Ethics expert asserts evidence shows that senator broke no laws

By MICHAEL HOLMES and SCOTT ROTHSCHILD Associated Press Writers
AUSTIN (AP) - A review of the evidence shows that U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison did nothing illegal or different from many other elected officials while she was state treasurer, according to an expert on state ethics laws.
Ed Shack, who had been slated to testify for Mrs. Hutchison, said he "didn't see anything that was a problem. I'm very comfortable saying that."
Shack, an Austin attorney who for 10 years served as an assistant secretary of state on ethics and elections issues, said Wednesday that he spent four days going over evidence expected to be presented during Mrs. Hutchison's trial on state ethics charges.
"I was looking for a so-called smoking gun. I didn't see anything," said Shack, whose firm Ethics and Election Services of Texas advises politicians and others.
The Republican senator, who has denied any wrongdoing, was found innocent on all five counts after Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle refused to go on unless the judge ruled in advance on whether his evidence would be admitted.

Earle, a Democrat, had accused Mrs. Hutchison of misusing state workers and equipment for political gain during her 2-1/2-year tenure as state treasurer.
Mrs. Hutchison has said she believes the investigation of her was a Democratic plot sparked by her landslide special election victory last June.
Shack, who worked for three Republican and three Democratic secretaries of state, said he's never met Mrs. Hutchison.
He said his review of Treasury documents and trial evidence led him to the conclusion she was an effective officeholder, not running a political machine while in charge of the Treasury.
"She was ... accused of having this huge election machine, campaign machine. I did not see evidence of that," he said.
"I saw her, certainly, being active in accepting speaking engagements or turning down speaking engagements. But it didn't seem like she was running for office. It seemed like she was being a public official, talking to lots of people, listening to what people had to say, responding to people."

Shack said it can be difficult to separate an elected officials' public duties and political skills. An official who performs well in a public job is credited with being a good politician, he noted.
He said the calendars, letters and other material he reviewed indicated that Mrs. Hutchison was an active officeholder.
"I looked over the calendars. ... There's nothing wrong with that. She had all this correspondence to people. I didn't see anything wrong with that. She was responding to a bunch of people. There were lots of letters thanking people for whatever. But it all seemed like regular constituent stuff," he said.
"What she was doing was consistent with all the other officeholders," Shack concluded.

City hosts meet to talk about new pool project

By GEORGIA TYLER Staff Writer
A confident construction supervisor said Wednesday night that Hereford residents "will swim in a new pool when school is out in 1995."
Don Kundert, who will direct the swimming pool project for the City of Hereford, and the architect, Delbert Hirst, spoke to 45 to 50 citizens at a public meeting.
Hirst, associated with the Arlington architectural firm of Schrickel, Rollins and Associates, Inc., reviewed the plans for construction of the aquatic center.
Kundert explained his approach to bring the project to completion under the architect's estimate of $1.4 million.
Since a grant of $500,000 from Texas Parks and Wildlife Department requires a local match of the amount, Kundert said he will maintain extensive records of every contribution "in kind" on the project to help meet the match and save money for some "extras."
On similar jobs, Kundert said he has been able to work county prisoners, a procedure he expects to be able to follow here.
The public meeting Wednesday evening was called by the City Commission to explain plans for replacing the pool in Dameron Park.

A two-pool concept will allow year-around use of a "domed" pool which will be suitable for school competition.
The 25-meter pool is the larger of the two pools and will be 13 1/2 feet deep at one end to meet diving standards.
The leisure pool will be graduated from zero depth to 3 1/2 feet. Some equipment originally planned for the leisure pool has been removed from the plans.
"I assure you, though, we will be able to buy the toys," Kundert told the audience. "We'll save enough money to buy them."
A building for dressing rooms also will house a pool manager's office and space for vending machines.
Hirst and Kundert said the layout meets all standards for compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.
Hereford Mayor Bob Josserand opened the meeting, telling the audience, "We are thrilled to present this to you and tell you that it is totally funded."
City Commissioner Roger Eades, chairman of a committee charged with working with the architect on the project, said the decision for the city to act as general contractor and to employ a construction superintendent grew out of a desire to save as much money as possible.

He estimated that costs may be reduced by as much as 30 percent by taking that route.
Besides the $500,000 TP&WD grant, the city received a $250,000 grant from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation.
Josserand said Jim Allison, executive director of the foundation, reported the board was impressed with the project having "the potential to unite the citizens of Hereford and Deaf Smith County."
Contributions in kind from Deaf Smith County and in cash from Hereford Independent School District and Deaf Smith Hospital District also have been pledged to the project.
Questions from citizens ranged from expected cost of operating the complex -- that's being figured -- to material for a walking track around a portion of the site -- apparently concrete is the most practical.
Remarks from those in attendance about the project were positive and enthusiastic.
Eades said plans should be completed and site preparation started in April or early May.
The complex will be located on city park property on E. 15th Street, adjacent to the YMCA.

Pool plans in review

Plans for the new swimming pool complex for Hereford were reviewed Wednesday night by the architect, Delbert Hirst, standing left, and Don Kundert, standing center, construction supervisor for the City of Hereford. Mayor Bob Josserand, at right, introduced the project to between 45 and 50 persons who attended the public meeting.

Hereford triumvirate

Hereford's own 222nd District Judge David Wesley Gulley, center, captured first place in the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce's Fun Breakfast toga contest. For his victory, Gulley received a pair of Southwest Airlines tickets anywhere they fly. Gulley was the big winner at the breakfast; he also walked away with the regular chamber $100 prize for chamber members in attendance at the breakfast. Gulley donated that money to Hereford Senior Citizens. Also participating in the contest was Nancy Last and Joe Weaver, not pictured. Watching the contest is co-master of ceremonies Charlie Bell.

Judge claims toga honors at chamber Fun Breakfast

By GARRY WESNER Managing Editor
The morning started with some 200 Hereford residents singing "Cruise, Cruise, Cruise Your Ship" while led by toga-clad masters of ceremonies John Stagner and Charlie Bell.
And, with an opening like that, there was no doubt that the Community Center was the site of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Fun Breakfast, hosted by Hereford Travel Center.
Before the festivities had ended, District Judge David Wesley Gulley had modeled the best toga of all, County Judge Tom Simons and his wife, Cindy, had come in third place in the local version of "The Newlywed Game," and Cupid himself had come to visit.
The highlight of the breakfast was supposed to be a Toga Party at which the winner would receive round-trip tickets for two anywhere Southwest Airlines flies.

But, by Stagner and Bell, chamber executive vice president Mike Carr and four Hereford Travel Center employees were removed from the contest, only three entrants were left. Gulley received the most applause for his white and navy blue toga -- adorned with gold jewelry and a wrist hourglass -- and won the tickets.

Efforts under way to help family Police official loses everything to blaze

BY RICK LANNING Staff Writer
Hereford residents are beginning to respond to help a Hereford police captain and his family who lost everything when a fire ravaged their home Monday.
Police Captain Pat Michael, his wife, Cheryl, and their three children were left homeless when the fire broke out Monday around 9:05 p.m. and spread rapidly through the house.
Fire Marshall Jay Spain said, "The Michaels were in the den watching television when Mrs. Michael heard a noise and went to the kitchen.
"She saw flames spreading through the door and alerted her husband. They fled from the house and called the fire department from a neighbor's house."
Six fire units under Chief David Spain fought the blaze for nearly two hours. Damage to the house and contents was estimated at $40,000 to $50,000, a fire department spokesman said.
Michael has been a member of the Hereford Police Department since 1980.
The elder Spain, who is president of the Hereford Peace Officers Association, said his association is working with police and the Community Church to help the family.
Jana Duggan, wife of the Rev. Dorman Duggan, pastor of the Community Church, where the Michaels are members, has started a fund at the First National Bank. Anyone wishing to make a donation to help the family should call 364-8866 or 364-2323.

