Holly, beet producers hold Media Day here

By SHERRI MARTIN Staff Writer

If it's sweet for local sugar beet farmers, it's sweet for the Hereford economy.

The sugar industry helps build the local economy by providing employment opportunities, tax revenues paid and purchases of goods and services.

The Holly Sugar Corp. in Hereford is the only sugar beet processing plant in Texas.

During a media field day Thursday, Holly Sugar and the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association provided these facts:

-- Holly Sugar employees 400 people, with a annual payroll of $4.75

-- Holly Sugar paid more than $600,000 in school, county and hospital taxes.

-- Holly Sugar spent more than $16.5 million on materials needed to run the Hereford plant. - Holly Sugar paid $15 to $20 million to regional growers. - Sweetner industry has an impact of $875 million on the Texas more than 13,000 jobs.

According to Executive Director of the TSBGA Bill Cleavinger, Hereford plant Thursday to more than 14,000 acres of beets will be 10 newspaper, television station, and harvested in Deaf Smith County and surrounding areas.

The average yield is expected to be 20 to 21 tons per acre, Holly Sugar Agricultural Manager Dennis Printz

Many growers will gross $700 to $800 an acre, TSBGA president Kenneth Frye said. However, growers in the Dalhart area with higher yields will gross about $1,400 per acre.

Currently, the net selling price is $27 per hundredweight, he said. The TSBGA has negotiated a 1997 grower-Holly Sugar contract which includes an 80 percent initial payment to growers, Cleavinger said.

The 1997 contract is similar to the this year's contract, which includes a 75 percent initial payment, he said. Holly Sugar has agreed to combine the 75 percent payment with the second payment to give growers an 80 percent payment at harvest.

Sugar beet farmers do not receive any subsidies, Cleavinger said. As harvest progresses, the Holly plant receives several truckloads of beets in a day.

The beets are piled at receiving -- Sweetner industry has created stations or at the Holly Sugar plant. Holly Sugar District Director Dave Duncan conducted a tour of the radio station representatives from areas including Amarillo, Lubbock and Clovis, N.M.

Before the processing begins, beets are washed in water and moved to slicing area. Beets are again washed in water and ran through slicers.

As many as 8,000 tons of beets are sliced a day in the Holly factory, .

Sliced beets are called cassettes and resemble common french fries. This shape eases the diffusion process which takes place in a huge cylinder called a diffuser.

The diffuser extracts raw juice from the beet. The juice is purified, filtered and boiled in a vacuum until it becomes a syrup-like liquid. The liquid is filtered and boiled again until it crystallizes. The syrup and sugar crystals are then transferred to a centrifugal station where the crystals are separated from the syrup. The crystals are washed again and placed in a granulator for drying. The pure white sugar is then ready for packaging. The sugar is packed in four, five, 10, 25 and 100 pound

Holly Sugar also sells powdered, liquid and bulk sugar.

The 10 large silos at the Hereford plant store refined sugar for further packaging and sales.

Stakes rise on Bush's tax plan

By MICHAEL HOLMES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - The political stakes are rising as Gov. George W. from his blue ribbon property tax committee.

The first-term Republican governor has said he wants to provide relief from local school property taxes, which now total $10 billion a year.

Democrats, still smarting from the loss of every statewide election this year, say he'd better.

"My own sense is that the (1998) governor's race is going to be determined ... on Bush's ability to keep his promise to eliminate the property tax as we know it," said Bill White, state Democratic Party chairman.

"He'll either succeed or fail, and I think to a large extent that's going to determine the governor's race, White said.

The governor's press secretary, Karen Hughes, said Bush took the lead in what will be a bipartisan effort to provide tax relief because he feels it's the right thing to do - not for political gain.

"He views it in Texas terms, not in political terms," Ms. Hughes said Thursday.

Feds crack down on Lubbock firm, owner; freeze assets

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A federal judge froze the assets of the local investment firms and their owner following a complaint that the man owes investors more than $3 million and has only $25,000 with which to pay them.

