Second-grader Alex Dotson, with his albino Burmese python around his neck, attracted the attention of his classmates.

Dotson attends Northwest Primary School. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Rodney Dotson.

The python exhibit was part of a unit in the HOSTS (Help One Student To Succeed) Spanish Language Arts program.

"Berniece" was born July 4. The python was purchased from a snake farm in San Antonio, Dotson said.

The python is 18 inches at birth and now measures 42 inches. Since "Berniece" is an albino, she has a pattern of orange blotches on a light beige-colored background, he said.

This type of snake is not poisonous and does not bite, he said. "Berniece" feeds on small animals, preferably young pigeons and mice.

"We go driving around old barns to find baby pigeons and mice for her," Dotson said.

Donita Rule, a Spanish HOSTS teacher, has been trapping mice for the python.

"We live on a farm, so we have been catching live mice for her," Rule said.

To feed on her prey, "Berniece" winds herself around her prey and tightens her coils. She squeezes the prey just hard enough to suffocate it to death, then swallows it whole, Dotson said.

It takes several days for pythons to digest their food. Several students saw an enlarged portion of "Berniece's" body, which was an undigested baby pigeon, he said.

"Berniece" has completed a shedding stage, a stage which pythons go through every two to three months. She experiences blindness in this stage because the skin covers the pupils in her eyes, Dotson said.

He often reads books about snakes to learn the proper way to care for "Berniece" and his garter snake, he said.

The Spanish HOSTS students were working on a unit on sorpresas, or surprises. The students have been learning the shape and sound of the letter "S," which resemble the characteristics of a snake, Rule said.

As a learning tool, the Spanish HOSTS students pointed out the lengua, or tongue; and the nariz, or nose on the serpiente, or snake, Rule said.

"The snake was the biggest surprise we have had so far," she said.

Dr. Dotson, a mentor in Spanish HOSTS program, said his son had a python that he would like to show to the students, Rule said.

The HOSTS Spanish Language Arts Program, or La Fiesta de la Lectura, assists Spanish-speaking students in learning the fundamentals of language arts in Spanish, she said.

Similar Spanish HOSTS programs operate at Aikman Primary School and Tierra Blanca Primary School.

Spanish HOSTS serves 55 students in the primary school. The HOSTS program has 25 mentors, Rule said.

HOSTS pairs students who need help learning to read at their grade level with community volunteers who serve as mentors, Rule said.

A mentor's role is to work with an individual student for one hour per week on reading, vocabulary and comprehension skills, she said.

In Spanish HOSTS, mentors do not have to be bilingual. The Spanish HOSTS students are bilingual, but not all of the students are in bilingual classes, Rule said.

Rule and her aide, Brenda Koenig, work with mentors in planning and preparing instruction to the students.

The four basic processes of language -- listening, speaking, reading and writing -- are carefully defined to give the student a logical process for learning how to read, she said.

Spanish HOSTS gives Spanish-speaking students the opportunity to learn the basics of reading and writing in Spanish, Rule said.

The same material is then covered in English, making La Fiesta de la Lectura a dual-language program, she said.

This allows students to retain the basic properties of both languages, permitting them to progress in both Spanish and English while retaining the cultural aspects of both Spanish and English languages, Rule said.

Rule's classroom is decorated in a festive party theme, with balloons and pinatas hanging on the walls. The

Clinton, Yeltsin set summit meet

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mindful of Boris Yeltsin's serious health problems, President Clinton agreed Friday to shift their summit meeting from the United States to Finland. There, in March, Clinton will try to allay the Russian president's concern over NATO's projected expansion eastward.

Yeltsin's prime minister, Viktor Chernomyrdin, said Yeltsin is "recovering and he oversees all the necessary issues." But he said the president's recovery from heart surgery and pneumonia was not rapid enough for him to be at his desk every day.

"It is too serious," Chernomyrdin said of Yeltsin's ailments at a joint news conference with Vice President Al Gore after two days of talks on U.S.-Russian economic cooperation.

At the March 20-21 summit, Clinton will try to allay the Russian president's concern over NATO's projected expansion eastward.

"No one has any intention of providing an increased threat to the security of Russia," Clinton said as he met at the White House with Chernomyrdin.

The prime minister, clearly still anxious about an expanded NATO reaching to Russia's border, remarked: "Perhaps we are talking a different language."

But, he said, the two sides could agree on a charter proposed by the United States to link Russia to NATO - provided Russia's concerns are taken into consideration.

Gore, meanwhile, said the Clinton-Yeltsin summit could produce guidelines for a START III treaty calling for a new round of cuts in U.S. and Russian long-range nuclear weapons.

He said the aim was to break a stalemate in the Russian parliament over ratifying the 4-year-old START II treaty and its weapons reductions.

Counselors, recruiters help HHS juniors, seniors to select college of choice

By MARTIN OCHOA
Staff Writer

It begins in the Fall season by merely accepting the brochures that the nice college recruiter hands to him over the table.

With the click of a computer, she can call up any college that she's interested in.

Then, by looking over the results of the ACT or the SAT test, Hereford High School seniors will know if the college of his or her choice has accepted them into their ranks.

Sara Pesina, counselor at Hereford High School, is the person who knows the channels that junior and seniors have to swim through in order to get into college.

"Every year in the Fall, juniors and seniors attend College Night," Pesina says. Here, they have a chance to first become familiar with the universities that are available. "Anyone in the community can come but we especially want juniors and seniors to attend," Pesina says.

Juniors can pick up the brochures and find what's out there. "But we especially stress that seniors be there."

About 40 college recruiters show up for College Night yet the college hunt doesn't end on that night.

"In-between their junior and senior year, the students should finalize the choices and possibly visit the prospective campus," Pesina says.

Lois Shuman, the assistant director of admissions for West Texas A&M is usually the lady that students will see standing behind the recruiting table.

With a comfortable - yet not forced enthusiasm on her face - Shuman appears at ease when talking about college recruiting.

Shuman says that it is a good idea for the student to come ready with a list of questions.

"My job is to make sure that all of the student's questions are answered," Shuman said. "If not, then I will recommend someone that does know it."

Shuman says that every now and (See COLLEGE, Page 3A)

Hereford's SPS office to lose 2 jobs, keep 15

Hereford will lose only two Southwestern Public Service Co. jobs and will keep 15 as a result of the merger between SPS and Public Service Co. of Colorado, it was announced Friday in Amarillo. SPS released a list of lay-offs for Amarillo and the area. Amarillo will lose 134 jobs and keep 1,002.

SPS reported that Amarillo will lose another 67 or so jobs but it will pick up 34 post-merger jobs.

Last week, SPS announced that 418 job reductions would occur in its four-state region because of the merger. About half of those jobs already have been vacated and left unfilled.

Lewis McDaniel, Hereford SPS office manager, said the two job reductions here are in customer accounting. There were three jobs in that area, but one already had been terminated.

McDaniel said SPS plans to have a community development specialist here, to take on some job responsibilities of the manager, and the general foreman will assume other duties.

SPS lay-offs listed for other area towns include: Canyon will lose four jobs and keep eight; Plainview will lose 13 jobs and keep 28; Pampa will lose 12 jobs and keep 27; Borger will lose 11 jobs and keep 31; Dimmitt will lose one job, keep two; Dumas will lose four, keep 18; Friona will keep its two SPS positions; Perryton will lose three jobs, keep nine; Vega will keep its one SPS position.

Simpson courtroom saga stretches to another week

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - O.J. Simpson's courtroom saga stretched into yet another week when the jury went home Friday without deciding how much he should pay as punishment for the slayings of his ex-wife and her friend.

Jurors, who deliberated just 2 1/2 hours, had requested a statement showing both the plaintiffs' rosy picture of Simpson's financial future and a defense depiction of his net worth plummeting from over $10 million to less than zero since his murder acquittal. They will return Monday.

Deliberations began after Simpson's lawyers pleaded fiscal mercy and a plaintiff attorney urged jurors to hit the football great with a judgment harsh enough to let him know: "You cannot kill two people and get away with it."

"You must send him a message as loud as humanly possible so he can hear it on whatever golf course he is hiding out on right now," plaintiff lawyer Daniel Petrocelli yelled in closing arguments.

Petrocelli, who spoke after final witnesses said Simpson was financially ruined, told jurors not to trust his lawyers and financial experts. Simpson was notably absent in the punitive phase, but had been seen golfing.

"O.J. Simpson doesn't have the courage to walk in this courtroom, face you and tell you to give him a break," Petrocelli said. "So he tells his lawyer to ask you: 'Go easy on me. Let me make my money again. Believe me this one last time. I have no money.... Don't fall for it.'"

Petrocelli reminded the panel that Simpson's acquittal 16 months ago on murder charges made him a free man. He said jurors are the last ones who can "reach out and punish him.... There is no one else after you. You are the only ones that can speak for the victims."

But defense attorney Robert Baker told jurors they were being manipulated by the plaintiffs who are trying to get them to substitute punitive damages for prison.

"You're not allowed to do that," Baker said. "Mr. Simpson still has obligations. He has to raise his two kids."

"Mr. Simpson has negative net worth and if Mr. Simpson has negative net worth, it's just destructive. It's contrary to law," he added.

The mostly white jury three days earlier found Simpson responsible for the killings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman and assessed $8.5 million in compensatory damages.

Plaintiffs contend Simpson is worth at least $15.7 million, which includes $2 million to $3 million a year he stands to earn from signing autographs and writing another book.

The defense claimed Tuesday's verdict left an already tapped-out Simpson $9.3 million in the hole and argued that the jury should award the plaintiffs nothing in punitive damages.

Two arrested after bungled robbery try

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - More than 100 customers were kept inside a busy check-cashing service for hours Friday by police who believed they had been taken hostage by armed robbers dressed as security guards.

After four tense hours, police determined that no robbers were inside and no money had been taken. All the patrons inside The Financial Exchange, mostly women and children, then filed out one by one. No one was injured.

Two men were arrested and two were being sought, police said.

The scheme began Thursday night when gunmen kidnaped four people, including a clerk, security guard and assistant manager at the check-cashing service, as well as the assistant manager's husband.

The four were taken to the assistant manager's home, where another gunman was holding her 4-year-old daughter.

Friday morning, one of the gunmen, dressed as a security guard, went to the check-cashing business with the assistant manager. Police believe the plan was to rob an armored car, but the truck came and went.

Around 10:30 a.m., the assistant manager escaped from the check-cashing service and called police. At noon, when they realized the bandit posing as a security guard and perhaps other suspects could still be inside, police sealed off the building and refused to allow anyone to leave.

At about the same time, the assistant manager's mother knocked on her daughter's door. The husband answered, and spotting a passing patrol car, bolted from the house.

The officers later caught one suspect trying to run from the house. The couple's daughter and the other employees were found huddled in the basement.

Police elsewhere nabbed another suspect after exchanging gunfire with three men inside a car that had been stopped for a routine traffic violation.

Fighter jets cause furor on E. Coast

WASHINGTON (AP) - Four National Guard fighter jets screamed past a civilian airliner off the coast of Maryland on Friday, the second harrowing incident involving Guard F-16s and airliners in the area in three days.

The Air Force quickly suspended all its flights in restricted areas along the East Coast for a review of rules and operating procedures.

At the same time, the Federal Aviation Administration told controllers at its centers in Florida, Washington and New York and military controllers in Virginia to review procedures for operations in and around East Coast military areas.

The American Eagle turboprop took no special action in Friday's incident, and no one was hurt. The pilot of a Nations Air Boeing 727 two days earlier dived into evasive maneuvers, and two flight attendants and a passenger were thrown to the cabin floor.

In that earlier incident, off New Jersey's coast, a civilian controller following the planes had repeatedly expressed his concern and asked military controllers to get the Guard plane that was closest to the 727 to move away.

The National Transportation Safety Board mobilized investigation teams to look into both incidents.

Maj. Gen. Donald W. Sheppard, director of the Air National Guard, said at a Pentagon briefing that he considered military aviation safe, noting that thousands of flights occur each day over the East Coast.

"In my opinion ... it's very safe," he said. "We have very, very few incidents."

In the order suspending flights, Air Force Chief of Staff Ronald Fogleman said he was acting "as a precaution to ensure all procedures are sound and present no compromise to safety."

There was no indication how long the suspension would last.

Emergency Services

The Hereford Police Department listed the following arrests and incident reports Saturday morning:

There were three arrests: A 24-year-old man was arrested for domestic assault on Avenue K; a 33-year-old man was arrested for DWI on E. 1st Street; and a 34-year-old man was arrested for public intoxication on E. First Street.

Two minor accidents were reported, and the fire department was dispatched to an accident at Lawton and First Street. Officers issued 16 traffic citations.

--An assault was reported in the 100 block of Ave. H where a man was pulled from his car and assaulted.

--Theft was reported in the 500 block of Ave. H, where a motorist left without paying for gas.

--Theft was reported in the 700 block of La Plata. Money, watches and other items were taken from a locker room. Suspects are known and the case is pending.

CLINTON

The aim is to spare Russia the huge expense of manufacturing missiles and warheads permitted under START II by assuring Moscow they would be banned in both countries.

Shifting the summit to Helsinki, about 90 minutes jet flight time from Moscow, will make it easier on Yeltsin, who underwent bypass surgery last year and was beset by double pneumonia last month. But it will not cure his political problems.

The planned expansion of NATO to Russia's border is a red flag to ardent nationalists in the Russian parliament. Months of American assurances have not mollified them, nor Yeltsin. They do not relish having former allies joining the Western military alliance as Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic probably will be invited to at a 16-nation NATO summit in Madrid, Spain, in July.

Chemomyrdin said he underscored the point that NATO's expansion

"will make the situation in Europe more complicated but we will have to continue the dialogue."

On a more optimistic note, he said, "I do not exclude the possibility of concluding a document on the basics of relationship between Russia and NATO."

Gore said he was encouraged by the talks on NATO's enlargement. "On a few matters we have agreed to disagree," he said. "But even there, we have narrowed the range of disagreement and the discussions are continuing."

The Clinton administration has vowed not to delay NATO's expansion. It is offering Russia assurances that no nuclear weapons will be deployed in new NATO-member countries and is offering to ease some of the restraints imposed in treaties on the location of Russian tanks and other weapons.

COLLEGE

then she will manage to bring along actual instructors, the ones who these students will probably see behind the lecture podium.

Shuman says that she can make her visitation with the students as long or as short as they want.

"It can be 10 minutes long," Shuman says. "Or I can talk to them for two hours."

WT also has a special day in the Spring that is especially for held for juniors and seniors.

"This year it's on March 22," Shuman said. "The students get a chance to visit the campus, get a tour of the school and to mingle with students."

Shuman says that WT tries to offer a personal staff that is possible.

The second step for the student is to take either the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT).

These tests serve at least two functions. One is for admittance into the university and the second is for the student.

The test will determine if the student needs to take some developmental classes to help him or her in the areas that they still need further improvement in.

"We help them take practice tests," Pesina says. "We help them with their pacing, on how much time they should spend on each question and how not to stay on one question too long."

The practice test is included along with the registration packet when the students are registering for the test. It even gives an option that allows them to pick out the three schools where they would like to attend.

The students should then receive a registration letter informing them of where and when the student should show up to take the test.

Then they take the test.

Then comes the waiting.

"The wait for the results is about four to six weeks long to get," Pesina says. "The student gets a copy of the results, the high school gets a copy, and the colleges that they picked get a copy."

Then it's up to the student to decide whether or not to re-take the test again until they score high enough to get into the school of their choice or just pick the schools that they did score high enough for.

"It's their decision as to what they do next," Pesina says.

If the students decide which school they wish to attend then the next step is for them to visit the campus.

"They have one day in which they are excused from Hereford High School," Pesina says, "and they can make a trip to the campus."

"We try to answer almost any question that the student has, from which classes to take," Shuman says "to where is the best place for them to get their car fixed."

Official alleges bribes to Texas lawmakers

HOUSTON (AP) - A former GTECH Corp. official bragged of paying up to $10,000 each to eight or 10 Texas lawmakers for "favorable consideration" of the bill that set up the Texas lottery, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

A Kentucky investigator told the newspaper that J. David Smith, former national sales manager for GTECH Corp., bragged about the payments while talking with a former Kentucky lottery official.

