Demos dread hearings on campaign financing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Kicking off hearings that Democrats have dreaded for months, Sen. Fred Thompson said today that witnesses would be asked to explain how "a systematic influx of illegal money" flowed into the 1996 presidential campaign.

"We will be wanting to know: Who knew about it? Who should have known about it? And was there an attempt to cover it up?" the chairman of the Senate Government Affairs Committee said in remarks prepared for today's opening session.

With the first day to be devoted to opening statements by senators, both parties set the tone for an investigation that will provide the most extensive look ever at presidential campaign fund raising.

The months leading up to today's start have been marked with bitter partisan sniping among members of the Senate committee over attempts to extend limited immunity to witnesses and over allegations that each side was trying to impede the investigation. And the fireworks were expected to continue during hearings that could last all summer.

While majority Republicans talk of foreign money collected by Democrats to help re-elect President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, Democratic senators want the public to hear that foreign funds went into Republican coffers too.

However, Thompson, as committee chairman, controls the agenda, and most witnesses this month will testify about irregularities in the Clinton-Gore fund-raising machine.

The stakes are high for Thompson, R-Tenn., said to have presidential ambitions, and for Gore, who was intimately involved in a Democratic fund-raising machine the president now acknowledges was out of control. Gore could be further embarrassed by testimony about a Buddhist temple fund-raiser he attended where illegal donations were made.

Clinton and Gore haven't been asked to testify, and it's possible they won't be. The president will be in Europe for most of this week attending to the expansion of the NATO alliance.

In his opening remarks, Thompson, who was chief Republican counsel in the Watergate hearings two decades ago, pointed out that some key witnesses have fled the country or taken the Fifth Amendment. But despite their absence, he promised, "we have much evidence available to us."

And he sternly warned: "If anyone should unlawfully impede or misinform this committee there are criminal sanctions available."

The chairman read a list of allegations before the committee, including illegal foreign contributions, money laundering, influence peddling, improper fund raising on government time and on government property, conflicts of interest and "improper use of the White House in fund-raising activities."

"There apparently was a systematic influx of illegal money in our presidential race last year," Thompson said.

Chow time!
Tamara Smith, one of the many young campers at this week's D.A.R.E. Summer Camp, took time to enjoy her big burger at Monday's opening session. All of the campers were fed by members of the Elks Lodge who cooked the food on an outdoor grill at Damron Park.

NAFTA has no effect on nation's economy, according to study

WASHINGTON (AP) - Free trade with Mexico has:

(a) spurred an export boom that has created thousands of U.S. jobs.

(b) destroyed thousands of U.S. jobs because of competition from low-wage workers.

(c) had almost no effect on this country's economy.

While the Clinton administration and its critics would disagree, more and more economists are picking "c" as the right answer in the debate over the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"The impact of NAFTA on the United States is basically negligible," says Sherman Robinson, a Washington economist and co-author of one of the most comprehensive studies of NAFTA.

That report, done with UCLA economist Raul Hinojosa, found that NAFTA had produced a "near zero net impact" on the U.S. economy in its first three years of operation.

That conclusion is not what the Clinton administration wants to hear. It is preparing its own report that will show measurable benefits to the American economy in terms of rising export sales to Mexico and Canada.

That report, expected by the end of the week, will be followed by congressional hearings next week as the administration launches an effort to persuade Congress to give it the authority to expand NAFTA beyond Mexico and Canada to include other countries in Latin America.

The administration will cite rising export sales to support a contention that NAFTA has created 311,000 jobs. A recent critical study by NAFTA foes cited a quadrupling of America's trade deficits with Mexico and Canada to contend that NAFTA has cost 420,000 lost jobs since it went into effect on Jan. 1, 1994.

But economists say that both sides are overstating their cases.

For one thing, NAFTA simply accelerated trends already under way. Two-way trade between the United States and Mexico has been growing rapidly since the late 1980s, when Mexico began lowering trade barriers.

In addition, more powerful forces, such as the Federal Reserve's interest rate policies, determine the level of employment in the United States, not trade flows, economists say.

"NAFTA is a small part of the story of what is going on with the U.S. economy," said Jeffrey Schott, author of two books on NAFTA and economist at the Institute of International Economics in Washington.

To support that view, analysts point to the overall job performance in the past three years. The U.S. economy has created 3.7 million jobs annually on average during those three years while suffering an average loss of 1.5 million jobs, for a net gain of 2.2 million.

Compared to those figures, the number of workers certified in 34 years as eligible for benefits because of job loss due to NAFTA is 132,972 - or less than the total new jobs created by the economy in just one month.

Of course, that statistic means nothing to the thousands of workers such as Nancy DeWent who have fallen victim to NAFTA pressures.

DeWent's $11.58-per-hour manufacturing job disappeared to Mexico, where a worker will do what she has done - assemble Swingline brand staplers - for only 50 cents an hour.

"The company told us in May that they were shutting the plant - 408 union people will lose their jobs. We were devastated," says Ms. DeWent, 47. "I have been at the plant for 19 years. I am too old to start over and too young to retire."

While the closing of a stapler factory in Queens, N.Y., attracts headlines, the increase in export sales by other companies often goes unnoticed, the administration argues.

Telephone equipment manufacturer Miles Press of Indianapolis, Berg Electronics of St. Louis and U.S. Filter Corp. of Palm Desert, Calif., are enjoying sizable export gains to Mexico and are among the NAFTA success stories. The administration contends that rising exports worldwide have accounted for one of eight net jobs created in the United States since 1992.

City commission sees new Hereford page for Internet

Hereford and Deaf Smith County will soon receive free advertising across the world courtesy of Mike Foster and Foster Electronics.

The Hereford firm has quietly been developing a web site which will give the local area exposure on the World Wide Web or Internet as it is more commonly called.

Foster presented a visual review of the page at Monday night's Hereford City Commission meeting and highlighted some of the major features of the project while also asking for ideas on items to include.

Saying he hoped to place the page on the Internet later this week, Foster said non-profit organizations will receive free listings, however he is asking listed businesses to donate $75 each to help defray costs of the service.

Calling the Internet a "big advertising medium" Foster credited employees of his company with doing most of the work on the web site and listed numerous items which are included, among them the city of Hereford, Deaf Smith County and various items within each governmental entity.