Robert C. Cowan must account for all assets and receipts for CS Investments Trust security sales within 10 days, according to a temporary restraining order signed by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings.

The order prohibits Cowan or any associates of CS Investments or Cowan Asset Management Inc. from defrauding any person.

Cowan, 45, refused comment after hearing Cummings' ruling Tuesday. SEC documents list 39 possible victims, 29 of whom live in Lubbock, with others ranging as far as Texarkana and New Mexico. The complaint claims Cowan represented CS Investments as having more than $190 million on deposit.

Cowan owes between $6,888 and $474,000 to each investor in an allegedly phony fund that has operated for at least seven years, the documents stated. A hearing on an injunction against Cowan and his firms is set for Nov. 15, said Phillip Offil Jr., a Fort Worth-based SEC attorney.

Dole to draw comfortable pension

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bob Dole won't have trouble making ends meet as he moves from 35 years of public service into involuntary retirement.

Even though he frequently invoked his humble Kansas origins as he campaigned for president, the former Senate majority leader and his wife Elizabeth have amassed a multi-million-dollar cushion.

Dole has not said yet what he plans to do in the future. Clearly, he plans to take some time to just sort things out.

'He expects to still maintain a role in public life," campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield said Wednesday. But asked just what Dole might do, Warfield replied, "All I would say is, stay tuned.

Last week, Dole said in an interview with David Frost that he might do some work with the disabled if he lost the election.

Dole's right arm is paralyzed as a result of a World War II injury and he has championed the rights of the disabled.

At 73, Dole would have no problem taking it easy for a while if he wants, even making lucrative speeches here and there.

He's a year younger than former President Bush, who has seemed to enjoy the freedom that comes from being out of office and out of the have not disclosed Dole's future intentions in terms of speaking fees. Dole also qualifies for Social Security benefits. These are paid when an individual reaches age 70 regardless of whether he or she is still working. However, Dole so far has elected not to apply for these benefits, based on his tax returns through 1995.

The U.S. ex-president getting the highest pension is Gerald Ford, who was House Republican leader before his three years as vice president and then president. He gets roughly $240,000 a year in combined White House and congressional pensions.

The two Doles keep their finances separate, but file joint tax returns. That has allowed Dole to take advantage of several tax shelters set up by Mrs. Dole.

She, too, has enjoyed a lucrative speaking career.

During her five years as head of the Red Cross, she has earned more than $1 million in honoraria, giving $500,000 to charities and putting $300,000 into a special retirement

The Doles own three homes: a two-bedroom apartment in the Watergate, which Dole bought in 1972 for $46,900; a condo apartment on the 12th floor of the Sea View Hotel in Bal Harbor, Fla., which they purchased for $150,000 from agribusiness executive Dwayne Andreas; and Dole's childhood home in Russell.

Three car pile up

A three car pile up at the intersection of Fifteenth Street and Avenue F on Thursday sent three motorists to Hereford Regional Medical Center, two were treated and released. The third's condition was unavailable at press time. The accident occurred when a motorist collided with a stationary animal control vehicle that was waiting for a stop light to change. The impact pushed the animal control car into another vehicle, also waiting for the light to change. Police are pursuing charges against the driver who caused the accident.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Truckers, I believe, are the Lord's angels in disguise. Here's my story:

Driving west recently, my young son pulled over on a highway when he saw smoke coming from his car. Before he was out of the automobile, two truckers came running toward him with their fire extinguishers.

It turned out that the car was on fire and my son was only a few seconds away from tragedy. The truckers saved the car and probably our son's life as well. They were on their way again before our son could express his gratitude.

My husband and I shall always feel grateful to God and those truckers. I wish we could thank them personally and write to their employers. Please print this letter, Ann. I pray they will see it. -- Appreciative in N.J.

Dear N.J.: Here it is -- yet another accolade for those White Knights of the Road. If I hear from them, I'll let you know.

