First week of 1997-98 school year tagged a success

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

School's out - at least for the weekend.

School has been in session now for one week and, according to teachers, staff and students, the first week can be considered a bounding success.

"Students, though finding it difficult to rise and shine have made a great transition to school hours and discipline," said Nan Coneway, third-grade teacher at Aikman.

Aikman students finished the first week by planting purple iris bulbs to celebrate the completion of their first reading assignment.

Coneway said the students read the story "Miss Rumphius" and, like the character in the story, chose to make their world a more beautiful place to live.

Aikman Principal Charles Lyles said, "The open house on Sunday (Aug. 17) helped immensely. It gave our parents and teachers a chance to get acquainted and let the students find their classrooms."

"The first week went very well, and the students are nice and respectful, but we did have a few problems," he acknowledged.

Lyles said the teachers and the custodial staff worked all weekend to get water leaks and tar drips cleaned up.

The administration expected nearly 400 students to enroll on the first day of classes because of the number of students who failed to pre-enroll.

"I don't know how many we had here Monday," said Anita Gomez, a member of the records staff.

"It slowed down by about 11 a.m. and we've had a few enroll every day, but nothing like Monday," she said.

Gomez said the early enrollment helped things go smoother than in the past and was pleased to see the many parents who took advantage of the opportunity.

Even the junior high students seemed to get off on the right foot this year.

Richard Saucedo, assistant principal at Hereford Junior High, said, "In the eight years I have been in administration, this is the smoothest first week I can ever remember."

Saucedo said the new band director and a representative of the Horace Mann Insurance Group have even commented on the respectful attitudes and willing behavior of the students. "We owe all that to the parents," said Saucedo, "but it certainly makes a hectic time of the year go much easier."

Even with the changes at Hereford High School, Principal Steve Nash said the first week was "so smooth it's scary. Teachers and administration have been 100 percent supportive of the changes and what few problems have been minute."

Nash said the biggest problem was a couple of students tried to mouth off at an officer.

"We're just not going to tolerate any form of disrespect or unruliness. The students are here to learn and we expect all the students to be on their best behavior at all times," said Nash.

According to Nash, even the freshman lunches are going smoothly. "We can seat about 480 students at

Computers required for school

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

It's back-to-school time, and that means school supplies.

In the old days, school supplies meant pencils and notebooks, and slide rules and compasses.

A few years ago, calculators became a required item for many students. Nowadays, however, it's a computer and software. Some college professors are even providing their students with a listing of software required for the courses.

As a result, there has been a modest boom in computer sales every fall as the students and their parents (and some instructors) stock up on computers.

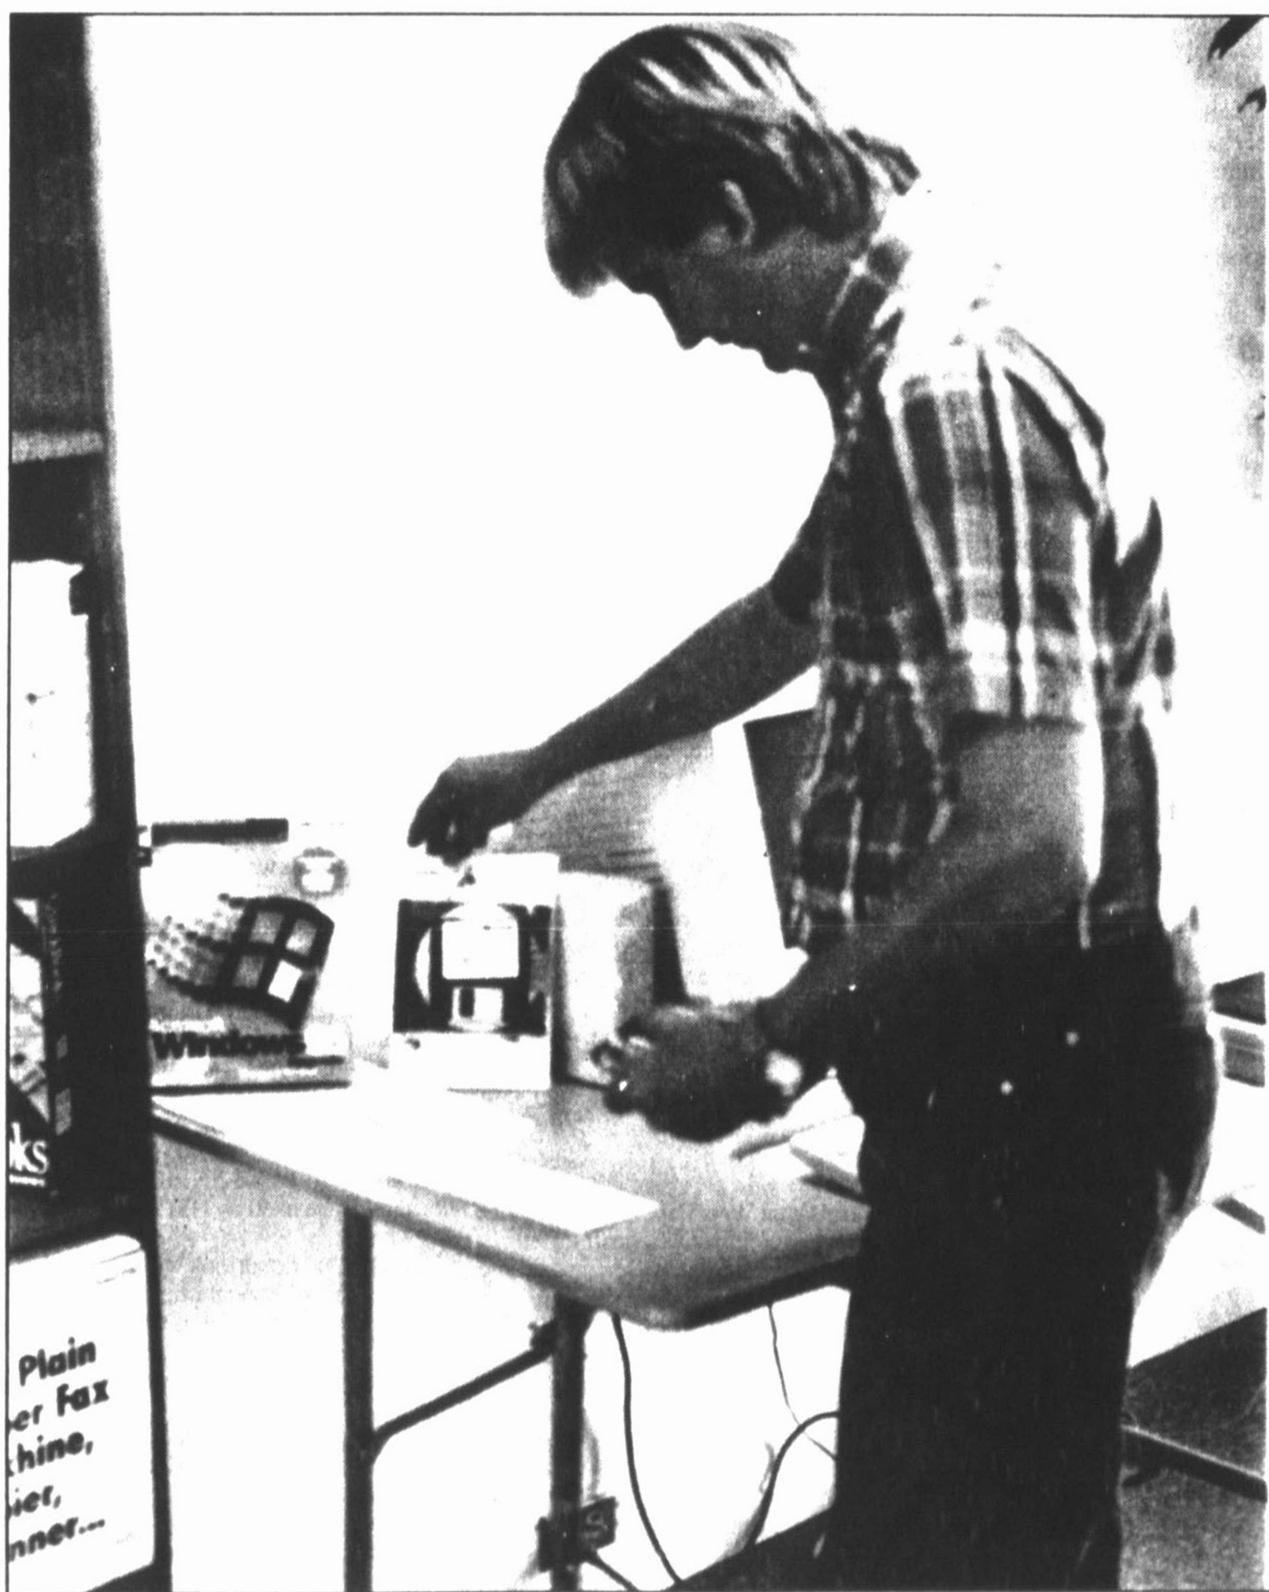

Although many would think that the computer/software rush is primarily in the big cities, there also are significant gains in computer/software sales in smaller communities, such as Hereford.

Sam Metcalf, co-owner of Custom Integrated Computer Solutions at 144 W. 2nd, said there has been a significant increase in sales, but it has been primarily in software. The computer sales haven't shown a significant gain, he said, likely because many of the college students or their parents already own computers.

"Many college students need computer programs. We've sold a ton of software. Students have computers, but the professors are being specific about software needs," Metcalf said.

At Foster Electronics, located in Sugarland Mall, manager Shannon Redwine said the store has "sold a few laptops and some (computer) systems."

However, she said, the major sales gains have come from software, with students purchasing

Panel to examine public education

AUSTIN (AP) - Senators over the next year will tear apart state agency budgets; examine education funding and its effect on students; and look at school issues including the availability of drug prevention and treatment programs.

They'll make a final report by Oct. 1, 1998. That will give the Legislative Budget Board time to consider their findings when making recommendations to the Legislature, which next meets in regular session in 1999.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock gave the assignments Friday to the Senate Finance Committee and two special committees. The Senate's presiding officer, Bullock has announced he isn't running for re-election next year, but that hasn't stopped him from setting a series of ambitious tasks for lawmakers.

"The people of Texas have a right to know how their money's being spent and whether they're getting a good deal on it," Bullock said in asking the Finance Committee to measure efficiency and accountability in spending.