Recreational opportunities of the area are on the site including the aquatic center, Buffalo Lake, Dameron Park and other areas of entertainment. The chamber of commerce, police and fire departments and almost every division of local government are included.

Local civic clubs are also included in the project. Photographs which illustrate advantages of the area are included where appropriate.

The project earned praises from all city commissioner members and City Manager Chester Nolen. Don Cumpton, executive vice president of the chamber of commerce also praised the project which had been previewed earlier for the chamber.

Cumpton was visiting the commission meeting to extend appreciation for the help of city officials and employees in making the annual Fourth of July picnic a success.

"I appreciate their attitude in putting this together and making it a success," Cumpton said of the police, fire and other city employees who worked at the picnic. "Cooperation (between the chamber) and entities in town has just been outstanding since I have been at the chamber."

He also thanked the city manager and city for working with the chamber on the upcoming citywide garage sale/sidewalk sale/arts and crafts show.

In an unrelated matter, Cumpton said the chamber would also be "more than happy" to work with the city to have a Hereford Night for the play TEXAS at Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

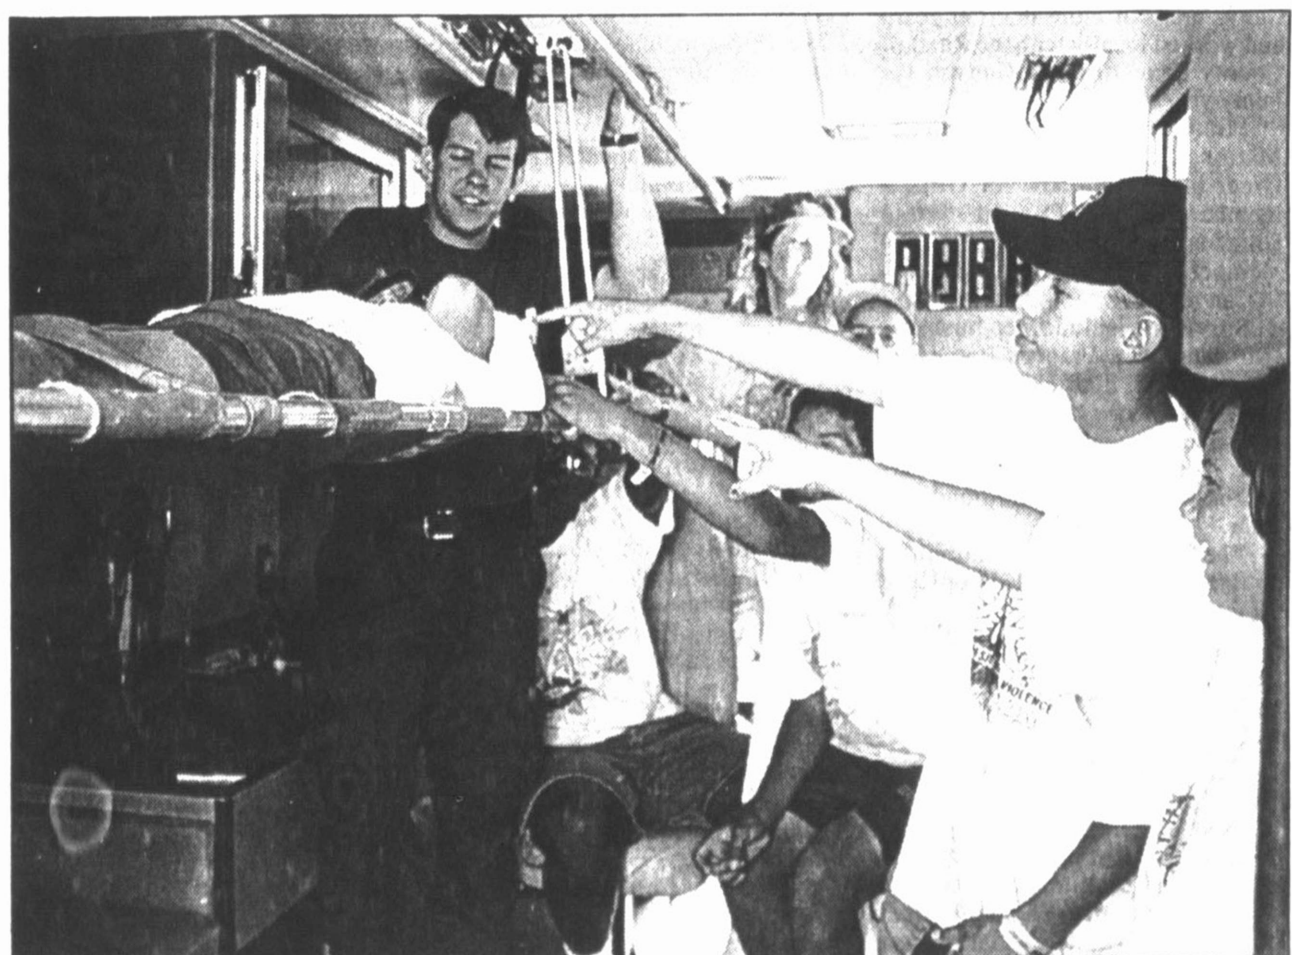

Tentatively the Hereford Night will be between Aug. 11 and Aug. 14 just before school resumes.

"I think it's a great idea," Cumpton said. "We (chamber) want to support it and will work to make it a success."

In what might be called the quickest business meeting ever, commissioners also approved the only three action items on their agenda in less than four minutes.

This included:

- approval of minutes from the June 16 work session and regular meeting.
- re-appointment of Dr. H.R. Johnson for a two-year term as city health official.
- re-appointment of Wayne Phillips and Raul Pesina to the city's building code board of adjustments and appeals.
- In a work session prior to the meeting commissioners talked with Nolen about concerns relating to the golf course, trash pickup and the aquatic center.
- There have been comments from the public about cart fee charges, an extraordinary amount of trash being dumped in alleys and the schedule of operation of the aquatic center.
- Nolen will study the three areas of concern and if needed, recommend changes to the commission.

Ambulance tour
Hereford EMS employee Chris Woodard gave youthful participants in the D.A.R.E. Summer Camp a tour of the organization's newest ambulance. Woodard and another EMS employee used one of the campers to demonstrate how a patient can be placed on a backboard which is hung from the ceiling of the ambulance.

