Cotton harvest

More than 6,000 acres of cotton were planted in Deaf Smith County this year. As farmers strip the cotton in the fields, the Hereford Farmers Gin, Inc. works to process the cotton brought to the gin. Above, a gin employee works on a module, while other employees prepare another module for the ginning process. Below, an employee operates the suction pipe on a module. The pipe sucks the cotton into the gin, where it is cleaned and processed into large bales.

Angry mobs explode in rioting after officer cleared by grand jury

By LISA HOLEWA
Associated Press Writer
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Hours after a white policeman was cleared in a shooting that sparked a race riot last month, angry mobs returned to the streets Wednesday, wounding two officers and setting small fires.

One of the officers was shot in the leg, and a sheriff's helicopter was forced to make an emergency landing after a bullet pierced the windshield and grazed the co-pilot's arm. At least seven other people were injured. Angry groups of youths pelted passing cars with rocks and chunks of concrete, and set at least 79 small fires in trash bins and buildings in predominately black south St. Petersburg. More than 200 police officers took to the streets, some responding with volleys of tear gas. Police Chief Darrel Stephens blamed it on a small group that had advocated violence if Officer Jim Knight was not indicted for fatally shooting a black motorist who had bumped him four times in a stolen car.

"A good part of the activity that is taking place on the streets tonight was planned," Stephens said at a late-night news conference. "I don't believe that this was a spontaneous event."

Police declared the scene "substantially under control" early Thursday.

Others injured included a white man in his 20s or 30s who appeared to be the victim of a drive-by shooting; a black man in his 40s who was hit in the face by a bottle as he drove through the area; and a white man in his 60s who was beaten up in a laundromat.

The violence broke out after a grand jury ruled that Knight's shooting was justified, partly because Lewis bumped him four times in a stolen car and refused to follow orders to surrender.

The panel explained its decision in a 9-page statement that appealed for calm and said the shooting had not been racially motivated. Stephens also suspended Knight for 60 days, without pay, saying he had "placed himself in a position of disadvantage and danger."

The trouble began shortly after 6 p.m., when a police officer was shot in the leg outside a house where members of the black separatist group, the National People's Democratic Uhuru Movement, meet. The group has called for the executions of the officers involved in last month's shooting.

"KILLER COP GOES FREE," read a flier the group handed out after the grand jury ruling. "We will not be shot down in the streets like dogs. Neither will we be pushed into jails for defending our community. ... GET ORGANIZED!"

Police arrested three leaders of the group Wednesday to try to prevent violence, two on outstanding warrants and another for expired license plates. They also collected more than six tons of rocks and bottles stashed in trash bins and other spots in the neighborhood, Stephens said.

Within a half-hour of the officer was shot, groups of youths began crowding the streets, throwing rocks and bottles at passing cars in a scene that, while smaller and more contained, resembled last month's violence.

The left rear window of Kim Freeman's car was shot out as she drove through the area with her 11-year-old son and two others. She managed to quickly drive away and no one in her car was hurt.

"This is a terrible thing. We need to find peace in our community," Freeman said, her voice shaking.

About 300 people roamed the streets after the Oct. 24 shooting, hurling firebombs, rocks and bottles, setting 29 fires, injuring 11 people and causing more than $5 million in damage.

People in the neighborhood were tense and angry about the decision not to indict the officer.

"It's unfair. Anytime a white cop shoots a black man who's unarmed, they say it's okay," Joyce Gibson, a 56-year-old nurse who lives near the site of last month's rioting. "He took a life, and they're taking it so lightly."

Authorities said TyRon Lewis, 18, failed to respond several times when Knight ordered him out of a car which Knight and his partner had stopped for speeding on Oct. 24.

When Knight moved to the front of the car to peer inside, Lewis moved the vehicle toward him, bumping him twice "in an apparent effort to intimidate or challenge the officer," the grand jury said.

The panel said Knight's partner, (See ANGRY MOBS, Page 2)

Austin judge declines to dismiss school suit

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - A state judge has refused to dismiss a lawsuit by school districts that says the State Board of Education is sitting on an estimated $89 million that should be spent on computers and other technology in the classroom.

Judge F. Scott McCown asked lawyers for the school districts, however, to see if their clients are willing to delay the case against the board until the Legislature can act on the matter. Lawmakers meet in regular session in January.

"I think it's appropriate for the Legislature to have an opportunity to address this problem," McCown said Wednesday.

More than 80 school districts have sued, saying that under the 1995 education reform law, they should be getting $55 per student for technology this school year. Instead, the board has OK'd only $30 per student, the districts said.

The $89 million is the amount that has been estimated as the difference statewide by Austin lawyer Buck Wood, who represents the school districts.

Lawyers for the board say there's a discrepancy between the education law's provision for increased technology funding and the state budget, which doesn't provide for the increase.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter, representing the state board, said because of the discrepancy, the board doesn't believe it has authority to distribute the extra money.

But she said the problem "can certainly be fixed by the Legislature."

Ms. Hunter asked McCown to dismiss the lawsuit, saying the school districts need legislative permission to sue the state. McCown would not.

Failing that, Ms. Hunter asked him to delay the lawsuit, noting the pending legislative session. McCown said if school districts agree to voluntarily delay the lawsuit, a trial could be set in middle or late February. If they do not agree, and McCown decides not to require a delay, he said a trial in the case would begin Dec. 19.

Wood said school districts, in deciding whether to agree to a delay, must weigh the likelihood of the Legislature giving them the money for technology rather than deciding to spend it elsewhere.

"It's just so uncertain. That's the dangerous part about this," he said.

"There's been some reaction (from lawmakers) that, 'Gosh, if you just had come and talked to us about this, you wouldn't have had to file a lawsuit,'" he said. "Then we've got people saying, 'Whee, we have some extra money.'"

Week set aside to receive applications for CSF aid

The Christmas Stocking Fund is gearing up for its 1996 campaign to make the holidays brighter for the community's less fortunate.

This year, applications will be taken one week only - from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. next week, Nov. 18-22, at Hereford Community Center. Any legal resident of Deaf Smith County is eligible to apply for assistance.

Applicants must provide Social Security numbers and valid proof of residence, such as driver's license or current utility bills. If an individual is requesting aid with medical or utility expenses, account numbers must be provided. Request for aid does not guarantee that help will be provided.

The Christmas Stocking Fund is supported through the generous donations of local residents, whose names are published in The Hereford Brand. Contributions will be accepted at The Brand office or may be mailed to CSF, c/o Box 673, Hereford. Checks should be made payable to Christmas Stocking Fund.

The non-profit stocking fund is administered by an anonymous committee of local volunteers. The group screens applications and authorizes help in the form of food baskets, vouchers for children's clothing, and assistance with medical and utility bills.

The CSF committee has a few openings this year for volunteers. Interested persons should submit their names to The Brand office for further contact.

Bush's budget proposal would lower property taxes in Texas by $1 billion

By JUAN B. ELIZONDO Jr.
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. George W. Bush says a $1 billion cut in school property taxes would be a good start in reducing the $10 billion collected through the levy each year.

Bush announced Wednesday that his budget proposal for the next two fiscal years will include a recommendation that $1 billion generated from higher-than-expected state revenues and lower-than-expected spending go to property tax relief.

"I believe taxpayers should benefit from leaner government," Bush said.

Rep. Robert Junell, D-San Angelo and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said he wants to see where the governor has come up with $1 billion.

"I'm not aware of anybody in the Legislature who was consulted on this before the governor made his announcement," Junell said. "I look forward to seeing where he and his people say (the money) is."

Ross Ramsey, an aide to Comptroller John Sharp, said official estimates of state financing haven't been completed. But he said Sharp, a Democrat, will present a list of $1 billion in additional state spending cuts.

"We're seeing him a billion and raising him a billion," Ramsey said.

Sharp is considered a potential challenger to the Republican governor if he were to seek re-election in two years. But Ramsey said politics won't factor into Sharp's financial estimates.

"This (estimate) is one of our constitutional duties and every two years someone says it's political. It will be a clean number," he said.

Richard Lavine, a fiscal analyst for the Center for Public Policy Priorities, said any extra state revenues or lower government spending is generating one-time funds. He said the state would have to find $1 billion in future budgets when spending could be up and revenues could be down.

"He hasn't explained what state functions aren't going to get funding or who's going to get the tax relief," Lavine said of Bush's plan.