Bullock suggested that lawmakers scrutinize state government agencies involved in criminal justice, public safety, the judiciary, education, health, human services, regulatory functions, natural resources, business and economic development and general government.

Among items to be examined by the Finance Committee are:

- Agencies' accuracy in reporting on their performance measures.
- Agency budgets.
- The history of agencies' unspent balances and the reasons for the balances.
- Agencies' caseload, population or enrollment forecast methods.
- Increases and decreases in full- or part-time employees, and use of consultants or people who work under contract.

Bullock also named two special panels, one to look at public schools and the other to look at public and higher education funding issues.

The funding committee will study financial assistance and tuition exemption programs at state colleges and universities. It will review higher education enrollment and graduation rates to determine how issues including cost affect students' ability to complete their education.

Bullock also asked the committee to look at public school funding formulas that use school district size and the number of students with special needs to determine state aid.

The Senate Interim Committee on Funding Issues in Education is headed by Senate Education Committee Chairman Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant. Also on the funding panel are Sens. Greg Luna, D-San Antonio; Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock; David Sibley, R-Waco; Royce West, D-Dallas; and Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

The Senate Interim Committee on Education, meanwhile, will look at issues including:

- Safety on school campuses.
- Availability of drug and alcohol treatment and prevention programs.
- Bilingual education.
- Services for students with dyslexia, hearing difficulties or vision problems.
- Implementation of new laws, including measures giving students more public school choice.

Bivins is head of the interim committee. Also named to the panel were Sens. Luna; Troy Fraser, R-Horseshoe Bay; Michael Galloway, R-The Woodlands; Tom Haywood, R-Wichita Falls; Eliot Shapleigh, D-El Paso; and Zaffirini.

SAN ANTONIO - Texas A&M officials have agreed to explore the possibility of taking over a vineyard research facility the University of Texas wants to eliminate.

The decision came Friday after a meeting with state Sen. Frank Madla, D-San Antonio, who said he is "beyond livid" that UT chose to close its Bakersfield Vineyard Facility and destroy its grapevines, the San Antonio Express-News reported in Saturday editions.

Last week, Madla wrote a letter to UT Chancellor William Cunningham asking him to halt the destruction of the vineyard.

Although Cunningham complied, his stop order was too late to save three acres of some of Texas' oldest grapevines. They were chainsawed by UT employees Aug. 13.

"My goal is to try and save this station and find a home for it," Madla said.

And now an international organization of fire chiefs is awarding them The International Benjamin Franklin Fire Service Award for Valor, presented once a year nationally for selfless acts of courage.

World/Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal official threw out the contentious Teamsters election Friday because of alleged campaign fund-raising abuses, forcing union President Ron Carey into another race against James P. Hoffa.

The action cut short Carey's celebration of the settlement in the United Parcel Service strike, and raised new allegations of a scheme to swap union contributions to political candidates and groups in exchange for donations to Carey.

Barbara Zack Quindel, a court-appointed election overseer, said any hardship a new election might cause was outweighed by the importance of a fair vote.

"To avoid a rerun because of the disruption it brings could allow this union to lose what I think is a critical resource: the confidence and participation of the members," she said.

The Teamsters stressed that Quindel found no wrongdoing by Carey, and released a statement from him saying his campaign consultants' conduct "flies directly in the face of all the reforms our union has implemented."

Save the environment; plant a car

ALTADENA, Calif. (AP) - Don't junk your jalopy. Plant it. You may not make the cover of Better Homes and Gardens, but as Bob Valenzuela will tell you, originality is its own reward.

Bob and Sandi Valenzuela, both old car enthusiasts, are growing a "jalopy tree" in the back yard of their Altadena home. A 1934 two-door Ford sedan is parked in the center of the yard, providing an unlikely planter for a 30-foot pepper tree.

You can't see the "jalopy tree" from the street, but those who've come by for a visit are largely delighted by the sight.

Valenzuela's 3-year-old grandson, Will Swanson of Altadena, calls it, "Grandpa's hot rod."

About 12 years ago, Bob Valenzuela added a circular driveway to his 1888 farmhouse-style home. At the same time, he expanded his garage into a workshop for his retirement years. The 58-year-old retired machine salesman loves to tinker with cars. And since he spends a lot of time in the back yard workshop, he wanted an interesting setting.

A friend jokingly suggested that Bob buy an old car and plant a tree in it. Bob got to thinking. Then he got to searching. And the next thing you know he's hauling home a burned-out jalopy that had been ravaged in a brush fire.

The cloth top had worn off years before, so Bob removed the drive line and floorboard. Bullet holes in the right front headlight added dramatic interest. Bob headed off to the local nursery, bought a 2-foot pepper tree and plunked it in the car. Instant planter.

"I'm not much of a gardener," he said. "I just poked the branches through the windows when they got big enough and let the sprinkler system take care of the watering."

Valenzuela's boyhood friend (since junior high) Doug Caister of La Canada Flintridge helped plant the car. He remembers that they borrowed an old crane truck to lower the rusted relic into a pre-dug hole. As soon as they set the car in the ground, it just looked like it belonged there, Doug said.

"He doesn't march to the same drummer as everyone else," she said fondly about her friend.

The tree seems comfortable in the car, too. Even though there are branches growing out of both windows, there's room enough for passengers to squeeze in and sit a spell.

"The old car adds a lot of character to the property," he said.

Simple precautions should ease panic in burger recall

WASHINGTON (AP) - This week's massive recall of possibly tainted hamburger should not worry most consumers as long as they take some precautions and make sure any meat is well cooked, say industry and food safety experts.

The Agriculture Department has advised consumers to return frozen beef patties from a Hudson Food plant in Nebraska because of concern that some of the meat may be contaminated by the potentially deadly E. coli bacteria.

But food safety experts and beef industry spokesmen say anyone craving a hamburger should, nevertheless, take precautions.

Most important, cook the meat thoroughly, so that it reaches at least 160 degrees internally.

"If it's cooked correctly, you should not have a problem, but cooking it correctly is the trick," said Doug Holt, an associate professor of food science and human nutrition at the University of Missouri-Columbia. Proper cooking is essential for hamburger meat, agrees Janet Riley of the American Meat Institute.

"Meat is sterile on the inside. When you grind it, you distribute bacteria from the outside," she said. "It's fine to eat a steak rare; it's just ground product where you really need to be cooking them thoroughly."

Here are some other tips from the experts to avoid bacteria contamination when preparing meals with raw meat or poultry:

- Wash hands thoroughly in hot, soapy water before handling food and after handling raw meat;
- Don't let raw meat or poultry juices touch ready-to-eat foods, either in the refrigerator or during preparation;
- If you carry raw hamburger to an outdoor grill on a plate, do not use the plate again until it has been washed.
- Wash utensils that have touched raw meat with hot, soapy water before using them for cooked meals;
- Wash counters, cutting boards and other surfaces that raw meats have touched. Holt recommends diluting a teaspoon of bleach in a quart of water, pouring the mixture into a squirt bottle and misting the countertop.

Holt said that some people ought to be especially cautious.

"If you're in a high-risk category - young children or the elderly, or have chronic diseases that affect the immune system like cancer, AIDS or diabetes - I would avoid ground beef and ground meat products," Holt said. "Something that would cause you and I to feel bad could be lethal to someone like that."

A Hudson Foods plant in Nebraska recalled 25 million pounds of ground hamburger meat under orders from the government this week. Authorities were concerned some of it may be contaminated with E. coli, the potentially deadly bacteria that can cause severe abdominal cramps, fever, diarrhea and dehydration.

People with such symptoms should immediately contact a doctor or hospital, USDA officials said.

Attorney General rules phone, fax records not open to public access

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Supreme Court has reversed an opinion from Attorney General Dan Morales, ruling that its phone and fax records are not subject to the state's public information law.

Morales' office on Friday maintained that such records are public and should be made available.

In a strongly worded, seven-page opinion signed Thursday, the nine-member court said the state's open records law explicitly exempts the judiciary from the law.

"The exclusion of the judiciary simply could not be plainer," the court wrote.

"For the first time an attorney general has introduced confusion and uncertainty into the construction of the (Texas Public Information) act. At issue are not merely a few telephone records of the Supreme Court, but all records of all Texas judges and courts."

"The attorney general's authority, and his duty, is to advise about what the law is. (Morales' opinion) does not construe the act, it attempts to amend the act."

Ward Tisdale, a spokesman for the state's top attorney, called the nature of the court's ruling unusual, raising questions about its affect.

Opinions from the attorney general carry the weight of state law unless reversed by a court or the Legislature. Tisdale said it was unclear whether Morales' opinion or the court's order, filed in a so-called miscellaneous case, prevails.

"If this had been decided in a normal court opinion, we wouldn't question the court's authority," Tisdale said. "We still stand behind the reasoning that led to our open records decision. We have no intention of backing off of that opinion."

Chief Justice Tom Phillips said deciding the issue in an administrative procedure was unusual. But he added that there is no question about the law.

"Saying up means down only introduces ambiguity because of the importance of the person who said it," Phillips said. "The law has always been regarded as clear and still seems clear to me."

The controversy began last month when Morales, responding to an open records request, ruled public most telephone records from all office, cellular and mobile phones and fax machines used by supreme court justices and their staffs.

"Such records are not the kinds of information that relate to the exercise of judicial powers," Morales wrote. "Records regarding the expenditure of public funds, including records which directly implicate the fiduciary responsibilities of public employees or otherwise pertain to the day-to-day administration of a court, are subject to the (law)."

Phillips said the court is not equipped nor funded to respond to open records requests and would be subject to questions if it granted some requests, but not others. He said the judiciary spends only the money lawmakers give it and is subject to state audits and prosecution if any funds are misspent.

"If people think this is bad public policy, the Legislature is the place to change it," he said.

Nancy Monson, executive director of the Freedom of Information Foundation, said the state's highest civil court should set a higher standard.

"I'd like to know what the big secret is," Ms. Monson said.

The court's order came in response to a request from Texans for Public Justice for phone and fax records from Aug. 30, 1996 to April 2, 1997.

"We think the records are in the public interest," said Craig McDonald, director of the citizens group. "There is a public interest in knowing where public money is spent. These are not court secrets."

Tech regents approve big expansion project

LUBBOCK (AP) - Texas Tech University regents voted Friday to spend an extra $19.4 million for cost overruns and project expansions at campuses throughout its system.

