War on as 1995 budget goes to Congress

Domenici calls Clinton proposal 'MIA Budget'

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican lawmakers want President Clinton to take a bigger bite out of the deficit, and they have another problem with his new budget: It's missing the two cornerstones of his political agenda, health care and welfare reform.

"This is an MIA budget," declared Sen. Pete Domenici, drawing on the military abbreviation for missing in action.

The 1995 budget war officially begins today with a parade of administration officials defending the spending plan on Capitol Hill.

Clinton faces trouble on both flanks.

Some liberal Democrats are unhappy because they say many of his cuts hit badly needed programs, such as money for public housing, job training for low-income youths and health services for Indians.

Clinton would eliminate 115 small programs and hold hundreds of others at or below this year's levels - cuts that were required to conform with last year's $500 billion deficit-reduction package.

Republicans and Democrats alike said they would oppose some of Clinton's planned cuts, many of which - like reduced operating aid for mass transit systems - have been rejected by past Congresses.

"There are many that will never happen, and they're put in knowing they'll never happen," said Domenici, who as ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee will be a key player in the budget wars. "This is an MIA budget because most of the administration's most important proposals - such as health care and welfare reform - are completely missing," the New Mexico Republican said.

The biggest objection in Republican ranks: Clinton should have cut more.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Clinton's program eliminations amounted to only "about one-fifth of 1 percent of the federal budget."

Except for reductions in Medicare and Medicaid he proposed to pay for his health care initiative, Clinton offered no significant reductions in the two-thirds of the budget devoted to benefit programs and servicing the federal debt.

Interest payments on the federal debt for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 will be $213 billion, one of biggest items in the entire budget.

Along with attacks from lawmakers of both parties, the White House may get some unwelcome news today from the Congressional Budget Office, which is likely to recommend that mandatory health insurance premiums in Clinton's health reform proposal be treated as part of the federal budget.

The impact: It could dramatically inflate the stated federal costs, making passage of Clinton's health care reforms even more difficult.

While the Republicans are complaining that Clinton should have shrunk the deficit more, the steps he's proposing would help reduce the deficit to a projected $176.1 billion in fiscal 1995, the lowest level since 1989.

There would be higher tobacco taxes and slower growth for Medicare and Medicaid, which he promised last year in his plan to overhaul the health care system. The budget advances no new, general tax increases, but boosts 30 fees for entering national parks and other items by $1.5 billion. It also continues his effort to eliminate federal bureaucrats' jobs.

The spending plan isn't all bad news for people who depend on federal help. Clinton built into it $8.2 billion in increases for nearly 90 initiatives, including programs for feeding poor women and children, finding more efficient energy sources and training people for better jobs.

Revocation hearing held here Monday

Probation of Cesar Limon Alardin, 48, was revoked in 222nd District Court Monday and terms of probation of Panfilo "Steven" Montelongo, 20, were modified.

Alardin was convicted in August 1992 of felony driving while intoxicated and given a five-year probation sentence. With revocation of probation, he was ordered to serve four years in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division. He also must pay a $1,000 fine.

Judge David Wesley Gulley ordered Montelongo to the Tom Green County Restitution Center, then to be subject to six months of intensive supervision. He was given a seven-year probation sentence in May 1992 for aggravated sexual assault.

Support of West Texas A&M University, through the WTAMU Foundation, was acknowledged Monday when a group of Hereford residents received special recognition during a meeting of the Rotary Club of Hereford.

Betty Howell, WTAMU director of development, introduced recipients of plaques, calling attention to the areas in which the donors have supported the WTAMU Foundation.

Recognized were Frank and Betty Barrett, Charles and Wanda Hoover, Milton and Betty Rudder, Bob and Nancy Josseland, Elmer and Norma Carlson, Bob and Mary Jo Hamman and John Teters.

Dr. Dudley Moore, chairman of the foundation, introduced university officials, including Dr. Horace Bailey, dean of the college of agriculture, nursing and natural sciences; Dr. John Pipkin, director of the equine industries program; Mike Chandler, athletic director; Howell, and Richard Perez, WTAMU student body president.

Perez, a Hereford High School graduate, described the atmosphere at WTAMU as "really positive," and added, "I like to talk about my university... it's the best."

An expanded agriculture department, including additional faculty members and programs, was reviewed by Dr. Bailey. He reported that two new programs are of special interest to the Panhandle -- dryland farming and equine industries.

Dr. Pipkin explained the need for the equine program and mentioned some of the avenues to be explored.

The university's athletic director, Chandler, told the Rotary Club and guests that the athletic program is concerned with student athletes who are "students first and athletes second." He said the financial turmoil of a few years ago has been reversed and a $2.5 million deficit has been reduced to about $400,000.

City Commission votes to condemn building during regular session here

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Condemnation proceedings against a building deemed unsafe by the City of Hereford building inspector will be re-initiated by the city attorney.

Marvin Gaddy, inspector, reported to the City Commission Monday night that the building has not been restored satisfactorily.

In other business, the commission: -- Passed an order for the municipal election in May.

-- Approved a zoning change.

-- Re-appointed members of the board of the Panhandle-Plains Higher Education Authority.

-- Adopted a resolution agreeing to the Southwestern Public Service rate structure approved by the state Public Utilities Commission.

Originally, condemnation proceedings were initiated against the building at the back of 130 N. Main in 1992 but the owner of the property, Bill Allen, was allowed additional time to comply with the city code.

Later, the property reportedly was sold to Rick Whitehorn and the city last September granted more time for the building to be roofed.

Gaddy reported to the commission Monday that since no work has been done on the building, notice of condemnation will be sent to property owners.

A hearing probably will be held in March, Gaddy said.

A recommendation from the city planning and zoning board for a zoning change at 300 N. 25 Mile Avenue was approved. With commercial zoning instead of multi-family, a new business is to be opened at the site.

On recommendation of the city secretary, Terri Johnson, the commission approved the order for city officer election on May 7. Theda Seiver was appointed election judge and Bonnie Duke, alternate judge.

Voters will elect commissioners for seats now held by Nancy Griego, Place 2; Wayne Winget, Place 4; Carey Black, Place 5 (at large), and Roger Eades, Place 6 (at large).

