard they played and how hard they've worked."

"I think what's happened is we've put the fun back in Hereford High School football," Yenzen said, "and it's directly attributable to these seniors and juniors."

The Whitefaces had fun, all right, but they had to earn it. After Jeremy Scott's two-yard touchdown run gave Hereford a 26-21 lead with 7:36 left to play, the Herd had to repel two Raider threats in the final two minutes.

The first threat ended on a play in a fourth-and-goal situation at the Herd 23-yard line. On the play:

--Herd cornerback Navarro Mariscal tipped Evans' pass at the goal line, but he tipped it up.

--Randall tight end Jeff Widrich settled under the ball and cradled his arms. Time stopped - until...

--Herd safety Henry Hernandez

popped Widrich, and the ball fell to the ground.

That was the most dramatic of dozens of dramatic plays on both sides. The fourth-and-goal at the 23 situation was set up two plays earlier, on second-and-goal at the six-yard line.

Herd end Trip Robison caught Evans and twirled him around twice, but Evans wouldn't fall. While still in Robison's grasp, Evans flipped the ball forward and was called for intentional grounding.

Robison was credited with a sack for a 12-yard loss.

"I kept waiting for somebody to come help," Robison said, "but there was no way I was letting go."

The Herd took over after the fourth down pass failed with 1:52 left, but Hereford was forced to punt after three plays.

Even that wasn't simple: Hereford took a delay penalty while running down the clock, then came an illegal procedure penalty when snapper T.J. Danley tried a quick snap as the Raiders were still running onto the field. Danley said he thought the Whitefaces were set; a referee disagreed.

Still, John Marty Galan's punt went 45 yards in front of the strong south wind that blew throughout the game.

Evans completed three short passes in the final 27 seconds to get to the Herd 32. On the third pass, Micah Ladd was knocked out with zeroes on the clock, but officials ruled there was one second left and allowed one more play.

Because of the strong wind, though, Evans' Hail Mary pass didn't even reach the end zone, and Sierra picked it off near the 10.

The wind was an advantage to the Herd in the fourth quarter, but it didn't seem to bother either team much in the first half.

Randall faced the wind in the first quarter and scored on its first possession without completing a pass. Deion Soria's 28-yard kickoff return let the Raiders start at their own 36, and on the fifth play, tailback Jesse Hunnicut streaked up the right sideline 37 yards for a touchdown. Randall faked a kick and tried to run for two points but failed.

The Herd had the wind at its back to start but netted minus-4 yards on its first two possessions. Quarterback Joseph Artho hit tight end Nathan Gavina for a 32-yard gain on Hereford's third possession, but that drive stalled. Galan tried a 41-yard field goal but missed badly.

Randall was forced to punt soon after, but Hereford's Josh Martinez muffed it and Randall recovered at the Herd 35. Evans passed to Ladd for a 24-yard gain, and three plays later Evans took it in from two yards out. Evans passed to Widrich for a two-point conversion and a 14-0 lead.

"We had maybe a little too much Homecoming," Yenzen said of the slow start. "We came out flat, and it took us the whole first quarter to get started. When we did, these kids got a lot of confidence in a hurry."

Hereford's Stephen Cloud nearly broke the ensuing kickoff for a touchdown, but the kicker got him at the Randall 47. That got Hereford started, though.

Four plays later, Cloud took a screen pass from Artho and went to the Randall three-yard line. Although an illegal block penalty moved the ball back to the 13, Artho hit Gavina two plays later with the Herd's first touchdown in Whiteface Stadium this season: a 14-yard pass.

"I knew somebody had to step up, because we hadn't scored all year long at home," Gavina said. "When Joe threw that pass, there was no stopping me from catching it."

The run failed, but Hereford stopped Randall and got the ball back. A 10-play, 69-yard drive followed, featuring nothing but rushing. Cloud, Artho and Scott all had runs of 10 or more yards.

Cloud carried the ball for a TD from three yards out. The pass for two points failed, but Hereford had come back within 14-12 at halftime.

"Usually it takes us a while to get our rhythm," Cloud said. "We eventually found a weakness in their defense - certain plays to certain sides that worked for us."

Evans fumbled on Randall's first offensive play of the second half, and Hereford's Danley dove on the ball at the Raider 44.

"It looked like a golden egg," he said.

C.J. Kubacak, the Herd receiver who entered the game with 30 catches - fourth in Class 4A - got involved with three catches for 30 yards as Hereford drove towards a touchdown.

On the seventh play, Scott crashed into the end zone from a yard out. Artho went to Kubacak again for the Taking it and dishing it out

Hereford fullback Jeremy Scott takes some punishment here from a Randall defender, but mostly it was Scott doing the punishing during the Herd's 26-21 Homecoming victory over the Raiders Friday night at Whiteface Stadium. Scott scored two touchdowns - including the game-winner - and led the Herd with 72 rushing yards.

Herd spikers ready for 1-4A showdown

The Dumas Demonettes handed the Hereford volleyball team its only loss of the season Sept. 28 in Dumas, winning a marathon match, 9-15, 15-11, 17-15.

The Lady Whitefaces learned a few things that day that may come in handy Tuesday, when the two District 1-4A rivals meet in Whiteface Gym during the second round of district play.

"We showed a lack of conditioning by the third game, so we learned we had to get ourselves in condition physically for matches that may last two hours," Herd coach Brenda Rech said.

"We learned that they (Dumas) can sit in the backcourt forever and dig hard hits from our front line," Rech said. "We learned that they blocked us very well, even with a single blocker at times. So we're going to have to prepare to take swings that get them guessing on the speed of hits and on the placement of hits."

"What we'll have to do against them is get their diggers moving

Hereford tennis team falls to Randall, 10-4

The Hereford tennis team ended its fall season with a 10-4 loss to Randall in the first round of the District 1-4A Tournament Friday in Amarillo.

Herd coach Ed Coplen said the team played well; they just didn't win enough matches. The team match ended with four singles matches still on the court when Randall got the required 10 victories.

Randall is the No. 3 seed in the tournament. Hereford was seeded sixth after finishing the district schedule with a 1-5 record.

"We really weren't that bad," Coplen said. "If we were in that other district (2-4A), we'd probably be going to regionals. But just like last year, this the toughest district in most of the state."

Following are the results of the 14 matches which were completed.

Abilene Cooper upsets Permian

The last time Abilene Cooper beat Odessa Permian, in 1979, former NFL tight end Terry Orr was in the Cougars' backfield.

Cooper upset the state's sixth-ranked Class 5A team, 35-21, Friday night as Michael Anderson passed for 254 yards and four touchdowns and Dominic Rhodes combined for 254 yards rushing and receiving.

Abilene Cooper improved to 4-3 overall and 2-1 in District 4-5A action, while Mojo fell to 5-2 and 2-1.

Anderson's 46-yard touchdown pass to Miles Durham with 16 seconds left in the first half gave Cooper a 21-7 lead, and the Cougars made it 28-7 early in the second half when Rhodes took a screen pass and scampered 79 yards for a touchdown.

Permian came back with a touchdown on Ja'Quay Wilburn's 3-yard run, but Rhodes sealed the victory with a 32-yard touchdown run on a fourth-and-11 draw play midway through the fourth quarter.

Elsewhere, all the No. 1-ranked teams in The Associated Press Top 10 prevailed Friday night in Texas high school football.

- in 5A, top-ranked North Mesquite beat Richardson Pearce, 24-7, as Will Overstreet threw two first-quarter touchdowns and Jason Coffey rushed for 145 yards, pushing him past the 1,000-yard mark for the season.

- in 4A, No. 1-ranked Grapevine held off Highland Park, 17-14, by knocking down a pass at the end zone on the game's final play.

around much more than we did at any point in the first match. I think we just used power in everything we swung at, and they read us and dug us and blocked us. We didn't make them have to change their defense."

At stake Tuesday is the district crown. Dumas leads 1-4A with a 10-0 record (21-4 overall), while Hereford is right behind at 9-1 and 24-1. Dumas, which was off Saturday, would effectively clinch an outright district title with a victory Tuesday.

Hereford was to play at Pampa Saturday. With wins over Pampa and Dumas, Hereford would claim a share of the district title. Hereford is off Saturday (Oct. 26) - the last date of the regular season.

Hereford and Dumas have clinched playoff spots; Canyon (6-3) and Pampa (5-4) are vying for the third playoff berth.

Tuesday's action starts at 6 p.m. with a junior varsity match, and that's also a grudge match for Hereford, as Dumas won the first meeting. The varsity match will start about 20 minutes after the JV match concludes.

The Lady Whitefaces want very much to win Tuesday, Reeh said.

"We have a real big grudge to settle," she said. "We were a little embarrassed after that match in the first round. We'd like to come out here on Tuesday and prove we're a much better team than we were on that Saturday."

Rainstorm threatens start of World Series

NEW YORK (AP) - As the Atlanta Braves sat on a bus in traffic, the rain was still somewhere over Ohio. Already, though, the defending champions had seen more than enough of the bad side of New York.

The NL champions got a dose of Friday afternoon rush hour when it took them two hours to get from the airport to their hotel and another hour to reach Yankee Stadium. Welcome to the World Series?

They'll have to get used to it.

With weather forecasts predicting torrential rains for Saturday and most of Sunday, a postponement of Game 1 seemed a certainty. And depending on when the rain stops, Game 2 could be in jeopardy as well.

FOOTBALL

two-point conversion, and Hereford led 20-14.

Hernandez performed perhaps the bit of the year on the ensuing kickoff, going untouched through the Randall wall and crushing return man Hunnicutt.

The teams traded punts, then Randall reclaimed the lead with a 64-yard drive, which included a roughing-the-passer penalty on Hereford. On the next play, Hunnicutt got loose for a 32-yard TD run. Bart Cheyne's kick put Randall up 21-20 with 1:29 left in the third quarter.

The wind finally got to Hereford when Galan's punt got up in the wind and went only five yards. The Herd defense held, though, despite a scare: on fourth down, a flag flew for an apparent pass interference call, but the pass was tipped at the line, nullifying the interference.

Hereford took over at its own 28 and launched the winning drive. The key play came on third-and-13 at the Herd 37, when receiver Ruben Flores caught an Artho pass in tight coverage for a 17-yard gain. A 15-yard personal foul penalty against Randall was tacked on, moving the ball to the Randall 31.

Three plays later, Kubacak caught an 18-yard pass and was knocked out of bounds at the two-yard line. After Cloud was stoned on two straight runs, Scott - first cousin of Homecoming Queen Andrea Scott - scored the go-ahead touchdown on a two-yard dive.

The pass for two points failed, but Hereford led 26-21 with 7:26 left.

Galan's kickoff - with the wind at his back - went through the end zone, and Randall was forced to start at its own 20. The Raiders moved down the field with 12 straight running plays - Hernandez made a touchdown saving tackle on one - but it chewed up most of the remaining time.

Randall got as far as the Hereford six-yard line, but no further, thanks to Robison's sack, then Hernandez' hit.

Strangely, a Herd team that's been shut out three times can now consider a playoff berth a possibility - with three teams advancing out of the jumbled District 1-4A.

The Herd hits the road Friday to meet 5-1 Dumas. After that, Hereford has an open week, then closes the regular season at home against Canyon Nov. 8.

"We've got two games left, and we've got to take them one at a time," Alvarado said. "We've got to get ready for Dumas. You can't stop the Herd now."

YOUR EYES

Take Care Of Your Glasses

Your prescription glasses or quality sunglasses represent an investment in your good vision and your good looks. It makes sense to protect them and prolong their useful life. Here are a few tips:

- Keep glasses in a case whenever they're not being worn.
- Clean dust or lint with a soft cloth, and use a lens cleaner to remove smudges and oil. Never use nails to scratch off a spot.
- Take glasses off gently with two hands, not one. Pulling them off will strain the hinges; the temple piece may break off.
- Wearing glasses atop one's head may look stylish, but the temples will probably stretch out of shape.
- Don't place glasses face down on a table or other surface; they are likely to scratch.
- If glasses are in plastic frames, avoid leaving them in concentrated sun--as, for instance, on the dashboard of your car.

Rocket vets not ready to quit yet

By EDDIE SEFKO
Houston Chronicle
HOUSTON - Like it or not, health is going to be a constant topic in the Rockets' locker room this season.

When you have four players with a combined half-century of NBA experience around whom your team revolves, it is inevitable that every ache, every new ice bag applied to a new body part, will be the subject of conversation.