A new liberal arts complex is the main culprit. Its projected $25 million price tag has swelled to $40 million since the school prepared a capital projects list in February.

The original figure was tallied before planners did a needs analysis, Tech spokeswoman Margaret Lutherer said. The analysis showed that the English, philosophy and education departments needed two buildings instead of one.

Regents earmarked more than $30 million for new construction and remodeling at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center's School of Pharmacy in Amarillo. A cardiovascular center at Memorial Hospital in Midland will cost $2.5 million. The center will be used by HSC's campus in Odessa.

Bonds and donations will fund the current state of capital improvements occurring systemwide. Last session, legislators gave Tech approval to issue $62.5 million in tuition revenue bonds.

Regents also have access to $180 million in other bond proceeds and a private fund-raising effort has set an $80 million goal for capital projects.

The system plans to spend $228 million on academic capital projects and $124.4 million more on other projects, such as the new United Spirit Arena and various beautification items.

Anticipated costs for the arena have jumped to $51 million from the initial estimates of $40 million to $45 million. Donations and student fees will finance the building, which is running behind schedule because of higher than expected construction bids.

Not included in the arena total is a $4.2 million parking deck to be built next door.

Drama revisits segregated south during Wallace era

By DENNIS ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES - "Segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever!" was former Alabama Gov. George Wallace's battle cry during the stormy civil rights era.

The chilling ring of that racist rallying slogan sounds long ago and far away. Wallace - now 78 - is a repented, reconstructed former segregationist who won his last term in office in 1963 with the ballots of black voters who forgave and supported him.

Now, his full story is being told in the four-hour TNT television miniseries "George Wallace," starring Gary Sinise and directed by John Frankenheimer.

The drama by the multiple Emmy-winning team, which debuts in two parts at 8 p.m. EDT Sunday and Tuesday, takes viewers on a time-travel journey that revisits the segregated South on the eve of the civil rights struggle of the 1960s.

If the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was the angel of deliverance for black people, the former governor of Alabama was quite the opposite.

"George Wallace was Faust," Frankenheimer says of his approach to showing the story about the governor who stood in the schoolhouse door to block enrollment of black students at the University of Alabama.

"Wallace made a deal with the devil, and he paid a very high price for it," Frankenheimer says.

A household name during the '60s, Wallace captured 10 million votes during the 1968 presidential race. But a would-be assassin's bullet stopped his career in 1972, putting him in a wheelchair and plunging him into despair - and apparent epiphany.

As director, Frankenheimer leaves the question open as to whether Wallace should indeed be forgiven.

"I, for one, believe it's possible for a man to change," says Frankenheimer, responsible for such film classics as "The Manchurian Candidate" and "Birdman of Alcatraz."

No one near the Alabama stachouse or the Wallace family is likely to forgive the makers of the "George Wallace" miniseries.

A dramatic - read that fictional - scene depicts a black household servant contemplating whether to plunge a kitchen utensil in the governor's back, which the filmmakers contend was necessary to dramatize black rage.

"There were certainly people in the black community who had an enormous seething resentment against Wallace," executive producer Mark Carliner says.

This scene, and some other material, got the "Wallace" crew uninvited to Alabama for some location work, with incumbent Gov. Fob James Jr. going so far as to condemn the production.

with Paul Monash and author of the biography "Wallace" - notes that it's little known Wallace made his first run for governor with the blessing of the NAACP and the American Civil Liberties Union. That defeat prompted him to play the race card.

"George Wallace" follows a series of Emmy-winning productions by Frankenheimer, including last year's Civil War epic "Andersonville."

The director, who honed his skills in the hothouse live dramas of television's Golden Age, uses historical TV news footage as stage and Greek chorus for his latest offering.

Much of the story unfolds in the grainy black-and-white television texture familiar to people old enough to remember life before color TV.

Viewers get to see and hear the stirring televised speeches of King and President John F. Kennedy. Meanwhile, in the contained space of the drama, those same speeches are watched by Wallace and his advisers as he orders out state troopers to put down the freedom marchers with police dogs, firehoses and cattle prods.

"There are many young people who don't know, or just don't believe, that these things really happened," Frankenheimer says.

Market reviving worries of crash

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK - Ten years ago this week Wall Street began the scariest financial adventure ever experienced by a generation of stock-market investors.

On Aug. 25, 1987, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been climbing for five years, reached a new closing peak of 2,722.42. Over the next two months, it took a precipitous drop.

What came to be known as the Crash of 1987 is often recalled as a crisis concentrated in a single day - Monday, Oct. 19, when the Dow fell 508 points, or more than 22 percent.

But that Black Monday was really the culmination of an eight-week slide in which the average lost just a shade less than 1,000 points, or about 36 percent. More than half the Dow's gains from 1982 to 1987 were wiped out in just 39 trading days.

To give the whole experience some present-day perspective, a 36 percent drop from the Dow's recent levels around 8,000 would take it down nearly 3,000 points, to just a bit above 5,000.

Through the whole course of the great bull market of the 1980s and 1990s, no other single development has drawn as much attention, in the press and perhaps in the national consciousness, as well, as the Crash of '87.

But as things have subsequently worked out, the Crash didn't have nearly as much long-term impact as the bullish events that preceded and followed it.

In late summer 1997, the Dow is about triple its level at the '87 peak, and more than four and a half times its Black Monday close of 1,738.74. In the past 15 years, it has increased more than tenfold.

The recession fears touched off by the '87 market slide never were borne out. The U.S. economy did suffer a short recession in 1990-91, but has since rebounded with a prolonged expansion that has seen unemployment, inflation and interest rates fall to their lowest levels in decades.

To look at a historical chart of the Dow today, you'd almost swear that the '87 Crash was just another bump on the highway of progress. With the advantage of hindsight, it can also be seen as a bargain sale that rewarded everybody who had the courage, amid the carnage, to step in and buy stocks.

As anyone who owned stocks or just followed the news reports 10 years ago will attest, however, the Crash can't be written off in any easy terms. It shook the Street to its foundations, and if several things hadn't gone right in the days and weeks immediately afterward, who knows where it might have led?

A decade later, the memory of the Crash and other past bear markets - including the especially long and painful decline from January 1973 to December 1974 - is regularly invoked by analysts who fear that investors will once again fall prey to compla-gency, especially at stocks prices' heady highs of late.

"Simply stated, the size of the stock market has far outpaced the fundamental growth in the economy," says James Stack, editor of the Investech Research investment advisory letter.

Or, in the words of veteran strategist Barton Biggs at Morgan Stanley & Co., "I am convinced that this particular mania will end either in a serious correction, at best, or a cyclical bear market."

Clinton puts personal stamp on Republican manifesto

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON - In signing the balanced-budget bill and the biggest tax cut in 16 years and by exercising the line-item veto, President Clinton essentially completed what Republicans started: the "Contract with America."

Clinton has managed to put his stamp on the most popular elements of that 1994 Republican manifesto. And it has conservative Republicans and liberal Democrats off balance and wondering where to move next.

"The budget in a major way has blurred the distinction between Republicans and Democrats," said conservative activist Richard Viguerie.

He accuses House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., of compromising too much with the White House and losing their political souls in the process.

"Somehow or other, Clinton and Dick Morris messed with Gingrich and Lott's minds. They really are off balance now. And I think that they are beyond salvation," Viguerie said. "I have not talked to a conservative regarding this budget who was anything but furious at the Republican leadership in Congress."

Morris, the former Clinton strategist, relishes the notion that his core advice - urging Clinton to move to the center and to embrace Republican themes - might have helped lead to the budget agreement.

"It's a very popular deal. I think it's one people strongly support. It makes it harder for outsiders to win, because the incumbents are doing a very effective job of doing the people's business," said Morris, who has also advised Republicans, including Lott and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The budget agreement - if it doesn't fly apart in an economic downturn - will enable congressional incumbents of both parties, as well as Vice President Al Gore, to campaign as tax-cutters and budget-balancers.

It is no coincidence that the budget deal was opposed by three members of Congress with presidential aspirations: House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri on the left and Republican Sens. Fred Thompson of Tennessee and John Ashcroft of Missouri on the right.

Gephardt took a pass on the White House signing ceremony last week.

"Joe Lurchbucket who is out here mixing it up 12 hours a day doesn't get a 20 percent break," Gephardt said in a campaign-style appearance in Iowa, referring to the reduced capital-gains tax rate under the new law.

Vice President Dan Quayle, a likely 2000 GOP candidate who is now based in Arizona, also contends Republicans compromised too much.

"Republicans win when we have the courage of our convictions and stand up and point out the difference between Republicans and Democrats," Quayle said. "This was supposed to be a 'Contract with America,' not a 'Contract with Clinton.'"

Another GOP presidential hopeful, publisher Steve Forbes, grumbles that the tax cut so ardently embraced by congressional Republicans further complicates the tax code.

"Why not just let people keep more of what they earn?" asks

Forbes, who advocated a single "flat" tax rate and abolition of the Internal Revenue Service in his 1996 presidential run.

Writing in the current issue of his Forbes magazine, he called the failure by Congress and the administration to enact more fundamental tax and spending reforms "a dark cloud" on the horizon. "One must never underestimate the government's capacity to muck up good times."

Clinton, while denouncing the Contract with America as a political document, little by little climbed aboard its principal planks - a balanced budget, welfare reform, capital-gains and estate-tax relief, the line-item veto and the $500-per-child tax credit that Gingrich once called the document's "crown jewel."

The provisions that finally made it into law are less ambitious than the original proposals, with some softer edges. But they're still recognizable.

Whoever thought that when Republicans propounded the measures in 1994, they'd end up having to share credit for them with a Democratic president?

"I think the American people for a good long time are going to be voting for Republican Congresses and Democratic presidents, because I think they like the way it works, and they like the way they play off each other," said political consultant Morris.

"And it really is checks and balances at its best."

Tension Headache

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of the skull, you may be suffering from tension headache. Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of the neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other pain-killers may give you temporary relief -- but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.

We accept assignments on Medicare & Medicaid & most insurance carriers.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Goodbye

Remember Sarah Bernhardt? She of the wooden leg who "retired" from acting every few years and embarked on a farewell tour. Every theatre that booked her was sold out well in advance of her appearance.

Be that as it may ... Cockleburrs is doing a farewell tour today. And, I don't have a wooden leg.