Jay Spain said the couple's children had gone to a concert in Amarillo and were not home when the fire broke out.
He added, "All of the contents were destroyed by flames or smoke damage and the structure sustained heavy damage."
He said the house was not equipped with a smoke alarm.
In addition to his work with the police department, Michael is chairman of the 12-member Hereford Outreach Board of Directors which assists victims of rape and domestic violence.

Hospital board sets election

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District will hold its board of directors election on May 7, the board voted on Tuesday.
The terms of four directors expire this year: John Perrin, president; Boyd Foster, secretary; and Paul Abalos and Merle Clark.
Candidates must file for the positions 30 days prior to the election.
At Tuesday regular meeting, the board took no action on a proposal to lengthen director terms to four years, which would allow for staggered terms for directors, a possibility that had been discussed at the January meeting.

Local DAR chapter hears several reports

Los Ciboleros Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution met Feb. 10 in the Hereford Community Center lounge.

The DAR Ritual was led by Kathryn Ruga, regent, assisted by Ruth Knox, chaplain. The Pledge to the Flag of the United States of America was led by Wanda Jones and Patricia Robinson led the "American's Creed." Mary Williamson led the singing of "America."

Frances Hennen was welcomed as a guest.

Helen Rose, vice regent, brought the President General's Message from the February 1994 Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine. Members were encouraged to support the President General's Project, "The Renovation of Constitution Hall" which is located in the heart of our nation's capitol. With a capacity of 4,000, it is the largest auditorium of its kind in the world. Built in 1928,

Gift shop is auxiliary topic

The Hereford Regional Medical Center Auxiliary met Feb. 7 at the hospital for a luncheon meeting to discuss its gift shop located in the hospital.

Members talked about participating in a workshop or demonstration in making balloon bouquets to be sold in the shop. They also discussed selling candy in the shop.

Mary Williamson read the minutes of the previous meeting and roll call was answered by 11 members present. Also, the treasurer's report was given by Lupe Cerda, and Bonnie Sublett reported that 145 volunteer hours had been accumulated for January.

Recruitment of new members was also on the business agenda.

Those attending were Mary Williamson, Anna Stindt, Bonnie Sublett, Nell Cupepper, Jo Lee, Baxter London, Elizabeth Fowler, Margaret Daniels, Irene Reinart, Lupe Cerda and Mary Jane Burrus.

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) - Liz Claiborne's latest work is in earth tones.

The fashion designer and her husband, Art Ortenberg, donated $500,000 Monday to fund a new forestry and conservation center at the University of Montana.

The gift honors Arnold Bolle, the school's retired dean of forestry and a leader in conservation.

Claiborne and Ortenberg called their gift to the new center "our valentine to Arnold Bolle."

the Hall was once the premiere performing arts theater. "Due to current conditions of the Hall, it is being utilized," stated President General Mrs. Wayne G. Blair as she challenged members to support her project of returning Constitution Hall to her rightful place at the top of all performing arts centers.

Charlotte Clark, National Defense chairman, presented a report from the January National Defender entitled "The Propaganda In Environmental Education" by Alton Chase. Mrs. Clark quoted the author as saying "Because courses that address social issues are required instead of hard stuff like chemistry, students have no defense against claims of environmental organizations."

American History Committee Chairman Charlotte Clark reported that 178 essays had been read and judged by her committee. Contest winners will be recognized at a tea April 17 at the Hereford Community Center. Individual awards will be made at the awards assemblies later this spring.

The chapter commended Mrs. Clark and her committee for their fine work.

Hostesses were Charlotte Clark and Mary Williamson. Others present were: Margaret Bell, Mildred Drake, Margaret Ann Durham, Lois Gilliland, Jones, Ruth Newsum, Nell Norvell, Patricia Robinson, Rose, Ruga and guest, Frances Hennen.

The next meeting will be held March 10 at the Community Center.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for your Kansas City reader who asked if she should "forget the sparks" and assume that if she married "Fred," love would come later.

I could have written that letter 30 years ago. My "Fred" was attractive, comfortable to be with and successful, but the sparks were missing. I went ahead and married him, thinking the sparks would come later. I was wrong.

My marriage is solid, but I feel cheated when bedtime comes around, and I am bored at the prospect. I regret not having waited for a different man, and when I see couples who have that spark, I know what a mistake I made. —Regrets in Riverside

DEAR RIV: Sorry it didn't work out for you, but a Canadian reader has a different story to tell. Keep reading:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your Kansas City correspondent who complained there were no sparks should hang onto "Fred." Relationships built on friendship have a strong foundation and last a lot longer than ones founded on passion.

I felt no physical attraction for the man I married. We started out as acquaintances who had a lot of respect for one another. One day, out of the blue, I realized that I couldn't be without him, and that spark of dependency turned into a roaring flame. It took five years of dating, but we now have a wonderfully passionate marriage. —Windsor, Ontario

DEAR WINDSOR: Beautiful.

With so many marriages failing these days, it's refreshing to receive a letter like yours. Thanks for the upper.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband, "Joe" was the victim of a miserable, egocentric father who was ill-tempered, abusive and alcoholic, although he presented a wonderful face to the community. This man's emotional neglect of his son left scars of insecurity, but fortunately, my husband did not grow up to be his father's clone.

What does disturb me, however, is my husband's failure to see that young people need praise. When our son, "Mike," washed the car, all Joe saw was the spot he missed. When the kid arrived home after driving through a snowstorm, which was quite a feat, his father's first words were, "You're late." Mike's achievements get low-key comments like "very good", but there is never any genuine enthusiasm.

Is Joe jealous of Mike? Is there something I can do to alter this hurtful pattern? I want our home to be a happy one, but I can't do it alone. Please help me understand the dynamics between my husband and my son. —Hurt in Toronto

DEAR TORONTO: I doubt that Joe is jealous of the boy. There are other dynamics at work in your family.

Fathers tend to treat their children the way they were treated by their fathers. A son who is cherished by his father will be affectionate and loving toward his son. If a boy is abused, deprecated and belittled by his dad, he will treat his son the same way.

Do your best to add balance to the picture. Give Mike extra dollops of affection and praise. Build him up when his father tears him down. And please, make sure Joe sees this column. Sometimes when people see themselves in print, it helps. It may be that Joe never saw the connection.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Lone Star Study Club hears book review

Ruby Stevenson reviewed the book No Greater Love by Danielle Steele when members of the Lone Star Study Club met recently in the home of Margaret Ann Durham with Wilma Goetsch serving as co-hostess.

Stevenson explained that the book concerned a family who took a trip to England. On their return trip they were aboard the Titanic. She related what happened to the family.

Betty Jo Carlson presided during the business meeting and the club collect was read in unison. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and corrected.

The next meeting will be held March 8 with Stevenson serving as hostess. Argen Draper will give the program on "First Ladies."