Dear Ann Landers: I was trying to jump-start a battery at work. The battery was mismarked, and I accidentally connected the positive end of the battery cable to the negative battery post. The whole thing exploded in my face, and I suffered burns from the battery acid. I was lucky, though, because I was wearing safety glasses. Even though the force of the explosion blew the glasses off my face, they were on when the battery acid hit, and my eyes were protected.

My accident happened at an industrial site, but the same thing can happen when people jump-start their car batteries. These explosions can shoot acid and sharp pieces of the battery in all directions. Battery explosions cause as many as 6,000 eye injuries a year.

I'm now a member of a workplace safety group sponsored by Prevent Blindness America, the nation's largest non-profit eye health and safety organization. According to PBA, nine out of 10 eye injuries are preventable.

If your readers would like more information on how to prevent blindness, or even how to safely jump-start a car battery, I recommend they call Prevent Blindness America's toll-free hotline at 1-800-331--2020 or write to them at 500 E. six weeks ago, began working out again Wednesday. His performance left coach Barry Switzer optimistic that Williams could play Sunday against San Francisco.

"He ran routes and caught passes like he hasn't missed a day of practice," Switzer said. "I think he can play. His conditioning will be a factor.'

Williams said he expects to be back in the lineup, if he's fully

"You lose (your starting job) by him fresh on defense. so I don't even worry about that," said Williams, who caught 11 passes for 154 yards and a touchdown before being injured.

Sanders gave up baseball to spend the off-season preparing to play receiver. Michael Irvin's five-game suspension made Sanders a starter, then he remained in the lineup when Williams went down.

But now that Irvin is back and Williams will be soon, Sanders could begin seeing the majority of his playing time as a cornerback. He's already been weaned out of the receiving rotation the last two games, Sunday against the 49ers and although those moves were to keep superstar receiver Jerry Rice.

Sanders said he didn't care who starts opposite Irvin.

"I just want to win," said Sanders, who has caught 30 passes for 372 yards and one touchdown.

Switzer said he'll wait before naming the starter.

"It's going to depend on who we are playing and who we think is best for the team," Switzer said. "I don't want to get into saying who is the starter. Both are starters. One fits one time, one fits the other time."

Tyson finally to meet Holyfield

Herd to test Bowie's ranking

By JAY PEDEN Sports Editor

The Dumas volleyball team, ranked seventh in Class 4A by the Texas Girls Coaches Association, made a mockery of San Angelo Lakeview's No. 10 ranking Tuesday with a 15-5, 15-1 spanking.

On Saturday, the No. 1 Hereford Lady Whitefaces will find out if El Paso Bowie's No. 6 ranking is for real. They play at 2 p.m. at Ector Junior High in Odessa.

Bowie (28-3) runs a simple but unusual offense, said coach Brenda Reeh, whose Hereford team is 28-1. She was able to obtain a videotape of Bowie's 15-12, 10-15, 15-12 win over Snyder Tuesday.

The 4-2 utilizes two setters, but they're always in the front row, so Bowie never has more than two eligible hitters. With Hereford's 5-1 offense, two hitters are eligible half the time, but three hitters are eligible the other half.

"They don't hit out of the middle very often; they swing from the left front or the right front," Reeh said.

Bowie's strength may be blocking. Something that we will have to be wary of is that they've got three 5-(foot)-11 kids, so they have some height," Reeh said. "It'll be an

"Judging from what we saw in their defense versus Snyder, there are some wide open areas we can hit into if we get to the ball," she said. "If we get to the ball late, with the size of their blockers, we could likely hit right into their blocks, so we've got to be quick and reach.'

The winner of Saturday's match will play Sherman (20-11), which defeated Granbury, 18-16, 15-9, Thursday night in Fort Worth.

JV gridders finish with flourish

The Hereford junior varsity football team closed out the season with a 16-10 victory over Canyon Thursday in Canyon.

