From another era

A scene such as this was common in parlors of fifty, or more years, ago. Resting on the table are a stereoscope and photos that fit into a slot. Looking through the viewer gave a three-dimensional effect to the photos.

'Stereo' of a special kind gave hours of pleasure in days past

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Before there was television for home entertainment, there were Victrolas for music, radios for news and an instrument called a "stereoscope" for viewing pictures. This optical invention once was found in American homes and provided a measure of enjoyment to all ages. One turned up recently when the family of the late Margaret Schroeter began the task of moving her belongings from the home where she had lived since 1934. The collection of memorabilia she kept in her home was mind-boggling. Her son, Alex Schroeter, said he marveled at the boxes that were neatly stacked. "Her correspondence -- some from her parents as far back as her student days at what now is Hardin-Simmons University -- was carefully labeled and filed," he said. There were boxes and boxes of photographs and among the items were the stereoscope and photographs that fit in it. An optical invention, the stereoscope is a device that had a cardboard insert with identical pictures on each side to place at a distance of several inches from the viewer. The effect of looking through the viewer was three-dimensional. The stereoscope and its necessary photographs were parlor items prized by families who enjoyed looking through the eyepiece. Alex Schroeter believes that some of the pictures accompanying the stereoscope found at his mother's home were made by A.O. Thompson, his grandfather. "He took lots of pictures and some of these surely were made by him," Schroeter observed, noting that he can identify some individuals in the photos of people. Of particular interest to Schroeter and others in his family are some street scenes of Hereford, apparently from the 1920s, judging by the automobiles seen in the shots. Several of the photos show cars lining the street, about a block west of the Deaf Smith County courthouse. The best Schroeter could determine, the photographer was on Third Street, near Main, aiming toward the west entrance of the courthouse. There is no clue to the event that brought so many people to downtown Hereford on the day the pictures were made. "Looks like more people than we have now," chuckled Schroeter. His mother, who operated an abstract company for many years, died at age 86 in January 1996, leaving a special kind of void in Hereford. She was an acknowledged repository of the history of the community. Both of Margaret Schroeter's parents were members of families that came to Deaf Smith County in the early years of this century. She seemed to soak up history of Hereford, which may have given her an advantage when she ran the abstract company. Her father, A.O. Thompson, founded the abstract company. She also was a "saver," said her son. He bears witness to this trait by explaining about the house being full of her collections of a lifetime. Of special interest, though, was the photo collection. Schroeter said the family turned some over to interested persons and kept some, but there was an ample supply to go around. Some photos were placed in the Deaf Smith County Museum and some are earmarked for Panhandle Plains Museum in Canyon. When Alex Schroeter's wife, Sue, took a stack to the courthouse, a number of people were given some they could identify. "Some of the pictures we were able to identify and we called the people and told them they could have them," said Sue Schroeter. A considerable number went to a neighbor of Mrs. Schroeter. "Joe D. Rogers has a whole bunch of them," said Alex Schroeter, "to go through." Rogers is a school history teacher with a particular interest in the photos of the area. The stereoscope is an item of curiosity although not an extinct instrument. There are others in museums and private collections around the country. But, the photographs of Hereford and of people who once lived here are unique. Through the stereoscope, they jump out at the viewer. Better than any television show.

Stereoscope photos

These photographs were in the collection owned by the late Margaret Schroeter and found when her family cleared her home after her death. The street scenes were duplicated on a cardboard insert that fit into a slot on the viewer. The photos apparently were taken on E. Third Street. The west entrance to the Deaf Smith County courthouse is seen in the photo at left.

Hereford SPS office to close with merger

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

The Southwestern Public Service Co. office in Hereford is scheduled to be closed in November, 1997, under merger plans the company has announced with Public Service Co. of Colorado. SPS announced job reductions and office changes in a news release issued Friday. Lewis McDaniel, Hereford SPS manager, said he was not sure how the merger would affect him and administrative personnel in the local office. Local employees involved in providing electric service will remain here at the office on New York Street. The cuts will include 418 jobs in the SPS area, but 169 reductions have already occurred through a hiring freeze and attrition, leaving 249 to go. A total of 1,831 SPS-area jobs will be retained, compared with 2,249 in 1995. Total reductions in the PSCo area will be 1,039 jobs, with 889 already cut, leaving 150 to go. A total of 4,356 PSCo area jobs will remain, compared with 5,395 in 1995. "We regret having to reduce our work forces; we greatly value all of our employees," said Bill Helton, SPS chairman and CEO. The planned merger of the companies as New Century Energies will assure continued quality service, he added. Significant staffing reductions and high attrition already have occurred. The anticipated further reduction of 399 positions by the two companies will allow the combined firm to remain low-cost suppliers-of-choice in an increasingly competitive environment, said Helton. Most of the anticipated staffing reductions are in customer-accounting and corporate support areas. Service personnel, such as power plant employees and linemen, will be affected only minimally, stated the news release. Thirty percent of the merged companies' combined personnel will be in the SPS service area, and 70 percent in the PSCo service area. The ratio of positions was 29 percent to 71 percent before the companies began merger discussions. The overall reduction of 1,457 positions, or 19 percent of the combined work force, is greater than the original projection of 8 percent, because of the expanded scope of expected competition. "We have worked the past year and a half to operate as a low-cost, competitive, combined company. We chose not only to look at savings and efficiencies, but also at customer convenience and new business practices," Helton said. SPS will refocus the the operation of its 43 business offices later this year. The offices will no longer handle customer payments. Next week SPS will be announcing details of more convenient, alternate payment centers in businesses such as supermarkets, and a centralized call center that can respond to customer questions for extended hours during the day. Twenty-six of the business offices will remain open as bases of operation for employees involved in providing electric service, engineering, sales, economic development and other functions. Seventeen of the offices will be closed, and remaining personnel will be relocated to service centers and other SPS facilities in the community.

"We will still have employees in the community to assure reliable electric service," said Helton. The 17 offices to be closed include Tahoka, in May; Artesia, N.M., Canyon Denver City, Dumas, Littlefield, Muleshoe, Perryton, Portales, N.M., Rall, Seminole, Slaton and Tucumcari, N.M. in August; and Hereford, Levelland, Pampa and Plainview in November. The offices remaining open, with operations to be changed in May include Abernathy, Beaver, Ok., Boise City, Ok., Canadian, Dimmitt, Elkhart, Ks., Eunice, N.M., Floydada, Jal, N.M., Morton, Olton, Panhandle, Post, Seagraves, Spearman, Stratford and Wheeler. The Dalhart office will change operations in August, while a November change is set for Amarillo, Borger, Carlsbad, N.M., Clovis, N.M., Guymon, Ok., Hobbs, N.M., Lubbock and Roswell, N.M. Late next week or soon thereafter, the companies plan to provide individual packets of information to (See MERGER, Page 2A)

Officials predict no hike in interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) - The economy accelerated 2.5 percent last year, fueled by a sizzling 4.7 percent growth rate in the final three months from demand by American consumers and foreign customers for U.S. goods. Despite the fourth quarter surge, analysts said Federal Reserve policy-makers are anticipating slower growth and predicted they will not raise interest rates when they meet next week. The increase in the gross domestic product topped the 2 percent advance in 1995 that had been the slowest since a 1 percent drop in 1991 when the last recession ended. The GDP figures were announced today by the Commerce Department. The surprisingly strong 4.7 percent annual rate of growth in the October-December quarter helped drive last year's expansion and matched the 4.7 percent second-quarter pace. Before that, the economy had not grown so fast in one quarter since the spring of 1994. Analysts had expected a fourth-quarter rate of 3.8 percent. Vice President Al Gore told reporters that the growth rate is "further evidence that the American economy is growing at a strong and steady pace with inflation remaining at historic low levels." The stock market continued to rally. The Dow Jones industrial average rose more than 35 points by midday. The inflation-sensitive bond market also rose. Yields on 30-year Treasury bonds, which move in the opposite direction of prices, fell to 6.78 percent from 6.87 percent late Thursday. "All in all, it's a number that's too strong for comfort for the longer view. It almost certainly won't be matched in the first quarter this year," said Robert G. Dederick, economic consultant for Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

$100 billion in middle-class tax cuts proposed in Clinton budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - The budget President Clinton sends Congress next week will propose $100 billion in middle-class tax cuts over five years while seeking to raise $80 billion by increasing taxes on U.S. corporations and airline travelers, officials say. Clinton's tax relief proposals will represent the administration's opening bid in what is likely to be a lengthy debate with Republicans. Not waiting for the president to unveil his budget, Senate Republicans have already come forward with a $193 billion package of tax cuts, including their cherished goal of reducing the tax on capital gains, the profits earned from the sale of investments. Clinton will formally present his 1998 budget to Congress on Thursday, two days after his State of the Union address. Administration and congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Friday that the tax proposals in the budget will be recycled versions of what Clinton included in last year's budget, along with a few new tax breaks that he proposed during the election campaign.

These officials said that of the $80 billion in tax increases, more than half would come from a package of higher taxes on corporations, including a restriction on the ability of multinational corporations to lower their U.S. tax bills by deducting taxes paid to foreign governments. Some $34 billion would come from an extension of the 10 percent federal tax on airline tickets. Although that tax expired Jan. 1, most travelers haven't received any benefit because airlines simply raised ticket prices and pocketed the difference. On the tax cut side, officials gave these details of the largest reductions: -A $500-per-child tax credit to families with children younger than 13. This would be a scaled-down version of a more generous Republican proposal that would apply to children 18 and younger and offer the credit to taxpayers at higher income levels. Clinton first proposed the child tax credit in the Middle Class Bill of Rights he put forward in December 1994 after Republicans won control of Congress. -A tax credit of up to $1,500 to pay for tuition for a student's first year in college, with a $1,500 credit available for a second year if the student earns at least a B average. According to documents obtained by The Associated Press, the price tag would be $18.6 billion in lost tax revenues through 2002. -A tax deduction of up to $10,000 for education expenses incurred beyond the high school level. This would cost the government $17.6 billion over five years. The administration will also propose eliminating the capital gains tax for the sale of all but the most expensive homes. One source said this would cost the government less than $1 billion over five years because homeowners already can defer taxes on profits earned from the sale of a home as long as they purchase a more expensive home within two years. Republicans would like to cut in half the tax on capital gains earned on the sale of all investments. Asked whether he saw room for compromise with the GOP on the issue of capital gains taxes, Clinton said at a news conference Tuesday: "What we need to do is to meet each other in good faith."

Ex Oprah Winfrey boyfriend files lawsuit, claiming four-month affair

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - A man who claims he lived with Oprah Winfrey and did drugs with her for four months in 1985 is suing her for allegedly keeping him from telling his story, a newspaper reported today.

Randolph L. Cook of Columbus is seeking $20 million in punitive damages for slander and emotional distress. The Columbus Dispatch said Cook filed the suit on Jan. 16 in U.S. District Court in Chicago, where Winfrey's show is based.

Cook, 39, claims in the lawsuit that he and the talk-show host - who topped the latest Forbes magazine list of the world's 40 best-paid entertainers with a 1995-96 income of $171 million - lived together in Chicago between January and May 1985, and abused drugs together during that period.

Cook said he planned to sell the rights to his story, but Winfrey blocked those opportunities.

"Upon notification of my intent to publish my life story, Ms. Winfrey expressed outrage to the disclosure of truth and fact," Cook said in the lawsuit, according to the Dispatch. "She threatened everyone involved with my intended publication, causing great financial loss."

Winfrey flatly denies all of the allegations in Cook's lawsuit, according to a motion filed by her attorney to bar Cook from commenting on the lawsuit.

A telephone message seeking additional comment was left today at Winfrey's Harpo Productions.

Cook told the Dispatch on Thursday that at the time he met Winfrey, he was working for a Chicago real estate company.

"The reason I'm coming forward now is to seek some type of spiritual and mental resolution and closure for myself," said Cook, who said he is in drug recovery. "This has to do with my own healing process."

Honorary cheerleader to get chance

ANDREWS, Texas (AP) - Educators have struck a compromise with a girl with cerebral palsy, saying she could become a full-fledged member of the varsity cheerleading squad if she qualifies, minus the gymnastics.

Callie Smartt, 15, had been an "honorary cheerleader" at Andrews High School, zipping her motorized wheelchair along the sidelines and waving her black-and-gold pom-poms.

But in June, the school district decided she could be injured so close to the action. It banned her from basketball courtside and allowed her to appear only at home football games.

School officials cannot prevent her from trying out for the varsity squad in April, but did not agree until Wednesday to waive the jumping and flipping usually involved.

"I feel good about it," she said of Wednesday's ruling. "I won't have to do everything, (like) dance with my feet."

Cheerleaders are chosen by a combination of student votes, grades, teachers' support and judges' votes from tryout performances that include gymnastics.

The judges' votes from the tryout performances count for 30 percent of the score toward becoming a varsity cheerleader. A student election makes up 25 percent, grade point average consists of another 25 percent and teachers' support accounts for the remaining 20 percent.

Clinton's campaign talks give clues to State of Union address

WASHINGTON (AP) - Looking for clues to what President Clinton will say in his State of the Union address Tuesday? Reread his campaign speeches.

"In a very real sense the president wrote the 1997 State of the Union address during the course of the 1996 campaign," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Friday.

The issues Clinton raised last year "are exactly the items that he will lay before the Congress and the American people when he speaks next week," the spokesman said.

It is a long list, including higher spending for education and children's health, an expansion of the family leave law and a variety of tax cuts. But, with the deficit edging upward after four years of decline, there also will be spending cuts.

Previewing the address, McCurry said Clinton will tell Congress that three pieces of "unfinished business" require urgent attention: balancing the budget, fixing the new welfare law and passing campaign finance reform.

Beyond talking about "unfinished business," Clinton will describe what America needs to do to prepare for the 21st century, he added.

The speech - before a joint session of Congress at 9 p.m. EST - will be Clinton's fourth State of the Union address. He did not make a formal State of the Union speech during his first year in office.

McCurry acknowledged that the White House had conducted public opinion polls on speech themes. He said Clinton had looked for ways to make his arguments "as crisp and as sharp and as persuasive as possible."

Clinton wanted his Jan. 20 inaugural address to be a "visionary statement," portraying America and its promise heading into the next century, McCurry said.

The State of the Union address "is now the concrete road map on how you arrive at that destination," the spokesman said.

"The president will start by saying before we can really come together in a bipartisan way to do the work necessary to prepare for the 21st century, we have some unfinished business," McCurry said.

The bulk of Clinton's "unfinished business" borrows from Republican ideas. It was the GOP that first championed a balanced budget by 2002. Clinton came up with his own plan to meet that timetable, and the two sides have been arguing over the details for more than a year.

After driving Democrats from power in Congress, the Republicans also picked up the ball on welfare reform and passed a bill last year ending the federal guarantee of cash assistance to the poor and turning welfare programs over to the states.

To the dismay of many liberals, Clinton signed the bill but said it was far from perfect. He wants to soften provisions that deny aid to many legal immigrants and reduce spending on food stamps.

On campaign finance reform, the administration is on the defensive after questionable fund-raising practices by the Democratic National Committee and Clinton's admission that "mistakes were made" by the White House. The president did not make campaign finance reform a high priority in his first term, but he is expected to press for it more vigorously in the second term.

McCurry said Clinton would end the speech by stressing that Americans "have to come together, reach across gender, ethnic and racial divisions to combat these problems that we face, to meet the challenges that arise, and to move together as one people into the 21st century."

Only black woman on Simpson jury dismissed; mistrial denied

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - The only black woman on the O.J. Simpson civil jury was dismissed Friday for concealing the fact that her daughter worked for the office that prosecuted Simpson two years ago. Deliberations were ordered to start over with a new juror, an Asian man in his 30s.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki gave no reason for the dismissal, which came after a 90-minute closed-door meeting with attorneys.

But sources said the juror, who wore Badge 333, was dismissed for failing to disclose during jury selection that her daughter works as a legal secretary for the Los Angeles County district attorney's office.

The judge was alerted to the problem in a typewritten letter sent to the judge by fax from District Attorney Gil Garcetti's office. Garcetti's office confirmed that it sent the letter.

"We only learned yesterday afternoon that she was a sitting juror," said DA spokeswoman Sandi Gibbons. "We immediately communicated this information to the court." She said the daughter did not report directly to Garcetti but would give no details.