Filing for election will begin on Feb. 21 and continue through March 18.

The SPS rate structure reflects a reduction in residential electric rates of about 2.9 percent, City Manager Chester Nolen reported to the commission.

The rates were negotiated last fall by cities served by SPS and approved by the state PUC.

Directors of the Panhandle-Plains Higher Education Authority whose terms expire this month were reappointed. The board members are John Eder, Bill Forbes, Earl Hudgins, Jerry Miller, Jimmy Parker and Ron Walton.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Leticia Martinez asked for information on paving streets. She was advised that residents must present a request after all property owners have agreed to a paving assessment.

Shirley" and added that he saw some programs that he has not seen at any other district in Texas, including the district's Ozmobile, the school's Super Lab, learning styles assessments to better match students and teachers, and the portfolio grading system, which assesses student performance in relation to the Texas Essential Elements.

The commissioner's visit was a routine trip to Region 16. Greenawalt said Meno tries to visit all 20 Education Services Center regions in Texas each year.

While in those regions, he stops at a Partnership Schools Initiative campus.

Last year, he visited a school in Tulia, while this year's draw fell to Shirley, which has been in PSI two years now.

Principal David Fanning said Shirley was accepted into PSI shortly before he was named principal.

It was his decision -- along with his staff -- to continue in PSI and work toward improving test scores and morale.

The two years of work, Fanning said, paid off with Meno's visit.

While Meno did not have time for a private conference with Fanning while he was at Shirley, the principal said he had comments to make during a nearly 1-1/2-hour tour of every class on campus.

"He was very pleased with what he saw," Fanning said, "and he thought we were on the right track."

Greenawalt echoed Meno's praise. The superintendent drove Meno from the school to Hereford Municipal Airport, where he had arrived for the tour and would fly to Amarillo.

In a news conference at the school, Meno said Shirley scored in the "high 90s" on a 1-100 scale of its accomplishments.

Greenawalt said Meno echoed that evaluation during the trip to the airport -- which included a side trip to look at the district's new administration building.

Greenawalt said Meno's staff kept trying to hurry the commissioner through what was scheduled as a one-hour tour, but Meno insisted on visiting every class and seeing what was going on.

"He wasn't in any hurry," Greenawalt said.

In Clint Seward's class, Mandy Lange was called on to show off her new Shirley school T-shirt. Then, Meno joined Mandy and some classmates in a discussion about a science experiment dealing with the amount of weight a pencil would hold.

Mandy said Meno listened to group members discuss how they would conduct their experiment.

Christina Guerrero said the commissioner then offered a few suggestions of his own on how to further their work.

As he left, Meno urged the students to complete their experiments and then write him with results of their work.

He also reminded Seward to make sure he heard from the class.

The one teacher Meno spent the most time with was music teacher Jane Gulley, who did not have students in her class at the time he walked by.

"One thing that he commented on was that he was impressed that our music kids got to come to music as much as they do," she said, adding that Meno said some districts are not able to give children three days a week of music instruction.

"He was very complimentary," she said, "seemed to be genuinely interested in what the children were doing."

Already, Greenawalt said, the commissioner's visit and the innovative work Shirley is doing has attracted attention.

He said a school in Slaton has contacted Shirley about sending some teachers to Slaton to discuss the school's portfolio grading system.

The district, located near Lubbock, has offered to pay the teachers' way, put them up for the night and pay the Hereford district for their substitutes.

"David's teachers are to be commended," Greenawalt said. "They prepared really well" for the visit.

Ten people injured in two-vehicle accident

Ten persons were injured -- one seriously -- when two cars collided at Highway 60 and FM 2943 Saturday at 2:55 p.m., the Texas Highway Patrol reported.

Officers identified the drivers as Irene Galan, 39, of Hereford, and Benito Galvan Villarreal, 71, a Hereford retiree. All of the accident victims except one were in the Galan vehicle.

Investigating officers said Galan's car was eastbound on U.S. 60 and Villarreal's vehicle had stopped for a stop sign and was pulling into the intersection when the accident occurred.

Both cars ended up in the center medium from the force of the crash, police said. A citation for failure to yield right of way is pending, the Hereford Highway Patrol office said.

Most seriously injured in the crash was Villarreal who was taken to the Hereford Regional Medical Center where he was stabilized and transferred to Northwest Hospital in Amarillo, a hospital spokesperson said.

The other accident victims, who suffered cuts and bruises, were released after treatment. Officers identified them as Irene Galan; Crystal Lopez, 13; Maria Galan, 53; Debbie Galan, 28; Jessica Martinez, nine; Samantha Galan, nine; Amy Galan, 15; Derrick Galan, three months; and Isabel Galan, two.

Hutchison trial gets off to slow start

First day sputters with bomb threat, pre-trial motions

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Jury selection started today in U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's trial on criminal ethics charges after the first day of proceedings sputtered past pre-trial motions and a bomb threat.

Travis County First Assistant District Attorney Steve McCleery began questioning a group of 40 potential jurors. "The defendant is very famous and very powerful," McCleery said. "Do you feel you can judge her like any other defendant?"

Two of the potential jurors raised their hands and approached Judge John F. Onion Jr. to discuss the matter.

At the end of Monday's action, Onion told potential jurors not to discuss the case nor listen to news reports about it. Onion said today 12 jurors and two alternates will be chosen.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, faces charges that while she was Texas treasurer she used state funds, state employees and state computers for political and personal purposes, and then altered computer records as part of a cover-up.

Mrs. Hutchison, who was state treasurer from January 1991 to June 1993, has denied any wrongdoing, and says she is the victim of a politically motivated attack by Democrats. Prosecutors have denied politics had anything to do with pursuing the case.

Onion moved the trial from Austin to Tarrant County because of the politically charged atmosphere in the state capital.

If convicted on all counts, Mrs. Hutchison could face up to 20 years in prison.

Mrs. Hutchison, seated in the courtroom Monday beside her lead attorney, Dick DeGuerin, waived an arraignment and pleaded innocent to all charges.

"She wants to say in front of the jury, 'I'm not guilty,'" DeGuerin said.