Refreshments were served to Betty Jo Carlson, Doneita Davidson, Byrdie Fellers, Mildred Fuhrmann, Naomi Hare, Birdene Huff, Verna Sowell, Quintina Waits, Gladys Willoughby, Marie Harris, Willie Whitten and Ruby Stevenson.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - A 10-year-old boy faced Bobby Knight's famous temper and lived to tell about it.

Knight invited Kyle Hahn for a visit after learning that his father, a big fan, was killed in December. But on Saturday, when he showed up at a closed practice with four other family members, Knight went ballistic - using strong language telling them to get out.

After realizing his mistake, Knight had a team manager chase them down. The coach gave them a guided tour of the locker room, a handful of souvenirs and a seat behind the Hoosiers' bench during their 93-91 victory over Iowa.

"As we all think it over now, maybe the greatest thing that happened to us all day might be that we incurred the world-famous wrath of Bobby Knight," said Kyle's grandfather, Kenny Hahn.

Sudan vs. Adrian here tonight

Hereford will host a girls bi-district basketball game tonight between No. 1 ranked Sudan and Adrian. The Class A playoff game starts at 6:30 p.m. in Whiteface Gym.

Sudan, 28-3 and the champion of District 2-1A, is ranked first in Class A in the most recent poll by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches. Adrian, 13-16, is the runner-up in District 1-1A.

Two boys games are scheduled for next week in Hereford—one for practice and one for real. The practice game will be between Channing and Amherst, and they'll meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Whiteface Gym. Channing will come back Thursday for a 7 p.m. bi-district game against Sudan's boys.

Baseball team set for scrimmage

The Hereford baseball team will scrimmage in Plainview this Saturday after hosting the Bulldogs last Saturday. The junior varsity will start off at 10 a.m., and the varsity will go at 1 p.m.

The baseball Herd debuts for real at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at Canyon. The home opener is at 1 p.m. Feb. 26 when Estacado comes to town.

The junior varsity baseball team will host Canyon's JV at 4:30 Monday, and the JV B squad will host Canyon's freshmen at 4:30 Thursday.

Other than baseball, Hereford athletes have the weekend off. The boys' track team will start its season Feb. 25-26; the tennis team and girls' track team will continue their seasons Feb. 25-26; and the boys' golf team won't start until Mar. 4-5.

Harding, Kerrigan share ice, don't talk

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

HAMAR, Norway (AP) - Tonya Harding, skating today amid increased security in her first Olympic practice with Nancy Kerrigan, twice nailed the triple axel jump no other woman will even attempt in the Winter Games and showed she's ready to go for the gold.

Harding and Kerrigan looked at each other only out of the corners of their eyes to keep from bumping while they skated. When one performed her routine, the other turned away to talk to her coach.

Harding, Kerrigan and two other skaters worked out amid the most intense security seen at any event at the Olympics and under the gaze of an international media horde worthy of a presidential summit.

"It's sick," said Kathy Casey, coach of Korea's Lily Lee, an American-trained skater who practiced in the session. "You don't train for the Olympics your whole life to come here and have to deal with this. It's pathetic."

But it was also compelling, and it drew several other members of the U.S. figure skating team, U.S. Olympic Committee executive director Harvey Schiller, coaches from other countries and dozens of Norwegian volunteers.

Kerrigan stepped on the ice first, precisely on time, just after Elton John's song, "I'm Still Standing," ended on the loudspeakers at the hockey rink where they practiced across from the main rink. Kerrigan wore a look of bewilderment as she scanned the crowd, but smiled when she saw her coaches.

Lee and a Bulgarian skater joined Kerrigan and they warmed up for eight minutes before Harding showed up, holding the hand of a beefy team physiotherapist.

Harding's serious demeanor soon gave way to smiles as she began to skate, wearing a blue USA Olympic sweatshirt. An asthmatic, Harding coughed frequently between segments of her warmup and routine.

There were the usual close passes between the skaters, Harding speeding at times closely between Kerrigan and Lee. But no one got bumped, and the only bruises came on the occasional falls by all the skaters.

Harding, still under investigation for her alleged role in the attack on Kerrigan on Jan. 6, practiced her free skate program before Kerrigan and promptly showed she was ready for the Games by easily making a triple toe loop jump. Harding skated only segments of her program, stopping after most jumps to talk to her coach, Diane Rawlinson. Kerrigan stood on the side, her back to the rink, talking to her coaches, Evy and Mary Scottvold.

Kerrigan skated through her whole program, opening nicely with a triple flip and a triple toe-loop combination. But Kerrigan also popped a couple of triple jumps, turning them into doubles. Harding didn't watch her at all, standing by her coach and coughing.

Harding kept practicing, and two minutes later landed the tough triple axel on her first attempt. That jump is the one Harding will need to land in the competition next week to separate herself from the others, and nailing it now on the first try made her rush over to her coach and choreographer and give them hugs.

Harding popped her second try at the triple axel and fell on her third attempt. At that point, only two minutes left in the session, Lee skated over to Harding and gave her a big hug in the middle of the ice, a touching moment that led team leader Gail Tanger to thank Lee for the show of support.

Harding, happier than ever, then went at the triple axel one more time and nailed it again.

Moe picks up another Olympic medal

By DAVE CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP)

- Also-rans no longer, it seems the only times American skiers hang their heads at the Olympics is to get medals draped around their necks.

Tommy Moe, celebrating his 24th birthday, followed his stunning victory in the downhill last Sunday by taking the silver today in the men's super-giant slalom.

Today's gold-medal winners: Markus Wasmeier of Germany in the super-G, Bjorn Dahlie of Norway in the men's 10-kilometer classical cross-country ski race, Lyubov Egorova of Russia in the women's 10-kilometer freestyle pursuit - her eighth medal in eight Olympic races - and Svetlana Bazhanova of Russia in the women's 3,000-meter speedskating after favored Gunda Niemann fell.

Moe's silver, combined with Diann Roffe-Steinrotter's gold in the women's super-G on Tuesday, gave the Americans a medal in all three Alpine events run at Lillehammer so far. And that doesn't count the downhill portion of the Alpine combined, in which Kyle Rasmussen and Moe finished second and third this week. That event will be completed Feb. 25.

"It's getting kind of contagious," U.S. Alpine director Paul Major had said before today's race. "Everybody thinks they can win now."

Wasmeier was the winner in 1 minute, 32.53 seconds for his first medal in three Olympics and the first gold won by a German Alpine male skier since 1936. Moe, of Palmer, Alaska, finished .08 seconds back and again edged favorite Kjetil Andre Aamodt. The Norwegian, the defending Olympic super-G champion, got the bronze in 1:32.93.

Moe, the third man down the hill with Wasmeier right behind him, got to eat cake with another birthday boy, sixth-place finisher Atle Skardaal of Norway, as he stood waiting for more than an hour watching other skiers' times.

He's the first American to win more than one medal in skiing at an Olympics since Penelope Pitou in 1960, and the first American man ever to achieve that feat.

"I'm just lucky to have my life going so well right now," Moe said.

At the other end of the Gudbrandsdalen Valley, Olympics officials virtually quadrupled security to 150 for the first joint figure-skating practice for Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding. Officials said they'd received two telephone threats from the United States, before Kerrigan arrived.

Undaunted, Harding twice nailed the triple axel jump no other woman will even attempt at the Winter Games.

More than 100,000 Norwegians braved chilly weather in Olympic Park today to watch national hero Vegard "The Viking" Ulvang make his Lillehammer debut in the men's cross-country race. But Ulvang, whose results have been spotty since his brother disappeared in the mountains in October, finished only seventh.