Bush said he hasn't worked out how the $1 billion would be distributed or who would get it. But he said the money already is available and wouldn't have to be cut from department budgets.

"I'm going to lay out specifics of all my budget at a later time. We don't have it fully fleshed out," he said.

Bush began talking about the need for school property tax relief last year. Since then, a commission he appointed has said Texans need a cut in school property taxes.

Any cut or reduction would be replaced by some other tax.

Bush asked the commission to consider increasing the state's sales tax or imposing new business taxes. The governor has said he won't consider a state income tax.

The tax commission didn't recommend how to generate the needed school funds, but said lowering school property taxes and replacing them with a combination of other taxes could be one solution.

Bush said while the $1 billion is already available, he could recommend further spending cuts. He would not elaborate.

The governor also praised Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's idea to use Texas lottery funds to help cut school property taxes.

"It's an interesting idea," Bush said.

Defendants to get phone records

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) - An irritated judge ordered prosecutors Wednesday to give defense attorneys a copy of a computer database of phone-record information in the Oklahoma City bombing case.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch was visibly annoyed by the wrangling over which prosecution phone records should be turned over to the defense.

"Straighten this out for me," he said at one point, cutting short a prosecutor. "I'm becoming a little irritated."

"You provide the database. That's an order," he said.

Lawyers for Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols want to see the computer list of bomb victims and survivors. Prosecutors objected, saying it would intrude on their privacy.

"There's an incredible amount of personal information," said prosecutor Beth Wilkinson. "I think they would feel very strongly about that information being turned over."

McVeigh and Nichols sat quietly in the courtroom during the first day of the three-day hearing over evidence. It was one of the last times they will be together in court, as Matsch has ordered separate trials, with McVeigh to go on trial first. No dates have been set.

Matsch also granted McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones' request that prosecutors must turn over any information about allegations involving mishandled evidence at the FBI lab.

Prosecutors also agreed to turn over FBI interview transcripts by Dec. 18. Jones said earlier that delays are pushing back his trial preparations and that it has taken prosecutors an average of 500 days to produce transcripts of the interviews.

Wilkinson has said government attorneys have turned over most of an estimated 100,000 tangible items of evidence, and have given defense attorneys 440 videos and about 30,000 photographs.

The prosecutor agreed to double-check 500 hours of government videotapes to determine if McVeigh appeared on federal

Moyers chastises Texas Baptists for clinging to an 'alien ideology'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Broadcaster Bill Moyers says Southern Baptist conservatives are clinging to an "alien ideology" by leaning towards a literal interpretation of the Bible and a close-minded philosophy.

Speaking at the Baptist General Convention of Texas, Moyers - a Baptist minister - blasted the conservative faction for pushing a belief system that is "less a set of ideas than it is a pathological distemper, a militant anger over the fact that the universe is not closed and life is not static."

He told 1,700 supporters at Tuesday's meeting that Baptists must accept other religions and reject conservative legislation that is not inclusive.

Jury pay dispute erupts in lawsuit

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) - A multimillion-dollar lawsuit between two electronics giants has triggered a battle over jury pay that has been taken all the way to Austin.

The controversy erupted when District Judge Brady G. Elliott announced that jurors hearing the case of Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd. vs. Texas Instruments Inc. will be paid $50 per day instead of the usual $6 paid to jurors in Fort Bend County.

County officials say the law clearly limits jury pay to $30 a day.

Most of the extra money will come from the parties in the lawsuit, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

"I have a real problem with it," District Clerk Glory Hopkins said.

Texas law says commissioners courts will set jury pay at not less than $6 nor more than $30 a day.

The judge told the jurors about the higher pay when they were seated Nov. 4, but said he cannot discuss details until the trial is concluded. It is expected to last two to four weeks.

"The reasons and the means by which we do this I'm deferring to the end of trial," Elliott said.

Without elaborating, Elliott said there have been court cases in other Texas counties where jurors have been paid more.

The $365 million lawsuit involves a Samsung accusation of fraud, negligence and unfair competition in a 1990 cross-licensing negotiation involving computer technology.

County Judge Mike Rozzell said he will check with the county attorney on the pay issue.

"I seriously doubt any laws are being broken, because I don't think Judge Elliott would do that," Rozzell said. "However, he hasn't told me which statute gives him the authority to do it. It's my opinion we set the price for juror payment at $6."

The district clerk, who is responsible for entering jurors' names in the system once a trial ends so their checks can be issued, also said the judge wants weekly payments to jurors. She said she will take no action without a court order.

Elliott says he will issue one.

Treasurer Kathy Hynson wrote a letter to Elliott on Wednesday saying she will not deposit the funds for additional juror pay into the county depository because it is illegal.

But Ms. Hynson said she could set up an account at a bank other than the county depository and have cashier's checks drawn on the account for the amount above the $6 daily fee.

The district clerk said she has contacted the state attorney general's office, the state comptroller's office and legal experts around Texas, but no one can find a previous example or administrative guidelines to follow.

conscience... Your witness goes beyond politics and power to the love of liberty."

Still, Moyers was quickly criticized for his words.

"Bill Moyers is just the kind of liberal we're trying to get away from," said J. Walter Carpenter, editor of "Plumbline," a conservative publication of the Southern Baptists of Texas.

Carpenter also denounced Moyers' PBS series, Genesis.

"He's trying to distort the word of God," Carpenter said. "I watched some of it, but I had to keep running to the bathroom to throw up."

Moderates struck a blow against conservatives at the convention when they elected Dr. Charles Wade, pastor of First Baptist Church of Arlington, to a second term as convention president.

He was opposed by a conservative pastor Rev. Rick Scarborough from Pearl.

Rev. Marvin Griffin of Austin, also a moderate, was elected first vice president. He will be the first African-American to serve in that post.

Conservatives won a small victory at the convention by upholding their right to send delegates to the state convention, but only donate funds to the Southern Baptist Convention.

They also voted to oppose any expansion of gambling in Texas.

Controller warned pilot of approach of Saudi jetliner

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer
CHARKHI DADRI, India (AP)

As a Kazak cargo plane flew head-on toward a Saudi jetliner, controllers told its pilot to watch out for the 747 in the clouds ahead. The pilot asked how close it was.

"Fourteen miles," a controller said.

Seconds later: "Thirteen miles."

The pilot's acknowledgement of that message was the last word New Delhi airport flight controllers had from either aircraft before they hit and spun to earth in spectacular twin fireballs, taking 349 people to their deaths.

The exchanges, in transcripts released Wednesday, indicate the planes did not see each other in time and hint that the pilots were misled by their instruments or misunderstood the tower's directions. They were supposed to pass with a 1,000-foot difference in altitude - instructions that the Saudi plane's pilots never confirmed, the transcripts show.

The Saudi Boeing 747 was seven minutes into its flight and the Kazak plane was descending for its final approach into Indira Gandhi International Airport when the collision occurred Tuesday about 60 miles southwest of New Delhi.

Whether there was a last-minute evasive maneuver by either plane was unclear, but India's top civil aviation ministry official said the crash was not direct.

"It was not a head-on collision," Yogesh Chandra said at a news conference. "The cockpit and fuselage of the Kazak airliner was found intact."

Searchers retrieved hundreds of bodies from wreckage strewn in a six-mile area around Charkhi Dadri. Grieving relatives tried to identify the badly mangled remains of their loved ones lying on blocks of ice at makeshift morgues.

Many of the victims of the Saudi Airlines flight that carried 312 passengers and crew apparently were Indian workers returning to jobs in the Middle East or making the Muslim pilgrimage to Mecca; the Kazak plane carrying 37 people had been chartered by a clothing company in Kazakhstan.

School superintendent is indicted for perjury

SNOOK, Texas (AP) - The superintendent of a small Central Texas school district has been indicted on a charge he lied about his late wife's insurance policies, prompting a new look at her apparent suicide.

Snook Superintendent Frank Cook III told grand jurors after the Aug. 27 death of his wife, Janet, that she had one policy worth $250,000.

But Charles Sebesta, district attorney for Burleson and Washington counties, said there were also two more policies, each worth $1 million.

Cook was arrested and jailed Tuesday and indicted on one count of aggravated perjury, which is punishable by up to 10 years in prison. He was released Wednesday after posting $50,000 bond, said Deputy Chief Mike Brackman of the Burleson County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. Cook, 38, an elementary special education teacher in the Hempstead school district, was found shot to death in her locked car near Snook, a town of about 500 people about 20 miles west of Bryan. She had one shotgun wound to the chest.