Clyde Drexler doesn't see what the fuss is about, even though he is one of the Rockets who will be watched the closest. He is, after all, coming off knee surgery - "minor knee surgery," he corrects - and at 34 the wheels can't be what they were before a few million trips up and down the floor and thousands upon thousands of jump shots and dunks.

But from Drexler's perspective, the Rockets' core represents a rare luxury in the NBA - four smart, experienced players who still have their God-given talents. Even if those talents have eroded slightly, Drexler believes himself, Charles Barkley, Hakeem Olajuwon and Kevin Willis have a commodity to make up for it.

"You get certain advantages mentally in this game as you become a veteran player," Drexler said. "You get smarter. You don't have to work so hard for every basket like you did when you were younger."

In short, you learn how to play the game more efficiently, Barkley said.

"You have to get smarter as you go on because your body's not going to allow you to do all the things you did when you were younger," he said.

And so, the Rockets also will be known as the thinking man's team this season.

Not that the abilities aren't there. The quality quartet take extremely good care of themselves. That's half the battle.

And already, the dividends from treating their bodies like temples is showing. Drexler started the season by going 8-for-9 from the field in the intrasquad game. He then posted 15 points, six rebounds, four assists and two steals in 31 minutes in the exhibition opener. Not bad for a guy who sat out 30 games last season, most of them after having arthroscopic surgery to repair a tear of the lateral meniscus in his right knee.

The only concession Drexler is making this season is to wear a pair of kneecaps, like Olajuwon has been doing throughout his career.

"There's not a trace of problems," Drexler said of the knee. "In a perfect world, we'd all like to be able to be 100-percent healthy and not have to worry about anything. But this is a physical game and you're going to have to play through a little pain once in a while."

"After 14 years, if that (occasionally sore knees) is all I've got, I'd say I'm the picture of health."

Similarly, Barkley's back hasn't made a peep this season, and he says it hasn't been an issue since the 1994-95 season.

"It hasn't affected me for two years," Barkley, 33, said.

And then there's Olajuwon, 33, who is a slow starter in training camp. He's not in his best shape, but he's better off than he has been in the last two or three training camps.

Willis, 34, is the only one of the "Big Four" who has sat out because of an ailment. His lower back flared up last weekend against Boston, and he sat out most of the second half of the Oct. 12 game.

Neither he nor members of the Rockets' staff believe Willis' back will fester into anything worse than a preseason annoyance.

At some point, every great player loses some of his skills and becomes less of a star than he once was. But listening to the Rockets gives you the impression they are as young as they feel.

In the locker room before an exhibition win over Boston, Drexler and Barkley were discussing older players, mainly assistant coach Larry Smith.

Barkley: "The way Larry bangs in practices, I think he's still got some juice left."

Drexler: "Hey, Larry's only 39 years old."

Barkley: "Don't say 'only 39.' It makes you sound old. There's only three reasons I'd still be playing when I'm 39. I'd have to be either dumb, stupid or broke."

After a pause, Barkley added, "So financial hardship is the only reason I'd still be playing."

The way the Rockets' main men are going, though, you have to wonder if it isn't possible that they could still be productive longer than they plan on hanging around the game.

Bye week rejuvenates Smith

Dallas star gets rest, responds with big game

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - Emmitt Smith is a man of immense pride. A slippage in performance takes some of the bounce out of his step. He doesn't smile as much. Some of his sense of humor fades.

For the four-time NFL rushing champion, who holds league and Super Bowl MVP awards, the first six games of this season have been as difficult as any he has faced in seven years in the league.

"A struggle," is the way he phrases it.

He's had injuries from the top of his head down to his always banged-up ankles. Try doing anything with an injured rib. Like Smith says, "It only hurts when you breathe."

But Smith may have turned the corner. The NFL's blessed bye week provided time for his banged-up body to heal. And he responded with a 112-yard rushing day and two touchdowns in a 17-3 win over the Cardinals.

Dallas coach Barry Switzer told him after the game, "You reminded me of a guy I remembered watching last year."

During the 1995 season, Smith had 11 games of 100 or more yards rushing. This year he has two.

Smith hopes he's on the run again with the winless Atlanta Falcons (0-6) challenging the Dallas Cowboys (3-3) on Sunday at Texas Stadium. Smith is 211 yards behind league leader Robert Smith of Minnesota, as Dallas faces the 23rd-ranked team in the NFL against the rush.

Emmitt watches the statistics. He can't help himself.

"I'd be lying to you if I said winning a rushing title was not important," Smith said. "It's still important to me, because when you don't win the rushing title, people say, 'Oh, he didn't have a good season.' People expect me to win the title. I expect to win it. There are some guys having some really good seasons. I just had my injury bug early."

Emmitt Smith currently stands 10th in the league in rushing.

"I feel like I can catch Robert Smith. You've got to keep chip, chip, chipping away. Who knows? I may have one big game that may put me up there with the leaders. I still have some big runs left in me. I've still got some big games left in me."

What better game to start than Sunday against the lowly 15-point underdog Falcons?

Smith said the Cowboys still have to take the Falcons seriously. "Every team plays its best game when it comes to Texas Stadium to play the Cowboys," Smith said.

"I still don't think Emmitt is 100 percent," Switzer said. "But two of the last three times he ran the football against Arizona, he ricocheted off tackles like he has in the past."

Dallas holds a 12-6 series edge over Atlanta, winning three of the last four games, including a 28-13 win at the Georgia Dome last year.

Atlanta's last win was 27-14 in 1993, when Deion Sanders caught a 70-yard touchdown pass against Dallas.

Now Sanders plays offense and defense for the Cowboys. Yet another edge for Dallas.

Oilers, Steelers plan to just play football

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers and Pittsburgh Steelers say they're not going to try to out-talk or outfight each other this time. Some of them can't afford it.

The anticipated rematch takes place in the Astrodome on Sunday, when the Steelers and Oilers resume their AFC Central rivalry that ended the last time they played with 35 players being fined a combined $53,500.

"With all the fines we got before, I don't think there will be any trouble," said Oilers safety Marcus Robertson, who was ejected in the first game and drew the stiffest fine at $7,500.

Additional fines would be levied if players get into more fisticuffs this season. Oilers coach Jeff Fisher and Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher have lectured this week on playing emotional but legal football.

"The one thing we can't afford is to lose somebody. We have to use good judgment," Cowher said. "We've got 50 percent of our team on probation going into this game."

Pittsburgh beat the Oilers 30-16 on Sept. 29 in a game spiced by two fights, trash-talking and accusations of dirty play.

Oilers cornerback Cris Dishman called Steelers linebackers Chad Brown and Jerry Olsavsky "bums" who could only make the Oilers' practice squad. Dishman has taken a milder approach to Sunday's game.

"I'm not worried about Brown and Olsavsky," he said. "I'm more worried about Jerome Bettis."

The Oilers should worry about Bettis, who has five straight 100-yard rushing games and could tie Franco Harris' club record of six Sunday games against the Oilers.

Quarterback Mike Tomczak is having an outstanding season directing traffic.

Tomczak scuffled with Robertson in the first game. He just wants to complete passes over him this time.

"That stuff was kind of embarrassing, to be honest, and I think both teams are focused on the importance of this game," Tomczak said. "For Houston and Pittsburgh it's going to be a wonderful matchup. I think the NFL likes these matchups. They create a lot of interest."

Fisher emphasized the need to concentrate on football.

"We don't need to be distracted by things that are said or misinterpreted, things that are fabricated or things that are dug up from 2-3 weeks ago," Fisher said. "Let's pay attention to what we have to do in the classroom and on the practice field and play 60 minutes of solid football."

There is plenty of incentive for this game without bringing up the last meeting of the teams.

The Steelers (5-1) have won five in a row and they've beaten the Oilers (4-2) the last five times they've played, but the Oilers could gain a tie for the division lead if they win.

The Oilers fell behind quickly in their first game. Tempers flared in the first half and it took the Oilers until the second half to settle down.

"You don't go anywhere until you beat the big dog, and in this division that's the Pittsburgh Steelers," Oilers' fineman Irv Eatman said. "We don't go anywhere until we handle them, no matter how you look at it."

The Steelers rank fifth in the NFL in total defense and second in rushing offense.

"There is no mystery about the Pittsburgh defense," Fisher said. "Their defense is one of the top, if not the top defense in the NFL, and they turn the ball over for their offense. They run the ball on offense and play solid aggressive defense."

Amarillo hockey team puts off opener

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - No ice means no home opener for the Amarillo Rattlers minor-league hockey team, at least for a couple of days.

Problems installing ice at the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum, compounded by a rock concert scheduled for the building Saturday night, have pushed back the Western Professional Hockey League's home debut until at least Wednesday.

"We've been pushing it as hard as we can, and we've got guys down there that have been working long hours and trying to do everything the can to make it work," Rattlers co-owner Dave Curtis said.

The Creedence Clearwater Revisited concert would interfere with the time it takes to properly freeze the rink, officials said. Officials determined Thursday they weren't going to have a sheet of ice down in time for Monday night's scheduled home opener against the Central Texas Stampede.

Texas cities cooperate to lure NCAA offices

By CALEB SOLOMON
The Wall Street Journal's
Texas Journal

Now here's one for Ripley's: Economic-development officials in Texas' biggest cities are actually cooperating over a potential relocation.

The object of their cooperation is the National Collegiate Athletic Association, college athletics' governing body, which is looking to move its headquarters from Overland Park, Kan., a Kansas City suburb. Snaring the NCAA is considered a plum by economic-development officials - on a par with luring the headquarters of a Fortune 500 company.

Several months ago, the NCAA said it was looking to bring its fame, its 250 employees (average salary: $46,000), a tourist attraction called the Hall of Champions and the possibility of a couple of major sporting events to one of 10 locales. Three semifinalists are in Texas: Houston, San Antonio and the Metroplex (Dallas and Fort Worth have proffered their own olive branch and may combine their efforts).

While the economic impact of a move would be bigger than a bread box, the prestige and ensuing publicity is what makes the NCAA most enticing to economic-development executives.

"When people think of the NCAA they think of Kansas City," says Mario Hernandez, president of the San Antonio Economic Development Corp. "We'd like them to think of San Antonio."

Normally, if economic-development officials from big Texas cities bump into each other, it's while trying to lure the same out-of-state corporate headquarters, manufacturing plant or other job-creating facility to their towns. But this time, they're cooperating as well as competing.

Representatives from the three metropolitan areas initiated a conference call two weeks ago with Brenda Arnett, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce. They want her to enlist the governor's help in coming up with a state-sponsored bag of goodies that all three metro areas could use as incentives to reduce the NCAA's costs.

"We want a uniform package," says Saadat Syal, vice president of marketing for the economic-development division of the Greater Houston Partnership. Then each city on the short list will augment the state package with its own, as it makes a case for why it should be the NCAA's choice.

The idea came from Bill Thornton, vice president of economic development at the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, who says cooperative efforts aren't uncommon, at least in the Metroplex area. But joint ventures are almost unheard of elsewhere in the state, in part because Texas' major cities don't often wind up on the same short lists.

"Typically we don't find ourselves butting heads with other major Texas cities," Thornton says. Or at least they don't butt heads this late in the process.

The unusual circumstances began when the NCAA hired Arthur

Andersen LLP's relocation-consulting business to help find a new site. Early this year, Arthur Andersen sent out invitations to scores of cities across the country, inviting them to provide information to bid on a relocation candidate. Arthur Andersen gave some details on the potential prize, but kept the NCAA anonymous. Cities had to respond by the end of February.

It wasn't until August that the list was narrowed to 10, and the semifinalists learned it was the NCAA they were after. It's at this point in the process where it's unusual for so many Texas cities to still be in the running. Now they must all respond to a host of more-detailed questions about themselves, such as air-travel convenience, ethnic diversity and cost-saving inducements.

By this point, there's usually only one major Texas city left, and if there's state help to seek, the city does so. Now, says San Antonio's Hernandez, the joint plea makes sense because it can save time (proposals are due back to Arthur Andersen by Nov. 7), and out-of-state cities are doing the same thing.

"We're up against cities that are the sole cities in their state," Hernandez says, "and you know those cities are going to bring state government right behind them."

The problem however, is that while individual Texas cities have incentive arsenals that can include tax breaks, easing of development regulations, education promises or outright cash, the state of Texas can offer very little. Unlike some other states, Texas has no incentive programs or low-interest loans to help pay for a company's relocation costs, for instance.