Dahlie, who like Ulvang won three golds at Albertville, was first today, 18 seconds ahead of World Cup leader Vladimir Smirnov of Kazakhstan. Marco Albarello of Italy was third.

Egorova's victory in the women's freestyle gave her two golds and a silver at Lillehammer after winning five medals at Albertville. The all-time Winter Games record is 10 by Soviet cross-country skier Raisa Smetanina.

Niemann, the German world champion and defending gold medalist, hadn't lost a major 3,000-meter race in three years. But she was eliminated today when she fell on a turn just 38 seconds into the race, sliding across the ice and bowling over the Japanese skater she was paired against, Seiko Hashimoto.

Bazhanova won in 4:17.43, more than seven seconds off Niemann's record. Emese Hunyady of Austria took the silver and Claudia Pechstein of Germany the bronze.

When it comes to picking the star of the Games so far, truly Koss is boss for the Norwegians.

Johann Olav Koss, a speedskater and sometime medical student from Oslo, dashed to a second world record and gold medal by winning the 1,500 meters on Wednesday in front of a raucous, adoring mob at Viking Ship Hall. And his best event, the 10,000 meters, is yet to come.

"I could feel the excitement in the hall. Every stroke felt just right," said Koss, who donated his $30,000 winner's bonus to Olympic Aid to help the residents of war-torn Sarajevo.

After today's four medal events, the Norwegians and Russians had five gold medals each. Russia led in the overall count with 12, Norway had 9 and Italy 8. The United States was tied with Germany with four - two gold and two silver.

Barkley's return sparks Suns past Trail Blazers

By The Associated Press
The Phoenix Suns hope the return of Charles Barkley means the second half of their season will be like the second half of their game against Portland.

The Suns, who trailed by 13 points in the first quarter, blitzed the Trail Blazers with an 81-point second half Wednesday night, turning a slim halftime deficit into a 126-100 rout.

"We just want to get this team that we've got here right now together, focused and playing a lot better defense," Barkley said after a 20-point performance in 29 minutes.

Barkley, last year's NBA MVP, missed 17 games because of a torn tendon in his right leg, and the Suns struggled to an 8-9 record in his absence.

Cedric Ceballos, who started 15 times in Barkley's place, returned to the bench, but still scored 30 points. Barkley's return showed up most strongly on defense and rebounding, where Phoenix had a 60-39 edge.

"They were able to get to the boards and get into a transition game," said Cliff Robinson, who scored 19 points for the Trail Blazers.

Clyde Drexler was ejected after picking up two technicals 2:02 apart in the pivotal third quarter, when the Suns outscored the Blazers 41-20 to take an 86-70 lead.

Drexler, the Blazers' No. 2 scorer, left the game with 3:15 left in the third period, and the Suns went ahead 75-62 on two foul shots by A.C. Green, who had 10 of his 15 rebounds and nine of his 16 points in the quarter.

Ceballos and Barkley picked up the pace in the fourth quarter, teaming for a 20-11 run in the first six minutes to seal the outcome.

Heat 109, Bulls 101

Miami trailed Chicago by 21 points in the second quarter and 61-43 at halftime, but Steve Smith capped the Heat's rally with 14 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter, ending the Bulls' home winning streak at 17 games.

Chicago's last previous loss at home was Nov. 13 against Boston. The Heat handed Chicago its only other home loss on Nov. 6 and became the first Bulls opponent to win two regular-season games in Chicago since 1990-91.

Hornets 102, Rockets 97

Charlotte snapped an eight-game losing streak behind Hersey Hawkins' 25 points and career-high 14 rebounds against Houston.

Charlotte led 53-45 at the half after the Rockets overcame most of a 19-point second-quarter deficit. Houston continued to rally in the third quarter, outscoring the Hornets 31-21 for a 76-74 lead as Hakeem Olajuwon scored 12 of his 30 points in the period.

But Charlotte surged to a 94-84 lead with 5:44 left in the game and held off Houston down the stretch.

Nuggets 107, Bucks 95

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 21 points and Dikembe Mutombo grabbed 16 rebounds as Denver snapped a three-game losing streak by winning at Milwaukee.

The Bucks trailed 57-45 at halftime, but they rallied to a 70-63 deficit with 2:59 left in the third quarter.

But the Nuggets responded with eight straight points and led 78-65 going into the final period. The Bucks got no closer than 10 after that as Abdul-Rauf scored eight points in the final quarter.

Kings 94, 76ers 92, OT

Sacramento scored the final eight points of regulation, then beat visiting Philadelphia on Mitch Richmond's tiebreaking 3-pointer with 9.7 seconds left in overtime.

Richmond gave the Kings a 93-90 lead with his decisive 3-pointer.

Clarence Weatherspoon, who scored 20 points for the Sixers, missed two free throws with 21 seconds left in regulation.

Jazz 103, Clippers 99

John Stockton became the third NBA player with 9,000 assists, then hit a 3-pointer with 5.2 seconds left, boosting Utah to victory at Los Angeles.

The Clippers, who led by 15 in the third quarter, took an 99-98 edge on Tom Tolbert's 3-pointer with 20 seconds left.

Stockton then drove downcourt for his 3-pointer from the top of the key for a 101-99 lead. He finished with 15 points and 12 assists, giving him 9,009 for his career.

Los Angeles still had a chance to tie when Mark Jackson was fouled with 0.2 seconds remaining.

But Jackson was far short on the first free throw and intentionally missed the second. Tom Chambers concluded the scoring with two free throws.

Aggies' Edwards reaches milestone

By The Associated Press
David Edwards set a conference record and Texas A&M was able to keep the pressure on the Texas Longhorns in the Southwest Conference title race.

Joe Wilbert scored 24 points Wednesday night to lead the Aggies to a 93-87 victory over the Houston Cougars.

In other SWC games, Texas Tech defeated Southern Methodist 78-76 and Rice whipped Texas Christian 84-65.

Edwards scored 19 points for the Aggies, allowing him to surpass 1,000 points for his career at Texas A&M. He also had 12 assists and 1 steal, making him the first player in SWC history to score 1,000 points with 500 assists and 200 steals. In his three seasons at A&M, Edwards has 1,014 points, 516 steals and 206 steals.

"I was happy to achieve it. The good Lord really has blessed me," said Edwards, who transferred from Georgetown after his freshman season.

Including his year at Georgetown, Edwards has 1,181 points with 666 assists and 248 steals as a Division I player. He came into the game ranked third nationally in assists with 8.4 per game.

Texas A&M (15-6 overall, 8-1 in the SWC) held a 43-39 halftime lead, but Rafael Carrasco hit two straight baskets and Anthony Goldwire added another as the Cougars ran off six straight points for a 5-43 lead to open the second half.

Chuck Henderson's two free throws with 15:24 left in the game gave the Aggies a 52-51 lead that they held for the rest of the game.

The Aggies' final 10 points came from the free throw line during the final minute as Houston fouled after every Cougar basket.

The Aggies also got 22 points from Brett Murry and 11 each from Tony McGinnis and Henderson.

Goldwire had a game-high 31 points and 10 assists for Houston (4-17 and 2-8). Tim Moore had 24 and Jessie Drain added 14.

Texas Tech blew a 15-point halftime lead but held on for a 78-76 victory when Southern Methodist turned the ball over in the final seconds while working for a final shot.

Mark Davis scored 24 points to lead Tech (11-10, 6-4). James Gatewood scored 17 points to lead SMU (3-18, 1-9).