The investigation was closed Oct. 23, but now the case will be reopened, said Sheriff Gene Barber. Prosecutor Sebesta said the insurance investigation began when the policy issuers called last week to verify the cause of Mrs. Cook's death.

Diane Hagenbuch, a spokeswoman for Ohio National Life Insurance Co., said Wednesday that company policy barred her from commenting on claims or policyholders.

But, she added: "There have been discussions between our claims department and the district attorney for Burleson County."

Officials with the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. would not comment on the Cook policy.

A weeping Irene Colaso said she identified her 20-year-old daughter Sanim, a flight attendant on the Saudi plane, by her feet - the rest of her body was burned beyond recognition.

Searchers found the flight data recorders of both planes Wednesday but only the cockpit voice recorder of the Kazak plane. The recordings were not made public immediately.

But flight control transcripts showed that the airport tower instructing the Kazak plane to fly at 15,000 feet and the Saudi plane, which was ascending, to level off at 14,000 feet. The Saudi plane never acknowledged the order to hold its altitude.

The tower then tells the Kazak plane's pilot that the Saudi aircraft is 14 miles away: "Identified traffic 12 o'clock reciprocal. Saudi Boeing 747, 14 miles. Report in sight."

The Kazak pilot replied: "Report how many miles?"

"Fourteen miles now," the tower said.

Moments later, the controller told the pilot that the Saudi plane was just 13 miles away, flying at 14,000 feet.

The aircraft were traveling at hundreds of miles per hour at the time of the crash; the Boeing 747 takes off at about 200 mph, reaching a maximum speed of 600 mph, while the slightly slower Ilyushin-76 flown by Kazakhstan Airlines lands at about 150 mph.

At that speed, the planes heading toward one another were eating up about six miles per minute. With 13 miles separating the two aircraft, the pilots had just two minutes to avoid a crash.

The exact cause of the crash, the third-deadliest crash in aviation history, may take months to determine. But speculation already has focused on antiquated radar equipment and poor communications.

The Indian Express newspaper, saying the accident was a "disaster waiting to happen," on Wednesday quoted aviation officials as saying there had been 10 recent near-misses in India's skies, most involving airlines from former Soviet republics.

The Saudi plane carried two Americans. Their names and hometowns have not been released.

The $1 million policies each were to set up a trust fund for the couple's 15-year-old son, Frank Cook IV, Sebesta said. The $250,000 policy was to benefit the superintendent.

Dorothy See, president of the school board overseeing the 540-student school, told the Bryan-College Station Eagle she could not comment on what action the district might take against Cook.

Cook already is under indictment in a case in the Bullard school district, where he resigned the superintendent's position in June before coming to Snook.

A grand jury investigating possible violations of bidding laws and the Texas Open Records Act indicted Cook in August on the open records charge of violating an misdemeanor act, Smith County District Attorney Jack Skeen said Wednesday.

That case is pending in a county court-at-law, Skeen said. A conviction carries up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Revolution in Hill Country town reflects changing face of Texas

By SUSANA HAYWARD
San Antonio Express-News
NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas -- In this bustling tourist town famous for its proud German heritage and Hill Country beauty, a Hispanic revolution is afoot that reflects the changing face of Texas.

"The perception is that this is a small, quaint German town," said Ron Gonzalez, restaurant owner and chairman of the new kid in town: the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "And it's not."

New Braunfels, he said, is not solely German but also Hispanic, a town much like others in Texas with a strong and growing minority population.

Sitting at his bar and grill, the Solms City Limits, Gonzalez ponders the evolution of this city, renowned for its Wurstfest celebration, sausage, tubing on the Guadalupe River and Schlitterbahn.

The city's motto is written in German: "Ist Das Leben Schon," which means "where the living is good."

When Gonzalez, along with friends and business acquaintances, formed the Greater Hispanic Chamber of Commerce more than a year ago, he stirred that good life a bit.

"Hispanics are more than 40 percent of New Braunfels' population," said Gonzalez, who was born 31 years ago in Frankfurt, Germany. "But in a changing society, we haven't been able to compete."

New Braunfels, sandwiched between San Antonio and Austin along the booming Interstate 35 corridor, epitomizes the changing demographics of Texas at the turn of the century.

As the Mexican-American population grows, it is demanding, and increasingly receiving, a bigger piece of the action.

The U.S. Census projects that by the 2000, more than 6 million Hispanics will live in Texas.

In Comal County, the numbers have jumped from 11,864 out of a total population of 51,832 (or 22 percent) in 1990 to an estimated 15,000 out of 60,830 (or 25 percent) in 1994, the last year for which complete figures are available.

A majority of Comal County Hispanics live in New Braunfels, where the estimated population in 1994 was 31,153. It is difficult to say exactly how many Hispanics live in the city; researchers say problems with undercounting immigrant populations tend to make official figures lower than real numbers.

For Hispanic leaders, the growing population clearly paints a more mosaic picture of New Braunfels.

"There is no such thing as a German town. It's obviously an American town, whose ancestry is German but whose ancestry now is starting to become more Hispanic," said Joe Morin, president of the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce. "It's very important for a city to keep up with reality."

Victory proclaimed

Hereford Ministerial Alliance will present "Heaven's Gates and Hell's Flames" for three performances on Nov. 17-19 at 7 p.m. in the HISD Administration Building. The production, which will feature a local cast, brings to life the realities of judgement with its rewards and punishments. This photo, from a production in Amarillo, shows an actor portraying Jesus Christ as he claims victory over Satan by rising from the dead.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You've printed a lot of letters about the Internet, and although many of them are about spouses running off with their newfound "soul mates," you've been open-minded enough to mention some good self-help groups, too. I have a great Internet story for you that I read in the Journal of the American Medical Association. I hope you will print it.

Back in 1994, a 21-year-old Chinese girl studying physical chemistry in Beijing became quite ill. She had abdominal pain and hair loss but responded to traditional Chinese therapy and nutritional support. In March 1995, however, she was hospitalized with a variety of central nervous system complaints, and within five days, she lapsed into a coma.

The doctors performed a battery of tests, but the girl didn't respond. Her fellow students at Beijing University were concerned about her and sent out e-mail over the Internet, describing her symptoms and asking for help.

The first person to respond was Dr. Stephen O. Cunnion, a U.S. Navy captain who is an infectious disease epidemiologist. He suggested the girl's problem could be thallium poisoning, a rather rare condition. In the next four weeks, more than 2,000 people responded to the students' plea, and more than 80 supported Dr. Cunnion's diagnosis.

The students brought this information to the Chinese physicians who then conducted tests that confirmed thallium poisoning. Doctors from California, particularly at UCLA, helped coordinate the medical assistance from around the world so this girl could be properly treated.

Chinese physicians reported shortly after that the young student regained consciousness and the prognosis is encouraging. They are also checking to see if perhaps the girl was deliberately poisoned, since thallium poisoning would be difficult to contract otherwise.

This is truly the Internet at its best. Ann, I hope you will let your readers know. -- Techie in Chicago

Dear Techie: You let them know -- and in a way that was most effective. I appreciate the positive input.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a single male, 28, and have a good life, good family, good friends and a great job. I'm considered good-looking and am fairly outgoing.

So what's my problem? I blush at the drop of a hat. I can turn red if someone mentions "toilet paper." I've been told by several women that when I blush I look "cute," but I really do hate it. Is there anything I can do to keep myself from blushing? -- Tomato Face in Chicago

Dear Chicago: Face it. You're a blusher -- and there is no way you can do anything about it. In fact, the harder you try not to blush, the more florid your face will become.

I personally find blushers quite charming. I wish I could blush, but it's hopeless. One would think that more than 40 years of writing this column would produce an occasional blush, but it has never happened.

P.S. I'll bet you are a blue-eyed blond. My research reveals that they are the best blushers.

Gem of the Day (Credit Lyndon B. Johnson): My daughter, Lucy Johnson, was asked by a writer to describe her relationship with her father, hoping to elicit a warm family feeling. She replied, "Blood."

Have trouble sleeping at night and don't want to get involved in a novel? "A Collection of My Favorite Gems of the Day" is the perfect bed-stand mate. Arellano presents program as Xi Epsilon Alpha meets Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met in the home of Linda Arellano who gave the program for the meeting.

Arellano spoke on the healthy aspect of eating a variety of vegetables to help fight cancer and boost immunity to it.

