New computer

Police Officers Ronnie Lyons looks over a new computer the department has received that will operate the "Are You O.K.?" telephone check system donated by Fellowship of Believers Church. The computer was donated by Rocky Mountain Chocolate Co. The system allows elderly, crippled or shut-in residents to receive a daily telephone call making sure they are not in need of emergency medical care.

Police department ready to ask 'Are You O.K.?' with new program

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor
Imagine a scenario where an elderly resident is living alone, unable to get out and with no family members available to check that person periodically. Then imagine something happens to that person such as a fall, a sudden illness, or other injury. Without someone to check in, that person could lie unattended for hours or days before receiving help, and could possibly die. It was the possibility of just that situation that spurred the Hereford Police Department last year to investigate some way to check on the city's elderly homebound residents and make sure on a daily basis that they are not in need of emergency medical treatment. Now it has become a reality, as the department has received donations of a computer and software to implement "Are You O.K.?", a computerized telephone calling system that phones clients daily to make sure they are O.K. Officers Ronnie Lyons was given responsibility to looking into such a program. "We started this in May (1993) and we didn't really have any support," he said. Then an elderly local couple fell and were injured in their home and lay on their floor for hours before assistance came. After that, Lyons said, more people started to pay attention to the department's efforts. In November, he said, he made a presentation that ultimately enabled "Are You O.K.?" to become reality. Shirley Easterwood of Fellowship of Believers Church attended a presentation Lyons made to the Pilot Club. "(She) took the information back in her head" and relayed it to members of the church. Lyons then made a subsequent presentation at the church, detailing the need for the system and soliciting help in buying the $3,500 computer software. Church members, said Chief David Wagner, had wanted to do something similar for some time and jumped in with both feet, raising the $3,500 themselves and purchasing the software. The phone line was installed by the department, with the month charge to be paid by the city. All that was left was to buy the computer itself. Lyons said Easterwood stepped in again, contacting a friend with Rocky Mountain Chocolate Co., which has an outlet in Amarillo. They donated the computer, which arrived in Hereford on Thursday. Now, said Lyons, the software and audio board will be loaded by Cpl. Brent Harrison -- who was characterized by Lyons as the police department's computer expert -- and the system will be in place. It works quite simply, Lyons said.

Local residents who meet department criteria are invited to apply to "Are You O.K.?" Lyons said he will enter their names and other pertinent information into the computer, along with a message. Then, the computer will call everyone on its list at the specified time or times and deliver the message. If there is no answer or a busy signal is reached, the computer tries back a little later -- probably in 15 minutes. If there is no response on the second call, the computer sounds an alarm that alerts the department dispatchers, who accesses the main file on the client and makes contact with a person who has a key to the house. The application calls for the names of two people with keys, one a near neighbor and one other person such as a family member. If nobody with a key to the house is available, an officer will be dispatched to check on the resident and call for help if needed. "We want to try to get as many as we can to give us keys so we don't have to bust a door down," Lyons said. Keys provided to police will be kept in a key safe until needed. "It's really designed for people who are invalid," and who have no family members here to check on them, Lyons said, then for those with family members in Hereford.

Lyons said the standard message will be something like, "This is your daily call from the Hereford Police Department. If you are not O.K., hang up now and dial 911." "This will not work with an answering machine," Lyons said, because the computer does not discern whether or not the phone is answered by a person or by an answering machine. Because there are many homebound residents who qualify for "Are You O.K.?", Lyons said, who also take important medications during the day, he will also allow residents to sign up for daily medication reminders. Wagner said the system purchased for the department has enough memory to store 350 names and phone numbers and 128 messages. Lyons said as he enters information into the computer about the clients, he will simply direct the machine to call first thing in the morning, then when it is time to take medication. He said that, since the equipment is here now, "Are You O.K.?" will begin making phone checks as soon as applications are received and logged into the computer, which he plans to do as time allows during his regular night shift patrol work. Anyone who wants an application may get one by calling the department at 364-2323, or writing P.O. Box 2277, Hereford, Texas 79045. Friends, neighbors, or relatives of qualified applicants may pick up applications for them.

Lorena Bobbitt sent to mental hospital

By ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press Writer
MANASSAS, Va. (AP) - Lorena Bobbitt was committed to a state mental hospital for a psychiatric evaluation after a jury found she was temporarily insane when she cut off her husband's penis with a kitchen knife. Defense lawyers had argued that Mrs. Bobbitt was a battered wife seized by an "irresistible impulse" to cut off her husband's penis on June 23 after he came home from a night of drinking and raped her. Prosecutors called Mrs. Bobbitt's attack a calculated act of revenge. "This case was not about a penis," defense lawyer Lisa Kemler said after the verdict Friday. "Everyone was so consumed with that. But that's not what this case is really about. It was really about a life." Doctors will decide if she poses a danger to herself or others. They must report back to the judge within 45 days. Mrs. Bobbitt stood stoically as the verdict was read. One supporter in the courtroom shrieked. Her husband, John Bobbitt, was not in court. Bobbitt, 26, was acquitted in November of sexually assaulting his wife. He denied ever beating or raping her. "John was dumbfounded. He said, 'You mean she got away with it?'" his uncle, William Biro, said on CNN's "Larry King Live" later Friday. He and his wife, Marylyn, who raised Bobbitt, watched with him as the verdict was delivered on live television. Prosecutor Paul B. Ebert told reporters that he has "a certain amount of sympathy for Mrs. Bobbitt, but that doesn't justify what she did." "Hopefully, if she needs help, she will get it," Ebert said. The jury of seven women and five men deliberated 7-1/2 hours over two days before finding Mrs. Bobbitt innocent of malicious wounding, which carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison. "It's a sad situation for everybody," juror Jean Salisbury said in today's Washington Post. "I'm glad it's over, and hopefully the healing process will begin for her. ... We know the difficulty she'll face ahead of her." Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, was taken to Central State Hospital in Petersburg, where she will join a women's ward with 15 patients and be examined to determine what treatment she might need. At her husband's trial, Mrs. Bobbitt described the mutilation, but she testified during her own trial that she couldn't remember cutting her husband. After the verdict, one of her closest friends read a message Mrs. Bobbitt directed to abused women. "She encourages you to reach out, talk to someone today," said Janna Bisutti, who is also Mrs. Bobbitt's employer.

Hereford Young Farmers host junior event Stock show starts Tuesday

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Things are quiet in the pens of the Bull Barn, but come Tuesday the pace will quicken as the final countdown begins on the 1994 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show. Members of the group will be in place Monday, erecting the temporary chutes and pens that connect the Little Bull Barn to the Big Bull Barn and that create a show arena for the five-day event. This year, some 259 kids representing 4-H and FFA clubs in five counties -- Deaf Smith, Oldham, Castro, Randall and Parmer -- are entered. Kevin Urbanczyk is one of the general superintendents for the show. "It looks pretty good," he said. "Nothing really goes to happening till Tuesday, till steers start weighing in." And once those steers start weighing in, they won't stop until 88 of them have crossed the scales, based on pre-registration figures. Of those steers, 43 of them will come from Deaf Smith County entrants -- almost as many as the 55 shown last year in the entire show. Another 34 have been entered by out-of-county youth. The hogs will make their first appearance on Wednesday, with some show going smoothly this year, adding that even the weather may cooperate.

This is Urbanczyk's second year to serve as a general superintendent for the show. Joining Urbanczyk as general superintendents are Gerald Marnell, Tom Schlabs and Charlie Stengel. Steers and heifers superintendents are Chris Urbanczyk, chairman, and M.D. Franks and Ray Schlabs. Sheep superintendents are Nicky Morgan, chairman, and Mark Urbanczyk, Arnie Artho, Mike Meiwes, Donny Meiwes and Dennis Schilling. Hog superintendents are Kenneth Schlabs, chairman, and Jeff Mercer, Chris Carter, Brian Urbanczyk, Raymond Martinez, Wade Boren and Brent Self. Kevin Urbanczyk said the Young Farmers have been running the show for more than 25 years, and that it was held for about 10 years before that under the sponsorship of a local service club. "They used to have it all in the Big Bull Barn," he said, with hogs and sheep penned up under the bleachers and steers tied up outside.

Perry front-runner for Pentagon job

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon's No. 2 official is being named as a strong contender to replace Defense Secretary Les Aspin, but the White House says President Clinton hasn't made up his mind.

White House spokeswoman Dee Myers said Friday that Clinton would be considering possible candidates this weekend while at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md. "He'll spend some time on it," she said. "He will over the course of the next few days until the process is completed." According to reports today in The New York Times and The Washington Post, Clinton met with Deputy Defense Secretary William Perry on Friday to discuss the post.

Clinton's first choice to fill the impending Cabinet vacancy, Bobby Inman, embarrassed the White House with his abrupt withdrawal on Tuesday. Aspin, who was forced to resign last month, has said he would remain in office until his successor is confirmed. Over the past year - particularly when Aspin was hospitalized for his heart condition or was embroiled in a major policy matter as the changing policy toward homosexuals - it was Perry who managed the department and handled the many contacts with foreign defense or military officials.

Lions camp representative to come here

A representative of the Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville, which serves disabled and diabetic children, will be in Hereford this week to talk about the camp.

Nolan Underwood, who lost most of his vision in a high school accident then attended the Texas Lion's Camp Personal Adjustment Training Program in 1959, will show a film about the camp and will talk about it in a public meeting at 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 28, in the Community Center.

Gary Billingsly said the presentation will be to "see what the Lions Camp has for crippled children and diabetics."

The session is open to anyone, but particularly to those with children ages 7 to 16 (age 17 for insulin-dependent diabetics) who have diabetes or some disability.

Underwood is a public relations specialist for the camp, which opened in 1953 in Kerrville to serve crippled children.

He is working throughout Texas to provide information to the people of Texas regarding the camp.

In addition to his appearance on Friday night, Underwood will be speaking to several Lions clubs in the area this week.

He will be at the Canyon Noon Lions Club meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 26, and at the Bovina Noon club on Thursday. Then, Thursday night he will speak to the Friona evening club.

Underwood's final appearance in the area will be Saturday at the Lions District 2-T1 mid-winter conference and banquet, which is hosted at the Community Center by the Hereford Lions Club.

HJH cafeteria support personnel includes Nancy Mitchell, manager; Lupe Gonzales, Maria Gutierrez, Sarah Hightower, Maria Martinez, Bonnie Nall, Donna Parrack, Nora Perez, Terrye Rhyne, Norma Rodriguez, Marta Williams and Cruz Ybarra. Ladies, we appreciate you and your contribution to HJH!

Krista Warren, 7th grade, was the winner of the local Geography Bee, on the junior high level. She took the qualifying test which was mailed to Washington, D.C. for scoring. Others in the finals were Jenny Artho, Robin Bell, Heath Henderson, and Josh Rowe.

The Library continues to be a busy place. The implementation of flexible scheduling allows more accessibility to the library by students and teachers. Students may come to the library at anytime during the school day and teachers may schedule library days to fit in with their lesson.

The Library and eighth grade reading classes are involved in a reading competition for the remainder of the six weeks. The winning classes will be treated to a special party in the library. The more books a class reads the better chance they have of winning the competition.

The 8th grade Reading classes have concentrated this week on the events surrounding the earthquake in Los Angeles.

The 8th grade Red Team had a cake and punch party for the students who passed their classes for the first semester. Congratulations to these students. We are all looking forward to a special event for the students who will be leaving us for the high school--passing to the 9th grade. Remind your student to keep up the good work and avoid noon study hall.

This is the first year for a SUPERLAB in the Junior High. The SUPERLAB at Hereford Junior High is open for all students from 7:30 in the morning until 4:00 in the afternoon. We would like to encourage the students to use the lab on their own time before and after school to get extra help if needed.

Out of 231 students, the following students won the perfect attendance drawing: Emily Curtis - $50 Hereford Bucks, Amy Perrin - $25 Hereford Bucks, and Erica Delgado $25 Hereford Bucks. These students were drawn from a total of 231 students.

"The impersonal hand of government can never replace the helping hand of a neighbor." --Hubert H. Humphrey

There has been a lot of talk and much written about "rebuilding America." One of the most interesting publications to come across our desk recently is from American Renewal Newsletter.

The author is Bob Terrell of Houston, who formerly worked with a couple of corporations involved in the space program. He is the son of Byron and Jennie Terrell of Hereford.

He says the newsletter is "dedicated to the proposition that we, the American people, are the strongest force we can marshal to keep America the best. We are dedicated to rebuilding America from the grassroots up, sharing actions and ideas to rebuild our nation better than ever."

ARN says the problem is more than economics. "It includes a return to values of quality, craftsmanship, loyalty to local community, rebuilding family and relationships, and making our society work for all of us."

"We need a revolution; a revolution of freedom from our own domineering natures. We need it in our large businesses; where managers need to listen while their people talk; we need it in our families so children can be raised with encouragement and attention paid to their accomplishments; we need it in our churches, where we need to talk openly about the real issues of our society rather than just sermoneering."

And, the newsletter says that the primary thing we must change is our buying habits. Instead of sending our dollars out of city, state or nation, we must buy from one another. Keeping that dollar in our local community and sending it around and around until we discover the same thing that the Amish, Japanese and frontier Americans discovered--the value of doing high quality, intensive amount of business with one another.

If you're interested in the newsletter, write to American Renewal Newsletter, 16219 Mill Point, Houston, 77059.

We don't know if it's the catchy tune or the unusual lyrics, but County and Western music continues to be the rage across the nation. We haven't listened real close to all the lyrics, but some of them are real humdingers...like: "I'm gonna erase your name from the blackboard of my heart."

Roy McQueen, Snyder editor, suggests you try to put a tune with these C&W lines:

--If fingerprints showed up on skin, I wonder whose I'd find on you.

--I get tears in my ears from lying on my back crying over you.

--I was a couch potato, and she crossed me off her diet.

--Every fella needs a dog, but why did mine have to be You?

--She can't fill your shoes--there's just no way, but she sure looks good in your lingerie.

--If someone that loves me could hurt me this bad, just think what a stranger could do.

--The third time she was showing-timing me was the last time I showed her the door.

--I feel like a buzzard on a desert where nothing ever dies.

--I'm too weak to fight your man of the week.

--I use to like your cooking 'till you microwaved my heart.

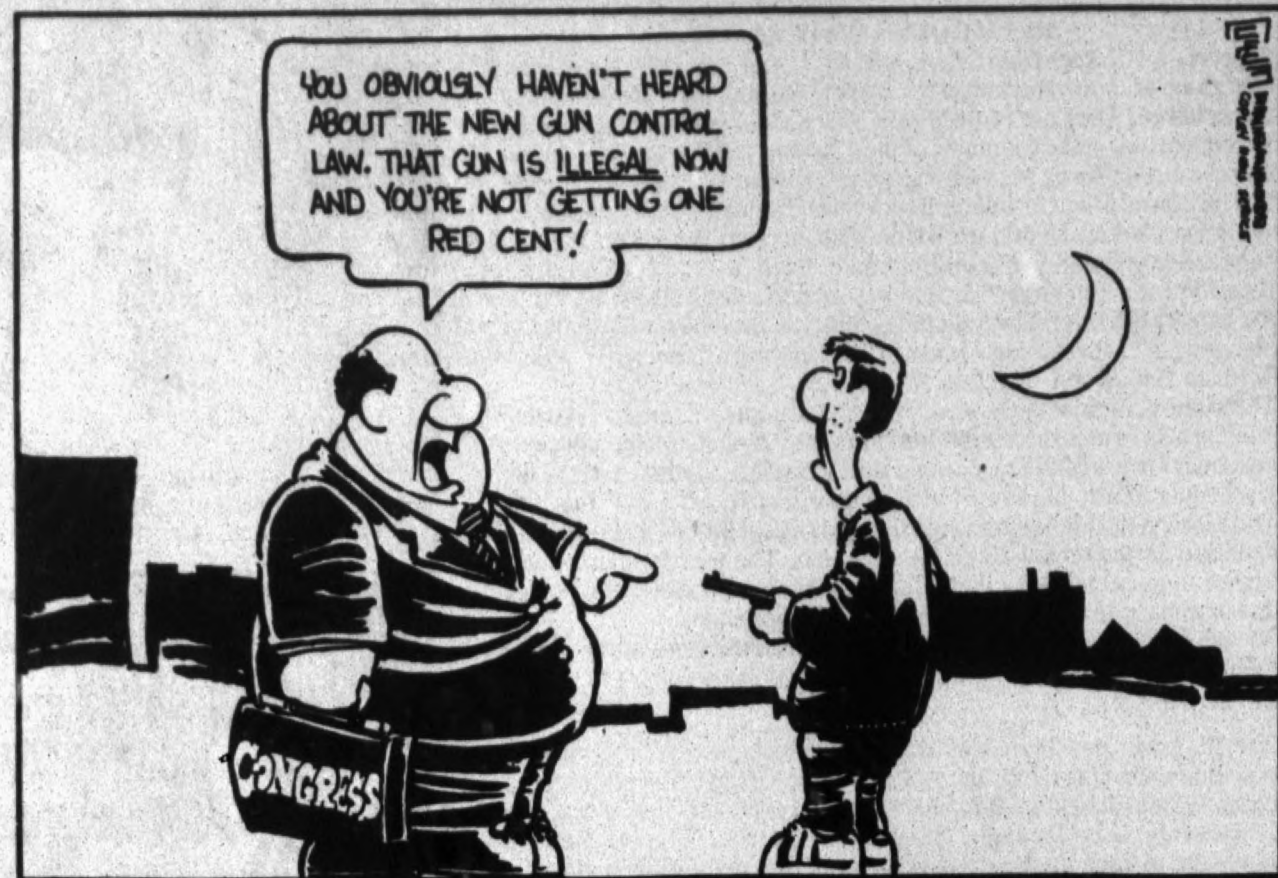

--She sets me on fire like kindlin' wood, but she can't hold a candle to you.