SMU, trailing by 77-76, got the ball at 0:12 and worked for the last shot. Chris Boyd got the ball in the corner, but lost it on a turnover, and the Mustangs had to foul Davis with two seconds to play.

Davis made the first free throw to make the score 78-76. SMU grabbed the rebound of his missed second shot, but Kwame Brown's desperation shot hit the backboard and bounced away at the buzzer.

"We were in position to win the game. I thought our inexperience down the stretch hurt us," SMU coach John Shumate said.

Texas Tech coach James Dickey expressed disappointment that his team couldn't hold onto its first-half lead.

"We're just happy to get the win," he said.

Torrey Andrews scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half helping Rice win its second game in a row with a 84-65 victory over Texas Christian.

Rice (13-9 overall, 5-4 SWC) ended a four-game losing streak on Sunday with a 65-63 victory over Southern Methodist. TCU dropped to 6-15, 3-7.

There were eight lead changes in the first half with Rice outscoring the Horned Frogs 15-4 over the final 6:28 of the first half to take a 39-28 lead at the intermission. Rice scored the final nine points of the half.

Missouri closes on Big 8 title

By The Associated Press
Magic numbers are usually reserved for baseball pennant races. Well, Missouri's magic number is one to clinch a tie for the Big Eight title and it's only mid-February.

The 12th-ranked Tigers remained unbeaten in conference play with a 79-72 overtime victory at Iowa State on Wednesday night. It wasn't pretty, but it did give the Tigers (19-2, 10-0) an eight-game overall winning streak and a 14-game league winning streak.

The Tigers are putting together quite a season after finishing 5-9 in the league last season. They now have a 3-1/2-game lead in the conference over Kansas and Oklahoma State as they try to win the regular-season title for the first time since 1989-90.

Missouri pulled it out against the Cyclones (11-10, 1-8) when Jevon Crudup scored eight of the Tigers' 14 points in overtime. He scored the first points 10 seconds into the extra session and then dominated inside.

In other games involving ranked teams Wednesday night, it was: No. 1 Arkansas 102, Alabama 81; Oklahoma State 63, No. 4 Kansas 59 in overtime; No. 6 Duke 84, Virginia 54; No. 7 Michigan 89, Iowa 76; No. 9 Purdue 67, No. 24 Wisconsin 64; No. 13 Temple 65, St. Bonaventure 56; No. 17 Florida 91, Georgia 79; No. 23 Cincinnati 78, No. 18 Saint Louis 73; No. 20 Minnesota 94, Penn State 66; and Tulane 66, No. 21 Alabama-Birmingham 60.

No. 1 Arkansas 102, Alabama 81
The Razorbacks (19-2, 9-2 SEC) avenged their first loss of the season as Corliss Williamson scored half of his 20 points in the first four minutes of the second half when Arkansas took a 58-39 lead. Jamal Faulkner had 18 points for the visiting Crimson Tide (13-8, 8-4).

Oklahoma St. 63, No. 4 Kansas 59, OT
Brooks Thompson tied it with a

No. 6 Duke 84, Virginia 54

Grant Hill dominated the team that held him to four points earlier in the season by scoring 25 points, grabbing 11 rebounds, handing out five assists and blocking four shots. Antonio Lang and freshman Jeff Capel each had 20 points for the Blue Devils (18-3, 9-3 ACC). Jason Williford's 14 points led the visiting Cavaliers (13-8, 7-5).

No. 7 Michigan 89, Iowa 76

The Wolverines (18-4, 10-2 Big Ten) extended their conference lead and won their seventh straight. Juwan Howard had 24 points, nine rebounds and six assists, while Jalen Rose added 19 points and 11 assists as Michigan beat the Hawkeyes (9-11, 3-8) at home for the 13th straight year.

No. 9 Purdue 67, No. 24 Wisconsin 64

Glenn Robinson had 27 points and 16 rebounds as the Boilermakers (21-3, 9-3 Big Ten) withstood a late 3-point barrage by the visiting Badgers (15-6, 6-6).

Spring training warms up in Florida, Arizona

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

It doesn't seem that cold anymore, does it?

From Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to Tucson, Ariz., baseball players started lumbering onto the green grass under those pretty blue skies Wednesday morning.

Baseball is back, and it's just 6-1/2 weeks to opening day.

"No doubt everyone is excited to be here," Chicago White Sox outfielder Michael Huff said as his team gathered in Sarasota, Fla. "We felt like we should have gotten farther last year and, after thinking about that during the winter, we were anxious to get down and get going again."

Chicago lost to Toronto in the AL playoffs last year. The Blue Jays, the first team to repeat as World Series champions since the 1977-78 New York Yankees, won't start working out until Tuesday, five days after the voluntary reporting date.

Other clubs wanting to catch them didn't waste time getting started.

"People have questioned us about not making changes," Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said as Florida gathered in Melbourne, Fla., to start its second season. "But we believe we have some young people that we still need to take a good look at. They have not reached their potential yet. We want to give them an opportunity to improve."

Lachemann plans only two changes in the lineup he used at the end of last season. Slugger Gary Sheffield will move from third base to right field, and three players will vie to replace shortstop Walt Weiss, who departed via free agency.

Colorado general manager Bob Gebhard watched a dozen Rockies work out at Tucson, Ariz., and was surprised the early turnout was so high.

"Normally you see a couple of the young kids come in a little bit early to get some advanced work in warm weather. This is the most I think I've ever seen," Gebhard said.

Among the early arrivals were pitchers Bruce Ruffin, Willie Blair and Curtis Leskanic and catchers Joe Girardi, Danny Sheaffer, Jayhawk Owens and Eric Wedge.

Over in Port St. Lucie, Fla., Mets manager Dallas Green was trying to forget everything from last year, when the only things overshadowing New York's 59-103 record were Vince Coleman's firecracker tossing, Bret Saberhagen's bleach spraying and Coleman's accidental clubbing of Dwight Gooden with a 9-iron.

"We want to learn from it, but we want to know that it is in the past and there is nothing we can do about it now," Green said.

Down the coast at Fort Lauderdale, the New York Yankees are intent on improving last year's 88-74 record and second-place finish. A key for

New York is the bullpen, and manager Buck Showalter is thinking of rotating closers if no one is dominant this spring.

"Paul Assenmacher has closed at times. Steve Howe has closed some games," Showalter said. "Xavier Hernandez has done so somewhat. So has Bob Wickman and Jeff Reardon. We have a lot of people who have been there in the ninth inning. How it shakes out is what we've got to find out down here."

At Fort Myers, Fla., Floridians Mike Greenwell and Greg Blosser were the earliest Boston Red Sox arrivals, joining Aaron Sele, John Valentin and John Flaherty before the official opening.

"There is going to be pressure," said Red Sox manager Butch Hobson. "This is my third year and we've had two losing seasons in a row."

On the injury front, the San Francisco Giants said pitcher Bud Black had arthroscopic surgery to repair a 1987 injury to his right knee. The surgery, to repair torn cartilage, was performed Tuesday night at the Surgi Center in Palo Alto.

Black was 8-2 with a 3.56 ERA in 16 starts last season for the Giants before undergoing surgery Sept. 25 to repair a tendon in his left arm. He is expected to miss 4-to-6 weeks.

CFL awards team to Louisiana

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) - Louisiana's entry into the Canadian Football League appears just a formality now.