The letter also alleged that the woman and her daughter once had dinner with Christopher Darden, a prosecutor at Simpson's criminal trial, the sources said. The juror denied that ever happened, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Gibbons declined to comment on whether the letter mentioned Darden. Darden also wouldn't comment.

There had been speculation the ouster was linked to an investigation into two jurors from the criminal trial who allegedly tried to contact two jurors from this trial with a letter.

The wrongful death trial is to decide civil lawsuits seeking to have Simpson found responsible for the June 12, 1994, slashing deaths of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Simpson was acquitted of murder in 1995, but could lose millions if the jury verdict goes against him.

During the closed door meeting, defense attorney Robert Baker asked for a mistrial but was denied. The plaintiffs opposed a mistrial.

Fujisaki later had a second closed-door meeting with lawyers. Court officials said it was to admonish them about leaks.

Before the dismissal was announced, the 11 remaining jurors and four alternates were brought into the courtroom and seated in the jury box.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, a juror has been excused for legal cause," Fujisaki told them.

A new juror was then selected by lottery. It was Juror No. 369, an Asian-American computer programmer.

Fujisaki then told the newly constituted panel to start over again - "to disregard and put out of your mind all past deliberations and begin deliberating anew." Jurors deliberated about two hours and then broke off for lunch.

The new panel consists of six women and six men and includes nine whites, one Hispanic, one Asian and a Jamaican-born man of mixed black and Asian parentage.

In Simpson's criminal trial, he was acquitted by a mostly black jury after a proceeding polarized over race by the testimony of former police Detective Mark Fuhrman, who was shown to have repeatedly used a racial epithet.

The previous panel in the wrongful death case had talked for 14 hours over three days, asking to examine a variety of DNA and other evidence.

Jury is deliberating Routier murder case

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) - As Darlie Routier sits in a jail cell, a Kerr County jury is deliberating whether she "slaughtered" her two young sons in a grisly knife attack.

The seven-woman, five-man jury met for six hours Friday before breaking for the day and spending the night sequestered at a hotel. Deliberations were continuing Saturday in the trial that was moved from North Texas because of publicity.

"May we never forget these two precious children," prosecutor Greg Davis said in closing arguments, pointing to pictures of 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon Routier.

"I guarantee I'm going to use my voice ... to talk for these two boys who never had a chance as their mother slaughtered them," Davis said.

Mrs. Routier, who sat silently most of the trial and showed emotion only occasionally, engaged in a dramatic exchange with Davis as he described what he envisioned as her sons' final moments alive.

"Can you imagine them laying in the carpet, looking up with open eyes, drowning in their own blood?" Davis said as he approached Mrs. Routier. "Can you imagine what it must have been like for those two children that morning to look up? ... They saw this woman here."

"Liar," Mrs. Routier said. "She says liar now," Davis

Senator Bivins receives award

State Sen. Teel Bivins recently received the prestigious "Golden Apple" award from the Texas Association of Mid-size Schools (TAMS).

Sen. Bivins, chairman of the Senate education committee, has long been recognized by education leaders as a strong advocate for public education.

The actual presentation was made by representatives of the 12 mid-sized schools in Sen. Bivins' legislative district on behalf of all members of TAMS. These schools include Andrews, Borger, Dalhart, Denver City, Dumas, Greenwood, Hereford, Kermit, Pampa, Perryton, River Road and Seminole.

In announcing the award, TAMS President Dr. Wayne Pierce stated, "Teel Bivins is a champion for children. He is known as a tenacious advocate for education, and will not hesitate to stand up for what is right. Texas is fortunate to have him as chairman of the important Senate education committee."

On receiving the award, Sen. Bivins said, "I am as honored by this award as I am humbled by the enormity of the challenges that we face setting policy for public education in Texas."

responded.

"Liar, liar," she said again.

Prosecutors claim Mrs. Routier fatally stabbed her sons on June 6, 1996, in her suburban Rowlett home and slashed herself to cover the crime. They contend she was angry over money problems and the burdens of motherhood.

Mrs. Routier, now 27, insists an intruder attacked her and the boys then fled through the garage.

Defense attorneys argued that Mrs. Routier wouldn't have had the time to stage a crime scene.

"This lady is simply not guilty," defense lawyer Doug Mulder said. "There is a reasonable doubt."

Mulder pointed out that a man matching the description that Mrs. Routier gave police had been spotted that same day in another part of Rowlett. And several witnesses mentioned spotting a suspicious black car.

Defense lawyer Richard Mosty said it made no sense that Mrs. Routier would "change from a good mother, a doting mother, to a psychotic killer."

Mosty attacked the credibility of the state's witnesses, particularly FBI violent crime specialist Alan Brantley, who testified the boys were killed by someone they knew well.

"The state brings a bureaucrat from Washington who has been to one murder scene in his life," Mosty said. "Brantley comes down and gives you a mail-in verdict."

Prosecutor Toby Shook sketched out the state's version of the circumstantial evidence.

He questioned why a garage screen was cut rather than pulled off; he said the knife used to cut it was found in the Routier's kitchen butcher block; he reminded jurors Mrs. Routier didn't ask about her children en route to the hospital; and he reiterated testimony that the crime scene was staged.

each employee whose job is identified as "merger-affected." These are positions that will be reduced or eliminated, or will be subject to significant job-duty changes or relocation.

Employees in merger-affected positions by apply for up to four positions in the merged companies. Employees who apply but are not selected will be eligible for involuntary separation packages of one-and-a-half week's pay for each full year worked and other benefits. Some will be eligible for early retirement.

The merger has been approved by regulators in Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and New Mexico, and agreed to in Oklahoma. Texas regulators are expected to act on the merger Feb. 5. Completion of the merger is targeted for the spring.

Citizen of Year picks needed

Nominations for Hereford's "Citizen of the Year" are now being accepted at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

The traditional award will be presented at the Chamber Banquet, March 13, by the Hereford Lions Club. L.J. Clark, club president, said the deadline for nominations will be Feb. 7.

Readers who wish to make a nomination should type or print a letter explaining why their nominee should be recognized as "Citizen of the Year."

Nominees traditionally are local residents who have contributed time and talents "above and beyond the call of duty" toward making Hereford a better place to live, work and play.

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSERAND
Mayor, City of Hereford
Recently, we residents of Hereford, as well as most of the other residents in the Panhandle, have been hit with considerably higher gas rates for heating their homes and/or businesses. It has come to my attention that several residents have felt that this increase is due to the rate hike the city agreed to last fall.

This is not the case at all, and I simply want to set the record straight that the whopping increase in natural gas bills is not due to the city's agreement to the rate increase.

The facts of the matter are that, yes, the city, in conjunction with most of the cities in the Panhandle, did agree to a 5.3 percent increase in the charge made to homeowners for what I call the "base rate."

As some of you will remember, Energas originally had requested a 7.3 percent increase, and a steering committee representing the cities involved, was able to bring down the increase to 5.3 percent.

A "pass-through" is the major change in your gas bill this winter. Energas pays more for gas purchased and passes the increase on. For example, in January the base cost of gas was $2.68 per thousand cubic feet and the additional cost of gas was $1.61 per thousand cubic feet, for a total of $4.29 per thousand cubic feet.

This direct pass-through of costs of gas to Energas, and consequently to the customer is based upon the fact that Energas is purchasing gas on a short-term basis rather than utilizing long-term contracts and locking in gas costs as was the case in the past.

It is my understanding that most of the long-term contracts which Energas had negotiated in the past have expired, or are in the process of expiring, therefore requiring the company to buy on a short-term contract basis.

The good news, if you can call it good, is that the direct pass-through charge to customers for gas in February will decrease to $1.19 per thousand cubic feet, from January's cost of $1.61 per thousand.

Many of you will ask why Energas does not have long-term gas contracts to prevent this type of occurrence. I cannot answer that; only Energas can address the question of gas contracts.

In defense of Energas, I think we all realize that the extremely cold weather in the northern section of the country, particularly on the East Coast, has caused gas rates to increase dramatically this winter.

It is my understanding that Energas is seriously looking at a new type of contractual arrangement with the city. It would be an attempt to eliminate many of these price increases by making contracts with the city for an extended period.

As far as the City of Hereford is concerned, we have not received any factual data, but indications from our local Energas office are that the company is considering this action.

On a more positive and optimistic note, I hope you saw the article about the Sunfish Swim Team starting at Hereford Aquatic Center. I really hope that many of you parents and youth will consider joining the swim team. It is an excellent, health-building way for Hereford youth to compete with youth of other cities.

As always, we welcome your thoughts and comments about the work of the city.

Study shows Prozac safe to take during pregnancy

BOSTON (AP) - A reassuring new study found no sign that taking Prozac during pregnancy can harm a woman's unborn child.

Prozac is the most widely prescribed medicine for depression. It is taken by more than 12 million people worldwide. While Prozac is not thought to cause major birth defects, some wondered whether it might cause subtle harm to babies' brains.

The new study turned up no evidence that women who take Prozac or a variety of medicines called tricyclic antidepressants during pregnancy in any way affected their children's IQs, language development or behavior.

"I am very confident that if a woman needs antidepressants, she should continue them during pregnancy, because the risk of not being treated is much bigger than any risk of the drug," said Dr. Gideon Koren of the University of Toronto. His study was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Pregnant women who suffer from depression are often told to stop taking their medicines because of the possibility of harm to the unborn child. Koren said some women end up getting abortions or even attempting suicide because they cannot bear their depression.

The issue surfaced again in October, when a team from the University of California at San Diego published a study in the New England Journal of Medicine raising the possibility that Prozac increases the risk of premature delivery and some minor newborn health problems.

The researchers acknowledged that these complications could be a result of the mental condition that prompted the use of the drug, not the medicine itself. Because of shortcomings in the study, some experts discounted it.

The March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation recommended that pregnant women try to avoid taking the drug until its effects have been studied better. It added that women should not stop taking Prozac during pregnancy without first consulting their doctors.

Dr. Richard Johnston, medical director of the March of Dimes, called the latest study "great news," but added: "It doesn't wipe the slate clean of the concerns raised by the earlier study."

Koren's study is one of at least six that have found no significant danger to using Prozac during pregnancy. It involved 80 children whose mothers received a tricyclic antidepressant during pregnancy, 55 whose mothers got Prozac and 84 whose mothers did not take any of these medicines.

The children received IQ and other tests between ages 1 and 7. Average

IQs were 118 for children exposed to tricyclic antidepressants, 117 for those exposed to Prozac and 115 for the children in the untreated comparison group.

There were no significant differences in the youngsters' moods, temperaments, activity levels or behavioral problems.

New legislation to offer more safeguards for medical care consumers

AUSTIN (AP) - People in managed health care plans would get more information, protection and ground-breaking recourse at the courthouse under legislation filed by Republican and Democratic senators.

"Just as we have safeguards for consumers of appliances, so also should we have safeguards for consumers of medical care. No free market is totally unregulated," said Senate Economic Development Committee Chairman David Sibley, R-Waco, author of two of the six bills filed Thursday.

The measures stem from recommendations by the Senate Interim Committee on Managed Care and Consumer Protections, headed by Sibley. Among their provisions:

- Health maintenance organizations would be held legally responsible for negligent decisions when denial of medically necessary treatment results in patient injury.

- The measure would be the first law of its kind in the nation if enacted in Texas, according to Texans for Quality Health Care, a business and managed care coalition.

- But Karina Casari, Economic Development Committee director, said courts in other states have held managed-care organizations liable for such decisions affecting treatment.

- A report card system to allow consumers to compare health plans.

- Removal of so-called gag clauses, allowing doctors to fully inform a patient of all treatment options without fear of retaliation from the managed care organization.

- More stringent confidentiality protections for patient records.

Several leading House members also back the proposed changes.

Texasans for Quality Health Care, which includes the Texas Association of Business and Commerce and the Texas HMO Association, said it would work with lawmakers to protect high-quality and affordable health care.

The group said, however, that consumer access to a health care plan "should not be jeopardized by costly mandates and regulatory burdens that put health insurance beyond the reach of Texas consumers and businesses."

The group expressed opposition to "any legislation creating any new form of deep-pocket litigation."

Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles vetoed similar liability legislation last year, saying it would increase health-care costs in that state.

The Texas bill is authored by Sibley, who in the 1995 legislative session championed so-called tort reform legislation that curtailed civil lawsuit damage awards and made it more difficult to file many such lawsuits.

"I consider this to be tort reform also," Sibley said. "We're trying to make sure that people are accountable for the decisions they make."

Texas Gov. George W. Bush said he has not yet reviewed the bill in detail.

"I just want to make sure we don't create more reasons for lawsuits in Texas. We just spent a session in Texas worrying about lawsuits so we've got to, because of that, make sure it's reasonably structured," he said.

Sibley said most HMOs wouldn't be affected by many of the bills if they're passed because the organizations already are doing "a fine job."

Lisa McGiffert, senior policy analyst with Consumers Union, which publishes Consumer Reports, commended the bill sponsors: Sens. Sibley; David Cain, D-Dallas; Chris Harris, R-Arlington; Frank Madla, D-San Antonio; and Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound.

"These bills will make a difference in the lives of millions of managed care enrollees in Texas," Ms. McGiffert said.

"The issue here is people, pure and simple. When managed care plans sacrifice quality and service in the name of costs, people suffer. ... A balance must be struck between quality of service and costs. The bills introduced today attempt to strike that balance and are based on years of careful study and examination of the problems."

Why Advertising Works!

Maybe you figure other retailers in your line are going to cut back their advertising, so it's safe for you, too. Right? Wrong! You're in competition for the consumer's dollar with every other retailer in town, no matter what he sells. People have only so many dollars to spend, and if they don't spend them for what you sell, they'll spend them for something else.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says what's so great about being "fit as a fiddle? Who wants to be highstrung and whiny?"

My newspaper buddy over at the Vernon Daily Record, Larry Crabtree, says he bought a book, entitled "Lose Weight Fast," for $10. He added it's a lot like playing the lottery...so far he has lost only $10.

You know you are getting old when you tell a friend you are having an affair and he asks, "Who's catering it?"

I'm sure some folks in the community wonder, at times, if the Hereford Economic Development Corporation, or the Chamber of Commerce, are doing anything to attract new business and industry to Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Let me assure you, they are at work...but we have to realize that much of the time the search for new industry is a slow, complicated process. We all want something now, but most of the time it is a longterm project.

Representatives of HEDC and the chamber recently visited Wal-Mart headquarters in Arkansas just to let them know we are seeking new retail establishments. They were well received, reports C of C manager Don Cumpton, and he said the Wal-Mart official with whom they visited knew a lot about Hereford.

The Wal-Mart man reported he was in Hereford a couple of months ago, just as a routine part of his job in checking out communities. There was no mention of Hereford being in Wal-Mart's expansion plans, said Cumpton, "but they were nice and they know we are interested."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has seen the light, according to James Roberts, the country editor down at Andrews. Bullock has come to the conclusion that the folks in the so-called "Robin Hood" school districts are not rich.

An analysis of the nearly 100 school districts that are required to share property tax money with Texas' poorer districts shows more than half have per capita personal income below the state average.

Roberts writes that Bullock's conversion on the school financing plan reminds him of a story about another conversion.

At a summer revival, the biggest sinner in town was converted and joined the Baptist church. He was led down into the baptistry and baptized. As he came up, refreshed and renewed, he shouted:

"I feel so good, I'm going to give $100 every Sunday to the church. 'Hallelujah,' shouted a deacon in the front row. 'We've got a tither in the tank!'"

Cowboys need private MP force

BY JAMES ROBERTS
Andrews County News

We used to have an old sergeant in the army who often used the phrase: "Shape up or ship out!"

And when delivered behind cold blue eyes, jutting chin, and voice that set recruits' lower jaws to trembling, the words of "shape up or ship out" was accepted on par with Moses Ten Commandments.

We feel like Jerry Jones, owner of the Dallas Cowboys, could use some of the old sarge's philosophy.

But in a year when sales of Cowboy merchandise has plummeted, perhaps it's time to adopt new policy, or strategy.

And Jones has to look no further than our armed forces for an example of how to handle wayward souls.

The military police have been handling prima donnas, goldbricks, screw-ups, and mama's boys since Civil War days.

Jones needs to a private MP force to keep the Cowboys out of trouble.