When the boss "invited" me to return to the fold for a few days in April, neither he nor I could anticipate that it would stretch into almost five months, with some time off for good behavior during that period.

There's a negative side to this. I haven't made my annual summer trip to the mountains of New Mexico for some cool air.

On the positive side, though, I did explore some art museums and their stupendous collections as well as fabulous parks in the Metroplex. And, I might add, some very satisfying restaurants.

Those two come out about equal, so the lost trip is nothing. An already-planned trip to North Carolina was a welcome break from daily routine.

A trip to Central Texas and the Gulf Coast was a summertime adventure. Again, I enjoyed an art museum and the traveling Romanov jewels exhibit.

In a week in July, I took off to entertain a daughter and two grandchildren from San Antonio. It was well worth it. She wallpapered the bathroom of my home. She's much more talented than her mother.

In the olden days, I couldn't conceive of retiring. Even when I decided to take the plunge, it was with much trepidation that I announced my intention. And then, after the die was cast, I wasn't sure that I could follow through.

Despite the many folks who have been kind to me and expressed their appreciation in recent months, I feel it's time to pass the torch.

So ... Thanks to Mayor Bob Josseland, who always makes me feel good, City Manager Chester Nolen, City Secretary Terri Johnson and City Attorney Terry Langenhennig for their patience and help as I've gone about my job collecting city government news. And, another pat on the back to the City Commission. The water office, building and zoning, fire department and police department folks have been super folks.

Appreciation goes to County Judge Tom Simons, Commissioners' Court, County Clerk David Ruland, JP Johnnie Turrentine, Tax Collector Margaret Del Toro, Sheriff Joe Brown and County Treasurer Nan Rogers and other officials for making my job easier. I will be forever in the debt of County Auditor Alex Schroeter.

To District Judge David Wesley Gulley, District Clerk Lola Faye Veazey, Court Coordinator Joan Bookout Allsup, Court Reporter Ray Quillen and court staff go my deepest thanks for providing information needed so often.

And, a special note of thanks is extended to Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul and his office for cooperation in my rounds of the Deaf Smith County courthouse.

Beverly Harder in the extension office usually gave my waning spirits a boost.

Above all, let me extend my undying appreciation to The Brand staff, especially Speedy Nieman. Every member of this group acted glad to have an old warhorse back in the stable.

And, as I finish my farewell tour, let me acknowledge special friends in the Hereford Rotary Club and acquaintances who have given me their help as I've gone about my job.

Being an old sofie (that description is not universally accepted, I know), I feared I might waver in my determination to turn in my key to the front door. I suggested to my son-in-law that he hold my feet to the fire to ensure that I will keep my commitment to my family. He gave me a sideways glance that said, "Why me?" and muttered, "OK."

There once was a popular song that began, "now is the hour ..." and if I could sing it, I would, because the time has come.

The fact is, I enjoyed my first go-round with retirement when it began a year ago.

I'm ready to do it again.

Dogs became 'family'

We didn't plan to have a house full of dogs; it just happened.

Annette and I love our furry "children," but we didn't plan to have more than - maybe - one small dog. When we thought we'd have just one, we didn't count on Daingerfield, Texas.

It seems that a lot of people in Daingerfield, the small East Texas town where we lived before moving to Hereford, prefer to abandon unwanted puppies on the side of the road rather than have dogs spayed or neutered. As a result, Annette and I ended up with several of these unwanted puppies.

We were able to find homes for several dogs and maybe a dozen kittens; however, for one reason or another, we couldn't place a couple of the others. After a while, the dogs settled in and we began to think of them as members of the family - much to the distress of Ginger, our old poodle who saw the new dogs as serious competition for the weiners she loves so much.

Each dog (with the possible exception of Larry, an old bird dog who just wants to sleep) has a very distinct personality.

There's Bear, some sort of Lab mix, who we found abandoned and starving on a gravel road near Lake Wright Patman. He had been abused and remains very suspicious of strangers. His most distinctive trait, besides biting me when he's scared, is a loud - very loud - bark that is the first thing I hear in the morning. He manages to always start sounding off about three minutes before the alarm is set to ring, and he doesn't care to sleep late on weekends.

"I'm going to shoot that dog," I've said more times than I care to remember.

"Go ahead," Annette will say. "Shoot him." But, Bear is still alive and barking. I haven't shot him for two reasons: (1) I can't bring myself to do it, because he's so devoted to us, and (2) Annette might shoot me if I blasted Bear. So, I have to content myself with using a water pistol to soak his head now and then.

Louie is a happy-go-lucky, hyperactive neutered male who was abandoned by a Daingerfield breeder of Pomeranians. It seems that Louie's a throwback to Pomeranians of old - and those dogs were about five times as big as the little balls of fur that you often see being cradled lovingly by elderly women.

Louie's sneaky, managing to get in the house without being noticed - especially when you don't want him inside. Once inside, he'll hide so he can't be put back out. He also gets his feelings hurt easily, and won't rest until he's made sure that everything's OK.

Reflections

By Don Cooper

Then, there's Ernie, a yellow Lab. Ernie's big, gentle, good-natured - and somewhat stupid.

He gets lost in the house, just going from one room to another. When he comes inside, he'll go down the hallway and into the living room. Then, when it's time to go outside, he'll whimper and pace around the living room because he's confused about where he is and how he got there. He has to be helped along (again, the water pistol) on the way outside.

Ernie's most distinctive trait, however, is his absolute refusal to walk on a leash. I've seen a lot of dogs that don't want to walk on a leash. They'll plant their feet and stand there until you're finally able to drag them along in the general direction you want to go.

But, not Ernie.

No, Ernie doesn't just stand there. He completely collapses on the ground. He won't move, just lying there whimpering. We discovered Ernie's fear of the leash when it was time to take him to the vet to be neutered. The vet and his assistants had a grand time laughing at me as I lugged the overgrown Lab into the clinic.

"Doesn't walk very well on a leash?" the vet asked. "Doesn't walk at all," I said and set Ernie down in front of the counter. He collapsed in a heap and wouldn't move. Even the laughter of the vet and his staff couldn't persuade Ernie to get up and walk, so I had to lug him to the kennels, where he would stay until his surgery.

Since then, I've had to carry Ernie when I took back to the vet for his shots, to the back of the hay-filled pickup when we moved to Hereford, and to his backyard once we got here.

Carry, literally. And, at about 80 pounds, carrying Ernie is no easy task.

What others are saying

By The Associated Press
A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Valley Morning Star (Harlingen) on border shooting:

It might well be that Marine Cpl. Clemente Banuelos was just doing his job on May 20. The trouble was, it was a job he, as a military man, should not have been doing.

A Del Rio grand jury decided not to bring an indictment against Banuelos for the fatal shooting of Esquiel Hernandez Jr., an 18-year-old high school student with no criminal record. Military authorities have said Hernandez, who was tending goats and did have a .22 rifle, had fired shots and was preparing to fire again at three camouflaged Marines when Banuelos killed him.

Texas Rangers and local prosecutors who investigated the shooting have disputed that account. An autopsy report suggests that Hernandez was not facing Banuelos when he was shot. The grand jury apparently believed the military's version.

Whatever the specifics turn out to be, such a tragedy was virtually inevitable. Banuelos was part of a border-area drug surveillance mission when he encountered Hernandez. ...

Such missions have been suspended pending a review. They should be ended. ...

The essential mission of military forces is to be prepared to fight wars - to kill or neutralize as efficiently as possible people determined to be the enemy. That's not the same as the mission of law enforcement. Each requires different skills and different attitudes.

That, along with political dangers inherent when military people are deployed against U.S. citizens rather than foreign enemies, is the main reason that for most of its history the United States has not permitted military units to engage in domestic law enforcement. ...

The killing of Esquiel Hernandez underlines the wisdom of the historic policy. The administration, after this review, should announce that henceforth military personnel will not be used to aid, supplement or displace domestic law enforcement. ...

The Waco Tribune-Herald on religion in the workplace:

Divine intervention may be required to keep President Clinton's new religious guidelines for federal workers out of court.

Clinton's guidelines on God in the workplace was intended to help federal managers deal with their employees' religious beliefs. He said the guidelines should serve as "the source of harmony."

Folks so inclined should pray that he is right.

For the new guidelines to work, everyone will have to exercise tolerance of the different religious beliefs - and lack of religious beliefs - of their fellow government workers.

Even members of the public who deal with federal workers will have to exercise tolerance if the guidelines have any chance of serving as a source of harmony.

Under the new 13-page religious expression guidelines, and with some caveats, government workers will be allowed to put up posters displaying their religious beliefs, wear religious garb, keep religious material on their desks and gather at lunch and during breaks for religious purposes. And government supervisors may invite their employees to attend religious observances.

The guidelines will be fine if all fellow workers and members of the public remain tolerant when they experience expressions of religious beliefs that they do not share.

The examples given by Clinton all referred to mainstream religious beliefs. Examples of permitted

Do parents still have to worry now that school's under way?

School has started and for many people - myself included - this is considered a great blessing.

No more wondering what the kids are doing while Mom is at work. No more going home to a house that looks like Hurricane Hugo just passed through.

A quick phone call after school from the kids assures Mom everything is fine. But on second thought, is it?

An untold number of children go home each day to call Mom and tell her they are home, but what dangers lay hidden as our children walk home, giggling with their friends?

When I was young, our biggest problem was the older kids picking on the little kids. Now the children face the bullies, the drug dealers, and the nice guy, who just moved into the neighborhood.

So, we've told the children how to avoid the bullies; we've told them about the effects of drugs and they even know not to talk to strangers.

The Real World

By Dianna F. Dandridge

How long do children consider people as strangers? They see the nice young man every afternoon as he waters the roses. They comment on his really cool car with the racing stripes.

He looks normal. He has clear blue eyes, a nice smile and is always ready to talk about Friday's football game.

The nice young man even makes a point of meeting the adults in the neighborhood. Maybe he has even changed a tire for one of the local women. He's great with small motors. Everyone has learned he's who you need when the lawn mower just won't go.

So, is he still a stranger?

Kids probably don't think so, but he may be stranger than most people would ever expect.

He may well be the most recent of convicted sex offenders who are released into our midst.

Sex offenders, who have been convicted since Sept. 1, 1990 and who are released on parole or probation, must register with the state and the county. Offenders convicted prior to Sept. 1, 1990, only need to report to local parole/probation officers.