The boast surfaced in statements given to Kentucky and FBI investigators during a 1994 probe into that state's lottery. GTECH ran the Kentucky lottery at the time and has run Texas' weekly drawing lottery games since 1992.

The alleged conversation between Smith and Russell F. Davidson, former vice president of finance for the Kentucky lottery, occurred about six months after the failure of a major push to pass a Texas lottery bill during a 1990 special legislative session.

Davidson then related the conversation to Edward Mercer, the Kentucky attorney general's investigator.

"Smith named eight or 10 Texas legislators whom Davidson did not know and does not remember their names," Mercer told the Chronicle.

According to Mercer, Davidson said Smith told him Texas was going to start a lottery.

"He (Smith) stated that he had paid these legislators between $2,000 and $10,000 each to get the lottery bill favorably considered," Mercer quoted Davidson as saying.

Kentucky state investigators were looking into their state lottery at the time for possible sweetheart deals involving GTECH.

When contacted by the Chronicle, Davidson declined to elaborate on his statement, saying it was "water under the bridge."

Smith did not respond to a call from the Chronicle.

The two could not be immediately located by The Associated Press on Friday.

Smith, who recently was convicted on federal charges of participating in a kickback scheme that defrauded GTECH, is awaiting sentencing.

The Texas Legislature and state voters created the state lottery in 1991.

According to investigative reports, Davidson said his conversation with Smith took place in a hotel bar in 1990 during a GTECH users conference in Scottsdale, Ariz.

HOSTS

can move to the next unit, Rule said. The HOSTS program is designed to increase the student's self-image, she said.

"It builds self-confidence and self-esteem," Rule said.

Two third-graders have gained a semester of reading in the HOSTS programs, she said.

"I have seen so much progress in these students," Rule said.

The benefits of the HOSTS program are equally important for the mentors and the students, she said.

Raquel Tate, a housewife, spends her Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings as a mentor. She mentors six students in the Spanish HOSTS program.

"I'm enjoying it so much," Tate said. "It's fun to read stories," third-grader

Jose Otero said.

SCIATIC PAIN
If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and the other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures, the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

We accept assignments on Medicare & Medicaid & most insurance carriers.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Too many times we hear negative comments and attitudes expressed about the lack of enthusiasm and spirit within our community.

In the past few years, our community has suffered the death of some very young children due to negligence and carelessness. Some of these deaths have resulted from a child playing with a cigarette lighter, children playing with a loaded handgun, leaving a cleaning pail of water unattended, and even the swallowing of a small deflated balloon.

I don't mean to condemn anyone, and my heart goes out to these parents in their loss. There is always a public outcry and concern when a tragedy like these take place, and we ask ourselves why such things happened.

The youth of this community took it upon themselves to address these tragic and senseless deaths. The Hereford High School Key Club, along with the Keywanettes and Anchor clubs initiated an intense program on home and child safety to inform the public of possible dangers that may lurk within our households.

These groups acquired the assistance of Hereford Regional Medical Center and the Hereford Police Department. In preparing for such a program, much planning and work was needed. With the assistance of The Hereford Brand and KPN Radio, this upcoming event was publicized and broadcast.

Fliers identifying the program were placed throughout the city at numerous locations and even distributed door to door in many neighborhoods. Baby-sitting was provided along with Spanish interpreters, and enough refreshments for 400 participants were made by these volunteers.

Three training rooms were reserved at the Community Center and participants could go from class to class. Some of the classes to be taught were chemical and medical safety, prevention of burns, immunizations, electrical safety, Child Infant Death Syndrome information, Heimlich for babies, 911 procedures, child safety seats and home security for children.

I am aware that many households practice home safety and are aware of the many dangers to watch for, but myself and many others believe there are those that fail to evaluate or even care what could happen within their homes.

On the day of the program, approximately 30 youth and adult volunteers showed up and gave up their day to help make this community a safer place to live.

With all the hard work, planning and preparation, it seemed everything was set - but one thing was missing, not one person showed up to participate in this informative event. I know there were a lot of sad and disappointed hearts when no one showed last Saturday. I guess people decided they didn't need this training and that nothing like the tragedies mentioned will ever happen in their lives.

I would like to take this opportunity to commend those volunteers for their efforts in making this a better place in which to live. I hope the next time you hear a negative comment about how bad it is to live here, you correct them in a positive manner by telling them we have some of the best people on earth living right here in Hereford, Texas.

Bush explains property tax cut plan

BY GOV. GEORGE W. BUSH

A Dallas policeman told me he worried he can no longer afford his home, because his property taxes have increased much faster than his salary has.

A state senator from El Paso told me working Texans are moving across the border to New Mexico, driven out of Texas by high property taxes.

A chamber of commerce president told me Arlington lost a major semiconductor plant and hundreds of jobs because Texas property taxes would cost the company $40 million more than taxes in Maine.

I hear the concern everywhere I go. High property taxes are threatening the Texas dream. That is why I have outlined a plan to substantially cut school property taxes.

School property taxes have doubled during the last 10 years, yet overall property values declined. As school districts struggled to keep pace with growing enrollment, many raised tax rates dramatically. Now, as the economy improves, property is being reappraised. High appraisals on top of already high tax rates spell disaster for Texans who are trying to make ends meet.

Too many senior citizens are strapped by property taxes that are higher than their original mortgage payments. Too many young Texans cannot afford to buy homes because property taxes price them out of the market. Too many working families cannot save for their retirement or their children's college education because property taxes devour their income. Rents keep rising as landlords pass on their property tax increases.

The problem will only get worse unless we act now. That is why I have proposed the Property Tax Cut Act of 1997 that will not only provide significant property tax relief for Texans - nearly $3 billion a year - but also will fundamentally change the way we pay for our schools.

My plan raises the homestead exemption by $20,000 and cuts school property tax rates by 20 cents in every school district. The net result is a 40-percent school tax cut for the owner of the average home valued at $61,500. For a $100,000 home, school taxes will drop 30 percent.

To help pay for my plan, I propose returning to taxpayers $1 billion in savings from leaner, more efficient state government. I have submitted a balanced budget that shows we can meet basic state needs, fully fund our schools and give taxpayers $1 billion over two years in property tax relief.

Part of the plan will be funded by a 1/2-cent increase in the state sales and motor vehicle sales tax. This is fair. The savings homeowners will realize in school property tax cuts far exceed the amount they will pay in higher sales tax.

The average Texas family makes $35,000 a year and owns a home valued at $61,500. That family will pay $333 a year less in property taxes under my plan, and $71 more in sales taxes, for an overall savings of $252.

One of my concerns about the current property tax system is that it is blind to an individual's ability to pay. Under my tax cut plan, more than 411,000 low-income Texans will see their school property tax bills drop to under $35 a year. Basic necessities, including food, medicine and utilities, will remain exempt from sales taxes.

My plan also proposes changing the way we tax business. Under our current system, some businesses don't pay a dime to support our schools and others are taxed so heavily that it threatens to drive them from our state. My plan will abolish the corporate franchise tax and school property tax on business inventory and replace them with a simple 1 1/4-percent levy on all forms of business that bring in more than $500,000, after certain expenses and all capital investments are subtracted. Only revenues generated in Texas will be subject to this tax.

The $500,000 exemption recognizes that small business is the backbone of our Texas economy. Tax policy should encourage small businesses to grow. By allowing a deduction for capital investment, we invite businesses to invest and create jobs in Texas.

Tax policy must be fair. I realize some businesses that don't have to pay any school taxes now are going to yell - loud. But everyone gets benefits from this plan - lower property taxes and a fair way to meet the growing needs of our schools - and everyone ought to pay something. I am urging businesses to look beyond their balance sheets and support this plan for the future of Texas.

Like you, I want school taxes to stay low once they have been rolled back. My plan includes safeguards to prevent local districts from arbitrarily hiking their rates. School districts may not raise taxes through rate increases or reappraisals without compelling justification.

Finally, all the money raised in this plan will be placed in a school trust fund and spent only on our schools. I have also asked the Legislature to dedicate all lottery proceeds to the school trust.

My plan makes the state of Texas the primary funder of our public schools, as it should be. Texas has for too long shirked its responsibility by relying too heavily on local property taxes to pay for our schools. Our current system has sparked years of court battles over school funding - battles that are not over unless we act. Our current system is too tied to a revenue base that cannot keep pace with the tremendous enrollment growth in Texas. My plan reduces reliance on property taxes and takes us a giant step closer to ending "Robin Hood."

This is a plan that is capable of growing to meet our schools' growing needs. It will carry us, year after year, into the next century. We must act boldly now or face a crisis later.

Change is never easy. But I believe the people of Texas elected me to take on the tough challenges. I hope you will join me. Contact your state legislators. Make your voices heard for lower taxes and a fairer way to fund schools.

An AP news analysis

Balanced budget deal still subject to economic facts

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - It is a balancing act tried and topped before, but President Clinton makes it sound easy - Congress votes for a deficit-free budget, he signs, and the deal is done.

The deal, but not the deed. That will be five uncertain years away even after Clinton and the Republicans come to terms on a 2002 balanced budget plan, as they almost surely will.

After all, it was a GOP goal first, embraced by the Democratic president in transit to the political center. Now he champions the goal with the zeal of the converted; he said shortly after his re-election that a balanced budget should be easily achievable.

Three decades of unmet pledges and projections say otherwise.

This may well be different; there is a shared commitment in a divided government to get the budget balanced. Still, the administration and congressional budget architects will have to bargain out the details.

There are marked differences on spending priorities, how much and how to cut taxes, and on the economic projections that underlie any long-term budget.

Administration assumptions on economic growth are more optimistic than those on which GOP budget outlooks are based, easing the path to the $17 billion surplus Clinton projects in 2002.

It is all on paper, a promise to be delivered after Clinton has left office. It is all subject to the course of the economy, and subject also to political decisions that will be shaped by two congressional and one presidential election before the due date.

"Let this Congress be the Congress that finally balances the budget," the president said to State of the Union cheers last Tuesday. But what this Congress does won't be final.

It can enact a plan for 2002 balance. But it will be up to the next Congress, and the one after that, to make sure that it finally happens for the first time in nearly 30 years.

Clinton's new budget includes a system meant to assure that the budget is balanced in 2002 even if economic projections are off and there is a gap that the next president and Congress can't settle. It involves automatic steps to increase tax revenues and limit spending.

That harks to a system of automatic cuts set up in 1985 to force a course to balanced budgets, unsuccessfully because Congress moved the targets and spent the money anyhow.

While Clinton made deficit reduction a first priority of his presidency, his commitment to balanced budgets came later, only after the Republicans captured Congress. Even then, he began two years ago with a budget that projected continuing deficits, amending it later to aim at balance in 10 years, then in 7, now in 5.

Presidents since Richard M. Nixon have been promising to control deficits. And two, Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan, came to office after promising to balance the budget within a term. Neither came close, and deficits soared during the Reagan years.

The last balanced budget was in 1969, when the books were closed six months into the Nixon presidency with a surplus produced in part by the proceeds of an income surtax bequeathed by Lyndon Johnson.

Administration budgets since 1974 have included five-year estimates of future spending and revenues, and successive presidents projected balance, usually in the last year of their forecasts. George Bush's 1992 budget was the first to project continuing deficits instead of a fifth-year surplus.

An improving economy buoyed Clinton's deficit control efforts. Deficits have declined in each of his four years, from a record $290 billion at the start, to $107 billion in the year ended last Sept. 30.

That is expected to go up this year, to $126 billion, then dip toward the promised balance. He said it wouldn't be a blip but the beginning of an era of budget surpluses.

Republican critics questioned his numbers and his plan, complaining that it relies too heavily on spending reductions after the year 2000, which will be his last in office. He proposes $388 billion in spending cuts over the five years; nearly two thirds of those savings in 2001 and 2002, when a successor will be in the White House.

Even with an agreement that would go step by step to a balanced budget, there can be no guarantee of the outcome. Relatively minor changes in the economy could have a major impact, either way.

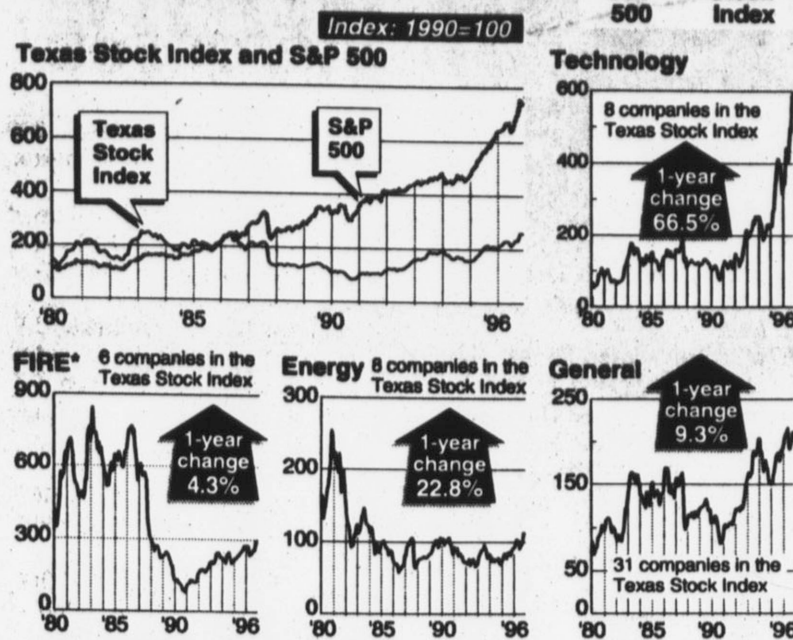

Economic forecasting is an imprecise art. A minuscule decrease of 0.1 percent a year in the economic growth rate would add $12 billion to the deficit in 2002. A one-point a year increase in inflation would deepen the deficit by $25 billion in that target year. Higher interest rates on the national debt would worsen the picture; an extra percentage point could cost $6 billion this year, $18 billion next.

TEA to examine ebonics in schools

By CHIP BROWN Associated Press Writer AUSTIN (AP) - A student walks into a classroom and says to the teacher, "Sup dog?" or describes an excited feeling as, "It's crunk."

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, says many Texas teachers would mistake the student's expressions as disrespectful and might even send the child to the principal's office.

He has filed a resolution in the House that would have the Texas Education Agency study the presence in Texas schools of black English, a dialect also known as ebonics. In districts where ebonics is widespread, the TEA would provide assistance in developing a plan for teachers to better communicate with the students. Wilson said his resolution could be funded with existing resources.

"A teacher might assume, if they are not familiar with ebonics, that the kid is stupid and may direct that child over to another program that isn't appropriate for them," Wilson said.

"When in actuality, they've got a bright kid that doesn't speak standard English. We think the teachers ought to be sensitized so they can help those kids, rather than send them off as a disciplinary problem because they are calling the teacher 'dog' every day."

Wilson's resolution has received mixed reviews in the Legislature, even from black lawmakers.

"I will not vote for anything when we are talking about ebonics," said Rep. Sylvester Turner, a black Democrat from Houston. "I am not someone who will advocate that there are a set group of people who speak a certain way and we must place a label on that deficiency and give it some meaning, as if there is some genetic linkage.

"I will not accept that. I will simply place that responsibility where it should fall, and that's on the schools to properly teach them. If our schools will teach them, they will learn," Turner said.

Karen Hughes, spokeswoman for Gov. George W. Bush, said the governor hadn't seen Wilson's resolution but favors "identifying all children who may be at risk in learning to read so that they can become proficient in English."

Ebonics became a national debate after the Oakland (Calif.) Unified School District in December adopted a since-amended resolution recognizing ebonics - known among linguists as African American Vernacular English - as a unique language.

The resolution put ebonics on a level with foreign languages. Black psychologist Robert L. Williams coined the shorter term 24 years ago by meshing the words "ebony" and "phonics."

"If there are children who have a specific speaking pattern that they get from their home, and we know of a particular tool that we can utilize to improve it, then by all means, let's go ahead and utilize it," said Sen. Royce West, a black Democrat from Dallas.

The chairmen of the education committees in the Texas House and Senate have indicated that ebonics might be an issue better decided at the local level.

"I don't think it's an appropriate piece of legislation for the state to be dictating to school districts, and that doesn't even get to the merits of the issue," said Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

"I think it's appropriate for a local school district and local school board to look at the needs of their districts and meet those needs in any they can," added Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, chairman of the House Public Education Committee. In learning how to teach using ebonics, educators are taught not to "correct" but to "translate."