Shortly afterward, the proceedings were halted after a bomb threat, related to the trial of anti-abortion protesters, was called into the Tarrant County Justice Center. The building was evacuated for 1-1/2 hours.

When the proceeding resumed, Onion ruled on several motions brought by attorneys in the case.

He granted Mrs. Hutchison's motions to keep her trial from being broadcast on cable television, via the Court Television Network, or to allow a newspaper to take photographs inside the courtroom during the trial. Prosecutors did not argue against those motions.

In another motion, Onion ordered that the schedules of Democratic Gov. Ann Richards be given to him, but kept sealed.

DeGuerin subpoenaed the records, but Col. James Wilson, chief of the Texas Department of Public Safety, did not want to turn them over. "Those are blueprints for an assassin or a stalker if they can get their hands on them," he said.

DeGuerin has not said why he wants them, but in the past he has argued that Mrs. Hutchison is being accused of conduct that is legal and common among other state elected officials.

Mrs. Hutchison declined to speak at length to reporters. During a recess, she commented briefly, "I want to get back to the job I was elected to do."

Last June 5, Mrs. Hutchison won in a landslide special election the remaining term of Lloyd Bentsen, who was appointed Treasury secretary. She is seeking re-election to a full six-year term.

Five days after her victory, the Travis County district attorney's office raided the state Treasury, serving subpoenas and gathering boxes of records.

Attorneys on both sides say the trial could last from one to two months.

During arguments over pre-trial motions, DeGuerin argued that the state has changed its theories on prosecuting Mrs. Hutchison several times. But McCleery said, "The state has not taken an inconsistent opinion."

Northwest establishes 'post office'

Students at Northwest Elementary School have begun learning a lesson in how the real world works -- or at least how part of it works -- with their own post office that opened on Monday.

Hereford Postmaster Charles Britten was on hand to meet new Northwest Postmaster Justin Kerr and his assistant, Lori Almaraz, as they assumed their new duties at the Sparkler Post Office.

The post office boasts a large, brightly-colored mailbox in the entrance hall to the school.

Students are encouraged to write letters to their friends in other classes and drop them in the box for pickup.

The mail is picked up at 7:50 a.m. daily and delivered to classrooms by 1 p.m.

To help the new postmaster and his staff bring the mail, each hall has been assigned a street name and each classroom an address.

Third grade students will be charged with delivering the mail each day.

Kerr, son of Craig and Barbara Kerr, and Almaraz, daughter of Rita and Salud Almaraz, were selected following an intensive application process that involved a postal exam and personal interview.

The post office will be up through the end of the year and is designed to encourage children to write, which addresses writing skills, communication skills and reading skills.

Postmasters adult and child

Hereford postmaster Charles Britten on Monday met his Northwest Elementary School counterpart, Justin Kerr, and his assistant, Lori Almaraz, at the school's new mail box. The school instituted a post office -- and assigned street names to the halls and addresses to the classrooms -- then appointed the postmaster and assistant to deliver mail to classes each day. Students may write letters to friends in other classes in the school.

Planning Heart Ball

Lisa Formby, at left, and Charmayne Klett, both board members with the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Heart Association, plan the local organization's annual "Hearts A Fire Ball." The benefit will begin at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 12, at the Hereford Country Club.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend whom I've known for 40 years has always one-upped me every time I've made a statement. Anything I have seen or done, he has also seen or done—only he did it better.

The straw that finally broke the camel's back came when a small group of us were discussing storms at sea. I was in the process of telling about returning from the Pacific in 1945. Our troop ship was on the fringe of the storm that almost wiped Okinawa off the map. Waves and swells were so high that the bow of the ship was constantly being washed down by water.

My ever-ready one-upper remarked that this was nothing compared to HIS experience. He said the waves and swells on the ship he was on were so high they washed the flight deck down on an aircraft carrier.

Ann, wouldn't a wave have to be 80 feet or 100 feet high in order to do that? And if so, it seems to me that every island in the Pacific, not to mention every smaller ship at sea, would have been sent to the bottom of the ocean.

If you tell me that there have been waves that washed over the flight deck of any aircraft carrier anywhere, any time, I'll eat my hat. Meanwhile, how can I deal with this person?—Fed Up With Being Put Down in Texas

DEAR FED: We spoke with Lt. Conrad Chun, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon. He said the flight deck of an aircraft carrier is about 60 feet above the water line. Although it is theoretically possible for a wave to be high enough to wash over the deck, he has never heard of such an incident.

As for your friend who specializes in one-upmanship, there is no known cure for those clods who have a topper for every tale. Their pattern becomes well known after a while, and nobody pays any attention to them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 16 and have been seeing "Bob" for about 10 months. When we first met, I thought he was the nicest guy I had ever known and we even talked about marriage "one day." Now I realize I was jumping the gun.

Unfortunately, Bob is totally consumed by thoughts of us getting married and spending the rest of our lives together. Lucky for me, my family recently moved to another province, so Bob can't hang around night and day light he used to.

In every letter, he says he loves me so much that he could never live without me. He is very insecure about our relationship and extremely possessive. Maybe it's because Bob's home life was so awful. His father abused him physically and verbally, and I helped him deal with that. But now, I'm beginning to feel overwhelmed.

I do love this person and might marry him one day, but I just can't take the pressure. I want to date different guys and explore other possibilities. When I tell Bob this is the way I feel, he says I don't love him and starts to cry.

I don't know what to do, short of breaking up with him and getting my freedom back. Please help.—Need Breathing Space in London, Ont.

DEAR NEED SPACE: Unfortunately, people who are as needy as Bob often scare people away. This is what is happening to Bob.

Don't break off completely with the poor guy. That would be too destructive. But do let him know that you are going to date others and you want him to do the same. If he cries, give him a handkerchief.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? For a copy of her most frequently requested poems and essays, send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: For years I've heard that rice thrown at weddings is harmful to birds. There were even suggestions to substitute bird seed for the rice.

My daughter is getting married soon and we would do away with the tradition of throwing rice if it really harms the birds. What do you think? — Margaret Donnelly, Naples, Fla.