Hereford scored all 16 points in the second quarter and held on to earn the win, which salvaged a 5-5 record for the Herd.

Canyon took the early lead with a 20-yard field goal in the first quarter, but Hereford responded with its own scoring drive, capped by Jason Foster's four-yard dive and Cory Marsh's kick.

On the ensuing kickoff, Hereford's Jarred Haile smashed the Canyon kick returer, and Herd coach Joe Cabezuela compared it to the hit Henry Hernandez put on a Randall kickoff returner during a varsity game both managers persevered to win their divisions. They were winners again Thursday, sharing the AL Manager 12-game lead over Baltimore to 2 1/2 of the Year award.

It was the first tie in the 14-year history of the award, which is voted on by two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America per AL city. Both had 89 total points.

This time last month, Torre's Yankees had just finished beating Oates' Rangers in a first-round playoff series. New York went on to win its first World Series title since 1978. Voting was done before the playoffs.

Oates was once a backup catcher for the Yankees, and he still remembers the intense scrutiny that goes along with wearing pinstripes. Because of that, he had extra respect for the job Torre did.

"All the personal matters that he's had to go through, and The Boss (Steinbrenner) is still The Boss, Oates said. "You have to be a tough person to make it there, and I think he proved he's a tough man this David Cone's aneurysm, the return of former crosstown stars Darryl Strawberry and Dwight Gooden and flawed late-season trade with Milwaukee were just part of Torre's soap-opera season.

The loss of one brother and another brother's long wait for a heart transplant made the Brooklyn native

"It's really magical. It's unbelievable," Torre said. "It's probably the happiest time of my life. There's a bizarre plan out there somewhere and I'm glad to be a part of it."

Oates, meanwhile, accomplished what 13 previous Texas managers couldn't: win a division title.

"I know that going into spring training next year there's one question I won't have any more," Oates said.

The Rangers no longer played like their stRangers predecessors as Oates lived up to his promise of improved pitching and defense. This season - Oates' second in Texas - the Rangers led the majors in victories by a starting rotation (75) and in fielding. They did it without abandoning their slugging ways, setting several team records for offense. Not surprisingly, the club also drew more fans than ever before.

Many of those fans waited as long as possible to become believers. After all, it isn't easy to forget nearly a quarter-century of ineptitude.

"We had to change the attitude of our community," Oates said. "Even up until probably Sept. 1, the attitude was 'Just wait and see. The Rangers have never done it.' ... It was harder to defend ourselves against history

This one-pound bag of marijuana a year ago was confiscated by the Hereford Police Department, and is kept in an evidence lock up. Police Chief David Wagner said he doubted the owner of this "stash" intended it for medicinal purposes. "There were five of these in a duffle bag," he said.

Petition drive started to get medical marijuana on ballot

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) - A petition drive has been launched to get a medicinal marijuana initiative on the ballot for next May's city election

The drive was started on election day by Harvey Ginsburg, a Southwest Texas State University psychology professor who was arrested on marijuana charges two years ago.

Ginsburg said he did not know how many signatures were collected on Tuesday when the drive began, but says they need 1,600 signatures

We made very significant progress in getting the number of signatures we need in one day," he said. "Most of the people were incredibly positive." The drive began with volunteers stationed at each of the 12 voting

The Rev. Jim Love, pastor of Westover Baptist Church, was not happy about the volunteers attempting to get signatures at his church, one of Ginsburg said a confrontation developed when Love realized people were gathering up signatures on a measure to ease up on marijuana users outside the church.

"I thought we had a say in what happens on our church property, but I guess we don't," Love said. "We are a church that stands on biblical principles, and here we have a poll being taken to basically legalize marijuana right outside our front door.'

A check with City Hall revealed that the petitioners had a right to be there, Love said. He said the incident will make the church rethink whether to allow voting in future elections.

The professor, who suffers from glaucoma, said the proposed ordinance would not legalize marijuana.