CFL commissioner Larry Smith, Detroit businessman Bernie Glibberman and Gov. Edwin Edwards have scheduled a Friday news conference to officially announce the awarding of a Shreveport expansion franchise to Glibberman.

The stage was set Wednesday when Ottawa businessman Bruce Firestone assumed ownership of the Ottawa Rough Riders from Glibberman.

The deal, announced in Ottawa, gives Firestone the Riders for $1.85 million in deferred payments. The CFL will recoup the price from ticket surcharges and a share of Ottawa's take on future expansion fees.

Glibberman will give the league $1.7 million for the rights to field the Shreveport Pirates this season. Payment terms were not announced.

"The total value of the deal is well in excess of $3 million (the current expansion fee)," CFL commissioner Larry Smith said.

In Shreveport, meanwhile, the city council met in special session Wednesday to give 7-0 approval to a resolution authorizing a 56-page lease agreement with Glibberman. The council must meet again Tuesday to officially authorize Mayor Hazel Beard to sign the lease.

Next Tuesday's vote is required because the city's charter does not allow proposals introduced in special meetings to be approved in special meetings.

Ottawa president Phil Kershaw has already requested that the Pirates open the season in Ottawa. "People here deserve a chance to welcome them," he said in Ottawa.

The Pirates will play their home games in 50,149-seat Independence Stadium which, because of renovations due to the larger CFL field, eventually will accommodate between 46,000 to 48,000.

The two-month birth process of the Shreveport franchise was termed "unbelievable" by Glibberman, who attended the council meeting with his son Lonie, the team president.

"The only way we could have accomplished this is with some great cooperation from the council and the community of Shreveport," said Glibberman. "We're ready to get started."

The deal sends five Riders to Shreveport with Glibberman: linebacker Gregg Stumon, quarterback Terrence Jones, wideout Wayne Walker, cornerback Joe Mero and defensive end Dexter Manley.

Firestone, the founder of the NHL expansion Ottawa Senators, assumes ownership of the Riders following a long courtship. The Ottawa real estate developer and entrepreneur was approached in 1989 and again in 1991.

The Riders are under their fifth ownership, including the league, in seven years.

News of nutrition

A recent Gallup poll of over 1,000 women over the age of 18 revealed that 51 percent say they are overweight by at least ten pounds. In fact, the Calorie Control Council determined that 48 million consumers are dieting at any time, and an additional five million are dieting as a result of holiday over-eating.

My guess is, you, or someone you know, are probably one of those feeling guilty about over-indulging this holiday season. Just get back on track, and make your New Year's resolution both attainable and enjoyable.

"Diets don't work!" Heard this before? Well, it's true. The word "diet" evokes feelings of frustration, deprivation and often failure for anyone who has unsuccessfully tried to lose weight. Successful weight loss begins with changes in food intake and exercise routine. But, what few people realize is these changes should incorporate the foods and activities you enjoy.

Follow these suggestions to help you prepare great tasting low fat meals: Fill 75 percent of your plate with fresh vegetables, whole grains and legumes, and add a fist-size portion of lean meat or fish. Marinade in oil-free, fat-free dressings, and grill or broil for the ultimate fat and calorie savings. If you don't have time to cook, you can still eat healthy, as prepackaged meals boast a better-than-ever nutritional profile. For example, you can't go wrong with Weight Watchers Food Company products, including an extraordinary line of frozen entrees called Smart Ones™, with one gram of fat per serving.

When dinner is over, don't blow it on dessert! Choose fresh fruit, sherbets or reduced-fat sweets such as Weight Watchers Frozen Treats and Frozen Desserts, which will cure any sweet tooth. Imagine treating yourself to a 35 calorie Weight Watchers Chocolate Mousse Bar, or an indulgent Sweet Celebrations Chocolate Eclair, and not feeling guilty.

To be a smart eater, you must be a smart shopper. A cabinet filled with high-fat chips and cookies is dangerous, choose fat-free or reduced-fat snacks instead. QUESTION: Sponges look so much like plants; why are they called animals?

ANSWER: For many years the sponges were classified as plants because of their branch-like forms and their inability to move around.

After all, they do not resemble animals at all. They have no digestive, circulatory or nervous systems; no mouth; and no recognizable head.

In the mid-1800s, after scientists began to study the sponge's method of feeding, the sponge was reclassified as animals.

Sponges do not make food as plants do. Rather, they filter food and nutrients out of the water through their numerous pores. Hence, they are considered the most simple animal and belong to the phylum Porifera.

Though there are a few small fresh-water sponges, most of the 5,000 species live in shallow seas and can grow to over six feet in size. Their colors range from white and gray to shades of red, yellow, green, purple and black. Their shapes can also take on many forms.

Reproductively, sponges are able to regenerate -- that is, they can regrow missing parts of the body and can even grow new sponges from fragments. They are also hermaphrodites. This means that each organism has the ability to produce both eggs and sperm, though at different times.

Sponge growers in Florida make a living regenerating sponges made of a spongy skeleton. These bath sponges are marketed after they are cleaned, bleached and dried. Other sponges have skeletons made of calcium, silicon, or a combination of the two and are not suitable to use for bathing. The rectangular sponges bought in stores are artificial. Real sponges are round in shape.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Like most women, I am really concerned that I may develop breast cancer. My grandmother died of breast cancer at age 77 and it was very frightening. Also, a cousin of my mother's has breast cancer, had a mastectomy and is in treatment. These are the only people in my family who have had breast cancer. Does this mean I am more likely to get it too?

I have heard that breast cancer is caused by eating too much fat so I'm careful not to include much fat in my diet.

DEAR READER: There is considerable controversy over factors that increase a woman's risk of breast cancer. Actually, 90 percent of women with breast cancer do not have any family history of breast cancer. That means even if a person had no cancer in the family, it is still essential to examine one's breasts regularly and have mammograms at least regularly after age 50 and perhaps sooner. Family history of breast cancer becomes important when either a mother or sister develops breast cancer at an early age. The earlier breast cancer develops, the more likely it was caused by some inherited factor as opposed to breast cancer at an older age, when environmental factors have had a chance to damage genes that may lead to cancer. Age is important because most, but not all, breast cancers occur after age 55.

The role of environmental factors, whatever they are, is apparent from studies of the Japanese. In Japan, the women have a relatively low incidence of breast cancer, but Japanese women who live in the United States have a much greater risk of developing breast cancer. No one knows what environmental factors cause this difference.

I have discussed the risk factors related to breast cancer in my new Special Report 149, The Breast Cancer Dilemma, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/149, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Over 70 percent of women who develop breast cancer have no identifiable factor that increases their risk. While it was once thought that a high-fat diet was a factor, more recent studies suggest this is not so. In general, the factors that are often listed as increasing the risk of breast cancer have a weak association. So there is no reason to panic if one has such factors. It is also worth noting that three out of four women who develop breast cancer do not die from it -- a tribute to modern early diagnosis and treatment.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband developed pain in his testicles which worsened when he lifted or carried something heavy. The urologist said he had epididymitis, a bacterial infection often caused by chlamydia, a venereal disease, but that was not the cause in his case. He said you can get it from an injury. The doctor could not be sure how he got it. We are both confused about how you get epididymitis and how he can avoid it.

DEAR READER: The epididymis is the cord-like structure attached to the body of the testicle which contains the folded tube to transmit sperm. It can become infected with any number of infectious organisms, including certain sexually transmitted diseases, and from injury. It may be caused by an infection of the prostate unrelated to sexual activity, or spread by the bloodstream from other areas of infection in the body.