Registration includes notifying the press and the schools of the age, sex of the offender, street they live on (not the address), and crime they committed.

No names are listed and it is up to the school and press to let the public know this person has arrived. As much as they can.

According to records from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, the average pedophiles molest 17 children before apprehension.

The same records show a 98 percent recidivism rate for released sexual offenders and most experts say prison rehabilitation doesn't work.

These repeat sex offenders are the ones being allowed to "arrive".

Personally, I have no use for criminals of any sort, but a released pedophile! Get rid of them any way possible; keep them locked up, feed them the 'gators, strand them on a desert isle, it doesn't matter just don't let them walk among our kids.

If this message is to make a mark, then voters need to contact legislators, congressmen and the prison parole board and let your voices ring out.

The laws need to be changed to protect our most vulnerable citizens -- and to make offenders know they will serve long, hard time for hurting our kids. Forgiveness in the form of early release should not be available.

Just Trying to Help

By Terry Cosby, Pastor
First Baptist Church

Friend lends a hand

The feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a man can always tell he's in trouble when his wife begins a sentence with: "Honey, do you notice anything different?"

This column is usually called "Hereford Bull" and you are going to have to put up with a lot of it this go 'round. With Speedy laid up for a few days, I agreed to help if I could. I've gotten myself in trouble with my mouth before, which is OK as it is expected with a preacher, but this time I got in trouble with my hand. The Good Book says something about if your right hand offends you, cut it off. Good thing I'm left-handed.

One church youngster, Ryan Leasure, had heard about Speedy's illness Sunday and made him a get-well card during my sermon. Hmmm? Anyway, he brought it to me to sign and I foolishly wrote under my name that if he needed help with the Bull column, I'd be happy to help.

Me and my big pen. There ought to be some law like separation of church and state keeping pastors from writing in the newspaper, except at Easter and Christmas. I don't think I'm cut out to be a newspaper man. Frankly, however, I don't know how Speedy made it all these years either. He's honest, nice, loves his family and loves people. What has that got to do with being a newspaper man?

We do hope your recovery goes as quickly as your name, Speedy. I do know that good journalists have a catchy closing line. I need to close now so I'll say that's the way it was - No, that's Walter Cronkite's. And, so it goes - nope, that's Linda Ellerby.

Did you ever wonder - Unh-huh, that one's Andy Rooney's. Now you know the rest of the Bull - No, too much like Paul Harvey.

I know - Just trying to help.
Cos

oOo

P.S.: I know Speedy would have had much to say about our community having to say goodbye to Tom LeGate this past week.

He fought a long battle with his cancer. I didn't know Tom personally as he was ill about as long as I have been here, but I was impressed by how many people did know and show a genuine respect and affection for Tom.

I was aware of this because of the many, many prayer requests we received at First Baptist for him over the past couple of years. They simply never stopped coming in and were made at nearly every prayer time we had.

He was not a Baptist, rather he was a member of the Methodist Church, but he had Baptists, Catholics, Nazarenes and every group I know of as concerned about him.

That says a lot to me about a man who led his family, his business and his city so well.

If I may borrow from Speedy: "He was a good'un and we will miss him."

religious expression include displaying the Bible or the Koran; wearing a crucifix, a yarmulke or a Muslim hijab; or placing a wreath over the entrance to a government office at Christmas time.

The real test of religious tolerance will come when government employees who hold non-mainstream religious beliefs put up religious posters, pictures or sayings that clash with the beliefs of the majority of federal workers and private citizens.

Much of the nation was settled by people whose non-mainstream religious beliefs were not tolerated in their home lands. America's founders wanted to ensure that all citizens had the right to worship or not worship as they pleased, which was the basis of the Constitution's prohibition against the establishment of religion.

Atheists, agnostics, Scientologists, pantheists, Buddhists, animists, polytheists and all others have the same right to their beliefs as do Americans with mainstream beliefs.

The key to the harmony Clinton seeks is tolerance.

Bay City Daily Tribune on Clinton/UPS strikers:

It's time that Bill Clinton took the responsibilities inherent with his office and put an end to the UPS-Teamsters strike.

Despite the utterings of Clinton's press spokesman, Mike McCurry that "We can't solve the labor-management conflict between the parties," Clinton does have the power, through the Taft-Hartley Act, to get control of the situation before it does severe damage to the nation's economy.

This is, after all, the man who took credit for ending the baseball strike.

Only in this White House would baseball be deemed more important than a strike that could cripple the country.

The Victoria Advocate on Apple's deal with Microsoft:

Even though Apple computer enthusiasts despise Bill Gates and believe he stole the idea for his popular Windows software from the Macintosh desktop, Apple desperately needs the billionaire entrepreneur. The infusion of $150 million from Microsoft may be its last chance... Windows may be a blatant copy of Mac, but its marketing has been so superior that Apple, which produces Macintosh computers, has seen its market share dwindle to near oblivion.

Microsoft also will make its software more compatible with Macs. That should make Macs more appealing to computer buyers who have complained for years that less and less software was available for Apple users.

Computer users - and government regulators - should be concerned that Microsoft's move could be the first step toward complete domination of operating systems and a death grip on software. But Microsoft probably will try to keep Apple alive to stave off antitrust charges from the federal government.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on national parks fees:

Congress did the right thing last year when it approved the raising of fees at many of our national parks.

Park repairs and improvements were needed, so the options of paying for them basically came down to a question either of raising fees or of making the repairs and upgrades at the expense of all taxpayers. Hiking the fees was the logical move - the people who use the park facilities should pay for them.

And the higher fees are not prohibitive. The entrance fee for Yellowstone National Park, for example, climbed from $10 for a car with two or more people to $20. A family that makes the drive to enjoy what Yellowstone has to offer would easily be able to afford the additional amount to enjoy those facilities.

The congressional approval of fee hikes is supported by attendance this year. Even though the fees were doubled at many of our national parks, the number of visitors to parks, monuments and historic sites has grown this year.

For example, fees doubled at both Petrified Forest National Park in Arizona and at the Badlands National Park in South Dakota, but the attendance rose by 15 percent at Petrified Forest and 13 percent at Badlands.

That has not happened everywhere. Yellowstone, Grand Canyon and Yosemite National Parks have all experienced attendance decreases - particularly at Yosemite, which was closed because of flooding for two months early this year. But Park Service officials attribute much of the decrease to a smaller than average number of foreign tourists this year.

Our national parks are part of the glory that is America, and maintaining them is an expensive proposition. But it is worth it to the millions of visitors who enjoy the parks' beauty each year, and it was fair that they participate in maintaining them through modest fee raises.

Sports Briefs

GOLF
DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - Defending champion Per-Ulrik Johansson of Sweden equaled Colin Montgomerie's course-record of 8-under-par 64 and moved one stroke ahead of the Scot after the second round of the European Open.
 Johansson, currently seventh in the Ryder Cup standings, now appears certain to make the European team, as he edged past Montgomerie with a 12-under 132 for 36 holes.

BELTON, Mo. (AP) - Bruce Summerhays and Hugh Baiocchi shot 7-under-par 63s - one stroke off the course record - to share the first-round lead in the Saint Luke's Classic.

After shooting 1-under 34 on the front nine, Baiocchi, a South African and 22-year veteran of the PGA European Tour, blistered the supposedly tougher back nine and finished with a 29, the lowest score for nine holes on the Senior PGA Tour this year.

SURREY, British Columbia (AP) - Canadian Richard Zokol went on a birdie binge to shoot a 7-under-par 64 for a share of the second-round lead in the Greater Vancouver Open.
 Zokol, who matched Len Mattiace and Steve Pate at 11-under-par 131, had eight birdies over the last 12 holes.

BASEBALL
NEW YORK (AP) - Umpire John Hirschbeck made no ethnic remarks when shouting at Japanese pitcher Hideki Irabu, the American League concluded.

Hirschbeck, however, did make profane comments to the pitcher during an argument Wednesday night at Anaheim, AL vice president Phyllis Merhige said. Yankees third baseman Charlie Hayes had claimed to teammates that Hirschbeck made a profane comment about Irabu's nationality.

Merhige said she will discuss the situation Monday with AL president Gene Budig.

FOOTBALL
DENVER (AP) - John Elway will test his bionic arm for the first time under playing conditions when the Denver Broncos and San Francisco 49ers end their exhibition season tonight at Mile High Stadium.

Elway, playing for the first time since rupturing a biceps tendon in his throwing shoulder against Miami Aug. 4, will start at quarterback for the Broncos and probably play the first half.

TENNIS
COMMACK, N.Y. (AP) - Australian Davis Cup player Patrick Rafter beat second-ranked Michael Chang 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 to advance to the semifinals of the Hamlet Cup.

In the semifinals, Rafter faces Sweden's Thomas Enqvist, a 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 winner over Richey Reneberg. Julian Alonso, a 20-year-old Spaniard ranked 72nd in the world, upset fourth-ranked Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia 7-6 (7-4), 3-6, 6-3. He plays countryman Carlos Moya, ranked No. 8, beat Germany's Marc-Kevin Goellner 6-4, 6-4.

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) - Fourth-seeded Lindsay Davernport, a gold medalist during the 1996 Olympic tournament at Stone Mountain Park, remained unbeaten on the courts east of Atlanta with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Amanda Coetzer in the semifinals of the U.S. Women's Hardcourt Championships.

BASKETBALL
BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics signed free agent forward Chris Mills and point guard Tyus Edney.

The moves followed Thursday's trade of forward Eric Williams to the Denver Nuggets.

Bidding war to begin

Networks vying for NFL's broadcast rights

NEW YORK (AP) - As the Xs and Os of the NFL season play out on the screen, equally important plotting will be going on behind the scenes as pro football puts its TV contract back on the auction block.

Current broadcast rights expire at the end of the upcoming season. The NFL says it could have a new contract as early as December.

Until one is forged, the league's point men and TV deal-makers are not talking. So at this point, guessing what could happen is like trying to predict which teams will reach the Super Bowl.

Judging from what happened during the last bidding war, it's safe to assume the NFL will get more than the $4.4 billion it generated from the packages currently divided up between Fox, NBC, ABC, TNT and ESPN.

And clearly, among the most interesting dynamics shaping the negotiations will be the outsider status of CBS, which was outfoxed for its NFC rights the last time around and wants back in.

"Whenever you have a new player trying to get involved, that raises the stakes," said ABC Sports spokesman Mark Mandel. "CBS found out about that the hard way."