She also gave information on a hormone, DHEA, which helps in a variety of ways with PMS, Lupus, low energy and others.

In the absence of president Sharon Bodner, Arellano conducted the business meeting.

Social chairman Susan Shaw reminded members that a fall couples party would be held soon. The meal will be a Mexican Stack and those attending will play Crazy Bridge.

Diane Beavers, last year's chapter sweetheart, announced that Dee Hamilton was selected as sweetheart for the coming year. Members extended their congratulations to Hamilton.

Refreshments of caramel apples and popcorn balls were served by Arellano and Beavers to guest Ronda Clark and members Deann Harris, Melinda Henson, Peggy Hyer, Connie Matthews, Gaye Reily, Pattie Urbanczyk, Melinda Whitfill, Kay Williams, Shaw and Hamilton.

History of art is program topic

David Rindlesbacher, art instructor at West Texas A&M University, gave the program when Hereford Study Club met recently in the home of Jeane Dowell with Evelyn Wilson serving as co-hostess.

Rindlesbacher, who was introduced by Willie Braddy, showed some of his art and told the history of each one. He then gave a demonstration in pastels, creating a portrait of Mrs. Braddy.

Joan Yarbro, president, conducted the business meeting.

The December meeting will be a trip to Amarillo to attend a Christmas program.

In attendance at the meeting were Jean Ballard, Morgan Cain, Elizabeth Cesar, Hazel Ford, Mildred Garrison, Betty Gilbert, Elizabeth Hellman, Betty Martin, Carole McGilvary, Nedra Robinson, Mary Stoy, Virginia Winget, Gladys Setliff, Dowell, Wilson, Yarbro and Braddy.

Hints from Heloise

RECYCLING HINT

Dear Heloise: Try my recycling hint that I use at work. I cut used copy paper in half and then with a binder-clip I attach it to a heavy piece of cardboard the same size as the paper, so now it's a memo pad! — Trish Anders, Omaha, Neb.

TV REMOTE CONTROL

Dear Heloise: I don't recall having seen this hint in your column before, so I'll pass it on to you.

My husband and I don't enjoy watching the same programs at night, so when I go to bed, I put on my earphones and watch what I like without disturbing him.

I had a problem locating the remote control sometimes, losing it in the covers. I had just worn out my eyeglass holder and bought a new one. One evening the thought hit me that perhaps the TV remote would fit in the old one.

Voilà! A perfect fit and now I can find it easily on my bedside table. — Judy Allison, Fort Worth, Texas

QUICKER REFERENCE

Dear Heloise: For quick reference of telephone numbers you may need, write name and phone number in the upper margin of the phone book. They're easy to see! — Bart Harst, San Marcos, Texas

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

REVOLUTION

times. When the Hispanic Chamber was formed in April 1995, it miffed the Greater New Braunfels Chamber of Commerce, whose members felt there was no need to duplicate efforts.

That was the perception when the Hispanic chamber recently made an unsuccessful bid to receive an undisclosed percentage of the motel-hotel occupancy tax revenue, which averages about $1 million per year. The majority of those funds now go to the Greater New Braunfels chamber to promote tourism.

They said we were being divisive of the community," Gonzalez said.

Under a new five-year contract approved by the City Council, the Greater New Braunfels chamber will receive between $714,000 and $867,000 per year to promote tourism. The Hispanic Chamber had sought $455,000 annually for the next five years. The council also voted to set aside $20,000 a year to give out in grants to promote special events, and the Hispanic Chamber will be able to compete for that money.

Michael Meek, president of the Greater New Braunfels chamber, has said that promoting the city's Hispanic side is not good business because it puts New Braunfels in competition with San Antonio and other Texas cities already well known for their Hispanic culture.

"What makes New Braunfels unique is our predominant German heritage," he said. "New Braunfels is well known not only in Texas but also across the country. We are known as a tourism destination.

"To compete with San Antonio, Laredo and the (Rio Grande) Valley, we feel we would lose a lot of momentum because we are not unique in that regard," Meek said.

One reason there is so much tourism about 2 million visitors annually is because New Braunfels is touted as German, Meek said.

"If you all of a sudden have duplicate efforts, you are doing a disservice," Meek added. "We have to show a united front.

Gonzalez can still see a conflict. "We do not promote this as German but at the same time, there is another aspect to this community," Gonzalez said. "The Hispanic community is just as rich as the German."

It is not unusual for a city to cling to the laurels that put it on the map. Take San Antonio, for example.

"San Antonio keeps living off the Alamo," said Heywood Sanders, professor of urban administration at Trinity University. "We are a very different city from the little civil settlement that we were at the time of the war for Texas independence, and yet it's that chunk of our history that is terribly crucial to how a city is portrayed and marketed."

Sanders said small towns such as New Braunfels and Boerne begin to lose their historical distinctiveness as their economies become increasingly linked to the Alamo City.

It's a phenomenon not unique to New Braunfels. It exists wherever there is suburban growth, he said.

"The growth reflects the whole evolution of Texas, which also is losing its distinctiveness," Sanders said.

WTAMU

The Miser, the French comedy farce by Moliere, will open at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Branding Iron Theatre on the West Texas A&M University campus. Performances will continue at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 24.

The David Chambers modern production follows the original plot with a few extra surprises. The main action surrounds the money- and power-hungry miser, Harpagon. The WTAMU production is set in the 1600s with traditional costumes and sets.

Tickets are $7 at the door or can be purchased in advance at the Department of Art, Communication and Theatre, Room 151 in the Fine Arts Building on the WTAMU campus. Seniors 65 and older will receive a $2 discount. For more information or to reserve tickets, contact the WTAMU Department of Art, Communication and Theatre at 806-656-2798 (8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday) or 806-656-2804 (evening of performance).

CANYON

An exhibition titled "The Panhandle's Gallery: 75 Years of Collecting Art" will be featured at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon beginning Saturday.

The exhibition, which will appear in the main art galleries, will include selections from major collections and other acquisitions collected by the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society over the past 75 years.

The exhibition will complement the permanent art galleries at the Museum and emphasize that the Museum is the public art gallery for the entire Texas Panhandle. The exhibition runs through Jan. 26, 1997.

DIMMITT

Santa Dimmitt will make his first visit to Canyon on Nov. 21 via a fire truck during the Chamber of Commerce's annual "Santa's Open House."

The event will begin at 6 p.m. with more than 20 local businesses opening up with special discounts and refreshments for customers. Santa will arrive at the gazebo at 6:30 p.m. Carolers from Dimmitt Junior High and High School Choirs will also be at the gazebo providing musical entertainment.

This annual event kicks off the Christmas shopping season in Dimmitt.

Special discounts and "mystery sale items" will be offered in most stores. Free refreshments will be served. Businesses will remain open until 9 p.m.

Spurs knock off Lakers

Los Angeles loses Ceballos to injury

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer
 Less than 24 hours after their brightest moment of the season, the Los Angeles Lakers came crashing back to Earth with a thud. In Cedric Ceballos' case, it was a crash and a thud that could be devastating.

Ceballos had to be taken off the court on a stretcher at the Alamodome after tearing a knee tendon in the Lakers' 95-83 loss to the injury-riddled San Antonio Spurs. He was to be examined today by the Lakers' team doctor. For the moment, the team was offering no long-term prognosis. It was a dramatic comedown for a team that one night earlier knocked the Houston Rockets from the ranks of the unbeaten with a thrilling double-overtime victory on national television.

"Playing in back-to-back games is difficult," coach Del Harris said. "We had a similar situation after a win last week in New York."

So similar, in fact, that after beating the Knicks on national TV, the Lakers dropped a game the next night at Charlotte. Then they lost another at Toronto.

It's all part of an up-and-down season for the Lakers, who are 5-3.

Going into Wednesday's game, it appeared the Spurs would need a miracle just to keep up with the Lakers. David Robinson hasn't played all season, nor has backup Will Perdue.

prospect of guarding Shaquille O'Neal with Greg Anderson, Carl Herrera and Tim Kempton.

O'Neal managed to get 30 points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots, but he got little help from his teammates.

"Everyone had to play well tonight to win this game," said Spurs coach Bob Hill, who saw his team rebound the taller Lakers 43-34. "It was one of those games where everyone had to contribute. We had to rebound with all five guys going for the ball. There was no two ways about it."

Dominique Wilkins scored 28 points on 10-of-19 shooting with four 3-pointers, Vernon Maxwell added 22 points, Avery Johnson 16 and Sean Elliott 14 for San Antonio, which scored a season-high 95 points.