--I cried when I picked up your jewelry case, honey, cause it throwed out my back again.

--Your picture in the moonlight keeps the crows out of my corn.

--I painted our old barn today with the makeup you left behind.

--I've got athlete's heart, and it's itching for you.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

As I sat at my computer the other night and got ready to comment on President Clinton and his first year in office, I remembered a comment my 4-year-old daughter made recently about Clinton. She saw him on TV one night and said something like, "There's President Clinton. I really like President Clinton."

I had a snappy remark on the tip of my tongue when I realized something -- this little red-headed girl doesn't care about gays in the military, Clinton's inability to put together a Cabinet, his questionable morale character, or any of that.

All she knows is he is the leader of the United States (probably the closest analogy in her mind is Daddy or Sunday School Teacher) and so she likes him.

So instead of making a crack about how inept he is and how much he is going to ruin this country if something doesn't change, I reminded myself that she was reacting to the office not the person.

And I realized something about myself. Sometimes I find myself equating the Presidency with Clinton. These cannot be farther apart. The Presidency, after all, is the historic roll. It is the office that carries with it 200-plus years of refinement, prayer, concern and action by more than 40 men who were solely concerned with making this nation the best place on earth to live.

Clinton, however, happens to be the man chosen under the laws of the United States of America to serve as her president for four years, at which time he will either be re-elected for four more years, or a new man (or woman?) will take over after a Constitutionally-mandated election.

We may not agree politically with Clinton, we may not think he is doing what is right for this nation, but we must give respect that is due his office.

Then I remembered a Bible verse that tells Christians that they owe respect to the leader of their secular nation, because God is the one who places rulers on the throne. And, since I couldn't immediately recall which verse I was thinking about, I called my pastor, Rev. Larry Cothrin, for help.

What we found was Romans 13:1, which says, "Let every soul be subject unto higher powers," and 1 Peter 2:13, 14, which says, "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well."

So, even though I may not agree with much (if anything) of what President Clinton stands for, or I may object to the way he is leading this country, I must still give respect and honor to the Presidency as an office and to the system which has enabled that office to exist for more than two centuries.

Anyway, I hope you understand that when I write about Clinton and the job he is doing in Washington, that I am referring to the individual person, not the Presidency as a whole.

On a related subject, I happened to see Clinton on TV and, do you know what, he really looked like he has aged at least 10 years in recent months.

In fact, it reminded me of Jimmy Carter and how physically rough the presidency was on him, how he entered office in 1976 a robust young man and crawled out a decrepit old fogy in 1980.

Seems to me part of the problem is that these Democrats enter office all starry-eyed and full of dreams for what they will accomplish now that they run the country and not those mealy-mouthed, money-grubbing, rich-pampering, military-hawk Republicans. Anyway, they get into the presidency and suddenly it hits them in the face -- REALITY!

And now we have Clinton, who has had a year full of reality and who is flat tired out.

I wonder what he'll look like in three more years? *

Speaking of which, this week marked the anniversary of the Clinton presidency.

During this year we got "Nannygate" on Attorney General candidates, a failure at Defense Secretary, the suicide of a top aide, a top State Department aide fired and the sudden withdrawal of a Cabinet nominee.

We have complaints from Chief Justice William Rehnquist that there are over 100 federal judgeships that Clinton has not appointed yet and the top Civil Rights post in the government is unoccupied.

We have gays in the military, a lesbian in charge of "fair housing," a Surgeon General who advocates legalized drugs and free condoms, an Attorney General who opposes the death penalty, yet who wants it enforced on a Right to Life-related crime, and a Commerce Secretary who has accepted questionable money from the North Vietnamese.

Finally, our own president has been subpoenaed several times, most recently in relation to an investigation about possible wrongdoing involving a real estate company in which he was an investor. He has been accused of marital infidelity and once tied up traffic at one of the biggest airports in the world while he caught a haircut.

I wonder what his second year will be like?

Editorial opinion from around state

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Jan. 17

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram on school finance:

State District Judge Scott McCown, who has jurisdiction in the never-ending Texas school financing case, dropped a hint last week that he might expedite, by a full year, his deadline for putting a freeze on the issuance of school bonds by property-rich school districts. ...

Such a ruling would also be virtually certain to create the need for a special session of the Legislature.

In December, McCown upheld the legality of most of Senate Bill 7, the school-funding plan approved by the Legislature last May, ruling there was nothing unconstitutional about requiring wealthy districts to share tax revenue with poorer districts.

He said, however, that SB7 failed to provide the state with an "equitable method of financing capital expenditures" and gave the Legislature until Sept. 1, 1995 to come up with one.

If such a system is not in place by that time, he said, he would put a freeze on the issuance of school bonds by the state's wealthier districts.

McCown's warning last week that he might advance the freeze date by a full year was prompted by concerns that many districts might accelerate issuance of their bonds ...

Because the next regular session of the Legislature will not convene until January 1995, a change in McCown's freeze deadline would trigger well-nigh irresistible pressure on lawmakers to meet in special session to work out an alternative plan. Given their track record of working under pressure, that is not an altogether encouraging prospect.

Jan. 17

Amarillo Daily News on the TAAS test:

Once again many high school seniors across Texas are facing the pressure of passing the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test if they want to graduate. And once again schools will be under pressure to allow students who failed the test, but passed classes, to graduate anyway.

More than 26,000 seniors - 265 in the Amarillo Independent School District - still must pass the test. ...

Local school district must be held accountable to some statewide level of excellence. Otherwise, a district could have a high passing rate even though its classes were substandard.

The TAAS forces districts to meet a minimum statewide standard and helps ensure that students are getting a good education. That's why taking the TAAS and passing it are so important.

Furthermore, graduation is a privilege, not a right. Not only is it appropriate to deny graduation privileges to those who fail the TAAS, it is crucial. Those who do pass both their classes and the TAAS deserve not to have their accomplishments tainted by those who did not meet minimum standards.

Students have five chances to pass the exit-level TAAS. That is more than fair.

Jan. 17

El Paso Herald-Post on attacks on athletes:

A certain type of kook slashes Monet or throws acid on Rembrandt. Not the artists themselves, but their paintings. Alas, the mania to mar the beautiful is evolving. Now live athletes - artists of motion - are targets.

In April, a spectator stabbed tennis star Monica Seles during tournament play. Then champion figure skater Nancy Kerrigan was tire-ironed in the leg at a Detroit practice session Jan. 6. ...

Seles' assailant was a fan of her rival Steffi Graf, and the timing of the attack on Kerrigan - hours before the U.S. championships - suggest some demented devotion to another skater as a motive. ...

Surely our justice system won't too quickly swallow the lunacy line, as did the German judge who gave Seles' knifer probation.

The personal trait these attacks must vivify isn't craziness - in any clinical sense - but cowardice. ...

... Some sulking nobodies will ambush the renowned for a moment on center stage - if the cost isn't too high.

Society must raise the cost. Enough outrages. Kerrigan's assailant must spend more time on ice than she ever will.

Jan. 10

Port Arthur News on Illegal immigration:

Even though what State Sen. Carl Parker is asking for would require a massive change in the way the federal government operates, he is completely correct in urging Gov. Ann Richards and Attorney General Dan Morales to sue the U.S. government to reimburse Texas for costs generated by illegal aliens.

The U.S. government should begin an immediate crash program to seal our borders at the most common crossing points for illegals. Contrary to popular myth, that's not nearly as hard as it might seem.

Although most illegal aliens in this country cross the U.S.-Mexican border surreptitiously, they do not do so in the middle of vast deserts, hundreds of miles from cities and towns. Obviously, they cross in or near border cities that can be policed - if only our government has the will.

Unless Richards, Morales and other officials of border states let the federal government know in no uncertain terms that it's time for action - not talk - on controlling our borders, the time bomb of rampant immigration will continue ticking.

Beaumont Enterprise on Whitewater Development

Janet Reno, once the darling of the Clinton administration - a woman admired for her courage and forthrightness in the face of intense public scrutiny - is embarrassing herself.

Worse, the attorney general is embarrassing the president of the United States.

Reno not only continues to refuse to call for an independent counsel to look into the Whitewater Development matter involving Bill and Hillary Clinton, she is offering some mighty lame reasons for her refusal to do so.

The attorney general's dawdling has given the White House team time to "catalogue" the Whitewater records before releasing them - in bits and pieces - to the Justice Department. What's going on here?

History teaches a bitter lesson about these kinds of scandals. The longer the White House refuses to release all the records, either to the public or to an independent counsel, the greater the suspicion grows across the country. And the more widespread it becomes, the harder it becomes to quell.

Houston Chronicle on Vidor integration

Hope springs eternal, the saying goes. In the case of the formerly all-white public housing complex in Vidor there may be good reason for hope, at least from initial indications.

Federal housing officials felt it was wise to move four black families into the complex under the cover of darkness ... in an attempt to avoid any unpleasantness from the whites living there or elsewhere in the community.

The fact that some 18 white families in the complex gathered to welcome the new black residents around midday of their arrival gives hope that these families will now be accepted by their neighbors and be allowed to lead normal lives.

The racial hatred that has been exhibited in Vidor in the past does not have to be repeated. The unexpected welcome the new black families were given by some white residents in the complex gives reason to think that things may be changing for the better in Vidor.

As one white resident of the complex said, "We're all Americans." That sort of attitude is encouraging.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

It is with great regret we must announce that the Environmental Coalition for Recycling (EnCoRe) will no longer be able to conduct the monthly collections of recyclable materials in Hereford. We have asked the City of Hereford to assume all responsibility for actual collection and processing of these materials.

Since February of 1990, EnCoRe has voluntarily collected and sorted tons of cans, plastic, glass and paper, in order to keep them out of the local landfill. We appreciate the loyal support of those local families who have shown their commitment to recycling. But we have exhausted our supply of volunteer labor and feel that this is an appropriate time to turn this program over to the City.

We do not want to see Hereford stop recycling for several reasons. The impending closure of our landfill should be an even greater incentive to reduce our volume of solid waste. The Regional Landfill, where our municipal waste will eventually be dumped, will charge the City a "tipping fee," based on tonnage. Those fees will be passed on to the citizens of Hereford through higher garbage rates. Any materials that can be recycled will be kept out of the Regional Landfill.

Furthermore, because the State of Texas has passed laws that promote recycling, that has become one of the criteria considered by the State when awarding certain grant monies to communities. Hereford needs to continue to be a recycling community so that we will have equal footing when applying for these grants.

Five Panhandle cities--Borger,

Fritch, Pampa, Panhandle and Stinnett--are actively recycling as part of the Clean Cities 2000 program, sponsored by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. There is no reason why Hereford could not apply for this membership.

Lastly, recycling is a major component of the Keep Texas Beautiful program, which also focuses on beautification and community cleanup. The Hereford Beautification Alliance, which is an offshoot of EnCoRe, will need to keep recycling alive here as part of its efforts to improve our community.

We wish to remind citizens that they can continue to recycle white paper and newspapers by bundling and leaving them in St. Anthony's paper storage barn. Also, aluminum cans can be donated to the Red Cross or EnCoRe for recycling. Or, you can redeem your cans and car batteries for cash at Hereford Iron & Metal.

EnCoRe will continue to promote recycling through public education. We look forward to working with the Beautification Alliance in its recycling interests.

The one easy thing that everyone can do is to buy recycled products so that markets will open up for recycled materials. The other thing citizens can do is request and then support a recycling program developed by the City.

Thank you for the opportunity to address these issues.

Carbon monoxide safety tips offered

LUBBOCK -- Carbon monoxide is a tasteless, colorless, odorless, highly poisonous gas, and Energas Company has offered some safety tips regarding the gas.

Carbon monoxide can be dangerous in areas of high concentration in the home, particularly in the winter months.

The most common source of carbon monoxide is the exhaust of automobile engines. It is also produced by any gasoline-powered engine like lawn mowers, chain saws and lawn edgers, as well as charcoal grills, wood stoves, fireplaces or similar equipment.

Some old or poorly adjusted gas appliances might also produce carbon monoxide. Under safe, normal operating conditions the amount produced will be small.

If gas appliances are installed, adjusted and operated properly there is no danger.

The first symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are headaches, dizziness and sleepiness. The skin may turn a cherry red. As more carbon monoxide crowds out oxygen in the blood, symptoms may include nausea, vomiting and an irregular or fluttering heartbeat.

Symptoms may progress to muscular weakness and impairment of judgment, unconsciousness and death.

Victims should be brought immediately into fresh air and given artificial respiration, preferably with an inhalator and pure oxygen.

The important thing to remember is this: Prolonged exposure to high concentrations of carbon monoxide can lead to brain damage or death.

To prevent carbon monoxide poisoning:

-- Do not operate a gasoline-powered engine in a confined or enclosed space.

-- Do not burn charcoal indoors or in a confined space like a garage.

-- Provide adequate ventilation in your home when using wood stoves and fireplaces.

-- Be certain that all flame-producing appliances are vented, installed, adjusted and operated properly.

-- If you're at home or in a motel, hotel or apartment with an unvented gas heater, always open a window for ventilation.

-- Carbon monoxide detectors are commercially available, and prices range between $60 and $200. If you purchase a CO detector, make sure it meets the requirements of the Underwriters Laboratories 2034. However, the best precaution is to make sure all fuel-burning appliances and your furnace are operating properly.

Energas, a division of Atmos Energy Corp. of Dallas, serves more than 309,000 customers in West Texas, including Hereford.

According to Deere & Company, families own 99.1 percent of all the farms in the United States.

Bush wants lottery funds for education

AUSTIN (AP) - Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush called Friday for dedicating state lottery profits to education.

Bush said that's what voters thought was going to happen to lottery money, anyway.

"I think all government ought to be open and honest," Bush said. "Like thousands of Texans, I'm confused when I was told, in my opinion, that the lottery was going to go strictly to public education and I wake up the next day to find out it wasn't."

His remarks drew vigorous applause from his Veterans of Foreign Wars convention audience.

Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat seeking re-election, said dedicating lottery proceeds to schools is a bad idea. The game provides neither a dependable nor large enough source of money for schools, she said.

"I felt very strongly that the schools of Texas and our kids are too important to depend on a capricious revenue source where it is unpredictable how much money would be coming in," Richards said.

"The suggestion is that if you dedicate the lottery money, then education would have enough. The truth is, we budget far more money for education than the lottery provides," she said.

Currently, lottery profits go into the state's main bank account, the General Revenue Fund, and are spent like most other tax monies on a variety of services. The largest portion of state spending is for education.

According to the state comptroller's office, the lottery has made about $1 billion profit since the games began in May 1992. The state currently spends more than $7 billion a year on public schools.

Bush said he understood that the lottery alone can't fund schools.

However, he said, lottery proceeds should be dedicated to schools because that's what many Texans believed was going to happen.

"Everywhere I go, people believe that," Bush said. "The purpose is to say to Texans, government is not going to lie to you - or government's not going to mislead you. I guess is a better way to put it."

The Republican stopped short of accusing Richards of misleading voters while campaigning for approval of the lottery. Bush's campaign staff distributed copies of several public statements from 1991, in which Richards said Texas needed more money for schools and other government services and voiced her belief that a lottery was the best way to raise the cash.

"I don't think she deliberately misled anybody," Bush said. "I guess she's claiming she never at all suggested that. Just read her comments."

Richards said Friday that she never told voters lottery money would be spent only on education.

"I was told by the (lottery) marketers that you could use that as a way to sell more tickets, and I said I thought that was wrong, too," she said.

THE BEST TIME TO BUY A HOME IS NOW!

Purchasing a home is one of the best personal investments anyone can make. We see renters' almost everyday and hear about how they spend up to half of their incomes on rent receipts. Purchasing a home can make a real difference in the quality life, because it will grow in value, provide tax deductions and best of all, it is theirs! Each monthly payment made, means they own more and more of the home, while its value is increasing. This increase in value belongs to them, not a landlord! They can borrow against it or use it to increase their own net worth. As the home increases in value, they will never have to pay taxes on its appreciation. If they put the same amount of money in a savings account, they would have to pay taxes on the interest. In fact owning a home can save them money, the property tax and mortgage interest are tax deductible. If you have any questions about home ownership please give us a call.

Lady Whitefaces whip Pampa; Herd boys fall

By JAY PEDEEN

Hereford's girls were too much for struggling Pampa to handle, while the Pampa boys were too good and too quick for Hereford Friday in Whiteface Gym.

The results were two games that weren't close: Hereford's girls won 74-34 in the first game, then Pampa's boys won 89-69.

In both games, the winner took control early. The difference was while the Lady Whitefaces were able to pad their lead throughout the game, Pampa's boys lost some of its lead in the fourth. The Hereford boys never quit, outscoring Pampa 32-21 in the fourth quarter against players that weren't exactly scrubs.