He needs to go over to Scruffy's Bar and Grill and hire a couple of 400-pounders who understand the "shape up or ship out" mentality.

And as MP's have done to the consternation of many a soldier or sailor, they need to immediately place off limits many of the seedier establishments in Dallas.

"These are professionals. These are grown men. These are millionaires - you can't dictate their private lives!"

So the argument goes. Hogwash and bullfeathers. If your name goes out on a check for $5 million a year, you have some control - over both player and his agent.

A professional who acts mature both on and off the field, who accepts his duties and obligations, who earns the money paid him, deserves all the privacy he can get in his personal life.

But the pro who acts like a spoiled brat, a prima donna who tries to set himself above and beyond reproach, deserves the 400-pound MP on his back night and day.

And over a period of time, when the foul-up occurs for the third time, it's time to bite the bullet and "ship out."

The Cowboys have built up too many fans over too long a period of time and over too wide of a territory to let a few bad apples taint the overall image.

We remember many years ago in Italy an experience with the MP's.

Our infantry unit chased the Germans out of this small town and as we slogged through the main street to set up a perimeter on the outskirts of town, the townsfolk showered us with flowers, free glasses of wine, free handkerchiefs of almonds, and paper baskets of grapes. The town was ours for the asking.

Two days later, we had occasion to go back into town. The MP's had taken over. Vino was a buck a glass, a helmet full of almonds cost a pair of GI shoes, and grapes were 50 cents a cluster. Free enterprise and MP's go together like ham and cheese.

That's the reason a private MP force laboring under the dictum of the sarge's "Shape up or ship out" very well should be the order of the day for Jones and the Cowboys.

Salute to volunteers

BY RON BOYD, PRESIDENT
Golden Spread Council

As the Boys Scout of America celebrate its 87th anniversary on Feb. 8, we commend the countless volunteers who have donated their time and energy to support people in the Cub Scouting, Boy Scouting, Exploring and Learning for Life programs. The invaluable lessons that are taught in Scouting to young people are made possible only through the unselfish sacrifice and caring of volunteers.

The Golden Spread Council has 2,175 volunteers who serve 123 Cub Scout packs, 85 Boy Scout troops, 65 Explorer posts, and 11 Learning for Life groups. We'd like to thank these volunteers for their hard work and dedication to the youth in our communities.

You obviously understand the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." For more than 87 years, good people like you have taken the time to use the Scouting program as a remedy for the social ills America's youth face. You have helped save them from the dangers of drugs, gang violence, teen pregnancy, vandalism, and so on. Thanks to you, thousands of youngsters have gained personal values, self-confidence, leadership, and life skills that are helping them grow into strong role models for the next generation.

Thank you for being a part of our dynamic team of volunteers who make a difference in the lives of America's youth and tomorrow's leaders.

A sampling of editorial comment from Texas newspapers:
Waco Tribune-Herald on ending mandatory release:

Texas are not protected and justice is not served when criminals with a violent history are given automatic early prison releases.

The Texas Legislature can correct this injustice in the criminal justice system by putting an end to the mandatory release program for violent criminals and ending prison "good-time" policies.

The mandatory release program for violent criminals was abolished in 1987. But it left in place all those violent criminals sentenced before 1987. Those violent criminals are still being dumped back out into society. The mandatory release law was short-sighted even when Texas prisons were overcrowded. But Texas prisons have tripled their space since then.

A bill to end the mandatory releases hit a snag due to a report that estimated it will cost an additional $2 billion over five years to have these inmates serve the sentences they earned.

The bill's sponsors, Sens. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, and John Whitmire, D-Houston, believe that estimate is way off the mark. Perhaps it will cost $400,000 over five years. It also would save money in the overburdened parole system, which must baby sit these criminals who should be serving out their sentences behind bars, not on Texas streets.

The bill would stop the ability of inmates convicted before 1987 to earn good-time credits doled out by prison officials. Good-time credits are added together until they trigger the automatic release of convicts who are put under the guardianship of parole officers whose caseloads prevent them from keeping good track of their parolees.

Justice is served when criminals serve the sentences handed down by juries or judges. Prisoners should not be rewarded if they don't break prison rules. They should be expected to not break prison rules.

Juries, communities and families of victims are too often outraged when they learn that lawbreakers sent to prison are back on the streets after serving over a fraction of their sentences.

This should end. Despite the cost, which was anticipated when the criminals were sentenced, the bill should become law so the criminals in the pipeline before passage of the 1987 law are also denied mandatory releases due to accumulation of good-time credits.

Not only should mandatory releases be dropped, and all convicted felons be required to serve the sentences they earned, but all prisoners should be required to undergo parole reviews.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

On Jan. 10, my five-year-old son and I were on our way to visit my mother when I had a flat tire south of Canyon. A couple of cars passed me, then a cattle truck pulled over.

A man named Cecil, who said he lived in Hereford, volunteered to change the tire for me. Cecil quickly changed the tire, then checked the spare to ensure that it was properly inflated. While he was doing this, he insisted I stay in my car where it was warm.

When he finished, I asked if I could pay him. He refused, only mentioning that if I had a chance to do something nice for someone else, that would be payment enough.

I hate to see his act of kindness go unnoticed, however, so if you see

Cecil - who drives a truck for Excel - please give him a pat on the back. He did a very nice thing on a very cold day.

Yvonne Wieck

Dear Editor:

Miracles happen in Hereford! I would like to extend a sincere thanks to the young boy and his mother for returning my purse from the parking lot of Homeland last Wednesday.

I wish I knew your names. With so much crime in the world today, it's nice to know there are honest people like you. I cannot repay you, but if given the opportunity, I will pass on the good deed.

God bless you!

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

An actress named Sarah Bernhardt was world-famous and delighted audiences for many years, and years, and years.

She embarked on farewell tours at the drop of a hat. Apparently her tours were not only entertaining for audiences but financially successful, or she would not have done so many.

Somehow, lately I've felt a particular kinship with Bernhardt. It seems like I've been making farewell tours in Hereford for several months. And, I must say, I can understand how Bernhardt felt. She thrived on the attention, and, frankly, so do I.

When the publisher of this newspaper asked me to come out of retirement to help in a staffing pinch. I readily agreed. A friend said I must not have liked retirement or I wouldn't have hurried back to work.

Simply put, that is not the case. After no many years of working, I welcomed retirement and my motive for returning to work had nothing to do with being bored with my life after four and a half months of retirement.

The reasons for pitching in are many and varied, though. Foremost is my love of this kind of work, especially when it's not a day-in, day-out situation. As has been said in the past, printer's ink just courses through our veins.

As a beginning report to these many years ago, I was blessed with a city editor who was light years ahead of his time, in some ways. The paper had pressed women into service in the city room during World War II, but the powers thought they should go back home after the end of hostilities.

My city editor (incidentally, I was 19 years old when I first met him) was willing to give us a chance. He fought for me when I sought advancement. He counseled me and his criticism of my work was gentle and constructive. Some tips he gave me have stayed with me all these years.

But, the man had a problem and I solved it for him. Before my arrival, he had been plagued with a series of beginning reporters who were less than careful with facts. In those days, mistakes in obituaries could almost result in termination. Apparently that had happened to some of my predecessors.

To make a long story short, I was introduced to obituary-writing almost immediately. This is not unusual. Beginners often are thrown into that fire. I took literally his instructions: never publish an obit without talking to a member or close friend of the family (this presupposed that some undertakers were not always accurate), ask for spelling of names, even common names, and get times correct.

There were other instructions and I followed all of them to the Nth degree. I was too scared to do anything else. The result, and I say this with all modesty, I was the most proficient writer of death notices the city editor ever had the pleasure of employing.

So what did he do? He treated me like the Andy Griffith's sergeant who made him permanent latrine orderly. The city editor stuck me in a slot. I felt put-upon.

He denied it vehemently. Of course, I had other assignments, some good and some not so good. He tried flattery: "I don't worry when you do them," he told me. Nevertheless I waged a continuing campaign to be relieved of the onerous duty.

The junkets I took -- to New York and Los Angeles -- were fine, and exciting. But always I got home to the same old thing.

Finally in desperation, I approached the nightside city editor and asked if he wanted my services and if I could stay off the obituary desk. He agreed with alacrity.

The next day my city editor jumped right in my middle about seeking another assignment. Why didn't I tell him, he wanted to know, how unhappy I was. But, I did, ad infinitum, I declared. It was with a measure of satisfaction that I was relieved of obit-writing. Every time a new reporter messed up and left, I got the assignment again, but I always knew it was temporary.

The city editor called me his champion obit-writer. I always wanted to be a champion, but I doubted merits and propriety of the title he bestowed.

Rancher seeks profit from new breed of cattle

By KAY LEDBETTER
Amarillo Globe-News
AMARILLO, Texas - George Chapman went halfway around the world looking for a better breed of cattle, one he hopes will enhance tenderness and profits down the road.

Eggs were harvested from Bonsmara cows in South Africa. Fertilized embryos were frozen and shipped to Canada. The embryos were implanted into recipient heifers and trucked to Chapman's 1,000 acres northwest of Amarillo.

The result is the first Bonsmara breed cattle to be born in the United States, according to Chapman and Alta Genetics of Canada, a partner in the venture.

The first purebred calf was born on Jan. 24, with 23 other heifers expected to calf in the next 10 days, Chapman said. Another 80 heifers carrying Bonsmara offspring are due in May, he said.

Chapman said he is hoping the Bonsmara cattle will do everything the South African research indicates they can - resist heat, insects and environmental stresses and still produce meat that is tender, juicy and hearty.

"If they do that here, it will be a breakthrough similar to when the English cattle were brought over," he said. Those breeds, including Hereford and Aberdeen Angus, transformed the Texas cattle industry beginning in the late 19th century.

Several heat-tolerant breeds are raised in this country, mostly related to Indian Brahman cattle, but they do not uniformly produce tender, marbled meat, beef experts say.

In a series of independent trials at Irene Animal Production Institute, Irene, South Africa, the Bonsmara proved to have "exceptional meat quality," according to a research paper by the Agricultural Research Council of the institute.

The meat quality is due to the Bonsmara background (3/8 Short-horn/Hereford, 5/8 Afrikaner), the council reported, and the meat compared "very well with that of the Hereford and Afrikaner and was significantly more tender than that of the Brahman and Simmentaler."

But Chapman doesn't plan to rely on South African research alone. Texas A&M University will study some of his animals.

Bill Holloway, Texas A&M's resident director of research at Uvalde, said the Bonsmara test cattle will be fed out under U.S. conditions on grass, wheat pasture and under feedlot situations. The research will involve Texas A&M facilities at Uvalde, Amarillo, Overton and College Station, he said.

"We would like to characterize the animals according to traits we think indicate their ability to fit the environment and market niches we have," Holloway said. The research will look primarily at growth curve, fat distribution, tenderness and taste.

Holloway said Texas has heat and nutritional stresses. What is needed is a breed of cattle with the physiological characteristics to handle a combination of stresses and produce uniform quantity and quality of product to meet market demands, he said.

"George is bringing in the first cattle of this breed, so there is no firsthand information in the United States as to whether they'll fit the particular stresses or market we have. But the evidence holds a promise that the breed will work," Holloway said.

"These animals don't have to be more tender than any other breed than the Brahman. If they are, they meet a niche," he said.

The difference, Holloway said, is that Brahmans are Bos indicus cattle originating in India and while they are adapted to the heat, they lack in tenderness. The Bonsmara cattle are largely Bos taurus cattle, like the European breeds, that have adapted to the heat in their native South Africa.

Charles Ball, retired executive of Texas Cattle Feeders Association and cattle association consultant, said he knew the breed's developer, Jan Bonsma, and saw the cattle in 1988 in feed yards in South Africa.

Ball said the breeding for resistance to heat, insects and parasites in South Africa should help the Bonsmara cattle to perform well in the United States, particularly the semi-tropical areas of the Gulf Coast.

Other breeds that were developed for that type of environment and have performed well are the Senepol, Santa Gertrudis, Brangus and Beefmaster, he said.

"We have brought approximately 30 breeds into the U.S. since World War II," Ball said. "All these breeds seem to have some characteristics that are desirable, but none have proven superior in all characteristics."

He said the Bonsmara's attributes are yet to be proven here.

Chapman said he began researching the Bonsmara cattle in 1990 and spent three weeks in South Africa to set up a plan to get the cattle into the United States. He said it is difficult to import cattle because of quarantine problems.

By freezing the embryo and washing it, there is no threat of bacterial contamination, he said. This scientific development allows the movement of genetics from country to country without movement of diseases, Chapman said.

The recipient heifers used were first-calf black baldies, Chapman said. The calves are expected to be lightweight, 55 to 75 pounds, which makes calving easier. The first one weighed 69 pounds, he said.

By weaning at about 205 days, they are expected to weigh 500 to 650 pounds, Chapman said.

"African data tells us these cattle will be 1,000 to 1,200 pound mamas that will still be able to produce those 500 to 600 pound calves," he said. Not having to feed a more typical 1,400-pound mother cow will allow a ranch to support more smaller cows, he said.

The Bonsmara beef cattle finish out between 900 and 1,000 pounds in Africa. Chapman said research will conclude if they can be grown a little larger and get some marbling in them if necessary.

Chapman said he hopes to have Bonsmara semen for sale by early next fall, and also plans to breed the cattle with his own Beefmaster herd.

The investment in getting the Bonsmara to the United States was a sizable one, he said, but his and Alta Genetics' goal is to not let this become an ostrich or emu deal.

"It's a commercial venture," Chapman said. "We plan to keep the semen at a price where a commercial operator will be able to upgrade his cattle for about the same price as if he bought his own bull."

A good Guernsey cow will produce more than one thousand gallons of whole milk and cream a year. This is enough to feed a family of two adults and three children, with ample skimmed milk left over to feed a veal calf, a pig, and a flock of chickens. An additional bonus is more than fourteen tons of manure for the spreading.

Texas themes boost rug-making venture

By ROBYN HOFFMAN
The Daily Oklahoman

CORDELL, Okla. (AP) - Al Syverson isn't a Texan, but his ingenuity is letting him turn a gift to his mother into a venture as big as Texas.

Syverson and his wife, Linda, are busy handcrafting rugs of various sizes embroidered with Texas themes. He makes rugs with armadillos. Rugs shaped like the state map. Texas A&M rugs. Rugs with chili peppers, and rugs that look like the Lone Star state's flag.

If it's got a Texas theme, he can make it - and he can sure sell it.

The list of people who have his rugs includes the likes of former President Bush, Ross Perot and U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas. Singer Willie Nelson and former major league pitcher Nolan Ryan also have the Syverson's creations, he said.

Mrs. Hutchison liked her rug so much, she invited the Syversons to Washington, D.C., during inauguration week.

"When she got it, she wanted to order more for her office," Syverson said. "And she wanted to send one as a present to the Bushes and then send one to have in the state Capitol."

The Syversons' rugs are displayed in three Texas state information centers, he said. They are sold at the Alamo in San Antonio by the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, and Syverson said he was contacted recently to make rugs for the sponsors of the next Cotton Bowl football game in Dallas.

Syverson, who also operates a floor covering store in Cordell, is a Cordell native. His mother was born and raised in Texas, and about five years ago she asked him to make her a rug of the Texas flag.

He did so, but never got to deliver it.

"I had it sitting out one day and a lady came in and wanted to buy it," he said. "I sold it to her."

Syverson made another rug, but the same thing happened. It was then that it occurred to him there might be a market, south of the Red River at least, for his rugs.

"If she hadn't asked me to make a Texas flag for her, none of this would've ever happened," he said. "It's really amazing."

After turning out several more Texas-themed rugs, he took them to an Austin flea market, an arts festival in Waco and a mall in Amarillo.

He said the response was "overwhelming," especially at the mall.

"The mall keeps cutting my rent because they want me to keep coming back," he said.

That was three years ago. Last April, a Texas-based marketer named Nancy Habermacher saw his products, and now helps market them.

"She goes around to stores selling only Texas things," Syverson said. "The first week she worked for us, she sold over 200 rugs."

Now the Syversons are able to sell on a larger scale. They are licensed with Texas A&M and Texas Tech universities, and make rugs with the schools' logos. His largest customer is Aggieland of Texas, a chain of nine stores that sells Texas A&M memorabilia.