"We're really going to have to work with the Commerce Department and the governor and get very creative," says Syal of the Greater Houston Partnership. For instance, economic-development executives have wondered about the existence of discretionary funds that may be available to Gov. George W. Bush.

Aside from the economic incentives, each Texas city can boast of one or more standout attributes that could score well on the NCAA's long list of desires. NCAA staffers travel extensively, and Dallas-Fort Worth probably offers the best air service in Texas. Houston has the greatest ethnic diversity. San Antonio's tourist industry may best complement and enhance the NCAA's Hall of Champions, which the association wants to upgrade.

Big 12's South champ may have two losses

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Steve Hatchell, the czar of the Big 12 Conference, was at an Oklahoma-Texas pregame function the other day, smiling, shaking hands and doing all the goodwill things he does so well.

The sharp and witty commissioner of the new league is seldom left without a oneliner or a comeback. But things haven't been going great for the first year of Big 12 Conference football. The defending national champion Nebraska Cornhuskers were upset by Arizona State and long before Halloween every team in the league had suffered defeat.

In fact, Nebraska, Colorado and Kansas State were the only teams ranked in The Associated Press top 25 going into this weekend's play. All, interestingly, were from the North division. No South division members were so honored after Texas was sent spinning out of the rankings with losses to Notre Dame, Virginia and Oklahoma.

Remember when the Big 12 was heralding the fact it had seven teams in the top 25 of the final 1995 AP poll? Of course, the rankings were deserved because the future Big 12 teams won six of seven bowl games.

That was yesterday. What has the league done lately?

Anyway, back to Hatchell. A questioner inquired "bet you can't wait until basketball starts?"

What? A no comment from Hatchell? Did we detect a slight roll of the eyes?

"We're going to have a tremendous basketball season," said the commissioner with a smile. "Glad you asked."

There should be some tremendous Big 12 basketball teams but thump-thump doesn't start until late November and early December.

What are the football prospects from now until then for the Little Eleven and Nebraska?

One thing for certain, it's going to be a wild, wild chase in the Big 12 South where it will be very possible for a team with two league losses to represent the division in the conference's championship game on Dec. 7 in St. Louis.

This sucker could resemble one of those old Southwest Conference races where everybody killed everybody and it took one of Bo Carter's computers to figure out who won.

Texas, the preseason favorite out of the south, has confused everyone including its ownself. Losses to Notre Dame, Virginia and Oklahoma have caused great first, second and third guessing of coach John Mackovic and his defensive coordinator Gary Darnell. Texas had a bye week to find out what went wrong.

Texas A&M has had more ups and downs than a roller coaster ride at Six Flags. The Aggies lost games to Brigham Young and Southwestern Louisiana after producing a fried pie factory full of turnovers. However, new quarterback Brannnon Stewart and wide receiver Albert Connell can cause trouble. Whether it's enough to get the Aggies to St. Louis remains to be seen.

The Texas Tech Red Raiders and the amazing Byron Hanspard showed against Kansas what they are capable of doing. With games remaining against Texas A&M and Texas, the Red Raiders could be right there for meeting Nebraska (can we already give them the North title?) in Saint Louis.

Oklahoma still has games left with A&M and Texas Tech and could be troublesome because the Sooners showed against the Longhorns what determination can produce. Forget Oklahoma State and Baylor this year.

Nationally, the new Big 12 didn't live up to its hype.

Then again you can't blame Hatchell for trying.

The Disney movie "Captain Hook" came to life on the Hereford High School Junior Class float. Several juniors were prepared to "Hook the Raiders" aboard the pirate ship in the Homecoming parade on Friday. The Junior Class float captured the title of best overall float.

Militia leader, member arrested

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Two members of the Republic of Texas organization were arrested Friday after a routine traffic stop.

Archie Huel Lowe, 55, of Rice, identified himself as the president of the group. He was arrested for having an expired vehicle registration and no proof of insurance.

Usually a driver receives a citation, which is a promise to appear later in court. But Lowe told the arresting officer that he did not recognize the laws of the state and was arrested as a high risk not to appear, said police Lt. Scott McCollum. Conviction on each count is punishable by a $500 fine.

Also arrested was Richard Lee Ray Jr., 30, of Corsicana, a passenger in the 1978 Cadillac.

Ray, who identified himself as a Texas Ranger for the Republic of Texas, was arrested on a misdemeanor charge of unlawfully carrying weapons. Conviction of the charge is punishable by up to one year in jail and a maximum fine of $4,000.

An officer had asked Ray to get out of the car after spotting a stun gun on the front seat. Ray admitted to having a handgun in his waistband, although he did not have a concealed weapons permit, McCollum said.

Bond for Lowe was set at $390, but McCollum did not know if bond had been set for Ray. Both were being held at the College Station detention facility.

"They've been fairly cordial," McCollum said. "We've received several calls from their people saying that Mr. Lowe is being held unlawfully, but he is being very lawfully detained."

News of the arrests was posted on the Republic of Texas Internet home page with a request that calls of support for the arrested men be made to the police and Brazos County sheriff.

Jeanette Kinman, spokeswoman for the group, said police were risking an international incident and that Lowe should have diplomatic immunity.

"This could really turn into a major incident," she said. "I don't know if the chief of police understands the gravity of the situation."

Members of the Republic of Texas contend that the 1845 annexation of Texas was illegal and that it remains an independent republic.

New Mexicans set for Powerball

By MARTHA MENDOZA Associated Press Writer ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - It's time for New Mexicans to play ball. Powerball, that is.

The multi-state lottery game, offering jackpots that have hit more than $111 million, starts in New Mexico on Sunday.

"That's the big money right there," said Danny Gallegos of Albuquerque, who was delighted to see Powerball computers being installed at a gas station recently.

Powerball tickets cost $1. To play, players choose a total of six numbers - five numbers from a field of numbers 1 through 45, and one Powerball number from a separate field of 1 through 45. Players may choose their own numbers or they can have the computer pick them with a so-called "Quick Pick" random selection program.

The money is pooled into a jackpot with Powerball ticket buyers in 21 other states. Winning numbers are determined when five white balls and one red ball - the Powerball - are drawn from drums.

Drawings are held every Wednesday and Saturday night by the Multi-state Lottery Association in West Des Moines, Iowa, and will be broadcast live in New Mexico.

Gallegos said he'll be watching. He said he played the game while visiting Colorado, and that he'll use his kids' birthdays as his lucky numbers.

"I'm not a big gambler or anything, but this one is fun," he said.

The average Powerball ticket buyer stands a 1-in-84 chance of matching one number and winning the price of the $1 ticket back. The odds of matching all six numbers and winning the Powerball jackpot - which begins at $5 million - are 1 in 54,979,155.

"Virtually nil," said Dr. Guy Clark, an Albuquerque dentist and gambling opponent.

"You've got a much better chance of being struck by lightning or getting bit by a rattlesnake than winning," he said. "This is lousy for the state. It's just going to increase the number of compulsive gamblers."

Others have a different view. Pat Cahill, an area supervisor for Diamond Shamrock, said the Powerball computers are going in all of their Albuquerque gas stations. "This is going to be great for the state economy and great for private business," he said. "I'll play."

In April 1995, Gov. Gary Johnson signed a bill creating the New Mexico Lottery, with the profits designated for education. The bill was the only gambling-related measure to make it through the 1995 session, which turned down proposals to establish widespread gambling throughout the state.

The first tickets that went on sale in April 1996 were the instant-win "scratch" type. Players scrape off an opaque latex coating, and if three numbers match, the player wins between $1 and $10,000.

Powerball marks the second step in New Mexico's state lottery.

The New Mexico Lottery expects to launch yet another game - Daily Millions - early in 1997. Daily Millions is similar to Powerball, but has daily drawings.

New Mexico's lottery law earmarks 60 percent of the net revenue to capital outlays for public school districts and 40 percent to help college students pay tuition.

The lottery proceeds reserved for college students are paid out in the form of scholarship grants.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Alley of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Gomez Jr. of Alice and Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Luna of Brownsville.

Monsignor Orville Blum of the church officiated at the ceremony.

The church was illuminated by candlelight from candelabra which were dressed with assorted white flowers and greenery. Four large arrangements of white flowers and greenery flanked the altar. The center aisle of the church was lined with pew candles tied with greenery and bows.

Maid of honor was Aimee Alley, sister of the bride, of College Station. Best man was Zach Granberry of Dallas.

Bridesmaids were Bridget Baker of Irving, Teresa Baker of Irving, Mrs. Kelly Hamill of Canyon, Andrea Becker of Houston and Mrs. Scott Smith of Virginia Beach, Va.

Serving as groomsmen were Laif Afseth of Houston; Tres Gomez, brother of the groom, of Alice; Todd Tomlin of Houston; Ross Cooley of Houston; and Richard Alley, brother of the bride, of Ruidoso, N.M.

Flower girls were Blair Barrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barrett, and Torey Lupton, cousin of the bride and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Lupton of Amarillo.

Candle lighters were Tamara Diller, cousin of the bride, and Traci Gomez of Alice, sister of the groom.

Mrs. Thomas Betzen was organist and Bill Sava of Dimmitt and Mrs. Dennis Detten were vocalists.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white shantung, sheath-style gown featuring a handbeaded lace bodice and tapered sleeves. From the fitted waist, a keyhole motif accentuated the back bodice and the full length train was bustled with a single tailored bow.

She carried a cascading bouquet of gardenias, white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and greenery.

Bridesmaids were attired in black silk crepe, floor length straight skirts and white silk beaded jackets. They carried hand-tied bouquets of white lilies, stock, white roses and greenery.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony at the Hereford Country Club.

Servers were Briar Baker, Kari Barrett, Annie Hoffman and Cassie Abney.

Mrs. Greg Haskins of Keller and Mrs. Tim Webster of Durant, Okla., both cousins of the bride, presided at the guest register.

The bride's cake was a three-tiered round cake adorned with string pears, lilies, gardenias, stock and greenery. A chocolate cake decorated with a Texas A&M seal highlighted the groom's table.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will be at home in Houston.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1991. In 1995, she graduated summa cum laude from Texas A&M University with a BBA in finance and management. She is currently a banking services officer in The Private Bank of Texas Commerce in Houston.

New equipment gives 'no needle' injections

A new high tech instrument, the Biojector 2000, is being introduced to Hereford by Dr. Gene Bartlett, physician and surgeon of the foot.

This new instrument is the first real advance in intramuscular and subcutaneous injection in more than 100 years. It delivers medications without a needle, eliminating the risk of needlestick injuries for people who fear needles, both children and adults. This also prevents the potential of cross-contamination.

Compressed carbon dioxide is the power source that injects the medication through a micro-orifice within a fraction of a second. This jet action penetrates the skin and delivers the medication into the patient's tissue.

The Biojector 2000 being able to deliver subcutaneous injections is suitable for nerve blocks in the foot according to Bartlett.

Prior to an injection, Bartlett demonstrates to his patient with particular focus on the absence of a needle, which greatly allays patient anxiety. He then tells the patient they will experience a type of snapping sensation which generally is painless.

The absence of both the needle and pain is particularly advantageous for younger patients and for patients who require multiple procedures.

"Many patients fail to seek medical care for their feet and other parts of their body because of their fear of needles, but this fear can now be eliminated with the Biojector," said Bartlett. "The Biojector has been one of the most dynamically accepted instruments I have purchased in my 28 years in private practice."

If you have any questions about this instrument, or minimal incision surgery, you may call Dr. Bartlett's office either in Hereford or Dallas at 1-800-635-0266.

Master Gardeners offer class on fall gardening

The Deaf Smith County Master Gardeners are once again offering a class for anyone interested in learning what to do in the fall for a wonderful spring in the garden.

The class will be held in the game room of the Hereford Community Center at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 24.

Alliance set to meet Tuesday

Hereford Health Care Alliance will meet at noon Tuesday in the Hereford Regional Medical Center board room.

Anyone who wishes to make lunch reservations should call 364-2141 before 9 a.m. Tuesday. Ask for Peggy Fitzgerald or Martha Rincon.

The Alliance will elect new officers for the positions of secretary, statistician and publicity.

If you have questions concerning the Alliance, contact Rick Jackson at 364-6348 or Carolyn Simpson at 364-2344.

The first topic to be addressed will be an in depth discussion on soil preparation because now is the time to get those microbes busy so that, come spring, the beds and borders will be ready and waiting for planting.