The Lakers, who shot only 39.5 percent, lost Ceballos with 3:49 left in the fourth quarter when he came down awkwardly after scoring on a 2-on-1 break. The Lakers said he suffered a partial tear of the patella tendon. He was on the floor for about five minutes before being wheeled off.

In other NBA games, Chicago breezed past Miami 103-71, Utah drubbed Sacramento 105-74, Detroit edged Denver 95-94 in overtime, Cleveland defeated Portland 81-70, Washington downed New Jersey 106-91, Toronto beat Philadelphia 110-98 and Boston defeated Atlanta 103-85.

Bulls 103, Heat 71

At Chicago, the unbeaten Bulls had their most lopsided victory of the season. Ironically, it came against a team that also provided Chicago's closest margin of victory.

Toni Kukoc scored 26 points on 11-of-14 shooting, Michael Jordan had 28 points despite missing 15 of 23 field-goal attempts and Dennis Rodman added 19 rebounds.

The Bulls (8-0) are winning by an average of 18.4 points.

Lorenzo earns 1st playoff berth

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
 LORENZO, Texas (AP) - The Lorenzo High trophy case heralds many truths about athletic successes over the last seven decades. It also contains one white lie.

The golden football statuette emblazoned with "District Champs, 1954," that sits on the left side of the cluttered display commemorates something that never happened. The team actually finished second.

"Basically, the story goes that the school that won the district (that year) used an ineligible player," said Lorenzo girls basketball coach and amateur historian Joey Nichols.

Years later, a still-angry alum decided to right that wrong, so he bought the trophy and carved in the title that got away.

Because of that falsification, players and coaches thought they were trying to end a 42-year playoff drought this season. As the year unfolded, townsfolk clued them in that there has never been a postseason appearance since the team first began playing in the 1920s.

The Hornets went 7-3 overall and 4-1 in district, losing only to arch-rival Petersburg. Lorenzo faces Wink in the Class A playoffs Friday night.

"They're sort of surprised, but excited about it," said coach Felix Martinez, who has seen 15 years of near-misses at Lorenzo. "It seems like the boys have finally broken that wall. That was the big thing."

Martinez's drought is nothing compared to Jack Bowman's. The lifelong resident of Lorenzo, which is located 20 miles east of Lubbock, was a member of the 1930 team that lost 186-0 to a ringer-filled Spur club.

"We got beat so bad, we threw all the suits away," he said. "We threw them out the window of our bus."

The school then dropped football and didn't pick it up until the early 1950s, right before their faux championship.

NCA girls' cagers whip Amarillo girls

The girls' basketball team from Nazarene Christian Academy defeated the Amarillo home school team 26-17 Tuesday in Amarillo.

NCA's Lindsee Goforth led all scorers with 14 points.

Earlier this week, the NCA boys team took on a team of men from Nazarene Christian Church. That game definitely separated the boys from the men - the boys won, 70-61.

Chayse Rives led the NCA boys with 32 points, Jacob Power scored 10 and Justin Ward added eight points.

The Nazarene men were led by Jim Pope with 24 points and Rick Chavez with 14.

Both NCA teams will play Trinity Fellowship today in Amarillo.

Tribe gets slugger Williams in trade with San Francisco

By KEN BERGER
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) - Now that the Cleveland Indians have Matt Williams, manager Mike Hargrove likes his lineup whether Albert Belle stays or not.

Let's see. Kenny Lofton leads off, followed by Julio Franco or Kevin Seitzer. Jim Thome hits third.

Hey, wait a minute. Who hits fourth? Belle or Williams?

Not a bad problem to have. In a move that protects the Indians if Belle decides to jump to another team, Cleveland acquired Williams from the San Francisco Giants on Wednesday.

The Giants got right-handed pitcher Julian Tavarez and infielders Jeff Kent and Jose Vizcaino, plus a player to be named and-or cash. The Indians also get a player to be named.

Belle got an offer from the Indians this week, but is intent on listening to other teams. He is scheduled to meet with the Florida Marlins as early as next week.

The bottom line is that Cleveland general manager John Hart could not wait for Belle to make up his mind.

"I don't know what's happening between Albert and (his agent)," Hart said. "I can say this: The Indians are going to keep moving. We are not going to get left behind."

The Indians could still sign Belle and boast a "Murderer's Row" of Thome, Belle, Williams and Manny Ramirez. But it has become crystal clear that Cleveland is prepared to go on without Belle if they have to.

"We're adding a guy in Matt Williams with tremendous talent and also tremendous leadership qualities," Hargrove said. "If we can bring Albert back, then that's even better."

If Williams is an insurance policy against Belle's departure, he's quite a policy. The Gold Glove third baseman has been one of the best power hitters in baseball - when healthy - with 247 home runs in 10 years with San Francisco.

Like Belle, Williams is in the prime of his career at 30. Unlike Belle, Williams is signed through 1998, with salaries of $6.75 million and $7 million.

The catch is that Williams has missed much of the last two seasons with injuries. In 1995, he broke a bone by fouling a pitch off his foot. Last year, he jammed his shoulder trying to break up a double play, and had season-ending surgery. Indians doctors gave him a clean bill of health before the deal was done.

"Those are freak injuries that can happen to anybody," Hargrove said. "I don't think we're looking at a person that is a fragile person physically."

Williams batted .336 with 23 homers in only 76 games before getting hurt in '95 and had 22 homers and 85 RBIs in 404 at-bats before going down last season. In 1994, Williams had 43 homers and 96 RBIs in 112 games when the strike hit.

"Those kind of injuries you can't control," Williams said. "It wasn't from a lack being in shape."

The Giants went 68-94 last season, the third-worst record in baseball, but think the rebuilding is under way.

"We realize we gave up a four-time All-Star who has been with the organization since day one, but we feel very good about the players we got in return," Giants GM Brian Sabean said. "We're on our way to doing other things because of this deal."

The Indians plan to play Williams at third base and move Jim Thome from third to first. But Hart might not be finished. While the Indians could fill the second base void through the farm system, Hart did not rule out acquiring one in a trade. He said getting Jeff King or Jay Bell from Pittsburgh was a possibility.

Hart also said the Indians are looking at 10-15 starting pitchers they might acquire through trades or free-agent signings - including free agent John Smoltz, who won the NL Cy Young award for the Atlanta Braves last week.

"We are exploring everything," Hart said.

Kent and Vizcaino were acquired from the New York Mets in a midseason trade for Carlos Baerga and Alvaro Espinoza.

Tavarez was 10-2 with a 2.44 ERA as a reliever when Cleveland won the AL pennant in 1995, but struggled last season at 4-7 with a 5.36 ERA.

Elsewhere in baseball Wednesday, Jamie Moyer, who had filed for free agency, agreed to a $3.7 million, two-year contract with the Seattle Mariners. He gets a $200,000 signing bonus, $1.6 million next season and $1.9 million in 1998. The Mariners have a $2.3 million option for 1999.

Toronto pitcher Juan Guzman, who was eligible for salary arbitration, agreed to a $9.5 million, two-year contract. Guzman, who led the AL in ERA at 2.93, gets $4 million in 1997 and $5 million in 1998. The Blue Jays have an option for 1999 at $5.25 million with a $500,000 buyout, and are giving him an interest-free loan of $1 million, payable over the three years.

In deals announced late Tuesday, Gary Gaetti agreed to a $2.1 million, one-year contract with St. Louis, and Alvaro Espinoza agreed to a $410,000, one-year contract with the New York Mets.

Six players filed for free agency Wednesday, increasing the total to 114 with one day remaining in the filing period: Philadelphia right-hander Jeff Parrett, San Diego infielder Craig Shipley, Atlanta outfielder Dwight Smith, Texas second baseman Kurt Stillwell, St. Louis outfielder Willie McGee and Seattle outfielder Mark Whiten.

Only three players eligible for free agency have not yet filed: New York Yankees pitcher Melido Perez, Houston shortstop Bill Spiers and Los Angeles third baseman Tim Wallach.

Caminiti earns NL MVP

By BERNIE WILSON
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Ken Caminiti has a simple philosophy about playing baseball: Until his body gives out, he'll be on the field.

Caminiti's body took a terrific beating in 1996, but his determination was stronger. And on Wednesday the San Diego Padres third baseman became the fourth unanimous winner of the NL Most Valuable Player award, a testament to a season that went far beyond statistics.