The Lady Whitefaces broke away from a 2-2 tie to score seven straight points, then after a Pampa basket, 11 more. Pampa rarely got the ball past Hereford's press. Hereford led 20-6 at the end of the quarter.

"We had a little meeting Wednesday, and we decided we were fixin' to turn up the intensity, we were going to get busy," coach Eddie Fortenberry said. "We put a whole lot more effort into this."

The second quarter was the Heather Hodges show, as the

Oilers fans feel let down again

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - A moment of silence please, for those battered Houston Oilers fans who are in their customary January NFL playoff mode, getting the chips and dip ready to watch the Dallas Cowboys.

We're talking severe mental anguish here.

Buffalo's three straight Super Bowl losses? Hal! You want playoff frustration? Oilers fans would trade places with the Bills in the split-second of a Joe Montana touchdown pass.

But could the Bills tolerate seven straight years in the playoffs without surpassing the second round? We think not. Only an Oilers fan has been steeled to deal with such unthinkable conditions.

Buffalo fans know cold. Houston fans know pain.

Even some Oiler fans, in fact, are suffering from a phenomenon observed in recent years that we've identified as "fear of believing."

A psychological paper may be in order here. A case study of Oilers fans dating back at least 20 years, exploring the cumulative effects of being disappointed year after year.

Each year, more fans are gripped with the fear of believing as they realize the Oilers may never reach their goals and that they'll spend every January watching the Cowboys. Their hearts have been put to the fire too many times and so they protect themselves by refusing to believe.

Oiler defensive end Sean Jones, a very perceptive guy, recognized it too, during the 11-game winning streak that ended Sunday in a 28-20 loss to Kansas City.

"The fans are afraid to believe, they've been disappointed so many times," Jones said. "We'll have to reach the Super Bowl before anyone is satisfied."

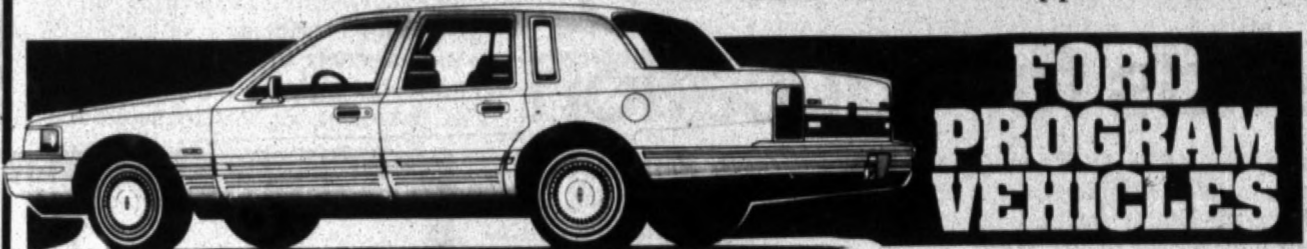

The Oilers were so convincing this year, with their 11-game winning streak, 12-4 record and their best chance of reaching the Super Bowl in years, that many fans ignored the warnings and believed.

A completely unscientific opinion here says there'll be even more fearful-of-believing fans next season. I can see the Oilers finally reaching the Super Bowl and some fans saying "No, we're afraid to believe."

Cowboys, 49ers meet once again for NFC title

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - In 1982, the San Francisco 49ers beat the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC title game, leaping over "America's Team" and into the NFL's elite. A year ago, the Cowboys returned the favor, jumping back over the 49ers to inherit the mantle of the team of the 1990s.

So there's a sense of history repeating itself in Sunday's 49ers-Cowboys game at Texas Stadium for yet another NFC title.

San Francisco has played in seven of these games during the Super Bowl era, including five times in the last six years.

Dallas has been in 11 title games, and between them the 49ers and Cowboys have represented the NFC 11 times in 27 Super Bowls, winning seven. Sunday's winner will be favored over either Kansas City or Buffalo to add another notch to the NFL's nine-game winning streak in the pro football's championship game.

In other words, we're not talking about the Cardinals, Bucs, Saints, Falcons or Lions here.

"I think the Cowboys and 49ers are two of the best teams in football," says Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, speaking not just for this season but for history. He can talk that way - his team won the last two meetings, 30-20 a year ago to win the NFC title, and 26-17 at Texas Stadium on Oct. 17.

And yet this is a peculiar game, probably because this has been a peculiar year in the NFL.

At various times, both San Francisco and Dallas have looked like the NFL's best team.

It was the 49ers' turn last week in their 44-3 demolition of the New York Giants, who two weeks before had forced the Cowboys into overtime to win the NFC East title.

"Last week, he abused us publicly and privately to motivate us," quarterback Steve Young said of the tactics coach George Seifert used to wake up the 49ers. "This week he's only abusing us privately."

At other times, both have looked ordinary or worse, as San Francisco did in losing three of its last four regular-season games and the Cowboys did during two two-game losing streaks and last week in plodding past Green Bay, 27-17.

But if nothing else, these are two of the league's best offenses in a season when scoring has been at a premium.

"Basically we're looking at a mirror image," says Emmitt Smith, the Dallas running back and league MVP who will play again with a right shoulder that was separated in that battle with the Giants on Jan. 2.

San Francisco scored more than 34 points in nine of its 17 games and has been over 40 points five times and 50 once. Yet it's only 11-6, largely because of that late-season slump after its playoff position had been determined.

Dallas, which is 13-4 including its playoff win, hasn't scored as much, but the potential is there. Quarterback Troy Aikman missed two and a half games with a pulled hamstring and Smith held out for two games, although he still won his third straight NFL rushing title.

But look at the offenses and you see the mirror.

The 49ers have perhaps the NFL's best offensive line with four past or present Pro Bowlers: tackles Harris Barton and Steve Wallace, guard Guy McIntyre and center Jesse Sapolu. Dallas, with tackle Erik Williams and guard Nate Newton, isn't far behind, although it's missing one of its stars, center Mark Stepanoski.

But the skill positions are even more similar:

- Smith at running back vs. San Francisco's Ricky Watters, who set a playoff record with five touchdowns against the Giants. Each is augmented by a blue-collar fullback who can catch, block and run if necessary - Tom Rathman of the 49ers and Daryl "Moose" Johnston of the Cowboys.

- Aikman, last year's Super Bowl MVP, at quarterback against Young, last year's league MVP and the NFL's passing leader the last two seasons. Young has the onus of still trying to escape the shadow of Joe Montana and win a conference title or Super Bowl.

- Jerry Rice of San Francisco, perhaps the best receiver of all-time, against Michael Irvin of Dallas, who's not far behind. They are augmented by two of the NFL's best No. 2 pass catchers - the 49ers' John Taylor and the Cowboys' Alvin Harper. Plus two tight ends who catch more than block - Brent Jones of San Francisco and Jay Novacek of Dallas, both No. 84 in your program.

The difference, if there is one, is on defense, where Dallas holds a decided edge on paper.

"Their defense," Seifert says of the Cowboys, "is the defense of the future, one that a lot of teams will model their defenses after."

Why? Linebackers Ken Norton, Darrin Smith and Dixon Edwards are easily the NFL's fastest unit.

There's more speed up front, particularly in ex-49er Charles Haley and Russell Maryland, both of whom enter this game banged up. Add Jim Jeffcoat, Tony Casillas, Jimmie Jones and the infamous Leon Lett, whose major gaffes in last year's Super Bowl and in the Thanksgiving Day loss to Miami overshadow immense talent that showed itself last week in the win over Green Bay.

San Francisco, on the other hand, gave up 4.5 yards per run this year, worst in the league, and their best lineman is Dana Stubblefield, the defensive rookie of the year. He's flanked on either side by two 300-plus pounders, Ted Washington and Dennis Brown, who have a lot of strength, but nothing like the speed of the Cowboys.

But especially in focus this week, as in most big games, is the quarterback.

Oddly enough, the 32-year-old Young has come out on the short end of comparisons to the 27-year-old Aikman. Until 1991, Young sat behind Montana, who won four Super Bowls for San Francisco. Although Montana is in Kansas City, he still remains closer to the hearts of Bay Area fans.

So Johnson, the ultimate psychologist, stoked the debate early in the week.

"With what Troy has accomplished, there's no lingering doubt in his mind of what he's capable of," Johnson said of Aikman. "Troy is confident he can do everything there is to accomplish as a quarterback. He doesn't have any doubts hanging over his head."

Johnson was asked if that means there are doubts about Young.

"I don't think Steve Young has won a Super Bowl, has he?" Johnson replied.

There also are questions about Smith, who injured his shoulder three weeks ago. Most doctors say such injuries normally take 4-6 weeks to heal and Smith showed the effects against Green Bay, sitting out much of the second half.

Johnson tried to put any doubts to rest by declaring early in the week:

"Emmitt will play and will not have a shoulder problem. I pronounce him healthy."

Seifert also said he believed Smith would be 100 percent and Smith followed suit. But asked if the injury taught him anything, he replied: "I shouldn't have come back into the game against the Giants."

That was the heroic performance that earned Smith the admiration of millions. If he had stayed out, the Cowboys probably would have lost the game, the division title, the week off to rest his shoulder, and the home field advantage for the playoffs.

Which means they probably would've been history.

HERD

sophomore scored nine of Hereford's 15 in the quarter.

"The first half by Heather Hodges was one of the best halves I've had a kid play," Fortenberry said.

Hodges outscored Pampa (eight points) in the quarter. Pampa hit an awkward three-pointer at the halftime buzzer to cut the Hereford lead to 35-14.

Hereford scored the first 10 points of the second half to make sure Pampa didn't get close. Hereford outscored Pampa 18-8 in the third quarter and 21-12 in the fourth.

Fortenberry pointed out that Pampa took away the posts in the second half, leaving guard Stephanie Wilcox open for 16 of her 19 points. Brittney Binder scored all of her seven in the second half.

Hodges totaled 11 points. Posts Mindi Davis and Misty Dudley scored nine and eight, respectively.

The Harvesters jumped all over the Herd boys in the first quarter and led 24-5 at the end of it. But the Herd was able to beat the suffocating Pampa press most of the time, and early mistakes by the Herd, including at least two blown layups, had Herd coach Randy Dean wondering "What if?"

"I think we were a little tight," Dean said. "We were playing hard. We were really battling with them, and we missed some good scoring opportunities that would have impacted on the game early."

"We really needed to play well early in the game and have good things happen to us. Just the opposite happened," Dean said, pointing out that the Herd missed the front end of one-and-ones six times in the first quarter alone.

Pampa scored the first 11 points of the second quarter to lead 35-5, but from that point on, Hereford gained ground slowly for the rest of the game. Pampa's starters stayed in the rotation for the entire game. Both teams provided several highlight-reel-type plays.

"Give our kids credit," Dean said. "They stayed after 'em."

Isaac Walker led Hereford with 25 points. Benton Buckley added 14 points and Cody Marion chipped in 13. Pampa's Coy Laury led all scorers with 30.

Pampa's girls program is struggling. It doesn't have enough players left to field a junior varsity team.

"They're struggling, but they managed to beat Caprock and score 58 points," Fortenberry said.

That Caprock team, as well as the Caprock boys, are coming to Hereford Tuesday.

There was no girls' JV game or sophomore boys game played Friday. The only sub-varsity game on the card was the boys' JV, which Hereford lost 53-46.

Johnathan Keenan led Hereford with 13 points, draining four three-pointers. Todd Dudley added 10 points.

Pro Football Hall of Famer Mel Hein played center on offense and linebacker on defense for the New York Giants.

Canseco enters 1994 season with new attitude

By GERRY FRALEY
The Dallas Morning News
 MIAMI (AP) - It was late afternoon in paradise. As residents of the affluent Cocoplum section pondered where next - the beach? the shops? the boat? - Jose Canseco drove away from his pastel mansion.

"Time to go to work," Canseco said.
 As has been the case in this exile from baseball, Canseco kept his word. An hour later, at the University of Miami, Canseco had his repaired right elbow twisted and turned in strengthening exercises, played catch at distances of up to 120 feet despite a shower that arose suddenly and lowered himself into a mud puddle to get a wild throw that had bounced under his car.

Later in the evening, Canseco attacked the weight room. He did everything with a studiousness that has replaced his swaggering I-can-do-anything air. There is no swagger.

"I'd heard all the stories about him and didn't know how hard he'd want to work," said Lazer Collazo, the University of Miami pitching coach whom Canseco hired to help with baseball workouts this winter. "He's been amazing. He's out there all the time, and he's serious about it. He wants to be a great player again."

Canseco's diligence in the lap of luxury hints at an intriguing development for the Rangers. They base their planning for this season on having Canseco sufficiently recovered from last July's elbow surgery to be the full-time designated hitter.

His off-season work suggests the Rangers could have Canseco physically sound and mentally fit after a two-year, divorce-driven funk that caused him to take counseling for depression-like symptoms.

"The last two years, I really don't think people realize I have been injured," Canseco said. "A lot of the injury was psychological, because I went through a divorce. Anyone who's gone through a divorce knows it's very painful. Mentally, it probably drained me as much as anything physically."

"It was like a low time in my life when I didn't think I wanted to continue to play baseball."

Canseco's career struck bottom last year. His noteworthy moments came during a four-day span in May in which he headed a fly ball over the right-field fence in Cleveland for a home run and injured his right elbow in a disastrous pitching appearance at Boston.

Ending a season in which he had become a laughingstock, Canseco underwent ligament-reconstruction surgery on the right elbow last July. According to his physical therapist, Canseco is ahead of schedule in his rehabilitation. Canseco, who takes soft-toss batting practice at the UM cages, said he is "100 percent" for hitting and will be ready for the regular season.

"I've come a long ways," Canseco said.

Back and shoulder ailments, which limited him before the elbow injury, also have improved, Canseco said. He made a similar claim before last season and appeared in only 60 games. The difference, Canseco said, is he has come out of a two-year mental funk.

"Mentally and physically, I deteriorated the last two years," he said. "Now, I feel like I'm more on the upswing. Before, I felt like everything was going downhill. It wasn't because I didn't love the game; I do. There was an overwhelming force, which is probably depression."

"I've always considered myself mentally strong. But when something as overwhelming as this happens, it's tough. It took me a long time to understand what it was."

The cause, Canseco said, was the end of his stormy marriage to Esther Haddad.

Canseco married the daughter of his junior high baseball coach after the 1988 season, when he became the first player in history to have 40 home runs and 40 stolen bases in the same season. Divorce proceedings began before the 1992 season and ended in a Florida court in November 1992.

In 1991, Canseco had 44 homers and 122 RBIs with Oakland. In 1992, as the divorce took shape, Canseco had 26 homers and 87 RBIs and was traded from Oakland to the Rangers. In 1992-93, Canseco missed nearly as many games (145) as he played in (179).

Oakland manager Tony La Russa blasted Canseco for a lack of dedication to the game. Speaking in Sports Illustrated, Hall of Famer Reggie Jackson said Canseco is "done. His career will never be same, but he didn't take baseball seriously anyway."

"He was right at the time," Canseco said of Jackson's comment. "I think maybe he knew what the divorce had taken out of me. It wasn't that everything was all right in my life and I didn't enjoy baseball anymore. Something was distracting me away from the game of baseball.

"Reggie was 100 percent right in the sense the divorce was so overwhelming it took my identity away. It took my want, the eye of the tiger to play the game as hard as I could."

"It was terrible. At one point, it was not fun to live. That's how bad it got."

Canseco agonizing over a divorce does not square with his public image of a womanizer who has been in the company of high-profile entertainer Madonna. As with many things about Canseco, there is a difference between the reality and the mystique.

Canseco has said he is more comfortable in his friendships with women. His actions indicate he functions well in a matriarchal environment and values the input of women. He has a female attorney, Claire Thacher; a female physical therapist, Beatriz Navarro; and a female tutor for his running work, Amy Deem, who coaches the UM women's track team.

When Canseco considered doing a biography three years ago, he wanted a female co-author. A female housekeeper dotes over Canseco and makes sure he has eaten lunch before leaving home. Thacher's scolding prompted Canseco to add coaches and take his rehabilitation work beyond weight-lifting this winter.

According to court testimony, a Chicago nightclub incident involving Canseco in 1992 began when he shielded a woman from an abusive male. Assault charges against Canseco were readily dismissed in court.

"I was really surprised when he asked to work with me," said Deem, instructing Canseco on how to improve his sprinting form and increase his speed. "I wondered if he'd have trouble taking coaching from a woman. But he's been wonderful to work with: He shows a great deal of respect."

Canseco's view stems from the strong relationship he had with his late mother, Barbara. When she died of a brain hemorrhage in 1984, Canseco's grief was so deep he left his team in the Oakland organization for a month. The divorce, friends indicated, likely represented the wrenching removal of another close female in Canseco's life.

"He took the divorce very hard," Thacher said. "After the turmoil Jose has gone through in his life the last couple of years, you can see a big difference in him. Nobody wants to be injured, but the time away from the game may have been the best thing for him, because it allowed him to get his life in order."

Of six major league scouts polled recently, none listed Canseco among the game's elite players. He turns 30 years old on July 2 and must play well to earn another contract in what should be the prime of his career. Canseco's current deal with the Rangers expires after the 1995 season.