HISD dismisses driver

The Hereford Independent School District bus driver involved in an accident near Dawn last Wednesday was relieved of his duties Monday following completion of the school district's investigation into the incident.

"He is terminated as of this afternoon," Supt. Jack Patton said Monday. "The termination is based on several reasons, this accident and the point system established by the state."

Patton also said that tests to determine if the driver had drugs or alcohol in his blood at the time of the accident were negative and the termination of Trinidad Salazar was based on the accident and point system.

Under the point system mandated by state law, school bus drivers are assessed points based on a number of factors including traffic citations and Salazar apparently exceeded the maximum number of points allowed by the law.

He was driving a H.I.S.D. bus westbound on Hwy. 60 when it left the right side of the roadway and bouncing into and through a bar ditch, causing injuries to eight students and the driver. The bus also received extensive damage to the front and rear.

All of the injured were transported to Hereford Regional Medical Center where they were treated for minor injuries and released.

Jail escapee recaptured

A local man who escaped from the Deaf Smith County Jail while serving as a trustee June 2 has been recaptured and is being held in lieu of $400,000 bond.

Raymundo Sanchez Crevantez, 29, was captured shortly before 5 p.m. Monday at a residence in the San Jose area according to Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department officials.

Deputies did not know how long he had been staying at the residence but are continuing an investigation to determine if he had been given assistance in remaining at-large after the escape.

Originally jailed on a charge of Forgery by Making, Cervantes' original bond on that charge, $2,500, has been increased to $250,000 and an additional bond of $150,000 has been set for charges of escape which were filed after his getaway.

Cervantes had been working as a trustee when he bolted from the jail area and jumped into a car which was driven from the area by another person.

AUSTIN - A total of 796,846 students at Texas public schools that have shown poor performance on the state academic skills test are eligible to transfer to other campuses under a new law, according to the Texas Education Agency. The students - among 3.7 million Texas school children - are assigned to 1,153 of the state's 6,643 campuses, TEA spokesman Joey Lozano said Monday.

AUSTIN - A Republican candidate for state land commissioner has ripped incumbent Democrat Garry Mauro's hiring of a convicted bank swindler to oversee a $52 million construction project.

CORPUS CHRISTI - A week after they left the Corpus Christi Army Depot with severance packages in hand and early retirement on their minds, about 150 employees returned to their jobs and an uncertain future.

AUSTIN - Applying for welfare soon could be a lot like applying for a job. The concept, known as work first, will be tried in a Corpus Christi pilot project. If it succeeds, job counselors and wage subsidies could play a leading role in Texas welfare.

World/Nation

WASHINGTON - Kicking off hearings that Democrats have dreaded for months, Sen. Fred Thompson said today that witnesses would be asked to explain how "a systematic influx of illegal money" flowed into the 1996 presidential campaign.

PASADENA, Calif. - Torrents bigger than any flood ever seen on Earth once swept across the spot where Mars Pathfinder now sits, scientists said as they displayed new photographic evidence of a deluge.

MADRID, Spain - The United States and its 15 NATO allies were poised today to make history by expanding their reach to the Russian border, converting old foes in the East to new friends.

MEXICO CITY - Facing the prospect of the first opposition Congress in 86 years, a suddenly conciliatory President Ernesto Zedillo says Mexico has entered a "new stage" of democracy. A day after Zedillo's PRI party suffered historic setbacks that cost it Mexico City's mayorship, at least two state governorships and likely its majority in Congress, the president says his party had "surrendered many advantages it previously had in the goal of a fairer electoral competition."

Applying for welfare in Texas may be lot like applying for job

AUSTIN (AP) - Applying for welfare in Texas soon could be a lot like applying for a job.

The concept, known as "work first," will be tried in a Corpus Christi pilot project. If it succeeds, job counselors and wage subsidies could play a leading role in Texas welfare.

Under the idea, when people apply for welfare benefits, information about their work history and employability would be considered as well. Those considered employable would be sent to a job counselor for work placement.

To help welfare applicants find jobs, the state would subsidize wages. Instead of giving a cash grant and food stamps to applicants, the state would give the money to a business to help it pay three-quarters of the applicant's wages.

"The vision is to have a system where the very first option is work. In the past, what we've had is people come in wanting to be signed up for benefits, and work is not a consideration," said Texas Workforce Commissioner Bill Hammond, who is guiding the project.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Monday that Corpus Christi was chosen as the site for the pilot project, which officials hope to launch by fall, because its population represents a cross-section of the state, there are jobs available and the city has a moderate unemployment rate.

Work-based programs, which have been put in place by other states, have taken on added significance in light of the federal welfare reform law. It requires states to move welfare recipients to work quickly, imposing penalties if they don't meet quotas.

A decline in Texas welfare caseloads, due largely to a good economy and low unemployment rate, is expected to help the state meet federal requirements.

Some officials, however, are concerned about meeting work requirements for two-parent households because the number of such families on Texas rolls is increasing. Federal work requirements for such families are more stringent than for single-parent families.

Under welfare reforms approved in Texas in 1995, welfare recipients are limited to one to three years of monthly cash benefits, depending on their work history and education.

As the work-first concept is tried in Texas, the state will face labor-market issues, such as ensuring that welfare recipients with taxpayer-subsidized wages don't replace workers who aren't on welfare.

The Corpus Christi pilot project would say no more than 10 percent of a business's workforce could be made up of welfare recipients with subsidized paychecks.

Two hurt as plane slams into home

ADDISON, Texas (AP) - A plane's pilot was critically injured and a passenger was slightly hurt when their craft slammed into a Dallas area house today.

Paul Stine, 36, of Oklahoma City was taken to the Parkland Health and Hospital System with a broken arm and knee as well as chest and back injuries.

Stine's twin-engine Aerostar Commander, which departed from Dallas Love Field bound for Tulsa, Okla., with a load of newspapers, crashed shortly before 3 a.m. near Addison Airport.

Witnesses said the plane clipped a power line and the roof of one home, then flipped and landed in a back yard, pulling part of another rooftop down. Parts of the North Dallas suburbs of Farmers Branch and Addison lost power.

Resident Melanie Mitrow says she and her husband John were asleep when the plane ripped their roof apart. The couple thought at first that a car had struck their home.

"I looked up and I had absolutely no ceiling," said Mrs. Mitrow. "We were looking at sky. It was all gone."

"I heard a young man saying, 'Call 911, call 911,'" she said. "My husband called 911."