"I got picked MVP for doing my job, basically," Caminiti said. "I did my job to the best of my ability and I got rewarded for it. I take my job seriously, and I play as hard as I can play."

He hurt his left rotator cuff in early April, an injury that required cortisone shots in May and finally major surgery in October, after the Padres were eliminated from their first playoffs in 12 seasons. He strained his right hamstring and groin and had back trouble, yet refused to sit.

"If I can get to the park, I want to play," said Caminiti, who hopes to be ready for opening day even though some in the Padres' organization thought he might be out until July.

Through it all, he learned to incorporate his lower body into his swing and set Padres records with 40 homers, 130 RBIs and a .621 slugging percentage. He led the NL during the second half in average (.360), homers (28) and RBIs (81), and won his second straight Gold Glove Award.

"In August and September we just jumped on his back and he carried us the whole way," said teammate Steve Finley, who finished 10th in the voting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

His defining moment came Aug. 18 in the oppressive heat of Monterrey, Mexico, as the Padres prepared to face the New York Mets in the finale of the first regular-season series played outside the United States and Canada.

Battling dehydration and an upset stomach, Caminiti took two liters of intravenous fluid, then hit two home runs for four RBIs in an 8-0 victory.

"I didn't think I was going to play that day," he recalled. "I'd have to thank the training staff for getting me on the field that day. They made a bigger deal than I thought it was."

Finley recalled watching a wobbly Caminiti come down the tunnel just minutes before game time and rarely being able to run one warmup sprint.

"Those are the kind of things that legends are made out of," Finley said.

The next night in San Diego, Caminiti hit a grand slam in a victory over Montreal. Two nights later, he homered from both sides of the plate for the sixth time in his career.

"I came home from that road trip and they took blood for three days after that," he said. "That was the best week I ever had in pro ball. I don't know if I was unconscious or what. That whole week I was sick and putting up numbers that I couldn't believe. I remember after that week and after that whole month, I was like, 'Somebody get my dehydrated again so I can put up better numbers.'"

Caminiti, 33, became the first

Padres player to win the award in the team's 28-year history. Former Astros teammate Jeff Bagwell (1994), Mike Schmidt (1980) and Orlando Cepeda (1967) were the only other unanimous picks.

Calling the award "the moment" in his career, he said the only way he could better it is if the Padres win the World Series.

Caminiti's defense was even more spectacular than in 1995, when he won his first Gold Glove. His most outstanding play came April 22 at Florida, when he threw out Greg Colbrunn from the seat of his pants.

"It was the best play I've ever made," he said. "I've made some good plays where I like to go back and think about, but as far as that play, I really don't know how I did it. It's a lot of fun sometimes to look at it and say, 'Wow, I did that.'"

Mike Piazza of Los Angeles was second with 18 second-place votes and 237 points, followed by Ellis Burks of Colorado with five second-place votes and 186 points. Chipper Jones of Atlanta was fourth (158) and Barry Bonds of San Francisco was fifth (132).

Chances bad for labor deal

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The deadline for a baseball labor deal passes at midnight tonight, and there is little hope for an agreement that would save plans for interleague play and revenue sharing.

"If the deal is not made, you're in permanent limbo," union head Donald Fehr said Wednesday.

After Monday's bargaining session, acting commissioner Bud Selig told Fehr he would ponder his options and get back to him. The only contact since then has been a telephone conversation late Tuesday night that lasted about one minute.

"Nothing the players do matters," Fehr said. "One of the certainties of this negotiation is what the players say or do makes no difference. The owners are going to do what they're going to do."

Owners rejected the proposed agreement last week, and Selig asked the union to make additional concessions. Fehr rejected the move Monday, leaving Selig with the decision to take the deal or leave it.

Management negotiator Randy Levine has told Selig he would resign at midnight EST tonight if there's no deal. Because Selig failed to support the agreement Levine and Fehr completed Oct. 24, it's highly unlikely players would give serious attention to Levine's successor.

If there isn't a deal by the deadline, free agents could start signing Friday under the rules of the labor agreement that expired in December 1993. That deal remains in force under a federal court order.

Cardinal, advocate of social involvement, dies at 68

By TAMARA STARKS
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) - Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, the soft-spoken son of immigrants and one of the Roman Catholic Church's strongest voices for social involvement, died early Thursday of cancer. He was 68.

Bernardin died at his home at 1:33 a.m., Bishop Raymond Goedert said. Bernardin, the senior Roman Catholic prelate in the United States and leader of Chicago's 2.3 million Catholics, underwent surgery for pancreatic cancer in June 1995, and announced Aug. 30 that the cancer had spread and was inoperable. He gave up his day-to-day duties Oct. 31.

In more than 14 years as archbishop of Chicago - often described as the most visible Catholic post in the United States - Bernardin helped steer the American church toward an anti-nuclear stance and staked out positions on AIDS and capital punishment. Just days before his death, he wrote to the U.S. Supreme Court urging against creation of a legal right to die.

But Bernardin spent much time in his final months discussing his illness, his struggle to overcome the fear of death, and his belief in eternal life.

"We can look at death in two ways, as an enemy or as a friend," Bernardin said when he announced his illness was terminal. "As a person of faith, I see death as a friend."

His openness about his impending death won praise from religious leaders. It also brought him to extraordinary places, from the White House, where President Clinton honored him with the Presidential Medal of Freedom, to the cell of a death-row inmate who asked to pray with Bernardin before being executed in September.

His most searing moment of national attention came in November 1993, when he was accused of having sexually abused a young man, Steven Cook, years earlier while Bernardin was archbishop of Cincinnati. Cook recanted and reconciled with Bernardin before dying of AIDS last year.

Ironically, Bernardin had established a system for dealing with sexual accusations against priests that was considered a model for other dioceses. His vindication after calmly declaring his innocence and willingness to forgive Cook mitigated damage to the church's image from priest-abuse scandals.

Bernardin considered it a priest's duty to confront sticky social issues.

"If we live a religious life and encourage others to do that, there is no doubt we will come into increasing conflict with the prevailing values of this society," he told The New York Times in 1983.

His statements sometimes enraged critics, but Bernardin rarely raised his voice in public or dropped the humble demeanor that became familiar to Catholics in the Chicago archdiocese after he took over in 1982.

Bernardin was appointed after the death of Cardinal John Cody, a doctrinal conservative with a reputation for autocratic rule. Cody had been embroiled in accusations of financial wrongdoing, and Bernardin sought to repair divisions between traditionalists and progressives in the archdiocese.

"He gave the Chicago church a much needed renewal of spirit," Scott Appleby, a religious scholar at the University of Notre Dame, said prior to Bernardin's death.

Bernardin became an international figure when he guided the U.S. Catholic bishops' 1983 pastoral letter on nuclear war. The document rejected bombing of population centers, first use of nuclear weapons and any rationale for a limited nuclear war.

The document furthered Bernardin's reputation as a liberal-minded mediator and consensus-builder.

In 1987 he helped persuade the Vatican to restore the authority stripped from Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen because of his liberal approach. Bernardin urged the Vatican to let bishops govern their dioceses without undue interference from Rome.

He struck a delicate balance as chief drafter of a 1987 document in which U.S. bishops said they would tolerate educational programs that describe how condoms may prevent the spread of AIDS. Critics, including Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, said the document could be interpreted as condoning condom use, which the Vatican condemns along with other artificial birth control. Bernardin said the statement didn't imply church support for condom use.

He won a small but significant victory for women in 1992 when U.S. bishops rejected a document that would have flatly prohibited women's ordination in favor of Bernardin's plan for more "study and dialogue."

This year, he stirred criticism from Catholic conservatives once again by launching the Catholic Common Ground Project, an effort to open dialogue with Catholics who dissent from church teachings.

Bernardin was born April 2, 1928, in Columbia, S.C., to immigrant parents from northern Italy. His father, Joseph, was a stonemason and his mother, Maria, a seamstress.

He considered a career in medicine but settled on the priesthood, earning a bachelor's degree in philosophy from St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore in 1948. He received his master's degree in education from Catholic University in Washington four years later.

He was ordained a priest that same year, and served 14 years in the archdiocese of Charleston, S.C. In 1966, Bernardin, then 38, was appointed auxiliary bishop of Atlanta, becoming the youngest bishop in the nation. He led the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in the late 1960s and 1970s and spent 10 years as archbishop of Cincinnati before moving to Chicago.

