State board wants to abolish TAAS test

By PEGGY FIKAC Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - State Board of Education members who are backed local control of schools. by religious conservatives want to abolish the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, which is used to test student performance and rank schools.

"When both parents and teachers are adamantly against something, elected officials better sit up and take notice," board member Donna Ballard of The Woodlands said

Joining in the call to replace TAAS with periodic administrations of another, nationally recognized exam were: board members David Bradley of Beaumont, Richard Neill of Fort Worth, Robert Offutt of San Antonio and Randy Stevenson of Tyler, according to Ms. Ballard. All are

Their call to ditch the TAAS immediately was opposed by a number of state officials, including House Public Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler, D-Henderson.

The TAAS "has been cited all over the country as one of the hallmarks of the Texas system," while the Texas Supreme Court in upholding the state's school funding system said the test assures each student gets a basic education, Sadler said.

Chairman Bill Ratliff, former education head, noted the same board members have expressed great concern about the possibility of Texas getting curriculum input from a national group.

"I think it's ironic that they don't want some national group to be involved in the curriculum, but they do want some national group to establish the test," said Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant. 'I give up."

Moses called the five board members' position unfortunate.

'Texas parents deserve to know of the progress their children are making while at school. Additionally, Texas taxpayers want to know about the performance of their public schools. It makes sense to use a test Ms. Ballard said the TAAS has made by Texans for Texans," he

Stephanie Cecil of the conservative Eagle Forum said she is Senate Finance Committee concerned that the TAAS isn't testing what it should; for example, she said grammar and spelling aren't graded in the writing portion.

"If calling for abolishing the TAAS makes people look carefully at what is in the TAAS test, I think that would be beneficial," she said.

Skies to clear across Texas Greenawalt was born March 2, after flash flooding. storms

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC

Associated Press Writer Skies were expected to clear today after two days of heavy rain that caused flash flooding, high winds and conditions blamed for four deaths

Storms on Thursday stretched from the Red River to the South Texas coast, with rainfall amounts of up to 5 inches reported over portions of the state. Homeowners in some lakefront areas of North Texas braced for the worst, setting furniture on precaution.

Tornadoes threatened but failed to materialize. Nearly one-quarter of Texas was under a tornado watch Thursday, mainly in the central and eastern portions of the state. High winds damaged at least two houses in Arlington and also blew over fences and uprooted trees in the neighborhood.

Flash flood warnings were posted in north-central Texas, where rain and thunderstorms continued to dump large amounts of water - generally up blocks and deploying sandbags as a to 1 inch per hour. Authorities reported numerous road closures. Residents living along Lake Worth in Tarrant and Wise counties kept a close eye on rising water levels as a swollen spill way threatened to flood their homes. Back yards and boat docks already were submerged, and water had reached some foundations. Mary Ford spent several hours taking everything out of the bottom cabinets in her home and moving them to higher ground.

'We didn't sleep all night last night because we were doing this," she said.

In Callahan County in northwest

Texas, rain of up to 1 inch an hour was reported on top of 2.5 inches that fell overnight.

Up to 5 inches of rain fell over portions of south-central Texas and another 3 to 5 inches were expected. Rain was heaviest in Gillespie, Llano and Kerr counties. A flash flood watch was in effect through the afternoon for the Hill Country and adjacent areas.

loss of electricity to 7,600 homes and businesses Thursday afternoon in the Houston area. The winds damaged buildings and helped flip over an 18-wheeler, whose driver was uninjured.

Lightning strikes, fallen tree limbs, and high winds knocked out power to some 7,000 households in and around Beaumont Thursday night. Late Thursday, about 100 homes in Beaumont, 200 residences in Vidor and 200 in Silsbee were still without power, Entergy customer service manager Greg Shepard said.

Deregulation of electric companies is proposed

AUSTIN (AP) - Electric companies would have to compete for the right to power Texans' homes and businesses and the companies that serve most Texans now would have to cut rates by 15 percent under bills pending in the Legislature.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, and Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, on Thursday said now is the time to deregulate the state's electricity market. Both lawmakers said electricity can be sold cheaper in Texas and any deregulation plan should start with a rate cut.