Both of the injured were aboard the plane and no one on the ground was hurt. Scan Gildea, 24, of Oklahoma City suffered cuts and bruises. Witnesses said he walked away from the crash.

The plane was hauling a shipment of The New York Times to Tulsa. Debris from the crash was scattered across yards and the tail of the plane could be seen sticking out of a tree.

The damage to power lines caused a brief outage across a large area of North Dallas, Addison and Farmers Branch. Some homes remained without electrical power.

Brad Freis, a spokesman for the police department in the north Dallas suburb of Addison, said further details were unavailable.

Couple blames university for son's suicide

PORT ARTHUR (AP) - Lamar University officials harassed a high school student until he committed suicide in a dorm room, according to a motion filed by his parents.

Gabriel Kelly's parents, Mark and Carol, were granted a temporary restraining order prevent Lamar from destroying, altering or censoring any records dealing with their son.

Lamar University officials declined to comment, but said they would abide by the order.

Kelly, 17, was found hanging by a lamp cord on April 30 in Brooks-Shrivers Hall on the university's Beaumont campus. He was a student at the Texas Academy for Leadership in the Humanities, a program offered by the university for gifted and talented high school students.

Kelly's parents contend that he was exposed to psychological abuse and torment by supervisors in the months leading up to his death. They believe the harassment stems from a World Wide Web site that their son was creating that was critical of the school.

Editor's note: The Kelly family formerly lived in Hereford. Gabe had been scheduled to receive his high school diploma here in May.

Josserand is honored by Texas Girl Scouts

Contest winners

Jacob Orta, left, and Chris Brockman were the winners of the bookmark contest that was part of the Summer Reading Program at the Deaf Smith County Library. Their imaginative bookmark designs will be professionally printed and then distributed throughout the Panhandle this fall by the Texas Panhandle Library System.

In honor of Girl Scouting's 85th Anniversary, the Girl Scout Councils of Texas announced their selection of 85 Texas Women of Distinction. Among those selected was Nancy Josserand of Hereford.

She is a previous recipient of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council Woman of Distinction Award.

Recipients were selected based on contributions to their communities and the State of Texas as well as personification of Girl Scout goals and ideals. Honorees were recognized June 9, at the Four Seasons Hotel in Austin in conjunction with the Girl Scout Gold Award ceremony.

Josserand, a former Senior Girl Scout, began her involvement in Girl

Scouting when her mother helped organize a council in northeastern Colorado.

She became a Brownie Girl Scout and went on to become a Senior Girl Scout. She has been involved in Girl Scouting for many years.

Josserand praises her Girl Scout troop leader because, "She enhanced the values that I learned at home from my parents, and she taught us how to serve others and be responsible."

She also comments on being named a recipient, "It's a responsibility to live up to this honor, and it made me look back on my Girl Scout years and think about how much I benefited from the experience."

Josserand was her daughter's troop leader in Kansas where she and her husband, Bob, lived until moving to Hereford.

She is presently serving as a local outreach representative of the Amarillo Opera Bravo, a United Way volunteer, the treasurer and membership committee chair of the Panhandle Plains Historical Society board of trustees, and is a member of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council nominating committee.

She has served for the past four years as a volunteer in the HOSTS program and is a supporter of Big Brothers/Big Sisters. She is a charter member of the American National Cattle Women and a member of the Texas Cattle Women and Hereford Cattle Women, for which she was the first president.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Gay Son's Partner in Maryland" about attending the wedding for his partner's sister really hit home for me. The sister's mother didn't want "Maryland" to be at the celebration, and he was concerned that it would forever damage the relationship. I used to have the same attitude as that mother.

I was raised a strict Catholic and refused to accept my gay son's lover for many years. I was adamant about barring him from all family functions. This caused problems and unpleasant confrontations for a long time.

Last year, I became ill and could no longer live alone. My gay son and his lover were the only ones in the family who offered to take me in. I was resistant at first, but after living with them for a few months, I realized that the love and compassion which held their relationship together for so many years was every bit as valid as that of any heterosexual couple.

I am angry with myself for the heartache and trouble I put them through. I still cannot understand why God made them gay. I only know that He brought together these two wonderful people -- my son and my "son-in-law." I just hope your advice will make other parents think before they make the dreadful mistakes I did. -- Proud Mother in California

Dear California: Your letter is sure to open some eyes -- and some hearts as well. Thank you for it.

Dear Ann Landers: My oldest son is in the process of getting a divorce after 20 years of marriage. "Gary" has no children.

Lately, Gary has been calling me long distance almost daily, telling me all his problems. He is devastated about the divorce and says he still loves his wife. A few days ago, Gary called and wanted to know how much I remembered about his father mistreating him as a child. The question hit me like a bomb.

My husband was an alcoholic and extremely abusive to all six of our children. Gary says he needs to know as many of the details about his childhood problems and his relationship with his father as possible in order to get on with his life. I have spent many years trying to forget all that pain. For most of our married life, my husband was in an alcoholic stupor. I doubt seriously that he remembers anything he did. I am still married to him after 45 years and have often wondered why I didn't leave.

I am getting sick over this. I feel I must have let my children down by not confronting their father about all the physical and emotional abuse. I'm not sure how much I should tell Gary about what his father did or how much help this could possibly be.

Although all of my children have turned out well, two did suffer breakdowns and received therapy at local hospitals. I'm sure Gary is in therapy now, too. Please, Ann, help me figure out how to handle this. -- Worried Mother From Connecticut

Dear Worried Mother: There is no point in beating yourself up over what you failed to do in the past. That's history.

Since Gary has asked you about it, I believe you should tell him the truth about his early life. P.S. It might be therapeutic for you, as well.

NEW YORK (AP) - What's Muhammad Ali's idea of a good joke? A fight between him and Mike Tyson.

In the July 14 issue of The New Yorker magazine, The Greatest was asked whether Tyson could have beaten him.

"Don't make me laugh," said the former world heavyweight champ, who then began cracking up.

"Tyson don't have it. He don't have it," said Ali, pointing to his head.

Ali, 55, retired from the ring in 1981.

Nevada's boxing commission suspended Tyson last week pending a hearing on what his punishment should be for biting Evander Holyfield's ears during their heavyweight championship fight last month.