'Snowbird Santa' sells wood carvings

By LENORA WERLEY The Yuma Daily Sun

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) - Christmas is over. But winter visitor Doug Ladd can't rest. Almost before the last gift was delivered, he had a block of wood and was meticulously carving a Norman Rockwell picture.

He had already finished a train and had a number of Indian-style artifacts sitting ready for the next sale. His picture carvings are friezes. One is a copy of the Last Supper, and another is a horse-drawn stagecoach. Even the tiny hooves are done in perfect detail. These may run as much as $300 to $400, and a little pig on a barrel depicting the pork barrel of politics may run $15. A tiny animal can cost just a few cents. Selling carvings and receiving donations is how Ladd becomes Snowbird Santa each year.

He proudly showed a coux stick that Indians use with their regalia complete with a coyote skull that runs $300. He said the bones he uses in the Indian artifacts come from road kill. These things are coveted by Indians who need them for their regalia. Ladd said they are judged in such garb.

Just before Ladd started out on his Santa run last year, he had seven pickups of toys warehoused in people's homes in San Luis. A bedroom in a home would be filled clear to the ceiling.

Ladd remembers his trip to the village of Cinco de Maya. "I spread everything out and then people came from miles around." He said he publicized his visit in churches and schools.

"Then I fill the back seat and trunk of the car and set out for the back roads," he said. "When you stop, you have 50 kids around in a few minutes."

His smile broadens when he describes the reaction of the children. "It is all written in a smile," he said. "Their eyes are all glittering and they have a beautiful big toothy smile."

Ladd said it was a fluke that he got started being a Snowbird Santa.

Ten years ago, he and his wife, Jo, and another couple had been hopping in San Luis and decided to drive back through Nogales. They had bought 2 kilos of candy in San Luis and started giving it out the windows to the children. Then they met a very nice family but had nothing to give them. They ended up giving them the groceries they had bought to take back home with them. They began going back every week.

They put a roof on the house. Then they built a house with brick and wood.

"There were seven people living in one room, and a girl was getting older but had to share one bedroom with all her brothers. They needed the space," Ladd said.

Laughingly, he said everyone knows him in Algodones.

"I will go to Algodones, and they call me Santa Claus and Mr. Whiskers."

There are people who believe when you die you just go to the grave, not Heaven or Hell. If you believe this, you believe: 1. When Paul died, he did not "gain" anything because he stayed down in the ground (the grave) (Phil. 1:21). 4. When you die you cannot "live" with Christ in Glory (1 Thess. 5:10). 5. ## Whitefaces shoot down Dumas in finale

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

You'll have to excuse the Hereford Whiteface fans if they start throwing pre-paid phone cards onto the court at every occasion. After all, they did see enough long-distance numbers Friday night to make even GTE happy for a few months.

And then when the fireworks in the Whiteface Gym subsided, head coach Randy Dean took to the airwaves to discover that their first-round playoff foe had been determined.

Hereford, keyed by five 3-point shots, closed out its regular season on a high note, downing the Dumas

Demons, 60-52, in front of a large disco-dancing crowd. The Whitefaces, who nailed down the District 1-4A third-place seed Tuesday, finished the regular season with a 16-15 record, and closed out the loop portion of their schedule with an impressive 8-4 mark.

"We played hard," said Dean. "We were a little sloppy at times. We would have liked to be a little more consistent, but overall I think we played pretty well."

Everything went Hereford's way in the first quarter as the Herd hit on all cylinders. The Whitefaces, after Dumas had grabbed the tip-off and pushed home the first basket of the night, buried their first five shots from the left wing by Cory Schumacher that all but pulled the plug on the Demons. Schumacher's trey, which came with 6:17 left, staked Hereford to a 7-6 lead. It also marked the last time Dumas would lead in the affair.

Isaac Walker and Bryant McNutt followed Schumacher's 3-pointer with a pair of inside shots from inside the arc, before the Demons managed to bang home a 3-pointer that knotted the game at 11-11.

The Demons, thanks to an combining for five points, carrying the Hereford lead to 11, at 36-25.

McNutt and Kubacak, along with another 3-point shot from Schumacher, keyed the Whitefaces throughout the third. McNutt threw in six of his game-high 13 points in the quarter while Kubacak knocked down four.

Hereford outscored Dumas by a 15-12 clip in the period, and took a 46-35 lead into the final frame.

Kubacak finished the night as the only other Whiteface player to reach double-digits, netting 10. Schumacher finished with nine.

Hereford continued to roll in the fourth. The Herd picked up back-to-back-to-back baskets from Jonathan Keenan and Walker to open the stanza and sprinted to its largest lead of the evening - a 17-point margin at 52-35.

The Demons, who had three players finish in double figures, managed to pull back to within eight at the final buzzer with a 17-8 run in the last seven minutes.

The Whitefaces' win wasn't nearly as important to Hereford fans as what was unfolding in Wolforth. Plainview defeated Frenship, 61-38, and clinched a first-place tie with Lubbock Estacado in the District 2-4A race. The Bulldogs, 17-13 overall, garnered the No. 2 seed in the district standings and earned the right to face the Herd in the first round of the state playoffs next week.

"We've got a week to prepare for our opponent," said Dean. "We have a week to get to the point where we can execute consistently."

Details of the Whitefaces' playoff game were unavailable at press time.

Walker finished a layup shot

The Herd's Isaac Walker scored two on a layup shot in Friday night's 60-52 win over Dumas. The game ended Hereford's regular season play, and the Whitefaces will meet the Plainview Bulldogs in the playoffs next weekend. The site and date is yet to be determined.

Hereford fourth after first round in Big Spring

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

BIG SPRING - The Hereford Lady Whitefaces could have doubled for postal workers Friday afternoon. Neither rain, fog or high could deter the Hereford linksters from a spot among the leaders in the Big Spring Invitational Golf Tournament.

The Lady Whitefaces, despite temperatures in the upper 30's and a breeze that pushed the chill factor even lower, shot a round of 384 and stood in fourth place in the overall team standings after the first 18 holes. Fort Stockton, with a mark of 354, held the top spot heading into Saturday's final round at the Comanche Trails Municipal Course.

"We probably didn't play our best yesterday," said HHS coach Stacy Bixler. "It was a tough day to play in. It was foggy and the temperature might have gotten up to 40, and then it started raining on us. But we kept playing."

"We're in fourth, but we've got a chance to move up," he added.

In all, 18 teams are vying for the top honors in the event, which is being played on both the Comanche Trails and Big Spring Country Club courses.

Amy Killingsworth lead the Hereford golfers on the course. She fired an 88 in the first round - a score low enough to place her fourth in individual totals. Lubbock Coronado's Suzanne Sowers led at the conclusion of the event with an 80.

The Lady Whitefaces, who last week won the overall team title in the San Angelo Invitational, also picked up some solid play from Jacquie Bezner, Stephanie Bixler and Lindsay Ward. Bezner scored a 94 on the first

The Whiteface boys staged a strong showing in their first outing of the year. Hereford stood in seventh place after the first round, having covered the first 18 holes in a mark of 325.

"They're still in the hunt," said Bixler. "If they can play well Saturday, they've got a chance to move up."

Lubbock Coronado leads the team standings heading into the second round with a score of 299. Plainview and Pampa finished second and third, respectively, with marks of 315 and 323.

Andrews, Big Spring and San Angelo Lakeview are all tied for fourth with identical scores of 324. District 1-4A stablemate Berger is eighth after the initial round, one stroke behind Hereford.

Keith Riley led the Whitefaces' effort, firing a five-over-par 77 in the first round. He was tied for sixth in the individual medalist standings heading into the second day of competition.

Heath Henderson wasn't far behind. The HHS golfer posted a score of 81 over the first 18 holes. Teammates Greg Reinart, Jeremiah Baros and Daniel Edwards turned in rounds of 82, 85 and 89, respectively.

Rangers' all-time leading reliever decides to retire

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The career saves leader for the Texas Rangers is calling it quits.

Jeff Russell said 12 years in the big leagues is enough for him.

Russell, 35, rejected overtures from Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. He said he would have returned to pitch for the Rangers, but they gave his bullpen duties to recently acquired free-agent Xavier Hernandez and to rookie Danny Patterson.

In two stints with the Rangers covering ten seasons, Russell had 134 saves and 445 appearances.

"I'm more than proud of what I've accomplished. I feel in my heart that I could still pitch one more year, but it's time to back it down."

Norris hoping battle with De La Hoya in his future

By DOUG HENSLEY
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
LUBBOCK, Texas - Big paydays remain in the future for Terry Norris, but years and years in the world of professional boxing have taught the Lubbock native there are still some things more important than money. "I've got two little boys, and they're the most important things in the world to me," Norris said during a telephone interview from his home in the San Diego area. "I'd do anything for them. I fight for my boys to make their lives easier so they won't have to go through the things I went through. "Every time I fight, that's one more payday my boys can live off of." Norris, arguably the best boxer pound-for-pound in the world today, last fought Jan. 11, when he rolled to a 10th-round technical knockout of Nick Rupa in Nashville, Tenn. "Terry looked absolutely great against Rupa," said Norris' manager, Joe Sayatovich. "That kid (Rupa) came to fight. He didn't want to lose, and when you have that, it makes for a great fight." A greater one looms on the horizon. Felix Trinidad won on the same card, and he appears to be the next obstacle for Norris, who holds the IBF and WBC super-welterweight titles. The two are scheduled to meet in late June at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas, Nev. "He boxes well," Norris said of Trinidad. "The main thing for me is I know how to finish guys. He's a slow starter, and I need to jump on him and get him out of there early. I'm looking forward to seeing what he's got." The fight promises lucrative paydays for both fighters, which is all right with the 29-year-old Norris, who said he received a new Mercedes on top of his purse after defeating Rupa. "I asked the promoters if they'd buy me a car if I knocked him out," Norris said. "So they went out and bought it." Finding other high-profile opponents will be tougher for Norris, who has been a dominant force in the middle weight classes for years. "Sometimes, it bothers me," he said. "But I just keep going on and keep fighting. I still feel young. I may be almost 30, but I still feel like I'm 18 or 19. I've been fighting for a while, and hopefully, there will be some other big names come about. "Trinidad is a huge name, and it's a chance to make a lot of money." "Terry's only real problem has been one that (Ray) Leonard, (Thomas) Hearn, (Marvin) Hagler and (Roberto) Duran didn't have," Sayatovich said. "He doesn't have anyone to fight. Those guys all fought each other. Right now, there are no names in the middleweight division."

Sayatovich said other marquee opponents at this time are Oscar De La Hoya and Roy Jones. Norris is hopeful a bout with De La Hoya will follow the Trinidad fight, possibly before the end of the year. "I've got two mandatory defenses after Trinidad," Norris said. "And I'd like to knock those off right away in the next four months. Then I'd come back and fight De La Hoya. If we can set it up before the end of the year, that would be great." In the meantime, Norris (45-6, 29 KOs) is content to ride the wave of success and the perks that come with it. "It's a great feeling knowing that people are coming to watch me fight," he said. "It makes me feel good. I've been fighting a long time, and I've been fortunate that the Lord blessed me and has guided me through the tough times." He said he takes his duty as a role model to youngsters seriously. "I think kids look up to me, and I want to be a role model," he said. "I don't do drugs and I don't drink. I'm pretty laid back. The only time I fight is inside the ring. I think they can look up to me, and I hope there are some kids out there who want to be like me." And, after all those years in the ring, Norris said he's still learning. "I've learned tons," said Norris, who added he was thinking about moving back to Texas, possibly the Lubbock area. "When I first started fighting, I threw a lot of punches because I was scared and nervous. "Now I have a lot more patience. I love to get in the ring and work those combinations. I've learned to be calm and let the fight come to me." Sayatovich agreed, saying Norris has come a long way. "I think what he's done is take the skill level he has, along with the punching power, and taken it another step by adding more discipline to it," he said. "He has superb boxing skills. That was evident against Rupa the other night. It was an example of good, smart boxing." If Norris has a problem, he said it's the fact that he's not totally satisfied with his manager. He didn't say he was pondering a change, but he does hope to see his relationship with Sayatovich improve. "Everything is OK, but not like it should be," he said. "Somewhere down the line, we'll get it where it should be. But I'm not totally happy right now. "I'm kind of at that point where I basically went through a lot. I feel like I'm one of the best fighters in the world, and the fights will come to me. If it keeps going the way it's been going, I might think about sitting back and doing it myself." For his part, Sayatovich said things are running smoothly between the two. Norris, meanwhile, will continue to fight and continue to make his case as the best around. "I won't duck anyone, and I haven't ducked anyone," he said. "I'll fight big names, little names, whoever they are. I feel like I should be the No. 1 fighter pound for pound in the world, and after I knock Trinidad off, I will be."

Hereford JH dump Canyon, remain unbeaten

By TOMMY WELLS

PAMPA - The Hereford Junior High School Whitefaces eighth grade A team kept its season record unblemished Thursday night with a dynamic performance against Canyon in the first round of the junior high district tournament. Hereford picked up 18 points from Cody Hodges and 13 more from Slade Hodges en route to taking a top-sided 75-22 win. With the win, the Whitefaces improved their season record to a perfect 13-0 and advanced to face Valley View on Saturday. "We didn't start off very well," said HJHS coach James Salinas. "But once the boys got into the flow of the game, they started playing pretty well." It didn't take Hereford long to shake its slow start. The Whitefaces pounded out a 21-4 advantage in the first period and never looked back. Hereford pushed its lead to 27 points in the second quarter. Powered by baskets from both Cody and Slade Hodges, the Whitefaces hammered out a 16-6 spree and took a 37-10 lead into the half. Hereford posted a 35-12 effort in the second half to seal the win. Hereford 8B 52, Pampa 41. The HJHS eighth grade B team also came away with a win in the district tournament, downing Pampa by a 52-41 margin. William Shows and Ramiro Zambrano paced the Whitefaces' offensive attack, scoring nine points apiece.

Gonzalez could miss 12 weeks with surgery

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - American League MVP Juan Gonzalez will be on the sidelines when the Texas Rangers begin defense of their AL West title in April. Gonzalez was scheduled to undergo surgery Saturday to repair a torn ligament in his left thumb. He was injured last month while playing winter league baseball in Puerto Rico. The Rangers said the injury and recovery from the surgery could sideline their star right fielder until mid-May. "When you play hard, sometimes you're going to get hurt," Gonzalez said. "I've just got to concentrate on getting back on the field." The team's confirmation Friday that surgery was needed means the Rangers' star outfielder would miss all of spring training and the April 1 start of the regular season. "Whenever you lose the Most Valuable Player in the American League, it's a big loss," Rangers spokesman John Blake said. "We're just going to have to fill the void and get him back as quick as we can." It's not the first time Gonzalez has been idled for a long stretch by injury.

CCS Warriors roll over Clovis Christian, 54-46

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor
JANTZEN - Louder and Chris Hendershot did their best impression of Scottie Pippen and Michael Jordan last week. And it paid big dividends for the Community Christian Warriors as they rolled to a 54-46 win over Clovis Christian Academy. Louder led all scorers in the contest with 23 points. Hendershot wasn't far behind, contributing 20. The Warriors' celebrations didn't last long, however. The CCS cagers, despite a 14 point effort by Louder, dropped a 49-29 decision to Plainview Christian Academy the following night. Amanda Bustamante threw in a game-high eight points and Melissa Reyna and Miriam Wilks each turned in strong defensive efforts last week and helped carry the Community Christian Lady Warriors to a 27-23 win over Clovis Christian. The Lady Warriors weren't as successful in their ensuing two outings. Community Christian, despite an eight point effort from Reyna, suffered a 49-29 setback on to Plainview Christian, and then fell to Amarillo Trinity Fellowship, 59-35. Bustamante led all CCS scorers against Trinity Fellowship, pitching in 15. Miriam Wilks added eight. The CCS boys will close out their 1996-97 season on Monday, Feb. 24 when they play host to Amarillo Victory Academy. Tip-off time is slated for 6 p.m. in the Stanton gym.