He said it would, however, direct police to use their discretion "to minimize the impact of marijuana laws" on people using the drug for relief from six specific medical conditions: cancer, glaucoma, AIDS, chronic pain, seizure disorders and multiple sclerosis.

Research shows marijuana is the only drug found to be effective for some patients, he said.

Ginsburg was arrested on possession of marijuana after officers found six marijuana plants growing in his home in 1994. The charge were dropped without him having to stand trial.

Voters in California and Arizona approved a measure Tuesday that will allow the use of marijuana for medicinal purposes.

We are doing it just like they did in California," he said. "They started at the local level and worked their way up." Ginsburg would not say whether he still smokes marijuana to relieve his glaucoma, but he told The San Antonio Express-News that his case history will be included in a book by a Harvard Medical School professor to be published by Yale University Press next year. The proposed San Marcos ordinance would have little effect, City Attorney Mark Taylor says.

"It doesn't say they can't be arrested," he said. "It is a look-the-other way kind of ordinance.'

The ordinance would apply only to city police officer, Taylor said. "It would not bind other law enforcement agencies, like the university police, the Department of Public Safety or federal agents from enforcing the law; and it would not apply to prosecutors, because they are county officials, not city officials," Taylor said.

A local effort is the wrong way to go, San Marcos Mayor Bill Moore

Moore said if backers of medicinal use of marijuana want to change the law, they need to do so at the state level, as they did in California and Arizona this week.

Texas AG: child molesters not eligible for early release; 900 imprisoned in Texas

By CHIP BROWN

ssociated Press Writer AUSTIN (AP) - Convicted child molesters can't use time credits earned for good behavior to be released early from prison, the Texas attorney general's office said in a legal opinion Thursday.

The question was raised because indecency with a child was not included on the list of crimes approved by the 1993 Legislature for which offenders were ineligible for mandatory supervision - also known as mandatory release.

Mandatory release requires the parole of convicts whose time served in prison, plus their accumulated time credits for good behavior, equals their sentence.

"The Legislature's intent is obvious," said Texas Attorney General Dan Morales. "We should keep child molesters locked up as along as possible. Our priority should be on the rights of victims, not the early release of their attackers." Of the roughly 900 convicted child molesters imprisoned in Texas, as many as 60 could have been eligible for parole under mandatory release guidelines because of the glitch in the law, officials said.

Wayne Scott, executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, had vowed to prohibit any releases while seeking an interpretation of the law from Morales' office.

"Of course, we welcome this opinion," Scott said Thursday. "It validates TDCJ's established position that these offenders are not eligible for mandatory release.'

Scott said a staff attorney in the department's office of Counsel for Offenders, which represents convicts, questioned whether prison officials had erred in denying mandatory release to a Fort Worth man serving an eight-year sentence for indecency with a child.

After a review of the case, prison system attorneys ruled that the man was eligible for mandatory supervision, although he was not released. That decision triggered a review of other convicts serving time for the same charge, Scott said.

Texas Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee who sponsored the 1993 revisions of the penal code, said even if the crime of indecency with a child is not specifically included among those for which mandatory release is banned, "the legislative intent (to include it) was there. So it applies."

A 1971 court ruling found by agency attorneys, however, said that, Every word excluded from a statute must be presumed to have been

excluded for a purpose."

The legal opinion signed by Morales, whose office is charged with interpreting state laws, said, "Where the Legislature's intent is clear, it will be given effect by the courts even to the extent of adding words to the language used by the Legislature."

Dianne Clements, president of the victims' rights group Justice For All, said, "Dan Morales and Wayne Scott have taken a huge step toward public safety, in particular, children's safety, by stopping the release of these pedophiles. This is a fantastic victory for citizens."

Most rain was concentrated in Bandera, Kimble and Gillespie Counties. However, the amount of rain received varied among and within counties.

Near Utopia where the heaviest rains fell, he said that water gaps and fences were washed out, and a few roads were closed.

