Fire Marshal says public cooperation helped 1996 fire census down despite drought

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer
In a year when Hereford and Deaf Smith County experienced severe drought conditions, the alarms answered by the fire department in 1996 were only slightly fewer than the previous year.

Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain, who directs firefighting activities for the city and county, acknowledges the cooperation of the public in fire prevention last year. "It could have been worse," said Spain about the number of fires in the first six months of the year.

In his annual report to the City Commission recently, Spain said there were 338 total alarms in 1996, compared with 323 in 1995. Because of the drought, Deaf Smith County implemented a no-burn policy in the spring and renewed it until mid-summer. The move apparently paid off. The number of grass fires last year was only one more than the year before, 71 to 70.

"It could have been worse," said Spain.

Because of bans on use of fireworks, the incidence of grass fires probably was reduced significantly, the fire marshal believes.

The City of Hereford Volunteer Fire Department serves the county along with volunteer departments at Bootleg and Dawn. By contract, the Hereford VFD responds in the county, as first call responder.

Spain's statistics and narrative report to the City Commission show 196 responses within the city last year and 170 in 1995.

County responses were 134 last year and 141 in 1995.

In addition, Hereford volunteer firemen answered eight out-of-county calls last year and 12 the previous year.

The last two years were free of deaths caused by fire, although seven persons were injured in 1996 and one in 1995.

Volunteers gave 9,386 total hours in service to their community, with 6,228 of those hours spent answering alarms and 3,158 in training in the last year.

The previous year, the number of hours volunteered added up to 9,067. Hours spent on calls were 5,512 and on training, 3,555.

Average number of volunteers responding to each alarm was 20.02, slightly higher than the 19.5 in 1995.

Spain estimated that, at the very least, volunteers save the city a million dollars each year, in salaries alone.

"We couldn't afford to pay this many people, fulltime," he said.

As it is, Spain and Johnny Amaro are the only two paid employees in the department, and they are both volunteer firefighters, as well.

Amaro wears two hats as a paid city employee, too. He is assigned to maintenance in the fire department and serves as an arson investigator.

Volunteer firefighters labor long hours in their free time to become proficient and professional in their tasks. In addition to training sessions at home, they attend schools at Texas A&M University and other locations. Equipment maintenance is a source of pride for the department. Trucks are the epitome of spit and polish, shiny clean, and, more to the point, in excellent running condition.

Twelve vehicles are in the care of volunteer firemen. In 1996, those vehicles were credited with total responses of 789. The year before, the number was 775. On average, 2.33 vehicles answered each call last year, compared with 2.5 the year before.

Members of the Volunteer Fire Department elect officers annually. Serving last year were David Spain, fire chief; Robert Murray, assistant chief; Glen Crenshaw, treasurer, and Michael Kitten, secretary. Spain and Murray were re-elected for 1997 with Dean Turney now serving as treasurer and Ricky Prisk, secretary.

Three months last year accounted for 112 alarms, at the height of the dry season.

In April, there were 36, then 37 in May and, the June total was 39. Those three months were flanked by March, with 24 alarms, and with the onset of summer rains in July, the number dropped to 25.

In the remaining months, the numbers were 21 in January, 27 in February, 23 in August, 24 in September, 28 in October, 28 in November and 26 in December.

Deaf Smith County for the most part is 1,500 square miles of sparsely-populated ranch and farm lands, observes Jay Spain.

"We cover a lot of territory," he said.

News Digest

STATE

LOCKHART - Authorities were searching for a man nearly finished with two 30-year burglary sentences who escaped from a private jail Friday, a state prison official said. Cecil Comans, 35, is believed to have fled the minimum security Lockhart Unit operated by Wackenhut Corrections by climbing over a back fence during a heavy fog.

SAN ANTONIO - A group of upper-middle-class thieves who targeted affluent families stole about $4 million in property and cash in more than 75 burglaries before their arrests, authorities said. The San Antonio men named in an 11-count federal indictment made public Friday - used mobile telephones, beepers and stolen vehicles to carry out daring break-ins that netted guns, jewelry, electronic equipment and Persian rugs.

WEST POINT, N.Y. - A West Point cadet acquitted of raping a female cadet during a night of drinking at an off-campus party will go on to be a fine officer, one of his attorneys said. But it was unclear if his accuser would choose to return to West Point. A jury of seven male U.S. Army officers deliberated for five hours Friday before finding cadet James Engelbrecht, 22, of Conroe, Texas, innocent of rape and committing an indecent act.

DALLAS - Tenet Healthcare Corp., the nation's second-largest hospital chain, is considering buying Baylor Health Care System for about $1.2 billion, according to Baylor hospital executives and others involved in the matter.

NATION

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Tomatoes struck in at least six places in Tennessee and Alabama, flattening homes, flipping cars and uprooting a tree that killed a motorist. Rescuers planned to resume a search for possible victims at first light today after a twister destroyed homes south of Nashville.

WASHINGTON - Aiming to prevent more deadly hamburgers and sickening apple juice, President Clinton is seeking $43 million to implement a state-of-the-art early warning system for food contamination. The proposal, which he details today in his weekly radio address, will be part of the budget plan he sends to Congress next month.

BALTIMORE - The female recruit who went public with her allegations that a drill sergeant at Aberdeen Proving Ground sexually harassed her and threatened to kill her if she told is leaving the Army. The woman's claims sparked an investigation last November into the worst military sex scandal since Tailhook.

WASHINGTON - Besieged by questions about fund-raising practices, the White House is defending President Clinton's frequent get-togethers with big donors - including top bankers who sipped coffee with the nation's chief banking regulator and Democratic political operatives. While the events were set up for "sustaining and developing political support," there was nothing wrong in using the executive mansion or having administration officials take part, a presidential lawyer says.

WORLD

LIMA, Peru - Police stage a simulated nighttime raid on the Japanese ambassador's house where rebels held 73 hostages, the latest in a week of stepped-up maneuvers around the compound.

MOSCOW - The Kremlin is quietly expecting the worst to come out of elections in Chechnya, knowing it has little choice other than to go along with whatever happens in the breakaway republic. For Moscow, Monday's vote is the only way to restore a semblance of calm in the tiny southern republic following 20 months of disastrous war against separatists.

United Way reaches 1996 goal

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

The United Way of Deaf Smith County has reached 100 percent of its $132,000 goal. United Way Executive Director Karen Sherrod announced. As of last week, Sherrod said, $132,226.33 had been contributed to the fund-raising campaign.

County Judge Tom Simons served as campaign chairman and Sally Nolen served as assistant campaign chairman.

The Feedlots division reached 131 percent of its $6,000 goal, with $7,855 in donations. John Josseland headed the division.

The Corporate division has raised $1,905, or 127 percent, of its $1,500 goal. The United Way staff served as division heads.

In the Professional division, 127 percent of its $6,000 goal was collected. Their contributions total $7,609.48. The division head was Chris Leonard.

The PACE division raised $60, 878.56, or 111 percent, of its $55,000 goal. Jeff Torbert, Mike Harris and Rodney Bailey served as division heads.

The Seniors division reached 99 percent of its $8,500 goal, with $8,472 in donations. Lester Wagner headed the division.

In the FIRE division, 90 percent of the $5,000 goal was collected. Their contributions total $4,513. The division head was Jeri Bezner.

The Business and Industry division reached 90 percent of its $26,000 goal, with $23,485.80 in donations.

The Public and Federal division raised $5,591.28, or 80 percent, of its $7,000 goal. Janet Walker and Angie Alonzo served as division heads.

In the Agriculture division, 77 percent of its $2,000 goal, with $1,545 in donations. Coby Kriegshauser headed the division.

The Non-profit division raised $3,454.28, or 69 percent of its $5,000 goal. Bobby Boyd served as division head.

The Commerce division reached 62 percent of its $10,000 goal, with $6,195 in donations. Becky McDonald headed the division.

The United Way campaign collected $ 724.93 in miscellaneous contributions.

This year's campaign theme was "Angels Among Us." Alabama, the country and western band, gave the United Way permission to use their song and video, Sherrod said.

United Way volunteers spent several months making presentations to locals businesses and civic organizations, she said.

To help with presentations, Sherrod said, the United Way had a brochure and video of local agencies, volunteers and recipients.

The brochure and video helped to show the United Way supporters that their contributions stay in Hereford, Sherrod said.

Ninety-nine percent of every dollar stays in the community to provide services to those in need. The national dues are the only monies from the campaign that does not directly serve the community, she said.

As part of its dues, the national United Way provides the local chapter with advertisements, videos, training guides and other sorts of information, she said.

The fund-raising campaign supports twelve agencies which include American Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Children's Rehabilitation, Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority, Girl Scouts, Hereford YMCA, High Plains Epilepsy, Kids Inc., Salvation Army, Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence and Senior Citizens Meals on Wheels.

The support of the community made this year's campaign so successful, she said.

Although the campaign has reached its goal, the United Way will accept contributions all year, Sherrod said.

To make a contribution, contact Sherrod or a United Way staff member at 364-5220.

Fire claims 15 people in Hong Kong karaoke bar

HONG KONG (AP) - An arson fire engulfed a four-story nightclub early today as customers were drinking, playing mah-jongg and singing along to pop videos. Fifteen people were killed.

The fire broke out at 4 a.m. at the Top One karaoke club, in the densely built, neon-lit Tsim Sha Tsui area of Kowloon. Police classified it as arson and homicide, and said one man had been arrested for questioning.

Ambulances rushed 29 victims to hospitals, where 10 women and five men were pronounced dead. Two of the 14 injured were in critical condition, according to official statements.

About 80 customers and 20 staff members were inside when the fire was noticed on the first floor, where customers play mah-jongg.

Detective Victor Lo told Radio Hong Kong that police were investigating a report that someone had seen a gasoline bomb being thrown at the club.

Newspapers quoted the club's manager as saying he yelled for people to flee, but that he could not get to the upper floors to warn those in the karaoke rooms because of the fire and thick smoke.

Firefighters said some victims were found lying unconscious in the corridors.

Strict discipline challenges teen drop-outs

Military-style program designed to instill values in at-risk teenagers

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) - One hundred at-risk teen-agers are getting a chance for a future.

The teen-agers, or cadets, have just under two months before graduating from the Youth Challenge Program at the Thunderbird Academy in Pryor.

The class of 1997 is the seventh class to go through the program, which hopes to improve the life-coping skills, and the employability, of youth dropouts by using a military model and strict discipline.

In 1993, Congress provided funding for the National Guard Bureau to conduct the pilot youth intervention program. Oklahoma is one of 15 states to try it.

The program consists of a 22-week residential phase and a 12-month post-residential phase. During the residential phase, the student lives in a quasi-military environment while completing an educational program that focuses on the development of the whole person. After graduation, the student returns home, with the support of an individual mentor.

"The goal of this is to instill in each cadet a sense of self-discipline and community spirit," said Staff Sgt. Ed Goodwin. "This is accomplished by physical training, academic instruction, personal development and life-skills training."

Goodwin said the pilot program ended in 1996 and the academy will have to solicit donations to keep operating.

"There were about 30 to 40 who were weeded out," said academy Lt. Devon Lopez. "This is strictly a voluntary program. We try to build the desire to make them want to stay in the program. For some, it is a last resort."

The program could take up to 160 cadets each cycle. The academy is looking to make each class bigger and overlap classes.

At Thunderbird, the 100 youths are divided into three platoons. Each platoon has a leader.

"The leaders change throughout the cycle," Lopez said. "Everyone will get a chance to be a leader while they are here."

Cadets are required to wake at 5 a.m. seven days a week.

"We have 15 minutes to make our bunk, get dressed and get information," said Cadet Mary Neale of Summit. "If one person is late, the entire platoon has to do pushups."

The cadets go through physical training and have breakfast before going to class at 8 a.m. during the week. Classes last until 3 p.m.

Amanda Lundy has taught math at the academy since its beginning. She said the academics have changed throughout the classes by the way the curriculum is organized and operated.

"We get a little bit more focused each time," Ms. Lundy said. "These students have hit bottom and are on their way back up. They want help and understanding."

She said each academic class has approximately 18 students. This provides more one-on-one interaction between the teacher and the student.

"We are waiting on the results on the GED test the students took in December," Ms. Lundy said. "For those who didn't pass, they can retake it the end of January."

"We will look for alternative methods of funding. We may look at state agencies," Goodwin said.

In Phase I, the youths live at Thunderbird 24 hours a day, seven days a week for 20 weeks. The first two weeks are spent in basic training at Camp Gruber, near Bragg.

There were more than 300 applicants for the current class. About 140 started basic training at Camp Gruber, and 100 remain - 84 men and 16 women.

The curriculum follows the eight-core objective model established by the National Guard Bureau as the criteria for each student attending a Youth Challenge Program.

The objectives are academic excellence; job skills; physical fitness; leadership/followership; health, sex education/nutrition; life-coping skills; responsible citizenship and, community service.

"We provide classes in tax preparation, how to write a check and even how to buy a used car," Ms. Lundy said. "Students are also exposed to the arts and literature."

Cadets have nine levels to achieve different rewards. The highest level is the Director's List.

"The Director's List is the hardest to get on but the easiest to get off," Goodwin said. "It depends on the offense if they fall from their current merit list."

Lopez said the cadets get to participate in a number of outside activities. They get to attend movies, host guest speakers, and, he said, several cadets formed a theater group and performed "Frosty the Snowman" for area elementary school children.

"The cadets go many places as a group," Lopez said. "We are getting ready to go back to Camp Gruber and go through the obstacle course. We take a lot of trips. We don't allow the cadets to lag. There is no time to get bored. Everything we do, we do as a team. We emphasize there is no 'I' in the word team."

There are three counselors at the academy to help the cadets with any problems they may be having. The academy also has its own health services.

For the post-residential phase, the students return to their hometowns to continue their educations or to enter the job market. Each is matched with a volunteer mentor.

"The role of the mentor is to provide the student with a positive role model and coach to reinforce and continue development," Lopez said. "These relationships are monitored."

Oklahoma's program has been selected as the Best All Around Program for two consecutive years, 1994, 1995.

"I think it's a good program," Goodwin said. "It's getting students back in education and back to jobs."

Lawsuit settlement calls for relocation of border residents

CLINT, Texas (AP) - Graciela Jaimes feels she has made real progress during the six years she has struggled to carve a home out of a patch of weed-choked, snake-infested desert.

She has gone from sleeping in a van on a rugged, undeveloped eastern El Paso County lot to living in a modest trailer with no running water, no indoor toilet, not even a heater to stave off the winter chill.

Progress comes in small increments for residents of the border's impoverished colonias, remote subdivisions often lacking even the most basic services. But now Ms. Jaimes is poised to take a truly large step.

An unprecedented lawsuit settlement will have an El Paso developer foot the bill for relocating 21 families that make up East Clint Estates, described as one of the county's worst colonias.

"In the end, it looks like it's all going to turn out all right," Ms. Jaimes said.

The agreement calls for the Rodsky Family Limited Partnership to pay $100,000, to help the families reestablish themselves in two other Rodsky subdivisions.

Rodsky has also agreed to allow the residents to swap their land for property in the other subdivisions, and to pay about $80,000 for the materials needed to install septic systems.

The new areas are still considered colonias, but they are more likely to receive water service and paved roads sooner than East Clint, which some say may not get water for at least 20 years.

"It's not going to solve all the problems. But it's going to be easier," said the Rev. Pablo Mata of the El Paso Interreligious Sponsoring Organization, which advocates for colonia residents.

The deal is unique among efforts to improve the lot of the estimated 400,000 Texans living in colonias spread along the border from El Paso to Brownsville. Most attempts center on extending water and sewerage service to the subdivisions.

Although last year a legislative committee recommended that the state consider moving some families out instead of providing utilities, advocates caution that relocations are not an answer.

"We're talking so many families and so much need. We will always have people moving to where they (relocated families) left," said Leslie Newman, assistant program director for Proyecto Azteca, a housing program in South Texas. "In specific unique situations it could be the best thing, but really it's a matter of weighing and balancing. We definitely don't advocate it as a general solution at all."

The subdivisions are populated by families whose search for affordable housing have led them to outlying developments where they can buy cheap land, often with little hope of ever receiving services.

Some colonias are also known breeding grounds for disease because of unsanitary conditions.

East Clint Estates is a cluster of mostly rudimentary homes and trailers about 30 miles east of downtown El Paso and just outside the town of Clint. It has no running water or sewerage and is accessible only via dirt roads.

Residents rely on weekly visits from tanker trucks for the water they use to bathe and clean their homes. They haul in drinking water from an obliging church and a lumberyard about 10 miles away.

"Can you imagine living here without water?" said Yolanda Martinez, another resident. "Having to take baths with a little cup? Having to fix cars three times a month because they're ruined by the road? It's not easy."

The county government saw that and in 1994 sued Rodsky under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act, alleging the developer failed to properly notify buyers that they had to install sewage systems before moving in.

Rodsky attorney Robert Neill Jr. said the partnership maintains it has done nothing wrong, but members "have expressed their agreement" with the settlement.

Officials added that the sale of the lots created a public nuisance and a health hazard - sewage was left in the open and open cess pools were created.

"It is one of the worst colonias that we've run across," said County Attorney Jose Rodriguez.

Yet, leaving it still represents a sacrifice for residents, particularly those who live in permanent structures.

The settlement only allows them to recoup two-thirds of the money they have invested to improve their property, including home construction.

Senorio Chavez Jr., an East Clint resident for more than four years, said he won't move because the settlement money can't begin to compensate him for the $25,000 he estimates he has put into his property. Chavez is likely to be the only one staying behind.

"It's no different where they're (other residents) at and where they're going to be," he added. "They're going to start all over."

Ms. Martinez concedes her head swims when she thinks about having to replace the house she lives in now, one of the better constructed buildings in the development.