The second part of the program will consist of discussion on bulb selection and how to extend the bloom for a long display, as well as perennials to plant now for a head start on the spring season.

Anyone interested in gardening is encouraged to join the Master Gardeners for an informative class.

Response to our request for your favorite holiday recipes has been great.

And it's easy to tell that desserts and candy rank highest as favorites for most of us.

So, please keep sending those recipes. We're looking forward to the challenge of picking "the best," or running as many of them as space allows.

In keeping with the spirit of desserts as a favorite, I am including one of my family's favorite holiday recipes -- Monster Cookies.

But in coming weeks I will let you in on some of my family "secrets" of making that traditional holiday main dish of Turkey and Dressing.

beaten eggs. Stir in peanut butter, chocolate chips, candies, pecans and raisins. Add vanilla, baking soda and oatmeal.

Drop by teaspoonsful onto ungreased baking sheet. Bake for 8-10 minutes at 350 degrees.

Note: We like these cookies best when they are not overcooked, but are soft and moist. If you prefer a crispier cookie, increase baking time to suit your taste.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Teach your children the value of money, the importance of saving and the joy of giving.

HJH choir members are asking for your help with their fundraiser. They are offering novelty candy items, your "favorite team" plastic mugs and $1 chocolate bars.

Choir members, under the direction of Margaret Williams, are preparing for their first concert and for their annual Christmas tour. Let Mrs. Williams know if you wish to join them for the sixth and seventh period choir!

Speaking of music, didn't our eighth grade band look and sound great in the parade on Friday. No wonder the high school always has a great band -- they begin in junior high!

Music must be "in the air" as we began the HISD School Board meeting at HJH last Monday with a special treat. Seventeen of our seventh and eighth grade girls from band played the HJH school song. This group included Amariah Rodriguez, Kara Landrum, Ammie Wharton, Kari Sherrod, Dominique Brown, Cassity Hicks, Celia Barrera, Diana Valdez, Crystal Shipp, Jenny Janitell, Becky Erdman, Vanessa Barrientez, Mindy Lange, Mandy Lange, Lisa Dominguez, Crystal Lemus and Ivory Isaacson.

Mr. Farr showed slides of St. Augustine, the oldest settlement in the United States, to his eighth grade history classes as enrichment for the unit they are involved in.

On Thursday, Oct. 24 at 6:30 p.m. the seventh grade band will be in concert. The concert will be followed by a monthly parent meeting. "Gang Awareness" will be presented by the Hereford Police Department. A movie will be shown for any students and children during this program for parents.

Purple Team Students of the Week are Chris Lozoya, Monica Grajeda, Belinda Moore, Anthony Ramirez and Leticia Flores.

The Computer Club went on a field trip to the Hereford Brand where Mauri Montgomery presented a program on designing layouts for advertisements or other documents. Included in the program was observing the use of Corel Draw for ads the staff was composing.

Officer group pictures for Computer Club, Builders Club and Junior Historians appeared in the Wednesday issue of the Hereford Brand.

All HJH students completed Achievement Tests Oct. 8-10. Although it was a hectic week, we feel that the results will be helpful. Thanks to Sarah Lawson and to Richard Saucedo for their organizations, assistance and patience during this period of testing.

Work of many of our students is on display at our library. Do take time to visit HJH and view our students as they work and view some of their completed projects.

Since this is the 30th anniversary of our building, we have mementos of junior high in Hereford on display in the front display case. Plans are underway for the 70th birthday of the Stanton building -- something we feel many of you can look forward to!

Spend twice as much time praising as you do criticizing!

National Pharmacy Week to raise awareness of pharmacists' services

During National Pharmacy Week, Oct. 20-27, Rita Chamberlain, R.Ph., director of pharmacy at Hereford Regional Medical Center, urges consumers to talk to their pharmacists about medications.

"In the hospital setting we work closely with the physician and nursing staff to monitor patient medication and potential drug incompatibilities. We also see that medications are dispensed at the proper time and in the proper dosage," she said.

National Pharmacy Week is promoted jointly by the American Pharmaceutical Association (APhA) which is the national professional society of pharmacists, and by the Texas Pharmaceutical Association. Its purpose is to raise awareness of the health services that pharmacists can provide.

For example, professionally trained pharmacists can not only provide counsel on the side effects of drugs and their possible reactions to various foods and other medications, but they can also advise the patient on selecting the most effective nonprescription medicines.

These services can save both money for the individual consumer, and help lower the nation's health care bill by ensuring the proper and most effective use of medications.

"Health care is no longer provided by one professional in one setting," Chamberlain said. "Patients taking multiple medicines -- prescription and nonprescription -- are at risk of possible drug interactions, or of duplicating active ingredients unnecessarily. Either situation holds some potential for danger, so there is a real need for communication between the pharmacist and the patient."

Hereford leading supermarkets and grocery stores advertise in the pages of the Hereford Brand. Shop the Brand ads to look for money-saving coupons and to compare prices. Many Hereford housewives use The Brand ads to do their shopping at one of Hereford's fine supermarkets!

Also, "When the patient leaves the hospital, they may find that their best resource for information about prescriptions is their family pharmacist," she said.

Nationally pharmacists rank number one in honesty and ethical standards according to the recent Gallup Poll which ranks 26 professions and occupations.

"Pharmacists are on the front lines delivering health care everyday, in every community in the United States," Calvin H. Knowlton, president of the APhA, said. "Pharmacists are experts in the science of drugs and are the most qualified and accessible health care professionals to answer questions about medications. We can save lives, reduce inappropriate medicine use, and increase medication compliance. Our patients know that we care, and it seems to be reflected in the Gallup survey."

"National Pharmacy Week is an excellent opportunity for us to say thank you to a department that has done so much towards our hospital wide goal of quality care for our patients," Jim Robinson, hospital administrator, concluded.

By BEVERLY HARDER
Pumpkin pie has been an American favorite since the early days of the New England colonies. But pumpkin is not just for pie anymore.

Pumpkins are plentiful in the fall, are quite inexpensive and add versatility to menus. Today, it can be enjoyed in everything from salad dressing to soup, from pancakes to pasta, from chili to cheesecake, from muffins to mousses.

You can find pumpkin in a variety of colors, shapes and sizes; but all of them have a yellow-orange flesh. Pumpkin will keep well for months in a moderately cool, dry place -- at a temperature around 50 degrees F. to 53 degrees F. If you plan to store them for several months, select those which are unbruised and which have the stem attached.

To Prepare Pumpkin: Cut a medium-size pumpkin in half, scoop out the seeds, turn cut side down onto a flat tray, add 1/4 inch water and bake in a slow (325 degree F.) oven for about one hour, or until ready to disintegrate on pressure from fork. Remove from oven. When cool enough to handle, scoop out the soft pulp with a spoon and mash or blend in a blender. You can plan on 1 cup of mashed pumpkin from 1 pound fresh.

Keep cooked pumpkin as you do other cooked vegetables -- in a covered container in the refrigerator.

Normal temperature varies during the day, generally being a degree or two lower in the morning and rising toward evening.

For every ten-degree drop in temperature, tire pressure goes down one pound.

Plan to use within 2-3 days after you cook it.

Cooked, prepared pumpkin may be frozen in airtight, moisture-vapor proof containers.

If you want to indulge in something that is delicious as it is nutritious, try pumpkin. It is especially high in Vitamin A and potassium and provides other nutrients (Vitamin C, iron, calcium) necessary for good health.

Toasted Pumpkin Seeds
Wash seeds and dry. Place them in a large frying pan, along with some olive oil, and toast lightly. Add a bit of salt and cool. (Or, roast until lightly browned in a 250 degree oven -- approximately 30-35 minutes.)

Pumpkin Nut Bread
2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cup mashed, cooked pumpkin
1 cup sugar
*1/2 cup milk
*2 eggs
1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans
Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Sift together first six ingredients. Combine pumpkin, sugar, milk and eggs in mixing bowl. Add dry ingredients and butter, mixing only until flour is moistened. Stir in nuts. Spread in well-greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Bake 65 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Yields 1 loaf. Pumpkin bread may be frozen after baking and cooking. Wrap well.

*To lower fat use skim milk, egg substitute and eliminate nuts.

Ann Landers

Teenage girls say they have sex only when pressured by boys

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to the teen-ager from Tenafly, N.J., who was not impressed by the sex-ed videos she saw in school? She said they were "stupid."

I am an educator for Planned Parenthood and teach pregnancy and HIV/AIDS prevention in public schools. In my classes, I quote a study commissioned by Seventeen magazine and the Ms. Foundation that is most revealing. While the teen from Tenafly is correct when she says girls can be extremely aggressive, here is what the study found:

After interviewing 500 males and 500 females nationwide, ages 13 to 21, 73 percent of the girls said they would have sex but only because their boyfriends pressure them. Of the 67 percent of the girls who were sexually active, a whopping 81 percent said they were sorry they had "done it." The study revealed that many young girls behave aggressively because they want to get asked out, but when it comes to sex, it is the boys who are pushing for it.

Meanwhile, the girls complain that they get the bad reputation and the boys are considered studs. The study also showed that boys are pressured by their peers to have sex and are considered wimps if they don't score. Another startling statistic: One in five people will get a sexually transmitted disease by age 21. I find this scary in light of the fact that teens are now one of the at-risk groups for getting HIV/AIDS.

Please, Ann, tell every teen-ager who reads your column to keep those sexual impulses in check. They have many years ahead during which they can be appropriately sexually engaged. For now, they should cool it and just enjoy being kids. -- L.W., Sacramento

Dear Sac: Thanks for a solid message. And now I'd like to add a word to my teen-age readers who are sexually active. Please be aware that protection, which is of the utmost importance, is not always totally reliable. Condoms, the most convenient and most often used method, are not 100 percent fail-safe. They can break or come off. The failure rate is about 17 percent. So, dear teen-age readers, keep these figures in mind when you find yourself going into hormonal overdrive. It's better to be safe than sorry.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been a pastor for more than 15 years and has officiated at dozens of weddings. He has no set fee for his services and simply tells the couple that whatever they wish to give him will be appreciated.

"Richard" spends a great deal of time preparing his remarks, not to mention the time spent at the rehearsal and the actual wedding. It is obvious that many weddings cost a small fortune, what with the flowers, music, photographer, refreshments, champagne and five-tier wedding cake.

When the wedding is over, more often than not, my husband is not paid for his services. In some cases, he doesn't even get a thank-you note from the bride and groom. They simply assume officiating at weddings is part of his job.

Without a clergyman or justice of the peace, these couples could not get married. Please tell your readers,

Red Cross Update

In a news release from National Headquarters, we are told that the Red Cross organization has accepted an award for excellence, for the American Red Cross Internet home page at <http://www.redcross.org> on the web. The award was for Best Cyber Fundraising Site and was presented by NonProfit Web Site Excellence Awards on Oct. 15.

The web site is a continuation of the effort, by Red Cross to facilitate service delivery, and it is "a popular destination for surfers on the 'net,' which on average is visited, or 'hit,' between 20,000 and 25,000 times a day."

The release also mentions awards for design and illustration and publication excellence and recognition by several web/computer related magazines. So, if you're connected, you might enjoy the history and information you will find there, and you might even want to make a donation.

Things, like the World Web and National News, make it easier for us to recognize our connection to the rest of the world. We can find out how distant disasters, like Atlanta Olympic bombing, floods in Eric, Pa., and tropical storms, are affecting our friends and loved ones. We can learn from the statistics that we contributed to sheltering 64,000 people and feeding them 1.1 million meals in their time of need.

We can take satisfaction in hearing that Money Magazine has rated American Red Cross number one charity for using 91.5% of its income on programs, but we don't often hear about the thousands of smaller disasters that occur each day and are managed and paid for by local Red Cross units.

We have been very fortunate, locally. For the most part, the only disaster we have had to deal with was the fact that kids outgrow their jeans. But we're still here to assist at natural and man made disaster, teach first aid and swimming, and keep American troops in touch with home.

And, Nov. 7 and 8, we will have a Garage Sale. We have an enormous selection of clothing, furniture, electronics, and things at very reasonable prices.

The American Red Cross is a United Way affiliate.

The Brand welcomes news of friends, relatives, grandkids. Send to The Brand, Box 673, or call us. We're interested in local news!

Students of the Six Weeks are:

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Have you noticed the different activities going on at the library this year? Sue Cherry is teaching a crochet class and they are planning to learn how to make the crocheted names. These are great wedding and Christmas gifts at a fraction of the cost if you do them yourself. If you are interested give us or Sue a call, it isn't too late to start.