In 1993, Fox's high-rolling foray into football's fraternal TV order knocked CBS out of the picture, ending a relationship that had dated back to the 1950s and giving Fox almost immediate credibility in the world of sports.

A startup network looking to enhance its prestige at the time, Fox offered a stunning $1.6 billion over four years for the NFC package, highly coveted because it covers more major broadcast markets than the AFC and because NFC teams have won the last 13 Super Bowls.

Fox's bid, which broke down to about $395 million a year, was $100 million more than CBS bid and better than $160 million more than CBS had paid over the previous four years.

The rest of the TV contract remained virtually the same. ABC kept its rights to "Monday Night Football." NBC kept the AFC. And TNT and ESPN split the Sunday night cable games.

Fox Sports, the division created in the aftermath of the network's blockbuster deal, acknowledges it has lost money. But the move has paid off in other ways, making the network a major leaguer in sports TV.

The deal also played directly into a strategy by the NFL to use the diversification of the television market to boost league revenue. With more and more cable and independent stations getting into the business, incumbents may be less inclined to exercise their rights of first refusal.

And this time, with CBS trying to become a contender again, the NFL may have even more leverage to up the ante, which critics and some competitors have argued has already been pushed through the ceiling by Fox.

The scenarios that could unfold vary as widely as game-day predictions. It is almost universally accepted that ABC won't give up Monday nights, which have traditionally drawn the highest ratings.

"Monday Night Football has been very good to us," Mandel said. "Costs and financial terms are something we choose to keep between us and the NFL."

It's unclear how high any of the current contract holders will be willing to go. Should none of the other current contract holders balk, CBS would be shut out altogether unless the NFL crafts a new piece of the puzzle, like offering a Thursday night package.

That is a long shot. NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue has said it is unlikely the contract would be restructured. And insiders say that a new deal could not be created without watering down any of the other current arrangements.

Once the league proposes its new costs to current contract holders, they will have until Oct. 1 to respond, although the deadline is flexible.

During the 1400s, women wore a tall cone-shaped hat called a hennin. This hat measured from three to four feet high and had a long floating veil.

Lady Whitefaces advance

AMARILLO - Defending tourney champion Hereford was to meet Tascosa Saturday for the berth in the finals of the 18th Annual Amarillo Invitational Volleyball Tournament.

The Lady Whitefaces were 6-0 in Friday's pool play, and claimed 15-0, 15-6 victories over Canyon in the winners bracket.

Tascosa's Lady Rebels were 5-1 in pool competition. Tascosa earned its spot opposite Hereford with 15-1, 15-4 wins over Perryton.

The 16-team tournament placed four teams in four pools. After round-robin play, the top two teams moved into the winners bracket, with the other two going into the consolation bracket.

Heart surgery doesn't stop 49ers' defender

By The Associated Press
Heart surgery didn't stop Jesse Sapolu. It only delayed his return to the field.

Sapolu, out of football since his February release by the San Francisco 49ers following heart surgery, was re-signed by the club Friday to fill in for injured center Chris Dalman.

Sapolu, who played 14 years for the 49ers, including 10 as a starter, signed a one-year deal for the veteran minimum of $275,000, but the pact includes incentives tied to playing time and team performance, agent Leigh Steinberg said.

"I've always risen to challenges and I think that's what excites me and what excites a lot of the players that have won Super Bowls for the 49ers," said Sapolu, who won four championship rings with the 49ers.

Sapolu attended the team's last practice Friday prior to heading to Denver for tonight's exhibition finale. He might get in a few snaps, though the bulk of the playing time is expected to go to Steve Gordon and Derrick Deese.

That will change next week, with Sapolu expected to start at center for the first two or three regular-season games while Dalman recovers from torn ligaments in his left knee from an Aug. 9 exhibition against Seattle.

The team signed Sapolu only after being lobbied by offensive line coach Bobb McKittrick and quarterback

Steve Young, and gaining assurances about his health.

"Jesse looked me square in the eye and told me, 'I can do this and I'm ready to do this and I'm in good enough shape to do this,'" coach Steve Mariucci said. "He's really anxious to do it and show us all he can do it."

Sapolu underwent open-heart surgery in January to repair a leaky valve. He had the problem for years, but it had gotten progressively worse, finally requiring the operations to correct.

"According to the doctors' reports, it's supposed to be better now than the heart I've played with all these years," Sapolu said. "The doctors that performed the operation were all cheering for me to come back and play."

EAGLES

Philadelphia acquired guard Sean Love from the New York Jets for past considerations on Friday.

In order to make room for the Penn State graduate on the roster, the Eagles placed quarterback Koy Detmer on injured reserve with a knee injury.

Love, 28, was released by Tampa Bay on Wednesday, and claimed by the Jets one day later.

Now entering his fourth NFL season, the 6-foot-3, 305-pound guard was originally drafted in the 10th round by Dallas in 1991.

SAINTS

Defensive end Renaldo Turnbull, a first-round draft choice in 1990 and a Pro Bowl player in 1993, was released Friday, hours before an exhibition game against the Bears.

Turnbull, 6-foot-4, 250 pounds, earned a Pro Bowl spot in 1993, when as a linebacker, he had 13 sacks and five forced fumbles. However, he had a high salary and low production in the 1995 and 1996 seasons, when he earned $8.75 million and totaled 13 sacks and 52 tackles.

He played the 1995 season with a torn biceps tendon sustained in training camp. In 1996, he played 12 games (seven starts), but missed four because of blood in his urine, an injured calf, and a suspension resulting from the Nov. 3 game against San Francisco in which he walked off the field in frustration during the game.

CHARGERS

Desperate for help on the defensive line, San Diego worked out rookie tackle Mike Mohring before their exhibition game against Minnesota on Friday night.

Mohring had been in the Dolphins' camp as a free agent out of Pittsburgh.

San Diego's line woes continued when defensive end William Fuller re-aggravated a knee injury from two weeks ago.

Wisconsin's tailback can be intimidating to rivals

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Wisconsin tailback Ron Dayne is unique among college running backs, according to Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni.

Not only does Dayne have speed and elusiveness, he can also intimidate defenders, running at them with his 260-pound body.

"He has a little bit of what every good back you'll see in the course of year, except his is rolled into one," Pasqualoni said Friday at a news conference to promote Sunday's Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium between No. 17 Syracuse and No. 24 Wisconsin.

If the Orangemen are going to have any chance against Wisconsin, they first have to slow down Dayne, who last year became the leading freshman rusher in NCAA history by gaining 1,863 yards.

Pasqualoni admitted that Dayne will be very tough to stop.

In Dayne-like fashion, Pasqualoni got on an unstoppable roll when talking about the Berlin, N.J., resident and Overbrook High School product who averaged 155.3 yards and scored 18 touchdowns in 1996.

"I think what happens is when you try to tackle him or when he comes downhill and turns his shoulders, he is unique in my opinion," Pasqualoni said of Dayne, who is 5-foot-10 and 262 pounds. "He has such great feel. He is constantly cutting back and constantly making the moves which make you miss him."

"He makes you look silly trying to tackle him," Pasqualoni added. "He is not only a big powerful back, but he is someone with exceptional feeling and timing."

Pasqualoni said Dayne is at his best when he can make his cutbacks, squirting through holes that open when a defender tries to sidestep a blocker.

"If I was playing, I'd be happy to just get off the block, let alone have a collision with someone 260 pounds," Pasqualoni said. "There is a lot more to that team than Ron Dayne, but he is going to set up a lot of what is going on."

One of the players Dayne might run into Sunday is Syracuse senior safety Donovin Darius, a Camden resident who played at Woodrow Wilson High School.

"I think he was a freshman or he was in the eighth grade when I was a senior," Darius said. "His school played mine and I heard about him time and time again when I talked to my high school coaches."

Stopping Dayne is going to take a team effort, Darius said, noting the Orangemen need to get a lot of people around the ball carrier.

"It's very rare that he has all those abilities, size, strength and speed," Darius said. "But to me, he's a running back and I don't care what size he is."

Buckeye coach's record imperfect

CHICAGO (AP) - If Ohio State coach John Cooper had called it quits like he wanted to five years ago, he would have missed out on a lot of heartache.

All those losses to Michigan notwithstanding, he also would have missed out on becoming one of college football's most successful coaches.

At Ohio State, success may be measured by the number of victories over rival Michigan - coach Cooper's a gloomy 1-7-1 - but the 60-year-old son of a Tennessee carpenter has been a winner in most every other facet of life.

"There was a point when I felt like, 'Hey, I'll retire when I'm 55,'" Cooper said during a break at the Big Ten Conference's recent gathering of coaches. "Hey, now I'm 60 and I've got a five-year contract."

"I almost have to pinch myself to believe I'm starting my 10th year at Ohio State."

What about the Michigan thing, coach? How can you be so happy when no matter how many games your teams win - 41 of 50 over the past four years - you're still the guy who can't beat Michigan?

"Sure it bothers me," Cooper said, eyeing his 1997 Rose Bowl ring.

"My attitude is if it bothers you, do something about it. I thought I worked harder than I ever did in my life to make sure we had a better football team. We'll work harder this year."

Since Cooper arrived in Columbus on Dec. 31, 1987, he has re-established Ohio State as the premier team in the Big Ten, created a recruiting program among the best in the nation and led the Buckeyes to their first Rose Bowl victory in 24 years.

All that hard work has paid off: - Ohio State is the Big Ten's winningest team in the 1990s, with a 64-19-3 record.

- His recruiting record is unsurpassed: 12 Buckeyes have been NFL first-round draft picks since 1991, including two overall No. 1s - Dan Wilkinson in '94 and Orlando Pace in '97.

- Only two men - Woody Hayes and John Wilce - have coached at Ohio State longer than Cooper.

- His priorities are in order: During the season he brings players to visit cancer patients and also is active with Big Brothers-Big Sisters, United Way and the Alzheimer's Foundation.

- And finally, Cooper will earn $675,000 this season, with incentives that can add another $100,000.

"I know we're doing the right things," he said. "I don't go home every night with a headache. I tell my coaches I know we're recruiting good, sound football players. We're coaching them hard and we've got a great support package in hand."

"I wake up in the morning happy for my health. It's all what you make of it."

There are fans who always make a case for Cooper's dismissal as the losses to Michigan grow.