There is an acute form that is severely painful and requires bed rest, elevation and support of the scrotum and other supportive measures. The chronic form often follows an acute attack. Eliminating possible sources of infection such as prostatitis is about all you can do to prevent recurrences.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband came down with bacterial meningitis six days after he had a flu shot. He was 65 at the time and had had an artificial hip for 15 years. It became septic and had to be removed and not replaced because of infection. Did the flu vaccine cause the meningitis and the septic hip?

DEAR READER: No. Influenza is a virus infection, unrelated to bacterial infections. Viruses and bacteria are entirely different infectious organisms. Influenza vaccines are designed to protect against viruses that cause the flu.

Your concern points up a lingering suspicion by many that getting their flu shot is dangerous. The danger is in not getting it. Also it points out a common belief that when two things occur at or near the same time one caused the other, even though the truth is it is a coincidence. That is one reason for a lot of health misinformation.

It is much more likely that your husband developed a bacterial infection of the hip, and the bacteria spread to the brain to cause bacterial meningitis, unrelated to the flu vaccine.

Computer short courses offered

AMARILLO -- Texas Agricultural Extension Service is offering an advanced computer shortcourse using the financial recordkeeping software program Quicken 7 now widely used in agriculture operations. The program features a traveling notebook computer laboratory. The day long classes are being scheduled in communities throughout the Panhandle in February.

Dr. Steve Amosson, Professor and Extension Economist-Management, is offering an advanced shortcourse session in Amarillo on Feb. 21 at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West. Participants should have a working knowledge of Quicken. This course will focus on shortcuts, file management, tax summaries and enterprise reports. Registration fee is $40.00. Classes start at 9:00 a.m. and end by 4:00 p.m. Pre-registration is required with class size limited to 14 participants or couples.

Dr. Amosson will teach another shortcourse for advanced users to aid farmers and ranchers in developing financial statements with Quicken 7 in Amarillo on Feb. 22. Specific statements addressed will include cash flow, balance sheet and income statement. Cost of the class is $40.00.

Most race horses are thoroughbreds--horses whose ancestry can be traced back to any of three Arabian stallions that were taken to England in the 1600s and 1700s: Byerly Turk, Darley Arabian and the Godolphin Barb.

and Pre-registration is required. Other sessions for advanced users will be offered in Dalhart on Feb. 23-24.

For registration forms and more information contact Dr. Steve Amosson at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Amarillo. 806-359-5401.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Meg Ryan recreated her most memorable celluloid moment at Harvard University, this time making the audience fake the orgasm.

Ryan, 30, was at Harvard to accept the "Woman of the Year" award Tuesday from the Hasty Pudding Theatricals club. Her off-beat hosts said they wouldn't force her to repeat her bawdy performance in the movie "When Harry Met Sally."

"Instead, they gave her a wand they called an 'orgasmabaton.'"

The student audience was divided in three sections and told to make their assigned moan, groan or shout "Yes!" at Ryan's direction.

Hesitant at first, Ryan got into the act and led the crowd in a loud, rhythmic - however quick - fake orgasm.

"Well Meg, we certainly think you've proven yourself," said club president Jeremy Nye.

"I thought I had forgotten how to do that, which is a sad thing," Ryan quipped afterward.

Tom Cruise, the Hasty Pudding 1994 "Man of the Year," will be honored Feb. 22.

Healthy infant results from embryo surgery

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Smiling in his crib, Santerras Graham is much too young to realize he helped make history.

When the infant was but a 4-month-old fetus, Dr. Ruben Quintero pioneered fetal surgery that saved Santerras' life without cutting open his mother's uterus. Now doctors hope to make this "new frontier in fetal medicine" a widely used method of correcting all kinds of birth defects.

"This poses unlimited possibilities for correcting almost any anomaly we find in a fetus," said Dr. David Cotton, chief of obstetrics at Wayne State University, where Quintero performed the surgery.

Operating on a fetus is extremely rare because of the risks it poses to the mother and baby when the uterus is opened.

But doctors wondered whether endoscopic surgery - performing operations through needle-sized holes guided by miniature cameras inside the body - would be safer.

Such surgery is becoming commonplace in adults but failed repeatedly in fetuses.

But Quintero, a Wayne State obstetrician, developed a different technique, announcing its success here Wednesday and in a paper in this week's edition of the New England

Journal of Medicine. "It is fair to say you are the first endoscopic fetal surgeon in the world," Dr. Roberto Romero, chief of perinatology at the government's National Institutes of Health, told Quintero.

Toya Graham, a 24-year-old South Carolina woman, was diagnosed with a rare defect when she was four months pregnant. One of her twins had no heart or brain but was being supported by a normal twin whose heart pumped blood for both fetuses. That's too much work for the tiny heart, so the normal twin almost always dies.

The defect occurs once in every 35,000 pregnancies. Doctors have tried surgery to correct it, but it wasn't very successful and endangered the mother. Last March, Graham agreed to let Quintero experiment. He inserted tiny instruments through two needle-size holes in her uterus and tied a knot in the malformed twin's umbilical cord. That stopped blood circulating to the abnormal fetus and allowed the normal fetus to develop properly.

In August, Santerras was born. Quintero credits miniature tools he created for his success. His endoscopes, for example, are three times smaller than those used on adults.

Josserand talks about the 'State of the City'

Hereford Mayor Bob Josserand told a group of Hereford Lions on Wednesday that the state of the city is "lead, follow or get ... out of the way."

Josserand was invited to the Hereford Lions Club meeting by monthly program chairman Speedy Nieman.

The major briefed his audience on work in the areas of water, solid waste, infrastructure and liquid waste, then took questions from those in attendance.

"Financially, the city is in very, very good shape right now," Josserand said, noting that there is an operating surplus, even though he is not sure how long that will last with increased expenditures for such things as solid waste transportation.

But the surplus, he noted to chuckles from the audience, "means no new taxes."

The mayor spent more time discussing solid waste than other areas, noting that the city will soon have to haul solid waste to Amarillo's landfill.

Because grass clippings comprise 40 percent of the city's waste during the summer, he said, a public relations campaign will begin soon to encourage people to dump their clippings in the alley to be picked up by the city.

Josserand said the clippings should not be bagged.

"We are going to take them out and work with a manure handler and compost them," he said.

Currently, Josserand said, the city collects some 18-19 tons of waste daily, which translates to some four truckloads to Amarillo each day.

For the time being, he said, the city has purchased two new compactor trucks that will be used for the trips, but there is a possibility that a transfer station will be required, to move the garbage to regular tractor-trailer rigs.

As far as a recycling program goes, the mayor said, there is no market for glass or plastics, although "we still have a market in this area for aluminum and paper."

He said the city probably will keep one central recycling point for those items. He added that the city could collect glass and plastics, but it would require hauling them to Amarillo and paying someone to take care of them, an option the city discounted.

But, Josserand said, the city will set up several oil recycling collection locations to accept used motor oil.

Regarding infrastructure, Josserand said the city has to replace some water and sewer lines in the future, which will cost some money.

There are no problems regarding liquid waste, he said, while in the area of water, the city has undertaken a program to add three million gallons of water to the city's supply through drilling new wells and construction of a new storage tank.

Morales files suit on five fast food chains

By TERRI LANGFORD
 Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Texas Attorney General Dan Morales wants to clear the air at many fast-food restaurants.