Monday evening, Oct. 21 at 6 we will have our first beginning sewing class. I will teach the class. If you an idea of what you would like to make or who you would like to sew for, please bring those ideas with you. If you have no idea where to start, I will be there to help you.

The purpose of the class is to teach you how to sew practical and useful items whether they are clothing, household items or gift ideas.

Christmas is coming soon and hopefully the sewing skills you learn will help satisfy some of those gift needs. I want each of the class participants to learn enough that sewing can be enjoyed, helpful and rewarding in many ways.

On Saturday, Nov. 2 Charles Lyles will teach an oil painting class. This class is for those who have their supplies and are in need of some help. There may be a cloud, tree, rocks or something that you would like to learn more about. Or maybe you would like to learn how to paint a windmill, horse, cows or cowboys. Bring those things in with you. If you are interested in the painting class, please call Sue Cherry at the library and she will be able to get in touch with Charles with your questions or concerns.

Nov. 8, 15 and 16 we will have a tutor training workshop. This is to train anyone to teach an adult to read. There is great need in Hereford for tutors. Our program is designed as a one-on-one program. Each tutor is matched with one student and their schedule can be set according to their needs and time available. If a tutor would like to have more than one student, this is a possibility also, especially since we have waiting list of over 30 people.

On Nov. 8 from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. we will have an introduction into the LVA method of teaching. LVA stands for Literary Volunteers of America, and this method of teaching uses common every day things, such as a newspaper, magazine, signs or even the students own words as teaching materials.

Please call Rebecca Walls if you would like to help someone learn to read. On the 15th, the class will go from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on the 16th it will go from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Please don't forget to treat yourself to a nice relaxing reading time. If it has been a while since you have read a book, you deserve a break. Come in and check out one of our new titles, or maybe there is something you've always wanted to read, but have never taken the time.

Jude Devcraux has a new book entitled Legend. Kady Long, a petite lady known for her talents as a chef, is preparing for her wedding. Just looking at her future husband assures Kady that she is the luckiest woman alive.

Kady discovers an antique flour tin and is surprised to find a wedding dress and gossamer veil inside, amethyst earrings and an old photo of four strangers. She felt a "mysterious empathy...and an irresistible desire" to try the delicate satin dress on.

A strange dizzy spell came over Kady and when her head became clear again she realized a hanging was about to commence. There was a band of men gathered in a harsh, sunlit landscape and the only thing that stopped the proceeding was the shot from Kady's rifle. Not knowing how she had arrived, where the gun had come from, or even why this tall, rangy handsome man was to be hanged, Kady stepped up and asked the stranger for help.

Cole Jordan, being a bit of a prankster, was grateful for the delivery from harm and before it is all said and done, he and Kady find themselves married. Anxious to get back to her own time, Kady knows that Cole holds the secret if she could only get him to talk, or maybe the problem is one of concentration.

Jack and Jill is written by the best selling author James Patterson. A U.S. Senator is found murdered in his bed, in his Georgetown "pied-a-terre." The only clue left behind is a mysterious rhyme promising that this is just beginning.

The killings will not stop until all the rich and famous involved in the plan have paid the price. The note is signed Jack and Jill.

Washington, D.C.'s homicide detective Alex Cross, answers a call to a murder scene only blocks from his house. A beautiful little girl is found savagely beaten in the front school yard of his son's school. As Cross begins to fit the pieces together, the killers strike again and again.

No one is safe, not even the President of the United States, and the clock is ticking.

Harvest by Tess Gerritsen begins with Abby DiMatteo watching her little brother Pete lose his battle for life following a tragic accident. Despite her humble beginnings, Abby is determined to become a doctor.

Each achievement through school has encouraged her to go higher. Abby is elated when Boston's Bayside Hospital's elite cardiac transplant team lists her as a potential recruit.

Abby jeopardizes her career when a car crash victim's healthy heart is harvested. The heart is a match for wealthy 46-year-old Nina Voss and a dying 17-year-old boy. Abby and chief resident Vivian Chao hatch a bold plan to make sure the heart goes to the young man, and prepare for the repercussions.

Abby in unrepentant until she meets the frail Nina. Then a new heart suddenly appears for Nina and it has not come through the proper channels. Abby and Vivian Chao open their own investigation and discover a world of terror.

Abby and Vivian are soon running for their lives.

Cattle conference set for Nov. 8

FORT WORTH -- Ranchers looking for practical ways to manage during periods of drought and depressed cattle prices are invited to attend the High Plains Cattle Producers Conference on Nov. 8 at the M.K. Brown Memorial Civic Auditorium in Pampa, said Chaunce O. Thompson Jr., president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

The free conference, which begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 2 p.m., is one in a series of regional meetings which TSCRA is conducting in Texas and Oklahoma. Rolling Plains Production Credit Association and High Plains Federal Land Bank Association are underwriting the project.

"We feel that we must roll up our sleeves and help our members on a personal basis during this period of crisis for the Texas cattle industry," Thompson said. "Conditions are different in each area; we have to be there to hear what our members want from their association and offer area-specific information to help them survive."

"To be sure that we provide the kind of information needed by ranchers in each area, TSCRA directors and staff members who live in each region have been asked to help plan the program," Thompson said.

Stan Bevers, extension economist from Vernon, will compare ranch performances in the region using actual SPA data.

"The Texas Rolling Plains is probably one of the most profitable ranching areas in the country," Bevers said. "However, as with any industry, there is always room for improvement. This information helps us pinpoint where progress can be made."

J.F. Cadenhead, extension range and brush control specialist also from Vernon, will be speaking on rangeland and brush management tips.

"We'll discuss everything you wanted to know about chemical control of noxious weeds and brush that infest our rangelands in the High Plains," Cadenhead said. "Locoweed, broomsnakeweed, mesquite, cedar, skunkbush sumac, wild plum, Russian Olive, sand sagebrush, sand shinnery, plains pricklypear and yucca (beargrass) are just some of the problems to be addressed."

James R. Clark from West Texas A&M University will explain some of the new programs initiated by the school's agricultural division. Also from WTAMU, Ted Montgomery will discuss how cattle producers can access the NCBA Cattleman's Carcass Data Service and explain what data and costs they can expect.

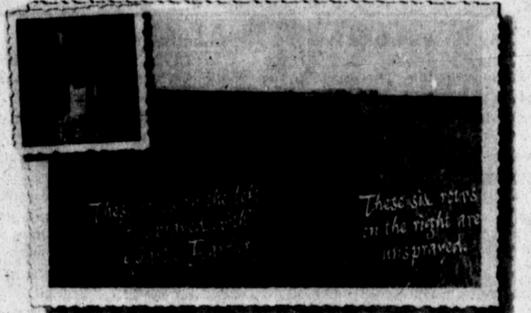

There will be information on services available from the Rolling Plains Production Credit Association, High Plains Federal Land Bank Association and TSCRA, including question-and-answer sessions with officers and staff members of those organizations.

A complimentary lunch will be provided by Hi-Pro Animal Health. Door prizes also will be given away to a few lucky participants.

Those interested in attending the free conference should leave a message on TSCRA voice mail at 1-800-247-3183.

For more information, contact TSCRA staff members Lionel Chambers or Sharla Adams at (817) 332-7155.

GARLIC ON WHEAT

The Garlic Sprayed Wheat was Bigger, Greener, Without Green Bugs, and had a Higher Yield!!!

Cecil Richardson from Hale Center, Texas, sprayed his wheat with Garlic Barrier, using fish oil as a sticker - spreader, to chase away "green bugs". Five months after planting, his sprayed wheat was 5' taller, the plants were fuller and much healthier and the green bugs were gone! At harvest the sprayed wheat showed higher yield. Spraying cost was much less than with chemicals. Can be sprayed while grazing cattle.

TGFA hosts training

In the past year, the grain industry was hit hard with high prices, drought, contract problems and dreaded aflatoxin.

The Texas Grain and Feed Association and the Grain Industry Council will host a "Fall Training" program that gives all the information and training needed to get back in gear and prepare for another season.

The "Fall Training" program will be held Nov. 11-12 at The Holiday Inn North in Fort Worth.

The program will include Commodity Futures Trading Commissioner Joe Dial, BNSF VP Phil Weaver, TGFA General Counsel Ted Mack and other guest speakers.

Hybrid Cash Contracts received a lot of publicity and attention during this year's harvest season. TGFA will address all aspects these contracts including on the different types and advantages and disadvantages to each. Special attention will be given to the ever controversial hedge-to-arrive contracts. Contractual obligations in Texas, regulatory perspectives on contracts, and the bank's perspectives on contracts will also be covered.

In addition, the program will include a panel discussion on problems associated with aflatoxin. TGFA has gathered representatives from the country elevator, feed mill, flour mill and dairy and supply sectors to discuss their experiences in managing aflatoxin and other mycotoxins.

Registration fee is $100 for the first employee and $80 for ever employee thereafter before Nov. 1. To register, contact Ellie Copeland at (817) 336-7875.

Agriculture Briefs

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) - Mark Mickelsen considers himself a pioneer, which is why - among the thousands of acres of potatoes he grows - he set aside 270 acres this year for sunflowers.

"I'll try anything once," Mickelsen said.

If yields are good from the hybrid seed he planted west of Idaho Falls, there may be a future in the crop for him and other farmers working with Intermountain Canola and its parent company, Cargill Inc.

"They've worked with me, seeing if this is a viable place for raising seed," Mickelsen said.

Sunflowers are grown commercially mainly in the Midwest. About 3.3 million acres were harvested last year - 2.8 million for oil and 540,000 for confectionery seeds.

Because it is a hybrid plant, farmers have to plant new seed every year.

"You can't just pull it out and plant it," said Larry Kleingartner, executive director of the National Sunflower Association in Bismarck, N.D.

Most of the seed is produced in northern California and Texas. It must be grown in a consistent climate, free from hail, insects and weeds.

To be certified, seed sunflowers also must be grown at least three miles from any wild or garden sunflowers to prevent cross-pollination, said Jerry Cass, production manager for Intermountain Canola in Idaho Falls.

Mickelsen said planting seed sunflowers is a complicated process. A grower has to put in four rows of male plants first, then 14 rows of female plants a week later, then more alternating rows. After bees are released for pollination, the male plants get chopped out at the end of August.

Mickelsen's bread-and-butter crop is potatoes. He is harvesting about 2,000 acres this year. He also grows wheat.

Once he decides whether seed sunflowers are a viable crop in Idaho's climate, Mickelsen will determine whether he wants to grow them commercially.

Cass estimated that prices for seed sunflowers make it at least as profitable as malting barley, a popular eastern Idaho crop. A spokeswoman for Cargill said seed is selling for 30 to 75 cents per hundred-pound sack.

Cotton mills expect more imports

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
CONE, Texas (AP) - Cotton growers are resigned to drought and pests as defeatable enemies to their business. The Russians are another story.

"We spent billions keeping those people at bay, and now we have them stealing our markets," said Scott Gilbreath, a third-generation farmer with 1,700 acres near Lubbock. "Nobody's doing anything about it, and with the budget constraints Washington has been having, we will not survive."

The United States traditionally had been off limits to cotton imports. This year, mills are expecting more than 700,000 bales from Russia, Argentina, Pakistan and elsewhere, surpassing 1919 as the largest import year in memory.

A typical cotton bale weighs about 480 pounds and produces enough fabric to weave 330 pair of blue jeans.

Imports remain just a fraction of the market, which will see 19 million bales of American-grown cotton picked this fall. That fraction, though, didn't even exist until last year.

The 1990 farm law created a three-step process to allow imports if the price of U.S. cotton on the Northern Europe market exceeds an adjusted world price index by 1-1/4 cents. Recent poor crops triggered the import quotas in May 1995, and cotton from abroad has been arriving since.

The adjusted world price is hovering around the 59-cent range, its lowest point since early 1994. American cotton was selling about 8-1/2 cents higher on the European markets recently, a gap that won't close anytime soon if current trends continue.

The break-even point for domestic farmers tends to range from 65 cents to 80 cents a pound.

Imports really began picking up steam this year, said Janice Zygmunt, who monitors cotton imports for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"I think we have not been in an import situation in a long time, so there was some uncertainty," she said. "There's a learning curve for everyone involved."