Under their plan, investor-owned utility companies, which cover about 90 percent of Texas, would have to cut prices by 15 percent starting Sept. 1. Publicly owned utilities, like the city of Austin's, and cooperative supports the ideas in the Stiles-Patterutility companies would not have to remained in the sky long after the cut rates.

saw the Astr dome," Bowersox told Gary Rasp, a spokesman for the Association of Electricity Companies of Texas, said the bills filed by Stiles and Patterson would allow companies affected by the rate cut to appeal to the Texas Public Utility Commission if the cut would affect their ability to stay in business. He said that would result in many appeals.

"It's an effort to gain support," Rasp said.

Under the current, regulated system, Texas utility companies hold monopolies in the territories they serve. Investor-owned utility companies have argued that electricity rates in Texas are below the national average.

But Patterson said he isn't interested in that argument.

"Can they be lower?" he asked. "We know electricity can be cheaper," Stiles replied. Stiles added that many of the companies arguing against deregularates for big business, it should be dollars in damage. OK to do the same for small businesses and consumers. Rasp said large companies can get lower rates because they use a lot of electricity. "That happens in any industry because of economies of scale," he said. Meanwhile, Karl Rabago, a former PUC commissioner and energy program manager for the Environmental Defense Fund, said his group son bills. But he said they don't enough for the environment or Texas consumers.

"The question is are the environment or consumers better off," Rabago said. "I'm afraid the answer Curtis Seidlits, head of the electric utilities association, said the bills are nearly identical to proposals outlined by business groups that want the electricity industry deregulated.

"It's written all in their favor," he said of large companies.

Leslie Kjellstrand, a spokeswoman for the PUC, said the agency already has recommended deregulation not begin before the year 2000. She said the agency will give lawmakers whatever information they need and will follow their direction.

The electric deregulation bills are SB684 and HB1509.

AUSTIN - State Board of Education members backed by religious conservatives are urging abolition of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, which is used to test student performance and rank schools. Their call to ditch the TAAS was met with incredulity from House Public Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler, who said, "I don't know what world they're living on, I really don't."

AUSTIN - State Sen. Drew Nixon was absent from the Senate again Thursday, the day after his release from jail after an arrest for allegedly soliciting an undercover police officer for sex. UNDATED - Water-logged Texans got another dose of heavy rain Thursday causing flash flooding and conditions that are being blamed for four deaths across the state. Up to 5 inches of rain fell over portions of South Central Texas with another 3 to 5 inches expected. Flash flood warnings were posted in North Central Texas. And rain storms were expected across much of Southeast Texas, with up to 5 inches possible and a threat of widespread flooding. Tornadoes were also possible.

AUSTIN - Two state lawmakers want to force electric companies to do what phone companies already are doing: compete for Texans' business. Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, and Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, on Thursday unveiled a plan to deregulate most of the Texas electricity industry. The plan includes a 15 percent rate cut for all investor-owned power companies.

WASHINGTON - Claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, two former Clinton administration officials say they won't give Congress documents subpoenaed for the investigation of Democratic fund-raising practices.

BETHESDA, Md. - A lack of scientific studies, not an abundance of legal problems, is preventing widespread medical use of marijuana, a banned drug that may ease the suffering of some patients, the chairman of a panel of experts says.

BEIJING - China mourned Deng Xiaoping with an outpouring of adulation today for the man whose economic revolution transformed it from the rice roots up, but said it could best honor its dead leader by doing business as usual. "Within and without the Great Wall, north and south of the great rivers, in cities and the countryside ... the entire nation is determined to turn grief into strength," declared The People's Daily, the ruling Communist Party's mouthpiece.

SANTA FE, N.M. - New Mexico officials prepared to move hundreds of inmates to Arizona after informants revealed plans for a deadly riot and a 30-foot tunnel in the basement of the state's largest prison.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Fortenberry, Ronald Fuhrmann, Jim Mercer, Frank Prowell, Raymond White, Cecil Crum, Mary Beth Powell, Audine Dettman, Ludie Greeson, Annell Holland, Lois Matchett, Betty/Mercer, Dorothy Ott and Betty Taylor.

and should not be showering with ladies. From now on, you're going to take showers by yourself." (If Madge needs more help, she should talk to her pediatrician.)