Morales, drawing on the state's deceptive trade law, filed lawsuits Wednesday against five of the nation's largest fast-food chains, accusing them of failing to adequately protect children who are "lured" with their families by playgrounds and special children's meals.

Separate lawsuits were filed against McDonald's, KFC (formerly Kentucky Fried Chicken), Taco Bell, Long John Silver's Seafood Shops and Burger King.

"Every informed American knows that smoking kills. We know that it kills not only smokers but also people surrounded by smoke," Morales said.

"Now that the medical community has documented the real health risks that secondhand smoke creates for non-smokers, especially for children, we believe the time has come to act and to act forcefully."

The suits, filed in state district court in Austin, mark the first time a state has gone to court to make fast-food restaurants either "smoke-free" or "smoke-safe," Morales said.

In Texas, public smoking issues are usually left to municipalities who issue their own city ordinances.

Spokesmen for the defendants reached Wednesday agreed the issue should be left to public policy makers.

"Fundamentally what we have here is not a fast-food issue," said Gary Gerdemann, a spokesman for Louisville, Ky.-based KFC. "Smoking in public places is a public policy issue and not for fast-food restaurants to arbitrate."

Morales' suit claims it is "false, misleading and deceptive" to suggest that the public is protected by the creation of non-smoking sections. Without dual ventilation systems in place, secondhand smoke is just recirculated in the restaurant, he said.

Education department to target minorities for scholarship help

By CAROLE FELDMAN
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Reversing Bush administration policy, the Education Department will allow colleges and universities to target scholarships to minorities to remedy past discrimination or diversify the student body.

People familiar with the department's policy decision said it was based on a finding that race-based scholarships do not violate federal law.

"These kind of programs have been around for a long time," Robert Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, said Wednesday night. "They are symbolically very important."

He applauded Education Secretary Richard Riley's decision to allow them to continue.

The future of race-based scholarships had been in limbo since 1990, when the Bush administration proposed that they be banned.

Riley expressed his support for the scholarships soon after taking office last year. But he agreed to delay any policy changes pending completion of a General Accounting Office review of the scholarships.

With the GAO's report in hand, the department has decided that schools may target scholarships toward minorities to overcome past discrimination, and, under certain conditions, to seek a more diversified student body, according to a person briefed by the department.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity. Details of the briefing were confirmed by two people familiar with its contents.

Education Department spokeswoman Kathryn Kahler declined comment on the department's decision. A formal announcement was expected later this week.

Opponents contend that race-based scholarships violate federal civil rights law and discriminate against white students by shrinking the amount of aid available to them. Richard Samp, chief counsel of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation, said the GAO report would only strengthen his hand in lawsuits challenging the scholarships.

The GAO reported last month that 4 percent of undergraduate scholarship dollars - and 5 percent of actual scholarships - are awarded on the basis of race.

Ruling clears way for welfare reform

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Federal Reserve Board ruling clears the way for states to move ahead with their welfare reform plans, Texas Comptroller John Sharp says.

Sharp hailed the Fed's 4-0 vote Wednesday to delay until March 1997 the implementation of consumer protections for welfare recipients who receive benefits such as food stamps electronically.

The Clinton administration and state proponents of paperless welfare programs had argued that immediate implementation of loss-liability limits could lead to fraud and cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

The Fed a year ago proposed extending to welfare recipients the same protections afforded bank customers whose automatic teller machine cards or debit cards are lost or stolen.

That prompted a chorus of complaints from administration and state officials worried that welfare recipients would be given an incentive to cheat the system.

Under the Fed's Regulation E, consumers whose ATM or debit cards are lost or stolen are liable only for the first $50 fraudulently obtained if they notify their bank within two business days. Those opposed to extending the regulation to welfare recipients argued that they need three years to implement their electronic benefit transfer programs as well as safeguards against fraud.

"It is not too much to ask, I think, that you try to get it up and going and you see how it's going to operate before (implementing Regulation E)," Sharp said.

Texas is among the electronic benefit transfer pioneers. The state is conducting an EBT pilot program for the federal government in two counties and expects to expand it statewide in 1996.

Thirty-six states have begun or are planning paperless welfare programs to deliver food stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other benefits electronically. Recipients can access their accounts with debit cards at ATMs, in grocery stores or other "points of service."

The Agriculture Department hopes to have food stamps delivered electronically nationwide by 1996.

"It's definitely good news for us and anyone else that's participating in electronic benefit transfer," said Maryland Department of Human Resources spokesman David Truax, whose state has the only statewide EBT program.

The Treasury Department also was pleased by the Fed's move.

"We're very pleased that they recognized the complexity and potential cost of Regulation E implementation," said Betsy Lane, director of Treasury's Cash Management Directorate and a member of an administration EBT task force.

The administration is concerned about the potential for fraud and is assessing the potential costs of Regulation E, Ms. Lane said.

Fed Governor Lawrence Lindsey said Wednesday that tests of electronic benefit transfer systems in several cities showed "the rates of loss are well below those of paper-based systems."

Lindsey and consumer groups were among those who advocated extending Regulation E, contending that welfare recipients deserve the same protections as other consumers.

"We wanted immediate implementation and we're unhappy about the delay, but I think we don't want to lose sight of the good news here, which is that the protections are now on the books and will come into effect in three years," said Consumer Union spokeswoman Michelle Meier.

"We're happy that the Fed stuck to its guns in the face of opposition from some states," she said, citing Texas as a key state working against expansion of the consumer protections.

Genetic test may tell if hair is Washington's

By ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press Writer
FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) - Did George Washington get a trim here?

Nearly 200 years after his death, scientists are testing whether the genetic code of the Father of Our Country has survived in snippets of what may be his hair.

Using new genetic technology, evidence experts at the Federal Bureau of Investigation hope to conclude whether the hair is authentic. And as technology advances, they may even discover clues about the first president's health.

"You can actually look at something and say, 'You're right, this is real,' or 'It's a sham,'" said Douglas Deedrick, a hair and fiber expert at the FBI's crime lab in Washington.

The DNA tests came about after Daughters of the American Republic Museum Director Diane Dunkley began sifting through items for an exhibit this month that focuses on Washington's personal life and surroundings.

"Many objects like this come into collections with only oral histories, where someone says this belonged to George Washington," Dunkley said.

She asked the FBI to verify the hair samples. Deedrick's unit, eager for a high-profile test of their new technology, agreed.

Deedrick has already looked at 11 hair samples submitted by the DAR and four other museums.

"We've got some that look like they came from the same person but we don't know yet whether that person is George Washington," he said.

Next, the samples will be shredded and the DNA removed for comparison to samples provided by two direct descendants of Washington's sister, Betty Washington Lewis.

In a procedure developed in the past year and increasingly used on evidence found at crime scenes, the FBI will examine the genetic building blocks of DNA, which can survive indefinitely in hair, bones, teeth and fingernails.

Mothers pass DNA coding to all their children, but only daughters pass on the specific code sequence to the next generation. If there had not been a daughter in every generation of the Washington family, the president's particular coding would have ended.

In George's case, there were two seventh-generation female line descendants to supply the hair: Eleanor Funkhouser, 67, and her cousin, Eleanor Johnston, 70.

"Of course I don't look anything like George Washington, or at least I hope I don't," Mrs. Funkhouser said.

Mount Vernon, Washington's home in Alexandria, has more than 35 bits of hair in its collection, ranging from the general's youthful red to white.