This year's imports will only scratch the surface of the 9.2 million foreign bales that legally could have entered U.S. ports under the federal program, a massive chunk of the global market.

The three-step federal program calls for subsidies to make domestic farmers more competitive under Step 2. However, price differentials have caused Step 3 to be in effect since last Nov. 1, meaning farmers aren't eligible for government relief.

American cotton has remained about a nickel higher than the USDA's worldwide index in Europe, meaning mills should have the opportunity to import cotton in the foreseeable future.

"The fundamental reason Step 3 is there is to keep the U.S. textile industry competitive," said Texas Tech University agricultural economist Don Etheredge. "The domestic textile industry is the U.S. cotton farmers' best customer."

Domestic growers won't have any customers at all if cheap imports continue, Gilbreath fears. That's why he's circulating a petition calling for a return to a protectionist cotton policy.

Gilbreath suggests stiff curtailment of import quotas under Step 3 and for subsidies to be available to American farmers during any period in which imports are legal.

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, was a key player in the passage of the 1995 farm policy. He has called for a review of the way the USDA determines its index, but he also maintains American farmers can retain the advantage.

"American farmers can compete with anyone as long as they don't have to compete with their own government," said Combest, referring to U.S. environmental, labor and financial laws other countries don't have.

Despite minor insect infestations that decreased the quality of some of last year's harvest in Texas and Arizona, the United States continues to be the world's largest net exporter of cotton.

William B. Dunavant Jr., a leading U.S. cotton merchant, has said Russian fiber is in many ways better quality than that grown in his Memphis area, and Argentine fiber could become a denim mainstay. Merchants profit from cheap cotton, wherever it's grown.

The new farm policy, which initially drew support from all segments of the cotton industry, was an import time bomb from the start, Gilbreath said.

"(USDA Secretary) Dan Glickman should have known this, but you could bet those dadgum cotton mills weren't going to bring it to their attention," Gilbreath said. "They don't care who they run over, chew up or spit out. All they care about is the bottom line."

Healthy prices are necessary to fuel domestic cotton production, which could reach 25 million bales annually in coming years, Texas A&M University cotton expert Carl Anderson said.

About one in every seven American bales is grown on the South Plains around Lubbock, where the prices recently have inched into the low 70-cent range per pound.

Many Texas cotton growers planted sorghum this year because it appeared more profitable, and Gilbreath believes that could become a trend if the law doesn't change.

"If you look around today, all you see here is cotton," Gilbreath said, surveying the horizon. "Pretty soon, you might not see any."

Three-step program for allowing imports

By The Associated Press

Current farm law maintains the 1990 system of allowing cotton imports when domestic prices exceed foreign prices. The United States is in "Step 3" of its three-step system that originally was supported by the entire cotton industry, though some growers are grumbling about it now:

Step 1 - U.S. Secretary of Agriculture has discretionary authority to reduce the adjusted world price index when the lowest U.S. price of cotton delivered to Northern Europe (USNE) exceeds the Northern Europe (foreign) price and the adjusted world price is less than 59.71 cents per pound.

Step 2 - Allows subsidies to domestic users and exporters of cotton when the USNE exceeds the foreign price by more than 1-1/4 cents per pound for four straight weeks, provided that the adjusted world price is not greater than 67.5 cents per pound.

Step 3 - Opens special import quotas if the USNE exceeds the NE by more than 1-1/4 cents for more than 10 consecutive weeks. This step has been in effect since last November, and the price differential is getting close to a dime.

A pig nap

These pigs found time for a short nap before they were sold in a recent auction. The Hereford High School Future Farmers of America (FFA) recently held its annual pig sale in the bull barn. More than forty consignors from Texas and surrounding states sold pigs in the sale.

Shepherds join major effort to sell product

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) -

Shepherds are tired of being sheepish about their product and are joining a major effort toward selling their lambs.

"When consumers make their decisions regarding protein, we've got to be one of those three or four meats they consider," said Pierce Miller, who ranches southwest of San Angelo among the nation's largest concentration of sheep herds. "Pork has made some dramatic advances, and I think lamb has the same thing available."

Ranchers are awaiting results of their recent vote that would enable them to finance $13.5 million annually for marketing and promotion. The outcome isn't expected to be announced until December, but ranchers know that money is sheep dip compared to what other meats spend.

Miller, who raises about 4,000 head along with goats and cattle in insular Crockett County, is among those who want to perk up his industry. American shepherding has been in a steady decline since the 1940s, when herds peaked out around 45 million head.

That number has fallen to near 10 million in the years since, and many of those sheep are used strictly for wool production. Meat comes strictly from lambs less than a year old, because the flavor deteriorates as the animal ages.

Mutton, meat from sheep at least 2 years old, is what many blame for the meat's decline in popularity.

"At one time it (lamb) used to be a staple food," said Zane Willard, executive director of the San Angelo-based Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association. "One of the things that hurt us was World War II. Soldiers ate boiled mutton, in a can. I don't know what it tasted like, but I bet it wasn't very good."

"They came home and didn't eat any more of it, and a generation or two is now left in the dark about lamb."

Over the years, lamb has been relegated substantially to expensive restaurants and specialized meat cases while other types of livestock enjoyed huge market shares.

Tom Bashaw, whose job at the American Sheep Industry in Denver is to introduce lamb to menus nationwide, said the group is working to broaden its market by presenting cuts that are affordable.

Essentially, sheep raisers want to run a reverse on pork's successful campaign to shed its image as a lowbrow commodity and take lamb to the masses.

Bashaw is working with many popular restaurant chains, hoping they'll expose consumers to lamb through their menus.

"The food service area is a good way to introduce new customers to lamb," he said. "People who might be opposed to trying it could share a little bit, try some of the product and say, 'Gosh, this is great. I've never had anything like this.'"

Producers have taken a cue from the poultry, pork and seafood industries by pointing out the lean nature of lamb, which isn't marbled with fat like many beef cuts.

A check at one Lubbock supermarket, one of the few places in this city of 200,000 where lamb is sold, showed sirloin lambchops were selling at $4.99 per pound, the same price as a T-bone steak, yet more expensive than most of their neighbors in the meat case.

The meat's relative scarcity affects promotion techniques, Miller said.

"Supply dictates what we do, how much we promote," said Miller, who added that mainstream television wouldn't be an option. "The worst thing you can do is promote it, then the consumer goes to the store and it's not there."

Meat cases at absolute most dedicate 5 percent of a meat case to lamb, Willard said, though the industry has "developed in-store displays to catch shoppers' eyes as they browse."

Otherwise, "you're sort of rolling the dice hoping the consumer sees the product," he said.

Bashaw hopes consumers will seek lamb after trying it in a restaurant. Once the domain of French establishments and other high-end eateries, lamb is finding its way into moderately priced chains.

Among the restaurant companies trying lamb dishes is Phoenix-based Houston's, which serves a rotisserie-grilled leg of lamb at its five Bandera restaurants, located in the West and Midwest.

"There are a lot of people that just love it," spokesman Bob Lynn said. "Lamb really is not different than a lot of other meats. There are cuts that are high end and expensive, and also a lot of other cuts that are more casual."

The leg serving, which Bandera serves sliced, gives moderately priced restaurants a "bigger portion and better value," Lynn said.

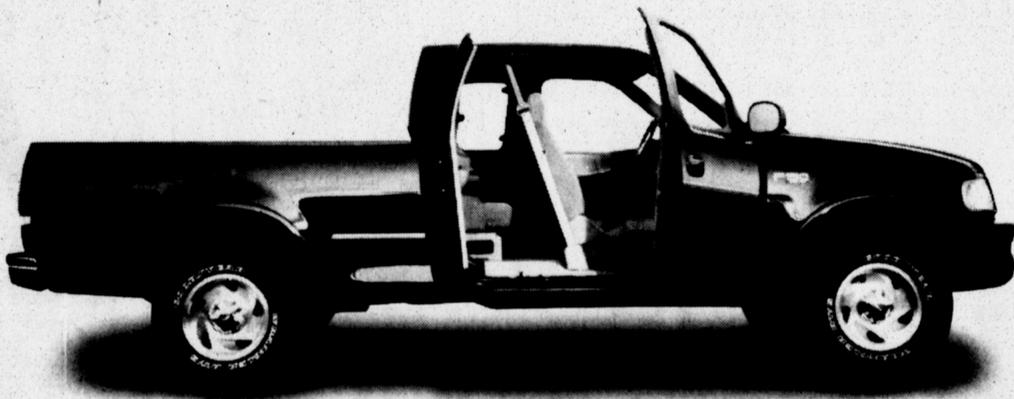

No one expects lamb to overrun dinner plates from coast to coast. However, Miller is optimistic lamb won't be such a foreign meat to the next generation.

"It hasn't come back to me on the bottom line for me as producer yet," he said. "But at least we've gotten a foot in the door."

U.S. lamb production enjoyed a peak around World War II, but Americans' changed tastes and laws limiting trapping and killing of predators have caused lamb crops to diminish ever since:

Year	Lamb crop
1930	29.5 million
1940	31.1 million
1950	18.5 million
1960	21.0 million
1970	13.5 million
1980	8.3 million
1990	7.7 million
1995	5.9 million

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

First-Class Folks

No, this is not a column about folks who fly in the first-class cabin on airliners. It is an attempt to look at the habits of folks who are first-class everyday in every way all of their lives. I believe that first-class folks are made, not born. Being a first class-person is not dependent on having money, living on the right side of the tracks or being born with a fine, old-family name. It is not a matter of being politically correct, being well-connected politically or looking like a movie star. It doesn't have anything to do with skin color, educational level or age. Perhaps an example or two will help illustrate my view. Recently, I visited my favorite doctor's office and after signing in took the last empty seat. An elderly woman came in a moment later and signed in. As she turned to look for seat, a young man leaped to his feet and insisted that she take his. A first-class fellow. A few days later, I was working my way to the front of a long line at an airline ticket counter when a rather pushy man crowded ahead. The woman in front of me - who had finally reached the head of the line - turned to me with a surprised, quizzical look on her face. However, instead of making a scene she simply shrugged and said softly, "I guess he's in a hurry." I nodded in agreement and thought to myself, "first-class lady."

First-class qualities

- First-class folks are courteous. They temper their actions with respect and consideration for the rights of others. They find it less stressful to be nice rather than nasty. The Bible tells us that the meek shall inherit the earth. First-class women and men will be among the largest land owners.
- First-class folks have positive, optimistic attitudes. They go to work fully expecting to have a great day. They believe that every problem has a solution and that the best is yet to come. There is a good deal of evidence that we eventually become what we think about and focus on. Therefore, dwell on the positive and move up to first class.
- First-class folks are well educated. No, I do not mean to imply that you must have a college degree or be a PhD to be a first-class citizen. (Some highly-educated folks develop an inflated sense of self-worth and are neither first class nor enjoyable to be around.) First-class folks may have little formal education. However, they never quit learning just because they stopped going to school.

• First-class folks are aware of what is going on around them. You won't catch them cruising at 55 mph in the left-hand lane of the interstate or stopping in the middle of airport walkways to check their tickets. They don't leave their shopping carts in the middle of the aisle at the grocery store.

They keep their head in the game. They understand that all actions have consequences, so they stay alert to ensure that the consequences are positive.

There are many other identifying characteristics. First-class folks are slow to anger, limit their excesses and work hard to improve every aspect of their lives. They appreciate good humor, make the best of bad situations and are quick to help others.

I hope I have not misled you to believe first-class folks are perfect. They aren't. They are human, make mistakes and have bad days.

Despite their faults, they are pleasant folks to be around. I hope you'll join me in aspiring to move up to first-class.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I work for an animal protection organization in Washington, D.C., and I've compiled tips on safeguarding companion animals. I thought you might wish to share some of my Halloween tips with your readers.

- Keep animals, especially black cats, inside on the night before and on Halloween.
- Dogs should be kept indoors too. Some children think letting dogs out of their yard is a great Halloween trick, but it's a terrifying experience for the dog who becomes lost, running from the noise and strangely dressed people. Dogs may also be come injured if children poke at them through fences.

- For everyone's safety, put animals in a secure room during trick-or-treat time. Cats can quickly slip out the front door, and dogs sometimes try to bite unsuspecting children, thinking they're intruders.
- Don't take dogs trick or treating, as they can become frightened by laughing and screaming children and run off or bite someone.
- Keep candy out of animals' reach, and make sure children know not to share their goodies with four-legged friends. All candy can cause animals to become sick, and chocolate, which contains an ingredient poisonous to dogs, can kill.