This "old birds' tale" has been around a long time, so I called a Wildlife Biologist with the Audubon Society here in San Antonio to get the true story.

She said that rice is not harmful to birds and it's an old wives' tale that it expands in a bird's crop and can cause death. Some birds like rice, and the most nutritious is regular, not instant.

So go ahead and enjoy the tradition knowing that it won't hurt our beautiful feathered friends.

You may want to ask the church if they prefer rice or bird seed. — Heloise

NIGHT LIGHT

Dear Heloise: I always keep a night light in my cosmetics case to put in the bathroom of motels when we travel. Otherwise it is too dark in a strange room at night. — Shirley Sybesma, Ontario, Canada

KNIFE HOLDER
Dear Heloise: I had a lot of large wooden spoons and came up with the idea of using them as a knife holder. All I did was put about 16 spoons together and put a long screw through each hole and screwed them on a wall all in a row with the top and bottom edges touching.

The knives slip in the spaces between the spoons, and the handles of the knives are held up by the spoons. — Sarah Grimes, Las Vegas, Nev.

Dear Heloise: I found the best way to clean the inside of a pumpkin is to use the flat, round seal from canning jars. It's perfect for scraping out every last bit. — Valerie Barnes, St. Francisville, La.

Book review presented for Bay View Study Club

Ladies of the Club by Helen Hoover Santmyer was the book reviewed by Margaret Bell when members of the Bay View Study Club met Thursday in the home of Edna Gault.

The author wrote the book over a 50-year period telling life stories of joy and sorrow. Daughters and granddaughters joined the club as older members passed away. The speaker said the club's objectives were similar to that of Bay View's. It started a library in the town as did the local study club and stressed culture as a goal.

The "Acer Girls" were asked to make a tape on the history of their family for the library. This is part of the project featuring the oral history of local citizens.

President Pat Fisher reminded members that the guest day will be in two weeks with an organ-piano recital as the program.

Hereford's Chris Lyles hits a smash at the net during a tennis match Saturday in Hereford. Lyles, a senior, is one of 40 finalists for the 1994 FINA/Dallas Morning News All-State Scholar-Athlete Team. The final 12-member team, made up of athletes from all sports, will be announced in March.

Girls' golf team starts year off in San Angelo

The Hereford girls' golf team opened its season with a sixth place showing in its division of the San Angelo Girls Classic, played Friday and Saturday.

Though Hereford was sixth, all the teams which finished ahead of Hereford were Class 5A schools. Hereford finished ahead of all three other 4A teams, plus one 5A team. Hereford beat District 1-4A rival Pampa by 11 strokes.

Kelly Kelso led Hereford with a two-day total of 170, good for fifth individually. She shot an 87 on Friday; an 83 on Saturday.

Hereford's other girls were: Jana Baird, 106-102--208; Karen Manchee, 113-98--211; Kristin Calkins, 108-113--221; and Jennifer Rampley, 121-111--232.

Hereford was in the Blue Division, and teams in that division played on Bentwood Country Club on Friday, then moved to Riverside municipal course on Saturday. Teams in the Orange Division, including Borger, played at San Angelo Country Club on Friday, then Riverside, so two-day totals couldn't be compared.

Coach Stacey Bixler pointed out that Hereford's 394 at Riverside was better than either Borger's 396 or Pampa's 402 at the same course on the same day.

The totals for teams in the Blue Division:

- 1) San Angelo Central: 347-338--685
- 2) Midland Lee: 351-349--700
- 3) Abilene Cooper: 349-355--704

They won the A division of the district tournament at Valleyview, beating Canyon B 57-7; Valleyview A 42-27; and Canyon A 43-40 in the finals. Against Canyon A, Misti Davis' shot put Hereford ahead with 27 seconds left, and Katie Betzen added two free throws to seal it, coach Jane Radford said.

They ended the season with an 11-3 record.

Their loss was to Borger, 21-20. Jacque Bezner scored six points.

They ended the season 5-4.

Seventh grade teams

The Maroon team had to hold off a Borger comeback to win 21-16. Misty Tice led with eight points, including five in the last few minutes of the game.

The White team cruised to a 33-17 win. Kasey Torres led with 12 points.

The White team finished with a 7-2 record; the Maroon was 5-4.

Ninth grade girls

Canyon held off the A team 39-32 Monday in Whiteface Gym. Hereford was led by Kari Barrett with 13 points, and Christina Kuper with nine. The team had its district tournament in Borger, but it didn't go well. Hereford lost 48-45 to Borger and 33-25 to Canyon.

Cassie Abney scored 17 against Borger and eight against Canyon. Barrett has eight against Borger, and Kuper had eight against Canyon.

Junior High boys

Both seventh grade teams won, while both eighth grade teams lost in Borger.

The seventh Maroon won 55-48, getting 15 points from Chris Torres and 12 from Cory Marsh. Shane Deckard and Brent Berend each added eight points.

The seventh White won 36-19 as Mitch Wagner had 12 and Jerry Garcia added eight.

Tech officials plan more security in wake of brawl

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A Texas Tech graduate student who says he was punched in the face by a Texas A&M player in last weekend's fracas has filed an assault complaint with university police.

Scott Patterson, 23, says he was hit by A&M basketball player Joe Wilbert during a brawl between Aggie players and Tech fans.

Meanwhile, Tech officials on Monday took steps to try to prevent future confrontations between fans and visiting teams' players after they reviewed a videotape of the fracas.

That altercation erupted among a handful of Tech fans and several Aggie players who stayed on the court a minute or so to celebrate A&M's 89-88 victory.

Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said a barricaded aisle from the visitors' bench to the exit ramp will help control the crowds and give teams a safe corridor to their dressing rooms. More exit space and more ushers and security guards also are planned, he said.

University police escorted some A&M players to their locker room, forcing Aggie head coach Tony Barone and his other players to walk amid Red Raider fans off the court.

Fans first scuffled with Barone when he stopped to confront a fan yelling obscenities, a witness said. At least two Aggies threw punches and another tried climbing into the stands to reach a fan. Tech supporters leaned over the handrails and threw punches at the players.