Battle under the boards

Hereford's Trip Robison gets a rebound and goes up for a basket in the Whiteface's final District 1-4A contest here Friday night. Hereford beat Dumas, 60-52, and will advance into the playoffs against the Plainview Bulldogs at a site and place to be determined.

Nelson hired as new GM for lowly Dallas Mavericks

DALLAS (AP) - Disciplinarian Don Nelson took over as the general manager of the lowly Dallas Mavericks Friday and quickly fired his first player, overweight and unhappy center Oliver Miller.

Nelson, the sixth-winningest coach in NBA history who has feuded publicly with such players as Chris Webber and Patrick Ewing, waived Miller as his first official act.

"I read where Miller said he doesn't care anymore and I don't want people like that around," Nelson said. "I don't want anybody on my basketball team who doesn't care."

Miller, a 6-foot-9 free agent center who last played for the Toronto Raptors, was signed to a one-year contract on Oct. 17. In 42 games, he averaged 4.3 points and 5.5 rebounds. The Mavs will pay the rest of his $225,000 salary.

Nelson, who was living in Hawaii after being sacked by the New York Knicks last March, said he surprised himself by taking a general manager's job.

"I thought I would be coming back to the NBA as a coach," Nelson said. "Not many of these (general manager) jobs open up. I'm as surprised as anyone here."

Nelson, who brings 35 years of NBA experience as a player, coach and general manager, said he didn't come to Dallas to eventually replace coach Jim Clemons.

"I have no plans in my future to coach, there's plenty to do right here," Nelson said. "I'm excited with the job. The Mavericks need someone to turn the franchise around. I'm putting coaching out of my mind to concentrate on being the general manager solely and helping Jimmy all I can. But I'm in charge of all basketball operations. The buck will stop with me."

Nelson got a lot of bucks to reconstruct the Mavs. He reportedly received a five-year contract for some $7.5 million.

"I don't think they want me to talk about my contract," grinned the tanned Nelson. "I thought I was going to have the rest of the year off."

Nelson credited owners Ross Perot Jr. and Frank Zaccanelli with convincing him to come to a team that has a 16-28 record.

"I never dreamed a month ago I'd be here or be back in the league," he said. "This is quite a challenge but I'm up to it. There's nothing more rewarding than to take a team that's down and build it into a contender."

"I have done it twice before and I can do it again. That's the thing I live for. There's a lot of hope here. Everywhere I've gone is a worse situation than the one I see here."

Nelson, who was the general manager for Golden State from 1988-1995, has 19 years experience as an NBA head coach. He served as vice president of the Milwaukee Bucks from 1976-87.

Nelson replaced Keith Grant, who resigned Oct. 17. The Mavs also signed Miller to a contract that day. Now both are gone.

First-year coach Clemons said he was looking forward to working with Nelson.

"I'm in favor of anything that helps us win ballgames," he said. "An addition of someone with Nellie's knowledge and experience will only help our basketball team."

As a general manager, Nelson played a role in selecting eventual All-Stars Marques Johnson, Sidney Moncrief, Mitch Richmond, Tim Hardaway, Tyrone Hill, Chris Gatling, Latrell Sprewell and Webber.

However, being both a coach and general manager soured his relationship with Webber, who eventually ended up in Washington.

Penelope avoids another embarrassing loss; Goodrich sets new state mark

PENELOPE, Texas (AP) - You could see the healing begin for the Penelope Wolverines. The horror had just begun for the Chester Yellowjackets.

Still smarting from their state record-tying 150-18 loss to Avalon last month, Penelope allowed the Eagles the first 25 points in their rematch Friday night before losing 73-22.

But just 150 miles southeast of Penelope, Chester High School was obliterated 144-6 Friday night by Goodrich in Goodrich's tiny gym in the East Texas Piney Woods. The loss set the new state high school standard for futility in a game.

After suffering the 150-18 defeat on Jan. 15, tying a 34-year-old record for most lopsided loss with a 132-point deficit, Penelope coach Ronald Jones thought things could only get better. And they did - a little.

After the Wolverines allowed the Eagles to score the game's first 25 points, Avalon coach Bobby Carpenter called off his full-court press and substituted freely the rest of the way.

"I was proud of our kids. They played hard," Jones said. "We don't have much talent, but that doesn't mean you can't let everybody play and let everybody be an important part of the ballclub."

Jones saw the outcome for what it was - an improvement on a bad situation. His nine-player squad is a triple threat - it can't shoot, pass or rebound.

Last month's blowout ruffled feelings in Penelope, a town of about 220 residents 65 miles south of Dallas. Carpenter suited up only his top six players from Avalon, a community of 130 residents 25 miles to the south, and his team tied the state record with its 132-point margin of victory.

"We did a good job under the circumstances," Carpenter said. "That was a tough game for our kids to play. I played some kids that don't normally play together," Carpenter said.

"But by no means was my game plan different from the first time," said Carpenter, whose team improved to 8-0 in district play and 22-6 for the season.

Jones makes no secret that he was upset with Carpenter for running up the score last month.

"I thought he did a good job tonight. He called the press off, and I commend him on that. I think he did an excellent job. I wish he'd done that last time," Jones said.

Penelope was didn't make any shots in the first quarter. But it wasn't that many times. The Wolverines had only a handful of shots, but seldom came close. They blew several wide-open layups.

With 5:57 left in the second eight-minute quarter, the hometown fans in the tiny Penelope gym held their breaths. The Wolverines' Ted Gallia missed a shot all alone under the basket, but was fouled.

The first free throw clanged off the front of the rim. When Gallia's second shot swished cleanly through, Wolverine fans cheered. It was the moment they had been waiting for - Gallia's free throw had closed the margin to 25-1.

That was just the start of a 7-0 run that included a 3-pointer by Nicky Matula, and the half ended with Avalon up 27-7.

Penelope fans weren't really hoping for a miracle, and none was in the offing. Avalon outscored Penelope 31-9 in the third quarter and 12-6 in the fourth quarter.

"Aw, it's the fun of the game. It's more than just winning," said Penelope superintendent Billy Sparks, who was a combination coach, teacher and principal in the town of 210 people the first three years he was with the school from 1983 to 1986.

Coy Jones scored 23 points and his brother, C.C. Jones, added 16 for the Eagles. Richie Moore scored eight to lead Penelope.

But in Goodrich, a town of 250 residents about 65 miles northeast of Houston, Chester learned what the local pine trees experience when fed to a shredder.

The 138-point margin set a record for most lopsided game on record by a Texas high school, beating the 132-point record set in 1963 when Aspermont beat Mason 143-11. That margin was tied in last month's Penelope-Avalon game.

Goodrich led 44-2 after one quarter, 87-4 at the half and 107-4 heading into the fourth quarter. It outscored Chester 37-2 the rest of the way.

Chris Wyatt led Goodrich with 31 points. Demarcus Bogany added 18, Elton Miles 16, T.J. Bennett and Brandon Miles 15, Jeremy Bennett 14, Quincy Wyatt 13, Brandon Garrett 12 and Kodi Wyatt 10.

Royce Jackson led Chester with two points.

Goodrich (28-1) had earned a Class A district title Tuesday.

All-Star break a welcome thing for ailing Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) - The Utah Jazz have caught the Houston Rockets, and Hakeem Olajuwon hears the whispered rumors that age has run them down, too.

But the Rockets' star center doesn't want his teammates to start believing it.

"What we don't want to do is fall into that trap of saying, 'this team is old, and now we're falling apart,'" Olajuwon said. "That's the danger."

The Rockets led the Midwest Division for much of this season, but they limped and wheezed into the All-Star break with a six-game losing streak that dropped them 1( games behind the Jazz.

And they go into the long weekend with two of their three All-Stars - Charles Barkley and Clyde Drexler - sidelined with injuries.

"I think the best thing for us is the All-Star break so we can get our guys healthy," Barkley said. "It's just real frustrating because we've lost a lot of games in a row and I haven't been able to help my team. But I really think we'll be fine after the All-Star game."

Critics had predicted that the Rockets would pay - sooner or later this season - for relying on a lineup that included three starters over 30.

Seedlings on sale

Seedlings for windbreaks can be ordered at the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District office. The office is located at 315 W. Third Street.

Tree seedlings on order at TBSWCD

Seedlings for windbreaks can be ordered through the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District. They can be contacted at 364-6995 or drop by 315 W. Third Street. Office hours are 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

With rising energy costs, windbreaks make good economic sense. Windbreaks block the hot, dry winds of summer and the cold gusts of winter which increase the heating and cooling efficiency of a home's system. Also, they add natural beauty, privacy and value to a home and act as a sound barrier to street or highway traffic.

Need help planning a windbreak? Call the district office today, the staff there will be happy to custom design a windbreak for your home or farm. Don't put off that call, tree sales will end in just a few weeks.

Farmers hang on to large tax break

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers hung onto a big tax break as the Internal Revenue Service agreed Tuesday to delay enforcing a ruling that stops growers from using commodity contracts to defer income.

After a year of good crops and high prices in 1996, many farmers could have faced huge tax bills because of the IRS ruling, which was upheld last fall by an Iowa federal court.

The delay will give Congress time to rewrite the 1986 law on which the ruling was based.

"This is good news for farmers who want to comply with the tax law and properly report this income on their returns," said IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson. "They should complete their 1996 returns as they have been doing in the past, or as they have been directed to do after an IRS audit."

Some 57 senators have co-sponsored legislation introduced last week to preserve the tax break, and similar legislation has drawn wide support in the House.

Last fall, the IRS had refused requests from farm-state lawmakers to delay enforcing the ruling.

"The IRS certainly is reacting to congressional support for a change" in the law, said Patricia Wolff, a tax specialist for the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Farmers use commodity contracts to smooth swings in their tax bills by deferring income from one year to the next.

In Texas Conservation Awards Program

Essay contest winners announced

The Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District announced the 1997 winners of the essay contest of the Texas Conservation Awards Program.

Will McGowan turned in the first place essay. He is the son of Jim and Lucy McGowan.

Michelle Bernhardt took second place in the contest. She is the daughter of Conny and Beverly Martin.

Sabra Brownlow turned in the third place essay. She is the daughter of Johnny and Janice Brownlow.

The students are seventh-graders at Hereford Junior High. Their teacher is Dona Hendrickson.

The following is the first place essay:

By WILL MCGOWAN

Farmers have been trying to help people throughout America and other countries for years, now they are taking action and helping the soil and water that help them to make a better world. Some examples of how farmers are helping are drip irrigation, cover crops, and learning about pesticides and fertilizers before applying them to their crops.

Drip irrigation is an irrigation system that consists of hoses put underground and a hole in the area that the plant is planted. It is good for plants that are not too close together. If you used the regular pivot irrigation system you would use up too much water considering that you are watering the ground around the plant and the ground that is not near the plant. Also, with drip irrigation, it will penetrate deeper into the ground since it is a slower watering process. It can be used on hilly areas, unlike the pivot system because the pivot system has to travel over the hills.

Cover crops can also help farmers. A cover crop is a crop of close growing plants like grasses, legumes, or small grains. They help the soil get nutrients and also keep the soil from washing or blowing away due to their long spread roots. Farmers plant these crops when they need help keeping their fields from eroding too much.

Farmers don't just plant the seeds and turn on the motors. They have to learn stuff about the pesticides and fertilizers that they apply to their crops. In many states a farmer may have to apply for a pesticide license

Two Tech professors design natural animal waste management system

Near the small town of New Deal, north of Lubbock, lies an innovative waste management system that may revolutionize the way producers deal with animal waste.

With more than 200 feedlots in the High Plains producing more than 5.5 million head of cattle as well as other operations that can produce up to 100,000 head of swine at a single location, animal waste management is a major challenge facing the feedlot industry.

In fact, the challenge led two Texas Tech professors, Dr. Nick Parker and Dr. Clifford Fedler, to design and demonstrate a natural, non-mechanical, gravity-flow purification system that can treat animal waste and protect the quality of ground and surface water.

"Currently, there is enough cattle waste produced daily in the Texas High Plains to fill Jones Stadium two times a day," Parker said.

"We want to take this economic liability and turn it into an economic asset by demonstrating to producers how effective constructed wetlands and an aquaculture production system are in removing nutrients from feedlot discharges while producing useable and valuable by-products," he said.

"In demonstrating how the system works, we also want to show producers how they can produce valuable by-products as a means of recovering the cost of non-point source pollution control measures," Parker said.

"These valuable by-products are produced in various stages of the conversion process of the livestock generated biomass (waste)," he said.

The valuable by-products Parker is referring to are micro-organisms, such as the purple sulfur bacteria, aquatic plants, microalgae and fish. These by-products will be marketed as dietary ingredients in feed for fish, livestock and poultry. Methane gas is the other valuable by-product that will be produced in the system. It will be collected and utilized as an on-site energy source for heating, drying and producing electricity.

The waste management system that Dr. Parker and Dr. Fedler have designed is a three stage process comprising a 20-foot deep anaerobic pit surrounded by a facultative lagoon, an aquatic plant pond and a fish pond.

The system diverts raw feedlot waste into the 20-foot deep anaerobic pit where the animal waste starts breaking down and water purification begins. This breakdown of organic material (waste) creates methane gas, which is captured beneath the plastic membrane covering the pit.

"The methane gas will be used to heat water and produce electricity on-site," Parker said. "Exhaust gases and heat from the combustion of the methane gas will be recycled back into the pit to increase the temperature of the water, thus increasing the rate at which the organic material is broken down."

Parker said that as the waste breaks down, solid materials settle to the bottom of the pit and decompose while the nutrient rich water flows into the surrounding facultative lagoon. In the lagoon, microalgae and purple sulfur bacteria further purify the water by removing some of the nutrients as the water flows through the lagoon.

The purification process continues as the water moves through the first pond where aquatic plants remove nutrients from the water. From here, the water runs into a second pond where fish feed on the growing microalgae, aquatic plants and any organic material that has flowed in from the previous pond. From the last pond, the purified water can be released into the plays to be used for irrigation and to recharge ground water.

The demonstration project is funded by the U.S. environmental Protection Agency (EPA) under Section 319(h) of the Clean Water Act. Funds for the project are administered by the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board (TSSWCB), which is the lead agency for the state's agricultural and silvicultural nonpoint source pollution (NPS) management program. Funding is provided to TSSWCB to implement activities that demonstrate ways to control and prevent NPS pollution associated with agricultural and silvicultural runoff.

Cotton crop looks average statewide

STANTON, Texas (AP) - Timely late summer showers on the High Plains turned what could have been a disastrous Texas cotton crop into an average one statewide, though the results varied wildly from field to field.

"We're about 70 miles from a bumper crop," said Donald Long, manager of the Farmers Cooperative Association gin in Stanton, 20 miles northeast of Midland.

He ginned about 11,000 bales this winter, a quarter of what he processes in a normal season. But, after four years of drought, Long and others near the Permian Basin are starting to forget what a normal year is like.

In 1995, Texas farmers harvested 4.46 million bales, an average number for the nation's No. 1 cotton patch.

Despite the fickle rains, Texas cotton growers produced 4.35 million bales last year, according to estimates by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service.

"The big rains in September sent up all kinds of red flags," said James Supak, cotton expert for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station. "There could have been an early frost, but it was warm and sunny after that, so the crops were able to utilize the water and turn all that into a good yield." The High Plains region of West Texas, which normally produces about half the state's cotton, outdid itself with 3.1 million bales, or 75 percent.

The region set a production record of 615 pounds per acre planted, although about 800,000 acres normally reserved for cotton didn't go into production last spring because of drought and harsh May wind storms.

"After that, some of those people chose not to go back into cotton or couldn't go back," Supak said of the late planting that took place in June. "Yet the cotton that survived probably made some records."

GARLIC ON WHEAT

The Garlic Sprayed Wheat was Bigger, Greener, Without Green Bugs, and had a Higher Yield!!!

Cecil Richardson from Hale Center, Texas, sprayed his wheat with Garlic Barrier, using fish oil as a sticker - spreader, to chase away "green bugs". Five months after planting, his sprayed wheat was 5' taller, the plants were fuller and much healthier and the green bugs were gone! At harvest the sprayed wheat showed higher yield. Spraying cost was much less than with chemicals. Can be sprayed while grazing cattle.