"I think it's going to be difficult for everyone," she said. "(But) this is for the best."

If you noticed an article this week about the search for a new superintendent, the school board announced that the community would be involved in the process. There will be an open "town meeting," and consultants will conduct profile sessions with persons chosen to participate.

This may or may not change the complaints already lodged by some district taxpayers, who are critical of paying consultants to find a superintendent. "We elected school board members to take care of things like that," is a statement made by a few school patrons.

Maybe it's my age or my upbringing, but the thought crossed my mind, too. However, I know times have changed and I try to change with them when they make sense.

I can think of a few times when it might have saved a lot of headaches if I had hired a consultant to find me an editor. But, I didn't have the money in my budget, nor did I think I could pass the cost on to my advertisers.

I'm not sure we should expect our school trustees to do this job without some help. We have seen our pastor search committee at the church handle the job of finding a new preacher, putting in many extra hours, to check out prospects...but I'm not sure that's a fair comparison, either. Maybe it's not a big deal. There may not be that many folks who feel the use of consultants is an unnecessary expense.

One of the latest studies on the news consumer reveals a wide disparity in news interest and consumption among demographic groups.

Keeping up with the news is at least somewhat important to almost all Americans, but people differ radically in what interests them, which media they use, and how often they follow the news.

"Profile of the News Consumer" was the title of a report issued by the Radio and Television News Directors Foundation. Overall, television was the primary source of information for 56% of the general public, followed by newspapers (24%), radio (14%) magazines (1%) and online (1%).

While 54% of Americans said keeping up with the news was very important, there was a gap between those under 30 who believe that (40%) and those over 50, to whom keeping up with the news is very important (65%).

Following the news and retaining it do not necessarily go hand in hand. Newspaper readers - those who said newspapers were their primary source of most information - answered more questions correctly than those who used other media.

What kind of news interested those in the study? About two-thirds said they were very interested in news about their own towns and communities. This was followed by state news (59%), the country as a whole (56%) and the weather (53%).

Video is trip down memory lane

Unfortunately, or fortunately, depending on your age, Christmas will be here again before you know it. Isn't it miraculous how close Christmases are the older you get!

Anyhow, since the 1996 event is now just a fading memory, we'll have our photographs and videotapes to remember it. Which brings me to my point...

Surely, there are many families, especially in my age range, who took lots of black and white photos of their children as they arrived. And, some of us indulged in a bit of extravagance by purchasing an eight-millimeter movie camera.

After many years of wondering what happened to the many reels of my children, other relatives and friends of more than 35 years ago, the film surfaced last summer. I won't go into detail on that. Suffice to say, I was relieved that it was retrieved and miffed that it had been "hidden" so long.

Now, I know I'm just one of many who have seen fit to have this old movie film (silent, if you will) transferred to that modern miracle, videotape. My step-granddaughter performed the service for me, after I organized the film, by date. Fortunately, my late husband was very meticulous about some things and each of the 36 boxes was labeled, as to date and subject matter.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Because he was an avid football fan, we had more footage from Texas Christian University games than I cared about. In the transfer, some of that was eliminated, thank goodness.

The tape tells much about our lives from the birth of our first daughter until she was about six and her sister, four. It's a nostalgia trip that we've all enjoyed. Grandparents and great-grandparents of my girls are recorded for them to savor and show their children when they are old enough to appreciate it.

While viewing the tape with my sister, her daughter and a grandson, we were more than amused at the 14-year-old boy's questions about appearance and clothing seen. And, as very small children, both my girls were, while not bald, very close to it. They had, basically, a strip of hair down the middle.

"Why did those kids have Mohawk haircuts?" my nephew repeatedly asked. We could not convince him that it wasn't premeditated. It was something that just happened. The teenager also had difficulty accepting that a plumpish child was his mother, at the age of about six months.

While visiting friends downstate, I showed them the tape. It was fitting because the first person to appear on our film was their daughter, about five years old at the time.

The amazing thing about the project is the reproduction of the old eight millimeter film to videotape. I would have thought that the film would have been cracked and streaked but it wasn't. I guess it simply says something about the quality of the film in the first place, by a manufacturer that we all know and love. From a personal viewpoint, the video is a trip down memory lane. However, there are segments that my memory simply will not compute.

Who are some of the people in the film? Heaven only knows, because I don't. After several run-throughs, the names of some of the players came back to me. They were people from another life. People who played a role in my life, then disappeared.

As we viewed the tape, it became abundantly clear that my daughters had no more idea than a goose who some of the "actors" were, with a few notable exceptions.

There were no reels in the collection that represented our life after we returned from a sojourn in New York. Why, I can't recall.

While the tape jogged some memories for me, I also saw my youth passing before my very eyes. Young and thin. Not old and fat.

Being a nostalgia-oriented person (is that a surprise?), I treasure this video. Maybe someday I can share with my grandchildren and they will, too.

In converting to tape, my step-granddaughter added background music to the old films, "Memories, Memories," to enhance the viewing. She didn't need to remind me with a song.

Editorials from around the State

By The Associated Press

El Paso Times on health insurance for children:

More than 1.3 million Texas children do not have any health insurance protection. ... Unfortunately, children who lack the proper nutrition, health care and attention in their early years may not reach their full potential, either physically or mentally.

Both federal and state governments should be concerned about the number of medically unprotected children. Deprived children do not always develop the same capacity to produce as adults as their more fortunate peers. And no city, state or nation can easily afford a generation of citizens unprepared to meet their obligations.

Aware and concerned about the growing problem, Texas lawmakers have submitted a bill to establish a statewide, affordable health insurance program for children.

The Texas Healthy Kids Corporation is a non-profit organization that will rely on corporate and charitable donations. The federal government also will pitch in. President Clinton has included $750 million a year in his new budget to provide health insurance to children. Parents, too, will be required to pay, if on a sliding fee scale. That's as it should be.

House Bill 3 is expected to pass during the legislative session with huge bipartisan support. It should. ...

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on results of welfare reform:

There may be hope yet for real welfare reform. President Clinton is serious about making reform work. And House Speaker Newt Gingrich may also understand the situation better than he had led us to believe.

Clinton wants some changes in the law he signed last year, but first of all he is encouraging America's private sector to provide jobs for people who will be leaving the welfare rolls.

And last week, Gingrich - appearing on Jesse Jackson's television talk show - said: "The Congress can't walk off and ignore this... people will come to the end of their (welfare) availability and they'll be right back in the poorhouse except now it will be a state government or county government (responsible for them)."

Exactly. Congress has erased the federal welfare entitlement, passing the responsibility to the states along with some strict guidelines and not quite enough money. But that is not the end of the mission. The federal government cannot dust the chalk off its hands and walk away claiming victory. To do so would be a bigger tragedy for America's poor - children, especially - than the "cycle of welfare dependency" that reform is supposed to cure.

Governors, county officials and mayors are concerned. In Massachusetts, a Republican governor wants his state to spend an extra $40 million to provide necessities for 30,000 legal immigrants who will lose benefits under new federal law. Last month in Wisconsin, the state announced that it would spend an extra $25 million on child care. (The Congressional Budget Office estimates a $1.4 billion shortfall in federal child-care funding.) In several states, authorities note a rise in homelessness and hunger this winter, and they hope that welfare changes are not responsible.

States, counties, private business, churches and community organizations have roles to play if poor families are to survive the transition and become productive, but the real responsibility still rests in Washington. The president and Congress must see that reform works, for they will be blamed if it fails.

The Lufkin Daily News on governor's property tax cut:

Even before it convened, the 75th Texas Legislature had already earned a place in the record books.

For the first time in 125 years, the Republican Party controls one of the two legislative chambers. But Gov. George W. Bush doesn't want this session to be a one-shot wonder.

When he was elected two years ago, even the most die-hard of Republican supporters would admit in private that young George would have a difficult time being as effective as the personable Ann Richards.

To everyone's surprise, Bush has not only showed remarkable maturity and nonpartisanship as governor, but he has won the respect of the Democratic leadership in the House and Senate.

For a Texas governor to be basking in the light of a high approval rating at the mid-point of their term and to see those numbers go through the floor as an election approaches is a fact that is not lost on Bush. If anything, he is a quick study. He doesn't want what happened to Richards in 1994 to happen to him in 1998.

So, with an eye firmly looking at the next election, Bush has been touting his $1 billion property tax relief package designed to take some of the burden of funding schools off the backs of property owners.

The only problem with promising to eliminate $1 billion in revenue collected from homeowners is that the money has to be made up from some other revenue source.

- Right now there are three options:
- Higher sales taxes.
 - A new gross-receipts tax on business revenue, or

- A new business-activity tax, which would tax the difference between the sales and costs that a business incurs.

Some lawmakers are suggesting a "hybrid" combination of levies might be the way to go.

But whichever plan or combination of plans becomes the magic pill, the inescapable fact is that taxpayers won't be getting a $1 billion tax break, instead they'll just be paying it at the checkout counter in the form of a higher sales tax or higher price on goods.

Bush's feel-good tax break will no doubt make his re-election in '98 an easy one. His only real competition - Comptroller John Sharp - has yet to get ahead of the curve and has been stuck playing catch-up.

Country might be moving forward, Americans say

By CALVIN WOODWARD
Associated Press Writer
CULPEPER, Va. (AP) - The downtown hardware store briskly moves merchandise again. The drugstore with the old lunch counter jams people in for barbecue. Folks are coming off welfare in these Blue Ridge foothills.

Progress, by any measure. It's felt here in Culpeper, where Bill Clinton went to church during a bus trip to his first inauguration.

It's felt widely, but fitfully, among the almost 150 people across America who were asked by Associated Press reporters to size up Clinton and the country at the midpoint of his presidential journey.

Where's America going? Just possibly ahead, they say.

"There seems to be a hunger for something that really counts," offers the Rev. Ted Fuson, pastor at the Culpeper Baptist Church. "That bodes well for America."

In Oregon, Lake Oswego restaurateur Tom Hume pulls a wad of cash from his pocket and lets that speak for itself.

Others aren't so sure. "We're drifting and this is dangerous for us and the world," says labor attorney Ransom Ellis Jr. in Springfield, Mo.

As Clinton's second term gets set to begin Monday, expectations appear to be as modest as the ideas from his campaign - keep working the budget into balance, cut some taxes, do something about health care, steady the course.

"To me, he's just average," said William Theaman, 36, of Indianapolis. "That's what I like - average."

Credit for what's right in people's lives is offered grudgingly to a man re-elected with support from not quite half of those who bothered to vote.

And questions about Clinton's conduct of his business and his personal life nag at many citizens otherwise drawn to him. It may not rain on his inaugural parade, but there's a drip, drip, drip.

"All the scandals going on, he's had too many," said Jennifer Bjorkland, 28, of Portland, Ore. "They can't all be fake or created by the Republican Party. I've kind of lost respect for him."

Because of him, despite him, regardless of him, there is a recognition that conditions have improved.

There's a sense the lights are on at the White House.

"I think he's awake," said Laconia, N.H., landscaper Bill Herbert, 49, just back from ice sailing on Lake Winnepesaukee. "I don't think we've had a president for a long time who was awake."

Hardly a ringing endorsement. Moods and circumstances are mixed.

One in five children lives perpetually in poverty. Parents and politicians decry the public schools and mean streets, and worries about moral and social decline run deep.

The economic expansion, third longest in history, is almost six years old. No wars engage the country.

"I think this country is moving forward," says Fuson, new pastor at the church where Clinton worshiped in January 1993 on his way to Washington.

It's possible, he says, that "we may look back and say, that was a creative bunch of things done."

The sermon Clinton heard that Sunday four years ago was about sticking to convictions. Some say Clinton just blows with the wind.

Fuson, a conservative, says he's made some tough calls.

In an office cluttered with tax forms and mementos of his Merchant Marine and Navy past, Culpeper accountant Ronald J. Warner, 70, talks about lost honor.

"These continual, non-ceasing scandals and improprieties," he says,

"they're legion."

"Let's go on and do something about Social Security. Let us do something about Medicare. Let us go on. The country needs to be governed."

Joblessness in Culpeper County has tumbled in two years almost to half the national rate. The cozy brick social services office so far has managed to find jobs for most of the welfare recipients now required to work.

Evelyn Barbour commutes two hours to cook at a diner. Betty Carter works at the Thrift Shop, making deals on old cups and $2 toasters with elderly customers in ragged coats.

"Jesus said the poor you will always have with you," Fuson says. "How are you going to deal with them?"

"I think things are getting better for us," said custodian Dudley House, 77, mopping up slush tracked into his St. Louis building.

"But I hope he doesn't let them take the welfare away from people who really need it."

"I'm on welfare and I can tell you it still needs to be cleaned up," asserted Joeline Jansen, 20, working in an Albuquerque, N.M., gas station store.

In Louisville, Ky., college student Pamela Gentry said Clinton's ability to communicate helps the country.

"He speaks in a way I can understand as a young person, and my grandmother - who was raised back in segregation - can understand, and my mother and middle-age people can understand."

Some write off the character of all politicians.

"The thing you have to ask yourself is: 'Is this person doing anything useful?'" offered Lucy Gardner Cannon, 35, a Buffalo, N.Y., proofreader and a liberal. "I don't have to sit down and be his buddy."

Others see no character problem at all.

"I see the emotion, the tears and I see the jubilation," said Diana Shelton, 50, an Atlanta Democrat. "Somebody like that can't be all that bad."

BIBLE BAPTIST CHURCH

Does a person have to be Baptized to get to Heaven?? Notice some verses people use to prove this. In Acts 15:7-11 Peter corrects what he said in 2:38, also read 16:30-31. In 8:37 The man believed then he was Baptized vs 38. In 22:16 Paul was already saved, Ananias called him "BROTHER" in 9:17, and said: Be "FILLED" with the H.G. not "Receive" the H.G. You are commanded to be filled in Eph 5:18. Rom 6:3-6 There is no water, it is a Spiritual Baptism 1 Cor 12:13, Mat 3:11, Mk. 1:8. There is only one Baptism Eph 4:5 the rest are only figurative 1 Pet 3:21. Remission of sins is not Water Acts 19:1-3 they were Baptized by John and didn't receive the H.S., Remission is Mat 26:28, Heb 9:22. Acts 10:44-47 Cornelius received the H.G. then was Baptized. John 3:5 the answer lies in vs 6 "FLESH" & "SPIRIT" referring to being born of a woman & then being born of the Spirit.

Angry Girl Scout leaders start "cookie rumble" with council

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) - If you're looking for Thin Mints and Samoas in the Philadelphia suburb of Mount Laurel, keep looking.

Leaders of 27 Girl Scout troops in southern New Jersey have begun a sales slowdown as a protest after their governing council denied them an extra dime per box from the proceeds.

The slowdown appears unprecedented in 61 years of annual cookie sales by the 2.5 million-member organization, which sold 174 million boxes of Do-si-dos and other treats in the United States and its territories last year.

"I'm not aware of (anything like) that at all any place in the country," Marianne Ilaw, spokeswoman for the Girl Scouts of the United States of America, said Tuesday.

The trouble in Mount Laurel, a middle-class city of 31,000, began in November when community coordinator Jan Snyder said her troops weren't satisfied with the 50 cents they received per $3 box sold - even though that was up from 40 cents last year.

Snyder requested 60 cents per box from the South Jersey Pines council, in exchange for a guaranteed sales average of 110 boxes per scout.

"We feel (the council) has been taking advantage of them. They need to give us more money and they need to operate on less," Snyder said.

"It was really too late to act on it this year," council spokeswoman Joanne Goldy said, because sales were starting Jan. 10. The council governs 11,000 scouts in six southern New Jersey counties.

Besides, she said, the council administrators did not want to be unfair to other troops. "How would the people in the next town feel if they weren't offered the same thing?"

Twenty-seven Scout troops are selling only the minimum 12 boxes required to participate in other Scout fund-raising. Eight troops in Mount Laurel are ignoring the slowdown. The sale ends Feb. 17.

Currently, the bakery gets 81 cents per box, troops get 50 cents, and the council spends the remaining $1.69 on maintaining three Scout camps and other properties, recruiting and training troop leaders, fund-raising and administration.

The Burlington County Times, in a recent editorial titled "Cookie rumbles," criticized the adults for "coming dangerously close to ruining it for the kids."

"Yes, another part of America that is supposed to be simple, wholesome and helpful has broken down into a nasty dispute."

Lady Whitefaces harvest difficult win over Pampa

by CRAIG NIEMAN
Brand writer

The Lady Whitefaces pulled off a two point, three overtime victory over Pampa here Friday night in front of a full house of cheering Hereford fans.

The 74-72 win improves the varsity girls' record to 20-6 on the season. The first time ever playoff bound Lady Whitefaces are now 9-2 in district play with their only losses coming at the hands of Canyon, who are now ranked number one in the nation according to USA TODAY.

Hereford held their biggest lead in the game at halftime with a six point margin, 34-28. Still up by five at the end of three periods, Pampa finally tied the game at 47 apiece with 4:20 left in regulation. The two teams traded baskets and free throws the rest of the way, but Pampa lost four starters to fouls and Hereford's Julie Rampley also fouled out. At the end of four quarters and tied at 56-56 the game continued into overtime.

In the first overtime both teams hit six free throws, one two pointer and one three pointer each to again tie the game at 67-67. Scoring became tougher in the second overtime as each team hit a basket and a free throw during the four minute extra and the 70-70 tie brought on a third overtime period.

Hereford's Sarah Ramey put the Lady Whitefaces up by two with her second basket of the evening, but Pampa came right back as Jennifer Jones hit from ten feet to tie it again at 72-72 with under a minute left. With forty seconds on the clock Pampa's McKinley Quarles missed on two tries from the charity line.