Hints from Heloise

GUMMY LABELS

Dear Heloise: I keep my address and telephone list up to date by using strips from my VCR tapes and also the sheet that comes with some prescriptions. There are many areas that are plain white and sticky that you can peel right off.

I cut strips to cover changed addresses and telephone numbers. Then I have a clean surface to write the new information. The result is an up-to-date and neat book. — Mabel Welch, Ghent, N.Y.

ACTION FILE

Dear Heloise: I keep an "action" file going all the time. It contains such items as correspondence that needs an answer, recipes not yet tried, a note or a phone call I need to make and, especially, notes on anything I have ordered through the mail that has not arrived. (Previously, I ordered mailing labels which never came, and although I had my canceled check, I had no address or phone number to contact the company.)

During the first week of each month or on days when I have a few minutes to spare, I pull out the file and try to make a few phone calls, write a letter or do something useful instead of wondering, "What do I need to do today?" — Cathy Cavin, Lubbock, Texas

Four Hereford boys are members of the team which is seeded eighth in the 106 team tournament. The remainder of the team is comprised of boys from Amarillo.

The Trojans whipped Michigan Jam City 70-45 in their second victory of the tournament as Jimmy Woodring of Amarillo led scoring with 19 points.

The victory earned the Trojans a third round game which was scheduled this morning against the Connecticut Rising Stars. Championship bracket play begins Wednesday.

Other Hereford players contributing included Slade Hodges, seven points, two assists and three rebounds; Chayse Rives, six points,

The opening game Sunday saw the Trojans take another lopsided victory, this time over a team from Boston, Ma.

Amarillo golfers win tourney

Hereford's Nieman, McGinty finish second

Jim O'Connor and John Laufer-swiler of Amarillo captured the championship of the Hereford Coors Open Partnership Tournament Sunday with a three-round total of 204.

The Amarillo duo finished five strokes ahead of Hereford's Craig Nieman and Scott McGinty. Jerry and Linda Stevens won third on a scorecard playoff after tying with Brad Small and Doug Simms of Amarillo at 210.

The big winner, however, was the Make-A-Wish Foundation, designated to get tourney proceeds and special fund-raising money. Bill Brown, president of John Pitman Golf Course Association, announced that the local Make-A-Wish chapter will receive $4,000 from the event.

The association held an auction Friday night and Make-A-Wish leaders accepted donations for closest-to-the-pin contests on a par 3 hole each day.

The tourney drew 31 teams and golfers were treated to hamburgers Friday evening and Sunday at noon in the KC Hall. The tourney format changed each day. The first round was low ball; the second day was a scramble, and Sunday was a Modified Chapman.

John Elliott of Hereford and Larry Chapman of Clovis won the first flight with a score of 208. Cory Newton and Mikel Walsler were next at 211, and third place went to Butch White and Dwayne Cassels at 213.

The Tulia duo of Brian and John Welps carded a 220 to win the second flight, seven shots ahead of Cory Boyd and Trini Valdez of Canyon. Steve Sanders and J.R. Blackwell took third with a 221.

Gene Gaston and Doug Ditto of Amarillo won the third flight with a 231. Wade Easley and Jim Bob Carver were second at 233, and Jimmie Bell and David McDonald took third with a 240.

'Buzz' keeping Woods' popularity at high level

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) - In terms of riches and acclaim, Tiger Woods already has left Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Ben Hogan at the first tee.

The names now being used for comparison: Elvis and the Beatles.

That's how big Woods has become. And at 21 years old, his fame can only swell.

"I thought I would achieve this much further down the road," Woods said Sunday after winning the Western Open, his sixth victory in 21 events since turning pro last August. "I thought that would happen after I won a lot of tournaments and got my name up there, but it's been kind of different."

"I guess a lot of it has to do with that the people are interested, therefore the media has to cover it, and then that keeps up the buzz."

The buzz might be deafening next week, when Woods takes his game to Royal Troon for the British Open. He was told to expect it to be reminiscent of the reception the Beatles got when they arrived in the United States in 1964.

"I don't know what it's going to be like," Woods said. "And I wasn't around for the Beatles."

Woods won the Western Open going away, finishing three strokes ahead of his nearest competitor, Frank Nobile. In the process, he earned plaudits from fellow pros and fervent support from nearly 50,000 fans.

With each hole, his gallery grew. Old and young, rich and poor, white and black, men and women. Thousands of them joined him on his victory march up the 18th fairway, happy to bask in Tigermania for a few moments.

Woods has made more than $2.5 million on the PGA Tour, to go with endorsement deals approaching $100 million. He is recognized everywhere he goes. He is determined not to change, even though he has become - as one member of the media put it Sunday - "Elvis reincarnated."

"I'm not going to be what some of the people in my position have become: a prisoner of their fame," he said.

"Occasionally, I want to deflect it. Yeah, it would be nice. But it's awfully flattering that the people think that highly of you. I could be an absolute nobody, and nobody would care what I do out on the golf course. People come out, support me and root me on, and that means a lot to me."

"I do understand that there are consequences when I go out in public. But I'm going to do the same things. And I'm going to enjoy life."

After failing to break par in 11 of 12 rounds, Woods decided to enjoy the simple life the week before the Western. He eschewed golf to fish, watch TV and "just be a couch potato," and didn't even run himself ragged shooting commercials and playing in big-money corporate outings.

Rested and ready, he snapped out of his mini-slump and displayed his many skills at Cog Hill's Dubsread course: power, touch, creativity, mental toughness.

The victory established him as the favorite for the British Open as he tries to add another major title to the Masters he won in April.

"If you're the favorite or not ... it has no bearing," Woods said. "So many people can win that tournament."

What about the Tiger Woods aura? Won't that be enough?

"I don't know if I even have an aura, man," he said. "I just try to win."

Comets bounce back to win

New York Liberty loses first WNBA game, 69-50

HOUSTON (AP) - After two straight losses, the Houston Comets were ready to take their frustration out on somebody.

Enter the Charlotte Sting. Cynthia Cooper scored 21 points and Tina Thompson added 15 points and nine rebounds as the Comets beat the Sting 74-56 on Monday night in the Women's National Basketball Association.

The win snapped a two-game losing streak for the Comets (5-3).

"I was concerned where we'd be mentally," Comets coach Van Chancellor said, "and I was pleased we came back tonight and made some outstanding plays."