Texas sorghum growers have new representative

Texas sorghum growers now have a full-time employee to represent them in Austin and to direct research and find new markets for their grain. Travis Taylor has taken on the dual leadership responsibilities as executive director for the Texas Grain Sorghum Association and the Texas Grain Sorghum Board.

Taylor takes over from Jack Eberspacher, who has served as executive director of the Texas organizations and the National Grain Sorghum Producers for the past seven years. Eberspacher will now be able to devote all of his time as executive director of the national association. The three organizations will still share space in the Abernathy office. The association is the voluntary membership organization for Texas sorghum growers, which focuses on legislative and regulatory activities within the state. The board is the 15-member producer board which administers the funds collected by the assessment on grain sorghum grown in the state. The funds are used for research, promotion and market development work.

Taylor, who grew up on a pecan and cattle operation near Taylor, brings a diverse agricultural background to his new job. He earned his bachelor's degree in animal science and a master's degree in nutrition from Texas A&M University. In addition, his work experience has been in agriculture and includes the Stiles Farm Foundation, Texas A&M University and Williamson County Grain, Inc.

"I am very excited about this opportunity," Taylor said. "I hope to fulfill the expectations of the sorghum producers in this great state."

Ranching school to be held March 22-23 in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH -- In the wake of devastating drought and a feeble cattle market, producers looking to rebuild their numbers and make positive changes in their herds should attend the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association School for Successful Ranching, said TSCRA President Chance O. Thompson Jr. The school will be March 22-23 at the Tarrant County Convention Center in Fort Worth, just prior to TSCRA's 120th annual convention. Producers attending the beef management session will learn how to match their cows to their resources and the demands of the market. Ted McCollum, Extension beef cattle specialist from Amarillo, will explain the relationships among cow size, milking ability, nutrient requirements, weaning weights and forage resources.

"The last couple of years have provided cattle providers a mostly involuntary opportunity to evaluate how well their cattle fit their resources," McCollum said. "As producers begin to restock and plan breeding programs for the long term, they should consider what type of breeding stock are best suited for the resources on the ranch."

"fit the box" without a detailed description of what was desired."

"Ranchers can use production tools, like frame scores, to determine what size, and type of cows and bulls will produce what the industry has now described as the most desirable slaughter animal," he said.

By studying how to manage fireant problems in a cattle operation, producers can earn one continuing education unit in integrated pest management, which is required for a pesticide applicators license. This includes how to correctly estimate the losses and determine what treatment plan will minimize losses at an acceptable cost, said Charles L. Barr.

before they can use certain kinds of pesticide, due to its hazardous effect on the soil and water. They have to learn about the pesticides because if they apply too much of a pesticide then it could wipe out the whole crop and pollute the water and ground. If they apply too little, then weeds could take over the field.

Water and soil pollution isn't that hard to get rid of, but it sure isn't easy. It is everywhere and if we all work together then we can achieve our goal of having a clean world.

Profit-minded producers will also get help in selecting the kind of cattle that can produce offspring which meet packer targets, said Ron Gill, Extension livestock specialist from Dallas. "For years, cow-calf producers have been told by industry experts to produce a product that will

Right-to-die advocates predict ultimate victory

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) - "Kit is dying," began the e-mail to an Internet cancer chat group.

"She woke from her morphine sleep yesterday afternoon, and told us she wanted to go ahead and die, that she was tired of fighting, that she just didn't have the strength 'to go another round' ...," wrote the Rev. Andrew Short.

In the 16 months since his wife died, the Presbyterian minister has become an advocate for the terminally ill as a member of the Hemlock Society, the nation's oldest and largest right-to-die organization.

Like other right-to-die groups, the Hemlock Society believes it should be legal for physicians to provide life-ending medication for terminally ill, mentally competent people who want to die.

The movement has formidable opposition from organized medicine, organized religion and even the Clinton administration.

Nonetheless, Hemlock Society members believe it is an issue whose time has come, and predict it will be pushed into law before the year 2000 by a grass-roots organization of volunteers.

"I believe this is the civil rights issue of this decade," says Peggy Lamm, a society board member who also is an outgoing Democratic state legislator from Boulder.

"People will say, 'This has nothing to do with the government.' This is about the people's choice to be able to decide their own dignity, and that's what this precisely is about - dignity."

In two e-mails on the Internet over a four-day span, Short described how bone cancer had eaten away at his wife's hip, had forced one eye to swell shut and had thinned her bones, causing severe pain with each move.

He told of watching his wife of 35 years falter during a two-month stay at Baylor Hospital in Dallas, and of his vigil at her bedside, sleeping in a chair nearby.

He said she had refused food and water, and asked for guidance on what to expect in the days ahead.

In a third posting three days later, Short related his wife's final, painful breath, and vowed to push for change in the law so no one would have to suffer as she did.

"If my sons and I have anything to do with it, that will change," Short says. "The medical community will have other options than simply maintaining a patient, as in Kit's case, until a bad heart or terminal bleeding or kidneys or infection brings death."

The right-to-die movement has enjoyed a high profile nationwide since 1990, when the Supreme Court recognized a constitutional right to die, ruling that terminally ill people may refuse life-sustaining medical treatment.

Most states allow physicians to withdraw life-support systems for dying patients under certain circumstances, but they prohibit physicians from aiding in suicides.

The exception is Oregon, which permits doctor-assisted deaths, but its law is on hold until the Supreme Court rules in two right-to-die cases, one from Washington state and the other from New York. The ruling is expected in July.

The movement has gradually gained momentum, on the strength of vocal advocates such as Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who has acknowledged assisting in 45 suicides since 1990.

A survey conducted by the University of Pennsylvania this year concluded five intensive-care nurses admitted hastening the deaths of terminally ill patients to end their suffering.

In December, a Florida doctor was charged with first-degree murder for injecting a terminally ill patient with a mixture of drugs. The doctor has said he just wanted to end the man's unremitting pain.

Kevorkian's assistant, Janet Good, who is dying of cancer, says her life likely will end in suicide. So does advocate Noel David Earley of Lincoln, R.I., who publicly announced plans to commit suicide when he is unable to bear the effects of his terminal illness anymore.

As support has grown, so has opposition. Last spring, U.S. Catholic bishops said doctors at 1,200 Catholic hospitals and medical facilities may give pain medication to terminally ill people, and patients have the right to forgo extraordinary means for extending life.

But they said medically assisted suicide is morally unacceptable. The American Medical Association voted in June to continue its opposition to medically assisted suicide, arguing the practice contradicts thousands of years of medical tradition.

Even the Clinton administration has expressed opposition in a brief filed in the two pending Supreme Court cases.

Acting Solicitor General Walter Dellinger wrote that people have a significant liberty interest in avoiding pain or suffering, but the state may have an overriding interest in protecting life.

Next year, the 25,000-member Hemlock Society plans to proceed with an aggressive, grass-roots campaign to legalize medically assisted suicide in 20 states.

They believe their best weapon is the reality of death itself, which they say is not always a peaceful slipping away in a drug-induced coma.

They talk of tortured breathing, seizures or pain-ridden maladies that occur when terminally ill people refuse life-sustaining treatment, the only legal recourse now available.

As more people learn of that reality, more will support medically assisted suicide, contends Faye Girsh, the society's national executive director.

"We're talking about hastening the death of somebody who wishes it - who's already dying," she says.

"I think the hierarchy of those groups that oppose us are not speaking for their constituents. They're certainly not speaking for the majority of voters, and I think the legislators who are intimidated by their alleged power are wrong."

Surgery frees paralyzed patients

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Medical Editor

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Being paralyzed was bad enough. But it was the thought of never playing golf again that persuaded stroke victim Bill Boyer to let doctors attempt an astonishing and highly experimental procedure in which they rerouted blood backwards through his veins and into his brain.

"I walked out of the hospital five days later," said the 61-year-old carpet installer from the Los Angeles suburb of Sylmar. "Four days after that, I went out and played nine holes of golf in the rain."

The procedure involves the use of veins to feed blood to the oxygen-starved area of the brain cut off by the stroke. Normally, arteries carry oxygen-rich blood to the brain; veins carry the used blood back to the heart.

So far, doctors from UCLA Medical Center have tried the approach on six patients. Four have had virtually complete recoveries, escaping probable paralysis, while the two others were unchanged.

"There is a lot of excitement from our point of view, and the patients are ecstatic," said Dr. John G. Frazee, a neurosurgeon who developed the procedure.

Boyer was lifting a box in his garage a year ago when suddenly his left side went numb and he fell flat on his face. He crawled to his truck and dialed 911 on his cellular phone.

By the time he got to the UCLA Medical Center, his left leg and hip were paralyzed. Frazee had permission from the Food and Drug Administration to try his approach on 10 patients. Boyer, if he agreed, would be his second.

Frazee explained the procedure: About 80 percent of strokes - Boyer's included - occur when a blood clot gets stuck in an artery somewhere in the brain. Unless the clot dislodges by itself, as sometimes happens, all the brain tissue downstream from the clot is starved of oxygen and nutrients and begins to die.

At the time, there was no medicine for strokes, although this has since begun to change with the approval of TPA, a clot-dissolving medicine already widely used for heart attacks.

While the blood supply to part of Boyer's brain was cut off, the blood drainage system - the veins - was free and clear. Frazee's idea was to hook up the plumbing backwards and send blood shooting into the brain via the veins.

"The front door to the brain is blocked by a clot," Frazee said. "We decided to use the back door."

Frazee had been experimenting for eight years on baboons. He thought it would work, but it was, after all, an experiment.

"I'm an avid golfer," Boyer said. "I decided to give it a chance."

So 61 hours after he fell down, doctors hooked up a tube to a big artery in Boyer's groin and pumped the blood to the veins in both sides of his neck. Next, they threaded the tube through the veins up into the back of his head. Finally, they partially inflated balloons to keep the blood from running back out.

The result: Blood flowed backwards through the veins throughout Boyer's brain. It reached the parts cut off by the clot. Within 15 minutes, the numbness began to lift.

One of the other patients who underwent the procedure even regained his ability to speak. The two patients who were neither helped nor hurt were probably too old, had many other health problems and had gone too long after the stroke, Frazee said.

Doctors begin the procedure up to seven hours after a stroke starts, and they keep the blood circulating backwards for several hours, if necessary. By then, Frazee said, the clot usually dissolves by itself or is washed away by the pressure of the reverse-flowing blood.

Frazee and a colleague, Dr. Xia Luo, presented their results for the first time Thursday at the International Joint Conference on Stroke and Cerebral Circulation in Anaheim.

"It's a radical idea," said Dr. Marc R. Mayberg, a neurosurgeon from the University of Washington. "Everybody's pretty excited to see if the promising animal work will hold up in humans."

Creating a desert scene

St. Anthony's Catholic School students turned the school hallways into a desert scene last week. The desert scene can be viewed at the school's open house on Sunday. Here, Devin O'Rear, left, and Glen Reinart work on the display. O'Rear is the daughter of Jerry and Mary Ann O'Rear, and Reinart is the son of Dean and Angeline Reinart. See related photo, Page 3B.

History of St. Anthony's School recognized by today's students

St. Anthony's School students have recognized the contributions their school has made to the Hereford community during Catholic Schools Week Feb. 2-9.

A Catholic Schools Week liturgy and 1997 Distinguished Graduate award presentation will be at 11 a.m. Sunday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Following the liturgy, a covered dish luncheon and an open house will be at 12 p.m. in the St. Anthony's Catholic cafeteria/gym.

St. Anthony's School was opened in 1917. It was staffed by the Sisters of the Atonement.

The first St. Anthony's School building was completed in 1927. The building is now the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.

The mission of the school is to help students acquire academic skills, gospel values and habits of the heart and the mind required for effective service to society and ministry to the church.

It was staffed by the Sisters of the Incarnate Word and Blessed Sacrament of Victoria from 1938 to 1942.

(See SCHOOL, Page 3B)

Award goes to graduate

St. Anthony's Catholic School has announced that the National Catholic Educational Association (NCEA) has named Sister Juanita Albracht a 1997 NCEA Catholic Elementary School Distinguished Graduate.

Sister Juanita graduated from St. Anthony's in 1948 and currently is in Peru preparing for a possible ministry in that country. She is a graduate of Incarnate Word College in San Antonio with a bachelor's degree in nursing and has a master's in health administration from St.

Beta Sigma Phi brunch honors sweethearts of three local chapters

Sweethearts representing the three local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority were honored Saturday with a morning brunch held at First Baptist Church.

Each of the local chapters recognized the woman chosen as their sweetheart for 1996-1997. They were Jaime Brorman of Alpha Iota Mu Chapter, Alene Tindal of Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter, and Dee Hamilton of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter.

The brunch menu consisted of a breakfast casserole of sausage and eggs, fresh fruit dish, muffins and cinnamon rolls, with coffee and orange juice.

Sweethearts received the International Pearl Crown pin to keep as their memento for this honor.

The following biographies of this year's sweethearts were submitted for publication.

Jaime Brorman has been selected as the sweetheart for the Alpha Iota Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. Since joining in 1987, Brorman has held the offices of secretary and president and served on the membership, ways and means, rosebud, social, scrapbook, service, telephone and publicity committees.

The chapter selected her as Girl of the Year for 1993-1994.

Originally from Sweetwater, she grew up in Parker, Ariz., on the Colorado River Indian Reservation where her family farmed. She graduated from the University of Arizona in Tucson with a degree in agronomy and plant genetics.

In 1979, she went to work for the USDA-Soil Conservation Service in Lockhart and was transferred to Austin in 1980 before moving to Hereford in 1982.

Brorman and her husband Lawrence farm northeast of Hereford. They have two sons, Gary, 6, who attends K-5 at St. Anthony's School and Jens, 3, attends school at Stanton. They attend St. Anthony's Catholic Church and St. Thomas' Church and are active in both churches and in the school.

She enjoys reading mystery thrillers, attempting to solve logic puzzles, gardening, cooking, vacationing, and just chasing the boys around.

"I was speechless when Gwen Betzen, the president of Alpha Iota Mu, told me I was elected sweetheart," Brorman said. "It is truly a wonderful honor and tribute that your sorority sisters give you."

Alene Tindal, sweetheart of Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter, has been a member of Beta Sigma Phi for 25 years.

She is currently the president of Alpha Alpha and has served in all other offices through the years. She has also served on the City Council and held all the offices of the Council.

Tindal and her husband Don have four children, Starla Herring, DeLynn Mason, Walt Tindal and Amy Pifer. They have six grandchildren and another due in April.

She is a member of Frio Baptist Church.

"As for hobbies," said Tindal, "the thing I enjoy most is my grandchildren."

Dee Hamilton joined Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi in 1994. She held the office of treasurer in 1995 and was named Girl of the Year last year and sweetheart this year.

Hamilton introduced two new members into the chapter last year and intends to add more.

She is in her fifth year at KPAN Radio where she is currently sales manager.

Hamilton enjoys working out in Karate class, bicycling, dating, learning new arts and crafts ideas, being community minded, shopping and being a member of Xi Epsilon Alpha.

She has previously been part of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division, Toastmasters, Nouvelle Ami Study Club and the Ladies Golf Association.

Winners announced in history essay contest

Los Ciboleros Chapter NSDAR is pleased to announce the winners of the 1996-1997 American History Essay Contest.

All fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade students in public, private, parochial schools, or sanctioned home study programs were eligible to participate.

First place winners in the fifth grade were Rebecca Fry, Sarah Paige Lawlis and Cassandra Lee Sonia.

Sixth graders who received first place awards were Stewart Carr, Melissa Warren and Jessica Matsler.

First place honors in the seventh grade went to Patrick Schlabs and Carlos Perez and in the eighth grade to Erin Louder.

Schools participating were West Central, St. Anthony's, Bluebonnet, Community Christian, Walcott and Hereford Junior High.

The topic this year was "Trails West." Focus was on a trail, road, gap, trace or pass over (or through) which the pioneers traveled during the westward expansion of the United States. The opening of the trail, experiences and consequences during the journey, historical significance as well as the life of the pioneers could be included.

DAR members judged the essays on historical accuracy, adherence to topic, organization of material, interest, originality, spelling, grammar, punctuation and neatness.

Every student submitting an essay will receive a certificate of appreciation. The first place winner in each grade level in each school will receive a bronze medal and second place winners will be given certificates of award. Presentations will be made during closing assemblies at each school.