"We had a few problems, but no major catastrophes," Thigpen said. Dale Brandenberger, Extension agent for Kimble County, said that the southern and eastern areas of that county received up to 12 inches of "We had severe flooding in three watershed areas on last Sunday night: the South Llano River, the Johnson Fork Creek and the James River," said Brandenberger.

He said that fences were lost, at least five homes were flooded along with numerous hunting cabins and several main highways were closed.

Brandenberger said, "One highway to Rocksprings was washed out and four bridges on county roads also were washed out."

He said that the damage to the roads and bridges in Kimble County is estimated at $1.5 million.

Some areas of Gillespie County also received large amounts of rain and sustained damage to many small grain fields. Bill Botard, Extension agent for Gillespie County, said that rainfall varied from four to 12 inches. Like Bandera County, most of the rain fell in the western part of the county. "We got rain beginning late Sunday through early Monday," said Botard. "Most of it fell in the western part of the county, and it washed out fences, water gaps, there was water over the roads, and it even broke terraces.' Botard explained that many producers had already either prepared the fields for or planted small grains. The flooding washed much of that preparation away.

He said that the small grain producers will have to allow the fields to dry, replow the fields, repair the terraces and replant the grain. "Where the rain hit, it hurt bad," Botard said. The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

By JENNIFER BOWLES AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ted Danson and Mary Steenburgen thought working together on a television series would be a blessing for their marriage.

After all, this is one Hollywood couple that just oozes love, even while driving in bumper-to-bumper traffic during the first big rain of the

'We really, really belong together ... We laugh a lot, cry a lot, every-thing a lot," says Danson. He is speaking by car phone from his Ford Explorer, while navigating slippery freeways to a doctor's appointment. And if that isn't gushy enough, listen to Steenburgen: "I totally appreciate our relationship," she says as she drives HER Ford Explorer on the other side of town en route to CBS Radford Studios. "He's an amazing buddy that I happen to be totally obsessed with."

The couple thought that by doing the sitcom, they would avoid the usual distant location shoots for feature films, and would remain close to home in Santa Monica with their combined family of four teen-age children.

Never did they imagine their dream would escalate into one of the TV season's most problematic series, requiring a highly visible overhaul.

"She periodically would look at me and say 'I thought you said this was going to be fun?' It was tough for a while," admits Danson.

Tough is an understatement; the pressure mounted from the beginning.

The newspaper sitcom "Ink" would mark the 48-year-old Danson's return to TV - where he played everybody's favorite womanizing bartender on "Cheers" for 11 years after a bumpy movie career.

And it would be the 43-year-old Steenburgen's first foray into a TV series after a string of movie roles that included "What's Eating Gilbert Grape," "Parenthood" and "Melvin and Howard," for which she won a best supporting Oscar.

"Ink," airing Monday at 8:30 p.m after "Cosby," was expected to be a major player in CBS' strategy to rebuild its prime-time schedule from third place.

Then it began. The pilot was panned by TV critics in July. In late August a stunning and costly decision was made to yank four already-shot episodes - just three weeks before the show's scheduled Sept. 16 premiere.

A total re-haul was ordered under the leadership of a new executive producer, Diane English.

The result was an Oct. 21 premiere with rave reviews and good ratings. Behind the scenes, Danson and Steenburgen felt the pressure.

"The truth is Mary was much more free with her emotions during the whole process," says Danson.

"I thought 'Well, no this is fine, no big deal, no pressure' and then I collapsed about three days ago when I realized there was a lot of pressure: CBS did spend some money, people were putting a lot on the line.

Steenburgen sees it philosophically: "Some things are born I guess painless and easily and some things aren't and this wasn't."

Danson plays a star columnist; Steenburgen is a globe-trotting reporter who becomes his boss. In the original show, they had recently ended their marriage, but the reconstructed show has them divorced for 10 years.

Such a change prompted Danson and Steenburgen to alter their personal habits while on the set because, as English says, "in order to bring the chemistry to the screen, these people really have to behave like they haven't seen each other in Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

-- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

-- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times

California's higher cigarette tax works

ATLANTA (AP) - California is rapidly snuffing out smoking through higher cigarette taxes and anti-tobacco campaigns, the government said Thursday.