Canseco is not even the lead player on his own team. Home-run champion Juan Gonzalez will bat in the glamour position of fourth. Newcomer Will Clark will hit third. Canseco's spot much of his career. Canseco will drop to the complementary role of batting fifth.

"In the next two years, I'm going to have to prove it," Canseco said. "I'm going to have to establish myself again as one of the best all-around players. I know I have to do that, because I haven't had a good year for a while."

"The key for me is to be mentally prepared, to be into the game of baseball itself. For the last two years, I really haven't been into it ... I haven't had the attention toward it I'd like to have, but how I'm going back to that."

For all his troubles, Canseco had intriguing numbers last season. In 60 games, he had 10 homers and 46 RBIs. That is a 27-homer, 124-RBIs pace for a full season. Canseco has played what amounted to a full season once in the last five years: producing 44 homers and 122 RBIs in 1991. That "was a long time ago," Canseco said.

In the Miami rain, he tries to find the way back.

OILERS

The trauma this year was exceptionally severe because the Oilers disappointed an entire state. Texans wanted to see their two pro football teams fight for the Super Bowl crown.

What theater it would have made with the Cowboys trying to defend their Super Bowl XXVII title and the Oilers, having reached the big game despite overcoming a lifetime of controversy crammed into one season.

It was not to be. Status quo prevails.

The Cowboys have three victories in six Super Bowl appearances and a 25-17 playoff record. The Oilers are 9-13 in post-season games.

More Houston fans might have insulated themselves with the fear of believing if they had reviewed their heroes' history.

The Cowboys won the Super Bowl for the first time in 1971, beating Miami 24-3. That was the year the Oilers went 4-9-1 in Ed Hughes' one year as coach. His tenure ended, in part, because he refused to fire an equipment manager.

See, the Oilers had soap opera tendencies even then.

After the Cowboys beat Denver in Super Bowl XII (1977) and lost to Pittsburgh in Super Bowl XIII, the Oilers approached equal marquee status with the Cowboys.

They had retooled under Bum Phillips and in 1978 and 1979 reached the AFC title games in the midst of the Earl Campbell era. Believing was at its height.

That's when Bum started the nickname war with the Cowboys, then called America's Team, by declaring: "The Cowboys may be America's Team but the Oilers' are Texas' team."

The Cowboys were sleek, urban and symbolized by Tom Landry in his finest fedora and GQ-quality suit. The real cowboys played for the Oilers, a cast of characters led by the countrified Phillips and his Stetson-wearing, tobacco-chewing players.

The Oilers had their fights back then, too, but they weren't among the coaches.

Quarterback Dan Pastorini punched a sports writer prior to a playoff game and it was captured on film and replayed nationally, just as Buddy Ryan's blow to Kevin Gilbride.

The Oilers were out of the playoffs from 1981 until their seven-year streak started in 1987 under Jerry Glanville. Jack Pardee continued the playoff string, but with no greater playoff success.

Montana did the Oilers in this year, following a well-rehearsed script provided by John Elway and Frank Reich before him: let the Oilers get ahead and then shell-shock them in the second half.

The fans should have known better than to believe, but many did and suffered the consequences.

Now, despite my best efforts to warn Oilers fans of this insidious malady in their midst, my concern is their awareness will have subsided when the Oilers reassemble at training camp at San Antonio in mid-July.

It's a fact that fear of believing seldom lasts longer than an off-season. By July, the believers will be back.

WOULD YOUR KITCHEN
PASS A HEALTH INSPECTION?

With the increasing emphasis on the importance of handling food safely to prevent foodborne illness, consumers may want to ask themselves "would my kitchen pass a health inspection?"

To answer this question, check for these standards in your kitchen:

-Does your refrigerator maintain a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit or below and the freezer 0 degrees F. or below? The only way to verify this is to use an appliance thermometer.

-Are the contents of the refrigerator arranged so that cold air can circulate freely throughout? Are most perishable foods such as eggs, milk, meat, poultry, fish and other protein foods stored in the coldest areas of the refrigerator, never on the door? Eggs should be stored in the original carton.

-Are foods covered or wrapped securely? Bacteria in the air and from uncooked meats or their juices can settle and grow on foods.

-Is the refrigerator reasonably clean? Bacteria from bits of food on shelves can contaminate other foods.

-In the pantry, are foods stored in tightly closed containers and is the pantry area clean and preferably in a cool, dry, dark location? Foods that are stored in dampness, such as under the sink or close to heat, such as over the range, deteriorate much more rapidly.

-Are cleaning supplies stored out of reach of children?

-Are work surfaces, the skin, utensils and appliances kept clean? Do you have separate cutting boards for raw meats and foods that are not to be cooked such as vegetables? Bacteria from juices of raw meat can collect in cutting boards and contaminate other foods. Are these boards clean and do you sanitize them? Other appliances are equipment to check for cleanliness are the can opener, the blender and any others that can hold food particles in tiny cracks or crevices.

-Is hand washing convenient and so you have paper towels to dry hands on? Cloth towels can harbor bacteria. They need to be washed frequently.

-Is the oven reasonably clean and is there an oven thermometer to check for accurate oven temperatures?

-Is the dishwasher free of food particles that could feed bacteria or insects?

By following these clean kitchen standards and safe food handling practices, you can help protect your family from the consequences of foodborne illness.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Local Hospice volunteers discuss upcoming events

The local chapter of the Crown of Texas Hospice recently met in the Fellowship of Believers Church.

Those present were Kathryn Acton, Mona Romero, Loretta Urbanczyk, Diana Cabezuola, Irene Reinart and Ann Meyer.

Acton reported that in 1993, the Hereford branch of the Crown of Texas Hospice provided care for 25 families. There are patients enrolled in the program from Hereford, Friona and Dimmitt.

It was announced that the Hospice is in need of wide-mouth flower vases. The vases can be delivered to the Hospice office located inside the In-Sight Books office at 805 Main St.

It was also noted during the meeting that the Hereford Care Center and Crown of Texas Hospice delivered canned food during the holidays to needed families in the Hereford vicinity.

Plans are underway for the annual Spring VFW Golf Tournament which is a joint effort of VFW and Crown of Texas Hospice volunteers.

Those present discussed the Crown of Texas Hospice Volunteer Training Session which will be offered Jan. 25 through Feb. 24 each Tuesday and Thursday from 6-7 p.m. at the Crown of Texas Hospice Training Room located at 1000 S. Jefferson in Amarillo. Interested persons may call 1-800-572-6365 or 1-372-7696.

The next local Hospice meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m. Feb. 1 in the Fellowship of Believers Church. This group meets on the first Tuesday of each month.

If you think the world grows colder as you grow older, you're right--sort of. According to the American Medical Association, the aging body becomes progressively less able to maintain an even temperature when subject to external cold. In addition, the body mechanism that normally detects a drop in external temperature begins to lose its sensitivity as you age. As a result, some older people don't realize they are becoming chilled and may suffer from hypothermia.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to the negative letters you printed about hospitals and nurses.

My lover of 16 years recently died of AIDS. From the time he was diagnosed until the day he died, everyone was very supportive. I can't say enough about the nurses who were involved in "John's" care. They helped me come to grips with his impending death and also my own HIV-positive status. I especially appreciated the care John received at home from his visiting nurses. Those women were extremely competent, always cheerful and a pleasure to have around.

They treated John with respect and made it possible for him to die with dignity at home, surrounded by friends and family. My hat is off to nurses everywhere who give of themselves so generously and help make dying easier. -- Roger in L.A.

DEAR L.A.: Your beautiful letter was one of thousands I received in support of nurses. For more, read on.

From Illinois: Nurses, like everyone else, have different levels of competence, but most of us chose this field because we want to serve humankind. I can still remember my first experience with death--the screams from a young man when he was informed that his wife had died in childbirth. Another time, I managed to maintain my composure when a child died of leukemia, but I've never forgotten him.

Nurses must somehow shield themselves from some of the pain of death and suffering. They may sometimes come across as tough and insensitive, but please understand their need to protect themselves.

West Palm Beach, Fla.: My wife, an intensive-care nurse, has cared for hundreds of patients in her 10-year nursing career. Some of her horror stories have made my hair stand on end.

A mother once sent her child to the hospital in a taxi. The child arrived at the emergency room alone and had to have an emergency appendectomy. My wife had to telephone the police to locate the mother. She practically had to ORDER her to come to the hospital.

Another youngster who had been accidentally shot by a playmate died on Christmas Eve. My wife phoned the family and asked if they would come and say their last goodbyes before the little girl was removed from life support. The response was, "Nobody wants to go. It would be too depressing." My wife sang Christmas carols to that child as she prepared her for the morgue.

Another family had a child who had been hit by a car and was severely injured. The family rarely came to visit. His hospitalization was expensive, and the family was evicted from their rental apartment. A local minister heard of their plight and gave them a roof over their heads and food for the table. The family begged for help on the TV news. Money poured in, and they bought a Corvette.

As with any profession, there are incompetents in nursing. But I would challenge ANY individual to do what the average intensive-care nurse or emergency-room nurse does in those 12-hour shifts. I could not do it. They deal with death on a daily basis and are genuine heroines in my book. --Randy

DEAR RANDY: We must be reading the same book. I, too, consider nurses genuine heroes and heroines. I could never do what they do. God bless them.

Is life passing you by? Want to improve your social skills? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.15 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As you know, we at The Living Bank were deeply concerned about the misinformation that spread across the country when a mother in Florida was mistakenly billed $41,000 when she donated her son's organs for transplantation.

When that story was first published, we received many angry letters, torn-up donor cards and nasty phone calls and had no idea what was prompting such sudden negative reaction. But after you printed a column setting the record straight, we began getting calls saying, "Please reinstate me because Ann Landers has printed the truth."

What a wonderful belated Christmas present to all 32,000-plus Americans awaiting the gift of life. If it had not been for you, this miracle would not have happened.

All of the organ and tissue donation and transplantation community, and all those awaiting organ transplantation and their families, owe you a debt of gratitude. We thank you from the bottom of our hearts. --Bruce B. Conway, president and CEO, The Living Bank, Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265.

DEAR BRUCE CONWAY: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to tell my readers once again: Families of those who carry donor cards are NEVER charged. So, folks, if you're ripped up yours, send for another one promptly. It's the greatest gift you will ever give.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently responded to a mother whose young child had been burned by an adult's cigarette. Please tell your readers not to smoke in front of children.

Secondhand smoke is a serious health risk to the developing lungs of young children. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that secondhand smoke is responsible for 150,000 to 300,000 respiratory infections annually in children under 18 months of age. As many as 1 million asthmatic children are made sicker by exposure to secondhand smoke. It also causes children to develop asthma.

The EPA's advice is simple--if you choose to smoke, don't smoke around children. If you are expecting a child, quit smoking. --Carol M. Browner, administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C.

DEAR CAROL: Here it is--and thank you for all the little people you helped today.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to comment on the letter about people who pretended to be injured in a bus crash so they could sue the transit company. To quote Edmund Burke, "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing."

You recommended self-policing of the medical and legal professions as a way to discourage this kind of fraud, but this will not mean much if honest individuals stand by silently and do nothing. Witnesses must contact the authorities at once and volunteer to testify.

I was a witness to a similar incident and am scheduled to testify in court later this month. The inconvenience is heavily outweighed by the satisfaction of knowing that I am doing the right thing. I view this as an opportunity to set a good example for my children by acting on my convictions.

If you print this letter, you may use my name. --Mike Fossum, Texas

DEAR MIKE: Thank you for pointing out that being passive and silent in the face of wrongdoing gives criminality a boost.

Between The Covers

By JOE WEAVER

"We farmers are very slow to realize that we are a class by ourselves. The bankers are organized, even internationally, as a class; merchants, both wholesale and retail, are organized and working in a body for the interests of merchants; labor, except that of the farmer...is very much organized; and yet many farmers are still contending as individuals against these huge organizations. We are slow to organize and to work together for our mutual interests."

The latest issue of Progressive Farmer or New Farm magazine? Maybe a statement by a politician from a farm community hoping to get elected this fall? Hardly. The quote is from a 52-year-old farm wife in a newspaper column of 1919--a full 13 years before she published Little House in The Big Woods followed by the other "Little House" books. Little House in the Ozarks is a collection of newspaper articles written by Laura Ingalls Wilder as she and Almanzo scratched out a living near Branson, Missouri. (Wouldn't you love to show her the town, now!) We have had the book for a while, but as I was scanning it the other day, I was impressed by the relevance of many of her comments.

It's official! Our video projector is now available for use by your organization either here in the library or at your own meeting place. The machine accepts almost any VCR and will project any VHS video image up to six feet wide. I hope I never have to go to another meeting where two dozen or more people are trying to watch (and pretend interest in) a video from 20 feet away on a typical portable TV. Thanks to all of you who came to our unveiling last Monday evening, and special thanks to all of you who contributed to the Friends of the Library for this project.

Well, it's been a while since we've played the "favorite book" game. I was honored to be the last official speaker for the year at the Hereford Lion's Club, so I asked those characters to share with me their favorite book or author. (I always disqualify the Bible, because so many will mention it, but it looks like I need not have worried with this bunch). There were one or two "intellectual" preferences (Paul Mason chose Atlas Shrugged, Beryl Fish, Search for Meaning); some chose self-improvement types (Speedy Nieman likes Og Mandino and Sid Shaw chose Dale Carnegie); and Game Warden Jerry Stucki likes to read the Parks and Wildlife Code. Dan Hall and Glen Nelson selected Rush Limbaugh as their favorite author, and most of the rest chose a variety of popular fiction writers--L'Amour, Clancy, Michener, McMurty, Grisham and a smattering of others. A word to the wise, guys (or is that "wiseguys"?--try Elmer Kelton.

Probably the most important book going out this week is Having Our Say. This is the story of the Delany sisters, now over a hundred years old. Sadie and Bessie were born to parents who had been slaves (their ancestry is a story in itself), and maintain that their longevity is due to never having married. These are two remarkable, yet very different women who have opinions on everything (Don't they all?).

Make plans now to attend the Friends of the Library Open House on February 24. That's a little earlier than usual, but President Bobby Boyd promises a good program by Panhandle newsman and a historian Bob Lizzard.

HHS graduate is honored at university

Lindsay worked at The Hereford Brand during the summer of 1993.

The talented student graduated seventh in her HHS class and graduated in the top five percent of her class. She was the 1992 recipient of the Panhandle Press Scholarship.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to Ronny Sanders for teaching an instructor class for CPR and first aid. Congratulations and special thanks to all of the volunteers taking the class.

Special thanks also goes to all of the United Way volunteers for their effort in fund raising.

As part of its charter from the U. S. Congress, the Red Cross is always standing by to help meet the unique needs of the nation's defense team.

It meets those needs by communicating with the folks back home, by providing special financial assistance during emergencies, by referring people with problems to the experts who can help them and by finding volunteers to provide service in so many aspects of military life.

Our chapter has round-the-clock volunteers to help with emergencies. After hours, call the office at 364-3761. The answering machine will give a telephone number for the pager and the phone numbers of the volunteers doing the duty work.

Create your job security

An increasing number of Americans are creating their own job security by buying a franchise and working for themselves. A recent study indicates that franchising, a leading method of doing business, is continuing to grow throughout the 1990s.

What should you consider before buying a franchise?

Before selecting a franchise the International Franchise Association recommends these points for investigation:

-Who the franchisor is, what its track record has been, and the business experience of the officers and directors of the company.

-Get a copy of the Uniform Franchise Offering Circular (UFOC). All franchisors are required by the FTC to file this disclosure document listing rebuired feeds, basic investment, bankruptcy and litigation history of the company, how long the franchise will be in effect, a financial statement of the franchisor, and earnings claims.

-Be wary of any company which "guarantees" profit. In general, an offer that sounds too good to be true, probably is.

-Ask an attorney and accountant to review all relevant information before you sign anything. You may consider finding an attorney who specializes in franchising.

The U.S. Department of Commerce and the Small Business Administration strongly recommend that prospective franchisees inquire if a company is a member of the IFA. In order to maintain member status, a company must have a satisfactory financial condition and must comply with all applicable franchise laws. In addition, member companies must abide by the IFA Code of Ethics. What does this mean to the franchisee? This protects the franchisees by ensuring that their franchisors are complying with every change in franchising laws. These businesses are also committed to success, both in the marketplace and with their franchisees.

Franchising can be a great way to be in business for yourself but not by yourself. While there are more than 5,000 excellent and exciting franchise opportunities, the IFA always encourages you to "investigate before investing."

— YOUR EYES —

BABY LEARNS TO SEE

Babies can see almost a birth, but it takes a while for them to learn how to do it right. At first, a baby may use one eye at a time -- or both, each looking at a different object. It may be a month before the infant is able to direct both eyes at the same object.

At first they focus on objects that are close, actually moving the head to follow movement. Eventually, the child learns to move the eyes as a team instead of moving the head. By a year, binocular vision should be pretty well established; neither eye should be wandering in, out, up or down by itself.

To "exercise" those new eye muscles, many parents provide a mobile above a crib, or soft toys that can reach for. Every time you bring the baby to another room, or outdoors, you provide it with more to look at.

If either eye seems to wander after a year, see your eye professional promptly. Early treatment is most effective.

Keep children safe, happy

Keeping children safe and healthy is a year-round priority for every parent. Yet, every day, many parents unwittingly put their children at risk by using child car seats incorrectly or not at all.