A non-DAR judge selects the best essay from each grade level to be sent to State for judging. She also selects the best over-all essay regardless of grade level from the finalists. A book on American history is given to the school that the winner attends with a name plate honoring that student.

The essays sent to State were fifth grade, Rebecca Fry; sixth grade, Stewart Carr; seventh grade, Patrick Schlabs; and eighth grade, Erin Louder.

The essay selected as best over-all regardless of grade level was submitted by Stewart Carr.

An Honors Tea will be given on April 13 at the Hereford Community Center to recognize the winners of the contest. The students, their families, friends, teachers and school administrators will be guests of DAR at the tea.

The complete list of winners, their school and social studies teacher follows:

Women's Division begins annual membership drive

president; Nancy Denton, president-elect; Shannon Redwine, vice president and membership chairman; Kristi Hollingsworth, secretary-treasurer; Linda Daniel and Janie Alejandre, directors; and Julia Laing, parliamentarian.

Military Muster

Navy Fireman Apprentice Eric V. Savage, son of Freddie R. Savage Sr. of Hereford, recently reported for duty aboard the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln, homeported in San Diego.

Savage's new assignment is an example of how Navy and Marine Corps men and women are assigned to ships, squadrons and shore commands around the world. Whether serving in the Persian Gulf near Iraq or in the Adriatic Sea near Bosnia, people like Savage are making a difference as they work to improve their knowledge and skill as part of the most highly technical naval force in history.

The 1991 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Navy in February 1996.

Lyles is winner in new contest

In addition to the American history essay contest which is open to students in grades 5 through 8, DAR sponsored a new essay contest for the 1996-1997 year, the Christopher Columbus essay contest.

The contest is for all ninth and 10th grade students in public, parochial schools or sanctioned home study programs.

The topic for this year was "Compare the Importance of the Voyages of Christopher Columbus and Amerigo Vespucci."

Information was taken to Community Christian School and Hereford High School.

The winning essay was written by Carey Lyles of Hereford High School. His essay was sent to State for further judging.

The local chapter will present Lyles with a Columbus Essay Certificate at the closing school assembly.

Health Care Alliance lists agenda for general meeting

The Hereford Health Care Alliance will hold its general meeting at noon Tuesday in the Hereford Regional Medical Center board room.

Lunch reservations may be made by calling 364-2141 before 9 a.m. Tuesday. Cost of the meal is $3.

Items on the agenda include a presentation of the 1995 statistics on Deaf Smith County's teen pregnancy rate, the purchase of posters for local use which encourage the postponement of sexual activity or sexual abstinence, an update on the "Baby Think It Over" dolls and upcoming fund-raisers.

The Alliance continues its goal of reducing the teen pregnancy rate for Deaf Smith County by promoting sexual abstinence till marriage.

A sexual abstinence program called "Aim for Success" is sponsored by the Alliance and is offered free to schools, youth groups, churches and civic clubs.

The Alliance has also purchased two of the computerized "Baby Think It Over" dolls that are currently being used in the Hereford High School parenting class under the direction of Linda Cumpston. These dolls allow teens to experience first hand the tough job of caring for a child. The Alliance is seeking to place more of these dolls in the community. Requests may be made to the Alliance.

Music will be provided by Garre Lagrone and "Bottom Line." For more information, contact Jan Mulloy at 806-655-9864.

Monthly meetings of the Hereford Health Care Alliance are held at noon on the second Tuesday. The public is encouraged to attend.

SCHOOL

It was staffed by the Franciscan Sisters of Mary Immaculate of Amarillo in 1942.

The present building was dedicated on May 15, 1955.

At the end of the 1970-71 school year, the seventh-grade classes and eighth-grade classes were dropped.

Kindergarten was added in 1972 and a pre-school program was begun in 1989.

There have been three additions built since the completion of the main building, which now has a classroom capacity of 16. It also has a library and a meeting room.

In October of 1981, the Franciscan Sisters divided their community. However, the Mission Sisters of St. Francis continued to staff the school.

The school had its first lay principal in the 1986-87 school year. At that time, there was only one classroom being taught by the sisters.

The Sisters of Mary Immaculate returned to teach during the 1987-88 school year.

Today, the majority of the faculty is comprised of lay teachers.

STUDENT

Louis University.

She entered the Congregation of the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word in 1952. She has served as Provincial Superior and General Councillor of her congregation. She has presented numerous seminars in the health field and published Institutions and the Theology of Power in 1985.

Sponsored by NCEA's Department of Elementary School in cooperation with St. Anthony's School, the award goes to Sister Juanita for outstanding personal and professional achievements. Throughout her life Sister Juanita has consistently pursued the highest possible professional and personal standards. She is an example of how Catholic elementary schools educate people to take leadership roles in their community and beyond.

"It is with great pleasure that we recognize distinguished graduates from our Catholic elementary schools," said Dr. Robert Kealey, executive director of NCEA's Department of Elementary Schools. "The education they received in the elementary years has provided a firm basis for growth and achievement in their adult lives."

In an acceptance letter received from Sister Juanita she stated, "Every day, I live out the faith foundation I received at St. Anthony's School and in my family home. What a life-long gift! The parish is indeed blessed to have the option of a Catholic School for its youth. In too many places this is no longer an option. We find youth coming to adulthood without a foundation in faith and values which are needed to see them through the challenges and choices which must be made in life."

Since Sister Juanita was unable to receive the award personally, her brother, Roger Albracht of Hereford, was to accept the framed certificate and pin at a special Catholic Schools Week liturgy at St. Anthony's Church on Sunday.

St. Anthony's School began giving the Distinguished Graduate Award in 1993. Previous winners include Adeline Loerwald, Alice Hund, Sharon Cramer and Drew Kershen.

The Successful Family

The Successful Family program is in need of playpens to use during the weekly sessions.

Attendance at the sessions has been larger than expected and there are not enough playpens to provide adequate space for the infants.

Anyone who has a playpen they would like to loan or donate for use during the sessions should call Tilli Boozer at 363-7668.

We had our first lessons about how to be parents when we were only children. The adults who raised us showed us how to be parents.

Most of us take care of our kids much the same way our family took care of us. We use the rules, traditions, and even the same words our family used.

What was it like when you were growing up? How did your parents treat you? How did they talk to you?

Listen to what you say to your children. What words do you use? What do you do? Think about all the ways you talk and act just like someone in your family.

We often follow the examples our families set without even thinking about it. Sometimes this is just fine. But sometimes child abuse is part of what we learned. Our grandparents' ways, good and bad, were passed to our parents. Then to us.

And unless we learn new skills, we treat our kids the same way.

Being an unhappy parent and family can be ended. Every Tuesday evening from 5:30 to 8 at the HISD Administration Building families are learning how to be successful and happy.

For more information, contact The Successful Family- HISD, Tilli Boozer, counselor/facilitator, at 806-363-7668.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: No lectures, please. Just your traditional sound advice. I'll be committing suicide as soon as I get some things settled, which should take a few weeks. Don't try to talk me out of it. My mind is made up.

I am writing to ask how I can make it easier for my husband, family and co-workers. My health is fine, I have a good job, and I put on a happy face. To all outside observers, my life is neat and tidy. Word of my suicide is going to be a tremendous shock to everyone. If you knew me, you would say I was the last woman in the world who would take her own life.

Should I do nothing and let family and friends deal with it in their own way, or should I leave a letter? If leaving a letter would help them, what should I say? Should I suggest phone numbers of people they can call for counseling? Should I tell my family members how much I love them?

Obviously, I cannot talk to anyone about this, but I do need to know how to make it less painful. Thank you for providing answers to my questions. -- Somewhere in California

Dear California: You say your mind is made up and you are going to commit suicide. You ask that I not try to talk you out of it. OK, I won't.

You want to know if you should leave a letter. Sorry, I can't advise you on that because I have no idea what you would say in that letter. You tell me your health is fine, you have a good job and there is no sign of trouble in your life. Frankly, I'm baffled.

You ask how to make your death less painful to those who love you. I don't have a clue. The pain a suicide inflicts on those who are left to mourn is excruciating, and it never goes away.

Some experts who know a great deal more about the subject than I do say people kill themselves because they are in too much pain to go on. Obviously, this is your situation. Please see a professional who can give you some medication to stop the pain. I promise you that in a matter of weeks you will be glad you did.

Dear Ann Landers: It pleased me to learn from your column that women are saying no to unflattering styles and terrible fabrics. I would like to weigh in with a man's perspective.

What is it with the never-ending parade of black suits accompanied by ugly neckties? I thought men's black, pinstriped, double-breasted suits went out with the mobsters in the '30s.

The color black, which many people consider "smart," is in fact dull, ordinary, boring and dated. Black reflects the triumph of conformity and the death of individuality. It is one more example of the dumbing down of a society that once celebrated its diversity and independence.

How depressing to see today's male fashion world controlled by a handful of robots and idiots. It would be refreshing and healthy to see American men revolt against the style master's edict that a monotonous, drab, unflattering uniform will be the only apparel available to the peasants. A good jolt in the pocketbook would be effective shock therapy for such arrogance. I recommend it. -- R.C. in Louisa, Va.

Dear R.C.: You have written a letter that will be cheered by individualists and freethinkers and scorned by traditionalists. The retailing industry, however, would love to offer a wider variety of clothing and should send you a dozen roses.

Gem of the Day: Sign in the window of a veterinarian who is also a taxidermist: Either way, you get your dog back.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.15.) ANN LANDERS (R) COPYRIGHT 1997 CREATORS SYNDICATE, INC.

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Feb. 9, the 40th day of 1997. There are 325 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 9, 1943, the World War II battle of Guadalcanal in the southwest Pacific ended with an American victory over Japanese forces.

On this date:

In 1773, the ninth president of the United States, William Henry Harrison, was born in Charles City County, Va.

Pioneers to hold planning meeting

Mid-Plains Pioneer Association has scheduled a planning meeting at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Seeing In 3-D

Stereopticon pictures were the wonder of the 19th century. Two almost-identical pictures, viewed through a contraption with aimed lenses, presented a three-dimensional effect. Fact is, that's pretty much the way our eyes work.

Six external muscles that control each eye direct them both to a target, whatever it is we want to look at. If the muscles are not coordinated as they should be, depth perception is reduced and many of our activities become extra difficult.

The optometrist's complete examination will determine the cause of the problem. Sometimes vision training may be prescribed to help the eyes learn to work as a team. Corrective lenses may be used, too, to help align the two eyes. Occasionally, in older people, a cataract may be closing off the vision in one eye. After the cataract is dealt with, a contact lens or implant usually will be inserted to replace the opaque lens that was removed.

On behalf of the family of Virginia Holmes, I want to note the extraordinary care that was administered to our Mother while she was being treated by Dr. Lawlis and the ICU staff on January 23, 1996. Without a doubt, she received the finest care that could be obtained in any hospital. The people in Hereford are truly blessed to have a hospital that is staffed with extremely qualified personnel who are also very loving and caring.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS
Extension Agents, Red Cross personnel and others from across the Panhandle received extensive training last spring in Emergency Preparation and Response.

It's one of those aspects of our life that we THINK we know and are prepared for, but after attending one of these trainings, we must ask ourselves, "Just how much have we laid the plans to prepare ourselves and our families for emergencies?"

Over the next few months, articles will appear that will help us become aware and hopefully evaluate our own personal situations and take action to be prepared for maximum safety.

The recent tragedy of a family in the Panhandle helps us evaluate and focus our attention on carbon monoxide poisoning. So often we empathize with those that have sustained losses due to these tragedies. The tragedy should propel us into swift action to protect our lives and the lives of our families, friends and neighbors.

Carbon monoxide poisoning can and does happen. Poisoning does not happen just in older homes and not just to someone else. It can and does happen to us and to our family and friends.

Ask yourself these questions. If the answer is yes, then you are in immediate danger. But day by day one needs to be alert to the danger that can exist.

*Do I start my car in the garage? (Even if the garage door is open this is a dangerous situation.)

*Have I had an inspection of my home heating system? (Most of us are not trained to inspect our own. Call a professional.)

*Are all fireplace chimneys free and clear from all debris? (We might be tempted to say yes they are clean, however, birds build nests even in winter months and they build them fast.) When was the last time I had the chimney cleaned by a professional? Am I sure that the fireplace flue is opening completely, or do I need to add a weight to pull the lever open all the way?

*Do I burn open flame heaters? If so, do I ALWAYS cracks a window to help exhaust harmful fumes?

*Do I have a CARBON MONOXIDE DETECTOR? Do I manually check the detector at least ONCE A MONTH?

Though the above are not all of the danger points for potential poisoning, they do represent some of the most common. Perhaps the most critical question that we need to ask ourselves is:

*Do I believe that I or my family could be potential victims of carbon monoxide poisoning?

If one has not purchased a carbon monoxide detector, TODAY is the time to do so. If above checks have not been done, TODAY is the day to do so. Keep you and your family safe and prepared.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: As a dog owner, dog lover and professional dog trainer, I can suggest methods of dealing with the problem of chewing.

Dogs chew because they are bored. Toys can provide the right stimulation to prevent chewing, but exercise is also very important for any dog. Play ball several times a day, or take the dog for long walks.

Obedience training will provide the dog with a "job," and the dog soon looks forward to the work and being with its owner.

I not only own dogs (two English springer spaniels and a border collie), I also show them and do therapy dog work in hospitals and nursing homes. This is fulfilling and fun for the owner, and the dogs love it too! The patients adore the dogs and enjoy the company.

If the dog is at home alone most of the day, the owner may have to consider crating it. This is by no means cruel, and the dog will consider the crate as its den. A crate, however, should never be used as a form of punishment.

There are several antichewing products on the market. The products leave a nasty taste in a dog or cat's mouth. —Tracy Wagner, Cross Junction, Va.

Thank you for your good advice concerning our four-pawed friends. A well-behaved, happy dog is a terrific family member. — Heloise

LABEL PHOTOS

Dear Heloise: Please stress to your young readers the importance of labeling (who, what, when, where and ages) all pictures, both portraits and snapshots, as they are taken.

I'm trying to sort for my children and grandchildren boxes of pictures from 50 to 60 years back, and it's maddening not to remember details, but you do forget.

Just a few minutes spent years ago would have made this job so much easier. — Christine Turman, Tyler, Texas

Red Cross Update

The first section of the community first aid and safety class, called Adult CPR, will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Red Cross building. The first section, Adult CPR, must be completed before the second part, Child and Infant CPR, can be taken. The number is 364-3761.

Clothes give-away will be Monday, weather permitting. We will try to have the clothes available to look through in front of the Red Cross building. The local radio station, KPAN, has been very generous in announcing times for these type of events, and we will ask them to air time for this one as well.

In the mean time, you need not suffer if the ground hog has made a mistake about the upcoming weather. Red Cross still has winter coats for those who need them, in all but the larger sizes.

Movie fans will enjoy seeing the Red Cross emblem and principles well portrayed in the new movie, "In Love and War." This and another movie, "Dante's Park," may present an opportunity for families and educators at all levels to provide lessons that movie goers suddenly find themselves very interested in.

Red Cross has materials on the subjects of "The Red Cross Emblem," "What Are the Geneva Conventions," and "Seven Fundamental Principles of the Red Cross Movement."

Red Cross and the National Geological Society have teamed up to provide a presentation, complete with slides, all about volcanoes.

We also have some updated information about the national emergency radio service.

February is designated as Black History Month. Started in 1926 by Dr. Carter G. Woodson, political leader and author, the month serves to acknowledge the achievements and contributions of African Americans. This year's theme is "African Americans and Civil Rights: A Reappraisal" that was developed by the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History. If you are interested in getting some information about African American contributions to Red Cross history and leadership, this is a good time. It's a good time to volunteer, too.

The recent severe winter storms and flooding in the Northwest have created problems for many. Red Cross has served, as of Jan. 29, a total of 732,845 meals to storm victims and disaster workers in the affected areas.

The meals and other services are provided free of charge and without debt to disaster victims. The cost, in excess of $9 million dollars, is paid for with funds which are specially reserved to help all victims of all types of disasters, even right here in our Tri County area.