Cooper, who was 6-for-13 from the field and made all seven of her free-throw attempts, scored five consecutive points as the Comets (5-3) used a 13-5 run to take a 28-14 lead.

"I was due for at least one (breakout game)," Cooper said. "It felt better than any other game so far. I felt relaxed, and I got the job done on defense."

Janeth Arcain added 13 points for Houston. Andrea Stinson led Charlotte with 13 points, and Sharon Manning and Andrea Congreaves each scored nine points as the Sting

(2-4) dropped to 0-4 on the road.

"We weren't mentally prepared to play tonight," Manning said. "The comets play defense like we wanted to play defense. We didn't set up in our offense the entire night."

Charlotte was only 21-for-57 from the field, including a 2-for-12 mark from 3-point range. Houston was 26-for-53, going 7-for-17 on 3-pointers.

"We destroyed ourselves tonight," said Sting coach Marynell Meadors. "I'm not taking anything away from the Comets, (but) I felt we helped them out every step of the way."

A crowd of 5,933 attended the game at The Summit.

Phoenix 69, N.Y. 50

PHOENIX (AP) - Even if there was no special incentive to end Rebecca Lobo's personal winning streak, the Phoenix Mercury still took it personally when the New York Liberty came to town.

The Liberty was off to a 7-0 start, contributing the last seven to a 102-game stretch since Lobo had played on a losing team. It came to an end Monday night, when the Mercury routed New York 69-50 in a bruising contest.

"It's not about Rebecca Lobo," said Nancy Lieberman-Cline, who nearly came to blows with New York's Vickie Johnson in the final minutes. "It's about beating the New York Liberty."

Lieberman-Cline, 39, said point guard Michele Timms complained of getting hammered by Johnson after the Liberty beat Phoenix 65-57 in New York on June 29.

"I think that's kind of the way the league is being played," Timms said. "It's very, very physical. I'm surprised it's that physical. But if that's the way it's going to be, we have to adjust to it. We don't back down."

"It was physical both ways, especially at the end," said Liberty guard Theresa Weatherspoon. "The last two minutes, we were fouling, they were fouling. We were trying to scratch and see if we could get back into it, and it was just ugly."

Bridget Pettis scored 20 of her team-record 25 points in the second half for the Mercury (4-2) before a crowd of 13,731 at the America West Arena.

Jennifer Gillom had 14 points and 13 rebounds, and Toni Foster had nine points and 12 rebounds for Phoenix, which outscored New York 47-34. Timms had 11 points and nine assists.

Johnson led the Liberty with 11 points, while Lobo had eight.

Monarchs 79, Starzz 69

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Ruthie Bolton-Holifield went 10 minutes before her first basket. Then the WNBA's leading scorer warmed up and scored 22 points to lead the Sacramento Monarchs to another victory.

Bolton-Holifield's 22-foot 3-pointer with 9:31 left in the first half pulled the Monarchs even and they went on to a 79-69 victory over the Utah Starzz on Monday night.

Reserve Mikiko Hagiwara chipped in with baskets later in the second quarter and the Monarchs finished the half with a 12-6 run for a 37-30 lead at intermission.

Utah hit six straight points in 58 seconds to tie the game at 48 with 13:27 remaining, but Bolton-Holifield scored six of the Monarchs' next eight points to key a 14-2 run over a 2:58 span.

Bolton-Holifield and Wendy Palmer, who led the Starzz with 20 points, went for a loose ball with 10:17 left, got tied up and Palmer went down hard. Bolton-Holifield got the ball to Chantel Tremiere, who scored, giving Sacramento a 52-50 lead.

Palmer left the game with a hip-pointer, but returned later. No foul was called on Bolton-Holifield and many in the crowd booed and threw pennies on the floor.

Rockers 81, Sparks 70

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Janice Braxton and Lynette Woodard each scored 20 points as the Cleveland Rockers ended a four-game losing streak with an 81-70 victory over the Los Angeles Sparks on Monday night.

Eva Nemcova added 14 and Isabelle Fijalkowski 12 as Cleveland (2-5) built a 16-point lead midway through the second half and withstood a late Los Angeles comeback.

Lisa Leslie led the Sparks (3-5) with 22 points and nine rebounds on her 25th birthday. Penny Toler added 13 points, while Jamila Wideman had a game-high eight assists. Wideman entered the game leading the WNBA in assists with 5.7 per game.

Woodard scored five points, Adrienne Johnson four and Nemcova added a 3-pointer during the Rockers' 12-2 run, which increased the lead to 62-46 with 9:38 left.

Sluggers highlight 1997 all-star game

CLEVELAND (AP) - Tony Gwynn and Ken Griffey Jr. have their opinions, just like every other fan.

So how about it, guys. When it comes to hitting, which of baseball's most hallowed numbers - 61, 400 or 56 - will be the hardest to break?

"I will say the home runs," Griffey said Monday. "If they don't pitch to you, you can't do it. Everything has to be perfect with the swing. It's not like a single, where you can bloop it in."

Gwynn sees a different side. "Of the three of them, I would say 56 is the most difficult," he said. "Every at-bat you don't get a hit, the pressure builds."

Either way, this is the time to be talking about such things. Because all of the players with the best chance at making history - otherwise known as challenging the marks of Roger Maris, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio - will be on display tonight at the All-Star game.

There's Mark McGwire with 31 home runs and Griffey with 30. They're pursuing Maris, who had 33 homers at the All-Star break in 1961 and finished with 61.

"The only time you guys should bring it up is if you're at 50 home runs in September, the first of September," McGwire said. "Then a guy has a pretty good chance of doing it."

But, the chase has caught the interest of Randy Johnson, the starting pitcher for the AL.

"I wouldn't mind seeing both getting a chance to break it instead of just one," he said. "It would be great to get into September and have both of them close."

"They would pick up the paper each morning and look at the other boxscore and say, 'He got another one.' Maybe they wouldn't do that, I don't know. But I think both would be driven by what the other guy was doing," he said.

Williams was the last player to break the 400 barrier, hitting .406 in 1941. That season, he was batting .405 at the All-Star break.

Larry Walker is at .398. Gwynn is at .394.

"I think everybody thinks it will be done, but we're finding out that it's not that easy," Gwynn said.

"Hitting .400, you've got to do it every day. I was hitting .402 one day, went 2-for-5 and went down to .401. So it's tough. You've got to get in a groove and just stay there," he said.