- Jack-o'-lanterns lit up by candles can burn animals (and children) or start fires if tipped over. Balloons or party favors, if swallowed, can block an animal's digestive tract.

By taking a few simple precautions, everyone — humans and animals alike — can have a safe and happy Halloween. — Paula Moore, Rockville, Md.
You said it for all our four-legged animal friends! Halloween can be pretty scary from their point of view. Thanks for the good hints. Woof! Woof! — Savvi, Black Jack and J.D.

PAXTON, Mass. (AP) — Kenneth Branagh is handy with a movie camera, but the British actor-director had a little trouble with a classic car. Branagh was filming scenes for the upcoming film "Shakespeare's Sister" in an out-of-the-way state park in central Massachusetts on Tuesday. It took four tries to film a scene of Branagh driving a Ford Model A along a leaf-strewn road.

A RAILED PORCH, dormers and a front-facing gable make up this traditional home's quaint facade.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

With its charming front porch, dormers and gables, Plan G-22, by HomeStyles Designers Network, has the look and feel of old-fashioned tranquility; yet the up-to-date floor plan inside meets the demands of today's families.

This traditional home is well suited for a corner lot. It has an attached garage around back, tall windows, elegant dormers and a welcoming covered front porch.

Just off the foyer, the formal dining room features a built-in hutch and views to the front porch.

The expansive, skylighted great room at the rear of the home has a wet bar, a 16-ft. vaulted ceiling, a stunning fireplace and access to the screened back porch.

The kitchen includes a large pantry and a dining bar that is shared with the bayed breakfast nook. A large utility room with garage access is nearby.

The master bedroom offers a walk-in closet and a bath with a large corner tub and twin vanities.

Two additional bedrooms share big walk-in closets, built-in desks and easy access to another full bath.

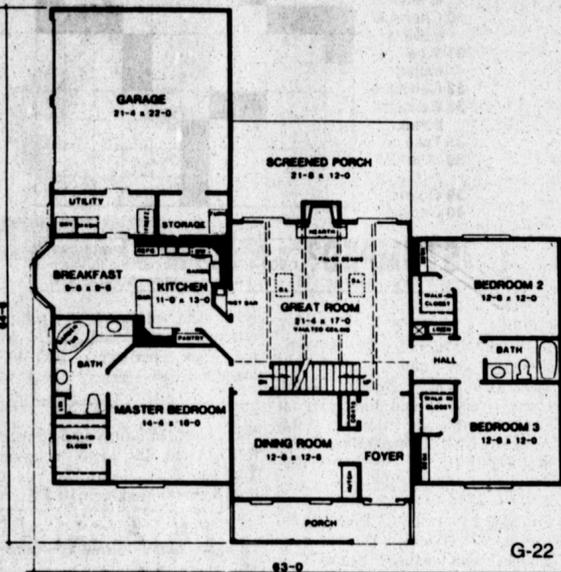

Upstairs, a loft overlooking the great room can be an extra bedroom or a recreation area.

THE FORMAL DINING ROOM is to the left of the foyer. Straight ahead, the great room serves as the heart of the home, and features a tall vaulted ceiling and skylights. A wet bar and a handsome fireplace are also located here. Nearby, a peninsula snack bar serves both the breakfast nook and the kitchen. The master bedroom has a walk-in closet and a deluxe private bath. Across the home, two secondary bedrooms feature walk-in closets and share a hall bath. Upstairs, a sizable loft could serve as a play area or a reading nook.

Hospital Luxury
WASHINGTON (AP) - Being in the hospital isn't exactly like a stay in a luxury hotel, but staff members at Washington Hospital Center think that the last thing a recovering person needs is an atmosphere as antiseptic as the paraphernalia.

The hospital recently opened 12 deluxe suites with Chippendale furnishings, generous closets, fine bed linens and towels, color TV-VCRs, sleep sofas for family members, stocked refrigerators and microwaves. There's also 24-hour room service which can provide gourmet meals and even a wine list.

The usual medical equipment is around, but it's tucked away behind picture frames which can be easily moved when needed.

"We believe the sensitivity to personal needs is as crucial to the healing process as any new procedure or technological advancements, since medicine is for about people and their needs," says John McDaniel, chief executive officer of the Medlantic Healthcare group that owns the center.

The suites are aimed at executives, foreign dignitaries, government officials, celebrities, and their families and entourages.

Cost runs about $300 above the daily rate covered by most insurance.

Rare documents leaving libraries in hands of thieves

One-of-a-kind papers easy to steal from universities, institutions -- even the Vatican

EDITOR'S NOTE - It isn't just books that get carried out of libraries and never carried back. Some libraries have had astounding losses of historic documents. Some people take them because they're too lazy to return to the library to use them. Others, knowing the papers are valuable, steal them to sell.

By EDITH PAAL
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - The letter, written by a clerk Feb. 12, 1864, and signed by Abraham Lincoln, was addressed to Isaac Murphy, the man who would become Arkansas' Union governor during the Civil War.

A man came into the Arkansas History Commission and asked to see the document collection that contained the letter. The man, very personable, seemed to know his way around the library and knew how to use reference material to find documents.

He took the papers to an area near two people's desks. Then he took the letter, apparently slipping it into a briefcase. A few steps later he was out the door, librarians none the wiser.

"If people are really intent on stealing, they're going to be able to do it," said Linda Pine, the archivist at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

The History Commission and UALR are two of several collections in the central United States to lose some of their irreplaceable holdings to recent thievery. A man charged with taking documents from the commission and UALR, former North Little Rock lawyer Robert Hardin Smith, has pleaded guilty to stealing historical documents from universities in Arkansas and Kansas.

Theft can occur anywhere. A retired Ohio State University professor was accused of smuggling pages from 14th-century manuscripts from libraries in the Vatican and Spain.

A former antiques dealer from Florida was charged in March with stealing rare maps from up to 15 schools. Other recent victims include libraries in Memphis, Tenn., and Booneville and Jackson, Miss.

In the Arkansas and Kansas cases, letters from Presidents Cleveland, Coolidge, Grant, Hoover, Kennedy, McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt were taken. The University of Arkansas lost letters from poets T.S. Eliot and Ezra Pound. Kansas University also lost three letters from William Quantrill, a Civil War guerrilla leader.

Smith said he sold the Quantrill letters to a rare documents dealer for $7,350. The dealer, unaware the documents were stolen, returned them to the university after police contacted him. Many other documents are still missing.

Librarians find there is no typical rare document thief. People take things because they think they're valuable and want to sell them, or because they need them for a project and don't want to visit libraries to use them.

Occasionally people steal to satisfy a compulsion. In 1990, the FBI found thousands of rare books worth millions of dollars in the Iowa home of Stephen Carrie Blumberg. Blumberg was sentenced to 71 months in prison.

Peter Hanff, deputy director of the Bancroft Library at the University of California at Berkeley, recalls an incident in which someone was using a razor blade to cut pages from a book. A fellow patron turned him in.

Original documents can be slipped into notebooks, book bags or clothing. A thief may even photocopy a document, give the copy back and walk out with the original.

People who work in the rare-book field say that it can take months before a library discovers that it has lost a document.

"Very often, it is dealers who inform libraries that something has been brought in," said Katharine Keyes Leab, publisher of American Book Prices Current, a reference for book dealers.

Some dealers try to check the origin of items offered to them, Leab said. If it seems an item was part of a collection, the dealer will call to make sure everything is accounted for, she said.

In Savannah, Ga., an ordinance requires merchants to file a notice with police if an unauthorized dealer tries to sell them something, said Virginia Duncan, who owns a print and map store with her husband.

The Arkansas History Commission realized during a routine inventory in February that 11 documents were missing, including the Lincoln letter to Murphy, director John Ferguson said. The commission has since increased security.

"The archivists are more careful about giving a person boxes of documents," he said. "We may give them a file folder or two as they ask for it."

Most libraries and archives require patrons to fill out an application and show identification. Some ask people to leave personal belongings in lockers. Some institutions even provide paper and pencils for use by readers.

Getting to know people who come in can deter theft, said Sharon Carlson, acting director of archives and the regional history collection at Western Michigan University. Her institution is relatively liberal in terms of security, allowing patrons to bring in book bags.

"We're still able to work with researchers on a one-on-one basis and really monitor the situation," Carlson said.

Many publicly funded university library collections are open to just about anyone. Private institutions can set more stringent requirements.

The Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif., holds 3 million manuscripts and a half-million rare books, including a Gutenberg Bible. The private institution is open primarily to postdoctoral researchers.

Patrons must apply to be admitted and include letters of reference with their application, said David S. Zeidberg, the director of the library.

Readers can carry only paper and pencil or laptop computer when they go in, Zeidberg said. He said most are used to the restrictions.

"Certainly they've had this kind of procedure in major European research libraries," Zeidberg said.

Some institutions have been reluctant to report thefts, fearing bad publicity will discourage potential donors, though the attitude is changing, said Gary Menges of the University of Washington, a past chairman of the security committee at the Association of College and Research Libraries.

Although libraries have insurance to cover their holdings, archivists say insurance settlements don't cover their actual loss. In some cases, only one copy exists of an old document, making it impossible to replace.

"Why have insurance when it's irreplaceable?" Pine said. "I don't want the $10,000. I want the letters back."

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I recently learned I have Barrett's esophagus, having to do with ulcer and heartburn. I am 61. The doctor says the tissue is OK, but he will check it again in six months. He says it can become cancerous. What kind of surgery would be needed? Are there unreasonable dangers in it? What do the letters "GERD" mean? I need some reassurance, but I also need the facts. — L.I.

ANSWER: The initials "GERD" stand for "gastroesophageal reflux disease," another name for "heartburn."

Nearly 15 percent of heartburn sufferers get Barrett's metaplasia, which produces an observable change in esophageal tissue.

That might not sound like a big deal, and it wouldn't be except that the altered tissue sometimes turns cancerous. It doesn't happen all that often, but frequently enough to raise flags.

Keep in touch with the surgeon in order to report symptoms and to be checked periodically. The same oral scope device used for detection will be used to re-examine the area.

Your immediate job is to keep stomach acids down where they belong, and I'm sure your doctor has given you a regimen to accomplish that. It won't alter the Barrett's situation, but will prevent any worsening.

If cancer changes are found, the tissue must be removed by whatever surgery is deemed appropriate. The surgery poses no unreasonable danger.

It's up to you to make certain you aren't one of the occasional patients who fall through the cracks. You are in good hands.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have not seen anything yet on fungal infection of the fingernails. A dermatologist did a nail culture and said I have fungus there. He prescribed medicine, which I have used faithfully each day for seven months, but there seems to be no improvement. The label on the bottle says "not effective for scalp or nails." Very discouraging, to say the least. Any help would be appreciated. — Mrs. N.K.

ANSWER: I am happy to report that there are two new products that work for nail infections — Sporanox (itraconazole) and Lamisil (terbinafine). Either is taken by mouth and either must be taken for three months, even after fungus signs have disappeared. You take one of them alone, not both together or while continuing the former medication.

For more on nails, see the report I'm sending you. Others can order the report by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 22, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: In his letter about beard-associated rash and pimples, S.C. may have hinted at the solution when he wrote that no matter how close he shaves daily, he cannot overcome the problem posed by his curly hair. When I stopped shaving, my problem disappeared. I didn't miss the daily face scraping with a sharp instrument or buzzing with a miniature lawn mower. I realize there are still employers out there who will not allow beards, but I encounter fewer today. Mr. Gillette and others have much to answer for, even though you must admire their astute marketing. No matter, I can recommend this brave response to S.C.'s facial challenge. — R.A.

ANSWER: Even at the height of its popularity, I was unable to grow a beard, but I am allowing your suggestion to stand.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am at loggerheads with our team doctor. Don't get me wrong. We all appreciate his offering of help, which is not compensated. But he's so fussy about the slightest head injury. He is deathly afraid of what he calls a second impact. He calls it "second-impact syndrome." Sometimes, he will order one of my kids out of action for a week or two after getting a minor head injury. Is he going overboard, or am I too callous? — M.H.

ANSWER: Coaches and team physicians often serve different masters.

Second-impact syndrome is a real entity. It means occurrence of a second head injury before the signs of the earlier one have gone away. And that initial injury need not have been terribly serious. The player might have complained of a headache and had a temporary memory lapse. The player need not have lost consciousness for the specter of second-impact syndrome to arise.