You can contribute to our preparedness for future disasters by cash or credit card, by calling 806-364-3761, or one of the two national numbers, 800-435-7669, or 800-257-7575 (Spanish), or on-line to Red Cross Internet at <http://www.red-cross.org> on the web.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Two Books - One's a winner, the other a doorstep

As an author, I'm often amazed at the books in the business arena that make it to the top of the best-seller lists. Or, more frequently I'm surprised at the valuable books that don't make it.

I don't believe a book's success is all in the marketing, the subject or the author's fame. I'm also certain that book publisher's don't have the formula entirely figured out either. I do know that some of the best helps for operating a successful business never make the "New York Times" best-seller list.

Such is the case with two books I read recently. One's a dud, but made all the best-seller lists. The other is a winner waiting for discovery. First, the winner

"Streetfighter Marketing" by Jeff Slutsky is a winner. If you're in a retail or service business that depends on local customers, READ THIS BOOK.

Slutsky's focus is on how to outmarket your competitors without overspending them. You'll find the marketing approach in this book unique and fresh.

"Streetfighter Marketing" begins by introducing you to the "Ten Rules of Streetfighting Success." The rest of the book is filled with details that will help you put together an effective neighborhood marketing program.

What I found especially beneficial about "Streetfighter Marketing" is the common sense approach to winning customers. The concept is one of community networking and local trade-area involvement. "Streetfighter Marketing" gives you several tools to use, many solid examples and dozens of actual success stories.

Slutsky is quick to point out that quality products and services are essential prerequisites to marketing success. "Without a first-rate service or product to offer the customer, creative neighborhood marketing will bring in more customers to see just how bad your product or service is, thereby driving you out of business all the faster," Slutsky said. In other words, good marketing and bad business practice could actually accelerate your failure.

What you won't find in this book are any "all-you-gotta-do-is," "pie-in-the-sky" marketing approaches. Slutsky is a down-to-earth business owner who has personally helped hundreds of clients achieve marketing success. He is a streetfighter who is building his own business one customer at a time.

Recently, I had the pleasure of meeting and visiting with Slutsky and I was impressed with this marketing philosophy. I think you'll find his book an easy read and a good tool to use in building your business. The doorstep

The "Dilbert Principle" by Scott Adams is a negative, cynical, supposedly humorous look at management in corporate America. This multi-week, best seller doesn't cut it as a management guide. The back flap promises to reveal the "secrets of management" in 26 provocative, illustrated chapters. It never happens.

The basic premise of the "Dilbert Principle" is that all managers are idiots. Adams proposes that the most ineffective workers are systematically moved to the place where they can do the least damage - MANAGEMENT.

Here are some "management gems" from the book.

- To the manager, the following equation holds true: Employee Input = More Work = Bad.
  - Female success factors: 1) Who you know, 2) Swearing, 3) Education and 4) What you do.
  - ...the marketing professionals motto: We're not screwing the customers. All we're doing is holding them down while the salespeople screw them.
- There are worse examples of Adams' negative, slanted philosophy in the book. You'll also find nearly 400 anti-management cartoons in the book.
- My advice: Don't buy the book, don't read the book and forget the cartoons. The "Dilbert Principle" won't help you become successful, in business and it won't give you any real management secrets.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS
The fun, fun, fun library activities this week include:

Monday 4-5 p.m. - Special program for 4th-6th graders. Drawing, painting, games, movies.

Monday 6-8 p.m. - Sewing classes. Adult projects include curtains, pillows, vests, shirts, gowns or any project you wish to work on. Rebecca Walls is the teacher.

Tuesday 4-5 p.m. - Special programs for 1st-3rd graders. Drawing, painting, games, movies.

Thursday 7-9 p.m. - Crochet and other needle craft classes for adults. Sue Cherry is teacher.

Adults and children are invited to come join these fun, fun activities. If you have always wanted to learn to sew, knot, crochet, cross-stitch, or needle point, now is your chance. Life is short, so start now. Call 364-1206 for more information.

Among the new books this week you will find a Bible story craft book entitled Let's Play a Bible Game by Ed Dunkop. It is a great resource book for Sunday School teachers who need something extra on those Sunday mornings.

Other new titles include Split Image: The life of Anthony Perkins, written by Charles Winecoff. The person who played Norman Bates in Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho" may not have been as dangerous or violent as that character, but he may have been as confused and troubled.

In the beginning of his career, Anthony was cast as the all-American young man. The movie "Psycho" changed that image forever. How many remember his role in "Tea and Sympathy" or "Friendly Persuasion"? I dare say many more remember Norman Bates in "Psycho."

Clint Eastwood: A Biography by Richard Schickel is another Hollywood personality that I find interesting. I first fell in love with Rowdy Yates in "Rawhide" and followed each new character, even Bronco Billy, Josey Wales, Dirty Harry and Pardner in "Paint Your Wagon."

Eastwood's career as a director began with the thriller "Play Misty for Me" which for me was a pleasant and chilling surprise. This book goes beyond his career and past his reserve to reveal the real humor, honesty, shyness, and powerful will that is the man. Clint talks about his family, his religious faith, and about what he would like to accomplish in the future.

Margaret Atwood's new novel Alias Grace is a 19th century murder case. Grace Marks was convicted as an accomplice in the vicious murder of her employer, the wealthy Thomas Kinnear and his mistress Nancy Montgomery.

Some believed Grace to be innocent while others believed her insane. After a short stay in the Toronto lunatic asylum, Grace begins a life sentence in prison.

When the up-and-coming expert in the field of mental illness, Dr. Simon Jordan interviews Grace, she claims to have no memory of the killings. Dr. Jordan begins to work with Grace in an effort to restore her memory and hopefully prove her innocence.

By beginning with a time in which Grace remembers every detail, Dr. Jordan brings Grace closer and closer to the day of the murder. Dr. Jordan is baffled by Grace and has no idea if the unlocked memories will reveal an innocent girl or a bloodthirsty killer.

There is a homicidal arsonist loose in Seattle targeting single mothers in the novel Beyond Recognition by Ridley Pearson. This is a story for the fire fighters with the case based on real forensics. This is also a story for the suspense thriller, and mystery lover.

In the book the fuel used in the deadly fire is one that burns hotter than any the experts have ever seen. Police Sergeant Lou Boldt and psychologist Daphne Matthews and the Fire Marshall work together to solve the mounting cases.

Before each fire the Fire Marshall is sent an ominous note, but beyond that there are no witnesses. The single parents are the only victims, and the killer seems to take special steps to insure the children's safety.

Then police get their first break. A 12-year-old boy witnesses what he believes is a drug deal. The police believe it was the arsonist securing the illegal substance used to manufacture the volatile fire accelerant.

Can the police rely on the boy's statement? Did the boy really see the face of the arsonist?

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to have wings and fly? In Rapture by David Sosnowski there is a new virus spreading across America. The symptoms look and act just like the flu at the beginning, but then the skin turns green and continues until one develops wings.

As the virus spreads, a whole new race of people are created. They look like angels on the outside, but they certainly don't feel like angels on the inside. The Peds, or Pedestrians or wing-free people, begin to attack the winged creatures sometimes with the intent to harm, but sometimes in an effort to contract the virus.

And once one has wing, how do you learn to fly? Zander Wiles isn't sure until he meets angel therapist Cassie O'Conner. Dr. O'Conner helps Zander face what he has become and along the way teaches him how to throw himself at the ground and use his wings to miss.

A satire with a heart and soul, Rapture introduces the ordinary jerk with wings that is trying to make it in the day to day life.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you explain how vaccinations work? It always seemed to me that if you put the flu into the body, the body would get the flu. — W.H.

ANSWER: You state the apparent paradox well. And if well-informed 20th century adults question or fear vaccination, think of the hurdles its pioneers faced in the 19th century.

Vaccines work by gently priming the body's immune system against a future encounter with the infecting germ. At that encounter, the system "remembers" the germ and is immunologically armed to stop it in its tracks with appropriate antibodies.

The vaccine accomplishes all that without harming anything.

Your example of the influenza vaccine is a good one. There, the flu virus in the vaccine has been killed. A killed virus cannot cause any disease, but its mere presence arms the immune defense against the real organism.

Vaccines are among medicine's shining accomplishments. They apparently have eliminated smallpox from the face of the earth, and reduced the number of polio cases. The list of victories is long.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can hay fever return after years of remission? I mean years. I am an older person. I had problems every fall for many years in my youth and young adulthood. I finally got free of it, or so I thought. Now 25 years later it has returned full blast. — Mrs. B.J.

ANSWER: Hay fever often behaves just that way.

Statistics tell us its recurrence is more the rule than exception. About 8 percent of hay-fever sufferers get rid of the problem for good.

What's worse, the sneezing, itching and runny-nose symptoms return with a vengeance after such a long delay.

A third of young adults with hay fever will notice a slackening of its grip at some point in the first 10 years. After such a honeymoon hiatus, no one can guarantee it won't return in all its misery.

I appreciate your disappointment. You would expect that after 25 symptom-free years you could declare victory. But no.

I cannot tell you why it happens that way, but when it does, we return to the same type of treatments that worked the first time around. On the plus side, you can find more effective medicines available today than were around 25 years ago.

According to new government survey

Illegal aliens account for 2% of population

WASHINGTON (AP) - Five million immigrants are living illegally in the United States, the federal government said Friday, providing the first official estimate of the hard-to-count population in four years.

Undocumented aliens account for just under 2 percent of the U.S. population, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

"If there is one idea that comes out of looking at these numbers it is, as we have said many, many times before, that over the past two decades or so the country has had insufficient resources and attention to the illegal immigration problem," said Bob

Bach, the INS executive associate commissioner. "And it has accumulated to where it is now a large and substantial issue."

Bach pointed to major funding increases provided in recent years, which doubled the INS budget since 1993, from $1.5 billion to $3.1 billion.

With more manpower, equipment and programs, the INS is deporting more people, beefing up enforcement at the Southwest border and ensuring that fewer illegal immigrants obtain work, he said.

"We have no reason to believe the problem is getting worse," Bach said. "In fact we have every reason to believe ... that we are making significant progress."

Bach's view wasn't universally shared.

"It is a huge indictment of the ineffectiveness of our immigration service that there are so many illegal aliens in this country," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform.

Stein, a longtime critic of the INS and the Clinton administration's immigration policies, accused the agency of focusing too little attention on enforcement beyond the Southwest border.

With the undocumented immigrant population growing by an estimated 275,000 people a year - at a time when the INS is deporting fewer than 100,000 people this year - Stein said: "The way the INS is going, it's like emptying a bathtub with a teaspoon without turning off the faucet."

The illegal-immigrant population is fairly close to what it was before passage of a sweeping 1986 immigration law that gave amnesty, in the form of citizenship, to nearly 3 million people who were here illegally. Prior to then, depending on who is doing the counting, anywhere from 4.8 million to 6 million people were here unlawfully.

"The point is that the illegal population now is larger than it was before the amnesty," said Mark Krikorian, executive director of the Center for Immigration Studies. "The amnesty has been totally negated."

The latest estimates, based largely on Census data, cover illegal immigrants who live here at least a year, not those who slip in for a few days or months and then return home. INS said its estimates, which could be off by as much as 400,000 people in either direction, err on the high side.

The agency concurrently announced Friday that it was revising upward its 1992 estimate by half a million people, to 3.9 million.

Fully 40 percent of the undocumented population lives in California, which together with Texas, New York, Florida, Illinois, New Jersey and Arizona accounts for 83 percent of the illegal immigrants.

Texas, which was home to the third-largest undocumented alien population the last time INS provided estimates, has moved into second place, with 700,000, followed by New York with 540,000.

INS said more than half of the total undocumented population is of Mexican origin. El Salvador, Guatemala, Canada and Haiti were the other major countries of origin.

Forty percent of undocumented immigrants overstayed their visas, the agency estimates. The rest entered without inspection, crossing the U.S.-Mexican border illegally or coming in at other land, sea or air points.

Texas Railroad Commission stresses children safety tips

AUSTIN -- Each school day afternoon, thousands of Texas children are home alone between the time school lets out and when a parent returns. Although most parents teach their children to avoid strangers and to go straight home, children must learn about safety inside the home, too. The Texas Railroad Commission suggests that parents discuss basic safety tips with their children, including appliance safety.

Most police departments and safety professionals also recommend that children who are home alone should ignore a doorbell or knock. Any other action forces them to decide whether the person at the door is safe to admit. It is too easy for a criminal to feign an emergency or a delivery and talk children into opening a door.

Let your children know what typical noises such appliances as the furnace, water heater or refrigerator can make; they will be less fearful on their own when they know the water heater is supposed to gurgle or that the furnace makes a sound like footsteps in the hallway.

For parents whose homes are fueled by propane gas, this is also a good time to let children know some basic appliance safety rules, like:

* never turn on propane gas appliances without an adult present.

* keep papers and toys away from gas furnaces, space heaters and fireplaces;

* stay away from propane tanks and pipes;

* never play with matches; and * never breathe fumes from sprays, tubes, cans bags, rags, bottles or gas cans.

Propane gas has an odorant added to help identify a gas leak. Show your child how to identify the odor by using a "scratch and sniff" brochure available from your propane gas supplier. Tell your children that if they smell gas, they should exit the home immediately and that they should not use any electric switches or appliances. Children should go to a trusted neighbor's home for help and call Mom or Dad or the fire department from there.

Parents can ensure an adequate supply of gas for the winter months by having their propane supplier put their home delivery account on "automatic." That way there will always be enough propane gas for heating and cooking, no matter how cold it gets or how treacherous the driving conditions.

For more information on how safely to stay warm this winter, call the Railroad Commission's Alternative Fuels Division at 800/64-CLEAR.

Richards, Brown say change is needed in both political parties

AUSTIN (AP) - Americans no longer vote because there's too much - and too little - democracy in politics, according to two former governors.

Invited to discuss the future of the nation's primary political parties Friday, former Govs. Ann Richards, of Texas, and Jerry Brown, of California, said both parties need to change and will. But they said the lack of participation among American voters isn't necessarily the fault of the Republican and Democratic parties.

"We have inundated Americans with democracy," Richards told an audience at the University of Texas' Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs. "They are bored with it."

Richards said there are far too many elections in the United States. She said combining all local, state and federal elections on a fewer number of dates will get voters' attention.

"We're sitting back and decrying the fact that voters don't turn out," she said. "Of course they don't turn out, you're asking them to vote all the time."

But Brown said a lack of democracy is the problem. He said the growing difference between the rich and poor is giving more representation to those with more money and less to those with less money.

"I don't think you can have democracy and the people know that and that's why they aren't voting," Brown said.

Both former governors said the political parties aren't doing what they once did: defining issues, bringing people together and closing the gap between the rich and poor.

People don't see how party politics affect their lives, Richards said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 --Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

The House of the Week

A Flexible Dream House

G-39

A COVERED FRONT PORCH will be irresistible on spring days. Shutters and dormer windows add to the traditional, welcoming exterior.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Plan G-39, by HomeStyles Designers Network, is a warm country home with 2,762 square feet of living space that allows for flexibility as a family passes from stage to stage.

When the kids are young and energetic, the central great room will provide plenty of room to roam and play. And, on warm days youngsters can make good use of the huge front porch.

The island kitchen features an adjoining breakfast nook.

Entertaining will be a pleasure in the formal living and dining rooms, which are open to each other, but defined by attractive columns.

The master bedroom is a haven that will provide natural sunlight through a bayed window. The master bath has a whirlpool tub beneath a 12-ft. ceiling.