To ensure the safety of your young children this winter and throughout the year, keep them buckled into certified child car seats while traveling in the car. Each year, motor vehicle crashes kill about 650 children under the age of 4 and injure almost 50,000 others. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, as many as 455 deaths and 49,000 injuries could be prevented each year if all children under the age of 4 were properly secured in child car seats.

Dr. Mark Widome, professor of pediatrics at The Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine, says, "Winter creates several variables like cold weather, poor visibility and ice that can make even the shortest car trip potentially dangerous. But, at anytime of year, if there is any one thing a parent can do to add to a child's safety during the first few years, it is to put him or her in a child car seat when traveling in a car."

The message is clear: If you have a child under the age of 4, you need a child car seat.

Bride-elect honored

La Plata Study Club visits Shirley School

David Fanning, principal of Shirley Elementary School, and Merlee McWethy, teacher, presented a program to members of the La Plata Study Club when the group met at the school Jan. 18.

Shirley School is one of 83 in the state involved in a unique partnership program where children become inspired learners and are accountable for their own intellectual growth. They learn to be productive workers, working collaboratively to become responsible citizens and resourceful thinkers.

Students accumulate a portfolio which replaces a report card. They learn how the different subjects relate to each other and their learning skills in elementary school will carry them through high school and college preparing them for the work day world.

Refreshments were served by

Clara Brown and Mildred Fuhrmann to Audine Dettman, Nelda Fortenberry, Ludie Greeson, Betty Mercer, Dorothy Mercer, Lois Mitchell, Mozelle Neill, Dorothea Prowell, Margaret Schroeter, Yvonne Simpson, Betty Taylor and Avis White.

Early detection is a significant factor in the effective treatment of breast cancer. But new studies suggest that women may be able to reduce their breast cancer risk. Research indicates that breast cancer may be linked to a woman's lifetime exposure to reproductive hormones, especially estrogen.

Deficit reduction plan may mean good tax news

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Millions of people may be pleasantly surprised when they start work on their 1993 federal tax returns. Last year's big deficit-reduction plan didn't raise their income taxes at all.

The new law, in fact, raises income-tax rates only on the wealthiest 2 percent of couples and individuals. That increase applies retroactively to Jan. 1, 1993, meaning it must be calculated on returns due April 15. But any 1993 tax increase caused by the higher rates may be paid in three annual installments.

The law also will require the 13 percent of Social Security beneficiaries with the highest incomes to pay tax on a bigger share of their benefits. But that change was not retroactive; it took effect Jan. 1, 1994, and will be reflected on returns filed a year from now.

The limited scope of these increases was well known in Washington when they were enacted last August. But months later, opinion polls still found as many as three-fourths of those surveyed were convinced their taxes had been raised.

In fact, for the vast majority of people the only filing changes this year are designed to actually reduce the tax burden by "indexing" the system against inflation. This results in a smaller share of income being taxed at higher rates, a bigger personal exemption and a larger standard deduction.

Highlights of the changes:

EXEMPTIONS: For each exemption a taxpayer is allowed to subtract $2,350 (up from $2,300 last year) from income subject to taxation. In most cases, a taxpayer is allowed an exemption for himself or herself, any spouse and each dependent.

Higher-income people - including couples with adjusted gross income of $162,700 or more and singles over $108,450 and up - lose part or all of their exemptions. They claim them as usual on the front of Form 1040 but then they will have to figure out how much they give back. A couple filing a joint return gets no exemption once income exceeds $285,200; for a single person, the cutoff is $230,950.

STANDARD DEDUCTIONS: About 72 percent of taxpayers do not itemize deductions and are allowed a standard deduction instead. For a single person, the deduction generally is $3,700; for a couple filing a joint return it is $6,200. Deductions can be smaller for dependents and larger for those 65 or older or blind.

TAX RATES: A year ago, there were three tax rates - 15 percent, 28 percent and 31 percent - applying to most income. Now there are two more: 36 percent and 39.6 percent; they hit only single people earning more than about $140,000 and couples above about $180,000.

For a single person, the first $22,100 of taxable income - what is left after subtracting exemptions and deductions - is taxed at 15 percent. The next $31,400 is taxed at 28 percent; the next $61,500 at 31 percent; the next $135,000 at 36 percent, and everything over $250,000 is taxed at 39.6 percent.

The first $36,900 of a couple's taxable income on a joint return is taxed at 15 percent; the next $52,250 at 28 percent; the next $50,850 at 31 percent; the next $110,000 at 36 percent, and everything over $250,000 at 39.6 percent.

Investment income that qualifies as capital gains is still taxed at 15 percent or 28 percent - no higher.

ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS: The deductions permitted last year are still around. But couples and individuals with adjusted gross income over $108,450 may have to give up part of some deductions. The limitation applies to all deductions except those for medical expenses, casualty losses, investment interest and gambling losses.

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT: The new law expanded and simplified considerably this benefit for low-income working families. The credit can reduce taxes by as much as $2,364 if all qualifications are met. At least a part of the credit generally is available to families with one or more children and earned income - wages, tips and the like - of under $23,050. The basic credit declines once income reaches $12,200.

EXPIRED PROVISIONS: The new law restored several targeted tax breaks that had expired June 30, 1992. They include a 25 percent deduction for health insurance costs of self-employed people and tax-free treatment of some employer-paid assistance for workers to continue their education.

401(k) PLANS: The maximum amount of income that could be contributed to these employer-sponsored retirement accounts and simplified employee pension plans in 1993 was raised to $8,994.

MILEAGE: The deduction for use of a personal car for business is 28 cents per mile. The mileage deduction for charitable purposes remains at 12 cents and for medical purposes at 9 cents a mile.

CAMPAIGN CHECKOFF: The presidential-campaign checkoff has been tripled to $3 per person and $6 per couple.

Guidelines show who must submit federal income tax

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - If your income is within certain limits, you can avoid one of life's unpleasant chores: filing a tax return. But it may be to your advantage to file anyway.

Whether a return is required depends on income and filing status - single, couple filing jointly, head of household, for example. You generally must file if your 1993 income was more than the sum of the personal exemption - $2,350 for one person or $4,700 for a couple filing jointly - and the standard deduction.

For example, a couple under 65 would have to file if income was $10,900 or more. For a single person under 65, the threshold is $6,050. Different rules apply to the blind, older people, and anyone who can be claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer.

Even if income was lower than those thresholds, filing may be a good idea. For example, the earned-income credit is of considerable benefit to working families with children and income under $23,050, but it can be claimed only if a return is filed. Even workers who do not qualify for the credit will need to file to get a refund of any income taxes withheld from their wages.

On the other hand, some people are required to file even if their incomes are below the usual thresholds.

These include anyone who netted at least $400 from self-employment last year; owes any special tax, such as tax on a premature withdrawal from an Individual Retirement Account, or received advanced earned-income-credit payments from an employer.

Here are the basic filing thresholds for each type of return:

SINGLE: A person who was under age 65 on Dec. 31, 1993, must file if gross income was $6,050 or more. For a person 65 or older, the threshold is $6,950.

MARRIED, FILING JOINTLY: For two spouses under age 65, a return must be filed if income was $10,900 or more. If one spouse is 65 or older, the threshold is $11,600; if both are at least 65, it is $12,300.

MARRIED, FILING SEPARATELY: File if income was $2,350 or more.

HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD: If you were under 65 at year-end, you must file if income was at least $7,800. If you were older, the threshold is $8,700.

A head of household pays a lower tax rate than a single person. To qualify, you must have been unmarried on Dec. 31, 1993, and paid more than half the cost of maintaining the principal home in which you lived with a qualified relative for more than half the year. That includes a child, or a dependent grandchild, parent, grandparent, aunt, uncle, niece, nephew or most in-laws but not a cousin. Your parent need not live with you but any other relative must.

QUALIFYING WIDOW OR WIDOWER: File if you were under 65 at year-end and income was $8,550 or more. If you were 65 or older, the threshold is $9,250. This filing status allows you to save money by using joint-return tax rates. If your spouse died in 1991 or 1992 and you had not remarried by the end of 1993, you may file as a qualifying widow if:

- You paid over half the cost of maintaining for all of 1993 the principal home for a child you were eligible to claim as a dependent, and
- You were entitled to file a joint return the year your spouse died.

You may file a joint return if your spouse died in 1993 and you did not remarry during the year. The same is true if your spouse died in 1994 before filing a return.

DEPENDENTS: The rules change if you can be claimed as a dependent by a parent, a relative or anyone else. You must file if:

- Under 65, earnings - wages, tips and the like - exceeded $3,700 ($3,100 if married), and unearned income, such as interest and dividends, was zero.

- Under 65, married or single, total income was over $600 and you had at least $1 of unearned income.

- Single and 65 or older, earned income exceeded $4,600, OR unearned income exceeded $1,500. There is a third test: Add $900 plus whichever is larger: $600 OR your earned income (up to $3,700). You must file if total income is bigger than that sum.

- Married and under 65, earned income exceeded $3,100, OR if gross income was more than $600 and you had $1 or more unearned income.

- Married and 65 or older and had earned income over $3,800, OR unearned income exceeded $1,300.

Food export rise reported

WASHINGTON (AP) - The first 10 months of 1993 saw a modest climb in U.S. consumer food exports from the year before, the Agriculture Department says.

The United States exported $12.2 billion in consumer food products, a six percent rise over the same period in 1992. Exports in October 1993 were $1.4 million, about the same as the October before.

The gains in exports have been broad-based, with pet foods, breakfast cereals and snack foods climbing rapidly on a percentage basis, USDA said. Poultry and fresh fruit also saw big rises in dollar amount of sales. Snack foods and pet food exports both rose around 20 percent in October from a year earlier.

Dairy exports fell the most, down 36 percent from October 1992. But comparing the first 10 months of 1993 with 1992, dairy sales overseas were up 6 percent.

- ◆ Convenience store sales had more than doubled, from $18.9 billion in 1980 to $41 billion in 1989.
- ◆ By 1988, 61 percent of U.S. households had microwave ovens.

FmHA announces revamped procedures in county offices

Farmers seeking assistance from the Farmers Home Administration will find a new procedure in place, announced the state FmHA director, George Ellis.

"I have taken action to delegate the full loan approval authority allowed under the federal regulations to FmHA county offices," he said. He called the new system "a breath of fresh air" for farmers.

The action means that FmHA supervisors at the county level will be able to exercise loan approval authority up to the full county limit without prior reviews being required at other locations or even by FmHA officials at the same location.

"As this new year begins, I feel this will be a real help to our farm customers, and I intend to pursue this type of change in the future, wherever I can," Ellis said.

In the past, FmHA county supervisors were subject to a complicated system of reviews and re-reviews of loan applications in order to approve an FmHA loan. This system was instituted several years ago in order to insure fewer mistakes and more uniformity from county to county.

"I still intend to hold FmHA supervisors to the same high standards as in the past, however I am also dedicated to streamlining the process so that our farm customers will have funds available to them at the time they are needed," he said.

Farmers Home Administration, as an Equal Opportunity Lender, makes loans or grants to individuals or groups and guarantees to approved lenders without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, familial status and handicap.

More farmers seek other income sources

Changes in agriculture send producers into extra work

WASHINGTON (AP) - Reflecting changes in the U.S. farm industry, the Agriculture Department says more of the nation's farmers are relying on outside income to survive.

Farming households received up to 80 percent of their average 1992 income from wages, salaries and businesses outside their farm operation, said a recent USDA report.

Even those running the largest commercial farms - defined as requiring substantial amounts of the operator's time and earning at least $250,000 in gross sales - received one-third of their household income from outside sources, according to the 1992 Farm Costs and Returns Survey.

The report, based on preliminary estimates of farm operator income, said the average farm income in 1992 was $40,068, with only 30 percent earning above-average wages.

USDA has begun to keep statistics on farm household income as well as income to the farm operation under Secretary Mike Espy. This report is the first to specifically examine farmers' dependence on outside income.

Cotton crop fails to meet expectation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1993 U.S. cotton crop is now estimated at 16.2 million bales, down from last August's forecast of 18.5 million bales, which would have been the second-largest crop on record.

"Weather and insect problems, primarily in the (Mississippi) Delta and Southwest, dramatically reduced yields and the crop potential," the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service said in a recent report.

The national average yield, the lowest since 1986, is estimated at 607 pounds per harvested acre, compared with the August forecast of 668 pounds.

Since August, harvested area has declined nearly 630,000 acres to 12.8 million, with most of the drop occurring in Texas.

The report said production in the Delta region now is forecast at 4.7 million bales, compared with 6.4 million last August. It said yield estimates in Arkansas and Missouri have declined by more than 200 pounds per harvested acre since summer.

"Current yield projections are the lowest in 10 years for both states," the report said.

The Mississippi yield is forecast at 576 pounds per harvested acre, down 153 pounds from August and the lowest since 1986.

"In the Southwest, production is expected to total 5.4 million bales, up 54 percent from last season's weather-reduced crop, but nearly 760,000 bales below earlier indications," the report said.

Upland prices received by farmers continued higher through mid-December, averaging 56.1 cents per pound. This compares with 53.7 cents in November and 54.3 cents in December 1992.

"If the mid-month average holds, it would be the highest in nine months," the report noted. "Likewise, spot prices for base quality upland cotton moved above 60 cents for the first time since July 1992. During December, spot prices reached 60.29 cents."

Turning to the foreign situation, the report said "due to the continued deterioration in the outlook for Pakistan's 1993-94 crop, foreign production and use fell."

Foreign 1993-94 production is forecast at 64.2 million bales, down about 700,000 bales from December, while foreign consumption is forecast at 75.4 million bales, down only about 200,000 bales.

Market grows for sorghums

Positive results of research on the use of grain sorghums in dairy cattle feeding has provided producers with an expanding market.

Tim Lust, director of marketing research for the National Grain Sorghum Producers, has reported that there is more demand for sorghums than farmers can supply.

"Dairy producers in particular are demanding more sorghum," he said. "Recent dairy research has shown that feeding grain sorghum to high-producing dairy cows can increase milk protein, and, with a protein-pricing system for milk, that means more money in the dairy producer's pocket."

Dairy trial have proven that steam-flaked grain sorghum is equal or even superior in nutritional value to corn in dairy rations.

However, the department said last year that in 1990, 44 percent of farm households considered a non-farm job as their major occupation.

One reason for the rise in outside income is that nearly 81 percent of the 2.1 million farm households have small operations that often lose money, the report said.

It divided farms into categories, depending on size and profitability, to show where additional income sources were most needed.

Only one-quarter of farm families in 1992 operated "commercial farms" with sales over $50,000, the report said.

About half of these households had someone earning money from a job or business off the farm in 1992.

Those operating commercial farms with sales under $250,000 received about 50 percent of their income from non-farm sources.

Many commercial farms are concentrated in the Midwest, where cash grain and dairy commodities are more prevalent. The largest - fruit, vegetable and cotton farms - are in the West.

Commercial operators are younger and have more education than in any other category, the report said.

"Viable non-commercial" farms - those that earn between $15,000 and $50,000 - still account for more than half the nation's farms, the department said.

These households, many of them specializing in livestock production, lost an average of $817 in 1992 from farming and received about 80 percent of their income off the farm, the report said.

But 22 percent of farm households had incomes below the poverty line, $15,000 or less. They lost an average of $7,334 on their farms in 1992.

Even with net worth averaging $230,626 - more than double the average U.S. household - low-income farm households lack the cash to move or change occupations, the report said.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

C.O.P.E. WITH 1994

Recently, I was visiting with a small business owner who felt that life's pace was accelerating too rapidly. I agreed, and we discussed how the rapid changes in the way we work affect every aspect of how we do business.

This frenzied pace leaves most of us anxious at times. There is often more pressure, shorter deadlines and more to be done. As the pressure builds, so does the stress. As stress levels increase, our productivity diminishes and we find ourselves caught in a vicious circle.

How do we slow down life's merry-go-round? How can we lower stress levels and enjoy our lives? How can we stay productive on the job?

Here are four tips gleaned from writings of several experts. I like acronyms, so I've formed the word C.O.P.E. from the four key words of these tips. I hope it will allow you to remember them throughout 1994.

Change

The first step in learning to cope is to embrace change. Many of us fear change. We are afraid of the unknown. We are comfortable in our routine. Yet change is inevitable.

To lower your stress levels, anticipate change. Rather than resisting new programs or technology, reach out for them. You will find that as Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."

Spend your creative time looking for the positive side of change. Dwelling on the negative or reliving the past will not cause the inevitable changes to go away. Don't waste your energy on a fight you won't win.

Organize

Those of us who surround ourselves with piles of work we're going to do soon are organizationally deficient. We adamantly declare that we know where everything is in our piles, but in truth we lack organization.

Be a filer, not a piler. This tip has helped me organize my life to some degree. Any item worth piling up or storing away for future reference or use, is worth saving in a logical, organized manner. I waste time nearly every day looking for something in my pile. I'm getting better, but I still need to improve.

Prioritize

Prioritizing your life is a great way to reduce stress and save time. If you have trouble getting everything on your "to do" list done, try this technique. First, determine the most important work to do and focus on getting it done. Second, work your way down the list and finish the next most critical items. Finally, use any leftover time to complete the least important work.