The growth prompted the Syversons to hire extra help for their rugs and the floor covering business in Cordell. At first, they laid carpet in the day and made rugs at night and on weekends, while his wife handled the administrative work.

Now, four rugmakers help him. The crew spends about 30 minutes to an hour on each handmade rug. They use carpet scraps and cut and piece each rug.

"The Texas flag with the Texas A&M logo on it is our most popular," he said. "We can't make those fast enough. Texans are fanatical about their state."

Syverson said he can make rugs of any size, color or shape, and hopes to make their rugs as popular in Oklahoma as they are in Texas.

The Syversons now are making Kansas State University items, are interested in obtaining a license from the University of Oklahoma soon, and are also planning a line of Route 66 rugs.

"There's no limit to what we can do," he said. "We can be as big as we want to be."

"At one time, we were about 400 rugs behind," Syverson said. "Through all of 1996, we never had a rug in inventory."

"We always try to build up an inventory," Mrs. Syverson said. "But everything gets sold before it is made."

Consider Tax-free Investments

If you're among the minority of Americans who have already done your taxes, congratulations! But if you're like most people, you've probably waited until now to begin thinking about your taxes.

When you're working on your IRS form 1040, take a look at line 8a. This is where you list your taxable interest income. It may come from savings and money market accounts, CDs and corporate bonds. This is all money on which you'll owe taxes come April 15.

Now, look at line 8b, tax-exempt interest income. This includes income you earn on tax-free investments, such as municipal bonds, tax-free mutual funds and unit trusts. You report this income, but you don't pay taxes on it. The more income you can move from line 8a to 8b, the more of your interest you keep.

When comparing tax-free and taxable investments, be careful not to fall into the trap of looking only at their stated yields. Remember to consider how much of that yield will go to taxes. On a taxable investment, that amount would be your tax bracket—28 percent, 31 percent, etc. On a federally tax-free investment, however, that amount is zero.

In fact, tax-free investments often provide significantly more income than you would take home after paying taxes on a taxable investment, even though the stated yield may be lower on the tax-free investment. The following table shows the return you would have to earn on a taxable investment to earn, after taxes, the same amount you would take home from a tax-free investment. For example, if you're in the 28 percent tax bracket, you would have to earn 6.94 percent on a taxable investment to match the tax-free return of a 5 percent municipal bond.

Tax-free investing can be particularly beneficial if you're in the 28 percent federal tax bracket or higher. In fact, a study last year by Nuveer Research tracked the after-tax returns on various investments held for 20 years. The results showed that, for higher-income investors, tax-free bonds performed second only to stocks.

As a tax-paying investor, you can't afford to overlook the benefits of tax-free investing. Talk to your tax adviser and investment representative to see if tax-free investments are right for you.

BIBLE BAPTIST CHURCH

Should the Word "Firstborn" be taken out of the King James Bible. (Mat 1:25) And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: We find many Translations: RSV, NRSV, ASV, NASB, Living Bible, NIV and many more that have taken this step. The question would be, "Why is it wrong" Jesus was Mary's firstborn because she had other children, Mat 13:55, Mark 6:3, Psalms 69:8. These were not his cousins, notice the word "Cousin" in Lk 1:36,58 where the word is used. We see in Gal 1:19, the brother of the Lord, called James, he gets to see Jesus after his resurrection. This James was not "James the Apostle" you see in Mat 10. You know this by looking at 1 Cor 15:7, James was seen first then the Apostles.

Lady Raiders edge Hereford in OT, 43-39

One more time

Catie Betzen, right, will help lead the Hereford Lady Whitefaces against the Randall Lady Raiders one more time Monday night. Randall downed Hereford in overtime Friday night and forced a one-game playoff to decide the second- and third-place seeds in the District 1-4A race. The two teams, who have split their two previous encounters, are slated to meet face off beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the WT Fieldhouse.

Fourth-quarter enabled Randall to fend off stubborn Whitefaces

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

The magical playoff number for the Hereford Whitefaces stayed at one Friday night.

The Randall Raiders used a 16-4 run through the final four minutes Friday night to break open a tight game and claim a 65-47 victory over the Whitefaces, who entered the night needing just one win in any of their final three games to wrap up a playoff spot.

It wasn't an easy win by any means for the District 1-4A-leading Raiders. Hereford, despite playing without Jonathan Keenan, managed to stay close throughout the first three periods of play before going cold from the floor in the final eight minutes.

With the loss, Hereford slipped to 14-15 on the year and heads into Tuesday night's matchup with a 6-4 loop record. Randall improved to 22-5 and 10-1.

The Whitefaces, who had excellent outings from Isaac Walker and Cory Schumacher, got off to a hot start against the Raider defense. Hereford pumped in the first two baskets of the evening and briefly held a 4-0 lead.

The Raiders, who had a game-high 22 points from Kevin Clayton, got untracked from there, however. Randall scored 16 of the final 22 points in the first quarter and held a 16-10 edge at the start of the second period.

The Raiders turned a 13-12 run in the second into a seven-point halftime lead, at 29-22.

The Whitefaces didn't go down quietly. Hereford, behind the antics of Walker and Schumacher, came alive offensively in the first six minutes of the third. The Herd outscored Randall by a 19-12 clip that span and moved into a 41-41 tie with 1:53 remaining in the stanza.

Unfortunately, the run didn't continue. The Raiders turned two free throws and a steal by Clayton into a slim 45-41 margin at the end of the stanza.

Things went from bad to worse for the Whitefaces in the fourth. Randall reeled off a 14-1 spree at the start of the fourth to seal the win.

Isaac Walker led all HHS scorers in the game, netting 20 points - 19 of which came in the first three periods. Schumacher finished the night with 10.

The Randall Lady Raiders kept their dreams of finishing with the District 1-4A runner-up honors intact Friday night.

Barely. The Lady Raiders, after Andrea Burrows had sent the game into overtime by sinking two free throws with just four seconds remaining in regulation, hit 8-of-10 free throw opportunities in the extra frame and claimed a wild 43-39 come-from-behind win over the Lady Whitefaces. Hereford, which was gunning for its second-ever win against the Raiders, led much of the game, building a lead as big as five points midway through the third period.

Despite the fact that both Hereford and Canyon have already clinched playoff spots, the Lady Raiders' win was important. The victory moved Randall into a second-place tie with the Lady Whitefaces and forces a one-game playoff to determine which team will advance as the runner-up. The two squads are slated to meet again Monday night in the West Texas A&M Fieldhouse. Tip-off time is set for 7:30 p.m.

The Hereford defense, behind the efforts of Julie Rampley and Misti Davis, set the tone for the affair early. The Lady Whitefaces held Randall to just seven points offensively in the first quarter.

The only problem, however, was that the Lady Raider defense matched the effort.

Catie Betzen and the Lady Whitefaces managed to solve the Randall defensive scheme somewhat in the second period. Hereford posted a 9-6 run in the span and took a 16-13 advantage into the intermission.

The Herd looked as if it was ready to stampede in the early minutes of the third. After Randall had turned an offensive rebound into a bucket that cut the HHS advantage to one, at 16-15, Briar Baker and Betzen, one of two HHS players to reach the double-digit plateau offensively, reeled off back-to-back shots to extend the Lady Whitefaces' cushion to 20-15. Rampley picked up the assist on Betzen's basket.

Randall stormed back, though. Mindy Norman and Burrows keyed a 5-0 run in the ensuing 1:43 that knotted the game at 20-20. Norman accounted for the big blow in the stanza by pushing home a 3-point blast from the left wing. Burrows netted two shots from the charity stripe with 4:19 left in the half to tie the game.

Hereford wasn't dead, however. The Lady Whitefaces picked up a basket from Rampley and a 3-pointer from Kesha Rives in the final minutes and took a slim 28-27 deficit into the fourth quarter.

Junior Sarah Ramey took control in the early minutes of the final stanza. She scored six points in the first four minutes of the period and helped the Lady Whitefaces run to a 33-28 lead.

Randall came back once again, though. Burrows reeled off five straight points in the final two minutes and carried the game into the extra frame.

Hereford went stone cold from the floor in the overtime frame. The Lady Whitefaces did not score in the stanza until the final minute of play.

Betzen and Walker each finished the night with 10 points for Hereford.

Hereford linksters shine in first round of San Angelo Invitational

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

SAN ANGELO - Amy Killingsworth shot a 93 and teammate Jacque Bezner chalked up a 94 Friday morning and helped the Hereford Lady Whitefaces grab the top spot after the first round of the San Angelo Invitational Golf Tournament. The HHS linksters took a 21-stroke lead into Saturday's finale.

Hereford finished the first 18 holes of the tournament with a score of 393. Borger finished in second with a score of 414 - five strokes better than the Big Spring Lady Steers.

"You are always glad to be leading a tournament," said Bixler, who had guided the Lady Whitefaces to the regional round 11 times during his 12-year tenure. "But it was our first time out so we're really looking for the things we need to improve on right now."

Killingsworth and Bezner turned in strong outings over the first nine holes and helped them move into contention for medals. Killingsworth, who was third in the individual standings after the first round, fired a 45 over the first half of the course. High winds contributed to her score of 48 on the backside. Bezner penciled in a 44 on the front nine.

Lubbock Coronado's Suzanne Sowers topped the individual standings after the first 18 holes, shooting an 80. Big Springs' Kelly Hellar was second with an 82.

Hereford's Stephanie Bixler, Jennifer Phipps and Lindsay Ward also turned in solid efforts on the San Angelo Country Club course. Bixler finished the round with a 101. Phipps and Ward checked in at 105 and 113, respectively.

Big 12 baseball coaches anticipate dogfight

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - The good news for the Big 12 conference is that five of its baseball teams are among the top 25 in the country, according to at least one poll.

The bad news for league coaches is that only six teams will make the new conference's postseason tournament.

"There's going to be a dogfight for those last couple of spots," Kansas coach Bobby Randall said during a conference call of league coaches Thursday.

"It's going to build a lot of excitement toward the end of the season. A lot of good teams are going to be left out."

The preseason ranking from Collegiate Baseball magazine has Oklahoma State at No. 5, Texas A&M at 18, Missouri 19, Texas 20 and Texas Tech 24. Baseball America has A&M at No. 8 and OSU 18th.

Texas Tech coach Larry Hays agrees that the Aggies and Cowboys are the teams to beat.

"I don't want to pick between them because I don't want to make them mad," Hays said, laughing.

It's not surprising that the Big 12 already has such a presence on the national baseball scene.

While the Southwest Conference was a football league and the Big Eight a basketball conference, both had strong baseball teams.

Together, the Big 12 has four schools that have won a combined eight national titles and 68 teams that have made the College World Series since it began in 1947. The Big Eight has had at least one team in 44 of the 50 CWS'.

Conference play begins Feb. 28 with Oklahoma State taking on Kansas in Lawrence, Kan. The regular season ends May 12 with Oklahoma playing OSU in Oklahoma City.

In between, teams will play a 30-game round-robin schedule featuring three games against each of the other 10 schools; five on the road, five at home. (There are only 11 teams because Colorado doesn't field a squad.)

The six teams with the best in-conference winning percentage will meet May 15-18 in Oklahoma City to pick a champion through a double-elimination playoff.

While Texas (four national titles) and OSU (16 straight Big Eight postseason titles) were the marquee teams in their leagues, both are facing an unusual situation: new head coaches.

Augie Garrido left Cal State-Fullerton to take over the Longhorns from Cliff Gustafson, who retired following reports of missing funds from a summer baseball camp. Gustafson won an NCAA-record 1,427 games over 29 years at UT.

"Everyone here is new to each other," said Garrido, a winner 1,152 games and three national titles. "We don't know a lot about the team. We'd like to have more information before we even have this conversation."

Gary Ward left the Cowboys after 953 wins and 19 seasons because of an aching back. New coach Tom Holliday was Ward's assistant all 19 years in Stillwater.

"I will not feel any pressure because I've been in this uniform a long time," Holliday said. "I feel relaxed and comfortable with this situation."

Holliday likes the talent he inherits.

"Any time you have a lot of seniors, that tells you they're good college players, but not great pro prospects," Holliday said.

Holliday said OSU's revamped infield will be much better defensively, while his pitching staff is replacing three players with two better, although less experienced guys.

"Last year, we had one guy who could throw hard and a whole bunch of finesse guys," Holliday said. "Now, we've got about three guys who can throw in the 90s."

Texas A&M coach Mark Johnson also likes his team's outlook, which is buoyed by the return of three star pitchers.

"We have reason to be optimistic ... but I'm a little leery to say it's all arrived," he said. "We still have to put the puzzle together."

OU coach Larry Cochell is counting on improved pitching this year from three transfers and four freshmen to help the Sooners try returning to their 1994 national championship level.

Missouri coach Tim Jamieson said he's interested in seeing how his team responds to being last season's Big Eight regular-season champs.

"We've handled adversity. Now let's see how they handle success," Jamieson said. "I think you'll find these kids to be very competitive. They won't quit."

Iowa State came on strong at the end of last season, bouncing back from a 5-22 start to finish as runners-up in the Big Eight tournament.

"We hope to continue our progress of 1996 and use that as a springboard to this season," said coach Lyle Smith, whose northerly team must play its first 20 games on the road.

Dimmitt sports legend, Coffey, to be inducted

By DON NELSON
Castro County News

Junior Coffey, a Dimmitt High School sports legend who broke the racial barrier in Texas high school athletics in the early 1960s will be inducted Sunday into the Texas Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Coffey will be the 108th inductee in the shrine, and is the fourth person from Dimmitt to receive the honor. The previous three were Lometa Odom, all-state and all-America basketball forward; and former coaches John Blaine and Kenneth Cleveland.

Before graduating from Dimmitt High School in 1961, Coffey attained state and national recognition in both football and basketball. He was all-state in both sports, was named to the high school All-American team as a fullback, and in 1960 became the first black athlete to play in a Texas UIL state basketball tournament.

He accepted a football scholarship to the University of Washington, where he became an All-American fullback, played in the Rose Bowl and graduated as the second leading rusher in the school's history.

He was drafted in 1965 by the world champion Green Bay Packers and later played for Atlanta and the New York Giants. After retiring from pro football in 1970, Coffey settled in Seattle, where he has built a successful horse-training business. His wife, Kathleen, oversees the training operation while he is on the racing circuit.

The Coffeys have a son, Tony, 26, who is an engineer with Boeing Aircraft in Philadelphia.

Coffey and his wife will both be on hand for the induction, along with his former high school coaches - Johnny Ethridge of Hobbs, M.M., and J.D. Covington of Big Fork, Mon. - and many of his former teammates.

Junior was an eighth grader when he moved to Dimmitt with his uncle and aunt, Roden and Maudie Sanders. "God put me in a place and position," recalls Coffey. "When things were in a turmoil all around Texas and everywhere, I landed in a place that was very unique."

Coffey and his uncle and aunt arrived in Dimmitt during a snowstorm and with little belongings. "People offered to help; they invited us into their homes; they gave us food and blankets to get by on at first.

Coffey had never played sports, but he says Kent Hance, a classmate and close friend, encouraged him to go out for football.

"I distinctly remember the first time I put my thigh pads on, I had them upside down. Kent asked me to come to the dressing room with him, and he showed me in private how to put them on. He didn't want to see me embarrassed, it was a positive atmosphere that prevailed then."

That was the beginning of a lifelong friendship between the future All-American and the future U.S. congressman. In later years, Coffey would return to Dimmitt to help Hance in his campaign for the governorship.

Coffey's teammates were just aware of his individual worth and concerned for his feelings. They wouldn't eat at a restaurant or stay at a motel that refused Coffey.

"I didn't realize until a couple of years into college that Kent had been running interference for me," Coffey said. The team would pull up to a cafe and the coach would send Kent in to check it out.

"Kent would come back and say, 'Coach, I don't think we want to eat here, their kitchen is terrible,' or 'They're too crowded.' So we'd go on down the road."

Although Coffey was recognized as one of the premier athletes in Texas and had earned straight-A's in high school, he couldn't play in the Southwest Conference in the early 1960s.

"I couldn't even visit Texas, and Texas Tech told me that if I'd come on campus, they were sure the situation would change." He was courted heavily by Coach Chesty Walker of Washington, and Oklahoma persisted that they wanted him to break the color barrier. But Coffey didn't want that obstacle anymore. He went to Illinois for a visit, but decided the people were worse there than in Texas.