Battling full court pressure, Hereford got the ball to Kendra Wright who was fouled driving to the basket with only eight seconds remaining. Pampa called their last time out trying to ice Wright and plan their last shot attempt, but to no avail as the cool Wright calmly went out and nailed both free throws to put the game away 74-72.

Head coach Eddie Fortenberry commented, "We haven't been shooting free throws very well and of course I was concerned. Here we were in as much of a pressure situation as you can imagine and Kendra came to the bench in the time out and said "I've got it", then she went out and hit both of them."

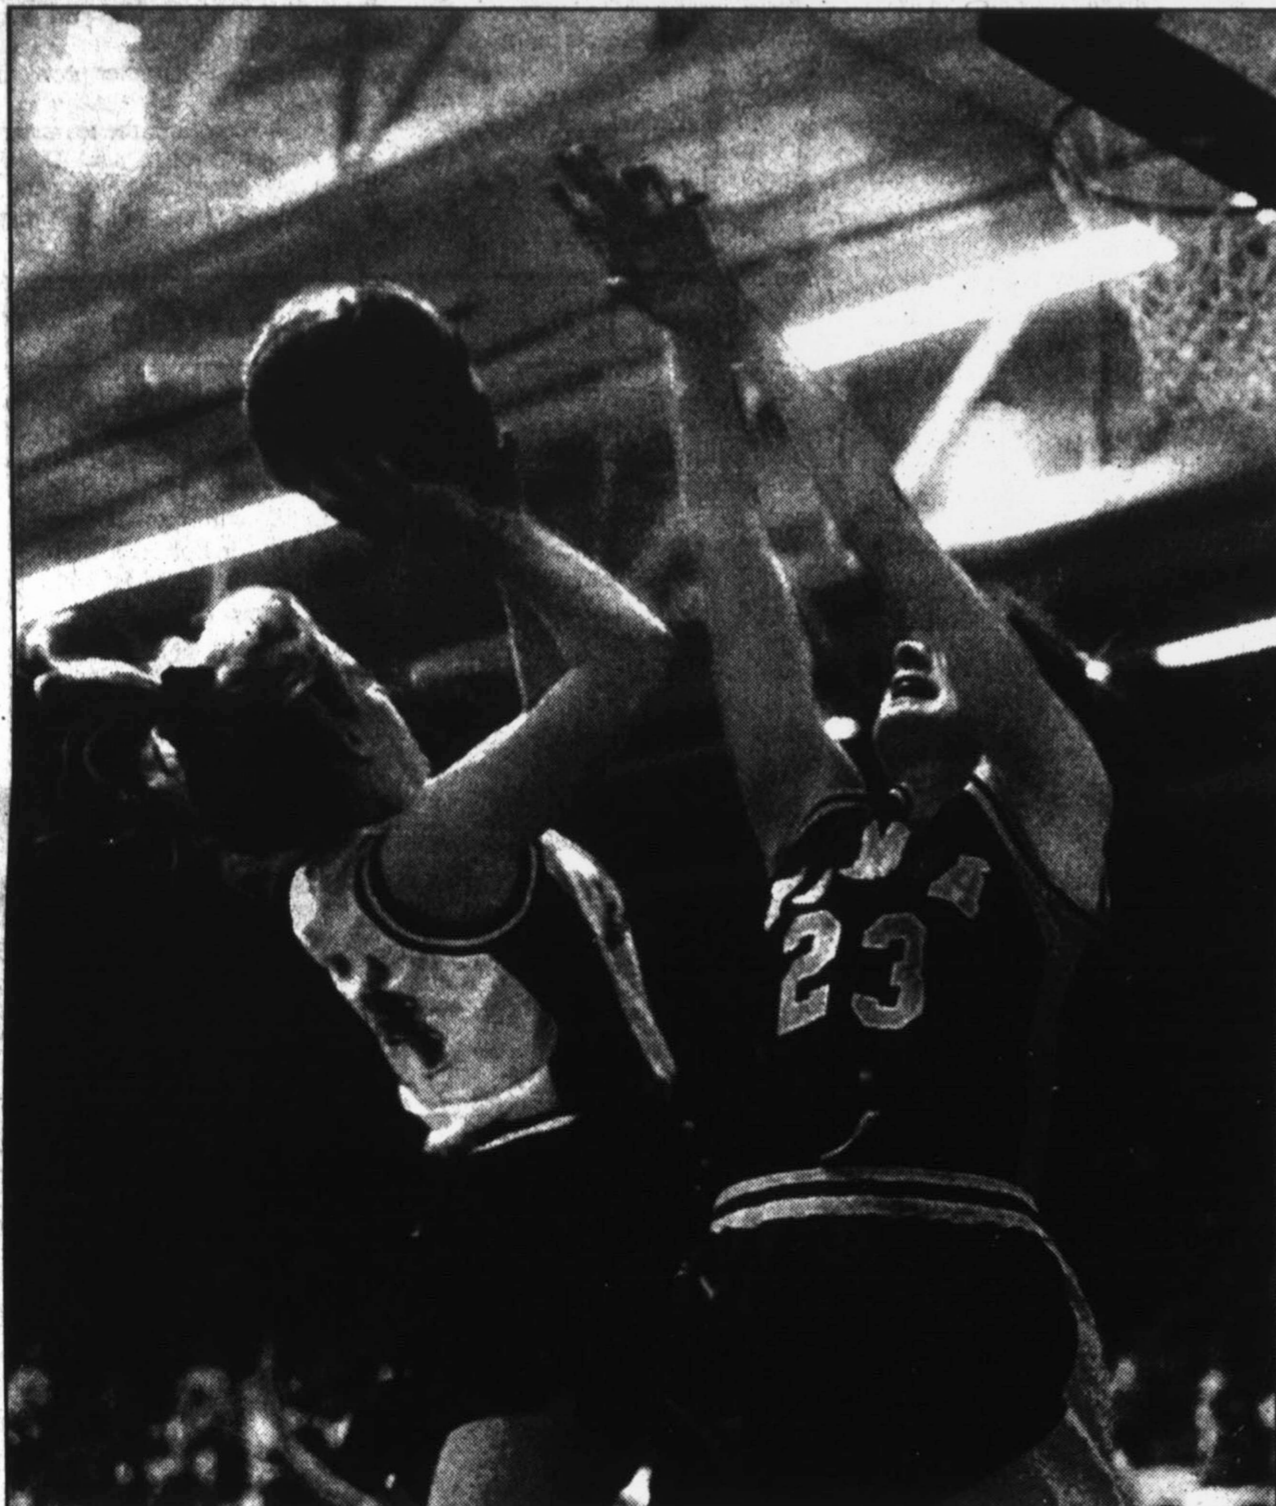

"With three overtimes it takes a great team effort and a lot of composure to win, Fortenberry went on. Our fans were a great help, I want to emphasize that. And when Rampley went out on fouls, we had some players that had to step up and they did big time. At the same time, I have to give Pampa credit for playing as hard as they did."

The Lady Whitefaces play their last district contest on Friday the 31st at Randall.

The Hereford JV girls also won their game against Pampa, 40-30. Tori Walker led the way for the junior varsity with 11 points.

Whiteface boys roll past Pampa, 72-59

by CRAIG NIEMAN
Brand writer

The Hereford Whitefaces rolled over the Pampa Harvesters in 1-4A district action here Friday night 72-59.

A stingy defense and the hard charging back court duo of Isaac Walker and Jonathan Keenan provided the punch for the big win.

The two guards combined for 37 points and were sent to the free throw line a total of 22 times.

Walker converted nine of twelve free throws while Keenan's stroke netted him eight of ten. Junior forward, Bryant McNutt, the Herd's only non senior filled the lanes and crashed the boards to have his own double figure outing with 16 points.

Hereford grabbed the lead early and never relinquished. At one point, with 3:09 remaining in the first half, the Herd had Pampa so bewildered that after a time out, Pampa was whistled with a technical foul when they inbounded the ball with six men on the court.

Halftime saw the Herd go to the locker room with a 17 point lead, 34-17.

Scoring was more even in the second half but Pampa could not close the gap and also saw three players foul out.

Head coach Randy Dean said, "This is a great win for us - I thought we really went out and played hard to earn the spread in points that we ended up with."

"One of the keys to the game was to stop the penetration. They got around us a couple of times early in the game, but after that we really shut it off by moving our feet - in one stretch Pampa went without scoring for six minutes," Dean said.

Hereford is still in a battle for a playoff spot and will know more after other district action on Tuesday night brings all the teams to an even amount of games played. "These guys have really battled back after a couple of tough ones in the first round (district play) and now have themselves in good position.

The junior varsity boys also won their game against Pampa 61-47. A balanced scoring attack was led by Jeremy Urbanczyk with 14 points while Greg Ewing totalled 13 and Bryan Mathews with 11.

All the Hereford teams see action next at Randall on Friday the 31st.

VARSITY BOYS points, free throws, fouls

Hereford - Walker 19,9/12,3; Keenan 18,8/10,3; McNutt 16,8/10,2; Kubacak 7,3/6,3; Hill 4,0/0,2; Myers 3,0/0,Reinauer 2,2/2,1; Schumacher 2,0/0,3; Sherrod 1,1/2,0; Pampa - Larson 19,6/7,3; Young 10,1/2,FO; Lemons 8,2/3,0; Meek 7,1/2,2; Wilbon 7,1/1,FO; Brown 6,1/2,1; Osborne 2,0/0,FO.

No you don't

Defensive play by C.J. Kubacak (44) and Trip Tobison (34) thwarts a drive to the bucket by Pampa's Davin Lemons (23). The Whitefaces thwarted Pampa all night long Friday en route to a 72-59 district win over the Harvesters at Whiteface Gym.

Olympic swimmer inspires swim team formation

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When Olympic Gold Medalist Josh Davis visited Hereford youngsters in December, he projected an image that surely could impress any youngster. Promoters of the new city Sunfish Swim Team feel the program will give young swimmers an opportunity to use their skills as Davis has.

Practice will begin Monday for two groups of youngsters, age seven to 12 and 13 to 18, at the Hereford Aquatic Center. Each group will meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Both will begin at 4 p.m. with the younger group knocking off at 5:15 p.m. and the older swimmers at 6 p.m.

It's not too late for children and teens to get into the swim.

When Davis, who collected three Gold Medals in swimming events at the Atlanta games, came to town to visit his in-laws, Donnie and Darlene Cornelius, he gave time at HAC to encourage young persons to look to swimming as a sport.

He is a role model that Sunfish Coach Danny Kilanowski believes could be beneficial to any swimmer, or aspiring competition swimmer.

However, Kilanowski is quick to point out that the purpose of a swim team is not simply competition with other swimmers.

"We want to create interest in the community -- we also want to make sure it is a community project," he declared.

Since the aquatic center is city-owned and operated, the facility and programs are open to the entire community, he reminded.

"There are fees for a swim team, but we are committed to providing services for all youngsters," Kilanowski added.

Hereford Mayor Bob Josseland reiterated the city's policy of not denying access to HAC programs by any child because of financial limitations.

"No kid will be turned away because of money," said Josseland.

While a goal of a swim team is competition with other teams, the overriding reason is not to win medals or to earn recognition.

Swimming is an "alternative" for some youngsters who are neither interested in nor physically suited to such sports as baseball, football and basketball, said Kilanowski.

"It's a different outlet -- plays to a different interest group," he continued.

In communities where swim teams have been in existence many years, the value has been obvious. If there were no benefits, programs would not have continued.

Sandra Kilanowski, HAC director, said swim team members and parents are "notoriously close," a factor that is helpful to the program as well as the youngsters.

"They do things together a lot," she added.

Since swimming is a sport that can't be construed as good for everyone, it does allow youngsters who jump in to develop skills they might not have known they had.

And, it's not too late to start, as Davis mentioned when he was in Hereford during the Christmas holiday. He told his young audience that he didn't start swimming until he was 13 years old. He and his wife, the former Shantel Cornelius, met while students at the University of Texas in Austin.

Since Hereford schools do not offer a swimming program, the city's program affords an opportunity for participation outside regular school programs.

Both Danny and Sandra Kilanowski believe that swimming, as are other sports, is a confidence-building activity, increases self-esteem and provides an avenue for participation with others.

coach, is involvement of parents. Parents are needed to do so many things that the Kilanowskis are reluctant to start naming them.

One of the main contributions of an active parent group is encouragement of their children. But, more tangible work is done in arranging transportation to meets and other necessary duties.

Before any of this can happen, though, the team needs youngsters who are willing to work and find success in their efforts.

Lakers, Clippers win

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer

Two home games for Los Angeles teams brought redemption for the best big man on each squad.

Shaquille O'Neal and Loy Vaught bounced back from their worst games of the season as the Lakers and Clippers won Friday night.

O'Neal, who had a season-low 14 points in Monday's win over Dallas, scored 33 points as the Lakers defeated the Golden State Warriors 114-97.

Vaught, who failed to score and committed six fouls in a loss to Seattle on Thursday, scored a season-high 31 points on 15-of-18 shooting as the Clippers edged the Denver Nuggets 114-111.

"I'm very glad that I was able to bounce back," Vaught said. "I thought about the donut from the Seattle game and only playing a few minutes. I know I'm not that type of player and I just wanted to come out and make things right again. I guess I played a little more focused."

In other games, Portland defeated Phoenix 115-105, Charlotte beat New York 113-104 in overtime, Atlanta downed Washington 117-105 in overtime, Sacramento beat Philadelphia 107-92, Orlando edged Boston 121-117 in overtime and San Antonio defeated Dallas 97-87.

O'Neal's 33-point effort was backed up by rookie Travis Knight, who had 16 points and 15 rebounds - both season highs - before leaving after 28 minutes with leg cramps.

His 11 offensive boards fell two short of the Lakers' record shared by Vlade Divac and Magic Johnson.

"He's around the glass on both ends. That's what we want our big people to do," Lakers coach Del Harris said of Knight. "Shaq draws all the bees and it leaves the honey on the weak side. If he doesn't score, you can just go in there and clean up."

The Lakers rallied to regain the lead in the third period and then dominated the fourth. Los Angeles outscored Golden State 11-4 to open the final 12 minutes and took a 99-87 lead with 6:04 remaining. O'Neal got the sellout crowd on its feet with two straight slam dunks over Warriors center Todd Fuller to end the spurt.

"They are all starting to get a feel with what it's like to play with a dominant force that probably has an advantage over every other center in this league," Warriors guard B.J. Armstrong said of O'Neal. "He's a force to be reckoned with."

Clippers 114, Nuggets 111
At Los Angeles, Vaught, a seventh-year forward, played with greater intensity and made his first five shots following his worst game as a pro.

"I walked onto the bus last night," coach Bill Fitch said, "and the only thing I said was, 'Loy, did you shower?' He said yeah, and I said 'What for?' And he said, 'That's cold, coach.' He knew where I was coming from."

Charles Outlaw had 18 points for the Clippers and Brent Barry tied a season-high with 17, seven of them in the final 1 1/2 minutes.

Barry's two free throws gave Los Angeles a six-point lead with just 6.1 seconds left, but the Clippers nearly blew it.

Mark Jackson hit a 3-pointer with 2.3 seconds on the clock and LaPhonso Ellis, who had 23 points, intercepted Rogers' long inbound pass in front of the midcourt line. He threw up a desperation bomb to tie it, but it bounced off the rim as time expired.

Ector Co.'s first black sheriff won't dwell on race

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Last fall, R.J. "Reggie" Yearwood kept the most important contribution to his first political campaign in a desk drawer.

"This little old lady came into the office one day and told me she wanted to help me become the new sheriff," said Yearwood, behind his new desk at the Ector County Law Enforcement Center. "She reached into her purse and pulled out 40 cents and asked if that would help."

Yearwood said he tried to turn it down but the woman refused, feeling proud that she could contribute. The money was a pittance, but the effect it had on Yearwood's confidence was huge.

"That 40 cents won me the election," said Yearwood, who admits he didn't really think he could unseat 16-year incumbent Bob Brookshire until Nov. 3, two days before Yearwood won earned 17,156 votes to Brookshire's 15,111.

The odds didn't appear to favor Yearwood. He's a Democrat in a largely Republican area. He was outspent more than 2-to-1. He had been retired for four years and living comfortably with his wife, Rita.

And one more thing: Yearwood is black, and 95 percent of this West Texas county isn't.

"I honestly believe that race wasn't a factor either way," Yearwood said.

He concedes that many of the votes were more anti-Brookshire than pro-Yearwood. Brookshire angered many fellow Republicans when he fired Capt. Eldon Blount after Blount challenged him in the spring GOP primary.

Brookshire went against the best advice of some of his closest advisors by firing Blount, claiming his adversary's leave of absence never was approved. A jury four months later awarded Blount $381,000 in damages.

Yearwood has nothing but praise for Brookshire, the man who hired him in 1981 after Yearwood had spent 11 years as a deputy in El Paso. Despite the Blount incident and a string of other court awards stemming from Brookshire firings, the ex-sheriff retains many political friends here.

"Sometimes there just comes a time to go," said County Commissioner Bob Bryant, a Brookshire ally and Democrat who represents Ector County's mostly minority south side. "I imagine if you ask Mr. Brookshire, he'd probably tell you he shouldn't have run again."

Brookshire hasn't said much since the election and was unavailable to comment on this story. However, Yearwood credits his ex-boss for letting him use county offices prior to the Jan. 1 changeover.

During that transition, Yearwood conducted numerous personnel interviews with current staffers, many of whom had made racial or otherwise disparaging remarks about him during the campaign.

Heads would roll, folks thought. They thought wrong.

"There are a lot of people here I could have gotten rid of," said Yearwood, who said he let just three officers go based on poor performance. "My job is to have the best-trained staff I can have, and you don't just chop experience like that."