Throughout his career, he expressed his ambition as a simple desire to be a good priest.

"My basic responsibility is to preach the Gospel, and this I try to do," he said in 1987.

He is survived by his mother, who lives in a Chicago nursing home, and a sister, Elaine Addison of Columbia, S.C.

Names in the News

LONDON (AP) - Thanks to the curse of fame, transplanted Englishman Hugh Grant isn't happy in Hollywood or back in Britain.

Getting mobbed by fans at his old London haunts makes spending time in England a pain, Grant told the Sunday Express newspaper.

"I do miss Britain terribly and it's very sad we can't go back," Grant said. "I spent three days there last year and that was all I could take. It was a nightmare."

He blames his instant fame on the success of "Four Weddings and a Funeral."

"I had no idea how that one film would completely change my life," he said.

Living in London before that, "I used to love being able to walk down the King's Road and have my breakfast while I read the paper without having to hover in the corner under a baseball cap like I have to do now."

"I don't read the papers anymore," he said. "I'm always afraid to turn the page and discover something about me."

Things aren't much better in Hollywood, where Grant and girlfriend Elizabeth Hurley live in Bette Davis's old house.

"I find the people there take themselves so seriously and they don't understand my self-effacing ways," Grant said. "I say, 'Oh please, it's a terrible film and I'm awful in it,' and they take me at my word. It's quite grotesque."

NEW YORK (AP) - Margot Kidder is back, returning to acting after her emotional breakdown last spring with a recurring role on "Boston Common."

"I'm taking one step at a time," she said in the Nov. 16 TV Guide. In the sitcom she plays Cookie Van Doren, an eccentric drama teacher.

"It's so much fun," she said, "that in a week you get about two months' worth of good, healthy laugh medicine to store away."

Laughter - along with landing a job - are good medicine for Kidder right now, helping her recover from the breakdown she blames on years of "financial, romantic, and health mishaps."

Kidder, who played Lois Lane opposite Christopher Reeve in the "Superman" movies, calls Reeve, now paralyzed, "an inspiration."

Besides appearing on "Boston Common," Kidder is writing her memoirs, titled "Calamities."

"I'm pretty optimistic about the future," she said. "It's hard to beat that out of me."

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Billy Dee Williams is in the clear after a judge tossed out a lawsuit claiming the actor and the Psychic Readers Network, which he endorses, illegally used videotape of an earthquake-damaged apartment.

The plaintiffs, Rocco and Adina Maramonte, and their lawyers failed to show up in court Friday to explain why defendants were never served with the lawsuit.

Before throwing out the suit on Friday, Superior Court Judge Florence-Marie Cooper quipped that the papers may have been served telepathically.

Cabinetmaker cashes in on vintage chuck wagons

By ART CHAPMAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
BRYSON, Texas—Out on the side lot at Elmer Richardson's home along U.S. 380, it looks as though there was a wagon crash long ago. Massive axles and wheels are almost stacked on top of one another; whole wagons are parked—more scattered—in indiscriminate directions.

It is a historical site, given the vintage of most wagons, but only Richardson knows the background of each and every brace, trace and doubletree.

Collecting, rebuilding and selling them was once just a hobby; now it is a full-time passion and business. Richardson was among the 16 contestants who paraded their chuck wagons into Fort Worth on Oct. 25 to kick off the annual Red Steagall Cowboy Gathering and Western Swing Festival.

"I was always interested in this," the lanky, 58-year-old Richardson said as he nodded toward his cluttered wagon yard. "I was raised on a ranch in Baylor County, near Seymour, and I remember watching the wagons and teams in the field."

But one he doesn't have is the chuck wagon he built. It was his first chuck wagon, built using the plans he found in a Time-Life book called "The Cowboys." The plans were made from Charles Goodnight's original wagon.

"We used that wagon every day on the trip," Richardson said. "We cooked out on it every night. If I hadn't busted a wheel on it, I'd probably still have it."

When he returned home from the wagon train, Richardson pushed his damaged chuck wagon out in his yard to make repairs. A Dallas man, passing by, saw it and wanted to buy it.

"I didn't want to sell it," Richardson said. "But he kept coming by and asking about it. I decided I would just price it where he wouldn't want it anymore."

"I told him what I wanted for it. He bought it."

Richardson built another, priced it higher and sold it as well. Now, he has lost track of the number of chuck wagons he has sold. He figures that it's somewhere between 12 or 15. They have been shipped all over the country. They range in price from $5,500 to $8,500, or more.

"If I hadn't busted that wheel on the first one, I wouldn't be in the chuck wagon business today," he said, laughing.

Richardson might be the biggest producer of vintage chuck wagons in the country, he says, although no one knows for sure. He simply doesn't know of anyone who turns out more.

Just up the road, at the only major intersection in Bryson, Richardson and business partner Shirley Master run the Bryson Trading Post, where among the various antiques are ample supplies of chuck wagon cooking equipment, including bread risers, crock mixing bowls, griddles, skillets and Dutch ovens.

"We are a complete outfitter," he said. "We can supply the wagons, harnesses, canvas covers, water barrels, bows and tongues, chuck boxes, dishes, wagon sheets, frys and bed rolls."

And if you need a mule team to pull the wagon, he has them as well. About 40 to 50 head, he says.

Nothing is done on a production line in his row of shops behind his home. There is a perpetual flame in the forge of his blacksmith shop. What he can't buy, he hammers out on his own. The wood for the wagons and seats is bought rough, and then planed to size in his wood shop. Huge sheets of canvas hang next door.

"We turn out quality work," he said without hesitation. "We make it as authentic as we can. I guess it works, because we are always busy, and we've never advertised. It's all word-of-mouth."

Richardson works with many re-enactors who use his equipment, although he says he never works with moviemakers because they are too rough on the wagons. He also travels to cowboy gatherings and chuck wagon cook-offs around the country.

"We make all the shows whether we take a wagon or not," he said. "We usually have to make a lot of deliveries to people who have ordered parts for their wagons."

The only shows at which his chuck wagon will compete this year are in Ruidoso, N.M., and at Steagall's in Fort Worth. Next year, he says, he might not have time to compete in any. "We'll still do a lot of demonstration and education work," he said. "We work with kids and show them how to harness a team and set up a camp and cook. We donate a lot of time working with youngsters."

And, chuck wagon cooking is growing. It has burgeoned throughout the Southwest, he says, and now is gaining prominence in the Midwest.

"I don't see the popularity dropping off," he said. "The way it's moving up north, it will probably be booming there in the next 10 to 15 years."

Richardson is ready to supply the wagons.

He became a cabinetmaker first, and then eventually established his own construction company. For the past 25 years he has run his businesses from Bryson, on the western edge of Jack County.

Always, the wagons were in the back of his mind, he says.

A dozen years ago, his son John talked him into buying a wagon and a team of mules. "It was just a farm wagon," he remembered. "I bought it up in Jermyn, north of here. Then as we traveled through Ohio and the Midwest, I began buying more."

It was still a hobby, but in 1991, the focus changed. Richardson and several of his friends decided to trail their wagons from North Texas to Presidio. The trip took a month to complete.

"I've still got three wagons that made that trip," he said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket. For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Tiny Texas town recalls ties with Hollywood

By RAMON RENTERIA
El Paso Times

MARFA, Texas -- Tiny Marfa, Texas, had an intimate fling with Hollywood in the summer of 1955. Master film director George Stevens rolled into town with Hollywood's hottest rising stars to make a movie called "Giant."

By the time it was all over, Marfa rubbed elbows with Rock Hudson and Elizabeth Taylor and became acquainted with film idol James Dean as if he were the boy next door, a "shy boy with a sexy giggle," as one resident remembers him, hardly the obnoxious rebel depicted in the Hollywood press.

The Warner Bros. Pictures restoration and re-release of "Giant," the epic film about Texas cattle barons and oil, is making the rounds on the big screen again -- and prodding the memories of those who witnessed the film being made.

Marfa residents who watched Dean's third and last film in production sensed Hollywood was making something big, but they didn't realize "Giant" would become the enduring box-office success it has. The ranching community of 5,000 souls would never forget that summer when Hollywood put Edna Ferber's sprawling novel on the big screen and crept into their lives.

Lucy Garcia, a Marfa teen-ager at the time, couldn't help getting caught in the commotion, especially with a handsome film star like James Dean hanging out in town. He was generous to admiring fans and their box cameras.