He went to Seattle and reported he could go anywhere. He called his aunt and said, "We can go anywhere here, this is definitely where we want to be."

His aunt and uncle moved to Seattle after the harvest that year to be close to their nephew. After going into pro football, one of the things Coffey did was to buy his aunt and uncle a home in Seattle. His uncle died in 1983, but his Aunt Maudie, 84, still lives in Seattle.

Deion signs unusual pact with Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) - Deion Sanders was interested in playing for the Cincinnati Reds because no other baseball team has made him feel so comfortable.

The Reds were interested in getting him back after a one-year layoff because no one else was available to fill one of their glaring need for a leadoff hitter.

Even though Sanders is not an accomplished leadoff hitter, he has accomplished more than anyone else they had heading into spring training. That's why they agreed to an unusual one-year contract on Thursday.

"He really fits well here," manager Jim Bowden said. "We've won with him. We were in first in '94 (before the players' strike) and we were first in '95."

"We need speed. We had a slow team last year. You can't play on (artificial) turf and not have speed in the mix."

Heading into spring training, unproven Curtis Goodwin was first in line to play center field and leadoff. Goodwin was expected to play center last year, but struggled in spring training and was sent to the minors.

He had four stints with the Reds, batting .228 in 49 games. He batted leadoff in 27 games - third-most on the team - and had an on-base percentage of .323, poor for a leadoff hitter.

Thomas Howard hit leadoff most often last season, but had an on-base percentage of only .307. He left as a free agent after the season.

Sanders has not been much better at reaching base - his on-base percentage was .327 in 1995, his last season of baseball. But he's a much better center fielder than Goodwin and has much more major-league experience.

The question is whether he can play up to his former standards after taking a year off from baseball so he could play full-time for the Dallas Cowboys. An eye injury he suffered in the Cowboys' playoff loss to Carolina will limit him for another month or so, giving him little time to get his swing back in shape.

Sanders thinks he can follow Eric Davis' example. The outfielder retired after the 1994 season because of a neck injury that required surgery, came back to the Reds last year and batted .287 with 26 homers and 83 RBIs.

Davis, who left as a free agent after the season, talked to Sanders when the cornerback was considering returning to baseball this month. Sanders figured that if Davis could miss a year and come back, he could, too.

"I was encouraged by guys like Eric Davis. I was very encouraged," Sanders said.

Although he told Bowden late last year that there was only a 40 percent chance he would return to baseball, Sanders changed his mind in the past month.

He said the only baseball team that interested him was Cincinnati. He has some close friends on the team and likes the way he can keep a low profile in the city.

"A lot of people say, 'Why the Cincinnati Reds?' This is the only team in baseball where I felt like it was a family," Sanders said.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Households see variety of electric rates

Electric rates varied for residential customers across the state in 1995. South Texas consumers, who weathered the hottest summer temperatures, paid some of the highest retail rates.

Residential electric rates per kilowatt hour, 1995

- 9 cents or more
- ▨ 8 to 8.99 cents
- 7 to 7.99 cents
- Less than 7 cents

Legislative update

The Texas Legislature, which convened January 14, will consider deregulating wholesale and retail sale of electricity to Texas households and businesses.

Youth may receive insurance discount

AUSTIN (AP) - Justin Hill doesn't think much about his auto insurance. Even though the 16-year-old Austin High School junior has his own car and his own insurance policy, he just pays his mom what she says is due.

But Hill and some other youthful drivers in Texas are now eligible for a discount on their auto insurance. The only catch is they might have to ask for it before getting the break.

State lawmakers two years ago approved an auto insurance discount for youthful drivers who maintain a good driving record and a 'B' or 3.0 average in school.

Those discounts, which officially start Saturday, are available even after completing high school and college as long as the driver is classified youthful: men up to age 24 and unmarried women up to age 20.

But Texas insurance companies can decide for themselves whether to offer the discount to their customers. They can decide, as well, whether to tell customers about the deal.

That's because the discount is classified as optional for insurers. It joins five other optional discounts that if your insurance company doesn't offer, you might not know about.

Those discounts, alone or combined, can save Texas motorists plenty, officials from the Texas Department of Insurance say.

The good student discount, for example, is 10 percent off coverages for liability, medical payments, personal injury protection and collision. Other optional discounts rates are set by individual companies and must be filed with the insurance department.

"We're hoping people are becoming more and more aware that these things are available," said Audrey Selden, associate Texas insurance commissioner. "The companies and the department want people to pay only a reasonable rate."

"I really do think that companies will take advantage of this," she said of the good student discount. "That is one of the highest rates."

Of the companies that cover the most Texans, State Farm Insurance says it will offer the discount starting June 1. Farmers says it's considering the discount and Allstate said it's not planning to offer the break.

State Farm, Allstate and Farmers insurance companies cover about 50 percent of all Texas motorists.

No company has filed its discount rate with the insurance department. But companies aren't required to file their rate change until they plan to offer it.

Officials for the state's three largest auto insurers said if they offer a discount, they tell their customers. But each said it's not always good business to discuss deals they don't offer.

That could leave the job of finding out about a discount up to customers.

"I don't know who the onus is on, but I'm of the mentality that it's just so competitive, any edge our agents have they are going to take advantage of," said Mark Toohey, a spokesman for Farmers.

Dean Brand, a spokesman for State Farm, said companies and consumers share the responsibility of knowing about discounts.

"I think a lot of people may be eligible for things they don't know about," Brand said. "We send out lots of inserts and information to our policyholders about these discounts. We also consider it our company's and State Farm agents' responsibility to remind them."

"But we also think it's the responsibility of the policyholder," he said.

Karen Hill, Justin Hill's mother, agrees.

She said she often ignores inserts in her bill and in her son's bill.

Tortugas Mountain Observatory plays role in planetary science

By JOHN FLECK
Albuquerque Journal

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) - Wind whips through the open slit in the Tortugas Mountain Observatory's dome as Scott Murrell swings the telescope toward where Saturn ought to be.

"Dadgum," Murrell says. "We're right in the middle of that damn cloud."

But patience and persistence must be catalogued among a good astronomer's virtues, and Murrell, who has been photographing planets from the New Mexico State University observatory for nearly 30 years, is willing to wait.

In a world of giant telescopes on distant mountaintops peering toward the edge of space, Tortugas Mountain is a modest observatory. But Murrell's little spyglass has done yeoman's duty, playing a central role in planetary science for the last 30 years.

A catwalk surrounds the observatory dome, and Murrell steps out to get a better look at the sky. The clouds are thin and Murrell is optimistic.

To the west, the lights of Las Cruces sparkle toward the horizon. The clouds have broken enough so that to the east, an elegant little cluster of stars called the Pleiades can be seen hanging high above the Organ Mountains.

The "mountain" in Tortugas Mountain's name is a gesture more of enthusiasm than of geography. Rising just 800 feet above the Mesilla Valley floor, it is little more than a good-sized hill.

People mostly call it "A" Mountain because of the big capital "A" on the side, a nod to the New Mexico State University Aggies in the valley below.

People mostly call the observatory "A" Mountain too, an easygoing name for a low-key little outpost of astronomical science.

Observatory near Cloudcroft, one of three world-class telescopes in New Mexico.

The Tortugas Mountain telescope can't do the kind of deep space studies of distant galaxies done at Apache Point, but rock-solid images of planets have been filling its cameras for 30 years.

"This telescope was designed for one purpose - planetary studies," says Murrell.

It can do that with a small mirror because planets are so much brighter than distant galaxies, said David Kuehn, an astronomer at Pittsburg State University in Kansas who graduated from NMSU and still uses the telescope at "A" Mountain.

The brightest "stars" you see in the night sky are really planets.

"For planets it's OK, because planets are really bright," Kuehn said.

In the 1960s, the "A" Mountain telescope took pictures of Mars in preparation for NASA's Mariner missions there. In later years, it was used for ground-based observations needed to direct the Voyager missions to the outer planets.

More recently, world-renowned NMSU planetary astronomer Reta Beebe used the telescope to build a long-term record of Jupiter's brightness, to help understand the giant planet's mysterious weather.

In 1994, the little telescope teamed up with its much younger but much bigger sibling at Apache Point and the Hubble Space Telescope to study the crash of Comet Shoemaker-Levy-9 into Jupiter.

The data allowed scientists from around the world to precisely determine the brightness of the flashes from the crash, said NMSU astronomer Nancy Chanover.

It's been a shorts-and-shirtsleaves winter day in Las Cruces, but as darkness falls the wind puts a chill through Murrell. "It's still cold," he says as he uses a remote control panel to steer the telescope.

Observatory domes are always unheated because heat stirs up the air and can ruin pictures. Telescope operators bundle up.

The department sets mandatory discount rates and the rules that regulate all discounts. It also watches over insurance companies' rates and handles questions raised by companies and customers.

But the agency doesn't tell the companies how to offer or advertise the optional discounts.

Ms. Selden said the department believes insurance companies offer whatever approved discounts they can afford in order to attract business.

Simple precautions can prevent cold, flu germs from spreading

Ever think of your house or office as a breeding ground for germs? During the cold winter months, everyone should be more aware and more cautious about the possibility of spreading cold and flu germs, according to Carolyn Jansa, RN, WNP, the nurse practitioner at the Hereford Women and Children's Health Clinic.

"Most of us are aware that when one member of the family or one of our co-workers gets a cold or the flu, the disease often spreads to others," she said. "There are a few simple steps you can take to prevent spreading germs either at home or the work place."

Jansa suggests that those with colds begin by purchasing two items from the drug store: several boxes of tissues and a box of plastic wrap alcohol wipes. Boxes of tissues should be placed at convenient locations throughout the home or workplace.

"Use a tissue each time you sneeze or need to blow your nose, and then dispose of it promptly in a container where no one else can come in contact with it," she said.

Hand washing is absolutely vital, she said. "Whether you are the one with the cold or working with someone who has a cold, wash your hands frequently, especially if you come in contact with a computer, telephone or other equipment the infected person has touched. If possible use an alcohol wipe on the keyboard of the computer if you must share with a person who has a cold," she said. "Also don't forget the telephone. Wiping the mouthpiece of the phone with an alcohol wipe before you place it close to your mouth could also help prevent the spread of germs."

For those with the flu, the best medical advice is to stay home. "You will get well quicker with bed rest, while drinking plenty of fluids," she said. "Also, you will be doing your co-workers a favor by staying away from them."

Those with the flu can protect members of their family from contagion by taking some special precautions. "If you can use a separate bathroom from the rest of the family, do so," she said. "If you must share, have someone prepare a spray bottle of water and bleach (about one quart of water to a cup of bleach). Each time you use the commode or the lavatory, spray the area with the solution and wipe it down."

Another precaution to take is to wash bed linens frequently. "Encourage your spouse to sleep in another bed," Jansa said. "Certainly don't let anyone else sleep on your pillow. Wash pillow cases and sheets frequently. Spray your mattress and pillows when you change linens with a household disinfectant spray."

Also, be sure that all dishes, especially cups and glasses, are washed in hot water after use. "A dishwasher is perfect for this, but if you don't have a dishwasher, make it a habit to pour boiling water over your dishes in the drainer."

"Teaching your children proper preventive measures is very important," Jansa continued. "Our healthy habits are passed on to our children, who are ever watchful of our behavior. Teaching them requires not only proper instruction, but also faithful fulfillment, consistency is the key to making sure your child retains your healthy habits," Jansa said.

Simple precautions can keep germs from spreading throughout the family.

Proclamation signing

Mayor Bob Josserand signs a proclamation declaring the week of Feb. 3-9 as Catholic Schools Week in Hereford. Students at St. Anthony's School observing the signing are, from left, Andrew Caperton, Joshua Fetsch, Jamie Gerber and Karli Schilling.

St. Anthony's begins celebration which recognizes Catholic school

St. Anthony's School is beginning a week long celebration to recognize the valuable contributions Catholic schools have made to the communities they serve.

Catholic Schools Week is a time to reaffirm the spiritual value of all children in the eyes of God. It is also a time to acknowledge teachers, staff and administrators in Catholic schools for their loving dedication and professionalism.

St. Anthony's School has been a part of the community of Hereford for almost 80 years. During the 1996-97 school year, 156 students and 20 staff members make up the school.

The mission of the school is to help students acquire academic skills, gospel values and habits of heart and mind required for effective service to society and ministry to the church.

Throughout the week, a variety of special events and activities are planned. The public is invited to visit the school any time during the regular school day and also for an Open House on Sunday, Feb. 9 from 12 noon to 2:30 p.m.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to Ozzie (not his real name) for 20 years. He's a good husband and a nice guy, but he does come up with some goofy ideas every now and then.

His latest brainstorm came when he read about a man in South Africa who wanted to find out how his friends REALLY felt about him. This man pretended he had died, put a notice in the paper and arranged with a funeral home to have himself laid out in a casket, surrounded by baskets of flowers, just like the real thing.

He just lay there for several hours and listened to what the people who came for the viewing had to say. He took special note of those who were genuinely grief-stricken and those who didn't shed any tears or seem sad.

Now Ozzie wants to try this. I told him I thought the idea was totally crazy, plus it would be a pretty darned expensive way to "test friendships." Ozzie is unconvinced. He asked me to write to you for an opinion. I said I would. What is it? -- The Wife of a Nut in San Antonio

Dear Wife: Your signature indicates that you have the situation sized up accurately. Simply calling Ozzie a nut, however, will not accomplish much.

Tell him if he pulls that stunt, nobody will show up at his funeral when he really does die because they won't believe it. Furthermore, his family members and friends will be so furious when they learn the truth, they may want to kill him. That should dampen his enthusiasm.

Dear Ann Landers: I have learned a lot from your column over the years, and now I'd like to reciprocate by alerting you to a racket that is becoming quite widespread.

Tell your readers to ignore answering-machine or computer e-mail messages that say you have an urgent message about a sick relative or a bill long overdue that must be paid at once. The number you will be instructed to dial will have an 809, 268 or 664 area code.

Be aware that these area codes are not in the United States. They are in the Caribbean. These are long-distance calls and can be expensive because you hear a recorded message that is very long-winded. (Intentionally so, of course.) Do not make this call. It's a gimmick to run up your phone bills. Sign me -- A Sucker No More

Dear No More: Thanks for the caveat. According to AT&T, this is a relatively new scam that benefits certain businesses in the Caribbean that have agreements with certain long-distance carriers.

If you receive a message like this from someone you don't know or if you have no dealings in the Caribbean, ignore it. If you DO call one of these numbers and get a recorded message, hang up immediately.

If you receive a suspicious message or are a victim of a fraud, call the National Fraud Information Center at 1-800-876-7060.

Gem of the Day (Credit early Hollywood movie director Mack Sennett and The Prairie Rambler): A person who has good judgment knows better than to make fun of religion, politics, race or mothers. A mother never gets hit with a custard pie. Mothers-in-law -- yes -- but mothers -- never.

Bonus Gem of the Day: When your dreams turn to dust, you know it's time to vacuum.

Forget to save some of your favorite Ann Landers columns? "Nuggets and Doozies" is the answer. HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"An educator is not one who lectures and gives tests, but one who lights up dark places."

Cody Scott, Wally Walker, Mayra Garcia and Mark Harrell competed in the ALTA Spelling Bee in Dallas last week. Cody, Mayra and Mark will return to Dallas for the finals in February. Congratulations to each of these young people!

HJH library staff is "wedding" the fiction section of the library. If you have a favorite author you might ask your HJH'er to go by the library and get a copy of the book or books you are interested in.

GT classes are participating in a three-in-one activity. As they begin their Wild, Wild West Unit they chose an infamous character from the Wild, Wild West. Each student will work on note-taking and research skills as they write a bibliography of their character. The next step will be watching their character take a "Quantum Leap" into 1997 and observe their reactions to this time period.

The final activity in this GT project is to again feature their character and create a comic strip; first page of a newspaper from the character's time period; or create a diorama, journal or scrapbook. This activity will enable the students to learn much more than just about their character as they will actually be researching the time period.

Categories class members, (23 in number), are going to Northwest Primary School each Tuesday to be mentors to first graders. They will listen to the students read their accelerated reader and then assist, when needed, as the student takes the computer test over their book. This should be an exciting partnership for each age group.