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about funeral etiquette, if there is such a thing. My mother passed away recently, and I cannot believe some of the things that happened. I hope you will publish my letter because it is very clear to me that a lot of folks need to be educated.

If you know someone in the neighborhood who has lost a family member, please bring food to their home. My mother was one of 12 children, and all the relatives wound up at my aunt's home after the funeral. That dear woman was stuck fixing supper for this huge group. Believe me, a couple of casseroles and a cake or two don't sound like much, but it would have meant a lot to my aunt when all those hungry mourners showed up.

Secondly, please don't expect the bereaved to talk about their loved one during or immediately after the funeral. My mother and I were very close. When people came up to me and said, "Your mom was so strong" hard for me to get my thoughts together. I did not want to reminisce about my mother when the loss was so fresh. I'm sure someday I will want to talk about Mom, but not right after she died. I had enough stuff going through my mind.

And finally, some people actually had the nerve to tell me that my pain was not as bad as theirs because my mother had been sick a long time, whereas their loss had been sudden. I can't tell you how many times someone said to me, "It was much worse when my husband died in that car accident -- healthy one minute and gone the next." It doesn't matter if the person died from a lingering illness or an accident. The death is still painful to the survivors. And please don't ever say, "I know how you feel." No one can possibly know how I feel.

I hope you will print my letter, Ann. An awful lot of people need to read it. Thanks for letting me vent. --Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear S.L.C.: Your "venting" is going to educate a great number of readers today. On behalf of all of them, thank you for writing.

Nazareth's Billy Don Cannon blocks a shot by an unidentified Adrian player's shot in the fourth quarter of the Swift's lop-sided 85-40 bi-district playoff victory Thursday night in the Whiteface Gym. Nazareth, with the win, improved to 27-4 and moves a step closer to returning to the state tournament. The Swifts advanced to the state semifinals last season before losing to eventual Class A champion Avinger.

Former Baylor star injured in Dallas drive-by shooting defensive tackle Daryl Gardener was shot in the jaw while driving on a freeway early Thursday, apparently by someone who followed him from a nightclub.

The 23-year-old former Baylor star and two others in his gray Mercedes, including ex-Baylor tailback Brandell Jackson, were wounded in the 2:15 a.m. attack.

Gardener had two bullet fragments removed from the base of his tongue during surgery at Presbyterian Hospital, Dolphins head trainer Kevin O'Neill said. He was listed in satisfactory condition. The trio told police that a red Isuzu Rodeo carrying two men followed them as they left the Blue Planet. One of the suspects began shooting when the Mercedes pulled onto the highway, firing approximately three shots that shattered a rear passenger window and the windshield.

Gardener was hit in the jaw, while Jackson, 23, of Waco was shot in the left arm and leg, according to a police report. Tanisha Cormier, 21, of Garland was struck in the arm by glass fragments. Jackson and Ms. Cormier were treated and released, a hospital official and friend said.

No one has been arrested in the case, which police describe as in the early stages of investigation.

"At this point, all we know from talking to the people who were there was that Daryl did not provoke this act nor was he aware of any problems that might have caused it," Weinstein said in a statement.

A woman who answered the telephone number listed by Ms. Cormier on a police report said she was at the nightclub and doesn't know what sparked the shooting.
"No one really knows why. We don't have any clue as to why that happened," said the woman, who wouldn't give her name because she didn't want any publicity.

The 24-year-old copywriter at an advertising agency said she and Ms. Cormier, who works for MCI, met Gardener and his friends at the nightclub while they were visiting Dallas. They talked for about 20 minutes in the parking lot before getting into their cars and leaving, she

The woman said she didn't see the shooting because she was in another car ahead of Gardener's but was surprised to learn what happened.

Nazareth breezes past Adrian, 85-40

TOMMY WELLS Managing Editor

If there were any questions about the Nazareth Swifts' ability to win in the playoffs, they were answered last night with a familiar cry for Sylvester Stallone's movie, Rocky.

"Yo Adrian, We did it." Nazareth, showing flashes of the fast-paced attack that has helped lift Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls to the pinnacle of the NBA world, treated a large crowd in the Whiteface Gym to a Bull-esque show by trouncing the Adrian Matadors, 85-40. And, it wasn't really that close.