"I'm an old lady now and shouldn't be saying this," Garcia said. "But hijo, he WAS sexy."

"Giant" portrayed how Mexicans -- Americans were mistreated in Texas, a sensitive issue in 1950s Marfa, where Garcia and other Hispanic children attended a segregated school. "We had to dress in black and bury our heritage at Blackwell School. We weren't allowed to speak Spanish," Garcia said.

Garcia lived just three blocks from the Paisano Hotel, where the cast ate breakfast and dinner and played before heading out to film on the "Reata" set, the fictional cattle empire on a ranch west of town.

Taylor and Hudson, Garcia said, were less accessible, less likely to pose for pictures with fans. Dean was different. Garcia still keeps a scrapbook of "Giant" memorabilia filled with candid photos of the film idol. She has sold a handful of photos and Dean's autograph for about $3,000.

Forty years after its original release, George Stevens Jr. restored the film, enhancing the color and sound, as a tribute to his father's work.

"What we're seeing is a resurgence of interest in wonderful classic films to contrast to what's being produced today, much if which is not going to stand the test of time," said Cynthia Farrah, film instructor at the University of Texas at El Paso.

"What blew my mind was watching James Dean again. He was magic on that movie screen," Farrah said. "It's not a perfect film, but it's a fascinating look at how someone from outside the state perceived Texans and Mexicans."

Dean played Jett Rink, an outcast and hard-drinking wildcat oilman in love with the wife (Elizabeth Taylor) of a Texas cattle baron played by Rock Hudson. Dean died in a car accident before "Giant" was completed.

His fans made the film, released a year later, Warner Bros. highest grossing film until "Superman" replaced it in the 1970s.

Stevens won an Academy Award in 1956 for best director. The cast and film racked up nine Academy Award nominations.

The register at Marfa's Paisano Hotel, where the cast stayed, read like a Hollywood Who's Who: Mercedes McCambridge, Chill Wills, Dennis Hopper, Earl Holliman, Carroll Baker, Rod Taylor, Monte Hale.

Tommie Gillespie and her late husband Leon catered the movie, taking 100 people from El Paso to Marfa to feed the "Giant" crew. Stevens' devotion to perfection, shooting a scene over and over again, gave Gillespie the impression that film making is not all fun and glamour.

"It was a wonderful experience that I will never forget," Gillespie said.

Not much remains of "Giant" in Marfa, except fading memories, a collection of photos at the Paisano Hotel and the telephone-pole skeleton of what used to be the three-story "Reata" ranch-house set east of Marfa at Clay Evans ranch.

The set deteriorated over the years and it was understood the rancher didn't want curious people trampling his land.

"Hindsight is 20-20," said Darlene Freeman, who had just completed her junior year in high school when the "Giant" crew arrived.

"Yes, a lot of us would have preferred that the set had been preserved. We knew it was a wonderful movie but I'm not sure any of us had any idea that it was going to be a classic."

Freeman has fond memories of her father, Bascom Webb, playing fiddle, jamming with Chill Wills, Monte Hale and others at the Paisano or in someone's back yard.

"I appreciated how the cast and George Stevens all became part of our community. They were friendly and acted like they were glad to be here," Freeman said.

She and her girlfriends once invited Dean to a back yard cookout.

Dean showed up and then politely excused himself after finding out he was the only male at the party.

"He kissed us all good night and we let him go," Freeman said. "He was a very shy, very gentle type person."

The description contradicts the Hollywood image of Dean as a nonconformist, a rebel who was often rude in public and obnoxious on and off the set.

Making "Giant" was a terrific time for everyone who had a chance to mingle with a Hollywood crew who seemed so real, so warm and friendly.

"I don't think 'Giant' changed us so much. The drought changed us later," Freeman said. "We're still basically the same as we were then, just not as big."

Marcos Pena, a serviceman with Southwest Texas Natural Gas Co., befriended Dean, Hopper, McCambridge and many others actors while working as a busboy, desk clerk, and handyman at the Paisano Hotel.

"They were like a big family, very friendly," Pena said.

Kirby F. Warnock, a Dallas writer, historian and publisher, became fascinated with "Giant" when his father took him to the set on the Evans ranch in the summer of 1957.

"Out in the middle of nowhere, was this huge building, without a back," Warnock said. "I've been fascinated ever since."

Warnock said the Marfa Chamber of Commerce organized a 40th anniversary reunion of the "Giant" cast in 1995.

Out of that project, Warnock produced a documentary "Return to Giant" that aired on Texas PBS stations in September. Warner Bros. has agreed to market the documentary when it re-releases "Giant" on home video in 1997.

The one-hour documentary looks at the making of the Texas myth through interviews with the people who worked on the set or starred in the film, and how the movie's influence is still felt in art, film and pop culture 40 years later.

"It's a good slice of life of the way Texas used to be when we were all connected to the land in some way or another," Warnock said.

This Week in Entertainment

(AP) 35 years ago: Elvis Presley's movie, "Blue Hawaii," a romantic musical, was released in the United States. It was a huge box office success. The soundtrack album topped the U.S. charts for 20 weeks.

30 years ago: The Beach Boys' "Good Vibrations," a richly textured, multilayered track that Brian Wilson had worked on for six months, topped the British charts. It hit the top of the U.S. charts the following month and was certified gold.

20 years ago: Sylvester Stallone's first "Rocky" movie premiered, also starring Talia Shire and Burgess Meredith. Four sequels followed.

15 years ago: Olivia Newton-John's "Physical" went to the top of the U.S. charts for the first of 10 weeks. "Physical" would become one of the first and most identifiable aerobic music themes.

10 years ago: Jack Paar made his first appearance on the "Tonight Show" since he quit as host 24 years earlier. Johnny Carson quipped, "Jack's been on vacation and wants his desk back."

And Andrew Lloyd Webber's "The Phantom of the Opera" was named best musical at the London Standard Drama Awards.

One year ago: "Free As A Bird" was released, 25 years after the Beatles broke up and 15 years after John Lennon's murder. The song featured a vocal by Lennon, which he recorded in 1977. The three surviving Beatles -- Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr -- refitted Lennon's recorded vocal with music they played in February 1994 after Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, approved.

Spoken five years ago: "I looked like a 60-year-old man, terribly ill and sad. I had big bags, black eyes and I was overweight. It was bulimic for six years." -- Pop star Elton John, saying he was ready to self-destruct from too many alcohol, drug and eating binges until a close friend persuaded him to change his ways.

Spoken one year ago: "Given the right material, I'd work with Madonna. She's a very specific presence in the world and in my life." -- Actor Sean Penn, referring to his ex-wife. The couple divorced in 1989 after a stormy three-year marriage.

The primetime soap aired from 1978 through 1991, titillating audiences with the characters' Texas-sized appetites for money, power, sex and deception.

The industry, which made no concerted attempt to challenge its portrayal when the series aired, saw a second chance to "set the record straight" when plans surfaced for a reunion movie, Brown and others said

CBS to air 'Dallas' reunion movie

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Amoral oil baron J.R. Ewing's greed and ruthless schemes have given the oil industry a black eye, say real-life producers who are fighting back as TV's "Dallas" resurfaces.

When CBS airs a two-hour "Dallas" reunion movie Friday night, the oil industry will be running a TV commercial in the Oil Patch and elsewhere attempting to draw the line between reality and the make-believe world of Southfork Ranch.

"The 'Dallas' series did a good job of convincing the public that our industry is greedy and uncaring, which is simply not true," said Oklahoma producer Lew O. Ward, Wednesday.

"Dallas" was that shot across the bow that we better start telling people we are doing a good job," said producer Larry Hulsey of Graham, Texas.

And who better to do that than the actress who portrayed Donna Culver Krebs on the show?

In the 30-second spot airing on CBS affiliates in 25 markets Friday night, actress Susan Howard says: "Back on the hit series 'Dallas,' most of my co-stars played greedy oilmen.

"But that's TV -- not real life."

Howard, who doesn't appear in "Dallas: J.R. Returns," goes on to extol the industry's commitment to the environment and energy education programs.

The IPAA and 19 other trade groups representing independent oil and natural gas producers chipped in more than $100,000 to pay for the commercial.

It will air in Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Texas.

Brown estimated that some 3.5 million viewers are likely to see the spot, which is airing less than a handful of times in each market.

Warner Bros. Television, which produced the reunion movie, had no comment. Neither did CBS nor the agent for Larry Hagman, the actor who portrays the dastardly J.R.