HJH History Fair will be Friday, February 7, in the HJH library. Projects will be set up on Thursday afternoon and before 8:30 on Friday morning. Parents are welcome to view the projects Friday afternoon. Winners will qualify for the area meet in Canyon on February 22.

Junior Historians will be seeking more interviews from those who have information to share about the courthouse. They will be making presentations to the Lions Club and to the school board in late February.

Members of the Junior Historians are collecting Valentines that will be delivered to the Veterans Hospital in Amarillo on February 12. If you have any extra Valentines, please deliver them to HJH for this project.

Howell slated as speaker for Flame Fellowship

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in Hereford Community Center.

Guest speaker will be Rhodora

Howell of Red Oak, an entertaining speaker and Bible teacher. She inspires both Christian and business/professional audiences with her enthusiasm, zest for life and love for God.

She attended Oklahoma State University, married and raised two sons while pursuing a career in advertising.

While she was vice president of a Dallas advertising agency, God allowed a shaking in her life during which everything but her faith in God was shaken.

She is a licensed and ordained minister, leads a weekly Bible study and is active in counseling and prison ministry. She currently serves as Texas-Oklahoma overseer of Flame Fellowship International, a member of the ministry team of Dallas Catch the Fire conference and Women in leadership. She is listed in Who's Who in Women's Ministry.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: My cat is 2½ years old. I accidentally dropped the little plastic strip from a gallon of orange juice. Not realizing it was on the floor, the kitty found it. She has had more fun with that than with any toy she has.

It's small enough to pick up in her mouth and carry it around and pounce on it. I've found it under chairs, behind the doors and all over, since every one I get goes in her play box. Every plastic gallon-size bottle has a different color. — Lila J. Hosken, Lebanon, Tenn.

LET THE MUSIC PLAY
Dear Heloise: As part of my weight-loss program, I do a series of one-minute crunches. To get the most from my exercises, I utilize my tape player.

First, I record 30 seconds of silence, then one minute of peppy music, followed by one minute of silence. This is done three times.

Turning the tape player on, I have 30 seconds to get ready to do my crunches. I exercise during the first minute of music and then rest during the following minute of silence. When the music starts again, I begin doing my second set.

For variety, I change the music once a week. In 13 weeks of walking, counting fat grams and doing moderate exercise, I've lost 20 pounds and four inches around my middle. — Sherri L. Eklund, Dover, N.C.

Good for you! Music really can get you moving. I remember my mother playing music and trying to do the twist to "exercise" her waist away. It was fun to watch. — Heloise

EXTRA KEYS

Dear Heloise: When my husband locked his keys in his car, he was advised by a police officer to wrap a spare key in plastic wrap and put it in back of his driver's license.

He never goes out to drive without his driver's license. — Mrs. R.A. Cutshall, Harrisburg, Pa.

Good idea! It's terrible to lock keys in a car or, worse yet, lose the keys. A spare key can be a lifesaver. — Heloise

SARAH LOUISE GRAFF, JASON GREGORY BODNER

Graff, Bodner plan to repeat wedding vows

Sarah Louise Graff and Jason Gregory Bodner, both of Abilene, will exchange wedding vows March 15 in the Abilene Center for the Contemporary Arts.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Charles Graff of Deming, N.M. and Barbara Graff of Odessa.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Julius and Sharon Bodner of Hereford.

Miss Graff is a 1992 graduate of Odessa Permian High School. She received a B.A. in psychology from McMurry University where she was a member of T.I.P. Women's Social Club. She is currently youth director at Haskell United Methodist Church and area representative for Executive Secretarial Schools of Dallas.

Bodner graduated from Hereford High School in 1987 and received a B.S. in pharmacy and biology from Southwestern Oklahoma State University in May 1994. He is the interim manager of Drug Emporium Pharmacy in Abilene, alumnus of Phi Delta Chi Pharmacy Fraternity and current sponsor of Ko Sari Social Fraternity at McMurry University.

The Successful Family

The report from last week's session continues to be excellent. Response was even greater with a total of 217 participants.

The Successful Family sessions center on the family as a unit with activities at meal time in which parents and children meet together to share positive family experiences. For this reason, we ask that all minors attending the sessions be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

For the meal this week, we will furnish barbecue ribs and sausage and ask each family to bring appropriate side dishes.

Being a parent is a hard job. Dirty diapers. Noise. Crying. Not enough money. Decisions. Responsibility. Sometimes it seems like too much to handle. Sometime you just want to run away.

All parents are pushed to the limit at times. Stress builds and families get into trouble. Children are hurt. Neglected. Ignored. Abused.

Nine out of 10 abused children are hurt by their own parents. Parents who are trying to do a good job raising a family. Parents who want the best for their kids. PARENTS LIKE YOU AND ME.

But...child abuse doesn't have to happen. Child abuse can be prevented. BY PARENTS. By parents willing to learn why abuse happens. By parents who care...BY YOU.

Join us on Tuesday evenings from 5:30-8 for family activities on how to be A SUCCESSFUL FAMILY.

Where: HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue.

For information call Tilli Boozer at 806-363-7668. Call by Monday if you will need transportation to the session.

Students place in spelling bee

Nine Hereford students competed in the annual ALTA Spelling Bee in Dallas on Jan. 25.

The students were successful in their respective divisions and eight will return to Dallas in February to compete in the finals.

The ALTA Spelling Bee emphasizes the phonetic approach to spelling, concentrating on the structural rules of English words.

Competing were Hereford Junior High students Mayra Garcia, Mark Harrell, Cody Scott and Wally Walker; West Central students Joaquin Rodriguez, Jerett Maes, and Josh Langford; Bluebonnet student Brandon Gresham; and Shirley student Matthew Collier.

JENNIFER MARIE JONES, RAUL CASAREZ

St. Anthony's chosen as site for May ceremony

Jennifer Marie Jones and Raul Casarez plan to be married May 24 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Debra and Roy Reinart and Dewayne Jones.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Ascencion and Irma Casarez.

Miss Jones recently completed her studies at Hereford High School and is a candidate for May graduation. She plans to attend Amarillo College in the fall.

Casarez, originally from Carrizo Springs, has lived in Hereford for 11 years. He is a 1992 Hereford High graduate and is currently employed by Poarch Brothers.

You can make dining at home seem like a night out with the addition of candlelight and flowers. Choose a new meal to prepare—maybe one a bit fancy with sauces, spices or a new marinade. It helps make an economy meal something special.

Council officers

FCE Council announces names of nominees for Woman of Year

Nominees for FCE Club Woman of the Year were announced at the Deaf Smith County FCE Council meeting recently in the Hereford Community Center. They are Alta Mae Higgins, Bippus FCE Club; Marilyn Smith, Cultural FCE Club; Tonie Vaughn, Draper FCE Club; Katherine Paschel, Ford FCE Club; and Shirley Brown, Wyche FCE Club.

The winner will be announced at the Appreciation Luncheon on Feb. 24. The executive council served as hostesses.

Kay Behrends read a poem titled "Sermons to See" and Jo Lee led members with the pledge to the flag and the FCE prayer.

Welcomed visitors were Alta Mae Higgins, Christine Larson and Shiree Christenson.

Seven FCE clubs answered roll call with four having 100 percent attendance.

Nominees for the District I meeting in Perryton on April 10 are Higgins, Bippus FCE; Smith, Cultural FCE; and Vaughn, Draper FCE.

Lee reported that FCE members had a total of 7,291 volunteer hours for 1996.

After the council meeting, members participated in two leader training sessions. There will be two more such sessions starting at 1:30 p.m. on Feb. 3 at the library.

Visitors are welcome to attend and are always welcome at council meetings, also.

The next council meeting will be Feb. 24 following the Appreciation Luncheon.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Sunday, Feb. 2, the 33rd day of 1997. There are 332 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on Feb. 2, 1897, fire destroyed the Pennsylvania state Capitol in Harrisburg. (A new Statehouse was dedicated on the same site nine years later.)

On this date: In 1536, the Argentine city of Buenos Aires was founded by Pedro de Mendoza of Spain.

In 1653, New Amsterdam - now New York City - was incorporated.

In 1848, the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, ending the Mexican War, was signed.

In 1870, the "Cardiff Giant," supposedly the petrified remains of a human discovered in Cardiff, N.Y., was revealed to be nothing more than carved gypsum.

In 1876, the National League of Professional Base Ball Clubs was formed in New York.

In 1943, the remainder of Nazi forces from the Battle of Stalingrad surrendered in a major victory for the Soviets in World War II.

In 1945, President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill departed Malta for the summit in Yalta with Soviet leader Josef Stalin.

In 1961, the 600 passengers of a hijacked Portuguese ocean liner, the Santa Maria, were allowed to disembark in Brazil.

In 1971, Idi Amin assumed power in Uganda, following a coup that ousted President Milton Obote.

In 1980, reports surfaced that the FBI had conducted a sting operation targeting members of Congress using phony Arab businessmen in what became known as "Abscam," a code name protested by Arab-Americans.

Ten years ago: The White House announced the resignation of CIA director William Casey, who was hospitalized and had undergone brain surgery.

Five years ago: The U.S. Coast Guard shipped home 250 more Haitian refugees from the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba, a day after repatriating a shipload of about 150 Haitians. Longtime Miss America emcee Bert Parks died in La Jolla, Calif., at age 77.

One year ago: Dancer, actor and choreographer Gene Kelly died at his Beverly Hills, Calif., home; he was 83. A deep freeze continued in the Plains, the Midwest and much of the South, breaking temperature records that had stood for a century.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Robert Mandan is 65. Comedian Tom Smothers is 60. Rock singer-guitarist Graham Nash is 55. Actor Bo Hopkins is 55. Country singer Howard Bellamy (The Bellamy Brothers) is 51. Actress Farrah Fawcett is 50. Rock musician Robert DeLeo (Stone Temple Pilots) is 31. Rock musician Ben Mize (Counting Crows) is 26. Rapper T-Mo (Goodie Mob) is 25.

Thought for Today: "Absence is to love what wind is to fire; it extinguishes the small, it inflames the great." - Bussy-Rabutin, French soldier and writer (1618-1693).

Military Muster

Marine Pfc. Jose L. Vanegas, son of Pedro F. and Aurora Vanegas of Hereford, recently completed the Heavy Vehicle Operators Course.

During the course with Marine Corps Detachment, U.S. Army Engineer School, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., students receive classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction on the operation and capabilities of five-ton trucks. Defensive driving techniques, "rules of the road" and preventive maintenance are also included in the course.

The 1996 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Marine Corps in June 1996.

Gabriel L. Mungia has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Entry Program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station, Amarillo.

The program gives young men or women the opportunity to delay enlistment into the Army for up to one year before reporting to basic military training.

The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $30,000 toward a college education.

Mungia, a 1996 graduate of Hereford High School, will report to Fort Sill, Lawton, Okla., for military basic training Feb. 20, 1997.

He is the son of Gabriel and Guadalupe Mungia of Hereford.

LTC. GREGORY KOENIG

Gregory P. Koenig of Hereford was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the United States Army on Jan. 1, 1997.

LTC Koenig is stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he is a tactics instructor at the Command and General Staff College.

Koenig is the son of Mark and Alice Koenig of RR3, Hereford. He is a 1975 graduate of Hereford High School.

LTC Koenig was commissioned into the Army as an Engineer in May 1980 when he graduated from Texas Tech University. His previous assignments include: platoon leader and company executive officer of C Company 27th (Combat Airborne) Engineer Battalion, company commander of D Company 23rd Engineer Battalion 3rd Armored Division, battalion executive officer of both the 17th Engineer Battalion 2nd Armored Division and the 299th Engineer Battalion 4th Infantry Division, and the brigade S-3 of the Engineer Brigade 2nd Armored Division.

Koenig has a bachelor of science in agriculture engineering and a master of science in civil engineering from Texas Tech.

Your Good Health is Our Primary Concern!

— YOUR EYES —

What Diabetes Does To Your Eyes

Diabetes affects the whole body—the heart and blood vessels, the kidneys, the skin and particularly the eyes. That's why a diabetic should schedule regular eye examinations, ranging from every three months to every year. The optometrist, consulting with the primary physician, can determine the most appropriate plan.

Temporary blurring may be the result of a blood sugar imbalance. Most often this will clear up when the blood sugar returns to normal, though glasses may be needed for a while.

Of much greater concern, though, are the retinal changes, such as diabetic retinopathy, that will permanently affect vision. It's important that the eye doctor spot these changes, well before the patient notices blurring or other symptoms. The optometrist may dilate the patient's pupils in order to get a better view of the retina. If vision becomes severely affected, various low-vision aids can help the patient keep up with daily activities.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Word-Of-Mouth Advertising: Cheap, but not free

Noclever advertisement carries as much psychological weight with potential customers as a simple, personal referral. A satisfied customer who tells others about your business is the best salesperson your business can have.

Every business inspires some word-of-mouth recognition. Some create rave reviews of their products and services, while others generate only bad publicity.

A few businesses may inspire neutral responses from customers, but this is a dangerous position for a business to be in. If your customers aren't so sold on your quality and value that they are telling others about it, they are good targets for your competition. Word-of-mouth advertising doesn't just happen and it isn't free. However, you can influence it with little money and only moderate amounts of time.

Ring up referrals

Referral business can make your cash register ring and your profit margins sing. The best part is that it doesn't have to increase your advertising budget. You may wish to redirect some of your budget to provide incentives for referrals or thank you's for those received. However, you shouldn't have to spend more.

Here are some thoughts on building a good word-of-mouth referral system:

- Your customers are talking. The first step in generating positive word-of-mouth referrals is to realize that some discussion of your business is already happening. Your customers are telling others about your products, service and value right now.
- Your referrals will never be better than your offering. To inspire positive customer response, the quality and value of your offering (products and/or services) must be notable. Making a "me too" offering that is only as good as the competition will never generate rave referrals.
- Your employees can give you a boost. All employees talk about the business for which they work. They can make you look good to prospective customers or they can undermine your success. Use special incentives to help them understand their value in the word-of-mouth process.
- Reward your customers for referrals. First, you must find the source of the referral. Once you know who referred a new customer to you, you can determine a proper reward. For some customers it may be a special discount, a free meal or a cash award. Try a few to see what works.

• Work on cross promotions. A good word from another respected small-business owner also carries marketing weight. When you cross promote with other non-competing businesses you both can gain new customers. Be careful to select businesses to work with whose reputation is as good as your own.

• Don't underestimate your personal influence. Spread the word about your own business. Use your business cards and create a good 10-second commercial to use. Look and act like a professional everywhere you go. If you have an area of special information that might interest others, volunteer to speak to service clubs and business organizations in your trade area.

• Don't depend exclusively on good word of mouth. You need to continue a strong promotion program even if your referrals are good. Be consistent in your advertising. Your print advertising should echo what your customers are saying about your business. Point out and reinforce the benefits that your present satisfied customers are talking about. Tell them, tell them again and then tell them one more time.

• Don't expect instant results. Creating positive word-of-mouth advertising is a continuing process. It is no a quick fix. You build strong, positive referrals one satisfied customer at a time. Remember that your long-term goal is to have everyone in your trade area talking about your business in a positive way.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

Today, Friday, one of our computer terminals decided to discontinue its duties. This is one of the computers that you may (or may not) have learned to use to find the book you want.

It is in times like these I am thankful for the cooperation that takes place among Panhandle libraries. A quick phone call to Harrington Library Consortium brings help on the way. HLC is responsible for our library being automated and connected to the other Panhandle libraries electronically.

Not only is Deaf Smith County Library a part of HLC, but also Texas Panhandle Library System. Membership in these two organizations gives us reciprocal borrowing privileges with other public libraries and academic libraries such as WTA&M and Amarillo College. This means that you can take your Deaf Smith County Library card to Amarillo, Dimmitt, or Friona, as well as WT, and check out books.

I have worked here almost a year and I'm still not able to totally sort out all the many things these two organizations do for us, but it is considerable. And, I'm finding out that our region is exceptional in the degree of support and cooperation that exists. We, as a community, are certainly reaping and enjoying the benefits.

Miss Manner's Basic Training: Communication by Judith Martin, part of a new series of training manuals to teach us basic rules "compartment." This particular volume covers communication and answers all the vexing questions of what to do, when and how to do it right. You thought you learned that in high school English class, right? Well, since I was in high school (it wasn't at that many years ago!) technology has revolutionized the ways we communicate, and, as it turns out there are some very specific rules of etiquette to e-mail, electronic bulletin boards, etc. This book will help you avoid electronic faux pas.