DiMaggio hit in 56 straight games in 1941. He happened to be at 48 at the break.

Sandy Alomar is at 30 and counting. "I think it's actually helped me concentrate on every at-bat lately," he said. "Hopefully, going for the streak doesn't hurt the team."

For at least a day or two, Alomar doesn't need to worry. The Cleveland catcher can focus on having fun, calling pitches for Johnson and hitting against NL starter Greg Maddux.

The NL has won three straight, and leads the series 40-26-1. Thanks to interleague play, Maddux has already pitched this season to five players in the AL starting lineup - Cal Ripken, Roberto Alomar and Brady Anderson of Baltimore and Tino Martinez and Paul O'Neill of the New York Yankees.

"I don't think that takes away from anything," the Atlanta ace said.

Johnson, on the other hand, may finally get to face Walker. The Colorado slugger sat out when the Rockies recently played Johnson and the Seattle Mariners.

Johnson provided an All-Star highlight in 1993 when he threw a fastball way over the head of John Kruk, prompting the Philadelphia hitter to pat his heart.

Walker and Johnson were once teammates in Montreal's minor league system. That friendship, though, may not spare Walker, whose 479-foot shot was the longest in Monday's home run derby.

"I don't remember receiving a Christmas card from him," Johnson said.

"HEDC's job incentive program is the type of program that puts our tax dollars right back into our community. It gave me the encouragement I needed to increase my work force."

John Strubling, CEO Valley Farm Services, Inc.

valley farm services, inc.

"Last year I read about the HEDC's job incentives program, and decided to see if my company qualified. I learned that I could receive a grant if I added a full-time employee to my work force. The application process was easy. Now, a year later, our company has increased production with the added worker. I encourage other businesses who qualify to take advantage of this program to promote steady growth in Hereford's economy. I know I'm glad I did."

If your company derives more than 75% of your gross income from outside Deaf Smith County you may qualify for a Jobs Incentives Grant.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have an 8-year-old grandson who wets the bed every night. This is becoming a difficult problem for him and his parents, as he cannot go to the scout camp or stay overnight with friends.

I have read that there is a hormone treatment for this situation. Can you tell me something about it? I should add that the boy has been checked by a urologist, who says that he has a small bladder but no serious kidney problems. — M.H.

ANSWER: By age 5, roughly 85 percent of children have achieved nighttime bladder control. Almost all the remaining 15 percent make it through the night dry by the end of puberty. Only a small fraction have persistent control problems into adulthood.

Those statistics are of no consolation for your grandson, I realize.

As the urologist said, a small bladder is one explanation for delay in bladder control. Another explanation is a lag in nerve connections to the bladder.

Time corrects both a small bladder and nerve connections.

The hormone treatment you ask about is the nasal spray DDAVP — desmopressin acetate. It's an artificial version of a normal body hormone that slows nightly urine production.

Often it is used in conjunction with an alarm that is activated by the first few drops of urine.

DDAVP can allow your grandson to go on scouting trips and stay with his friends overnight without fearing the embarrassment of bed-wetting. He would not have to take an alarm with him.

Above all, there should be no punishment for bed-wetting. It's not the child's fault.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the essence of cancer? It seems to occur when conditions, inherited or environmental, are conducive. Will finding a preventive medication, like the polio vaccine, be impossible? — W.W.

ANSWER: Your question is a tall order for a short answer.

For reasons only partially known, a single body cell undergoes a genetic transformation. That cell, formerly a model citizen, becomes an out-and-out sociopath, producing similar, lawless offspring. The outlaw cells refuse to obey the code of body law and order. They grow more rapidly. They spread to distant body sites, a process called "metastasis."

What causes such a transformation in body cells? Smoking, exposure to cancer-causing chemicals, inherited genes, radiation and ultraviolet light are some of the known causes. Viruses might be involved. There is a huge gap in our knowledge of most causes.

Will there ever be a vaccine for cancer? If a viral cause can be found, then the possibility for vaccine control exists.

Researchers continue to hunt for the elusive cancer causes. I have no doubt that their search will bear fruit in time.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like to know what skin tags are. — R.M.

ANSWER: They're skin adornments that are common after age 50. They dangle from the skin like miniature stalks of asparagus. Their preferred locations are under the arms, on the neck, in the groin region and on the eyelids.

They are not cancerous. If clothing or jewelry irritates them, your doctor can snip them off without any fuss.

Annually a debate arises whether skin tags are a sign of colon cancer. The issue has not been resolved. But a check of stool for hidden blood is not an unreasonable request of those with skin tags. Why not play it safe?

You can find a full discussion of colorectal cancer in the Health Letter that addresses the subject. Readers can order the report by writing to: Dr. Donohue — HL 33-10, P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a stamped (55 cents), self-addressed No. 10 envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Elections start Mexico on new stage of democracy

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Facing the prospect of the first opposition Congress in 86 years, a suddenly conciliatory President Ernesto Zedillo has declared that Mexico has entered "a new stage" of democracy.

Zedillo appeared calm and cordial on Monday, a day after his Institutional Revolutionary Party suffered historic setbacks that cost it Mexico City's mayorship, at least two state governorships and probably a majority in Congress.

"As of these elections, all (Mexico's) political parties have entered into a new era... in which we must seek out dialogue, agreement and consensus," Zedillo said in a speech to a group of businessmen.

He expressed pride in the electoral reforms he sponsored and noted that his party, known as the PRI, supported them though it "surrendered many advantages it previously had, in the goal of a fairer electoral competition."

He said that the PRI had maintained its position as "the largest force" while shedding descriptions that have dogged it since it was created in 1929 to run Mexico.

"After these elections, no one can ever again refer to the Institutional Revolutionary Party as the only party, the state party or an appendage of the government," Zedillo said.

Decades of authoritarianism, a series of corruption scandals and a devastating economic crisis in 1995 cost the PRI dearly.

Incomplete results Monday showed the PRI losing at least two of six governor's races and its long, unquestioned lock on Congress. Zedillo may become the first Mexican president since 1913 to face an opposition legislature.

PRI national leader Humberto Roque on Monday estimated the PRI would win 235-240 seats in the 500-seat Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Congress. It had 297 in the outgoing Chamber.

With more than 85 percent of ballots counted for the lower house, the PRI had nearly 39 percent of the vote compared with 27 percent for the center-right National Action Party and almost 26 percent for the left-center Democratic Revolution Party. Five other parties divided the rest.