A spirit of forgiveness only goes so far, though. Now that he's in office, a rule against rumors or behind-the-back comments is firmly in place. Termination is the punishment.

Forgiveness seems to come easy for Yearwood, a devout Catholic who takes pride in a crucifix prominently displayed on the wall behind him. However, he also takes into office an inherent toughness he learned in a New York City tenement as a child and in 22 years of Army service, including tours in Korea and Vietnam.

After retiring as a first sergeant, he signed on with El Paso County as a deputy, where he helped develop the department's community outreach programs. He had the same role here after his move, becoming a fixture at schools, community meetings and even on a weekly radio show.

Janet Snedegar, an Ector County assistant purchasing agent, regards Yearwood as "a second father" who would do anything to make the area a better place.

"Years ago, he worked security out at Wal-Mart, and when he would catch teen-agers shoplifting, he would have them put the stuff back on the shelf and buy them a Coke," said Ms. Snedegar of his impromptu food court counseling sessions. "They'd leave crying, and they didn't come back to shoplift again."

Yearwood describes himself as a "zero tolerance type of guy." As an example, he told the story of a time in El Paso when, on the way to work, his partner casually mentioned that Yearwood's oldest son, Reginald, had some outstanding traffic warrants.

"Back this damn car up," Yearwood said to his partner before they took the teen to jail. "My wife got him out that night, and it was kind of cold around the house for about a month."

Reginald is one of 48 deputies under his father's command now, although Yearwood stresses he'll have to earn his way up the ladder like anyone else.

"Don't tell me what happened to my people in the past," said Yearwood, a veteran of a segregated Army. "Some people may have said, 'Well, now that you're in, you're going to hire some blacks.' My answer is, 'Yes, if they are qualified.'"

Whether he likes it or not, he realizes that his race and his job don't usually mix. Among Texas' 254 sheriffs, only one other one is black. Since most West Texas counties were organized after Reconstruction, there's never been a black sheriff in the region.

Yearwood told his force that he wants to see deputies striking up conversations with folks on the street, in shops and in their yards, because he believes that's the only way his deputies truly can know what's going on.

He also intends to set up at least two storefront offices in the outlying areas, allowing rural residents closer contact to deputies.

As for his constituents who see "black" before they see "sheriff," Yearwood said he doesn't have time to worry about it.

"Most of those that didn't vote for me are good people. There are good people here in Ector County," he said. "We're all interested in making this county one of the best. The only way to do that is to look past our differences."

Names in the News

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) - Robert Downey Jr. is getting rave reviews in a court-ordered drug rehab program.

The Oscar-nominated actor is an "enthusiastic participant" in the program, a progress report disclosed.

"So far, so good. I do want to congratulate you on your efforts, and also let you know it isn't over yet," Municipal Court Judge Lawrence Mira told Downey, who looked fit in a dark suit during the brief hearing.

Downey was sentenced Nov. 6 to three years' probation for drug and weapons charges and ordered to a live-in drug rehab program for about three months.

Downey, 31, must continue to pass periodic drug tests and attend self-help programs as an outpatient, even while filming on location in New York and Georgia in the coming months, the judge said.

The actor received an Oscar nomination for "Chaplin" (1992).

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

It's here. It's Super Bowl Sunday again.

For some football fans this means Super Bowl party time. For us, it's more a family time. But still it means not just football, but football and food.

The eating starts at noon with a home cooked meal of meat and gravy, beans, potatoes and hot rolls.

The meat can be chicken fried steak, pork chops or fried chicken. But it has to be fried so that there are drippings left to use in making the gravy.

For my family "beans" translates to "red beans or pinto beans" (all other types of beans are called by their full name) and "potatoes" translates to "french fries." (On rare occasions, I can get away with fixing mashed potatoes, but they have to be made with lots of butter.)

I'm sure the fat content of this menu will be cause for alarm, but keep in mind, it's not a menu for every day or even every Sunday - although it was frequently the menu for Sunday dinner when I was growing up. It's for Super Bowl Sunday.

The menu includes dessert, but this is not served immediately after the meal. Dessert is considered a "half-time" food. It's a good time to stretch your legs, make a trip to the kitchen and serve yourself a slice of still-warm Pineapple Soggy Cake topped with vanilla ice cream.

After this half-time indulgence, it had better be a really exciting game or the third quarter could be "nap time."

Someone will always wake me up for the last few exciting minutes of the game because as soon as it's over, the kids are asking, "What's for supper?"

Seminar on protecting children is planned as service project for Hereford Key Club

Is your home as safe for your children as it can be? If you can't answer that question with a "yes" then you should attend the "Protecting Your Small Child" seminar at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 1 in the Community Center in Hereford.

The seminar is sponsored by the Hereford Key Club. It will be their community service project, so there is no admission fee.

"We felt that this safety seminar for mothers was needed in our community after the tragic loss of a small child due to a home accident. We immediately set to work in early November pulling together community resources to educate mothers on their on the many hazards in and around the home.

"Since we began preparing for this seminar, another small child has tragically died in a home accident. It is our hope that the information provided in this educational program will prevent the loss of any more young children," Key Club President Matthew Artho said.

The Hereford Keywanettes will provide babysitting services at the Community Center for children under the age of four. The children also will be taught safety skills.

The Hereford Police Department, who have distributed flyers on the seminar, will present a bilingual program to mothers and their eldest daughter concerning personal safety and the need for child restraint seats.

The Hereford Regional Medical Center personnel have distributed notices of the seminar to all clinic patients since early December. Their bilingual medical/health safety skills program will concentrate on securing the harmful agents in your home from curious toddlers and small children. Also, HRMC is providing cokes and coffee for the seminar.

Key Club and Anchor Club members will provide training in telephone safety skills and latch-key skills to all children ages 4-12. This training will use the Kinderphone, a phone which allows young children to practice communicating an emergency situation to a responsible adult. The children can call 911 and actually speak through the system to an adult role player without connection to the local phone company.

FirstBank Southwest is assisting in the funding of this training. Also, they are assisting in providing cookies for the seminar.

Study club hears program on its history

The La Afflatus Estudio Club met Jan. 21 in the home of Mary Herring with Aileen Montgomery as hostess.

President Mary Williamson called the meeting to order by asking Roxie Phipps to lead the Club Collect.

After a short business meeting, Alberta Higgins gave a program on the history of La Afflatus Estudio Club.

The club started with Mrs. Bob Higgins getting neighborhood women together in the north part of the county in 1907. The club's original name was "Willing Workers." In the 1930s many meetings were canceled due to dirt storms.

The name was changed to La Afflatus Estudio (The Inspiration Study Club) in 1931.

Emily Suggs displayed a scrapbook containing the first yearbook, 1931-32, and pictures and minutes for all the following years.

Roll call was answered by Virginia Beasley, Virginia Curtsinger, Leola Cook, Opal Elliston, Della Stagner, Louise Streun, Pet Ott, Margaret Baxter, Montgomery, Higgins, Phipps, Suggs and Williamson.

Chamber is accepting nominations

Nominations for Hereford's "Citizen of the Year" are now being accepted at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

The traditional award will be presented at the Chamber Banquet, March 13, by the Hereford Lions Club. L.J. Clark, club president, said the deadline for nominations will be Feb. 7.

Readers who wish to make a nomination should type or print a letter explaining why their nominee should be recognized as "Citizen of the Year." Nominees traditionally are local residents who have contributed time and talents "above and beyond the call of duty" toward making Hereford a better place to live, work and play.

Parenting class offers Spanish

San Jose Community Center will host parenting classes in Spanish from 6-8 p.m. Jan. 27, Jan. 30 and Feb. 3.

The classes are being co-sponsored by the Camp Fire Organization. Camp Fire is presenting the "Parents and Providers as Partners Program."

This program offers general parenting skills to parents and their child care providers. It is designed to offer more consistent parenting practices between the parent's home and the caregiver's home.

Although this program is structured for the information to be given to parents and care providers together, parents or care providers who come without the other are still welcome.

There is no cost for the program. Refreshments and snacks will be served nightly. Free child care will be provided. A door prize of a TV or VCR will be given away as a grand door prize at the end of the third session.

To register, please call Tony Martinez at 364-1064 or Maria Medina of South Plains Health Provider at 364-7688.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: This is for "Trysting in Texas," who tried to justify her cheating with a married man by blaming his wife.

It's easy to be glamorous when you spend only 5 percent of your time with your married lover. You don't have to wash his clothes, see that his suits are pressed, take care of his mother who has had a stroke or bury the family dog that died while he was away on business.

You don't sit with him at the kitchen table trying to figure out how you are going to pay the huge orthodontist bills your child has run up. You never have sex interrupted in the middle of the night by a screaming child who's having a bad dream. And speaking of sex, you have no idea how good his wife is. After all, he's not likely to tell you, "My wife is better in bed than you are, but she had to go to a PTA meeting tonight."

You don't see this guy when the heating unit fails during a blizzard, or the basement floods, or your 16-year-old crashes the family car into a tree. You're not around when he has stomach flu. And he doesn't see you when you feel lousy and look like hell.

Being the Other Woman is a piece of cake compared with being a full-time wife. Being a wife requires commitment, courage, a lot of patience and a willingness to make sacrifices. But I wouldn't trade places with you for anything in the world. -- Gainesville, Va.

Dear Gainesville: You have written a great letter, and I thank you on behalf of all the women whose lives you touched today. Keep reading for more on the subject:

From Los Angeles: My mother liked "trysting" with other men while my father was at work. I'll never forget the day I came home early from school with an arache and caught her with a strange guy. It was the worst day of my life.

Buffalo, N.Y.: May I respond to the Other Woman? Too bad she can't see what is missing in her life or what she is doing to the lives of the men she cheerfully "services."

I was married to a man who cheated on me even though I had his children, cooked his meals, cleaned his house, entertained his friends and put up with his crazy family. It wasn't until I left him that I realized he was a louse with a serious self-esteem problem.

I am now happily married to a man who deserves to be loved. I never worry about him cheating on me, and Lord knows he never has to worry about me or what I'm doing.

Tell "Trysting in Texas" to get into therapy and find out why she is willing to settle for affairs with married men instead of having a committed relationship with a mature male. Too bad she doesn't realize that not only are her married lovers cheating on their wives with her assistance, but she is cheating herself.

Jackson, Miss.: Ten years from now, that self-styled companion for married men is going to be 30 pounds overweight, warming some bar stool waiting for the next loser to hand her a line in order to get her in the sack. She is more to be pitied than censured. I've known a few females who chose to travel that road, and they are a sad and sorry lot.

Now, this is Ann talking. To all the women who wrote (I heard from very few men): Thank you for the most interesting batch of mail in a long time.

Gem of the Day (Credit Kemmons Wilson, founder of Holiday Inns): People who never do more than they get paid for never get paid for anything more than they do.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.) ANN LANDERS (R) COPYRIGHT 1997 CREATORS SYNDICATE, INC.

"Happiness is not something to pursue. It is something we need to let happen."

Find the witness. Find the key. How many suspects can there be? Murder, accusations, suspense . . . the seventh grade science classes are in the process of solving the crime "Who Killed Dexter Mouseworthy?" They are doing this activity to practice using the scientific method and science equipment.

The science teachers would like to thank all the teachers who helped with this project. They also wish to thank Officer Randy Stribling of the Hereford Police Department for his assistance. Actually, the teachers had as much fun as the students with the activity.

The winners of the Soil and Water Conservation Essay contest are Will McGowan, First; Michelle Bernhardt, Second; and Sabra Brownlow, Third. Congratulations to each of these young people. Dona Hendrickson directed this activity this year.

Mrs. Stewart's American history classes have now completed two series of debate over the American Revolution. The Loyalists have been very successful and the Patriots have made some excellent points. This week the students will "wrap up" the last phase of this project and review the entire Revolution late in the week. A special group of volunteers have been debating during HAT period. This serious debating has been judged somewhat like the high school debaters. Look out, high school, here we come! This is very good experience for the students.

Junior Historians have completed Phase II of their Adopt-A-Building project. The Phase III activity will be a video or slide presentation of their research. They will begin the script for this phase this week.

Junior Historians have two presentations scheduled for late February. If you need a program for your group or club meetings, let us know. We have over 60 members who can be ready with short notice! We usually have them work in groups of five to seven for programs. "We won't bring all 60!"

History Fair is scheduled for February seventh. The projects will be set up late Thursday and early Friday in order to be judged before the day is over on Friday. Look for more news on this next week.

"When working becomes the focus of our life, we are living out of focus. Even cameras need adjustments to reflect reality!"

Boat rides (weather permitting) and fishing on Lake Brownwood add popularity to your stay. Lighted tennis courts, horseshoes, billiards, volleyball, shuffleboard, dominoes and card and table games are all popular activities.

A special "Put Some 'Spring' in your Step" theme featuring a costume contest (utilizing flowers) on Thursday afternoon will provide a festive atmosphere to the event. Thursday's theme party will feature some exciting activities and entertainment.

Spring Fling '97! Are you 50 or older? Then it's for you! Each week is limited to 165 participants at a nominal fee. Get away and learn to make the most of the best years of your life. Call your County Extension office today at 364-3573.

Engagement announced

Froilan and Bianca Guerra of Guatemala, Ca., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marleny, to Leroy Jackson. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Juan and Aurora Jackson of Hereford. The couple plans to wed March 8 in Amarillo.

It is not enough to have a good mind. The main thing is to use it well.

Home based at Camp Lejeune and Marine Corps Air Station New River, N.C., Kelso was one of more than 2,000 Marines who traveled more than 26,000 miles while operating as part of the MEU. The USS Saipan ARG included the amphibious assault and flag ship USS Saipan, the amphibious transport dock ship USS Austin and the dock landing ship USS Gunston Hall.

During the deployment, Kelso took part in multinational training for noncombatant evacuation, and humanitarian and maritime operations. The exercise, conducted in Romania among the 24th MEU and Marines from Italy and Romania, was designed to test interoperability between NATO and partner nations' naval forces in conducting joint peacekeeping exercises. Kelso was also involved in smaller field training exercises throughout the Mediterranean region and provided assistance to engineers building bridges in Southeastern Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The 24th MEU is trained to evacuate civilians, rescue downed pilots, conduct reconnaissance and serve as an initial landing force ashore.

Kelso visited Egypt, France, Greece, Israel, Italy, Romania, Spain, Turkey and the Ukraine.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you please explain in your column the hows and whys of an ice-cream headache? — D.S.R.

ANSWER: An ice-cream headache is pain generated when the cold confection contacts the palate. Explanations come in two flavors.

One says the headache comes on from a constriction followed in fast order by the dilation of the carotid arteries, the ones in the neck that supply blood to the brain.

The other explanation — my favorite — sees the ice cream headache as a reflex action brought on by stimulation of the trigeminal nerve, which is one of 12 nerves with a direct connection to the brain. The trigeminal relays messages from facial structures.

Most ice cream headaches are fleeting, although some are severe. One thing is certain: You probably want to get rid of one quickly.

You can abort one by curling your tongue up to where it lies against the palate. That warms the palate, bringing the headache to an end.

The report I'm sending you discusses such things. Others can order my headaches report by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 15, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My niece has tic douloureux. Can you please tell me what this is, and what medication should be used? She now takes Tegretol. — M.C.

ANSWER: Tic douloureux (DOO-loo-ROO) is a brief stabbing facial pain in which the same trigeminal nerve involved in the ice cream headache scenario plays a somewhat different role. In fact, tic douloureux pain has another name that identifies it anatomically — "trigeminal neuralgia."

Again, it's a matter of the trigeminal nerve sending sensations to the brain from facial structures. Here it sends the pain signals from the face with hair-trigger onset. Chewing, talking, brushing teeth, perhaps a gentle breeze against the cheek, all can send the tic douloureux pain shooting through the side of the head, lasting a few seconds to a few minutes. What it lacks in duration, it more than makes up in frequency and severity. The tic douloureux patient is always on pins and needles, never knowing when the next episode will occur.

Tegretol — carbamazepine — is often used for control, although there are other medicine options.

More recently, a number of surgical procedures have been used to physically prevent the nerve response. In one, the surgeon places a tiny sponge between the trigeminal nerve and its abutting artery. Some feel that the pulsation of that artery is what sets off the nerve pain.

Let's hope the Tegretol works for your niece.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My son was told to avoid vitamin C because it would cause kidney stones and gallstones. I always thought C could prevent colds. — H.M.

ANSWER: We need 60 milligrams of vitamin C daily to maintain health, and we get that from any balanced diet that includes fruit and vegetables.

More than what the body currently needs gets excreted by the kidneys. If a person were to go hog wild with C, say to 1,000 mg daily, then there is the possibility of kidney stones forming. Still, even that is rare. I know of no connection between C and gallstones.

Vitamin C deficiency causes scurvy, a sign of which is bleeding gums.

I am skeptical of the idea that C can prevent or cure common colds.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

— YOUR EYES —

Kids Can Be Farsighted, Too

It's not only the middle-aged who have trouble reading small type. Some children with perfectly clear distance vision are farsighted up close; they have a hard time focusing on words. It takes them huge effort and extra energy to see the printed page well enough to learn to read. The resulting headaches can be discouraging. The optometrist can help with a "plus" lens that brings the image forward to the retina. Eye-glasses can improve the child's vision sufficiently to make reading enjoyable. The vision-related headaches usually disappear.

Plus lenses also may be prescribed to help alleviate a muscle coordination problem in a young child, or to help with a perceptual problem. After wearing the plus lens for a prescribed period of time, the child's near vision development may improve enough so that the glasses are no longer needed. It's important, of course, for the child's vision to be checked regularly.