The key to prioritizing is to set aside all but the most important element. Clean off your work area so you can stay focused on one task. Otherwise, you may find your mind wandering from one project to another.

Enjoy

Look for ways to make work fun. Search for ways to have fun that have nothing to do with work. Life is short. Work hard when you work, but allow time to enjoy smelling the flowers. I doubt that as we near death's door, we'll look back and say, "I wish I'd spent more time at the office or store."

Personally, I find it depressing to be around people who are too serious. Now don't get me wrong, my work is serious, your work is serious, your business is serious. However, we shouldn't take ourselves too seriously.

Enjoy every minute of everyday. Stay focused on the positive and look for ways to have fun.

Question/Answer

Q: What actually causes wood to rot, and what is the difference between wet rot and dry rot?

A: Rot occurs in unprotected household timbers, fences and outbuildings, which are subject to dampness. Fungal spores, which are always present, multiply and develop in these conditions until eventually the timber is destroyed.

Wet rot occurs in timber with a high moisture content. As soon as the cause is eliminated, further deterioration is arrested. Wet rot frequently attacks the framework of doors and windows which have been neglected, enabling rainwater to penetrate joints or between brickwork and adjacent timbers. Peeling paintwork is often the first sign, which when removed reveals timber that is spongy when wet but dark brown and crumbly when dry.

Dry rot is more serious, and will attack timber with a much lower moisture content than wet rot, but unlike wet rot, which thrives outdoors as well as indoors, dry rot thrives only in poorly ventilated, confined spaces indoors.

Dry rot exhibits different characteristics depending on the extent of its development. It sends out fine, pale gray tubules in all directions, even through masonry, to seek out and infect other dry timber. It actually pumps water from damp timber and can progress at an alarming rate. The strands are accompanied by white cotton woollike growths, called mycelium, in very damp conditions. When established, dry rot develops wrinkled, pancake-shaped fruiting bodies, which produce spores that are expelled to rapidly cover surrounding timber and masonry.

1994 Livestock Show principals

When the Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show kicks off this Tuesday, it will be the culmination of work by a large group of superintendents.

With animals being shown in three divisions -- steers and heifers, hogs and sheep -- organizers have worked along those lines to prepare for the show.

Heading the entire event are general superintendents Kevin Urbanczyk, Gerald Marnell, Tom Schlabs and Charlie Stengel.

Heading the steer and heifer division is chairman Chris Urbanczyk, along with M.D. Franks and Ray Schlabs.

The hog division is chaired by Kenneth Schlabs. Joining in the work there are Jeff Mercer, Chris Carter, Brian Urbanczyk, Raymond Martinez, Wade Boren and Brent Self.

Finally, Nicky Morgan is chair of the sheep division, joined by Mark Urbanczyk, Arnie Artho, Mike Weiwes, Donny Meiwes and Dennis Schilling.

Bookkeeper for the annual event is Charla Schlabs.

Among the duties of the committees putting together the show is the handling of the rules.

In addition to the technical specifications for each show, the rules also include general guidelines, including entry fees -- $8 per sheep and hog, $12 per steer -- floor prices, which will be set before the sale, and controls on the number, age and size of animals being entered.

In addition to the county participants, who represent the Deaf Smith County 4-H and the Hereford FFA, (See 1994, Page 5C)

Prizewinning Stock!

Many fine examples of livestock will be paraded through the Hereford Bull Barn in the coming Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show Monday January 24th through Saturday January 29th, but the real prizewinners will be those young men and women who are showing them.

The First National Bank of Hereford proudly commends each participant in this year's show -- not solely for their many achievements, but more importantly for their willingness to learn, from the ground up, a trade that has made our area a leader in agriculture.

Dennehy's 'Birdland' seems a long shot for survival

Brian Dennehy stars as Dr. Brian McKenzie, the divorced chief of psychiatry at a metropolitan hospital who has more than admiration for Dr. Jesse Lane (Lindsay Frost), in "Birdland." The one-hour series airs Wednesdays on ABC.

BY JOHN CROOK

Devoted fans of actor Brian Dennehy will want to catch his new drama series as soon as possible. "Birdland," which airs Wednesdays on ABC, is no turkey, but the odds seem stacked against its living even long enough to see the first robin of spring.

"Birdland" casts Dennehy as Dr. Brian McKenzie, the chief of psychiatry at Riverside Hospital in Oakland, Calif., and a man who believes in bending the rules to help patients who have lost hope.

McKenzie regularly must grapple with multiple layers of bureaucracy, particularly with chief administrator Dr. Alan Bergman (John Rothman), who is himself under pressure to fire someone to comply with a new hospital budget. Bergman blithely drops the problem into the lap of McKenzie, who comes up with a twisted solution of his own: He delegates the responsibility to his starchy chief resident, Dr. Lewis Niles (Jeff Williams).

A divorced father to teen-age Scott (Scott Grimes), with whom he is semi-stranded, McKenzie also is carrying on a surreptitious love affair with beautiful Dr. Jesse Lane (Lindsay Frost of "Nightmare Cafe"), who is roughly half his age. Other regulars include Leslie Mann as Nurse Mary and C.C.H. Pounder, who had a recurring role as a judge on "L.A. Law," as Lucy, the formidable head nurse. (It may be worth noting that the obsession with bureaucracy may extend to the creative team of "Birdland": While the doctors in the cast all have first and last names, the nurses are addressed and referred to by first name only.)

In a year that has seen one prime-time drama after another put on life-support, ABC's new offering doesn't seem to have the right stuff to buck increasingly difficult odds against success. The best thing it has going for it is its time slot opposite weak competition: "Law and Order" on NBC and "48 Hours" on CBS. It also has a potent lead-in from one of the season's few breakout hits, "Grace Under Fire," but it remains to be seen whether the large audience for this sitcom will stick around for the program's much different tone and content.

The very subject matter of this new series is dicey stuff. Mental illness remains strange and intimidating turf for many Americans, and the writers here will have their hands full trying to balance comedy and pathos. Make it too dark and viewers will flee. Make it too flip and advocates for the mentally challenged quite rightly will protest. One recurring character, a patient (Kevin J. O'Connor) who believes he has some sort of psychic connection to Kathie Lee Gifford, is a nice creation, with enough built-in absurdity to avoid offensiveness. Most of the show, however, is pretty dark indeed.

Dennehy himself may prove unable to capture and hold viewers from week to week. A potent actor in the right role — his chilling portrayal of mass murderer John Wayne Gacy in "To Catch a Killer" haunts the memory — he seems out of his element here playing a caring and compassionate doctor. With his massive, bear-like frame, a smile that can't help turning into a sneer and an ironic twinkle in his eye, Dennehy simply doesn't have enough warmth to earn audience empathy. Ironically, Jeff Williams, whose Dr. Niles is intended to serve as an uptight foil, does project a likability that keeps turning the relationship between the two characters on its ear. The result is a schizophrenic show — with a negative prognosis.

'French Silk' could prove fatal for a reverend; 'Mantis' rebuilds troubled city without weapons

BY SARA BENNETT

Who's to blame for the death of a corrupt televangelist in ABC's "French Silk," airing Sunday, Jan. 23? Evidence points to lingerie designer Claire Laurent, played by Susan Lucci ("All My Children"), who had everything to lose if the reverend continued to campaign against her catalogs. Laurent, however, isn't the only suspect. Shari Belafonte, Lee Horsley and Sarah Marshall also star.

Michael Gross, Dean Stockwell and Mary Kay Place star in "In the Line of Duty: The Price of Vengeance," Sunday on NBC. The film, the seventh of the fact-based "In the Line of Duty" series, features Gross as a detective who urges a robbery victim to testify against his assailant. After Detective Tom Williams collects nearly enough evidence to convict the villain (Brent Jennings), he strikes again, this time with murder.

In his toughest case ever, lawyer Harmon Cobb, portrayed by Walter Matthau, must defend Lily Bell and her son John (Stephanie Zimbalist, Nick Stahl) when one of Cobb's friends is accused of murdering John's father. "Incident in a Small Town" airs Sunday on CBS.

Monday, Jan. 24, Fox presents "Mantis," about a paraplegic biophysicist (Carl Lumbly) who transforms himself into a high-tech superhero for the purpose of rebuilding Ocean City, which has been victimized by violence and political corruption. Bobby Hosea and Gina Torres also star.

Rick Schroder portrays Joey Cutter, a young widowed father who must decide what is best for his daughter in NBC's "To My Daughter With Love," airing Monday. Joey's in-laws (Linda Gray, Lawrence Pressman) feel they can offer their granddaughter (Ashley Maling) greater security and a more conventional household. Ultimately, it's Joey who must decide the fate of his and his daughter's life.

Cinemax premieres "Best of the Best II," about karate teachers who avenge their partner's death, Friday, Jan. 28.

LET'S TALK

The story of the other O'Connor on CBS' 'In the Heat of the Night'

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Hugh O'Connor

Q: I'm a big fan of Hugh O'Connor of "In the Heat of the Night." I was wondering what you could tell me about him. Please include an address where I can write to him. -C.S. Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.

A: Hugh Edward O'Connor was born in Rome, Italy. He attended several high schools in Los Angeles before graduating from Beverly Hills Preparatory. Upon graduation, he worked as a courier on the set of his father's (Carroll O'Connor's) series, "Archie Bunker's Place," during its final season (1982-83).

Hugh studied acting with several teachers in Los Angeles before moving to New York City, where he became the assistant stage manager for two Broadway productions: "Brothers" and "Home Front."

Returning to Los Angeles, he studied acting at the Santa Monica Playhouse and appeared in several local theater productions.

His first professional acting job was in the TV movie "Brass."

You can write to him C/O the show at MGM Worldwide TV, MGM Plaza, 2500 Broadway St., Santa Monica, Calif. 90404-3061.

Q: I am an avid fan of "Acapulco H.E.A.T.," and would like some information on actress Catherine Oxenberg. How did she start acting? What movies or shows has she starred in? Is there an address where I can write to her and the other members of the series? -Agnes Liem, Plattsburgh, N.Y.

A: Oxenberg, who stars as Ashley Hunter Coddington on the show, is the daughter of Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia and granddaughter of the former regent of Yugoslavia. She was born in New York and raised in London, England.

She returned to America to attend St. Paul's School and, after graduating summa cum laude, was admitted to Harvard University. She decided to defer her education for one year and began modeling, appearing on the cover of Vogue, Glamour, Redbook, McCall's, Interview and many other magazines.

Later, she transferred to Columbia University, studying psychology, philosophy and mythology. She took acting lessons and was soon cast as Diana in CBS' "The Royal Romance of Charles and Diana" in 1982. She moved to Los Angeles in 1983 and the next year joined the cast of the hit ABC dramatic series "Dynasty" in the role of Amanda.

Her feature film credits include Ken Russell's "The Lair of the White Worm" and "Overexposed." Her additional television movie and miniseries credits include "Roman Holiday," "Swimsuit," "Bony" and "Ring of Scorpio." She also resurrected her role as Diana for ABC's "Charles and Diana: Unhappily Ever After."

Oxenberg is very active on behalf of environmental issues and children's charities. She has been involved with Children Now, Citykids and McLaren Hall.

You can write to her and the other stars of the show C/O All-American Television, Advertising and Publicity Dept., 5301 Beethoven St., Suite 224, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066.

Q: A few months ago I woke up in the middle of the night and there was a movie on television which was so bad I couldn't turn it off. It looked like it was made in the '70s and was about a teen-ager who lived in a secret room of a family's house. I believe Dabney Coleman played the father. What is the name of this movie? When was it made? -D.C., Selden, N.Y.

A: The movie you are asking about is "Bad Ronald," circa 1975.

Urkel imitators to meet original; Stone takes on Latin-American leaders

The sincerest form of flattery: Three schoolchildren have been selected as the winners of Warner Bros.' "Family Matters" Steve Urkel Impression Contest. Ryan Doss, 11, Marcus C. Miller Jr., 9, and Rachel Lundquist, 8, will appear in an episode of ABC's Friday night comedy next month. They could do worse; Jaleel White, who portrays nerdy Steve Urkel in the series, has a vintage Rolls-Royce to show for it. When he's working, he parks the car in his personal space on the Warner lot.

What do Manuel Noriega and Evita Peron have in common? Each of the Latin-American figures is the subject of a film to be directed this year by Oliver Stone. "Noriega" begins filming in March, with the big-screen version of Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical "Evita" to follow later in the year. Reportedly both Mariah Carey and Gloria Estefan have been considered for the title role.

As Oscar buzz gets louder in Hollywood, Steven Spielberg is surely hoping for a Best Director nod. Snubbed for "The Color Purple" in 1985 and unlikely to be considered a cinematic artist for box-office behemoth "Jurassic Park," the filmmaker may finally have wowed his peers with "Schindler's List." At least one vote is in already. Trade magazine Variety reports that Billy Wilder, who wanted to direct "List" himself, calls the Spielberg treatment "absolute perfection" and has written the director a long letter of praise.

Thinking ahead to next year's Christmas gifts? Forget the toy store: Children are really looking for something priceless. According to a seasonal poll by Turner's syndicated "Real News for Kids," the No. 1 answer was happiness and family togetherness, beating out CDs and players and Sega Genesis systems and games. Placing eighth was peace on Earth, beating Barbie and Super Nintendo.

The kids were also asked what they would give President Clinton for the holidays. Answers included a saxophone, a health care plan, a cat, a puppy and wisdom.

'Un Coeur En Hiver' offers elegance; 'True Romance' delivers rollicking ride

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

The following titles should hit the shelves of video vendors sometime this month.

"Un Coeur En Hiver"
The title means "A Heart in Winter," and that's exactly the feel of this haunting film directed by Claude Sautet, a winner of the prestigious Cesar award. Emmanuelle Beart ("Manon of the Spring," "Date With an Angel") plays a gifted, beautiful concert violinist whose private passions usually find little outlet except in her music. She is courted simultaneously by the wealthy, aging owner of a Paris violin shop and the intense, tireless younger man who works there. But romance is thwarted at almost every turn by restraint, awkwardness and stilted communication.

A winner of the Venice Film Festival's Silver Lion award for Best Picture, the movie offers rich atmosphere, fine supporting performances from Daniel Auteuil and Andre Dussollier, and beautiful music besides. Viewers should be advised, however, of the French film's leisurely pacing (very) and English subtitles.

Grab the popcorn for Tony Scott's sexy roller coaster of a film, "True Romance." Christian Slater stars as a video store clerk who doesn't ask much of life, just a few comic books and an occasional martial arts flick. But he soon finds enough excitement for anybody when he meets comely Patricia Arquette, a bleached-blond hooker with a heart of gold. After a life-changing night in his apartment (she was hired as his birthday gift, but commerce gives way to passion), Slater frees his newfound love from the clutches of her drug-dealing pimp, played to scary perfection by Gary Oldman. Then they discover the suitcase they walked away with contains not her clothes but a mother lode of cocaine. See trouble ahead?

Scott's rollicking film boasts a bounty of good acting from supporting players Dennis Hopper, Christopher Walken, Saul Rubinek, Brad Pitt, Chris Penn and Michael Rappaport.

First drug approved for Alzheimer's disease

BY ROGER J. BULGER, M.D.
President of the Association of
Academic Health Centers

Alzheimer's Disease (AD) brings cruel catastrophe to both its victims and their caregivers. It robs its victims of their memory, physical control and finally their lives, while their caregivers suffer from anxiety and increasingly stressful demands on their time and energy. Since AD was first described in 1907, there has been no treatment to alleviate its devastating effects. Now, after extensive testing in animals, human clinical trials have shown that a new drug called tacrine can alleviate AD's symptoms.

Approximately four million Americans suffer from AD, most of whom are over 65, and as many as 50 percent of those 85 and older suffer from the disease.

AD results in about 100,000 deaths each year, thus representing the fourth most common cause of death in adults, after heart disease, cancer and stroke. In this age of heightened awareness of the economic costs of health care, it is important to note that the treatment costs alone total $90 billion per year. Victims of AD suffer progressive impairment of the mind and then the body, ending with seizures and death as many as 15 years after first being diagnosed. Devastating economically, emotionally and physically, its cause unknown, AD had until now challenged medical science and won on all accounts.

The first significant breach in the wall has now appeared. With years of testing in fish, mice, rats, guinea pigs, rabbits, dogs and baboons, medical researchers regarded tacrine, a drug known for 30 years, to have extraordinary promise to become the first drug effective against AD. Due to the notoriously uneven nature of the symptoms of AD, and the difficulty in measuring symptoms like loss of attention, it took years of carefully controlled trials to show that tacrine's effect was real and was not due to the placebo effect or "wishful thinking" on the part of caregivers or physicians.

Finally, the Food and Drug Administration was convinced and approved tacrine for alleviating the symptoms of patients suffering from mild to moderate stages of AD. Side effects, which include altered liver function, are usually mild and reversible.

Tacrine is by no means a cure, and cannot help all patients. In addition, tacrine has not been shown to slow the progression of the disease. Yet to the victims of AD and to their loved ones, the relief that tacrine can bring is certainly welcome. And the promise of better drugs to come, symbolized by tacrine, is good news indeed.

Be heart healthy this year

Heart attacks are the number one killer in the United States. More than half of the daily 4,000 deaths occur outside the hospital during the first three hours of symptoms.