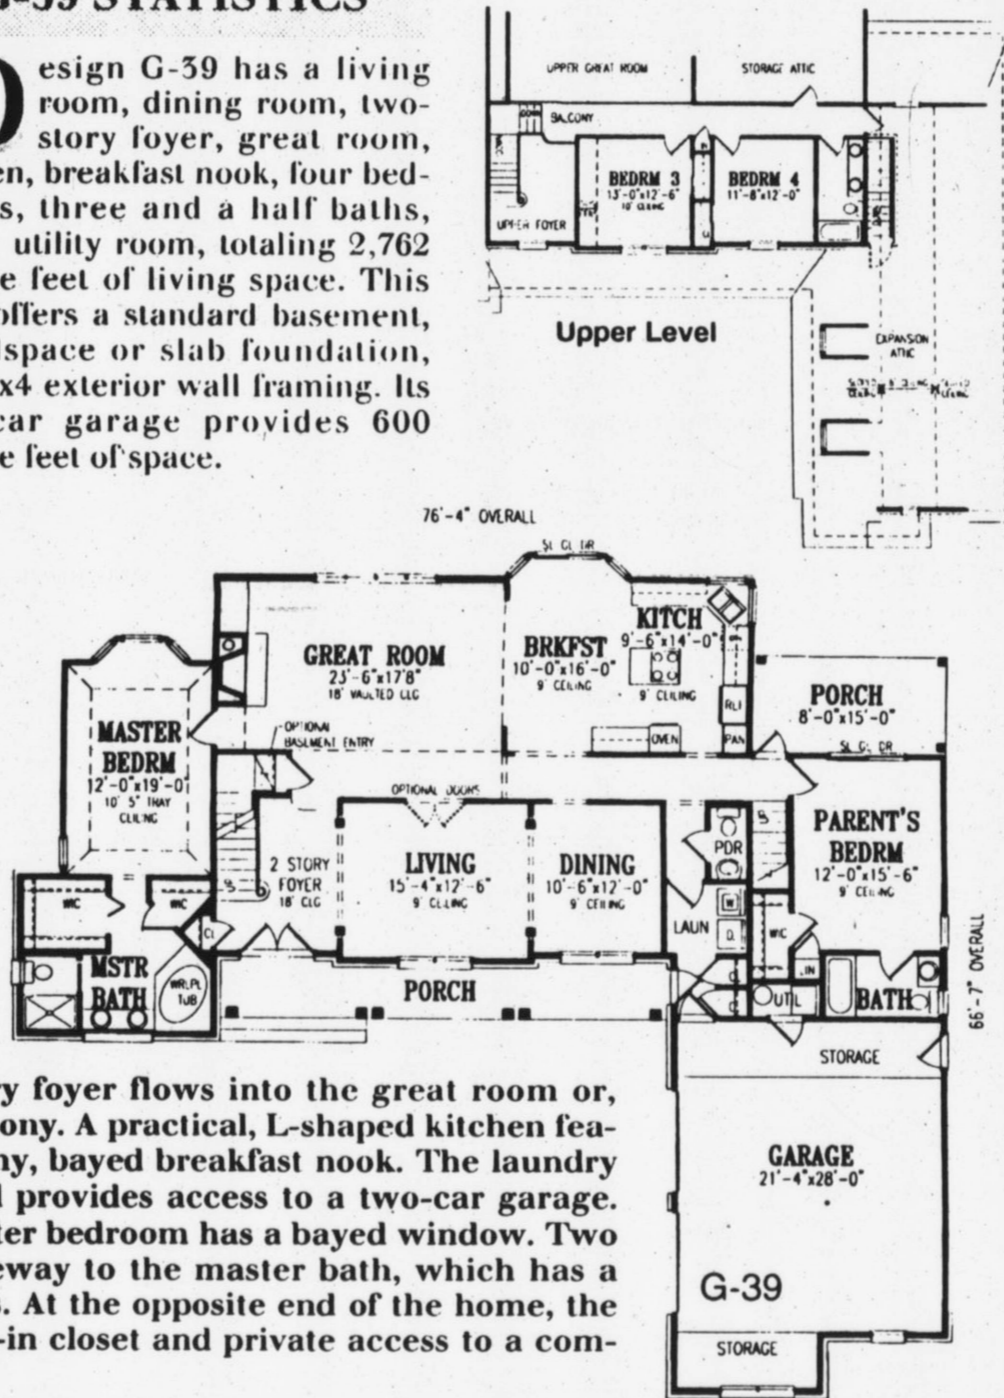

An older generation is nicely provided for in a secluded suite with private access to a porch, plus a walk-in closet and a full bath.

FROM THE FRONT PORCH, a two-story foyer flows into the great room or, upstairs, to spacious bedrooms and a balcony. A practical, L-shaped kitchen features a work island, and is next to a sunny, bayed breakfast nook. The laundry room is just steps from the kitchen, and provides access to a two-car garage. Isolated at one end of the home, the master bedroom has a bayed window. Two roomy walk-in closets flank the passageway to the master bath, which has a whirlpool bath, shower and dual vanities. At the opposite end of the home, the "parents' bedroom" has a full bath, walk-in closet and private access to a comfortable, covered back porch.

OF SAFETY

Safety Check Garage Door System

(NAPS)—A properly working garage door system provides safety, security and protection from summer heat and winter cold. You should make sure the door and its electric operator are working properly by performing a regular safety check. Regular safety checks are especially important if you have children at home or grandchildren who visit regularly, or if your home is the popular gathering place for neighborhood children.

A garage door is the largest moving object in most homes, and if the door isn't properly adjusted and maintained, it can become one of the most dangerous pieces of equipment around the house.

Keep transmitters and remote controls out of reach of children. Be sure to mount the pushbutton wall control well above curious young heads. The button should be at least five feet from the floor and away from all moving parts. Never operate the door unless you can see it, and keep the door in sight until it closes completely.

Make sure your operator has a feature that causes it to reverse when an object obstructs the door as it is closing. Test the reversing feature every month.

Jane Tennison is back on the beat in Prime Suspect

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Jane Tennison walks into the lair of a sadistic street boss without the benefit of a service revolver or communication with her backup in the finale of "Errors of Judgment," the fifth Prime Suspect crime drama.

Airing on consecutive Sundays, Feb. 9 and 16, on PBS' Masterpiece Theatre (check local listings), the four-hour thriller lives up to its predecessors in its portrayal of a uniformly bleak world — both inside and outside the station house — through which the beleaguered heroine finds her way. Old boys, dead ends, insolent subordinates, grisly murders and the near certainty of failure have a stimulating effect on Detective Superintendent Tennison. She always wins her case, and she pays dearly for every victory.

Helen Mirren has earned much praise for her portrayal of Tennison, a woman wedded to her career with more grit than regret. Good men soon discover they come second to her work, so she is left to choose her lovers from the ranks of cads and adulterers.

In "Errors of Judgment," Jane is transferred from duty in London to the industrial city of Manchester. Her new commander, Martin Ballinger (John McArdle), torments her with a weary round of public relations assignments.

Finally Tennison is assigned to investigate the murder of a drug-ring operative, and she focuses on the ring's leader, Clive Norton (Steven Mackintosh), a k a "The Street."

Almost as soon as she begins her investigation, clues wither and witnesses become evasive. The case becomes nearly as impenetrable as the dialogue is to American ears. Much of it is in British street slang.

Her insistence on pursuing The Street, who always seems to slip out of the legal noose, is bewildering to her investigative team. They feel if one aims too high in the organization, there is a risk of losing the case.

Tennison's tenacious, instinctive style is a particular affront to Detective Inspector Clare Devanney (Julia Lane), who is accustomed to being the highest-ranking woman in the squad.

The case is still a jumble after Tennison interviews the only survivor of the murderous attack, a young member of The Street's army named Michael Johns (Ray Emmet Brown).

Then the 12-year-old brother (Joseph Jacobs) of Michael's girlfriend confesses to the crime, but his story makes no sense.

Finally, Tennison suspects treachery from inside the force, and her inflamed pursuit of truth makes her reckless.

Even as the detective superintendent gets her man, the unrelenting dreariness of her world makes the effort seem pointless.

Director of photography Barry McCann matches screenwriter Guy Andrews' image for gruesome image to build this world: a heroin-addicted mother shooting up, a pair of blood-thirsty Rottweilers attacking their human quarry.

Yet this episode of Prime Suspect feels like the prelude to something rather than the thing itself. In the course of a good story, nothing new is learned about the heroine.

And whether a real-life Jane Tennison would have emerged from The Street's execution parlor is up to the viewer to decide.

Mirren once intended to close the book on Jane Tennison with this film, but she recently agreed to play her again, with the assurance of a greater role behind the camera in the sixth episode of Prime Suspect.

Helen Mirren stars as tough but tender police detective Jane Tennison, who becomes romantically involved with her married boss (John McArdle), in "Errors in Judgment," the fifth Prime Suspect crime drama presented on Masterpiece Theatre. Part 1 of the two-part program airs Sunday on PBS (check local listings).

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ February 9-15 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

Could it be a new romance coming your way? Tuesday, look for signs of interest. Don't second-guess yourself. By Friday, things are crystal clear. Want to secure your romantic status? Try the old-fashioned route: Find the way to your mate's heart through his or her stomach.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

An open mind goes a long way this week. Try patience with friends, especially the Capricorn who keeps turning to you with the same problems and never seems to learn a lesson. Listen carefully. Is advice really what he or she seeks? No, only support. Give it generously.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Feel like a slave to routine? You don't have to change it entirely to jazz it up a bit. Add an extra thing or two to your day. Make it something as simple as reading a new magazine or trying a new toothpaste. Can't think of anything to add? Then subtract a mundane task from your schedule.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Reward yourself for the willpower you've been demonstrating this week. Treat yourself to a relaxing dinner out with a friend or a night out on the town. What a homebody Cancer probably wants most of all is just to return to his or her palace. Make a point of making it extra cozy for yourself.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Subtlety has never been your strong suit, Leo, and this week is no exception. A disagreement with a friend could set you off the deep end. Fight the urge to explode (as you'll want to); you may just dig a hole that even your sweet-talking tongue will have a hard time climbing out of.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

You're looking to people for advice that you can only find within yourself. You probably have the answers already, but you lack the courage to admit them or do anything about them. Start thinking hard about relationships and your future. The choices you will make now will affect you for a long time.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

It's hard to sympathize with your affinity for drama this week, Libra. Must everything really be as crucial as you make it? Let simplicity work for you for once. Try to remember your life is not a movie, so be careful of how you express yourself. Harsh words seldom mean happy endings. Honesty has a strong effect on a Leo midweek.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Missing an old flame? Fight the urge to call him or her, but if you still want to by next week, give in. You'll have more to say with this kind of emotional awakening on your side. Saving and budgeting has paid off. Resist the urge to blow it all on a shopping spree with friends.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Relationships are more tricky now than ever. The ball's in your court. It should be making you happy, but it's making you confused. You can figure out love's facts and formulas with honesty, spontaneity and your heart leading the way. Follow them; they'll never steer you wrong.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Rest, rest and more rest is what you need most of all, Capricorn. Trying to lick a bad cold? It's the only way to go. Stay inside, and bundle up. Get well, and dazzle a romantic partner with a candle-lit dinner on Saturday. Thoughtful touches and special ingredients are sure to impress.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Work is bringing you down this week, but you can pick yourself up. Concentrate on a project outside of the office that takes a lot of effort, energy and planning. Then throw yourself into it. With so much going on outside of work, you won't find the 9 to 5 so humdrum.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

It's time for a change at work, Pisces. Start the week off right by checking the want ads on Sunday. Make finding a new job your priority, and do something to help it along every day this week. Bottom line: Don't settle for something other than what you really want.

HIGHLIGHTS

Marv Albert will call the action during the 47th NBA All-Star Game from Gund Arena in Cleveland. The game, which celebrates the 50th anniversary of the league, airs Sunday on NBC.

NBA All-Star Game looked at from a different angle

When it comes to marketing the popularity of professional sports all-star games, the National Basketball Association stands head and shoulders above the rest. And this year's 47th NBA All-Star Game, airing Sunday, Feb. 9, on NBC, is no exception. NBC will provide viewers a novel look at all the action via Skycam, an innovative camera suspended by cables above the arena floor and operated by remote control. The Skycam is designed to capture the sport's full-court action by "flying" parallel to the sidelines. And with all the fast breaks expected in a game featuring Michael Jordan and Grant Hill, the camera is ideally suited for the event. When NBC introduced the camera in the game between the Chicago Bulls and the Detroit Pistons on Christmas Day, it too often couldn't reach the other end of the floor in time to show more than a distant shot of a basket. But Marv Albert, who will announce the game, says the camera "can be outstanding if supplemented properly with normal shots." So expect more switches to capture close-ups of the slam-dunks that are such a big part of all-star games. NBC, which has carried NBA games since 1990, is the home network for 82 telecast sources that will televise the game to a potential audience of 600 million people in 172 countries. It doesn't take Albert long to explain the popularity of the NBA around the world. "These players put on a great show and people are star-struck around the city that has the All-Star Game," he says. "This game attracts people more than other sports because of its speed, flashy shots and the festivities. It also attracts many film and TV stars." This year's All-Star Game, which celebrates the league's 50th anniversary, will include a halftime show featuring the 50 greatest players in NBA history as selected by a panel of media representatives, former players and coaches, and team executives.

Chris Potter

Q: What can you tell me about Chris Potter? Where can I write to the cast of Silk Stalkings? -S.L. Brown, Wallingford, Conn.

A: Born in Toronto, Potter was discovered by actress Martha Henry while performing in a community theater production. She quickly cast him in a Toronto production of Neil Simon's Biloxi Blues, which was followed by a role in Material World, a sitcom that ran for three years.

A number of TV guest appearances ensued, capped by his starring role as Peter Caine in the long-running Kung Fu: The Legend Continues. He and his wife have three children.

Write to him c/o the very active Chris Potter Fan Club (P.O. Box 876, Station F, 50 Charles St. E., Toronto, Ont., Canada M4Y 2N9), which sponsors an annual "Christfest, two days of celebrating Christdom."

Write to his co-stars c/o the show at USA Network, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Q: I say the actor who played the prince in the well-known TV version of Cinderella with Lesley Ann Warren was the same actor who plays Alan Quartermaine on General Hospital. My supervisor says it was someone else. Who is right? -Linda Ivory, Wilmington, Calif.

A: You are, Linda. Stuart Damon is the actor behind both characters.

Q: We at Earth 2 Foundations, the Earth 2 fan club, hope you can shed some light on when the original episodes will be rebroadcast on the Sci-Fi Channel. We have heard rumors that it could be this spring, but that only half the original episodes will air. -Lauren via e-mail.

A: The good news, Lauren, is that the Sci-Fi Channel has purchased rights to all of the original episodes.

The bad news is, they aren't scheduled to begin airing until early 1998, although Sci-Fi media director Karen Reynolds says there's a chance they may start at the end of this year.

Q: Are Joan Fontaine and Olivia de Havilland sisters? -M.W., Pottsville, Pa.

A: Yes. But after Fontaine (born Joan de Havilland) won an Academy Award<sup>TM</sup> for Suspicion, beating her older sister for Hold Back the Dawn, the two were estranged for years.

Q: Who was the actor who appeared as Walter Matthau's young robbery accomplice in Charley Varrick? I always thought he strongly resembled a young Liberace. -Fred Glaude, Lincoln, R.I.

A: You weren't the only one who thought that, Fred. Andrew Robinson, Matthau's Varrick co-star, later played the title role in the 1988 TV movie Liberace - not to be confused with Liberace: Behind the Music, another 1988 TV biography of the keyboard star.

Jay Hammer nails day job on Guiding Light

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

It was supposed to be a one-day job, but that was 12 years ago, and Jay Hammer is still playing Fletcher Reade on Guiding Light.

"I was a writer for the show at the time," Hammer says. "They asked me to do this one-day thing. I guess they liked me better as an actor."

Hammer makes light of his writing, but he was nominated for a Writer's Guild Award.

The actor says he can't believe he is still playing Fletcher after all these years, but he's grateful. "It's a great character, and I like to work," Hammer says.

"It irks me when these people complain about what a tough job this is.

Hey, you come to work, sometimes it is a long day, but you do your job and that's it."

Hammer has always been outspoken, and sometimes that hasn't made his life any easier.

"There was a time when I didn't care very much for what was being written for the show or for Fletcher," Hammer says. "Each day I received a script and then rewrote it, which didn't make the writers very happy."

"After a few months of me rewriting every script, I received one that had Fletcher dressing up in a diaper and crashing a baby shower. Other members of the cast were horrified. But I thought, if they want me to wear a diaper, I'll wear a diaper. It's just a job."

One of Hammer's favorite story lines is his current one. Fletcher and Holly (Maureen Garrett) have a new baby, Meg, with Down syndrome. It is a story that touches his heart.

"It isn't an easy story to watch, but it is an important one. There are 49 million disabled people and they are virtually invisible in the media," Hammer says. "GL has mainstreamed two stories about the disabled with Meg's story and Abigail (Amy Cox), who is hearing impaired."

"Disabled people refer to us as the temporarily abled, because eventually all of us break down in one way or another."