The 5-minute push-and-shove fracas followed a highly charged game that came down to last-second free throws and drew both coaches' ire at referees.

It was described as one of the most violent confrontations between players and fans in the history of the Southwest Conference.

"I think players and coaches should have safe passageway to the dressing room," said Tech men's coach James Dickey. "But I think you should have a great atmosphere - you should have the fans right on top of you."

Women's coach Marsha Sharp said her team also had trouble getting off the court Saturday night after the Lady Raiders' 67-64 loss at College Station.

"There were a lot of people who were talking, grabbing and yelling at us all the way across there," Sharp said. "We, I think, made a run for it."

The entire conference should evaluate game security and look at factors like positioning of the bands, mascots and ballboys, she said.

"I don't think it's fair to Tech to say that maybe we're the only ones in the conference that have a problem," Sharp said.

Southwest Conference commissioner Steve Hatchell said he didn't expect the conference to take disciplinary action.

Jordan puts baseball skills on display

By RICK GANO
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Even though Michael Jordan may have no chance of making the Chicago White Sox, general manager Ron Schueler felt he had no choice but to bring him to spring training.

"As much improvement as he has made, it's still a million-in-one shot," Schueler said Monday after Jordan signed a minor league contract following a workout at a packed, made-for-media event.

But Schueler, a former major league pitcher, said there was little doubt about inviting the world's most famous basketball player - albeit a retired one - to spring training next week in Sarasota, Fla.

"If I don't give him the opportunity, 27 other general managers would. In a second."

Why? Jordan hasn't played baseball since he was in high school and is 30 years old, trying to play a sport that those at the highest level have been playing most of their lives.

"Because of who he is and his athletic ability," Schueler said. "We're talking about the top athlete in the world."

And one who would draw crowds wherever he went, as he did Monday during a 90-minute workout at the Illinois Institute of Technology, not far from Comiskey Park.

Jordan took more than 50 cuts in the batting cage and hit only several line drives. He also fielded grounders and snagged fly balls in, of all places, a gym.

Baskets that he reached so easily in leading the Chicago Bulls to three straight NBA titles were raised to the roof. And the baseball made a strange thud as it hit the wood floor. One grounder went right through Jordan's legs.

But it's hitting that will determine how far Jordan will go in this improbable quest.

"He can hit pitches in the mid-80s," said Ed Gottfried, an Illinois Institute of Technology pitcher, who threw to Jordan on Monday. "I don't know about a guy like Roger Clemens. But I think he has a better than average shot of making it."

The prevailing feeling is that Jordan will not be able to handle the 90 mph pitches in the majors, despite his athletic ability. But the challenge for Jordan is proving those who doubt him wrong.

"It's going to be tough reacting to the ball. But he can learn," said White Sox second baseman Joey Cora, who has worked out with Jordan the last two weeks.

"I've never been afraid to fail," said Jordan, who retired from the Bulls last October, claiming he had nothing left to prove and wanted to spend more time with his family and away from the spotlight.

"That's something you have to deal with in reality. You're not always going to be successful. I think I'm strong enough as a person to accept failure. But I can't accept not trying."

Harding to face USOC hearing

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) - Tonya Harding will face a U.S. Olympic Committee hearing next Tuesday that could lead to her ouster from the Winter Games because of the attack on rival skater Nancy Kerrigan.

Harding's lawyers have been notified of the decision and she will be asked to appear, the USOC said in a statement today. There was no immediate word if Harding would testify.

The hearing will be in Oslo three days after the Winter Olympics begin but six days before the deadline for substituting members of the women's figure skating lineup. If Harding were kicked off the team, her place would be taken by 13-year-old alternate Michelle Kwan.

"The hearing will deal with the issues of conduct which have been raised during the last several weeks during the law enforcement investigations into the attack on skater Nancy Kerrigan ... and the U.S. Figure Skating Association's review as it relates to the same issues," the USOC statement said.

Any decision by the 13-member Games Administrative Board is final. Harding could go to court to try to regain her spot on the team.

Harding has a paid roundtrip plane ticket to Oslo as a member of the U.S. Olympic team. The board must determine who pays for transporting Harding's attorneys and witnesses.

On Saturday, a U.S. Figure Skating Association panel found "reasonable grounds" to believe Harding was involved in the plot to injure Kerrigan and knock her out of the national championships on Jan. 6.

It sent the matter to an internal disciplinary panel and gave Harding 30 days to respond. Harding's lawyers in Portland, Ore., said Monday that Harding was "concentrating on her preparation for the Olympics and working with her attorneys on a response to the request of the USFSA."

USOC executive director Harvey Schiller said the 400 pages of evidence gathered by the figure skating panel were among the factors the USOC panel would consider.

A grand jury in Portland, Ore., is investigating what role, if any, Harding played in the assault on Kerrigan.

Harding has said she knew nothing of the attack in advance but admitted that she learned details of the plot after it happened and failed to immediately tell authorities. She said she feared retaliation from her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly.

Gillooly pleaded guilty to racketeering in a plea bargain and has testified that Harding was involved in the plot and the cover-up.

Perry's treys lead 76ers to win

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

Tim Perry made more 3-pointers in one night than he did in his first four seasons in the NBA.

Perry made a career-high seven 3-pointers and scored 31 points Monday night, leading the Philadelphia 76ers past Charlotte 125-117 and sending the Hornets to their seventh straight defeat.

In other games, Atlanta crushed Detroit 141-97, Miami beat New York 96-85 and Indiana edged Golden State 104-99.

Perry, a 6-foot-9 forward dealt from Phoenix to Philadelphia in the trade for Charles Barkley, was 5-for-18 on 3-pointers from the 1988-89 through 1991-92 seasons.

On Monday, he saw that the Hornets were leaving him unguarded outside the 3-point line.

Perry, who has a perfect rotation and high arc on his jumper, sent up 15 3-point attempts.

Label information is given to Wyche Club

Deaf Smith County Extension Agent Beverly Harder presented a program entitled "Six Steps to Label Reading" for members of Wyche Family Community Education Club. The women met Thursday at the Hereford Community Center.