REGAINING RESPONSIBILITY

During the last few weeks, I've had time to visit a few of my favorite books. One of the best is Seeds of Greatness by Denis Waitley. As I reread Chapter 3, I realized there was a column topic worth writing about.

For some time now I've been concerned about how we Americans fail to take responsibility for our own actions. If we are illiterate, we blame the educational system. If we are poor, we blame the government for not providing wealth for us. If we are lazy, we blame business for failing to provide easy jobs. If we engage in crime, we blame the establishment when we're caught and punished. If we smoke and develop lung cancer, we blame the tobacco company. It is never our own fault. There is always a reason for our short-comings of failures. We have forgotten Galatians 6:7, which says that we reap exactly what we sow. Long term, we become the sum of our own actions. If we plant seeds of hard work, integrity, perseverance and faith, we will reap a life of prosperity and happiness. If we fail to be responsible, we lose our self-confidence and motivation and become more dependent on others.

Becoming self-reliant

In Seeds of Greatness, Waitley references a University of California at Berkeley study on self-reliance. The study indicated that the happiest, most well-adjusted individuals were those who believe they have a strong measure of control over their own lives. They are doers who take responsibility for their own actions.

These self-reliant types do not look for someone else to blame for their troubles. Instead, they analyze and learn from past mistakes. They are people of action. They constantly look for ways to better their situations, rather than looking for someone to blame for them.

They continually set higher standards for their own personal and professional behavior. They are willing to exchange hard work for freedom of choice.

An important characteristic of self-reliant persons is their willingness to postpone ecstasy. They possess self control. They do not jeopardize their credit to drive an exotic new car or to own a home on "mortgage row." They don't buy groceries with their credit cards because they spent their paychecks on lottery tickets.

Waitley lists what he calls "The Seven C's of Self Control" on pages 90 and 91 of his book. Here is a brief synopsis.

- 1) We control the clock. Waitley says that we can use our time any way we choose. He suggests that before we begin any activity we ask, "Is this the best use of my time?"
- 2) We control concepts. We control our thoughts and creative imaginations. Waitley says that we become what we think about.
- 3) We control our contracts. We determine who we will spend our time with. We should find successful people to use a role models to learn from and share with.
- 4) We control our conversations. Waitley points out that we are in control of what we say and how we say it. He adds a reminder that we can benefit greatly from learning to listen.
- 5) We control our commitments. Waitley says that we are in charge of setting our own pace by what we agree to do for ourselves and others.
- 6) We control our causes. Our goals become our causes, Waitley says. We can gain confidence and courage by striving toward worthy goals.
- 7) We control our concerns. Waitley points out that we can build a self-reliant character by becoming concerned about constructive issues. We should be concerned, but not worried.

If you haven't read Seeds of Greatness, you will find it helpful. It recently reminded me that I alone am responsible for my own actions.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS
This week's new book lineup comes highly recommended.

Dorothy Cannell's God Save the Queen! is said to be "so dangerously addictive" it should carry a warning label. The whodunit begins with an age old grudge. Sir Henry Gossinger, after hours of unexplained penance, informs the family of his new will in which everything is left to his devoted butler, Hutchins.

It isn't long before Hutchins' absence is noticed and fowl play is suspected. No one knows what Hutchins meant by his last words, "God save the queen!" To Flora, the granddaughter of the deceased, Hutchins' death is a great loss. Having been raised in Gossinger Hall, Flora only knows of the devotion and of the loyalty Hutchins had for the Gossinger family.

At first Flora finds comfort and a sense of belonging, at Gossinger Hall, then suddenly it seems a familiar face could be hiding the heart of a cold blooded killer. Her grandfather's killer. Dorothy Cannell's previous novel is How to Murder the Man of Your Dreams.

Kay Hooper "has won numerous awards and high praise for her novels" and After Caroline "picks a tremendous punch." The story begins "She never saw it. One moment her old Ford was moving smoothly, completely under her control; the next moment, it was spinning with stunning violence." Joanna Flynn was lucky to be alive.

After having this near death experience, Joanna begins to have a recurring dream that leaves her with a sense of panic. Then two total strangers call her Caroline, and Joanna discovers the obituary of Caroline McKenna, her double. They look like twins. Caroline died in a car accident on the very same day that Joanna should have perished. Joanna is driven to know more about Caroline and travels 3,000 miles for answers.

It isn't long before Joanna realizes that her questions can only be answered by revealing secrets, and someone is ready to go to any length, even murder to keep things the way they are - unknown.

Dale Brown has created a "heart-stopping novel of contemporary conflict" in Shadow of Steel. The new U.S. President watches a nuclear Iran throw its weight around the Persian Gulf.

Weakened by years of budget cuts and unpopular police actions, the U.S. watches very uneasily. The CIA's Intelligence Support Agency has a surprise for the President - code-named Future Flight. The plan is to send a team into Iran, locate its key military, industrial and command centers and destroy them quickly, quietly and untraceably.

With a B-2 Spirit Stealth, aerial strike warfare expert Patrick McLanahan selects his team and the mission begins. Then Iran and its allies take their war threats a step further than anyone expected. Future Flight is the only thing that can stop a world wide catastrophe.

The most stunning masterful novel yet is Richard North Patterson's Silent Witness. In 1967, 17-year-old Tony Lord is the star athlete in Lake City. Tony's driving ambition would move him far beyond his parents' small world.

This ambition was also what attracted Alison Taylor, the daughter of the town's leading family. Tony's closest friends were Sam Robb, his only rival in athletics, and Sue Cash. Everything suddenly changes when Alison is found brutally murdered.

Tony finds himself the number one suspect. The town turns against him and Sam abandons him. When Tony leaves town, Sue is the only one he knows he will miss.

Twenty-seven years later, Tony receives an urgent phone call from Sue. Tony is a successful San Francisco lawyer who is a relentless advocate dedicated to the defense of his clients. Tony cannot ignore, or refuse, Sue's plea for help. Her husband, Sam Robb, vice principal of Lake City High School is named in the hideous murder of a female student. Tony's return to Lake City becomes more difficult when Alison's death becomes the topic of conversation again, feelings for Sue are rekindled, and the friendship with Sam is reestablished.

Breath-taking authenticity and storytelling mastery are what make Criminal Justice sizzle with electricity. Barbara Parker has outdone herself in her newest book.

By refusing to put a lying witness on the stand, Dan Galindo, the best and brightest young lawyer in the U.S. Attorney's office, lost the case. As a result Dan lost his job, his reputation, his wife and his home.

Elaine McHale helped Dan get a job when the world seemed its darkest. Just as Dan thinks it can't get worse, a new case is dropped in his lap. The case involves a million dollar money laundering operation, an overly ambitious young female musician, a desperate music promoter a crime lord, a ruthless DEA agent and a brutal murder that brings the police right to Dan's doorstep.

Now Dan finds himself the target for the law and lawless. Elaine is the only one he can trust, and being a federal prosecutor she is on the other side. As surprising facts are revealed Elaine joins Dan in an effort to uncover the whole truth.

People interested in Genesis Project share common interest in beginnings of Bible

AUSTIN - Larry Covington thought he would have problems finding 20 people from his church willing to commit to meeting once a month for six months with members of other congregations - Catholics, Protestants and Jews - to talk about Genesis.

He was wrong. Covington, pastor of St. Louis Catholic Church in North Austin, had a waiting list for the Genesis Project, which started this week at Congregation Agudas Achim. So did most of the other leaders of the six congregations involved.

The Genesis Project is the brainchild of several Austin religious leaders of different faiths who have met regularly for the past four years to discuss the biblical texts used in houses of worship.

The willingness of so many people to spend time discussing the text of the First Book of Moses is an indication of continued and renewed interest in the Bible - much of it sparked by Bill Moyers' series on Genesis on PBS last fall.

Sue Enoch, pastor of Highland Park Baptist Church, which is participating in the project, said the interest in Genesis is part of what she sees as a renewed interest in all things spiritual.

Genesis, she said, is fascinating to people because it is about the basic question of how we humans got on this Earth.

"Whether you are Muslim, Jewish, Christian, atheist or agnostic, you still have that need to know how we got here," she said. "We all want to know how it got started."

Every religion, she added, "has some sort of creation story or myth that says, 'This is how our God got started with us.' So I think Genesis captures everything about our faith and ourselves - and the world itself."

The Moyers television series was a catalyst for the Austin group, which, like the Moyers programs, will bring together Jews, Protestants and Catholics.

Although there have been local ecumenical Bible study groups for some time, rarely have Jews been invited to participate because the groups almost always study both the Old and New Testaments.

In addition to Agudas Achim, Highland Park and St. Louis, congregations taking part in the Genesis Project are University Baptist, Memorial United Methodist and St. John's United Methodist.

Genesis, says Agudas Achim's Rabbi Martin Pasternak, is the most natural book for this type of discussion because it contains the most narrative.

"Its stories are about people," he said. "While the rest of the Hebrew Bible contains stories about people also, Genesis is almost completely about people."

Larry Bethune, pastor of University Baptist Church, explained that Genesis is "foundational" to both the Jewish and Christian faiths and their scriptures.

"The stories are very human but also divine at the same time," he said. "They portray such basic relationships and scripture, about the way the world is, why God created us, how we get along with one another."

Covington said until recently, Genesis has not gotten much attention. But the book can provide for richer discussions in a study setting, especially across Christian-Jewish lines, he said.

Discussing the Bible with Jews is going to be a new experience for his parishioners, he said.

"It will be challenging to many," he said.

One of those is Barbara Heyl, a homemaker who has taken part in several ecumenical Bible study groups, but never one that included Jews.

"I love the idea of different faiths coming together for the same purpose of learning and getting to know how God works," she said. "It is so wonderful, especially being able to listen to Jewish people about how they view Genesis."

Byron Kocen, a pediatrician who is a member of Agudas Achim, said he decided to sign up because he is a Moyers fan and because he is interested in exploring other people's views and sharing his own.

It is that kind of sharing that the church leaders are seeking to promote.

"We want to reproduce the experience of doing the Genesis experience with people from different perspectives in life," Bethune said. "We want to have them talk about the way they hear scripture out of their own experience."

Each session will begin with the viewing of part of a segment of the Moyers series, followed by an introduction by the leader of one of the clergy members. The participants then will break into smaller groups for discussion.

"We hope new relationships will be formed between members of congregations, and the congregations themselves, and perhaps a new understanding, particularly between Christians and Jews and between Protestants and Catholics," Bethune said.

With a clear picture in mind of the family's life stage, life-style, risk tolerance and financial responsibilities, a family is ready to examine their present and future financial resources and goals.

Financial resources are determined by preparing a current net worth statement. A net worth statement shows not only what your assets and liabilities are, but also reflects how you have used or allocated your resources. Are most of your resources low-risk savings programs, property, purchases of objects you anticipate will appreciate in value, or investments having various risk levels? The biggest challenge is to find the current market value of your assets.

With a picture of where past spending and saving patterns have taken you, your family faces the challenge of setting goals for your financial future. Only when you know your financial goals can you effectively evaluate your current spending, saving and investment patterns, and choose the best strategy for future financial management.

Financial experts warn that, like any other substance, money can control a person's very existence. Knowing your worth, financially and personally, and knowing what is most important to all family members depending on the family's resources gives family net worth its full meaning.

For some families, there is never enough money. For others, wealth is measured by terms broader than the balance on your financial net worth statement. Identify what underlies your family's sense of net worth now and what you want it to be in the future.

Achieving net worth can involve more than making a few investment changes. It often involves making changes in how family members view money and how family members plan and control their use of money.

Water management class to be offered in February

The Dryland Agriculture Institute and the Continuing Education center at West Texas A&M University will offer a four-week course on water management beginning in February.

"Agricultural Water Management" will meet from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays Feb. 10 - March 3 on the WTAMU campus. The course will focus on the basic principles of water conservation and water-use efficiency.

Specific subjects will include rainfall probabilities and distribution; assessing risk associated with growing corn under dryland or limited irrigation; understanding the Potential Evapotranspiration Network (PET); crop residue management for water conservation; and crop-livestock systems as an alternative to grain production for more efficient use of rainfall.

"I think it is so critically important to use our water efficiently," Dr. B.A. Stewart, director of the Dryland Agriculture Institute at WTAMU and instructor of the course, said.

"As our water table declines, the irrigation portion of our agriculture is going to continue to decline. We've got to better manage what we've got left and utilize our rainfall. As irrigation declines, rainfall is going to be our dominant water resource," he said.

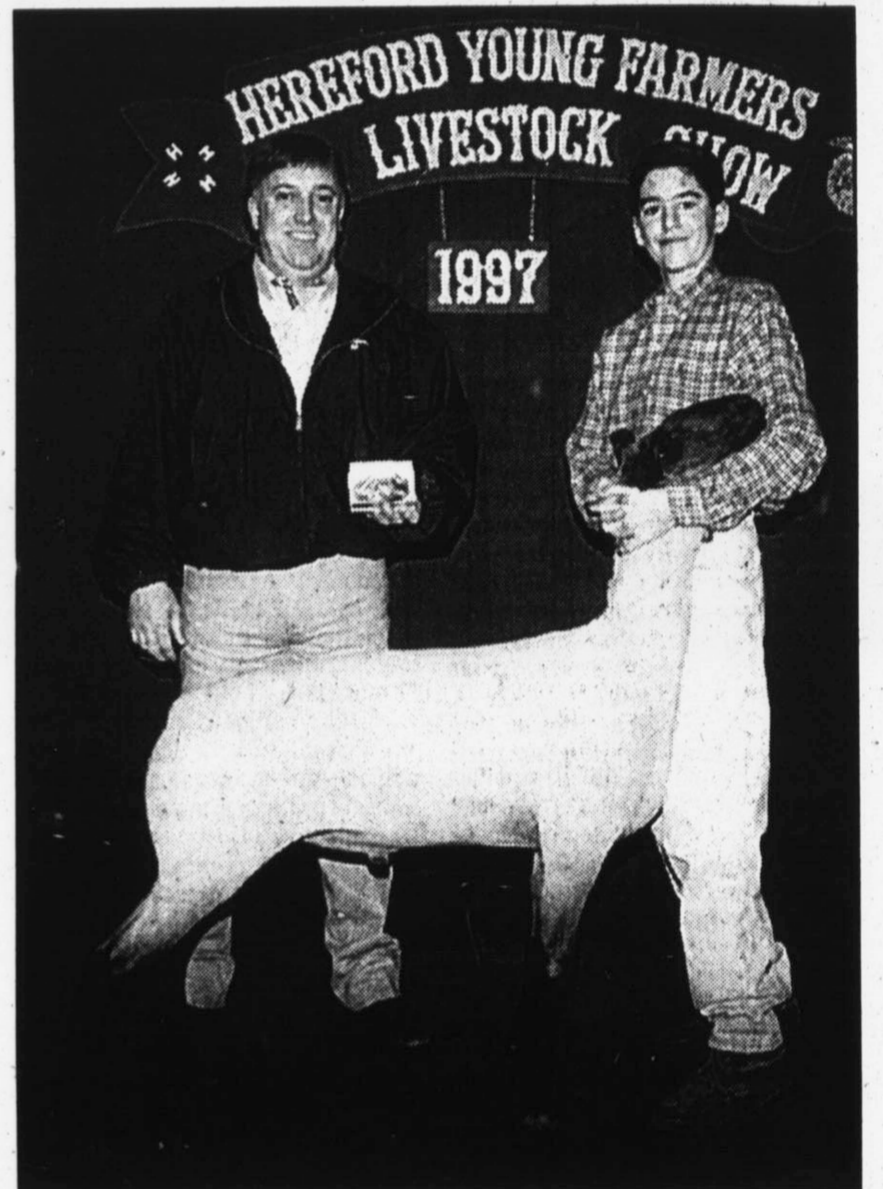

Stewart is a distinguished professor of agriculture at the University and former director of the U.S.D.A. Conservation and Production Research Laboratory at Bushland.

WTAMU is aiming the course at farmers, county agents, resource conservationists, crop consultants and other professionals interested in maximizing the use of precipitation and limited irrigation resources.

The cost of the course is $48. For more information or to register, call the Continuing Education Center at (806) 656-2037.

Petitions received in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) - A leader in a group that has been trying to do away with a boll weevil eradication program was in Austin Friday to turn over thousands of names on a petition.

Tommy Applewhite said he has enough signatures to force a recall vote on the boll weevil eradication program.

Applewhite went to Austin to hand over to the Texas Department of Agriculture petitions signed by 9,526 farmers.

In order to force the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation in Abilene to initiate a recall vote, organizers had to gather petitions of at least 40 percent of the growers who cast ballots in the election establishing the program.

That would be 8,458 farmers. Farmers who want out of the program say the spraying fees are excessive and disproportionate.

Farmers need rain

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Drought-plagued farmers in Texas need large amounts of rainfall to kick off spring planting, but the experts give them only a slim chance of getting it.

"Most of our pastures are warm season and so the moisture we have received is beneficial, but now we need more of it and some warmer temperatures," said Dr. Robert Lyons, a range specialist with the state Agricultural Extension Service in Uvalde.

This part of the year is typically dry, and this year is worse than usual.

Agriculture Briefs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - California growers are expected to produce more cotton and fewer oranges this year.

The California Agricultural Statistics Service forecasts the 1996-97 upland cotton crop at 2.4 million bales, up 4 percent, and American Pima production at 380,000 bales, up 69 percent.

Navel orange production is estimated at 78,000 cartons, up 3 percent, but Valencia orange production is estimated at 52,000 cartons, down 7 percent.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Maine farmers must "industrialize" if they want to survive the changing business climate, according to an agricultural economist.

"I'm sure I won't be popular when I say I think we'll see a 50 percent drop in (agricultural) producers, definitely within the next decade," said Michael Salisbury, a Michigan agricultural economist.