The Complete Search for Significance by Robert McGee, includes the book and workbook, a 22-day guided study, a 90-day devotional and a small group leaders' guide. In it you will learn how to base your self-worth on the love, acceptance and forgiveness of Christ and gain new skills forgetting off the performances treadmill.

Also available in new nonfiction are Savages by Joe Kane, More Quick Rotary Cutter Quilts: Pam Bono Designs, The Best of Prevention 1997, The Complete Preparation Guide Police Officer Texas, Law Enforcement Career Guide Texas, and Complete Preparation Guide State Police Texas.

New mysteries this week include Patricia Cornwell's Hornet's Nest. The creator of Kay Scarpetta, now reveals the heart and soul of a metropolitan police department.

Gone Fishin' by Walter Mosely is another Easy Rawlins mystery, which takes us back to Houston in 1939 at the very beginnings of the Easy Rawlins mysteries.

The Andrew Basnet mystery, Choice of Evils by E.K. Ferrars, takes us to the sleepy seaside town of Gallmouth, England, for a double murder and personal torments lying beneath the surface of tranquil, small-town life.

The Notebook by Nicholas Sparks is based on the true story of Spark's wife's grandparents. After returning to North Carolina from World War II, Noah Calhoun is haunted by memories of the beautiful girl he loved one summer fourteen years before. Unable to find her, yet unwilling to forget her, Noah is content to live with memories until she unexpectedly returns to his town to see him once again.

Allie Nelson is engaged to another man, but realizes the original passion she felt for Noah so many years ago has not diminished. Still, the obstacles that once ended their previous relationship remain, and the gulf between their worlds is too vast to ignore.

Like a puzzle within a puzzle, the story of Noah and Allie is just the beginning. As it unfolds, their tale becomes something different, with much higher stakes.

Richard S. Wheeler's Sierra: A Novel of the Gold Rush is a masterful re-creation of the gold rush era as well as an unforgettable love story.

The Morning River by W. Michael Gear, another historical novel, takes place at the time the American interior is about to be opened, and the great river tribes of Native Americans face their final days.

Tryin' to Sleep in the Bed You Made by Virginia DeBerry and Donna Grant follows the lives of two unforgettable women, best friends, Gayle Sanders and Patricia Reid.

From the time they were young, Gayle and Patricia were raised like sisters, as close as two friends could be. But they each had dreams that would take them far away -- and far away from each other.

When they realize that dreams can be hollow and love has its cost, they learn the most important lessons of all -- to never give up on the people who love you, and that it isn't just blood that makes two people sisters.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Recently, my mother was diagnosed with hepatitis C. I am having a hard time getting information on this disease. I have two young children who visit Mom regularly, and I am concerned for their health. My pediatrician tells me not to worry, that it's a hard disease to contract. Your comments would be appreciated. — Mrs. R.

ANSWER: The wily hepatitis C virus deserves respect, since it does live on in liver cells, posing a continuing threat of the organ's scarring and failure. Your mother's apparently recent hepatitis diagnosis attests to the virus's hardiness.

You can believe your pediatrician. Threat of hepatitis C transmission within a family is as close to zero as you can get. Spousal sexual contact is the chief mode of transmission.

Blood transfusion, once a common means of transmission, is not a problem, thanks to routine testing of donors. That leaves sexual intercourse among promiscuous partners the chief threat today.

Even though we identify the transmission source in only half of hepatitis C cases today, children contracting it from their grandmother would be an unlikely event.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I asked my pharmacist to explain my prescriptions, their purpose and their side effects, particularly vision change. He just told me that every prescription has side effects, and that was the end of it. The prescriptions in question are: verapamil, meclizine and lorazepam. I'm asking you the same question.

ANSWER: All three medicines cause vision symptoms in a small number of users.

Verapamil is used to control blood pressure or angina. Lorazepam calms anxiety. Meclizine is a motion-sickness drug.

Any chemical introduced into the body raises the uncertain risk of unpleasant side effects. Serious side effects usually are limited to a very small number of users.

Patient do their part by reporting effects, leaving the doctor three options — discontinuance, adjustment of dosage or selection of another drug.

If you are using more than one of those medicines, you might expect vision symptoms not present from each alone.

The pharmacist was trying to convey all that information to you with his broad statement.

Treatment options for hypertension are discussed in my report on high blood pressure. Readers can order the report by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 4, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: About a year ago, I developed a tic, a twitch of my left eye. This then spread to my mouth. I am usually unaware of the twitching, but when it happens it is quite noticeable to others. I am in excellent health, with no significant medical history. I have to say, though, that I have been under much job-related stress. I am hoping an upcoming change will help the twitch. I am relying on you to tell me how else to get rid of the tic. — S.T.

ANSWER: Tics are brief muscle contractions, often of no significance, often of great concern, discomfort or embarrassment.

Sometimes fluphenazine, pimozide, haloperidol or some other medicine can control a tic. Such drugs require prescription by a professional caregiver after evaluation of the patient.

Stress can produce tics. But so can strictly biological forces.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Ag Service releases statistics

AUSTIN -- With the Texas 1996 crop season coming to an end, outstanding yields on the Plains offset some effects of the 1996 drought in other parts of the state, according to the final production estimates of spring-planted crops released by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service.

The 1996 Texas Upland cotton crop is expected to total 4.35 million bales, 2 percent below 1995. Harvested acreage is estimated at 4.0 million acres, 30 percent less than last year as the earlier drought caused poor stands and resulted in greater than normal abandonment. The surviving acreage produced a record yield of 522 pounds per acre, compared with 372 pounds last year.

Corn production is estimated at 201.6 million bushels, down 7 percent from last year and 16 percent below the record set in 1994. Statewide yield is estimated at 112 bushels per acre, two bushels less than in 1995. Harvested acreage is estimated at 1.8 million compared with 1.9 million in 1995.

Sorghum production is estimated at 102.1 million hundredweight (cwt), 41 percent above last year. Harvested acreage is estimated at 3.8 million acres, up 58 percent from 1995, as sorghum replaced some lost cotton acreage. Yield, at 2,688 pounds per acre, is 336 pounds below last year.

Production of all hay is estimated at 7.8 million tons, 4 percent less than in 1995. Acreage is up 16 percent, but yield is estimated at 1.8 tons, down .36 tons from last year.

AUSTIN -- Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market in Texas feedlots with 1,000 head or more totaled 2.62 million head on Jan. 1, virtually unchanged from a year ago and down 1 percent from the December level.

According to figures released by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, feeders placed 1.75 million head of cattle and calves on feed during the October-December 1996 quarter, 9 percent above the same period a year ago. Placements in December totaled 360,000 head, down 38 percent from the November level.

Marketings during the fourth quarter of the 1996 decreased 2 percent from the same period a year ago, to 1.28 million head. December marketings, at 360,000 head, decreased 15 percent from November. Texas cattle feeders reported 2.63 million head of cattle and calves on feed for the slaughter market in all feedlots on Jan. 1, unchanged from last year.

TDA sponsors seminar, offers five hours credit

Right-of-way pesticide applicators can earn five continuing education units (CEUs) by attending a seminar sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture on Feb. 10 in Amarillo.

The free course will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Texas A&M Research and Extension Service office in Amarillo.

Included in the five hours is credit for 1-1/2 hours in laws and regulations and one hour of integrated pest management, both required to renew an applicator's license. Commercial and noncommercial applicators are required to obtain five CEUs each year to renew their license. Private applicator's must obtain 15 CEUs over five years.

Topics that will be covered include pesticide laws and regulations, weed identification, herbicide selection, equipment characteristics and calibration, herbicide mode of action, label comprehension and transportation regulations.

For more information, contact the TDA's Amarillo office at (806) 358-7285.

Rudd named bank director

AUSTIN -- Paul Rudd has been named director of credit for the Farm Credit Bank of Texas (FCBT) headquartered in Austin.

Rudd has 17 years of agricultural lending experience in the Tenth Farm Credit District with the Texas Bank Cooperatives and the Farm Credit Bank. Most recently he was director of commercial credit at FCBT, where he assisted in originating and servicing agribusiness loans.

Rudd was raised on a farm and ranch in Hereford and received a bachelor of science degree from Texas Tech University in agricultural finance. He is a graduate of the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University.

The Tenth Farm Credit District includes the FCBT, 38 Federal Land Bank Associations in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Texas wheat farmers seed 6 million acres

Texas wheat producers have seeded 6.0 million acres for the 1997 winter wheat crop, unchanged from last year, and up 3 percent from 1995.

Seeding of winter wheat began on schedule in late August with only a few minor delays early in the planting season. Early planting moisture was good in the Plains.

State Statistician Dennis Findley reported planting conditions were good in Central Texas during the fall.

Nationally, U.S. seedlings of winter wheat for 1997 totaled 48.2 million acres, down 7 percent from the adjusted level.

Saddle shop returns to its western roots

By JESSE CLEMENTS
San Antonio Express-News
FLORESVILLE, Texas - A saddle shop which opened its doors about the turn of the century here and moved later to San Antonio is returning to its roots by reopening in the downtown area here.

Carvajal Saddlery Co. will occupy a building only a block from where the owners' uncle, Frank Vela, opened his saddlery company about 1900, continuing a family tradition.

Oscar Jr. and Ernest Carvajal recently reopened their business in Floresville after more than 35 years in San Antonio.

Vela hired his nephew, Oscar Carvajal Sr., in 1920, and taught him the skills of working with leather and making handmade saddles. Oscar and Ernest learned from their father.

When Carvajal Sr. purchased the Ben Varga Saddlery Co. on South Flores Street in San Antonio in 1960, both sons went to work for their father, who renamed the business, Carvajal Saddlery.

They branched out from saddles and made leather goods for San Antonio law enforcement officers such as Sam Browne Belts, holsters, handcuff cases and shoulder holsters, grabbing about 95 percent of the business.

The Carvajals soon moved into Town can't even give away land

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LEFORS, Texas (AP) - Lefors can't even give it away.

Nearly four months after this struggling Texas Panhandle town of boarded-up windows, cluttered yards and dirt side streets held a drawing for 14 free residential lots, only four of the 28 winners and alternates have claimed their piece of Lefors.

Even worse, "I haven't heard from those people in quite some time," said city secretary Virginia Maples, organizer of the land giveaway in this town of 650. "They're supposed to be here by May under the rules."

In truth, it's not entirely Lefors' fault.

To win title on one of the approximately 6,500-square-foot lots, a claimant must either move a two-bedroom trailer onto the property within six months or begin construction on a house in that time.

Someone who is so hard up as to want to move to Lefors just to claim a piece of land worth less than $1,000 probably can't afford the $15,000 or more it will take to settle.

"We won't be able to move at all," said Rose Powers, whose daughter Tamra Ornelas, a nursing assistant from Baker, Ore., is one of the four claimants. "I'm not being pessimistic. We'd love to, because Tamra talks about it all the time."

Forty percent of the population is retired, and most of those still working commute to the chemical plant or the prison in nearby Pampa, population 20,000. Ms. Powers is confident her daughter could find work there or in Amarillo, an hour to the southwest.

Lefors probably can't compete with Baker in a beauty contest. Many of the buildings are long abandoned, victims of a failed oil economy and a 1975 tornado that drove away a third of the population.

E-Z Serve convenience store manager Jada Murray said Lefors' true beauty is its people. She pointed to a jar on her store counter.

"Everybody's pitching in for a man here who's having a bypass," said Mrs. Murray, whose establishment serves as the town's hangout. "Yeah, you see the dirt roads, and you see some houses in terrible condition, but this town has a homey feel to it."

In the meantime, the town has begun contacting some of the more than 500 losing entrants to see if they're still interested. At some point, Lefors will just offer the lots on a first-come, first-served basis.

Lefors has little to lose. The vacant land fell into the town's hands in lieu of back taxes from the former owners, and the property is of no use unless taxpayers move in, preferably with children like Ms. Ornelas' 11- and 12-year-olds.

As for Mrs. Maples, she's ready to welcome a few fresh faces around here.

"I'm kind of excited about it," said Mrs. Maples, who lives around the corner from an unclaimed lot. "I'm a friendly person, so it would be nice to have a new neighbor."

military equipment, such as belts, harnesses, equipment for pilot's headgears and even helicopter blade tie-downs.

Their craftsmanship spread by word of mouth until they were making saddles for the rich and famous in the U.S., as well as in many foreign countries.

Saddles and other equipment from the Carvajal shop have gone to Rex Allen, Steve McQueen, Patrick Swayze and family members of Floresville native, John Connally.

A saddle ordered by John Wayne was presented to Princess Margaret when the famous actor visited Great Britain for the grand opening for the movie, "The Alamo."

"There are not that many people still making saddles, and even fewer who do it the way we do it. We handcut all the leather, handstitch, handlace, even handtool," Oscar Carvajal explained.

"One of our saddles should last from 75 to 100 years with minimal care," he said.

Carvajal said the secret to a good saddle is starting out with a good tree, or the foundation on which all saddles are made. They are constructed of bull hide.

"Making trees is a craft all its own. We buy all ours which are made in Wyoming or Utah," he said.

Oscar said it takes about a week of continuous work to complete a good saddle, but he prefers to work on several at a time to increase production.

"Our saddles are made the same way they were 150 years ago. The styles have changed, but not the workmanship," Carvajal stressed.

He recalled he once had a wealthy Japanese businessman who came in his store while he was in San Antonio and bought everything in the building, saddles, tack, equipment and chaps.

Asked if the Japanese like American Western-style saddles or do they have another preference, Oscar laughed and answered, "Oh, they want the Western style. They wouldn't have anything else."

The Carvajals are now finishing saddles which have been ordered from Japan, Canada, Mexico, and many points in South America.

"But our main business is still taking care of people in our immediate area who have been customers for years," he said.

Their new shop in Floresville is graced by much of the original furniture and equipment from the original Vela and Varga saddlery stores.

Everything inside seems to blend since their new building is a historic structure.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

INVITATION TO BID

Sealed proposals for Aikman Elementary School HVAC Renovations for Hereford Independent School District will be received on or before 2:00 P.M., February 18, 1997. At this time, bids will be publicly opened and read aloud at the Hereford I.S.D. Administration Office, 601 North 25 Mile Avenue, Hereford, Texas. Bids received late will be returned unopened to the bidder. Faxed bids will not be acceptable. A pre-bid meeting will be held on February 11, 1997 at 4:00 P.M. at the school site.

The following bids will be received:

Mechanical Electrical

Bids shall be addressed to:

Mr. Terry Russell
Hereford Independent School District
601 North 25 Mile Avenue
Hereford, Texas 79045

Each bid shall be marked on the lower left hand corner with the words "BID ENCLOSED-AIKMAN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL HVAC RENOVATIONS FOR HEREFORD I.S.D."

CONSTRUCTION METHOD: Construction on this project will be contracted for and performed under a system of construction management wherein the owner contracts directly with various Contractors for the performance of various portions of work.

Bid security by a 5% bid bond or cashiers check for the highest acceptable bid must accompany each bid if the bid exceeds $25,000.00. A 100% payment and performance bond will be required by the successful bidder. Both the bid bond and the payment and performance bond shall be written by a Surety Company listed by the United States Department of the Treasury (Federal Register Circular 570) as an acceptable surety on Federal Bonds and shall hold a B+ or better rating by A.M. Best Co., Oldwick, N.J.

Plans and specifications are available from the construction manager for a $100.00 refundable deposit. The plans and specifications can be examined at the Dodge Plan Rooms, Lubbock and Amarillo, Texas and AGC, Lubbock and Amarillo, Texas.

Hereford Independent School District reserves the right to accept or reject any and all bids and to waive all formalities.

WASTE WATER AND YOU COULD GET SOAKED.

If you do your part to conserve water by saving water inside your home you will also save money:
• Use cold water instead of hot whenever possible;
• Use a sink of water or scrape dishes instead of turning on the faucet each time a rinse is needed;
• Use a bowl of water instead of rinsing fruit clean;
• Operate garbage disposal only when necessary;

- Keep drinking water in refrigerator to avoid running tap until water gets cool; and
- Wash only full loads of dishes and clothes.