Harder noted that the new labels will be released by May. These labels will help the consumer to make informed choices on food items they buy. The labels will deal with real daily food values and serving sizes. Health claims will be accurate as to the nutritional information and diet regulations.

The speaker said labels will be based on the average diet for calories consumed (2,000-2,500 for women and 2,500-3,000 for men). Calories needed for individuals vary on personal activity and age. The fat intake should not exceed 20 grams a day.

Harder noted that labeling for fresh food, produce and raw meat products will remain on voluntary participation of grocers, many of whom already display point of purchase nutritional facts. She concluded the program by stating that observing the information on food labels and utilizing the serving sizes could contribute to lower disease risk and healthier lifestyles.

Argen Draper conducted the opening exercises and Mary Lou

Aven served as hostess and read the poem, "White Magic."

Roll call was answered by "what food item I buy the most."

Draper, in keeping with the short term goals for the new year, challenged members to read the food labels on all items they buy for the next two weeks, to be aware of the nutritional values and to make informed choices.

Jo Lee gave a report on 4-H activities and also requested that members turn in five recipes for the Sweet Bee to be held March 24. A recipe booklet will be edited from this event. Because of recent bad weather, Lee also announced the officers training had been rescheduled.

Clara Trowbridge gave a report from council discussing the recommendations for the 1994 by-laws. She also announced plans for the Appreciation Luncheon to be held Feb. 28 at the Hereford Community Center. The "Club Woman of the Year" will be announced at that time by The Hereford Brand.

Members attending were Correen Odom, Dorothy Lundry, Argen Draper, Miveda Busby, Shirley Brown, Thelma Auten, Marie Maxwell, Laverne Worley, Louise Axe, Mary Lou Aven, Jo Lee, Vada Batterman, Virgie Duncan, Barbara Stern, Camelia Jones and Clara Trowbridge.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: For the past two years I have suffered from repeated attacks of heartburn, which are usually worse at night. I will wake up with a burning pain in the pit of my stomach. I keep Pepto-Bismol by my bed and chew the tablets for relief so I can go back to sleep.

My doctor said I have a hiatal hernia and gastroesophageal reflux. He explained that a portion of my stomach had ruptured through my diaphragm into my chest. He prescribed Zantac and said it was all right for me to use the Pepto-Bismol and return in two months. I don't understand how the hernia causes the burning sensation. When I drink orange juice I have heartburn for hours, unless I take Pepto-Bismol. Can you explain?

DEAR READER: Heartburn is really caused by the contents of the stomach (gastro) leaking backward into the lower esophagus. The acid material starts digesting the lower esophagus. While the stomach is covered with a thick mucus substance to protect its surface, the esophagus is not. The inflamed esophagus becomes very sensitive. Acid foods and spices that come in contact with the area are like pouring salt into a wound.

You can have gastroesophageal reflux even if you do not have a hiatal hernia. Many people have a hiatal hernia and do not have any reflux or symptoms. The hernia is caused by an enlargement of the normal hole in the diaphragm that allows the esophagus to pass through and join the stomach. Any pressure inside the abdomen will tend to push the area where the stomach and esophagus join through the enlarged hole. Over 50 percent of individuals over 50 years of age have such a hernia. But not all of them have heartburn.

There is a specialized ring of muscles where the esophagus and stomach meet, the esophageal sphincter. It should stay closed to prevent reflux of the stomach contents. When it doesn't, whether you have a hiatal hernia or not, it will cause symptoms.

I have discussed this common problem in detail in my new Special Report 150, Hiatal Hernia, Heartburn, Esophageal Reflux, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/150, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Medicines are only part of the program to prevent symptoms.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

It's a new way of thinking

What do you get when you put together a roaming van with a satellite dish, a talking camcorder and a couple of kids? Besides a lot of fun, you get a new interactive video curriculum designed to get children interested in science at an early age.

Galaxy Classroom, an educational satellite network that is produced by the Los Angeles-based Galaxy Institute for Education, has recently unveiled the science program. It uses creative, hands-on experiments that encourage children to pose and solve problems and uses an interactive telecommunications satellite system that allows them to share their findings with others.

The objective of this child-centered approach, which is used by the Galaxy Classroom--the nation's only network dedicated to elementary students--is not to teach more facts, but to engage children to construct meaning by instilling a new way of thinking about the world.

For example, Galaxy's science investigation might start by having students test fingerprints and chemical compounds to discover traces of a stolen bag of candy. Eventually the students create mysteries and ask other children to solve them. Through the process of collecting evidence, students measure, calculate, chart data and form hypotheses. As part of this science curriculum, students watch "S.N.O.O.P.S.," a video program that incorporates the curriculum's activities.

In addition to the programming, the Galaxy science curriculum comes with science kits, materials and magazines for students. Through the use of fax machines, phones and videos, students can communicate with their peers in other Galaxy Classrooms, work together on experiments and test hypotheses.

Right now, 40 demonstration schools in 21 states and Mexico are receiving the programming. This year, Galaxy plans to expand its network on a subscription basis to 1,000 schools. Galaxy's goal is to provide programming for 20,000 schools by the year 2000. Galaxy Institute for Education is non-profit initiative of Hughes Aircraft Co.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) - Prince Charles had to show even more grace under pressure Down Under.

Two weeks after a man fired blanks at the prince in Sydney, Australia, another man tried to spray him with air freshener from an aerosol can.

The prince was chatting Sunday with well-wishers on Auckland's waterfront when the man ran toward him and muttered that he "wanted to remove the stink of royalty," said Ross Land, a witness.

The man got within 10 feet before police wrestled him to the ground. The prince was not injured and the man was taken into custody.

"He was as calm as he was the other day in Sydney," said the prince's press secretary, Sandy Henny.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison is scheduled to go on trial Feb. 7 in Fort Worth.

She has been charged with misusing state employees and equipment and of tampering with government records while she was serving as state treasurer.

Jury selection specialist Dr. Robert Gordon of Dallas has been retained by Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle to help prosecutors select jurors who can be fair and independent.

Gordon said Hutchison's defense lawyers had also contacted him about working for them, but that he had agreed to assist Earle.