The Swifts, after a relatively slow 18-12 start, outscored Adrian by a 67-28 margin in the final three quarters. To make matters even worse, Nazareth posted a 29-point run in the final eight minutes.

A state semifinalist last season, improved to 27-4 overall, and earned the right to advance to the Area round of the state playoffs.

Adrian ended its campaign at 18-9. Nazareth didn't waste any time in establishing its offensive and defensive dominance. The Swifts turned and cruised to a 16-8 ledger late in The Matadors did manage to make a run in the final minute of the period, though. Adrian's J.R. Carnes drained a 3-pointer from the left corner and then added a free throw to

It got only worse from there. Marcus Brockman inflated the NHS lead to 22-points later in the second when he picked off a AHS pass and then beat two defenders to the hoop for a shot.

Carnes, who finished as the Matadors' top point-getter with 13, got hot again in the final minute of the period, hitting twice to pull Adrian to within 20, at 42-22, at the intermission.

The Swifts continued to push inflate their lead in the third. Five different NHS players pushed home shots in the period and keyed a 14-8

Rome, Athens among contending sites for 2004 Games

The evaluation report was released just two weeks before the contenders are reduced to four or five on March 7 by an IOC panel, with final selection by the full IOC in Lausanne, Switzerland, on Sept. 5.

The report said that all cities had roved their capability of organizing the games but some would need more time than others to implement their

In Stockholm, the design for the main stadium, within walking distance of the Olympic village, was singled out for praise.

Facilities were excellent and the high technological standards of the city and the country were a bonus, the report said.

Cape Town's bid, billed as a means of "unifying the South African nation through sport," was diminished by its rowing and canoeing courses, potential security problems, access difficulties and the city's crime rate.

"All levels of authority in the country are aware of and concerned about the serious crime situation the country is facing," the commission said. Acting on plans to increase safety and security "will be a

Cape Town may still hold an outside chance on the political front, something not addressed in the purely technical assessment of this report.

Buenos Aires could slip into the top four or five as the best Latin American contender.

The report praised "beautiful facilities and surroundings" for the equestrian events and good conditions in the soccer stadiums.

The cultural program providing for a torch relay to pass through all the countries in South America and the Antarctica was also a strong point, the commission said.

Bonds regains top spot in baseball's salar

By The Associated Press Baseball's money season pushed into the first day of full-squad workouts at spring training, with Barry Bonds regaining the top spot on the average salary list.

Bonds agreed Thursday to a $22.9 million, two-year contract extension with the San Francisco Giants, a deal that gives him the sport's highest average at $11.45 million.

"I have always felt in my heart that the greatest gift I could give my hometown is a World Series championship ring, and thanks to the Giants, today I've been given the opportunity to make that dream come true," Bonds said.

The 32-year-old outfielder is due $8.25 million this season and $8.5 million next year under the $43.75 million, six-year deal he signed as a free agent in December 1992. The extension calls for $9.7 million in 1999 and $10.7 million in 2000.

San Francisco has a $10.3 million option for 2001 and must pay a $2.5 million buyout if it doesn't exercise

"Arguably, it could be his last contract. Obviously, it was a big commitment on the part of the franchise," Giants general manager Brian Sabean said after the deal was completed in Scottsdale, Ariz. "There were some heated feelings. Both sides got some things off their

Bonds had been unhappy since five players leapfrogged him in average

Danny Tartabull, coming off a $20.5 million, five-year contract, was unhappy when just two teams made offers: Philadelphia and Cincinnati. At first rejected the Phillies' offer as too low, then agreed Thursday to a $2.3 million, one-year contract.

"We had offers," said Tartabull, who will join the team next week at Clearwater, Fla. "The offers were not where they needed to be according to my seasons and my career. But this is something that you just have to look at it as the way it is and put it behind you."

Tartabull hit .254 for the Chicago White Sox last season with 27 homers and 101 RBIs.

"You're putting a proven major league bat in the middle of your order, and that's what we wanted to do," manager Terry Francona said. "He enjoys being the guy in the middle of the order. The people I've talked to say he responds to that."

Cal Ripken arrived for spring training at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and talked for the first time about Baltimore's plan to move him from shortstop to third base. "Maybe some of us need a challenge toward the end of our careers," he said. "I look at it in a positive way. I'm looking at it as a new beginning.