A party needs at least 42 percent to win a majority in the lower house, where 300 of the representatives are directly elected and 200 others are allotted to parties proportionally.

The allocation of seats was still unsettled and it was also unclear how the new Congress will deal with issues such as free trade and anti-drug policies, which have been controversial in Mexico.

The general peacefulness of Sunday's voting pleased financial markets: the peso strengthened, stocks surged and Mexico's long-term bonds rallied.

"The rules of the game have changed," said leading political commentator Sergio Sarmiento. "The ruling party must learn how to negotiate to survive."

President Clinton hailed the election results as an expression of Mexicans' popular will. "Anything that adds to Mexico as a democracy is good for our common future," he said.

Zedillo also noted gains by the leftist Democratic Revolution Party, which took Mexico City's mayorship and increased its seats in Congress.

"I have always thought that a strong party on the left... is good for Mexico... because it offers more avenues for participation in peace and within the law," Zedillo said.

The government is still trying to cope with two small, leftist rebel groups in southern Mexico which chose to seek change through bullets rather than ballots.

Cuahtemoc Cardenas of Democratic Revolution became the capital's first elected mayor since 1928. Previously, the post was appointed by the president. Zedillo repeated a pledge to work with Cardenas, whom he defeated in the 1994 presidential election.

The PRI accepted defeat by National Action in governor's races in Nuevo Leon and Queretaro, but appeared to have won a victory in Sonora.

In the Gulf coast state of Campeche, Democratic Revolution candidate Layda Sansores on Monday claimed fraud in the governor's race that, according to official results, went to the PRI's Antonio Gonzalez Curi.

National Action supporters marched in Colima on Monday to protest alleged irregularities in the vote in that Pacific coastal state, where official results have been slow to appear and the PRI has claimed an apparent victory.

Counts were slow, and results close, in the governor's race in central San Luis Potosi state.

Just a decade ago, the PRI held all of Mexico's 31 state governorships.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

When the dinner bell sounded at Damron Park Monday, first day of the weeklong D.A.R.E. Camp, the 30 plus youthful participants formed a long line as they were more than ready to eat after working up healthy appetites in a softball game earlier.

McVeigh lawyers want new trial

DENVER (AP) - Timothy McVeigh did not receive a fair trial in the Oklahoma City bombing because the jurors who condemned him to die were wrongly swayed by adverse publicity and victim testimony, McVeigh's lawyers claim.

McVeigh's attorneys listed more than a dozen arguments in a 180-page motion for a new trial filed Monday in U.S. District Court.

One juror reportedly mentioned to a fellow juror during the trial that "I think we all know what the verdict should be," McVeigh lawyer Robert Nigh Jr. stated in his motion.

"One of the jurors that voted to convict Timothy McVeigh and recommended the death sentence for him had reached this decision prior to receipt of all the evidence and had blatantly disregarded the court's instructions," Nigh said. The judge had erred during the trial when he refused a defense motion to dismiss the juror, Nigh argued.

Most of the remaining arguments focused on U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch's decision to exclude parts of the defense's case: its theory that an international conspiracy was behind the bombing, a full report on problems with the FBI lab, and detail on the government's raid on the Branch Davidians complex near Waco, Texas. The bombing was said to be in retaliation for that raid.

McVeigh was convicted last month of murder, conspiracy and weapons-related counts in the April 1995 federal building bombing that killed 168 people. He was sentenced to death by injection.

Co-defendant Terry Nichols is scheduled to stand trial in September on the same charges.

Just before the trial began, Nigh said many prospective jurors learned of published reports of McVeigh's alleged confession.

"There was a firestorm of adverse publicity, which made it impossible for him to get a fair trial at that time," Nigh said. Jurors also based their sentencing decision on emotion rather than reason due to the testimony from victims, Nigh said.

Montgomery Ward seeks shelter under bankruptcy

CHICAGO (AP) - About 125 years after its start as a dry goods business in a livery stable, Montgomery Ward & Co. sought shelter in bankruptcy court to save itself from going the way of the horse and buggy.

Ward, a pioneer of the mail-order catalog business with 400 stores in 43 states, filed for court protection from its creditors Monday to give it time to reorganize its finances.

The nation's largest privately owned retailer, Ward has run up a $1.4 billion debt while struggling to compete against relative newcomers like Wal-Mart and Circuit City.

Chapter 11 will give it the breather it needs to prepare for yet another

Jimmy Stewart remembered as good, gentle man with a heart

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Whether it was his daughter, a minister, a general - James Stewart was remembered not as a celebrity or Academy Award winner, but as a good, gentle man with a humble heart.

"Like him, we might take a cue from his favorite film - 'No man is poor who has friends,'" said Stewart's daughter, Kelly Harcourt, quoting a line from her father's favorite picture, "It's a Wonderful Life."

About 350 people turned out Monday for a memorial service at Beverly Hills Presbyterian Church where Stewart worshipped and sometimes sang in the choir.

Several celebrities who appeared in some of Stewart's 81 movies over his 56-year career attended the ceremony as about 2,000 fans and members of the media stood quietly outside.

Among the celebrities in attendance were June Allyson, Bob Hope, Nancy Reagan, Carol Burnett, Esther Williams and Robert Stack.

The Rev. Jim Morrison, who conducted the ceremony from an altar decorated with 20 sprays of white roses and white gladiolas, called Stewart "a great star."

"But all of you here today knew him as a warm, caring, delightful human being," Morrison said.

Also speaking was Lt. Gen. Roger DeKok, who represented the Air Force in which Stewart served during World War II before rising to the rank of brigadier general in the reserves.

DeKok told how Stewart enlisted in the Air Corps at the age of 33 in 1941 at a time when he was an established star earning thousands of dollars a month. His salary in the military was $21 a month.

Stewart flew in 20 combat missions over Europe and received the Flying Cross medal.

But he withdrew from the spotlight in 1994 after the death of his only wife, Gloria, said his daughter. "He didn't know what to do with himself. But you, his friends, were never far away."

The organ quietly played hymns and ended with the somber tunes of "Shenandoah," the title of one of Stewart's biggest frontier films. At the end of the service, the church was filled with the sound of a military bugle playing taps.

Taps gave way to "Auld Lang Syne," the theme that ended the movie "It's a Wonderful Life."