"There's no one who wants to beat Michigan more than John does," said Archie Griffin, the Buckeyes' assistant athletic director and two-time Heisman Trophy winner. "When I played, we had a period of four years without losing to them."

Now, we're on a cycle where Michigan has the upper hand."

The criticism hurts, but Cooper has been in the business long enough to shake it off. He began coaching in 1963 as an assistant for Tommy Prothro at Oregon State.

"Tommy once told me that in coaching, the peaks don't get any higher and the valleys get deeper and deeper as you get older," Cooper said.

The last two losses to Michigan prove Prothro's point. Both ended Ohio State's chances for perfect seasons on the last day of the season and knocked the Buckeyes out of national title contention.

News Digest

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - President Clinton next month will ask Congress to renew his authority for speedy negotiation of trade agreements, saying the "fast track" approach is needed to make U.S. companies more competitive worldwide.

"If we don't seize these new opportunities, our competitors surely will," Clinton said today in his weekly radio address. He said he wants to use trade talks to broaden U.S. access to markets in Latin America and Asia.

Other nations already have negotiated 20 trade agreements in Latin America and Asia, the president said, and the United States risks being left behind unless he is given authority to reach trade agreements without burdensome delays.

"If we don't seize these new opportunities, our competitors surely will," Clinton said. "Our workers and our businesses are the best in the world, but they can't compete in the slow lane."

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Teamsters President Ron Carey faces a new union election, federal officials are pressing ahead with an investigation of his campaign fund-raising and the Teamsters' links to the Democratic Party.

A federal reviewing officer on Friday threw out last December's contentious Teamsters election and raised new allegations of a scheme in which union contributions to political candidates allegedly were swapped for donations to Carey.

Election overseer Barbara Zack Quindel ordered a new election because of the alleged fund-raising abuses by Carey's supporters, forcing Carey into another race with opponent, James P. Hoffa.

Meanwhile, Justice Department and Senate investigators have obtained documents raising new questions about whether top Democratic Party officials were aware of plans to trade financial support for Carey's campaign for union money for Democrats in last year's federal elections.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - If Paula Corbin Jones felt any anxiety about hauling the leader of the free world into court, it didn't show at the first pretrial hearing in her sexual harassment lawsuit against President Clinton.

The former state worker appeared relaxed in a federal courtroom Friday and smiled broadly outside after a judge refused to dismiss her allegation that Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance toward her when he was governor.

U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright threw out portions of Mrs. Jones lawsuit but set May 27 to begin selecting a jury to hear the central claim against Clinton, who would be the first sitting president to stand trial on allegations of official misconduct.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Millions of motorists might pony up the cash to have their auto air bags disconnected if federal regulators decide to allow that option, a survey suggests.

About 16 percent of motorists would pay to deactivate a driver-side air bag if given the choice, according to a survey of 900 drivers with air bags conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

The motorists said they would pay between $50 and $200 to install an on-off switch or have a mechanic disconnect the safety device. There are about 63 million vehicles on the road with air bags.

"It could easily be in the millions in terms of the number of people who would at least make inquiries," said Adrian Lund, senior vice president of the Insurance Institute.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Archdiocese of Miami is sending a cruise ship to Cuba at the time of the January visit by Pope John Paul II, and other Americans may get U.S. permission to travel there as well.

The State Department gave the green light on Friday for the archdiocese to charter the ship for a pilgrimage that will enable more than 1,000 expected passengers to attend a mass to be celebrated by the pope Jan. 25.

The mass is scheduled on the final day of the pope's five-day visit, his first ever to the island.

Clinton's taking it very easy

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - Freshly shucked oysters from the "raw bar" were sent on plates to black-garbed sharpshooters atop the "Hot Tin Roof," a sure sign the leader of the nation was in the house.

A vacationing President Clinton went from swinging golf clubs all day to nightclubbing Friday night, celebrating the birthday of Kelly Craighead, a 30-year-old aide to Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Carly Simon, a resident of Martha's Vineyard and a major owner of the hip music and dance spot, sang "Happy Birthday" and snuggled up to Clinton's side just off stage as her daughter, Sally Taylor, sang a duet with Kate Taylor, the sister of Simon's ex-husband James Taylor.

The president, who stood for a moment by a patio bar with a sign that read, "Love and Happiness," was in an effusive mood. "Hey guys, come on!" he shouted to reporters, pretending to invite them to the private party.

Inside the metal warehouse club - a skinny dipping scene was among the murals on the walls - the Clintons praised Craighead and called her "one of the family" for working and vacationing with them since the 1992 campaign.

"She's truly a good soul," said the president.

The first couple, who left at 10 p.m., didn't hang around long enough to take in the soulful sounds of guitarist Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown.

"We're a different kind of nightclub every night," said Barbara Welsh, a publicist for the joint that features everything from comedy to blues.

But on Friday, it was the Clinton club.

"I shook his hand!" said Ted Karalekas, who sported a bandage on one finger and a blue ribbon for winning the fastest oyster shucker contest at the annual Martha's Vineyard fair - 14 oysters in 36 seconds. "I didn't get a chance to do my Jack Nicholson impression for him, though."

Tobacco execs acknowledge links

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Over two days, the chairmen of RJR Nabisco and Philip Morris Cos. have acknowledged a possible link between smoking and fatal diseases. And both promised steps to better protect public health.

The remarks from Geoffrey Bible and Steven Goldstone have been touted as monumental concessions. But others say they were made to put the tobacco industry in a better light as Congress considers a $368 billion settlement between 40 states and the industry.

"These guys are under oath, there's just so far you can go," said Jim Tierney, the former attorney general of Maine who led the coalition of states suing the industry. "The bottom line is the truth is coming out."

The sworn testimony of Bible and Goldstone came in depositions for Florida's $12.3 billion lawsuit against the industry, the first such state suit to go to trial. Jury selection entered its fourth week Friday.

Philip Morris' Bible testified

Thursday that smoking "might have" killed 100,000 Americans. The next day, Goldstone, of RJR Nabisco, said he believes smoking plays a part in causing lung cancer - and that he would support tobacco warnings in Third World countries where they aren't required.

A spokeswoman for RJR Nabisco's R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. later said the company already voluntarily puts warning labels on packs in "numerous" countries where they are not required.

Goldstone's comments about warnings was a good first step, said Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who has pushed for legislation to require warnings worldwide that are no more lenient than the ones in the United States.

Earlier this year, Liggett Group chief Bennett LeBow said cigarettes kill and are addictive. Those involved in the settlement proposal note that it requires tobacco executives to be more forthcoming and cooperative.

Quayle takes shot at GOP leadership

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Distancing himself from the Washington GOP establishment, former Vice President Dan Quayle says taxpayers "got the shaft" in a budget deal negotiated by party leaders - some of whom he might face in the next presidential campaign.

"You don't make compromise your top priority," Quayle told the Midwest Republican Leadership Conference, which is shaping into the first "cattle call" of the 2000 election cycle.

Quayle led a list of conference speakers that included House Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia, former GOP presidential candidates Lamar Alexander, Steve Forbes and Alan Keyes, former vice presidential candidate Jack Kemp and newcomers to the GOP presidential wannabe list - Texas Gov. George Bush, Sen. Fred Thompson of Tennessee, and Rep. J.C. Watts of Oklahoma.

Quayle and Gingrich spoke on the first day of the three-day conference.

The House speaker defended the budget deal and called for a second "Contract With America," saying it could help put a Republican in the White House.

"There are some things you need a Republican president to get done," Gingrich said.

Quayle did not mention Gingrich by name, but clearly had the speaker and other congressional leaders in mind when he said that under the budget deal "government got larger, not smaller ... tax revenues will increase, not decrease ... and welfare reform will stop dead in its tracks."

Quayle said congressional leaders compromised too much in dealing with President Clinton.

"There is a time to compromise and a time to stand firm," Quayle said. "Now, I know it was a grand photo opportunity at the White House, but I'm afraid the taxpayers once again got the shaft."

Quayle's remarks foreshadowed a dynamic of the 2000 GOP race, when candidates will try to position themselves as Washington outsiders - even longtime insiders like Quayle, Sen. John Ashcroft of Missouri and political commentator Pat Buchanan.

His outsider status has made Bush a favorite of many conference delegates, though the son of former President George Bush is still relatively unknown and must win re-election in Texas before even considering whether to run for president.

Jonathan Alcox, a vendor at the conference, said he sold 50 "Bush-2000" buttons before the event officially opened. "One lady bought 15," Alcox said. "His dad never sold so well."

"He seems to be the one on everybody's mind," said Mike Gubash, 42, of St. Paul, Minn.

Gingrich, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and Rep. John Kasich of Ohio - all potential presidential candidates - may find themselves accused by the likes of Quayle of being too cozy with Clinton during the budget talks.

In a sign of their presidential interests, Gingrich and Quayle met with the Iowa delegation to ingratiate themselves with activists who will organize the critical 2000 caucuses.

Nuclear, biological threats not so farfetched

Weapons of mass destruction top national security list of modern terrorist threats

WASHINGTON (AP) - To moviegoers, it sounds like a summer blockbuster: Terrorists threaten the nation's capital with a nuclear weapon.

To U.S. policy makers, it sounds like an increasingly possible scenario.

"People don't understand the enormity of the national security threats out there," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a foreign policy and arms control expert. "We need to be vigilant. This is not a time to go to sleep at the switch."

Former National Security Adviser Anthony Lake, who is writing a book titled "Six Nightmares" detailing major threats to the U.S. government, let slip that one involves a blackmailing nuclear terrorist.

State increases enforcement of nursing home law compliance

AUSTIN (AP) - Stepped-up enforcement of state nursing home regulations has many operators of the facilities feeling nervous.

"People are wondering, 'Am I next?'" asked Merril Grey, manager of a Dallas-area home sued last week by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

Thirty lawsuits have been filed since June, and Morales pledges to keep that pace as long as state inspectors find serious health and safety problems in nursing homes.

"It's a difficult atmosphere," Melody Chatelle, a Texas vice president of Living Centers of America, told the Austin American-Statesman for a story published Wednesday.

Her company operates 92 nursing homes in Texas, including a Waco home sued last week. "It has people concerned, obviously," she said. "The overall desire of the industry (is) to re-enforce that, by and large, nursing facilities are a safe option for persons who need them."

One reason for the accelerated lawsuit filings is increased referrals of problem nursing homes to the attorney general from the Department of Human Services, which inspects them. Over the past year, referrals to the attorney general's office have increased almost fivefold, state records show.