Ag leaders speak at Corn Growers annual meeting

Farm Bill, gas hikes and water supply may cause problems this year

1996 was a good crop year for most farmers in the Texas Panhandle despite a hard drought over the first six months, but ag leaders worry that the Freedom to Farm Act, gas hikes and a declining water table may spell trouble for producers in the coming years.

"Last spring when corn was $7 a bushel and wheat was $6 or so a bushel, everyone thought that was great. Then they passed this farm bill (Freedom to Farm Act)," said State Farm Director Harold Bob Bennett, one of the keynote speakers at Thursday's Texas Corn Growers Association meeting in Dimmitt.

"I said then that it was probably the best piece of farm legislation I've ever seen in my life—if you were going to farm one year. If you were going to get out of farming after that first year, it was great. But folks, I think we're all going to see the day come when we'd have wished they never wrote that legislation," Bennett said.

According to Bennett and other speakers on Thursday's agenda, the only decent part of the Freedom to Farm Act is that it keeps "permanent law" in place. But will that help farmers in 2002 when the government has to look at farm legislation again?

"The one good thing that's in there is that in 2002 if they don't do anything about the farm bill, we revert back to permanent law," Bennett said. "If they succeed in decimating the delivery system, which is their goal, I don't know what good having permanent law in place will be, though."

Contained in that permanent law is the authority to have county committees, the authority for the Commodity Credit Corp and all the structure for programs.

David Senter, TCGA's consultant in Washington, D.C., says that people who supported eliminating permanent law from the Freedom to Farm Act have decided they must now dismantle the Farm Service Agency, county committees and local FSA offices.

"They want to get rid of that structure, because then Congress can't come back and reauthorize farm programs in 2002 because they won't want to spend money to put the field structure back in place," Senter said.

According to Bennett the government plans to "rain down a massive amount of cuts on us," including many office closings. Several of those closings will come in the Texas Panhandle, he said.

"The proposal that is being discussed by the Office of Management and Budget will close 50% of all FSA offices in the country. That's about 1,000 offices. It'll shut down our delivery system," Senter said.

Cleavinger said there are transmission lines which go across the area, and producers have access to those lines.

"It's not easy, but it's not that hard to get a tap on some of these major lines," he said.

There might be a bright spot on the fuel horizon for producers.

At Thursday's meeting, a group of researchers from Texas Tech University conducted a demonstration using an alternative type of fuel to power an engine.

The demonstration used a generator-type engine, operated by a 14-horsepower Briggs and Stratton engine, powered by a combination of ethanol and water.

Wyatt told producers that the Texas Senate is currently studying a new bill (Senate Bill 1) designed to protect private ownership of ground water. He said the bill also keeps the "rights of capture" law in place and promotes additional underground water conservation districts in the state.

An earlier proposal by the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission would have taken away private ownership rights. Under the proposal, if a well drilled on property lines pulled water from a neighbor's land, the well owner would be liable for damages, because he would be guilty of "stealing his neighbor's water."

"I think if either of those proposals would have passed, it would have created entire economic chaos in the chaos in the state of Texas," said Wyatt.

"Many of the cities' or rural water supplies, industry and agriculture would have been behind the eight ball."

"There's so much diversity in water in this state," Wyatt said. "From the east to the west side, you go from 60 inches of rain a year to about five."

The Panhandle area is closer to the five inches a year than the 60, and Wyatt said the Water District is considering a new project to help increase the rainfall in the area.

"We're looking at putting together a precipitation enhancement program for the Texas High Plains. There are two of these programs in Texas: one in Big Spring and the other in San Angelo. The results of their work has indicated an increase of about 20% in average precipitation a year."

Wyatt said meetings about the project would be scheduled, and said if the majority of the people decide they don't want the program, the Water District won't pursue it.

During the afternoon session, producers heard research updates on Bt corn technology, drought-resistant corn and sorghum hybrids, the P.E.T. Network and how it works for corn production, corn weed control and short-season corn cropping system.

Fungus develops immunity

FARGO, N.D. (AP) - A fungus that can devastate fields of sugar beets is attaining increased immunity to popular chemicals used to control it.

A North Dakota State University researcher, Art Lamey, fears the problem could worsen unless farmers change their ways.

"We are very concerned about continuing to use some of these (chemicals) for fear that we're just going to make the problem worse," said Lamey, a plant pathologist with the university's extension service.

A series of new studies found that Cercospora, a fungus that attacks sugar beet leaves, is becoming a more serious problem in the Red River Valley because of growing resistance to the most popular types of fungicides used against it.

For several years, the extension service has recommended that growers in the southern part of the valley use either of two fungicide mixtures. One uses the chemicals benzimidazole with a tin fungicide, the other tin and mancozeb.

Mixing those chemicals has controlled the fungus while not allowing it to build up a tolerance.

manager for American Crystal Sugar Co. of Moorhead, Minn., said he has looked over Lamey's studies and agrees the resistance problem is growing and that spraying practices must change.

Another major problem facing producers is the increase in gas prices, which was just announced by Energas.

Energas notified producers earlier this month that it would raise prices by 39% or 89 cent per mcf.

Producers who use gas to power irrigation equipment and other farm equipment could be destroyed by the hikes.

"There's no way the corn farmer can pay $4 for natural gas and sell $2 corn and make that work," said Senter.

There may be an alternative for producers, though.

Longtime area farmer Bill Cleavinger informed producers that "Energas is not the only gas company in this area, and there are other sources that want to sell gas."

"There was a contract signed this week for $2.25 for this season, delivered in the Dimmitt area," said Cleavinger. "It's within our range to obtain this kind of price, but we've got to work at it. You have to give Energas notice by Jan. 30 that you plan to terminate its services because you will be getting gas from somewhere else."

"What you're seeing today is the possibility of a totally new energy source—ethanol burning with at least 25% water," said Kenneth Sanders, president of Maxma, one of the researchers involved in the project.

"What that means is that if you've got 15 gallons of fuel in your tank, you have the ability to go out and fill a five-gallon bucket of water, pour it into your tank and have it perform like gasoline."

Sanders said the fuel combination results in increased mileage in cars and a decrease in emissions. It also gives farmers an alternative fuel source.

This means that the farmer could possibly grow his own fuel in the future.

The 1996 drought and pumping water from the Ogallala Aquifer also were addressed by several speakers.

"Hopefully, up in this area we'd like to think the drought has been broken," said Bennett.

Water is the "most limiting factor" for agriculture on the Texas High Plains, according to Wayne Wyatt with the High Plains Underground Water District.

The lack of rainfall in recent years has caused a dramatic decline in the level of water in the Ogallala Aquifer, and the rain we have received has done little toward replenishing any of the water pumped out of the aquifer.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
 Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 -- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

You know children are growing up when they start asking questions that have answers.

The House of the Week

Mediterranean Features Arched Entry

G-38

A STRIKING ROOFLINE and two front columns introduce this grand Mediterranean home.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

An attractive arched entry introduces plan G-38, by HomeStyles Designers Network. This grand Mediterranean home makes good use of its 2,140 square feet of living space.

Double doors open into a tiled foyer, which is flanked by formal living and dining rooms, both of which feature 12-ft. ceilings.

In the huge family room, sliding glass doors open to a covered patio. The fireplace is located between built-in cabinets.

An 8-ft. wall separates the family room from the kitchen, which shares an angled serving counter with the sunny bayed breakfast nook. A built-in desk nearby is ideal for making shopping lists or writing monthly checks.

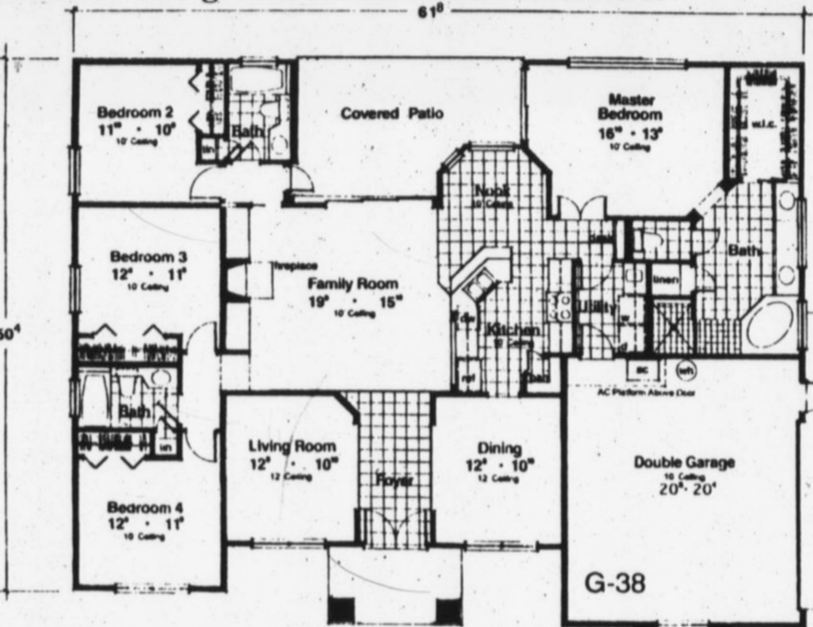

The secluded master suite has a winding overhead plant shelf and sliding glass doors to the patio. A dramatic arch introduces the private bath, which includes a huge tub, a separate shower and a dual-sink vanity.

Across the home, two more bedrooms share a hall bath. A quiet rear bedroom features another full bath. Each room has a plant shelf.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

G-38 STATISTICS

Design G-38 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, breakfast nook, four bedrooms, three full baths and a utility room, totaling 2,140 square feet of living space. This plan includes a slab foundation and 8-in. concrete block exterior wall framing. Its two-car garage provides 450 square feet of space.

A TILED FOYER is flanked by the living room and dining room. Directly behind the foyer is the family room, which overlooks the covered patio. The breakfast nook adjoins the family room and flows into the walk-through kitchen, which has an entrance to the dining room. A utility area outside of the kitchen leads to the master suite and its private bath. On the other side of the home, three secondary bedrooms are entered from the family room; two share a full bath, while the rear room has its own.

NEWS OF HOMES

Wood Foundations: A Practical Alternative

(NAPS)—Learning more about foundations may be a good foundation for building or buying a comfortable and energy-efficient home.

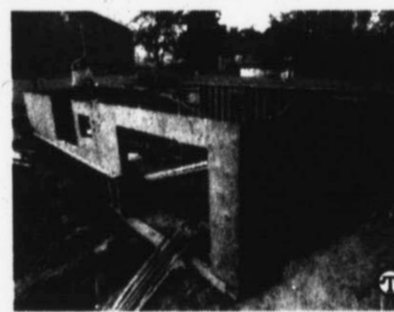

An increasingly popular choice today is the permanent wood foundation, constructed with pressure-treated wood.

The permanent wood foundation is the result of extensive design and engineering analyses by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture Forest Service and the National Association of Home Builders Research Foundation.

According to the American Wood Preservers Institute, preserved wood offers strength and workability while protecting against decay and termite infestation. Permanent wood foundations are accepted by major building codes, federal agencies and by lending, home warranty and fire insurance providers.

Other reasons to choose a home with permanent wood foundations include:

- The comfort and livability of an above-ground room without the musty, clammy feeling usually associated with basements.
- Less heat loss through the walls because wood framing permits installation of thick, economical batt-type insulation.
- Easier inside finishing than with conventional foundations because studs are in place and plumbing and wiring jobs are simpler and can be concealed.

One of the best places to start when buying or building a home is the foundation and one of the best materials to start with, say experts, is pressure-treated wood.

- More actual living space in a permanent wood foundation basement than in concrete or masonry houses of the same dimensions because wood foundation walls do not need to be as thick.

- Remodeling or modification is easier. You can cut out window or door openings, add a whole room, or add simple finishing touches such as pictures or shelves without special tools or fasteners.

- There is design flexibility. Permanent wood foundations can be used in single and multi-story structures and for both site-built and manufactured homes. The system can be adapted to almost any home design or site plan and is engineered for a variety of soil conditions.

Darkness falls over the science-fiction genre

Megan Ward and Eric Close star in the NBC sci-fi series Dark Skies, airing Saturdays. The program, which focuses on the government cover-up of an extraterrestrial invasion and the events that surround it, is just one of the new crop of gloomy science-fiction shows.

By Teresa Ortega
©TVData Features Syndicate

To Americans, the 21st century has always symbolized a far-off, technically advanced future.

Space travel would most likely be as easy as hopping in the family sedan. But as the year 2001 draws nearer, the future as depicted on television has come to look less and less rosy.

Science fiction has always encompassed both positive and negative strains, but suddenly the more pessimistic view has the upper hand. A new breed of shows has mated sci-fi with horror (The X-Files, Millennium), while programs presenting less diluted science fiction — such as Dark Skies (Saturdays on NBC), Babylon 5 (check local listings) and Star Trek: Voyager (Wednesdays on UPN) — seem infected by a darker vision as well.

Dark Skies is fueled by a sobering recreation of events in U.S. history. The show posits a governmental conspiracy surrounding a planned alien invasion to account for what Dark Skies supervising producer and co-creator Brent Friedman identifies as the “downward spiral” of national morale since President John F. Kennedy’s assassination.

The series has been blasted for everything from ripping off The X-Files to presenting inaccurate history, but, in fact, its premises are more complex than it is usually given credit for.

Rather than trying to present hard facts, the show thrives, Friedman says, “in the gray areas,” and tries to promote a skeptical stance toward official history — a stance Friedman hopes will lead viewers to investigate unanswered questions for themselves.

J. Michael Straczynski, the executive producer, creator and writer of Babylon 5, insists his show is not so much dark as it is “more adult.” The show’s hard-hitting take on humanity, along with its spectacular special effects, makes a nice counterpoint to the high-mindedness and even occasional preachiness of a show such as Star Trek: The Next Generation.

If the characters on Babylon 5 are conflicted, gritty and sometimes villainous, that’s because in Straczynski’s view, “people 200 years from now are not going to be substantially different from what we are now.”

Straczynski suggests the trend toward darker content in sci-fi may be attributed to the networks’ need to compete with the racier material on cable.

With Star Trek: Voyager, the somberness comes from the show’s premise, that the starship USS Voyager has wandered so far out in space that it will take a lifetime to get home.

Brannon Braga, the show’s supervising producer, says the initial episodes were “relentlessly depressing,” but denies that the recent turn toward gloominess in science fiction has had an effect on the program. The purpose of the various Star Trek shows, Braga points out, is to imagine “a future that viewers would want to be in.” Expecting the Star Trek family to suddenly turn moody would be like “asking the Cleavers to come down with some terrible skin disorder,” Braga says.

Still, he says Star Trek: Voyager has taken its cue from The X-Files on what he calls “the weirdness factor.” That is, he and his colleagues have tried to keep up with the innovative creatures and weird phenomena that have helped make its competitor so popular.

And Voyager will pull out the big guns in February, when the Borg crosses paths with Capt. Janeway (Kate Mulgrew) and the Voyager crew.

So if things do appear a little dark, with so much good science fiction to watch, the future’s looking brighter already.

FEBRUARY 14
Valentine's Day. A day for many people who are in love, this is the day that many look forward to.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ Jan. 26-Feb. 1 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
You'll have time to do the things you really enjoy. Feel free to delve into hobbies, read a book or spend time with friends. There's nothing wrong with a little playtime now and then. Dress extra-special at a social event this weekend. Good news regarding finances is on the way.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
A former friend, with whom you've severed ties, may try to contact you and patch things up. Before you get lost in sentimentality, remember the cons of the friendship — and be on the lookout for an ulterior motive. A social event this weekend may be canceled at the last minute.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Working on a tough project this week? Draw inspiration from those around you, and accept their encouragement. It's OK to seek assistance now and then. Does your life seem like a juggling act lately? Try declining an invitation for once, and spend some time by yourself.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Your intuition could lead you to good luck midweek. Trust it. Mixing business with pleasure will work to your advantage, especially on Friday. An important introduction could be made, boosting both your career and your social life. Accept last-minute invitations. Avoid dishonesty of any kind.

LEO - July 23/August 23
If you're playing the role of mentor, be patient. Try to give the advice you would have wanted to hear long ago. A change of scenery is just what you need to put the spark back in your fire. Take the weekend to relax and get away from it all. In areas of love, learn from your mistakes.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
A troubled friend will come to you for advice. Use your logical mind to get your friend back on track. A love relationship needs your attention. Try to be a little more understanding in this area. If you're in a creative field, Friday will be your day to shine. An old friend from out of town may pay a visit.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
A negative attitude is your worst enemy. Stay positive, and you'll get through a tough situation with success. Weekend plans could be canceled at the last minute. However, an alternate plan could prove just as enjoyable. Your intense emotions may be too much for a cool-minded loved one to bear. News of an engagement is possible.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Stay physically active this week. It will ease stress at work. Problems in romance? Showing only part of the story can make you look suspicious. Being honest is the best answer. A compliment to a female family member goes a long way. Stay close to home as the week ends.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Trouble in paradise? Work to remedy a romantic falling out. Take a selfless approach to love, especially if you have a Scorpio or Aries mate. Matters at work are not as pressing as they seem. Take a serious but calm approach to handling "emergencies." Keep spending to a minimum.