Only 15.5 percent of California adults smoked regularly in 1995. down from 26 percent in 1984, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said in a state-by-state look at smoking.

By comparison, Kentucky, one of the nation's top tobacco-producing states, had the highest smoking rate in 1995, with 27.8 percent of adults saying they light up regularly. Kentucky has long been near the top.

Utah had the lowest smoking rate, 13.2 percent. It has been near the bottom for the last four years. probably because of the large California was among the first states to ask voters whether they wanted higher taxes on cigarettes. Voters in 1989 raised the tax from 10 cents to 35 cents a pack. Massachusetts followed suit in 1993, going from 26 cents to 51 cents a pack. Kentucky's tax on cigarettes is 3 cents a pack.

In California, the extra revenue goes toward state anti-smoking campaigns, including TV and radio public service announcements, hot lines and programs in schools.

"This strategy is one of the most effective ways of decreasing cigarette consumption, both by pricing out teen-agers and encouraging adults to cut out smoking," said Michael Eriksen,

The CDC estimated that California adults, on average, will buy 75 packs of cigarettes each this year, down from 89 in 1992. Adults in Massachusetts will buy about 94 packs each in 1996, down from 117.

John Banzhaf, executive director of the Washington-based Action on Smoking and Health, said higher taxes are the best way to curb smoking among teen-agers.

"You talk about a 13-year-old kid who's saving up for a rock concert or a new CD and suddenly they are having to pay more for cigarettes," Banzhaf said. "This provides us with a way of getting to a group which previously has

The CDC's goal is to reduce the percentage of adult smokers nationwide to 15 percent by 2000. The agency said if the nation's youths can't kick the habit, smoking will end up killing more than 5 million of them and will run up $200 billion in health care

Tobacco companies warn there are costly results from a tax increase.

'The more you make the tax disparity larger, the more you encourage people to become involved in cigarette smuggling," said Walker Merryman of The Tobacco Institute, an organization representing tobacco companies nationwide. "That creates a law enforcement expense."

1953 clinical studies link smoking, cancer

NEW YORK (AP) - A scientist for R.J. Reynolds in 1953 acknowledged in a company memo that clinical studies "tend to confirm" the link between smoking and lung cancer, NBC Nightly News reported Thursday.

One of the earliest tobacco company documents to link smoking with cancer, it noted the "growing suspicion ... even acceptance, among medical men and cancer researchers that the parallel increase in cigarette consumption and incidence of lung cancer was more than coincidence."

The document was written 11 years before the surgeon general's first warning about the dangers of smoking.

R.J. Reynolds officials told The Associated Press the document confirmed that the company had "long been concerned with and responsive to reports in the scientific literature and popular media on the potential relationship between smoking and certain diseases."

NBC's report comes less than two weeks after The Associated Press obtained a 1958 memo from a top Philip Morris scientist who argued that a suspected carcinogen, benzopyrene, should be removed or reduced from its cigarettes.

Two little girls found dead in Florida attic; twice convicted child molester charged

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) Donna Jones, a struggling mother living with her two young girls in a tiny camper, was poor but happy when she met a 30-year-old unemployed painter in a park two weeks

Howard Steven Ault befriended her and her daughters, 11-year-old DeAnne Emerald Mu'min and Alicia Sybilla Jones, 7. What Jones didn't know, however, was that Ault had been convicted twice of sexual battery against children.

The girls, half-sisters, later disappeared and were found dead Wednesday in Ault's attic after a two-day search, police said.

from school on Monday, Jones went looking for them at Ault's house, about three miles from the park. 'He said he didn't have her kids and hadn't seen the kids," Jones' cousin, Sherette Adderley, told The Miami Herald.