"I've got a chance to relearn the position and maybe extend my career. I have no problems with moving to third base. Never have."

Catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. could become a free agent after the season, following the team's decision to decline a $3 million option for 1998.

Alomar, 30, will get $2.5 million this season, and Indians general manager John Hart says he would like to sign Alomar to a new deal. The decision to decline the option was made in November, but became known only when Alomar mentioned it this week.

"I definitely want to stay," Alomar said at Winter Haven, Fla. "I love being with the Indians. It's a great organization." White Sox

Albert Belle worked out with Chicago for the first time, fouled off pitches on his first two swings of the spring and then did what his new team expects: drove a ball over the Belle's volatile temper was discussed during a question-and-answer session.

"I can't control that. I'm not worried about that. As long as I get an opportunity to go out and hit home runs, drive in some runs, steal a few bases, make a couple of great catches," Belle said. "That's all I'm concerned about. I guess the image part will take care of itself."

Chuck Finley, already picked to start for Anaheim on opening day, until the weekend following an examination of his sore pitching arm.

Finley reported soreness on Tuesday and has been taking anti-inflammatory medication.

Rickey Henderson, who probably will be traded during spring training, arrived in camp at Peoria, Ariz.

"I came here to spring training to get in shape," Henderson said. "No matter where you're going to be at, you have to prepare for the season. That's what I have to do."

San Diego offered the 38-year-old outfielder a job as a backup, but Henderson said he would prefer a trade, and the Padres said they would accommodate him.

"I'm not going to sit around," Henderson said. "I've worked too hard to sit around. I can't help you sitting around. I think you got me last year to help you and I helped you. If you're not going to use me, let me help somebody else." Yankees

Cecil Fielder didn't back off his trade demand when he arrived at camp in Tampa, Fla., but softened his tone after talking with manager Joe Torre and general manager Bob Watson.

We definitely went a step forward just getting the opportunity to explain ourselves to each other." Fielder said. "It's just going to be a good situation now that we've somewhat cleared the air and got all this stuff out of the way.'

Fielder filed a demand to be traded by March 15, a right given players traded during multiyear contracts. If will be held out of throwing drills the Yankees don't trade him and he doesn't withdraw the demand, Fielder could become a free agent after the deadline. But if he did that, he would lose his $7.2 million salary this season.

"Hopefully things are going to work out and I'm going to stay here," Fielder said. "I want to be here. We have another opportunity to do something special this season. I think things are going to work themselves out one way or another."

Deion Sanders was the first hitter into the batting cage at Plant City, Fla., as he resumed his two-sport career.

Sanders still has blurred vision from the broken bone near his right eye, received in the Dallas Cowboys' 26-17 playoff loss to the Carolina Panthers in January. But he didn't hesitate to jump into the batting cage against

"I had a good time. I'm a player. I can't stand on the outside looking through the glass," Sanders said. "I want to be a part of it. I can't sit and watch others having a good time."

Dennis Martinez will be given a chance in spring training to earn a job in Seattle's starting rotation.

Martinez, 42, agreed Thursday to a minor-league contract and planned to join the Mariners today. He would get a $250,000, one-year contract if he makes the team and the chance to earn performance bonuses.

"He's a veteran who could very well make the club," general manager Woody Woodward said. "He certainly brings a lot of experience and knowledge of how to

Court sides with Tyson in fued with former trainer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - The federal court jury that awarded Mike Tyson's former trainer $4.4 million could not legally have reached that judgment under New York state laws, a judge says.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas McAvoy's ruling annuls the award Kevin Rooney won in September 1996 in a breach-of-contract trial McAvoy himself presided over in Albany.

"The nature of the proof offered at trial cannot sustain a finding that the employment relationship was anything other than one at-will," McAvoy wrote.

The judge added that if Rooney appeals McAvoy's finding, and if that challenge is upheld by federal appeals courts. Tyson deserves a new trial anyway because McAvoy's charge to the jury was faulty. McAvoy acknowledged that he did not instruct jurors properly about how New York state laws define employment for a "definite duration," a crucial aspect in the trial over whether Tyson had an obligation to pay Rooney.