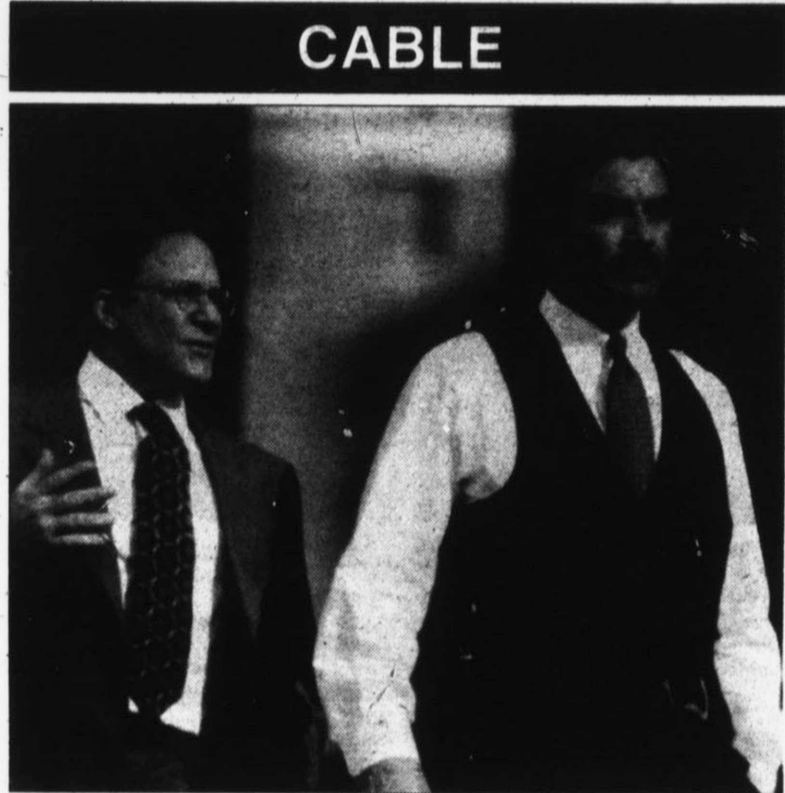

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
While your career may be flourishing, your personal life needs attention. Take a romantic partner's needs seriously. Make the effort to make things right again. A Leo has good advice on Thursday. Take it seriously. Don't give in to unfair demands from family.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Jealousy will get you nowhere, especially if you're involved with a Sagittarius. Be strong and talk things out. Talk from your head and your heart — and don't let emotions cloud your judgment. Young children play a role this coming weekend. Cancer has some news.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Don't spread yourself too thin at work this week. It's OK to delegate tasks when the going gets tough. A romantic encounter leaves you confused on Monday. Trust your own instincts when you're looking for the right answer. A Virgo associate surprises you with offensive behavior.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Q: What happened to the Ken Olin drama EZ Streets? The two-hour movie aired, but none of the hourly Wednesday shows. -Peg M., no address.

A: Actually, one regular EZ Streets episode aired before CBS decided that, apart from The Nanny and Pearl, its Wednesday lineup was a bust.

The network canceled Almost Perfect and Public Morals, but put EZ Streets on hiatus. It will return this spring.

CBS' dilemma is that, like last season's American Gothic, EZ is uncompromisingly complex and dark, unlike anything else on the network's mostly middlebrow schedule.

That makes EZ difficult to schedule - and to promote.

My prediction: CBS will return EZ as promised, and viewers once again will reject an exceptional show.

Q: The movie Miracle on 34th Street was remade with Sebastian Cabot as Santa and, I believe, Natalie Wood from the original movie playing the mother. I can't find it on video anywhere. -John L. Newman, South Hill, Va.

A: Jane Alexander, not Wood, played the mother in the 1973 TV-movie remake of the 1947 classic. David Hartman, Roddy McDowall and Suzanne Davidson co-starred.

Film historian Leonard Maltin reports that the 1973 Miracle hasn't been released on video, but as always, call Movies Unlimited (1-800-4MOVIES) to check on current availability.

Q: Back in the '50s I recall watching a TV game show called Dollar a Second, which none of my contemporaries remember. Do you have any information on this ancient program? -Pete Klimek, Berkeley, Calif.

Ken Olin

A: Comic Jan Murray hosted Dollar a Second, which resembled the more familiar Truth or Consequences.

Contestants earned $1 for each second during which they answered questions correctly.

If they were incorrect or Murray interrupted them, they had to perform a stunt.

During its 1953-57 run, Dollar aired at various times on the Dumont, ABC and NBC networks. It was based on the French radio program Cent Francs par Seconde.

Q: Is NBC newscaster Jack Ford the son of former President Gerald Ford? -V.R., Kewaskum, Wis.

A: The former president has a son named Jack, but he isn't the Jack Ford who works for NBC.

Q: My husband insists that Delta Burke and Gerald McRaney are married. I think not. Please settle this. -Jean Reeves, Nashville, Tenn.

A: Your husband is right.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Can you believe January is almost gone? I guess God decided it was time for us to see what a cold-icy winter is like and also at the same time, let time fly. It's beautiful but so hazardous.

I always fear some of our people will fall and break a hip, and sure enough it happened. Please, when it is icy - stay home! We will deliver our home bound meals in spite of the weather, and if you really need something, let us know and we will try to help you.

If you have a 4-wheel drive vehicle and can help with the meal delivery when the roads are bad, call and give us your phone number. We will call when we need help.

Watch the Scene! We are going to have more informative articles. This month we are introducing one of our board members. We will present one each month. In future issues we want to tell you about volunteers, program participants and employees. I also want to give you some information about the different programs and activities at the center.

I am working on a spring tour to Washington, D.C., Virginia and Pennsylvania the later part of April. Please let me know soon if you are interested. We have a lot of requests for another Branson tour. I am working on it. It will probably be in June.

We had good comments on changing the Birthday Social. February birthdays will be celebrated the 19th. Special tables will be reserved so if you can attend, please let us know and how many will be attending with you.

See you at the Center.

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

February is the month for Valentine parties, hearts, flowers and candy. We call to mind the love we have for family and friends. My grandmother taught me the love of quiet things; reading good books, snowflakes, twinkling stars and birds wings. Also the love of pretty things; butterflies, rainbows, flowers and rings. Then when the heart is filled with joy, it lends itself to musical things; sweet voices, violin strings and the melody the bird sings.

Our Valentine Party will be Friday, Feb. 14 at 6:30 p.m. The Center will furnish the meat, vegetables, bread and drinks. Please bring a salad or dessert. Our King and Queen will be crowned immediately following dinner. There will be prizes given to the couple married the longest, someone who has a birthday or anniversary on Valentine's Day and the most recently married couple. So be here to enjoy the evening of fun and fellowship.

The Activities Department is starting a decorative and tole painting class. This class will be held every Tuesday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the ceramic room. The class will be a get-together for beginning and advanced painters. Please bring your own supplies, come to the center and we will paint together on Tuesdays. We have had several ask for this class.

Happy Valentines

Entrepreneur from baby boom generation fueling new business

HOUSTON - Humberto Zamora is a self-made man - a 49-year-old entrepreneur from Corpus Christi who works with hospitals to help find government programs that help patients pay their bills.

He's branched out into managing nursing homes, developing real estate projects and building an industrial air cargo park.

As he built his business empire, he worked about 60 hours a week, mostly anchored to a desk. He says he was always stocky, but the weight he carried on his 5-foot, 10-inch frame blossomed from about 200 pounds to about 280 pounds.

"After all those years, I was secure financially," he says. "What I wanted to do is start taking care of myself."

Through diet and exercise, Zamora got his weight down to about 240. Still, he wanted to finish the job.

It was time for the self-made man to secure outside assistance.

He turned to Franklin Rose, a Houston plastic surgeon, for a process called body contouring.

In a day surgery center near the Texas Medical Center, Rose removed another 10 pounds through a liposuction, which uses suction to remove fat cells.

Zamora and other members of the baby boom generation - people between 35 and 50 years old - are fueling a new business boom for Rose and other plastic surgeons.

People in the baby boom generation now account for more than 40 percent of the 400,000 cosmetic surgery procedures performed in the United States each year.

Women are still more likely to have cosmetic surgery, but 15 percent of the procedures are performed on male patients, according to the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons.

"Whether we admit it or not, everything in America today is geared toward youth," said Jerry Macki, 48, who took a day off from his job in commercial real estate to have a "midface lift" to remove the tired, wrinkled look from his cheeks and eyes.

"It was a very minor change in my appearance," he said. "But it gives me more confidence. I just feel good about myself."

Neal R. Reisman, Macki's surgeon, said baby boomers are more willing than others to do things to improve their chances of getting ahead - and improve their self-esteem.

While the baby boomers' pursuit of endless youth is providing the demand for plastic surgeons' services, the trend is being supported by changes in technology, technique and health care economics.

In years past, cosmetic surgery was viewed as an alternative mainly for wealthy women seeking to regain their lost youth.

They would disappear for weeks so their friends would not see them during the post-operative stage, when swelling and bruising were common. Now, with improved surgical techniques, people like Macki can go back to work a day after surgery.

"People used to really wait to get their money's worth," Reisman said.

"Now, with more minimal surgery available, people are trying to stay looking the same," he said. "Instead of coming in every five or 10 years for a major overhaul, they may come

President's Corner

By Norma Thurston, HSCA President

Hello Friends,

Another month has passed, one of the coldest we can remember for awhile.

The moisture we received the last few days was welcome. It was getting pretty dry.

I hope everyone had a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. We had a really good New Year's Eve party. We had a good attendance and everyone really enjoyed themselves.

We are looking forward to the Braschler Music Show on March 7. We have a few tickets left for the gospel show, but all variety show tickets are sold. We will be having dinner that evening and whether you are attending the show or not, we would like for you to come out and eat with us.

Come be with us at the Center. We always welcome you!

Meeting the HSCA Board Members

Lester Wagner was elected to our board for the term Oct. 1, 1996, to Sept. 30, 1999.

Lester served previously on our board in 1989-1992. He was elected president for two years in 1990-1992.

He does a lot of volunteer work at the center such as maintenance, putting up lights for the Festival of Trees, clean up and about any place we need help. When Lester was not on the board, we could still depend on him.

He is a veteran of World War II and retired after working for 38 years with Hereford Parts and Supply.

He has a wonderful wife, Viola. They come to the center almost every day to eat, play games and fellowship with friends. Hereford's chief of police, David Wagner, and Ronnie Wagner of Amarillo are their sons. They also have two daughters, Mary Kay Peters of Canyon and Joan Bryan of Pueblo West, Colo.

We really appreciate Lester's willingness to serve on our board and all the work he so willingly does for Hereford Senior Citizens, also we really-really appreciate his pleasant personality.

Thank you so much, Lester!

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: Why is there a five-month waiting period for Social Security disability benefits?

A: Social Security assumes that working families have access to other resources to provide support during periods of short-term disabilities, including worker's compensation, insurance, savings, and investments. Social Security is designed to provide a continuing income to you and your family when you are unable to do so. Benefits continue as long as you remain disabled.

Q: How do I file for Social Security retirement benefits?

A: Generally, filing for Social Security retirement benefits is a simple process. You can usually provide the application information for a claim by phone. The completed application is then mailed to you for verification. You sign it and return it to our office for processing. Your Social Security card, your birth certificate, your W-2 forms or self-employment tax return for last year, and other documents may be needed at this stage. You may bring the original documents to the local Social Security office, where they will be photocopied and returned to you. Or, you can mail them to the office and the same procedure will be followed. Social Security's toll-free number is 1-800-772-1213.

Q: I understand that low-income Medicare beneficiaries can get help paying Medicare premiums, deductibles, and coinsurance amounts? Is this true?

A: Yes. If your monthly income is $794 or less ($1,056 for a couple), your state may help with your Medicare costs. Contact your state or local medical assistance, social services, or welfare office.

Q: How much of my Social Security tax dollars go to pay benefits and how much goes toward administrative expenses?

A: Out of every dollar paid in Social Security and Medicare taxes, 99 cents goes to trust funds that pay retirement and survivors benefits, Medicare benefits, and disability benefits. Administrative costs are paid from Social Security trust funds and are less than one cent of every Social Security tax dollar collected.

Q: I'll be 65 years old soon but I don't plan on retiring. Should I sign up for Medicare?

A: You should sign up for Medicare shortly before your 65th birthday whether or not you are ready to retire. Medicare hospital insurance, which helps pay for inpatient and some outpatient hospital care, is automatic once you reach 65 but you still have to sign up.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD
THE FACTS ABOUT
EXCESS WEIGHT

Did you know:

*58 million adult Americans are well over what health care professionals consider a healthy weight.

*The number of overweight adults in the U.S. is continuing to rise from 25 percent in 1980 to over 33 percent in 1991.

*Each year more than half of all Americans try to either lose weight or maintain a recent weight loss. While some people are successful at losing excess weight, most do not succeed at keeping weight off.

*Excess weight can be the result of many factors, such as family culture, unhealthy eating habits, infrequent and low levels of physical activity, metabolic rate (the energy your body uses to perform functions like breathing, digesting food, keeping a regular heartbeat), and even heredity.

*Being overweight is a serious health problem. Some health risks of being overweight include heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes and certain kinds of cancer.

*Even modest weight loss can provide such important health benefits as reducing high blood pressure and lowering blood glucose and cholesterol levels.

*Health care providers are better equipped than ever to help you manage your weight. One should see a doctor to determine if you need to lose weight. If your doctor determines that you need to lose weight, he or she may suggest prescription medication and a diet regime.

*Healthful eating and regular physical activity habits are key to successful weight loss and maintenance according to the National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics Fact Sheet in the January 1997 Journal of THE AMERICAN DIETETIC ASSOCIATION.

to find a reasonable weight range based on your height and age, see the accompanying chart.

Because muscle and bone weigh more than fat, the higher weights in the healthy range typically apply to those with more muscle and larger frames. People with less muscle and smaller frames should fall at the lower end of the range. In general, weights above and below the healthy range may increase risk of disease.

Realistic lifestyle changes:

Eating habits and physical activity.

Taking small steps to changing eating and physical activity habits is easier than attempting giant leaps. These form the cornerstone of any weight-loss effort and of a healthy lifestyle.

Changing your eating habits does not mean dieting, but rather managing your eating patterns by enjoying a balanced menu with a variety of great-tasting foods in appropriate amounts. Talk with a registered dietitian to help devise a sensible eating plan.

Regular physical activity is an essential part of losing weight and keeping it off. Plus, you'll feel better. Try a brisk walk on your lunch break, take the stairs instead of the elevator, park your car farther away at the shopping center or mall. Each individual needs a personalized weight-loss program with appropriate levels of physical activity.

The next steps: Commitment and Control:

Set realistic goals for losing weight - take your time and don't be too hard on yourself.

The important thing is that your weight loss be gradual, about one to two pounds a week, maintain your weight once you reach your goal, and see your doctor before beginning a weight-loss program.

In addition to adopting a well-balanced eating plan and including regular physical activity in your life, there are many weight-loss options available. These include organized weight loss and physical programs, support groups, and prescription medications. Discuss these with your provider to determine the best options for you.

Women's Health

February is Heart Month

Heart disease was once considered a "man's problem," but no longer. This number-one killer of women affects one in five women over age 65. Women are ten times more likely to die of heart disease than breast cancer.

Despite these chilling statistics, women can take steps to decrease their risk of cardiovascular disease, or diseases of the heart and blood vessels. With some lifestyle and dietary changes, you can reduce your vulnerability. Here are some tips:

Don't smoke. Many smokers know that smoking significantly increases the risk of heart disease and other conditions, but they find it difficult to break this highly addictive habit. If you are trying to quit, seek support. It is possible to quit, and to restore your risk of heart disease to that of a nonsmoker. Talk to your doctor, or call the American Lung Association or American Cancer Society chapter near you, to find a support group.

Control high blood pressure. More than half of all women over 55 are said to suffer from hypertension, or high blood pressure, a significant contributor to heart disease and stroke. Have routine blood pressure checks. If your blood pressure is high, ask your doctor how to lower it. Weight loss, dietary changes (less sodium and salt) and regular exercise are usually recommended. Medication may also be prescribed, but this will not replace the need for dietary and lifestyle changes.

Control cholesterol levels. Cholesterol is an important natural substance in the body, but too much cholesterol can increase the risk of heart attack and stroke. Have your cholesterol levels checked (with a blood test) at least every five years until age 65, then every three to five years thereafter.

To combat high cholesterol levels, doctors usually recommend diet and lifestyle changes. Overweight women are at greater risk for both hypertension and elevated cholesterol. A diet that is low in fat, particularly saturated fat, is generally advised. Regular exercise -- such as walking, aerobics or swimming -- is also crucial and helps with weight loss.

For some women, cholesterol-lowering medication also may be prescribed. Talk to your doctor about whether such therapy may be right for you.

Remember: a healthy lifestyle is your key to heart health.

Father, daughter are team, have scars to prove it

FORT WORTH, Texas - Today, in a quiet cul de sac in east Fort Worth, there is little to distinguish 4-year-old Hallie Gayle from the pack of other children cavorting across the neighborhood. Hallie's chemotherapy is finished and her bright red hair has grown back. Long scars from six surgeries are hidden beneath her green Mickey Mouse shirt.

During a break in play one recent morning at home, she and her mother, Julie, sprawl on the floor of their home, paging through a photo album that chronicles the long, painful days in the hospital, days they hope are behind them.

"What do you think of the ICU, Hallie?" the mother asks, pointing to one picture of a bald-headed girl in a hospital bed.

"Oooh, gross," Hallie answers, crinkling her face. "That's when I had cancer."

"Who is that, Hallie?" her mother asks, pointing again to another picture of a man in hospital garb.

"That's my Daddy."

That daddy is Kurk Gayle, a soft-spoken administrator at Texas Christian University. He is also the man who helped shepherd his family through the bleak days three years ago when doctors discovered that Hallie's liver was riddled with cancer.

But the father also made a more tangible contribution to his daughter's recovery. Like Hallie, Kurk Gayle now wears long scars across his abdomen. Last year, when a donor was needed for a liver transplant to save Hallie's life, the father surrendered a portion of his own.

Kurk Gayle, the son of Baptist missionaries, grew up in South Vietnam, where the liver often symbolizes courage. Later, his high school years were spent in Indonesia, where the word for liver can also mean soul. The irony does not escape him.