A mock trial was staged earlier this month to help prosecutors determine the outcome of the case against Hutchison, a report in the Austin American-Statesman said.

Richards Staffer Takes Blame

Gov. Ann Richards' chief of staff, John Fainter, has taken the blame for destroying three years of the governor's telephone records.

Though no one has accused Richards of violating any laws, state Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer said the governor's staff must have had something to hide.

Fainter denied trying to hide something and said the records were destroyed because the office was "drowning in paper."

Junior lawmakers get chances as dozens retire from Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Propelled by ambition, mid-career weariness and advancing years, lawmakers are departing the House in striking numbers, creating opportunities for those with less seniority and unpredictable change for Congress.

"It could take the steam out of term limitations if the whole place turns over on its own," House Republican Leader Bob Michel mused at the prospect of several dozen newcomers next January — on top of the 115 lawmakers now serving their first terms.

Thirty-four House members have sent in their retirement notices so far this year. Additional voluntary departures are widely anticipated and some lawmakers almost certainly will be defeated in primary or general elections. Estimates of the size of the 1995 freshman class range to 60, 70 or perhaps 80.

Of the 34 current retirees, 19 are Democrats and 15 are Republicans. Thirteen are running for the Senate or governor, nine of them Republicans, whose ability to influence legislation is diminished by the size of the 435-member House and their seemingly permanent minority status.

Others who are departing speak of the frustrations of public life.

"I'm worn out," said Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., a six-term member who frequently clashes with the Democratic leadership over budget issues.

"Some members are leaving because the political climate is fairly sour, a lot of cynicism," said Rep. William Hughes, 61, a New Jersey Democrat who has decided his 10th term will be his last and "always

According to state law, telephone billing information must be kept for three years, but telephone logs such as those that were destroyed, can be discarded after the bills are paid. The destroyed logs showed what numbers were called and from what numbers calls originated.

AG Fires Consumer Lawyer

Scott McCullough, a lawyer who represented the state in cases against utilities and telephone companies, has been fired by the Texas Attorney General's office.

McCullough, who had been with the office since 1984, joins six other lawyers in the consumer protection division who in the last month have been reassigned, forced to resign or fired.

Ron Dusek, Attorney General Dan Morales' press secretary, said the personnel changes should not be interpreted as a de-emphasis on consumer protection.

Dusek said he did not know how many personnel changes have occurred, or whether there would be more changes.

Evangelist Wins Court Round

A Texas Supreme Court justice's opinion says evangelist Robert Tilton's rights have been violated by a trial judge's court order to turn over records of church members who claimed healing miracles.

Justice Rose Spear wrote the unanimous opinion that Tilton's right of freedom of association under the First Amendment had been violated.

The records were among documents sought in a $50 million lawsuit filed by Norma Smith of Dallas, the widow of a Tilton follower. Mrs. Smith said she suffered emotional distress after Tilton's Word of Faith Outreach Center in Farmers Branch continued to send her husband requests for money after he died.

The Supreme Court said a "compelling state interest" must be shown before a court may order the disclosure of membership in an organization that advocates particular beliefs.

Judges Limit Pledges

Eighty-eight of the 126 candidates for the Texas Supreme Court, Court of Criminal Appeals and state district appeals courts have signed the Fair Campaign Practices Pledge.

The numbers were made public by a coalition of watchdog organizations, including Common Cause, Public Citizen, Texas Consumer Rights Action League and the League of Women Voters.

The pledge grew out of a study that showed from 1988 to 1990 Texas Supreme Court election winners received 87 percent of their campaign contributions from sources that most frequently appear before the court.

Pledge signers promise to limit their campaign spending to $2 million, total political action committee contributions to $50,000, single law firm contributions to $25,000 and individual contributions to $5,000.

Other Highlights

State District Judge John Dietz last week agreed to grant a temporary injunction aimed at keeping members of the Ku Klux Klan from intimidating or harassing residents of a desegregated housing project in Vidor. His ruling is the latest court action in an investigation by the Texas Commission on Human Rights into alleged civil violations of the Texas Fair Housing Act by two factions of the Ku Klux Klan.

U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate, received the endorsement of former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Hobby said the six-term Houston congressman has the best chance of unseating Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Former Attorney General Jim Mattox, another U.S. Senate hopeful, won the endorsement of the Texas Coalition of Black Democrats. Prior to the coalition's convention, Mattox had accused one of his rivals, Dallas investor Richard Fisher, of trying to buy the group's endorsement. Fisher denied the charge.

wanted to leave on my own volition."

Rep. Phil Sharp, who rode into Congress two decades ago with the Watergate reformers, announced his retirement last week in a speech that blended gratitude with frustration.

He said he had been honored to represent his constituents, then added, "Frankly there are a few — whose freedom of speech I would always defend — whom I would urge to make their speeches in the precincts of the devil where they should feel right at home."

Predictions vary on the impact of a second consecutive large crop of first-termers.

"I think that there will be a change in the way Congress operates, more of a sense of openness," said Penny.

The House is a "process that is largely dominated by the old members who are invested in the status quo. Another large class and that balance of power will shift," he predicted.

Hughes predicts the power of congressional staff will increase as new members realize they need expert advice quickly.

"Basically, it's sad that we're losing some of our best, steady, institutional type players," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who plans to seek re-election.

Michel, departing after 38 years, said large numbers of new members can mean more hours spent explaining issues to those unfamiliar with them.

Budget cuts may hurt Texas contractors

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton's $1.5 trillion budget may not be proposing any cuts in overall military spending, but some North Texas defense contractors could be feeling the pinch anyway.

The 1995 spending blueprint, which the administration forwarded Monday to Congress for its revisions, proposes the termination or reduction of several weapons programs with Texas ties.

Key among them is the F-16 fighter produced in Fort Worth by Lockheed. The Defense Department wants to end new purchases of the fighter, leaving only $210 million next year to purchase parts and spares.

The move was expected. During a "bottom-up" review last year of the military's needs, defense officials recommended halting future buys of the workhorse fighter.

The news isn't all bad for Lockheed, which will be filling Air Force and foreign back orders for the F-16 through the 1990s. The giant defense contractor could benefit from the Pentagon's request to increase funding for the new Air Force stealth fighter, the F-22, from $2 billion to $2.4 billion. That request is likely to be challenged by Congress, which last year trimmed $162 million from the administration's request.