McAvoy's ruling was dated Saturday and filed in Binghamton, where the judge also maintains a courtroom.

Tyson's lawyer Robert Hirth said the boxer was thrilled by the decision. "If you step back, given that Mike never had a contract with Rooney, let alone a lifetime contract, he always now we have the just decision." Michael Coyle, Rooney's lawyer, said he would appeal McAvoy's

Rooney said Thursday night that Tyson "stabbed me in the back" and he insisted that he had an agreement to train the boxer that was binding in the boxing world.

'What a bad decision," Rooney said. "I had a decision by a jury of my peers. They heard the evidence. They decided I was his trainer for as long as he fought professionally."

Rooney said he would pursue the case "all the way to the Supreme Court."

Rooney sued Tyson for $49 million, claiming that his firing in 1988 breached a lifetime contract the boxer supposedly had with the trainer dating from Tyson's days as a teen-age prodigy under his mentor Cus D'Amato in nearby Catskill.

During the trial, Rooney could not produce a written contract with Tyson to train the boxer. But he argued that the understanding was established by D'Amato, who died in 1985.

Tyson's former manager, Bill Cayton, testified that he and partner Jim Jacobs, who took over Tyson's affairs after D'Amato died, continued the arrangement.

In its verdict, the jury did not determine the duration of the contract between Rooney and Tyson and ruled that the trainer should not get any money from future fight purses. But it did rule that Tyson broke a legal contract and fired Rooney without just cause.

The jury award totaled $4,415,651. When the verdict was announced on Sept. 30, about two dozen angry Tyson supporters, including the Rev. Al Sharpton and boxing promoter Don King, chanted "No justice, no peace." They claimed the verdict was racially motivated.

Tyson is black. Rooney is white, as were all of the jurors.

Hirth said he never raised race as an issue in either the trial or his

Rooney, who declared bankruptcy in 1992, said he needed about $1 million to clear gambling and tax

Tyson vowed to fight the verdict because he said he believes he had the right to hire and fire whomever he pleases. After the jury made its award, however, he said he probably would have given Rooney the money if he'd just asked him for it instead of suing.

NBA trading deadline passes

The NBA trading deadline passed Thursday without the flurry of movement that many had expected, but six deals went through involving 15 players and four draft picks.

The Denver Nuggets were the busiest team, making two deals with Indiana and one with Charlotte. The Hornets made two trades and the New Jersey Nets, who spoke to 21 of the other 28 NBA teams, made just one deal.

The biggest trade, in terms of volume, sent Mark Jackson and LaSalle Thompson from Denver back to their former team, the Indiana Pacers. In return, the Pacers sent Vincent Askew and Eddie Johnson to the Nuggets along with two second-round draft choices.

The Los Angeles Lakers acquired a sharpshooting small forward to fill in for injured Robert Horry, getting George McCloud from New Jersey for center Joe Kleine, a 1997 first-round draft pick and a conditional second-round pick.

MOUSTON-John Biggers smiles warmly as he opens the door to his studies. It is the private world where he has conceived and executed monumental murals, drawings and easel paintings for 50 years of his life. The radio is tuned to a jazz station, and the music fills the air, bouncing off walls lined with partitions covered with paintings. African masks and figures he's collected through the decades cram shelves at one end of the room, and the large table in the center disappears beneath a load of books and catalogs, opened and unopened mail, sketches and pens, even an occasional African carving that's strayed.

It's been two years since the retrospective of his work premiered at the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, an event the artist described then as "miraculous."

Forty-five years earlier, he was not allowed inside the museum to receive the prize awarded his drawing in the museum's annual juried exhibition, for in the segregated city, blacks were allowed inside only on specified times and days. The special arrangements that were made for Biggers and a colleague to view the show in advance became moot when the museum changed its admission policy a few months later to open its doors to everyone at all times.

Now "John Biggers: View From the Upper Room," has been traveling cross-country from Los Angeles to Boston's MFA, gathering marvelous reviews along the way. It opens at Hampton University (Virginia) later this year, completing one cycle in the artist's rich career.