The reasoning behind second-impact syndrome is pretty straightforward: If the endangered player suffers a second head collision, he could lapse into a coma right there and then, especially if the initial injury caused a disturbance of blood flow to the brain, as it often does.

A second impact thus might come before flow is readjusted. That second impact might cause a sudden rush of blood to the area, causing brain swelling and death.

I am sure the team's doctor will lose no popularity by taking steps to protect your young players. The doctor is not being persnickety. He is being conscientious. Keep him around.

I envy him, actually. Many doctors harbor an ambition to do their bit in the role of team physician. Should the opportunity come to me, I am sure I would court the ire of coaches.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have big trouble breathing when it is smoggy. Any suggestions? — J.E.

ANSWER: Ozone, a major component of smog, is a great lung irritant, and it might be causing your troubles. If you have asthma, the air itself might be triggering your troubles.

When the air quality is poor, I suggest you forsake outdoor running in favor of some comparable indoor programs.

The Ring familiar fare for Danielle Steel fans

By Jocelyn Beard

©TVData Features Syndicate

With more than 100 television movies and miniseries under his belt, producer Douglas Cramer has stopped counting.

The Ring is Cramer's 21st collaboration with best-selling author Danielle Steel.

It is the final installment in what has become one of the most successful franchises in television history.

"I've known her (Steel) for years," he says from the Toronto set of an upcoming Charles Bronson film. "I greatly admire her; she's an incredibly educated and well-traveled woman."

With more than 250 million copies of her much-adored sheet-burners bringing vicarious intrigue and affairs d'amour to fans in 46 countries, Steel certainly has the means to travel.

The Ring is Steel at her most historical. Set in Germany during the Third Reich, the story gets off to an exciting, though predictable start.

A lovely young German woman commits suicide when her Jewish lover is killed by Nazis. Her daughter (Nastassja Kinski) inherits her ring, and so begins a tale that—in true Steel fashion—spans decades and continents.

The film has the sumptuous look of a well-bred miniseries. It is blessed with an interesting and talented cast, presided over by Kinski and miniseries veteran Michael York.

Shot in Montreal and the Czech Republic, The Ring succeeds at vividly portraying what producer Cramer calls "the last great war."

The Ring is at its best when touring dark, war-torn Berlin. Steel's maudlin story and Kinski's tentative performance hardly seem to matter when the camera swoops gracefully across the dance floor at a Nazi ball, uniforms freshly starched, couples spinning, dipping and gliding in shameless denial.

A fanfare, a bright light, and Der Fuhrer appears on a balcony high above the crowd, a malignant deity who knows his time has come and

How in the world does a producer manage to get such big-screen production values on a television movie budget?

"It isn't easy," Cramer says with a laugh. "Fortunately, NBC was very generous."

With a budget of around $10 million to fulfill the production requirements of Steel's epic tale, it seems generous of Cramer to call NBC generous. Every penny seems well-spent. Fans won't be disappointed.

But how they will feel about Nastassja Kinski's performance is another matter.

With a career that has yet to find a niche, Kinski seems to be desperately searching for a comfortable genre. The miniseries may not be it.

Carsten Norgaard is dashing as Capt. Manfred von Tripp, Jon Tenney (Equal Justice) is intense as the young medical student who comes to Ariana's assistance. And Michael York—well, he's Michael York.

Also appearing in The Ring are indomitable veterans Leslie Caron and Linda Lavin.

After six years and more than 20 films, it seems like only yesterday that Danielle Steel fans watched Kaleidoscope rather than get ready for some football. But every good thing must end.

So grab a big box of tissues and a pint of ice cream. The final installment of NBC's Monday night anti-football fare is sadly at hand.

Jon Tenney and Nastassja Kinski star in The Ring, airing Sunday and Monday on NBC. The miniseries, set in Germany during the Third Reich, is based on the novel by Danielle Steel. Also appearing are Michael York and Linda Lavin.

Broken Glass probes painful ties that bind

By Suzanne Gill

©TVData Features Syndicate

"I threw away my life — like two pennies. I took better care of my shoes," weeps Sylvia Gellburg on her sickbed.

For 20 years Sylvia has been the smiling, stalwart center of her extended family.

Margot Leicester plays Sylvia in the moving Broken Glass, airing Sunday, Oct. 20, on PBS' Masterpiece Theatre (check local listings). Leicester and co-star Henry Goodman, as Sylvia's husband, Phillip, reprise the roles they created two years ago in the London stage production of the Arthur Miller play.

The story takes place in November 1938. Phillip is a real estate officer at a Brooklyn, N.Y., investment firm. Sylvia spends her days scouring the newspapers, which are full of reports from Germany about acts of violence and humiliation against Jews. Their son, Jerome, is a student at West Point.

One evening without warning, Sylvia's legs collapse beneath her on the front steps of their home.

"I don't believe we get sick alone,

We get sick in twos and threes." Sylvia's doctor theorizes. Mandy Patinkin brings an unbecoming arrogance to the role of physician Harry Hyman, an ethnic Jew embodying both science and religion.

Elizabeth McGovern plays his gentle wife, a bit jealous of her husband's most fascinating patient.

Sylvia's condition is psychological, a hysterical paralysis; yet she refuses to see any physician but Hyman, a neighborhood general practitioner. Newspaper reports of Kristallnacht, the "night of broken glass," have touched off her suffering. "Where is Roosevelt?" she demands tearfully.

The final moment is too facile, yet Miller's play rewards viewers with rich characters in an era moving uncertainly from Depression to war.

Phillip and Sylvia are the playgoer's grandparents, wrestling with the demons of every age. And their agony is a family memory, once removed.

At the conclusion of Broken Glass, series host Russell Baker has a rare interview with Miller, who discusses the genesis of the play.

TV PIPELINE

Q: My mother insists that Sabrina, the Teenage Witch is a spinoff of Bewitched. However, I say there was no one named Sabrina on Bewitched. Who is right? --Curious in Colorado.

A: You are. Although Sabrina, which stars Melissa Joan Hart, is being marketed as "a teen Bewitched," it's based on a comic book character.

Your mom may be thrown by the fact that Samantha (Elizabeth Montgomery) on Bewitched had a cousin named Serena (also played by Montgomery).

Q: Whatever happened to Mike & Maty? I miss them. --Nancy Neuman, Spooner, Wis.

A: As previously reported, the show was dropped by ABC because of low ratings. Michael Burger, who has succeeded Ray Combs as host of the Family Channel game show Family Challenge, tells me that his former co-host, Maty Monfort, and her husband are planning to start a family, as they were about to do when Mike & Maty unexpectedly happened.

Q: My husband and I watch New York Undercover every week and are trying to place Patti D'Arbanville-Quinn. What else has she done? A soap? --Joyce Funk, Peyton, Colo.

A: D'Arbanville-Quinn played villainous Christy Carson on Another World. Other series credits include South Beach and Wiseguy, as well as guest appearances on L.A. Law, The John Larroquette Show and Miami Vice, which starred her longtime paramour Don Johnson.

Q: My mom thinks Days of Our Lives star Kristian Alfonso starred as Sydney's madam on Melrose Place and Ana Alicia played Lorenzo Lamas' wife on Falcon Crest. My dad thinks Alfonso played on Falcon Crest, not Melrose Place. Who, if either, is right? --D. Swanson, Portland, Ore.

Melissa Joan Hart

A: Your mom is right on both counts: your dad is half-right. Alfonso played Sydney's madam, Lauren Eskridge, during the 1993-94 season of Melrose. Alicia played Lance Cumson's (Lamas) first wife, Melissa, on Falcon Crest. But Lance later remarried, and Pilar Ortega Cumson was played by Alfonso.

Q: What relation is Chris Wallace to Mike Wallace, if any? --M.W., Charlotte, N.C.

A: Chris is Mike's son.

Q: What series did Janet Jackson appear in when she was young? --Mike Whalen, Dixon, Calif.

A: In addition to appearing as herself on The Jacksons (1976-77), she played Penny Gordon Woods on Good Times (1977-79); JoJo Ashton on A New Kind of Family (1979-80); Charlene DuPrey on Diff'rent Strokes (1981-82); and Cleo Hewitt on Fame. (1984-85).

SOAP WORLD

Fan grows restless for return of Brad

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: Can you please, please tell me what has happened to the actor who played Brad Carlton on The Young and the Restless?

I have followed the show from the time he first came on and, to me, it just isn't the same since he left.

Nothing has been mentioned of him, which leads me to believe he will no longer be involved with the show.

If he has gone on to work in movies, I hope he does well. If he doesn't make it, I hope he returns to Nikki (Melody Thomas Scott). --A big fan of Brad's.

Dear Reader: Don Diamont (ex-Brad) left to pursue other interests, but the door has been left open for his return.

It was a mutual decision between the show and Diamont. The producer had planned to move Brad to recurring status. Diamont chose to leave and pursue movies and prime-time television on a full-time basis.

Dear Candace: I would love to have an address where I can write to Victoria Wyndham (Rachel) on Another World. I have watched the show for years and she is one of my favorites. --Bonita Danielson, Russell, Penn.

Dear Reader: You may write to Wyndham and the rest of the cast c/o Another World, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10112.

Dear Candace: I'm not sure of the name of the actor I want to talk about, but he played Billy Clyde on All My Children.

Why doesn't AMC bring him back?

He really made the show. Also, do you know what he is doing now? --JoAnne Stafford, Myers, Fla.

Dear Reader: In the history of this column, which is more than nine years now, I've never before had a request for Billy Clyde Tuggle to return.

Billy Clyde, who was played by Matthew Cowles, was the pimp everyone loved to hate.

Billy Clyde died in an explosion -- but the dead have risen before. Tad (Michael E. Knight) is a shining example.

Send questions of general interest to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, TVData Features Syndicate, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804, or e-mail to soaptalk@tvdata.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.

CHITTER CHATTER

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) - The Warrior Princess is on the mend.

Lucy Lawless, star of television's "Xena: Warrior Princess," was released from a hospital Wednesday, a week after fracturing her pelvis while taping a skit for "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

"She's fine," said Jim Benson, spokesman for MCA Television, the show's distributor. "She just needs some rest and recuperation."

The 28-year-old New Zealand actress is unlikely to resume work for four to six weeks, Benson said. The injury was expected to have little impact on the production of "Xena."

Lawless, in the United States vacationing and doing publicity for her popular syndicated show, was taping the skit in NBC's Burbank studio parking lot on Oct. 8 when her horse lost its footing and fell.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Rocker Tommy Lee was charged with battery for allegedly throwing a tabloid TV cameraman to the ground while leaving a nightclub.

The Sept. 29 scuffle outside the Viper Room in West Hollywood was caught on videotape. Henry Trappier, who works for Paparazzi TV, a supplier of celebrity video, suffered a displaced hip, prosecutors said.

Lee, drummer for the band Motley Crue and husband of "Baywatch" star Pamela Anderson Lee, was charged on Tuesday and could get a year in jail.

He and his wife were harassed and pepper-sprayed by photographers as they left the club, said Marleah Leslie, a spokeswoman for the actress.

CHANHASSEN, Minn. (AP) - Prince is free at last from his old record label and is celebrating with a three-disc set called "Emancipation."

"I'm free and my music is free," the rock star said Tuesday as he gave a preview of the new CD at his Paisley Park Studios.

He was also free of the word "SLAVE," which had been penciled on his cheek for the past couple of years during his feud with Warner Bros.

Prince had complained that the label, for which he had sold nearly 100 million records since 1978, would not release and promote his music as fast as he could create it.

Prince's new CD, due in stores Nov. 19, will be released on his own NPG Records and distributed by EMI.

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. (AP) - "Superman" star Christopher Reeve is under fire from some activists for the disabled for sending what they say is the wrong message.

Reeve, who was paralyzed from the neck down in a 1995 riding accident, is coming to the Twin Cities on Oct. 27 to receive the National Courage Award from the Courage Center, which runs programs for the disabled.

Some critics say his lobbying for more funding for medical research is siphoning off money for programs to help people deal with their disabilities.

"His receiving the Courage Award is sucking up and draining the resources for those of us who already have a broken neck, who are quadriplegics, or who are blind," said Rick Cardenas, a community organizer with a St. Paul group called Advocating Change Together.

The actor was chosen because he has raised awareness of disabilities, said Kathy Jundt, a spokeswoman for the center.

"My sense is that the general public feels that Reeve is a hero, and he's really done wonderful things," she said.