"Overeating and drinking can be dangerous for an already overstressed individual," says William E. Baubie, III, MD, an emergency specialist in Kingston, N.Y.

Dr. Baubie and the American College of Emergency Physicians recommend the following tips to make this a "heart healthy" year.

-Recognize the warning signs of a heart attack: People often dismiss heart attack symptoms as indigestion. Key symptoms include a heaviness, pressure or tightness in the chest or shortness of breath. This pressure can spread to the neck, shoulder, arms or back. Sweating, nausea, "heart-burn" and/or fatigue are other signs.

-Understand the risk factors: A decrease in blood flow to the heart causes heart attacks. Risk factors include high blood pressure, high cholesterol, smoking, diabetes and a family history of heart attacks. Any sudden increased demand on the heart, such as shoveling snow, excessive meals, or even grief, may cause a decreased supply of blood to the heart, which can trigger a heart attack.

-Know how to help a heart attack victim: Thrombolytic therapy, or heart attack drug treatment, can save most victims if given within a few hours of the onset of symptoms.

Learn how to recognize the warning signs and get help quickly. Don't allow the person to deny the problem or feel embarrassed. Call 911 or your local emergency number. Remain calm and offer to accompany the person to the hospital.

-Decrease your chances of having a heart attack: Dr. Baubie recommends eating wisely, exercising and actively listening to your body. "You only have one heart, which beats 100,000 times a day. Treat it right!" he says.

Be "Heart Smart" and save a life--it may even be your own. For further information regarding heart disease, contact:

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Leeza Gibbons is living life like most men used to, and she calls it "incredibly spoiled."

The "Entertainment Tonight" hostess says having a husband who works at home while she pursues her TV career gives her a lot of freedom.

"Because of him and his choice, I have really been given a lot more flexibility than a lot of women may have," she told the Daily News of Los Angeles. "I'm incredibly spoiled. I recognize it everyday."

She'll recognize it even more as she adds a new job as host of her own daytime talk show, "Leeza," which began Monday.

Gibbons has been married three years to actor and architect Stephen Meadows. But she still fears her career could derail her personal life.

Social Security

All new brides should notify Social Security if they are changing their name, according to Jim Talbot, manger of the Amarillo Social Security office.

Failure to report a name change to Social Security is one of the most frequent causes of errors in earnings records. Generally, earnings are not posted to a worker's Social Security record when the number and name do not "match." And it's the earnings posted to those records that determine if a person can get Social Security, and how much he or she will receive in monthly benefits," Talbot said.

Notifying Social Security of a name change is equally important for women who divorce and resume their maiden name.

To change the surname on a Social Security record and to receive a Social Security card showing the new name, women should call the Social Security toll-free number: 1-800-772-1213, any business day between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. They will need to provide proof of their name change, such as a marriage or divorce certificate. The entire process can be handled by mail.

"Or they can simply call our local office or come by with the needed documentation and we'll handle it in that one visit," said Talbot. "Our phone number is 376-2241."

He added that this service is free. "Brides should be especially alert to solicitations from companies that charge a fee for 'taking care of the paperwork' for them. Such companies do not provide better service than we do. And they can actually delay the process."

Bad guys beware! There's a new superhero in Ocean City, and he's out to paralyze evil! Carl Lumbly stars as the new crime fighter in the Fox film "Mantis" on Monday.

'Mantis' joins the ranks of superheroes on Fox

BY TED KUSIO

Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird! It's a plane! It's a bug?

Yes, it's Mantis! Ocean City's defender of truth, enemy of evil and driver of a Cadillac that flies. Part Batman, part Darkman and part Aristotle, Fox unveils the latest superhero in "Mantis," Monday, Jan. 24.

Carl Lumbly stars as Dr. Miles Hawkins, a biophysicist confined to a wheelchair after getting caught in a riot. But thanks to an advanced harness that allows him to walk, boosts his strength and emits a substance that temporarily paralyzes his victims, Dr. Hawkins becomes the superhero Mantis.

The film also co-stars Bobby Hosea as a curious television reporter and Gina Torres as a medical examiner.

"Mantis" has many stylistic similarities to other action-adventure films. This is understandable since the script is from Sam Hamm, the author of "Batman" and "Batman Returns"; and Sam Raimi, director of "Darkman," is one of the executive producers.

Originality doesn't really matter though, because when the hero takes action against criminals, "Mantis" is a lot of fun. In addition to his powers, Mantis has a wide array of high-tech gadgets and the slight hint of camp works well. The film also features positive, non-stereotypical black characters.

But the huge plot, involving a crooked politician creating an elaborate conspiracy, takes too much time to build. And the fun edge is even further blunted when the reality of racial tensions and the philosophy of violence kicks in. It's hard to root for a hero when you consider that his methods skip due-process; violate civil rights and are similar to those of the criminals he pursues.

And where's the nifty costume to match the neat gimmicks? A superhero running around wearing a tie isn't likely to strike fear into the heart of criminals.

When "Mantis" remembers that superheroes exist in a fantasy realm that skips the complexity of reality, then it's an enjoyable roller coaster ride. Reality, on the other hand, seems silly when tackled by a guy in a bug suit.

HEREFORD'S

SENIOR SCENE

Supplement to The Hereford Brand FEBRUARY 1994

Margie's Notes

BY MARGIE DANIELS
Executive Director, HSCA

We are well into a New Year at the Center. We are thankful for the opportunities we have had through the years to serve the seniors of our community and look forward to working with you in 1994.

There are quite a few activities already on the schedule at the Center. This month's social activity schedule is pretty full. It includes our regular dance on the first Saturday night of the month, and a special dance on Feb. 12 featuring the Velvetones.

We are really looking forward to crowning the Valentine King and Queen at a combined Valentine Party and birthday social on Monday night, Feb. 14.

The Braschler Music Show on March 11 is just around the corner. This is such a popular group in Branson and they are becoming well known in Hereford. We are all fortunate to have this top-flight entertainment in our town.

Plans are underway for the Garden Tour during the last half of April. This tour will include such sites as Mobile, Atlanta and Natchez. We will have more information for you later. This will be a beautiful spring tour and we hope you will join us.

President's Corner

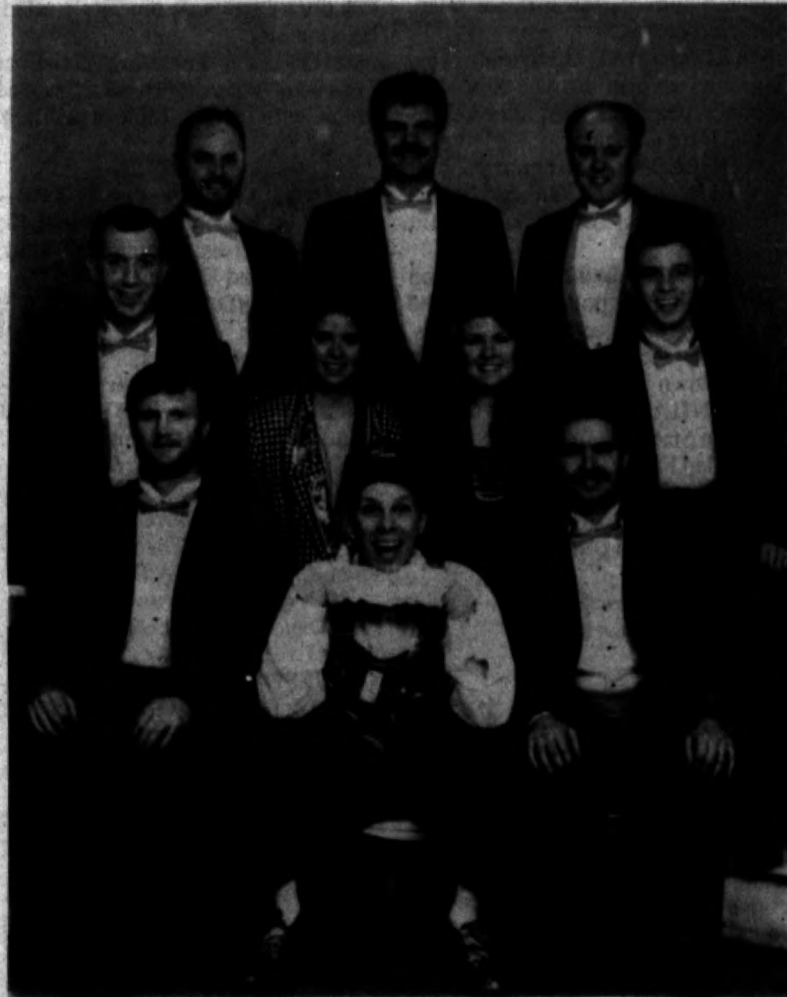

BY S.L. GARRISON
President, HSCA

The year of 1993 was a good year for the Hereford Senior Citizens Association. All of the special activities, such as the Festival of Trees, Braschler show, senior tours and chili and pancake suppers were successful. The money made helps carry on the programs of the association. Thanks to all who have contributed to the success of these activities.

The farmers of our area finally harvested the last of the sugar beets. Generally the corn and sorghum yield were good, but not great, and cotton yields were above average. Due to the misfortune of our neighbors in the flood area, causing lower production nationally, the prices have moved up on the grains. The cattle feeders are going into the fifth or sixth month of losses. We need rain on the wheat to carry the cattle longer outside the feedyards to get supply and demand in balance.

We have lost a lot of good members by death this past year, including my brother, Homer. We miss him and the others. Personally, and for the entire family, we want to thank all who have expressed their feeling by word, cards and memorials to his memory. Something special will come to benefit the center and its programs from your gifts.

This new year will bring many good things for HSCA.

THE BRASCHLERS FROM BRANSON

Tickets on sale at center for Braschler Music Show

Tickets are currently on sale at the center for the Braschler Music Show which will be performed at two shows March 11 at the center.

Box 270, Hereford or by calling 364-5861.

The gospel show begins at 6 p.m. and the variety show is scheduled at 8:30 p.m. The shows will be completely different.

Lower your cholesterol at lower cost

Some 2.5 million Americans are battling cholesterol by taking brand-name drugs like Lopid to help lower their cholesterol levels.

Now, the first major generic cholesterol-reducing agent is available for these people as a lower-cost treatment option.

Gemfibrozil is the first major generic alternative to Lopid. It is as safe and effective as Lopid, but priced less than the branded product.

Gemfibrozil, available by prescription only, is used in addition to a low-cholesterol diet to treat adult patients with very high elevations of serum triglyceride levels, and to reduce certain patients' risk of developing coronary heart disease.

Gemfibrozil fits perfectly into the new Health Care Reform focus on disease prevention and cost-effective treatment. It helps control cholesterol and therefore can contribute to the prevention of serious heart disease. And, a switch by the current one-half million Lopid users in the U.S. to Gemfibrozil could result in a potential yearly savings of $113 to each individual and over $50 million to the U.S. health care system.

Ask your doctor about his new, low-cost weapon in the war on cholesterol.

In 1664, the French surrendered New Amsterdam to the British, who renamed it New York.

Coming Events

Do you know facts about outpatient costs?

Did you realize you can be hospitalized for days and still be considered an "outpatient?"

Medicare has no set rules about what constitutes an outpatient or an inpatient. You may ask what difference that makes to you, the patient? It can make a difference in two ways.

First, if you are hoping to receive coverage in a skilled nursing home following the hospital stay, you must have been hospitalized as an inpatient for a minimum of three days. Medicare does not cover skilled care in a nursing home following outpatient services.

Second, the amount you are charged for the hospital stay can vary considerably for the same stay. Inpatient care is covered by Part A of Medicare, outpatient care by Part B. For example, Mr. H. stayed overnight in a hospital for the adjustment of his heart medication. He left the next afternoon after a total of 23 hours. His bill came to $1,230. He was billed as an inpatient under Part A and was therefore liable for the deductible of $676. Had his stay been charged as an outpatient, Part B rules would be in effect, and he would have paid 20 percent of the hospital charges.

However, you cannot generalize that it is always cheaper to be an outpatient. Currently there is no limit to the number of days the hospital can keep you as an outpatient. If you stay for several days as an outpatient and have to pay 20 percent of the total charges, it may be more expensive than the inpatient deductible of $676.

So make sure you ask your doctor whether he or she admitted you as an inpatient or as an outpatient--it makes a difference!

- How many doses do I take per day?
- Are there specific times of day I should take this medication?
- Does it matter if I take it before or after meals?

SOCIAL SECURITY

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Jim Talbot

Q: I think I'll owe taxes on my Social Security benefits. Will you send me a form that shows my total Social Security benefits for 1993?

A: Yes, Each year you receive a "Social Security Benefit Statement" (Form 1099). The form tells you how much you received from Social Security during the past year. You may use this form for your taxes or use it as proof of income.

Q: I just got a notice from Social Security that said my Supplemental Security Income (SSI) case is being reviewed. What does this mean?

A: Social Security reviews every Supplemental Security Income case from time to time to make sure the individuals who are receiving checks should continue to get them. The review also determines if the SSI recipients are receiving the correct amounts.

Q: I'm getting ready to sign up for Social Security. I heard I have to show you my birth certificate. I've got a copy of it in my safe deposit box. Is this good enough?

A: It depends on what you mean by a "copy". If it's a copy of your birth record that's been certified by the agency that issued your birth certificate, then it's acceptable. "Certified" means it's been signed by the issuing agency and has a raised seal. If all you have is an uncertified photocopy, that's not legally acceptable.