And when the University of Texas
Press reissued his landmark book,
"Ananse: The Web of Life" ($24.95 paperback), last month nother cycle

"You make art one piece at a time," Biggers says today. "Fifty years is a lifetime; it is a long time. And 50 years is very short. You have to reckon with all of that. You may be impressed with the great quantity of work. But, what about the dream?"

Giving form to that dream has been the consuming passion of a lifetime dedicated to making art that is meaningful.

The artist's oft-told story begins in racially divided Gastonia, N.C., a rural community near Charlotte, where this teacher, traveler, author and artist was born in 1924, the youngest of Paul and Cora Biggers' seven children.

His father was the son of a white plantation owner who at age 18 had the opportunity to attend a school for freed slaves and their children. There he met his future wife, Cora, and began preaching the gospel, accepting only good things, such as eggs, never money, for his ministries. When he died in 1937, Cora took in laundry to help support her family.

John Biggers was drawing and shaping things from the mud beneath his house from the time he was a child. When he set out for Hampton Institute (now Hampton University) in 1941, however, it was with the intention of becoming a plumber. Fortunately for everyone, a forward-looking professor, Viktor Lowenfeld, ordinated the young man's goals.

Lowenfeld, a Jewish refugee from Hitler's Austria, an artist and psychologist, had left Harvard for Hampton, an all-black school, and organized its first art classes. He University, Biggers followed him.

"I began to see art not primarily as an individual expression of talent," Biggers stated in "Black Art in Houston" (Texas A&M Press, 1978) "But as a responsibility to reflect the spirit and style of the Negro people."

That realization would become his credo and the foundation for his art.

John Biggers arrived in Houston in 1949 to establish the art department at the Texas State College for Negroes, known today as Texas Southern University. He was 25 years old, had bachelor's and master's degrees from Penn State and an honorable discharge from the U.S.

Army. His wife, Hazel, was with him.

They had met at Hampton University, where both were undergraduates. He courted her for years, sometimes long-distance, before she finally agreed to marry him in December 1948. Within a few years of their arrival, they settled into the ranch-style brick house in the tree-lined Riverside neighborhood east of the Museum District that is still their home.

The city was segregated, as was the rest of the country. But, Biggers has said, "the conditions (for blacks) in Philadelphia and New York in the 1940s repelled me. Houston was segregated, but we had recognition from the community at large."

Besides, he says, Texas was close to Mexico where the great muralists - Diego Rivera, Jose Clemente Orozco and David Alfaro Siqueiros - had made a case for art as a political and pedagogic tool as well as an aesthetic pursuit. And Texas was in the South, where the idealistic artist felt he could find - and define - himself, too.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/ products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

-- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

-- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condi-

-- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Production Asst II. High School diploma or GED and CDL required. Must be physically able to manually stack 50# Bags or more for 8 hours. Must be able to communicate English. Please send resume and salary requirements to: Agripro Seeds, Inc., P. O. Box 2212, Hereford, Texas 79045.

America's poor move from welfare to work

By RICK HAMPSON AP National Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - For his last birthday, Stuart got a cake with three bright candles. His mother got a draft notice from the welfare department.

Now that her child was 3, Orelis Rodriguez would have to work for her welfare check. She would have to join 122,000 other New Yorkers in the nation's largest workfare program. She would have to join the exodus from a welfare system that was condemned last August by a flick of Bill Clinton's pen.

First, she had to find someone to take care of a shy, small boy who spoke little Spanish and no English.

Here is what she found: more than 10,000 names on a waiting list for government-subsidized day care, day-care centers that won't take welfare kids because they can't wait months to be paid by the city, decent baby sitters who laugh at the $2-an-hour workfare pays for child care, other baby sitters who crowd six kids into apartments with dawn-to-dusk television.

Her mother was dead, her cousins had their own problems. Her neighbors were at work or on drugs. She didn't have many friends or acquaintances; she was disconnected from a social fabric knit by work.

"Welfare thinks it's easy to get child care," Ms. Rodriguez, 33 and unmarried, says through a translator. "They don't understand that it's MY child. I don't want to leave my child with anyone I don't know. If something happens to him, I'LL suffer. Welfare won't suffer."

She sighs. She never thought a child's birthday could be a mixed blessing.

Whether the end of welfare is a case of thoughtful reform or Draconian repeal, it is probably the biggest social experiment since the Great Society. And even though millions of children are the among the experiment will be conducted.