Practice saving water and Be Water Smart!

COMPACT LUXURY

Designed For A Narrow Lot

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

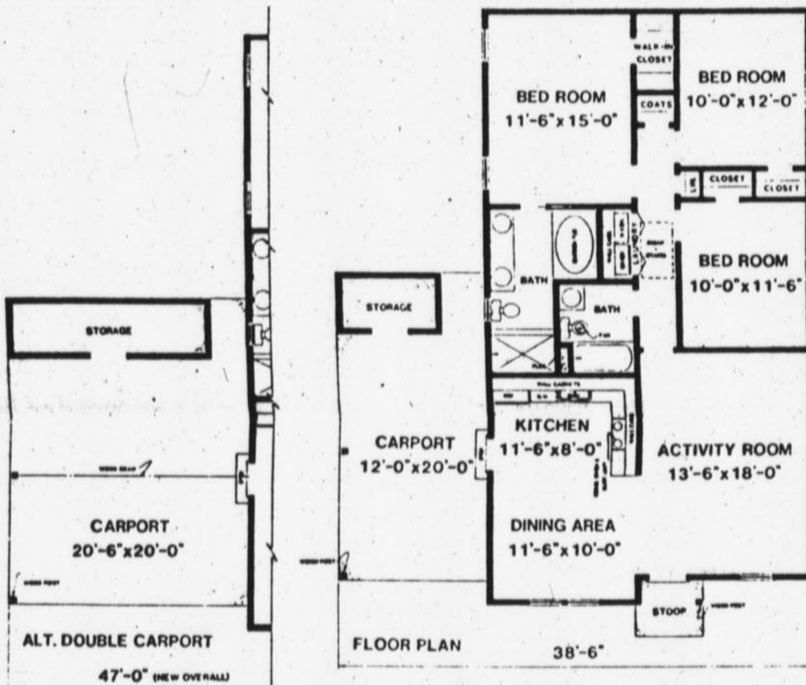

A stoop entry is to a surprisingly large great room which flows to a full size dining area and L-shaped convenient kitchen. Carport access is here too, providing just a step or two for carrying in packages.

There are three bedrooms all in the rear of the home plan, the master bedroom being a very comfortable size and enjoying the luxury of a bath with garden tub, separate shower and twin lavatories.

The washer-dryer area is accessible from the central hall as is the central full tub bath for daytime use and convenience to the remaining two bedrooms. Closet space is excellent throughout.

The exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding. The roof style is gable affording greater economy and the windows are multi-lite and shuttered.

The plan is number 291, and includes 1,244 square feet of heated area. For further information, call 1-800-225-7526 or in GA 1-800-221-7526, or write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

A study commissioned by the National Livestock and Meat Board found that for 16 percent of those surveyed, a food's fat content is more important than its calories.

NBA's Team Up recognizes teens' assists to communicate

NBA Inside Stuff co-hosts Ahmad Rashad (pictured) and Willow Bay host the NBA Team Up Celebration, airing Saturday on NBC, TNT, Nickelodeon, BET, YTV (Canada) and Telemundo. The special, part of the 1997 NBA All-Star Weekend, recognizes the contributions of young adults to their communities.

Picture 10,000 screaming teen-agers packed into an arena with their heroes from sports, music and television. These kids aren't mall mulch; they've earned their tickets by helping others.

Now add to the free throws, the songs and the jokes the message that it's fun to serve your community and you have the NBA Team Up Celebration, the National Basketball Association's rally for kids taking place on Saturday, Feb. 8. The program will be broadcast simultaneously on NBC, TNT, Nickelodeon, BET, YTV (Canada) and Telemundo.

"Team Up is a universal concept," says Gregg Winik, vice president of NBA Entertainment for programming and broadcasting. "Everyone understands about getting involved in your community and giving back."

The dazzling celebrity lineup for the hourlong special includes Olympic gymnast Dominique Dawes, singer-actress Brandy, rap artist L.L. Cool J, the singing duo Groove Theory, basketball star Shaquille O'Neal and his music group Shaq and SHE, Daniella Deutscher and Anthony Anderson (NBC's Hang Time) and a host of NBA and WNBA players.

NBA Inside Stuff co-hosts Willow Bay and Ahmad Rashad host the event.

"This is one of the most exciting events that we do because of the energy generated by the kids," Bay says. "They're excited and wide-eyed. They scream, they yell and they cheer. They don't have any inhibitions. It's deafening and wonderful."

The program will feature three teen-agers who have contributed significantly to their communities: a young man from Portland, Ore., who survived a brain tumor and now raises money to enable children's hospitals to entertain their patients; two young women from Mesa, Ariz., who teach children on nearby American Indian reservations to read; and a former gang member from Cleveland who advises other teen-agers not to travel the same road he did.

"I'd like for the audience to see that it's not hard work; it's not a chore," says Danny Meiseles, senior producer for NBA Entertainment. "These kids are having fun giving back to their communities."

The NBA introduced Team Up in October as its community service project for the 1996-97 season. Since 1991, the league has led the "Stay in School" project, which encourages middle-school students to remain in the classroom. But NBA Commissioner David J. Stern wanted an audience with a broader age range, Winik says. When Stern announced this project, he noted the link between academic achievement and community service.

During the fall kickoff, all 29 NBA teams visited schools and youth organizations to stress to students in grades 6 through 12 the importance of helping others. Players, coaches and staff worked with teen-agers on such projects as refurbishing a city park and renovating a homeless shelter.

"I think children understand more than we give them credit for about the problems of our society in a basic way," Bay says.

"When seen through the eyes of children, it becomes not a policy issue, but a basic human issue."

Team Up is a reward for those students who have already served their communities and encouragement for their peers nationwide to join.

The program is part of the 1997 NBA All-Star Weekend being held at Gund Arena in Cleveland.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ February 2-8 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
It's an ideal week to ask for a salary increase or promotion. Don't be afraid to be your own cheerleader. You know your strengths; so should others. Social activities abound later in the week. Last-minute invitations prove to be the most enjoyable offerings. Hold your sarcastic tongue.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
An organized approach in business is the best way to stay ahead. You may have to put in a few extra hours this week. You may be asked to attend a seminar of some sort. Be sure you know what you're getting yourself into before you commit to anything. A friend's odd behavior will surprise you.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Feeling under the weather. Gemini? A few days in bed may be in order. Don't ignore symptoms - they'll only worsen. If an unexpected change occurs in well-thought-out plans, don't panic. With a cool head, you'll be able to work things out. Romantic happiness is assured this weekend.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Your busy schedule gets even more demanding this week. Even if this puts you in a bad mood, don't take stress out on loved ones. Keep priorities in order to keep on an even keel. A person you considered unreliable will surprise you and come through when you need help.

LEO - July 23/August 23
A creative project will consume much of your time this week. Try not to overlook more mundane - but equally important - responsibilities. A stubborn attitude could be the final straw in a rocky relationship. If it's valuable to you, you're going to have to keep an open mind.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Congratulations, Virgo! In a long-term battle of the wits, you'll come out the winner. What could possibly be better for Virgo than to be proven right? Later in the week, watch what you say in mixed company. Your sarcastic tongue could prove offensive. Use the weekend to catch up on chores.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Unrealistic expectations of a loved one is not fair to either party. Until you learn to accept people for who they are, you will always be in for disappointment. Resist the urge to spend money on unnecessary items. A bargain isn't really a bargain if it's something you don't really need. A new approach to an old problem is what you should seek in business.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Go with your gut feelings when faced with an important decision. Everyone is willing to offer advice, but you're the only one who knows what's right for you. This weekend, your good time may be spoiled because of a friend's grumpy mood. Try to ignore it and enjoy yourself anyway.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
A spell of moodiness may hit you midweek. Combat it by using exercise as a weapon. Sweat out your aggressions on a treadmill, or exhaust your moodiness by pumping some iron. It will make a world of difference. Financial investments will be an issue later in the week.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't accuse anyone of wrongdoing until you know all the facts. Things aren't always as they seem. Social obligations will keep you busy throughout the week and weekend. Be sure to check your bank account before committing to expensive social propositions.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
A last-minute offer to take a trip may come your way. Don't think you can do it? Be creative. With an organized approach, you'll be able to go away and fulfill your work obligations, too. A love relationship could be entering a new phase. Get in touch with your feelings on this matter.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Don't rush into new agreements. Examine the fine print, and only sign contracts after careful consideration. At work, you'll have to rock the boat a little if you want things to go your way. Don't be afraid to show your assertive side. You'll find an object - or money - you lost some time ago.

The Reader's Digest World series The Living Edens premieres Wednesday on PBS with "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness," a look at the wildlife in Alaska's Denali National Park.

The Living Edens looks at life in its most natural state

Alaska's Denali National Park is the first location to be explored in Reader's Digest World's new series The Living Edens.

Premiering Wednesday, Feb. 5, on PBS (check local listings), "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness" travels to the harsh yet beautiful landscape surrounding the highest mountain in North America, referred to by the natives as Denali and commonly known as Mount McKinley.

The Living Edens aims to document areas of the world still unspoiled by human development.

Twenty hourlong specials are planned over the next five years, with presentations focusing on such far-off locales as Patagonia in South America, the Amazonian jungles of Peru and Africa's Namib Desert.

Actor Peter Coyote (E.T., Cross Creek) provides the narration for the first episode.

The program follows the effects of the changing seasons on the 600-mile mountain range and its wildlife, beginning with the brutal cold of winter, when temperatures can reach 60 degrees below zero.

Moose, wolves, arctic squirrels and grizzly bears are shown in their struggles against the bitter cold.

While the area's animals were braving the elements, so was the show's film crew.

Led by natural history filmmaker Bruce Reitherman, the crew traveled the area for 18 months - often by skiplane or dog sled - to capture the extremes of the region on film.

"Changing film can be difficult because bare skin can freeze to the metal camera," Reitherman says. "The film turns brittle with edges so sharp that it can cause severe 'paper cuts' on fingers already numbed by the cold."

The program also shows the beauty of Alaska's summers, when wildflowers proliferate and July is filled with more than 20 hours of daylight. But for those who don't enjoy experiencing such extremes in weather firsthand, watching "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness" may be the best way to visit this untouched Eden.

Eyewitness ★★½ (1981) William Hurt, Sigourney Weaver. A janitor hopes to get close to a TV journalist by pretending to have extensive knowledge of a murder in his building. 2:00. February 6 1pm.

Firestorm: 72 Hours in Oakland ★★½ (1993) LeVar Burton, Jill Clayburgh. Based on the citizens and firefighters who fought the blaze that ravaged the hills of suburban Oakland in October 1991. 2:00. February 7 1pm.

TV PIPELINE

Q: We are delighted to see JAG back on the air, but wonder what happened to Tracey Needham, who played Meg last season. Did she choose to leave the show? -JAG fans via e-mail.

A: No. JAG creator Don Bellisario cast another actress (Andrea Parker, now on The Pretender) opposite star David James Elliott in the original pilot, but NBC, he says, insisted he cast an attractive blonde instead.

While emphasizing that Needham was "very nice" and professional, Bellisario says she never was the character he had in mind for the female lead.

"We have added Catherine Bell as the new female lead, Maj. Sarah MacKenzie, who will be going more head to head with Harm (Elliott) rather than just letting him do his own thing," he says. "I cast Catherine in an episode last season, which ultimately never aired. ... I liked her performance, I liked her military bearing (and) the way she stood up to Harm."

While a romantic involvement between the two characters may develop eventually, Bellisario says that's not in the cards right now.

Q: Is the actress who does the Tic Tac commercials related to Mark Harmon? The resemblance is uncanny. -W. Neal, Mansfield, Ohio.

A: Yes, Kelly Harmon is Mark's sister.

Q: Am I right that there was once a Burl Ives-James Farentino series about lawyers? What was its title? Please print a list of Ives' movies. -Joann Blaeser, Eau Claire, Wis.

A: Actually, it was called The Lawyers, and it was a rotating element in an "umbrella" series called The Bold Ones. Ives played senior partner Walter Nichols; Farentino and Joseph Campanella played siblings Neil and

Tracey Needham

Brian Darrell. The series ran from September 1969 to August 1972 on NBC.

Ives has made too many films to list here, but highlights include Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, The Big Country (for which he won an Oscar™), The Brass Bottle and The McMasters.

Q: Please identify the music played in the Infiniti commercial featuring people in fantastic masks. -Helen K. Nealy, South Harwich, Mass.

A: That's a haunting number called "Bolero" from one of Cirque du Soleil's earlier tours. You'll find it on the recording Nouvelle Experience, which any store with a decent show-music section will have in stock.

Q: I say Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford are husband and wife. My husband disagrees! Who is right? -Blanca Stokes, Nashville, Tenn.

A: As Gifford has mentioned a few times, she is married to sportscaster Frank Gifford. Philbin's wife is named Joy.

SOAP WORLD

Sarah Michelle Geller slaying vampires

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

When Sarah Michelle Gellar hit the daytime scene as Kendall on All My Children, she played one of the youngest and nastiest witches on the show. Now she's slaying witches, vampires and monsters in Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

The new series is expected to air this spring on The WB Network.

The Emmy-winning actress plays a teen-ager who has been chosen to save the world from evil. Buffy is a cheerleader and faces many of the same traumas that most high-school students do, and slays a few monsters in the process. The producers tout it as Beverly Hills, 90210 meets The X-Files.

For once Gellar is playing a role that is slightly younger than her age and she's happy about that. "It's great to play a character that is a little closer to where I am now," says Gellar. Leaving AMC was hard for Gellar, but she says it was necessary.

"I began on that show when I was 15," the actress says. "Soap operas are so demanding. At the time, I was the only contract player on the soap under 18.

"I was in an environment surrounded by adults with an immense amount of work. Not only was I learning 40 pages (of dialogue) a day to shoot an episode a day, but I was still trying to graduate high school at the same time."

She ended up graduating a year and a half ahead of schedule. Pretty impressive for such a young person.

"It was a difficult time and I loved it. AMC was a wonderful training ground for me," she says.

"But after a few years, it was just time to move on."

Gellar has found the pace of prime time much more to her liking. She only has to film one episode a week, but now she finds herself in a more physical role.

She often uses moves she learned from her years in taekwon do.

"It is a very physical role," Gellar says. "The only thing that really frightens me is that they made me a cheerleader and I'm really bad at it."

Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny, stars of The X-Files, celebrate August birthdays only two days apart.

CHITTER CHATTER

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Calling all bald men and fresh-faced teens with hair - Kevin Costner wants you.

Costner is casting extras for his new film "The Postman," a futuristic thriller.

Filming is set to begin in a few weeks and location casting director Sally Jackson says about 1,000 extras are needed. Costner is looking for bald men, teen-agers and people in their early 20s who can ride horses.

"There will be a little extra compensation for those who will shave their heads," Ms. Jackson said.

Filming is expected to last about two to three weeks, she said.

NEW YORK (AP) - Sandra Bullock is feeling the need for speed again.

After starring in "A Time To Kill" last summer and "In Love And War" that opened Friday, she's working on the sequel to "Speed," the hit movie she made with Keanu Reeves.

"The last two films were very heady and internal and I wanted to do something that was fun and physical to balance things out," she says in the February issue of US magazine.

The 32-year-old actress says, "this is the last time I'll do something like this."

Ever?

"Ever," she replies. "Probably."

DALLAS (AP) - Henry Cisneros is becoming president of the Spanish-language television network Univision next month, which he thinks will allow him to continue to offer a public service.

"It is the offering of information services and entertainment services, news services, to a community that needs them and hopefully that can use them in making its way into the mainstream of this country," the former San Antonio mayor and Department of Housing and Urban Development secretary told The Associated Press.

The War Lover ★★½ (1962) Steve McQueen, Robert Wagner. Two WWII bomber pilots clash over their attraction to the same woman and how each is handling their respective duties. 2:00. February 2 5am, 3pm; 3 3am.

While the City Sleeps ★★★ (1956) Dana Andrews, Rhonda Fleming. The immoral natures of three newsmen come to the fore when their publisher promises an editorship to the one who cracks a serial murder case. 2:00. February 4 1pm.

Wichita ★★½ (1955) Joel McCrea, Vera Miles. Wichita's town elders hire the famous Wyatt Earp to tame their lawless town. 2:00. February 7 10am, 3pm.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.