"It's sort of an honor to give my daughter life," he says today. "Julie brought her into the world and I could keep her alive, which is something most men can't do."

Nor is the special bond lost on his daughter.

"She loves that Daddy had an operation just like her," Julie Gayle says now. "They get in the car and she says, 'Liver buddies in the front seat.'"

The mother laughs. "Sometimes it's kind of hard to explain to people," she says.

Kurk and Julie Gayle knew from the doctors' expressions that Hallie's condition was dire. They were living in Norfolk, Va., at the time, and physicians there were unflinchingly kind but also very solemn when they spoke.

One week, young Hallie Gayle was a spunky toddler who waddled after her older brother, Schaeffer. The next, what seemed a routine childhood fever would not go away, and those solemn doctors soon reported that Hallie's liver had ballooned to six times its normal size.

The disease, diagnosed on May 5, 1994, is called hepatoblastoma, among the rarest of childhood cancers, afflicting fewer than 200 children in the United States each year. What was worse, the disease had spread to all lobes of the Hallie's liver, an advanced condition from which fewer than one in five children are known to survive, cancer specialists say.

It was, as one pediatric oncologist would later put it, "A dreadfully poor prognosis."

Through their shock, Kurk and Julie Gayle struggled to comfort their toddler, who was irate from all the painful prodding.

Family, friends and relatives also began praying what Kurk Gayle would later describe as dangerous prayers, inviting disappointment by asking God for what seemed the miraculous. They prayed that the disease would disappear, and that Hallie be spared the most radical course of treatment, a liver transplant.

"Why be safe with that sort of thing when your daughter is about to die?" Kurk Gayle would say years later.

But chemotherapy and surgery failed to eradicate the disease. By last spring it became obvious that a transplant was her only hope. Kurk Gayle had resisted the notion, fearing the high mortality rate of other young transplant patients whose cases were similar to Hallie's, and a lifetime of medical care even if the surgery was successful.

Then, he took a momentous step forward.

"I wouldn't let anybody else do this," Kurk Gayle says. "Julie's brother initially had volunteered to do this, but there was sort of a feeling of 'You don't need to do this. I need to do this, to make sure that Hallie gets what she needs.'"

Before November 1989, when the first liver transplant with a living-related donor was done in Chicago, Kurk Gayle would not have had the option. Because the liver is the only human organ that naturally regenerates, a portion of a donor's liver can be taken for transplantation without grave medical risk.

But the surgery remains rare - only

1,000 living-related transplants around the world in the last eight years, only about 30 a year in the United States, said Dr. Jean Emond, a surgeon at University of California at San Francisco.

Even rarer is transplantation in cancer cases because of the chance that, as in Mickey Mantle's case, the disease had spread beyond the liver.

"Once in a while we have a chance where it seems the right thing to do," said Emond, who performed Hallie Gayle's transplant surgery.

Hallie's battle seemed one such case. In the winter of 1996, blood tests showed a recurrence of the cancer, though doctors believed it was confined to Hallie's liver. On April 1, Emond removed 30 percent of Kurk Gayle's liver and transplanted it into his daughter.

Julie Gayle, then five months pregnant with a second daughter, shuttled between separate hospital rooms to comfort her husband and Hallie as they recovered. Within a few days of the surgery, father and daughter were comparing scars and reading books together in their hospital beds. Hallie was the better patient, according to the mother.

"He whined so much more than she did," Julie Gayle says, laughing.

Today, the scars of both father and daughter have healed. Hallie finished follow-up chemotherapy at Cook Children's Medical Center in Fort Worth last summer, and monthly blood tests show no traces of the disease.

"She's been kind of cruising on her own now," says Dr. Paul Bowman, director of the Fort Worth hospital's hematology-oncology department. "There is no measurable tumor and she's doing extremely well with her donated liver. It's a beautiful story."

Julie Gayle says Hallie and Kurk are her heroes.

Kurk Gayle says, however, that he's just one of hundreds. He remembers the bravery of his wife and 7-year-old Schaeffer when Hallie was ill. He cites the prayers of innumerable relatives, friends and strangers; the medical genius of doctors in Norfolk, Fort Worth and San Francisco; neighbors who had put up their Christmas lights when the family was at a hospital out of town; the stranger who noticed Hallie's bald head, and bought her a huge teddy bear as the family sat in a restaurant.

"Just to see the humanity involved in this one moment of a girl's life," Kurk Gayle says.

But only one person shares his daughter's physical scars.

"It's been so rewarding to go through this experience, to go through surgery, to go through anesthesia, to go through recovery, the father says.

Exercise has double benefits for seniors

CHICAGO (AP) - A little exercise can help older people sleep better and relieve their arthritis, researchers reported Tuesday.

The two studies do more than confirm conventional wisdom - they suggest a low-cost means of cutting the nation's health expenditures, Dr. David M. Buchner of the University of Washington said in an accompanying editorial.

The studies were published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

One study, led by researchers at Stanford University, involved 43 sedentary, healthy adults 50 to 76 years old with mild to moderate sleep problems, such as taking longer than 25 minutes on average to fall asleep and sleeping an average of only six hours a night.

Half the participants underwent 16 weeks of aerobics, each week consisting of two hour-long low-impact classes at a YMCA and two 40-minute sessions of brisk walking or stationary cycling at home. The other half did nothing.

At the end of the study, the subjects who exercised reported that they fell asleep about 15 minutes faster and slept about 45 minutes longer than before. Those who did not exercise showed little or no improvement.

In the other study, people with osteoarthritis who walked briskly or worked out with weights for three hour-long sessions a week could climb stairs, get out of cars and perform other activities more easily and with less pain. The 18-month study involved 349 people age 60 or older.

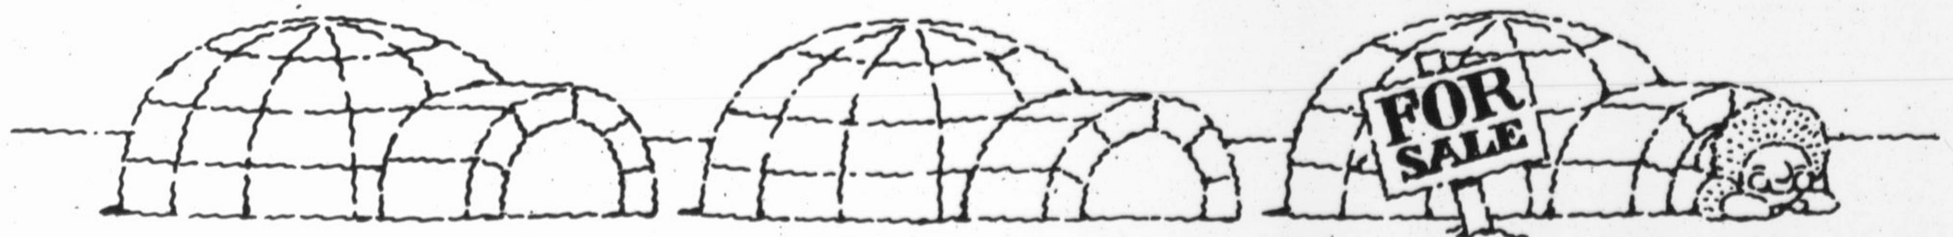

"It probably doesn't matter what you do as long as you do it," said the lead researcher, Dr. Walter H. Ettinger Jr. of Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C. "We've got to figure out how you get people active and how you keep them active."

Exercise already is generally recommended as a treatment for osteoarthritis by the Arthritis Foundation and the American College of Rheumatology.

Some Social Security recipients could owe taxes

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Better-off Social Security recipients - about one in four - must pay taxes on some portion of their benefits.

How much depends on how much outside income they earn. Up to 50 percent of their benefits will be subject to tax if their other income plus half their Social Security benefits totaled between $32,000 and $44,000 (married filing jointly) or between $25,000 and $34,000 (single).

Up to 85 percent of their benefits will be subject to tax if their income - including half their benefits - was more than $44,000 (married filing jointly) or more than $34,000 (single).

Although most recipients don't pay taxes on any part of their benefits, many are forced to do some complicated figuring just to make sure they don't.

If you received Social Security benefits you should have received Form SSA-1099 in the mail by Jan. 31. IRS Notice 703, included with the form, has a worksheet, as do the instruction booklets for Forms 1040 and 1040A. If any part of your Social Security is taxable, you may not use Form 1040EZ. Publication 915 has more information.

Figuring out how much of your yearly retirement pension or annuity distribution is taxable also can be pretty complicated. The easiest situation is if you contributed nothing to your pension or annuity. Then, it's all taxable.

But if you contributed some of it in after-tax dollars, then you don't have to pay tax on the part of your pension that represents a return of those contributions.

If your Form 1099-R on your pension or annuity shows a taxable amount, you can report that as taxable income. Or, try using the worksheet in the Form 1040 instruction booklet to see if you can report a lower amount. It's a simplified formula that divides the non-taxable part of your pension by the number of payments you're expected to receive, based on your age.

But, the formula only applies if your pension or annuity started after July 1, 1986, and before Nov. 19, 1996. If your pension started July 1, 1986, or before, see Publication 939. If it started Nov. 19, 1996, or later, see Publication 575, or Publication 721 for U.S. civil service retirees.

Congress last year made the formula a little less generous for those starting their pensions on or after Nov. 19, 1996, essentially by assuming they'd live longer and collect more payments.

It also took away the $5,000 exclusion for death benefits paid to beneficiaries of employees and former employees. It was repealed for individuals who died after Aug. 20, 1996.

Those who turned 65 by Jan. 1, 1997, get a higher standard deduction than younger taxpayers. It's $1,000 higher for single filers for a total of $5,000, compared with $4,000 for those younger than 65. It's $1,600 higher for couples where both spouses are 65 or older and $800 higher for couples where one spouse is 65 or older. That's $8,300 and $7,500, respectively, compared with $6,700 for couples where both are younger than 65.

The blind get the same increase in their standard deduction. Those who are both blind and elderly get their deduction increased twice for a total of $2,000 more for a single filer and $3,200 more for a couple where both spouses are blind and elderly.

If you're poor and were 65 or older or totally disabled at the end of 1996, you may qualify for a special tax credit of up to $1,125.

If both you and your spouse qualify, your combined adjusted gross income must be less than $25,000 and you must have less than $7,500 non-taxable Social Security and pension income. The limits are $20,000 and $5,000 if only one spouse qualifies; $17,500 and $5,000 for single people; and $12,500 and $3,750 if you're married, don't live together and file separate returns.

You'll need to fill out Schedule 3 if you use Form 1040A or Schedule R if you use Form 1040. See Publication 524 for more information.

Help Your Heart Recipes

This recipe is intended to be part of an overall healthful eating plan. Total fat intake should be less than 30 percent of your total calories for a day — not for each food or recipe.

Greek Fish Sautéed with Tomatoes and Cinnamon

Psari Kapama

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil	¼ teaspoon black pepper
2 stalks celery, chopped	¼ teaspoon salt
1 medium onion, chopped	¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 large cloves garlic, crushed or minced	6 small fish fillets (about 1½ pounds), rinsed and patted dry
1 pound Italian plum tomatoes, chopped	2 to 3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice, to taste
1 medium carrot, sliced thinly	Chopped parsley, for garnish
1 bay leaf

Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add celery, onion, and garlic to skillet. Sauté for about 2 minutes, stirring constantly, adjusting heat if necessary so mixture doesn't brown.

Add tomatoes, carrot, bay leaf, pepper, salt, and cinnamon and cook for 5 minutes. Adjust pepper and cinnamon, if desired. Make 6 depressions in the mixture; place fish in depressions. Spoon hot vegetables over fish to cover. Cook over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes, or until fish is opaque all the way through.

Sprinkle the lemon juice over all, cover the skillet, and remove from heat. Let the skillet sit for about 5 minutes before serving so the flavors can permeate the fish. Remove bay leaf and garnish with parsley.

in every year or so.

"I'm not saying a patient will need something every year, but I'll check every year or two, to see what's changed."

At Rose's recommendation, Zamora also had his face treated with a citric acid peel. "It immediately cleared the face," he said. "My sons said I had raccoon eyes. It cleared up a whole bunch of that."

"People see it as an easy, simple, maintenance-type thing," said Samuel Stal, associate professor of surgery at Baylor College of Medicine.

"For younger patients, the technology has made a big difference," he said. "If people want small procedures, it can be done with a lot less morbidity," or complications.

Lasers and microsurgery diminish the scarring, bruising and swelling.

"Lasers have been around for a long time," said Charles Park, professor of plastic surgery at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

"Now the equipment is more sophisticated and easier to use," he said. "New applications have been developed, particularly in the use of lasers in resurfacing wrinkles."

Smaller incisions and better understanding of the anatomy of the face make it possible for surgeons to perform the newer, less radical "baby boomer" procedures, Stal said.

Even news accounts of alleged health problems from breast implant surgery have not dampened demand for cosmetic surgery, Rose said.

"Very few people don't do this because of the danger," he said.

The newest technological advance is ultrasonic liposuction, which emulsifies fat cells and makes them easier to suction, Rose said.

Columbia Bellaire Medical Center, where Rose and Reisman both perform surgery, is buying one of the new ultrasonic machines.

"It is interesting psychologically," Reisman said. "People don't see the area that has been suctioned or recontoured, but the patient clearly knows, and their self-esteem goes up."

Plastic surgery has become an extremely competitive business in Houston. Many surgeons are big advertisers in local magazines that are distributed through health clubs, exercise studios and other places where they are likely to find people who are concerned about their health and appearance.

Although most health insurance plans don't cover cosmetic surgery, managed care is having an indirect impact on the plastic surgery market.

Physicians like to perform the procedures because they don't have to deal with insurance companies' lower reimbursements and review of their practices.

Hospitals, such as Columbia Bellaire, are buying state-of-the-art equipment and providing marketing assistance because they want the surgeons to bring in their patients.

Some physicians who did not complete formal training in plastic surgery, including nose and throat specialists and some general surgeons, have expanded into plastic surgery because of growing demand.

Stal, the Baylor professor, said certification by the American Board of Plastic Surgery indicates that a surgeon has completed rigorous training in general surgery and plastic surgery - a process that takes six or seven years after completion of medical school.

Just because insurance companies don't set the rates for plastic surgery does not mean the surgeons can charge what they want.

Most of the procedures now are done in the surgeon's office or in a day surgery facility to keep the costs down.

While plastic surgery has become commonplace and less expensive, experts say it's important for patients to understand the risks and to find a doctor with whom they are comfortable.

"The operations are still operations," said Park, the UT professor. "They have risks and complications and side effects."

"When someone is looking for someone to do this type of work, they need to discuss it with the family doctor," he said.

Jackie Powell, 41, of Pasadena, said she went to Rose as she neared her 40th birthday on the recommendation of a friend, "who was extremely satisfied."

Ms. Powell first went to Rose in 1992, for a "tummy tuck." She's been back for a breast reduction and to improve the appearance of her eyes.

Rose said it's important to manage patients' expectations about plastic surgery.

"Most plastic surgeons feel it should be integrated into a general process of well-being," he said.

Most patients are people like Macki, who runs marathons and lifts weights, and Zamora, who lost 40 pounds on his own, the surgeons say.

"Disheveled, unkempt people don't make good patients," he said. "People do this as part of a self-improvement program."

Care center residents start year with special New Years party

By CARMEN DOTSON

One month is already gone and it seems like the year just started.

The residents of Hereford Care Center started out the year with a W.A.W.T.S.O.T.N.Y. (what a way to start out the new year) party on the 2nd.

There were nine residents who celebrated birthdays in January. The monthly party was held on the 3rd.

The nice snow that we had put a damper on some of the activities, but we aren't complaining because it was pretty to look at (as long as you didn't have to be out in it).

Because of the weather, residents participated in in-house activities, like watching TV in the Sun Room.

St. Joseph's Church at 10 a.m. every Sunday to visit residents in their rooms. First Baptist comes on the third Sunday of every month. We need other churches to volunteer as the residents love to hear the Gospel and the old hymns.

The Family Night will be at 6:30 on Feb. 13 with a salad dinner.

On Feb. 14 we will have a Valentine's party and crown a king and queen.

CHIROPRACTIC For Better Health

Dr. J. Todd Gray, D.C.

Enjoy Health And Vitality In Your Golden Years

Your body's function depends on sound structure. Chiropractic care is based on the philosophy that a person's health is the result of a balanced interplay of physical, psychological and environmental factors. Illness occurs when there is a disruption in this balance.

Chiropractic is safe, hands-on approach to health care which focuses on helping to restore the proper alignment, motion, and function of the body's nerves, muscles and skeletal system.

A doctor of chiropractic has at least six years of college and professional education, similar to that of a medical doctor. However, in chiropractic, the clinical emphasis is on conservative forms of treatment rather than on drugs and surgery.

In addition to treating aches, pains and stiffness of an aging body, your doctor of chiropractic utilizes procedures to enable your body to function more efficiently. He or she also advises you on proper nutrition and exercise. Chiropractic care helps you remain independent.

As your primary health-care practitioner, your doctor of chiropractic is fully trained in comprehensive diagnosis. If more specialized diagnostic or treatment procedures are required, your chiropractor will refer you to another member of the health-care team.

DURING NATIONAL HOME CARE WEEK, WE SALUTE THE DEDICATED PROFESSIONALS WHO PROVIDE QUALITY CARE FOR OUR PATIENTS THROUGHOUT THE YEAR!

Most home health agencies operate about the same. What makes Deaf Smith Home Care Service stand out from the crowd?
TWO things... our GREAT staff AND our Hospital. That's right. We're the only home health agency in town that is backed by Hereford Regional Medical Center.