But Jones gave Ault's name to police anyway, and during their investigation officers learned that he was a suspect in an unrelated sexual battery case against another young girl. He was jailed and confessed to killing DeAnne and Alicia, police

Ault had lured the girls to his "She was vulnerable," said Sylvia home, sexually assaulted and Cole, Jones' friend. "When you're strangled them, and hid the bodies in sexual battery and kidnapping. Details of his past crimes and prison sentences were not immediately available.

"We interviewed him in the jail and he told us that he murdered the kids," said Oakland Park Police Detective Bill Cox. "Then he took us to the house and showed us where the bodies were."

That ended an exhaustive two-day search in neighborhood canals, wooded areas and a lake. Police also knocked on doors of homes around Fort Lauderdale, handed out fliers and put information on the Internet.

Jones said her family had been struggling, but they were happy in the small trailer equipped with a television, stove and small refrigera- my floor," Cole said.

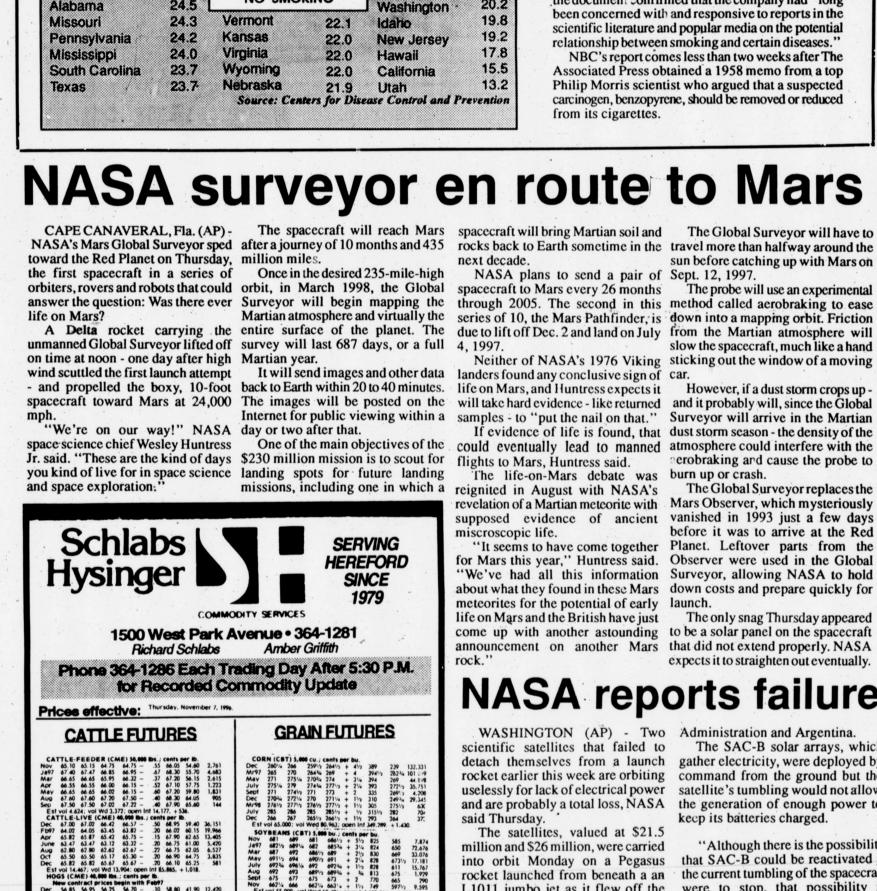

Ault was charged with murder, tor. They had been living in the park off and on for 14 months - when Jones could afford the $18-a-night camping fee.

'I moved there because it's closer to school," she said. The school is about a mile away, in suburban Oakland Park.

In the working-class neighborhood where Ault had lived in a triplex for the past month, residents were outraged that a sex offender could be allowed to live among them.

"Something like this should never have happened," Ann Gnozzo said. "How could this guy still be out here? What is the system doing?"

Cole said she felt pangs of guilt. "I felt I should have done something more - let them sleep on