The budget also calls for the reduction of Loral Vought Corp.'s multiple launch rocket system from $308 million to $129 million; and the Texas Instruments-Martin Marietta produced Javelin anti-tank weapon from $254 million to $162 million.

Vought Aircraft Co. in Dallas, which builds components for the C-17 cargo plane, could be a winner under the spending blueprint. The Pentagon wants to increase the C-17's budget from $2.4 billion to $2.9 billion.

Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth could gain in its V-22 Osprey program, which would be increased by $491 million from this year's $5 million. But the Defense Department also wants to downsize Bell's OH-58D helicopter program from $228 million to $117 million.

Texas defense installations would make big gains under the budget. The Pentagon's $8.4 billion construction budget includes $103.2 million for Texas - up from this year's $54.8 million.

And the Army Corps of Engineers' budget requests an increase for the operation, maintenance and development of Texas' waterways - up $85 million from this year's $128 million appropriation. Among the biggest projects are $19 million for construction at the Sam Rayburn Dam and Reservoir and $18 million for the operation of the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway.

The U.S.-Mexico border also would gain an infusion of new money. The administration wants to increase border environmental funding by $152 million next year - up from the $148 million enacted last year by lawmakers.

During its NAFTA sales pitch, the administration pledged to funnel more money to the 2,000-mile border, whose infrastructure already is challenged and will be even more so as trade with Mexico expands.

The budget includes an Environmental Protection Agency request for $150 million in border environmental funding, with $50 million earmarked for Texas colonias.

Housing officials are seeking $100 million for "severely distressed" settlements along the border, while the Agriculture Department wants $25 million for colonia drinking water projects.

Administration officials also have pledged to increase the Border Patrol's presence, with 1,010 agents added by 1996 to the 3,461 already on the southern border.

Other budget proposals affecting Texas include requests for:

- $2.1 billion for the space station, keeping the program at the current funding level.

- $180 million for the continued shutdown of the superconducting super collider near Waxahachie. Congress last year set aside $640 million for the project's termination, which some have speculated could cost $1 billion-plus.

The termination of a $358 million program that funds drug task forces nationwide, including 50 in Texas. While in Washington last week, Gov. Ann Richards and Texas police chiefs met with key lawmakers to urge them not to allow the program's death. The Texas task forces have intercepted more than $2 billion in drugs and arrested 68,000 people since 1987.

The end of an education impact aid program providing $6.7 million this year for Texas school districts that serve the children of parents who work on federal property but live elsewhere.

The phaseout of immigration detention formula grants that serve 55,911 Texas students at a cost of nearly $2 million.

$44.2 million for courthouse construction in Laredo, Lubbock and Brownsville.

$33.7 million for the Dallas-South Oak Cliff Light Rail Transit.

FDA clarifies labeling rule on milk

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumers can be told whether the milk they buy comes from cows treated with a controversial new hormone, but they can't be told that milk from untreated cows is any better or safer.

In guidelines to be published today, the Food and Drug Administration explains what should and shouldn't be said about recombinant bovine somatotropin, BST for short.

The agency said labels for cheese, milk, ice cream and other dairy products can state that they come from "cows not treated with" the hormone.

But that information must be put in "the proper context," the agency said.

That means the label, also has to carry a statement like, "No significant difference has been shown between milk derived from rBST-treated and non-rBST-treated cows," the agency said.

The genetically engineered version of the naturally occurring hormone went on the market Friday. The drug makes cows produce more milk.

Some stores, dairies and food processors, worried about the consumer response, have said they would not carry products from treated animals.

Others have wanted to label their products as coming from animals that had not been treated.

The product is technically "recombinant" bST, or rbST for short, because it comes from genetic engineering. But many people just call it BST, and capitalize the "b."

The agency said labels could not carry the claim that milk is "bST-free" because the hormone occurs naturally in milk. Labels also cannot say the milk is "rbST-free" because that would imply the milk is different.

The labeling guidelines reinforce what the agency said last Nov. 5 when it approved the drug: that there is virtually no difference between milk from treated cows and non-treated cows.

That message was reaffirmed by the American Medical Association and the American Dietetic Association.

Some biotechnology critics, humane groups and consumer groups maintain the drug poses risks that have not been thoroughly addressed.

They say cows that produce more milk also have a higher risk of udder infections that must be treated with antibiotics. They say those residues could make it into the milk supply, threatening people who are allergic to antibiotics and encouraging the growth of resistant strains.

The FDA said the milk supply is tested against antibiotic residues already. The agency is also supervising a program by the developer, Monsanto Co., to monitor the milk supply.

Settlement offer with Odessa rubber plant breaks down

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - An attorney for more than 1,000 South Odessa residents says he's pessimistic about further chances for a settlement with a rubber plant blamed for causing headaches and nausea in a neighborhood.

Michael McLeaish's negotiations on a settlement offer from Dynagen Inc. broke down last week after more than 900 plaintiffs had already agreed to the $1.5 million proposal.

Dynagen originally offered the sum, plus 15 annual college scholarships, if McLeaish could gather the signatures of 900 plaintiffs by Jan. 1.

Talks continued throughout January even though McLeaish didn't meet his deadline.

"I'm at my wit's end," McLeaish said Friday. "I just can't do it again. As far as I'm concerned, this case is going to trial."

He said he's daunted by the prospect of talking to hundreds of his clients and again securing their approval of a settlement offer.

Event though 943 plaintiffs had signed on to the proposed pact as of Friday, Dynagen officials rescinded the offer and issued another, less lucrative one.

McLeaish said the new settlement would provide $700 per adult plaintiff and $300 per minor plaintiff, a total of less than $1 million. Dynagen also offered a $50,000 trust fund to pay for scholarships.

McLeaish rejected Thursday's offer as inadequate but conceded Dynagen had no obligation to settle the lawsuit after Jan. 1.

"I am disappointed that we have not been able to put this matter behind us," said Dynagen manager Tim Gorman, who called the offer reasonable.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.