This year, we begin to find out. Although some states (notably Wisconsin) and cities (notably New York) have pushed ahead of the pack, by this summer every state must have sent Washington its plan to comply with the new federal welfare law.

For the first time, states will have to compel a single from special license plates for parent to work or train for recipients to work within two years and places a lifetime, five-year cap parent to work or train for work once her child turns 3 months old; she must do so after the child's first birthday.

This departure from the status quo will create a vast demand for child

How vast is anyone's guess, partly because it's unclear how states will interpret and enforce the federal rules. Over the next few years, an additional 2.5 million children now at home on welfare could need day it baby-sitting - by relatives, neighbors,

Even before this deluge, good child care is hard to find and afford. The working poor typically pay it is largely unregulated, and some between a fifth and a fourth of their states are loosening rules to encourage income for it, and three-fourths of the more people to take a few children into states already have wait lists for their homes. government subsidized care; in New Jersey, 15,000 children wait for one of day-care provider who must pass of 30,000 slots.

Wisconsin, facing a child-care baby sitters are more flexible - and funding gap, won an extra $25 thus better for parents in the sort of million in federal aid for cutting its entry-level jobs that have irregular welfare rolls. Budget Office and most other nonpartisan observers think the federal allocation falls at least $1 billion short.

Even if subsidies are available. former welfare recipients making the minimum wage will be stretched thin by two or three child care co-payments. So state officials worry about a rough transition, and trutto figure are recommended.

That law requires most welfare transition, and try to figure ways to, child-care training. Georgia has set aside $157 million of lottery revenues for a state-wide preschool program.

Above all, states are trying to increase the amount of child care while holding down its cost.

Since the average cost of two children in a day-care center averages about $10,000 a year there probably will be a boom in what experts call informal care." Everyone else calls friends. In New York, it accounts for 80 percent of care funded by workfare.

Welfare recipients have trouble finding new job

BV ALLEN G. BREEU

Associate Press Writer PRESTONSBURG, Ky. (AP) -When Deborah Alsip climbs into her rusted-out 1981 Chevy Malibu Classic, it's like playing a game of Russian roulette.

One day, it goes only 15 miles an hour. The next, it overheats and blows fuses. Some days, it doesn't go at all.

"I have no horn. I have no buzzer telling me I'm leaving my lights on which I've done three times now," she says. "I'm afraid I'm going to run the battery down."

The borrowed, wobbly-wheeled clunker with the tied-on bumper and 116,000 hard miles on it has been Deborah Alsip's ticket off welfare: She uses it to make the 13-mile trip here to college. But her ride to self-sufficiency should be a little smoother from now on.

After providing pages of personal information and waiting weeks for a criminal background check, Ms. Alsip is about to get behind the wheel of a well-maintained, 1987 former police cruiser. The spacious Crown Victoria has 100,000 miles on it, but the lease is only $30 a month and there's a daily gas allowance of $3.

Call it a welfare-reform special. Now that the federal government has told the states to get their residents off the dole, agencies and social service groups nationwide are accelerating their experiments with just about everything to help people make the adjustment.

It isn't easy. In isolated places like Appalachian Kentucky, and even in inner cities across America, getting to work can be as daunting a prospect as getting a job in the first place.

In Chicago, one estimate is that nine out of every 10 new entry-level jobs are being created in the suburbs, beyond most public transit. And in the eastern Kentucky mountains, where one of 12 people is on federal assistance, the closest good job is likely to be miles away, through deep hollows and a patchy network of creekbed roads.

"There's nothing there that you can find," said Ms. Alsip, a 41-year-old mother of five who has been on welfare for four years. "I'd be lucky if my car made it up to Prestonsburg to get there and apply for the job, let alone tell them, 'Yeah, I can be here every day.'

Then along came the Big Sandy Area Development District, which is working with state agencies and charities to secure auctioned or donated cars for job-ready welfare recipients, who then can pool with

"It's overwhelming that there's so many people out here in the same for everybody, and since most rural situation," said Ms. Alsip, who is areas have limited public transportastudying accounting at Prestonsburg tion, another trick is using existing Community College and working 20 hours a week at a state social services office. "Lots of them are in worse to school buses.