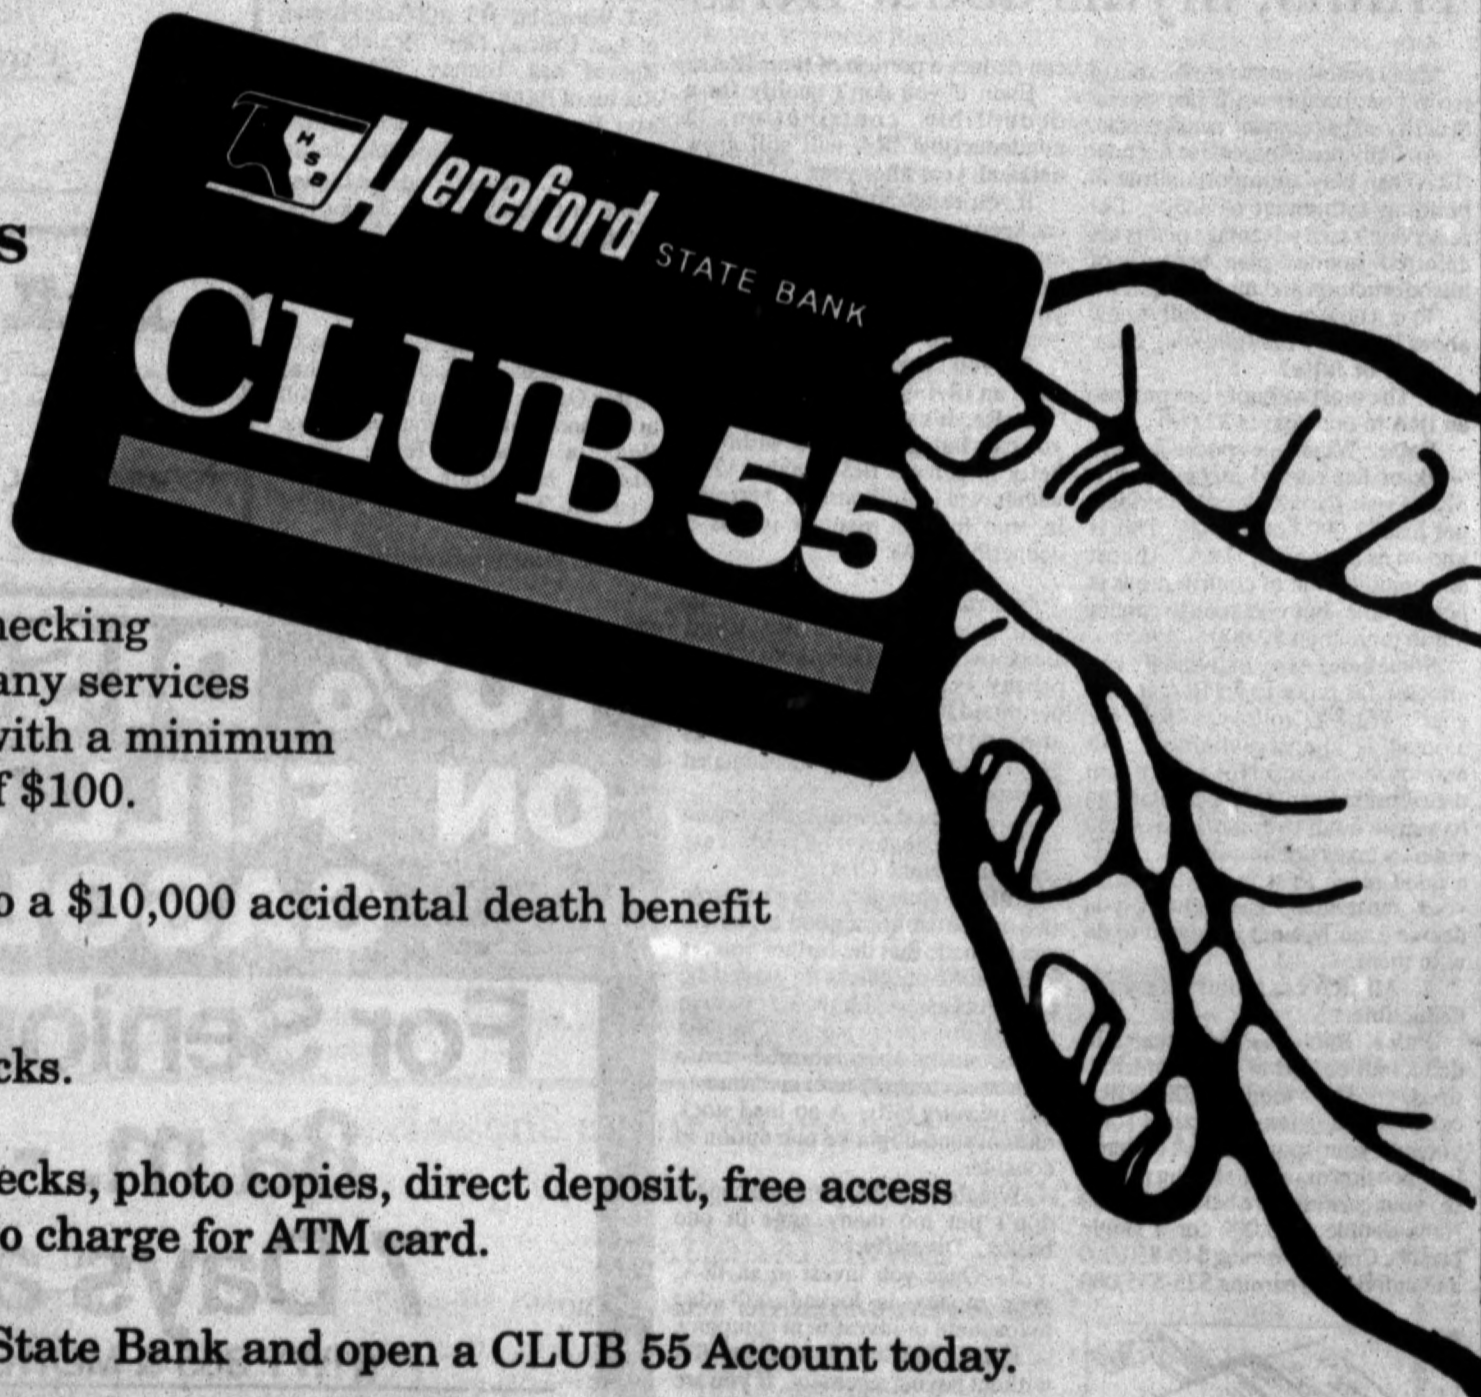

Q: I turned down the doctor's part of Medicare when I was 65. Now I think that was a mistake and I want to sign up. How do I do that?

A: It's a good thing you asked now because people in your situation can sign up for Part B of Medicare (what you called "the doctor's part") only during the first three months of each year. Contact a Social Security office before March 31 and tell them you want Part B of Medicare. Your coverage will be effective July 1, 1994. The normal cost is $41.10, but you pay a 10 percent surcharge for each year you could have had Part B but didn't.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to Jim Talbot, district Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Truths, myths about IRAs

Many Americans won't be able to retire comfortably with just Social Security and a company pension plan. An Individual Retirement Account (IRA) can play an important role in building retirement savings. But many don't take advantage of this tax deferred savings plan because of misinformation and misconceptions.

To test how much you really know about IRAs, try the following quiz: True or false?

1. The most a couple can put into an IRA in one year is $2,000.

False. When one spouse doesn't work or has earned income below $250 a year, the couple can contribute not just $2,000 but $2,500. This is known as a "spousal" IRA. Almost any combination of contributions is permissible, but one spouse cannot put in more than $2,000.

Sometimes an individual can allocate far more to an IRA in one year. With a "rollover" IRA, the amount is almost unlimited. An employee who receives a lump sum distribution from a pension plan can roll those funds over into an IRA and not owe taxes on the money. This is a good place to temporarily house your retirement assets until you decide exactly what you want to do with them.

2. All IRA contributions are tax deductible.

False. But many people can still deduct all or part of their contributions. The total $2,000 IRA contribution is tax-deductible if (a) you and your spouse aren't covered by a pension or profit-sharing plan or (b) your earnings are below $40,000 for a couple, $25,000 for a single person. Couples earning $40-$50,000 and individuals earning $25-$35,000

The term "red tape," referring to bureaucratic inefficiency, originated in England during the 1700's when actual red string was used to tie up legal and other official documents together.

can deduct a portion of their IRAs.

Even if you don't qualify for a deductible contribution, a nondeductible IRA will still grow untaxed, year after year.

If you're age 50, for example, you can keep your IRA growing, untaxed, until you're age 70 1/2-20 1/2 years. You must begin withdrawals from your IRA by April 1 of the year after you reach 70 1/2.

3. You cannot withdraw money from an IRA until you are age 50.

False. It's your money, of course you can, but generally not without a hefty 10 percent IRS penalty. The withdrawal is also considered taxable income for that year (if it was a deductible IRA).

In certain circumstances, you can withdraw money from an IRA, if you are below age 59 1/2, without the tax penalty. Penalty free withdrawals are permitted if you are disabled. There also is no penalty if your withdrawals are in accordance with your estimated life-span.

4. The best investments for an IRA are insured fixed rate investments like CDs.

False. While they may play a role in your portfolio, a good argument can be made that the further you are away from retirement the larger the percent of assets you should invest in growth investment stocks. Over the years, stocks have returned more than bonds or short-term investments like treasury bills. A no-load stock mutual fund might be one option to consider.

Whichever investment you choose don't put too many eggs in one basket. Diversify.

5. Once you invest in an IRA, your money is locked into that investment or investment company.

False. You can transfer an IRA without paying a penalty. If you are dissatisfied with your IRAs' performance, consider moving the assets to another fund within your investment company or to a new investment manager altogether. An easy way to do it is to ask your current custodian to make the switch for you.

Nutrition Notes

CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
M.S. RD/LD
DIETARY FIBER

The beneficial effects of dietary fiber, in both its preventive and therapeutic roles, have been well documented. The American Dietetic Association encourages the general public to consume an adequate amount of dietary fiber from a variety of food sources.

Numerous professional health care organizations recommend diets that emphasize complex carbohydrates and fiber, with concomitant decreases in fat, as a way to decrease the risk of certain diseases. The Food Guide Pyramid encourages greater consumption of food from the bread, cereal, rice and pasta group along with foods from the vegetable and fruit groups, which contain generous amounts of fiber along with other vitamins and minerals. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans also encourage consumption of these foods. This guidelines information is available from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Health and Human Nutrition Information Service, Bulletin No. 249.

Dietary fiber is largely material from plant cell walls that is resistant to digestion by human digestive enzymes. The different types of fiber exert different physiologic effects. Water-soluble fibers delay intestinal movements, delay glucose absorption, and decrease serum cholesterol concentration. The water soluble fibers accelerate intestinal movements, increase fecal weight, slow starch decomposition, and delay glucose absorption. Although food is composed of various types and amounts of fiber, soluble fiber is found in generous amounts in oats, legumes, apples, and citrus fruits. Insoluble fiber is found in generous amounts in wheat bran and other whole-grain breads and cereals. Other fruits and vegetables contain both soluble and insoluble fiber. For example, an adequate, balanced diet composed of whole grains, fruits, and vegetables would generally provide a 3:1 ratio of insoluble fiber to soluble fiber.

Amount of Dietary Fiber recommended to Promote Health and Reduce Diseases Risk

The consensus drawn from numerous health authorities is that Americans should consume at least five servings of fruits/vegetables and 6 servings of bread/cereals/legumes per day. Although a recommended dietary allowance for fiber has not been established, the current evidence suggests that high-carbohydrate, low fat diets contain 20 to 35 g dietary fiber per day from a variety of food sources may be beneficial for health promotion and disease risk reduction in the healthy adult population of the United States. Additional factors must be taken into consideration when recommending amounts of dietary fiber for the pediatric and geriatric populations or for individuals with special dietary requirements. Food, not dietary fiber supplements, provide the best means of increasing daily consumption of both soluble and insoluble dietary fiber to the recommended levels. Foods high in fiber are also good sources of additional nutrients. The practice of taking fiber supplements to replace consumption of high-carbohydrate, nutrient-dense foods is not supported at this time by any health care authorities as a component of a balanced diet.

Potential Adverse Effects of Overconsumption of Fiber

The general public should be encouraged to increase dietary fiber intake gradually, accompanied by adequate fluid intake. Although the bioavailability of certain vitamins and minerals may be reduced by dietary fiber, nutrient deficiencies are unlikely if an adequate, balanced diet from a variety of foods is consumed. The American Academy of Pediatrics does not advocate the inclusion of dietary fiber for infants less than 1 year of age and cautions that diets emphasizing high-fiber/low energy foods may be inadequate in energy. However, children and adolescents should consume dietary fiber from a variety of sources in servings and amounts appropriate for age. These defined recommendations are found in the Pediatric Nutrition Handbook, 2nd ed. by Forbes GB, Woodruff CW.

Research regarding the fiber hypothesis has expanded over the past 30 years to include other dietary and lifestyle changes known to promote health and reduce risk of chronic disease such as dietary fat reduction, physical exercise, and stress management. Dietary fiber plays both a therapeutic and preventive role in management of gastrointestinal diseases and is used extensively in clinical practice to treat constipation.

Dietary Fiber and Disease Management

Dietary fiber is known to be beneficial in the management of certain diseases, including cardiovascular disease, diabetes, and obesity, via its effect on nutrient metabolism.

Clinical evidence suggest that dietary fiber may have role in improving glycemic control individuals with diabetes it provides a high satiety benefit in weight-reduction and calorie controlled diets. The fiber may delay glucose absorption and reduce insulin requirements. This evidence is still under investigation.

As far as cholesterol and triglyceride abnormalities, it has been seen when high-fiber diets containing a generous supply of complex carbohydrates and limited amounts of fat there is a definite lowering of both factors.

Recommendations Regarding Incorporation of Dietary Fiber into a Healthful Diet and Lifestyle

An integral part of the healthful lifestyle includes daily consumption of a diet high in complex carbohydrates, low in fat, and containing 20 to 35 g dietary fiber from a variety of sources. Gradual increase in the consumption of whole-grain breads and cereals, legumes, fruits, vegetables, with adequate fluid intake are recommended.

A balanced diet with adequate dietary fiber high in complex carbohydrates and low in fat is an important part of a healthful lifestyle that emphasizes regular physical exercise and stress management to promote health and reduce risk of development of chronic diseases.

Tips for trips suggested

These helpful tips from travel experts can help put you and your family on the road to a safe and enjoyable vacation.

If you're traveling by plane with your small children, tell the airline in advance. Special services can be made available, such as priority seating, early boarding and bassinets.

Keep your possessions together in a roomy handbag or basket when traveling by car. This will reduce the jumble that accumulates on car seats.

Don't forget your credit cards. If you worry about loss--and statistics suggest you should--you can arrange for some peace of mind by registering them. Experts at SafeCard (1-800-HOT-LINE), one of the leading credit card protection services, point out that with one of these services you can register all your credit and debit cards, plus cash machine cards. Then in the event you do lose the cards, you can call a single "800" phone number that will promptly get official card notifications of your loss sent to each card issuer. How many cards are lost or stolen in the United States? About 20,000 a day!

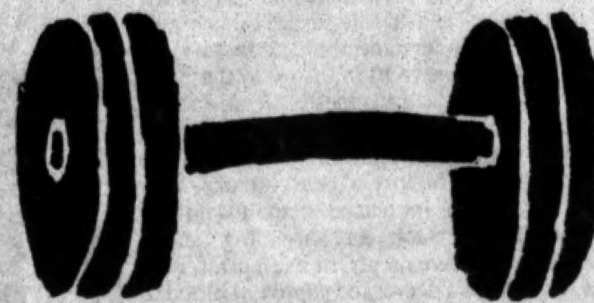

If you're traveling with your family, don't feel there's a need to stick together at all items. Different people have different interests, so go your separate ways and plan to meet at a specific spot later.

Since shopping in new locales is one of the joys of many trips abroad, check out the shopping times in each country you visit.

First drug approved for Alzheimer's disease

BY ROGER J. BULGER, M.D.
President of the Association of
Academic Health Centers

Alzheimer's Disease (AD) brings cruel catastrophe to both its victims and their caregivers. It robs its victims of their memory, physical control and finally their lives, while their caregivers suffer from anxiety and increasingly stressful demands on their time and energy. Since AD was first described in 1907, there has been no treatment to alleviate its devastating effects. Now, after extensive testing in animals, human clinical trials have shown that a new drug called tacrine can alleviate AD's symptoms.

Approximately four million Americans suffer from AD, most of whom are over 65, and as many as 50 percent of those 85 and older suffer from the disease.

AD results in about 100,000 deaths each year, thus representing the fourth most common cause of death in adults, after heart disease, cancer and stroke. In this age of heightened awareness of the economic costs of health care, it is important to note that the treatment costs alone total $90 billion per year. Victims of AD suffer progressive impairment of the mind and then the body, ending with seizures and death as many as 15 years after first being diagnosed. Devastating economically, emotionally and physically, its cause unknown, AD had until now challenged medical science and won on all accounts.

The first significant breach in the wall has now appeared. With years of testing in fish, mice, rats, guinea pigs, rabbits, dogs and baboons, medical researchers regarded tacrine, a drug known for 30 years, to have extraordinary promise to become the first drug effective against AD. Due to the notoriously uneven nature of the symptoms of AD, and the difficulty in measuring symptoms like loss of attention, it took years of carefully controlled trials to show that tacrine's effect was real and was not due to the placebo effect or "wishful thinking" on the part of caregivers or physicians.

Finally, the Food and Drug Administration was convinced and approved tacrine for alleviating the symptoms of patients suffering from mild to moderate stages of AD. Side effects, which include altered liver function, are usually mild and reversible.

Tacrine is by no means a cure, and cannot help all patients. In addition, tacrine has not been shown to slow the progression of the disease. Yet to the victims of AD and to their loved ones, the relief that tacrine can bring is certainly welcome. And the promise of better drugs to come, symbolized by tacrine, is good news indeed.

Be heart healthy this year

Heart attacks are the number one killer in the United States. More than half of the daily 4,000 deaths occur outside the hospital during the first three hours of symptoms.

"Overeating and drinking can be dangerous for an already overstressed individual," says William E. Baubie, III, MD, an emergency specialist in Kingston, N.Y.

Dr. Baubie and the American College of Emergency Physicians recommend the following tips to make this a "heart healthy" year.

-Recognize the warning signs of a heart attack: People often dismiss heart attack symptoms as indigestion. Key symptoms include a heaviness, pressure or tightness in the chest or shortness of breath. This pressure can spread to the neck, shoulder, arms or back. Sweating, nausea, "heart-burn" and/or fatigue are other signs.

-Understand the risk factors: A decrease in blood flow to the heart causes heart attacks. Risk factors include high blood pressure, high cholesterol, smoking, diabetes and a family history of heart attacks. Any sudden increased demand on the heart, such as shoveling snow, excessive meals, or even grief, may cause a decreased supply of blood to the heart, which can trigger a heart attack.

-Know how to help a heart attack victim: Thrombolytic therapy, or heart attack drug treatment, can save most victims if given within a few hours of the onset of symptoms.

Learn how to recognize the warning signs and get help quickly. Don't allow the person to deny the problem or feel embarrassed. Call 911 or your local emergency number. Remain calm and offer to accompany the person to the hospital.

-Decrease your chances of having a heart attack: Dr. Baubie recommends eating wisely, exercising and actively listening to your body. "You only have one heart, which beats 100,000 times a day. Treat it right!" he says.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Leeza Gibbons is living life like most men used to, and she calls it "incredibly spoiled."

The "Entertainment Tonight" hostess says having a husband who works at home while she pursues her TV career gives her a lot of freedom.

"Because of him and his choice, I have really been given a lot more flexibility than a lot of women may have," she told the Daily News of Los Angeles. "I'm incredibly spoiled. I recognize it everyday."

She'll recognize it even more as she adds a new job as host of her own daytime talk show, "Leeza," which began Monday.

Gibbons has been married three years to actor and architect Stephen Meadows. But she still fears her career could derail her personal life.

Social Security

All new brides should notify Social Security if they are changing their name, according to Jim Talbot, manager of the Amarillo Social Security office.

Failure to report a name change to Social Security is one of the most frequent causes of errors in earnings records. Generally, earnings are not posted to a worker's Social Security record when the number and name do not "match." And it's the earnings posted to those records that determine if a person can get Social Security, and how much he or she will receive in monthly benefits," Talbot said.

Notifying Social Security of a name change is equally important for women who divorce and resume their maiden name.

To change the surname on a Social Security record and to receive a Social Security card showing the new name, women should call the Social Security toll-free number: 1-800-772-1213, any business day between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. They will need to provide proof of their name change, such as a marriage or divorce certificate. The entire process can be handled by mail.

"Or they can simply call our local office or come by with the needed documentation and we'll handle it in that one visit," said Talbot. "Our phone number is 376-2241."

He added that this service is free. "Brides should be especially alert to solicitations from companies that charge a fee for 'taking care of the paperwork' for them. Such companies do not provide better service than we do. And they can actually delay the process."