The attorney general files lawsuits only after the human services agency refers a substandard home for litigation. State lawsuits seek fines of up to $10,000 a day for each violation from nursing homes with health and safety problems that harm, or could harm, residents.

In the 1997 budget year, which ends Aug. 31, 53 nursing homes have been referred to the attorney general's office for litigation, records show. Last year only 11 nursing homes were referred for litigation.

"There were some communication problems between our folks and the (attorney general) section over there that is primarily responsible for these cases, and now that's cleared up," said Paul Leche, deputy general counsel for the human services department. "We're very happy that it has."

Legislators criticized both the Department of Human Services and the attorney general's office for lax enforcement. A new law will require both agencies to report each year on their efforts to enforce nursing home laws.

"You'll just have to wait for the book," Lake said of his other nightmare visions, explaining his publisher won't let him give a preview.

National security experts list these top modern menaces:

-Weapons of mass destruction - nuclear, biological and chemical devices that can kill huge numbers of people and, in some cases, do immense physical damage.

-Terrorism, domestic and foreign.

-Narcotics traffic and international crime.

-Global conflicts - from belligerents in the former Yugoslavia and Russia, to the Middle East and the Persian Gulf, to Asia, particularly the Korean Peninsula and around disputed China Sea territories.

"People are most afraid of the nuclear scenario, but biological weapons produce the same number of kills and are very easy to put together," said Robert Kupperman, a terrorism expert at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. "You could just go over a major city and spray."

What-would-happen-if scenarios have no limit.

Imagine the 1993 World Trade Center bombing or the 1995 Oklahoma City federal building blast with a nuclear capability or a toxic cloud.

Consider the 1995 Japanese subway sarin gas attack. In July, a former member of the cult responsible for it told a Tokyo court the group considered attacking the United States, shipping the gas to America by hiding containers in ice sculptures or concrete.

In the latest apparent terrorist threat, two Palestinians were shot and arrested July 31 in the Brooklyn borough of New York City and accused of plotting to blow up a New York subway station with nail-loaded pipe bombs. Police said they found a note that vowed to "burn the ground under America" if six jailed Islamic militants weren't freed. An FBI theory says the goal actually was extortion, the suspects seeking a $2 million reward from the State Department's "heroes" program that buys information about terrorists.

Jeanne Kirkpatrick, former permanent U.S. representative to the United Nations, warns of growing ranks of extremist terrorists, both freelancers and those backed by "outlaw nations" such as Iran, Iraq, Syria and Libya.

"I think it's related - outlaw nations working all the time to acquire weapons of mass destruction and the continued spread of a kind of radical extremism, carried on often in the name of Islam," Kirkpatrick said.

As the United States and Russia, the only major nuclear powers, reduce their arsenals, Washington is working to prevent other nations from developing such weapons, especially rogue states.

President Clinton, at a Denver summit with world leaders in June, emphasized how America has enlisted other nations to fight nuclear terrorism, including tightened controls on plutonium stockpiles and a "rapid-response network to prevent nuclear smuggling."

Congress, meanwhile, has ratified a treaty outlawing use, development, production, possession and transfer of chemical weapons. More than 80 other nations have ratified it.

Stopping rogue states from gaining weapons of mass destruction is not a straightforward matter. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has praised China for cooperating with the United States to contain North Korea's suspected nuclear weapons program. At the same time, the CIA considers China the world's leading exporter of technology for weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear missiles.

The CIA lists Iran and Pakistan as leading buyers - from Chinese and Russian sources - of materials that could be used in nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

India, which has warred with Pakistan three times since partition in 1947, has resumed its long-range ballistic missile program. India exploded a nuclear device in 1974.

The CIA, which focused on the Soviet threat during the Cold War, has now turned its attention to individuals worldwide involved in terrorism, weapons proliferation and drug trafficking, said CIA director George Tenet. The FBI, which in 1994 got worldwide jurisdiction under U.S. law over the federal crime of terrorism, is working with the CIA as it opens two dozen overseas offices.

On narcotics and organized crime, law enforcers are cracking down on networks among the Italian Mafia, Russia mobs, Japanese yakuza, Chinese triads and Colombian and Mexican drug lords.

Names in the News

PATTI DAVIS
NEW YORK (AP) - Patti Davis wishes her time as first daughter had gone as smoothly as 17-year-old Chelsea Clinton's.
 "I haven't met Chelsea Clinton," writes Miss Davis in the September Harper's Bazaar, "Yet I'm learning from her."
 "I've found inspiration in the effortless grace that a girl half my age has brought to an intimidating challenge."
 Miss Davis, the 44-year-old rebellious and once-estranged daughter of Ronald and Nancy Reagan, says of her time as first daughter: "I came off as strident and harsh, because I was. I didn't recognize that as part of a public family, I should have maintained a strict code of privacy."
BARBARA BILLINGSLEY
SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) - Leave it to Barbara Billingsley.
 Billingsley, who played June

Cleaver in the '50s TV series "Leave It to Beaver," makes a cameo appearance in the movie remake as the Beav's Aunt Martha.
 This time around, June Cleaver is played by Janine Turner. The movie opened Friday.
 "When I got the script, I immediately started circling all the lines for June, and then I remembered I'm not June anymore," the 74-year-old Billingsley said in Friday's Orange County Register.
JIMMY CARTER
ATLANTA (AP) - Former President Jimmy Carter wore a special shirt to record his latest book.
 At Doppler Studios, he read "Sources of Strength" wearing soft knit cotton so the microphone wouldn't pick up the scratchy sounds of fabric as he turned the pages.

 The book is due out this fall from Times Books and Random House AudioBooks. Carter left for a week in Ethiopia after the recording session Wednesday.
 The book is based on Sunday school lessons he teaches at Maranatha Baptist Church in Plains. It's a companion to last year's best seller, "Living Faith."
 "I've selected 52 out of more than 1,000 lessons that I've taught that I think illustrate the most interesting exchanges that I've had with people in my classes," Carter said in Friday's Atlanta Journal-Constitution.
EDWARD McDONALD
WESTFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Before "Cat Ballou" and "The Dirty Dozen," the late movie tough guy Lee Marvin was a 20-year-old Marine, zinging knives between a row of tents as his platoon waited to ship out during World War II.
 He was a bit wild, chuckled 77-year-old Edward McDonald, Marvin's platoon leader. "But never, once, was he a discipline problem."
 They fought with the 4th Marines at Kwajalein, Eniwetok and Saipan, where Marvin was shot in the back.
 Since Marvin's death in 1987, his widow, Pamela, has come to Westfield in the summers for reunions with her husband's Marine buddies.
 "It's all come to mean so much for me," she said this week of the friendships. "They are part of my husband's life, and, now, of my own."

The 54-year-old actress and the 42-year-old Yanni have been an item for eight years. They recently returned from a visit to India and China.
 "China is a beautiful and reasonable country," Evans says in this weekend's Parade magazine. "They're trying to loosen up ... it takes time and they're trying."
 Evans, who played Krystle Carrington in TV's "Dynasty" series, starred in the television movie "The Stepsister" last spring.
GARY OLDMAN
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Gary Oldman and his wife have welcomed their first child - a 6-pound, 6-ounce boy named Gulliver Flynn Oldman.
 Donya Florentino gave birth to the child on Wednesday, publicist Jason Weinberg said Friday.
 It's been a busy year for Oldman, who plays a terrorist in the summer blockbuster "Air Force One," which has earned more than $130 million in its first month of release. Earlier this year, his directing debut, "Nil by Mouth," won critical acclaim at Cannes.
 The movie focused on the mean London streets where the 39-year-old actor grew up.
QVC
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The clothes, housewares and other knickknacks will still be for sale on QVC, but TV's home-shopping channel is going big-time.
 "First Friday: Extreme Shopping" will make its debut on QVC on Sept. 5, giving viewers the chance to buy a $3.95 million mansion built for Rudy Vallee, owned by Jayne Mansfield and now the property of Englebert Humperdinck.

In some places the beginning of Lent starts with a carnival. The word comes from the Latin carnelevium, which means removal of meat.

Ruiz, Alejandre exchange wedding vows

Isabel Ruiz and Daniel Alejandre were united in marriage in an afternoon ceremony Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Mauro and Ana Ruiz of Apaseo El Grande, Gto., Mexico. The bridegroom is the son of Ponciano and Juanita Alejandre of Hereford.

Monsignor Orville Blum officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Sandra Luna, cousin of the bride. Best man was Eldifonso Alejandre, uncle of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Carrillo, Maria Ortiz, Consuelo Ruiz, sister of the bride, and Christina Cisneros, cousin of the groom of Sioux City, Neb.

Serving as groomsmen were Jose Alfredo Cobos, Efrain Ramos, Julian Ramos and Ricardo Cobos, all nephews of the groom.

Ushers were Jeremiah and Steven Alejandre, nephews of the groom. Flower girl and boy were Jessica Ruiz, cousin of the bride and daughter of Martin and Margarita Ruiz and Jeronimo Ruiz, cousin of the bride and son of Ted and Eva Ruiz.

Train bearers were Brenda Ruiz, daughter of Susanna and Lupe Ruiz and Rey Cepeda, son of Rey and Rosa Cepeda.

Ring bearer was Miguel Alejandre, nephew of the groom and son of Jose Alfredo and Alicia Cobos.

Music and vocal selections were performed by Raul Guerrero.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Guadalupe Ruiz, wore a designer gown of white regal satin featuring a scalloped V-neckline and Eduardian sleeves. The princess style bodice was encrusted with pearls and jewels. The full flowing satin skirt flowed into a cathedral length train accented with European lace cut-outs.

The formal length veil of illusion was created by soft pouffs attached to a tiara of pearls and sequins.

The cascading bridal bouquet was a gift from her aunt, Olga Salinas of Celaya, Gto., Mexico.

The bride wore a pearl necklace and earrings which were gifts from the niece of the groom, Delfina Herrera and her daughter Victoria Celest Herrera.

Bridal attendants wore formal length burgundy dresses in styles of their choice.

The couple was honored with a reception at Acapulco Tropical following the ceremony.

Assisting with the reception were Catarina Ruiz, Mage Ruiz, Susanna Ruiz and Margarita Ruiz.

The bride's cake was three classic round tiers above a cascading waterfall with two satellite cakes connected by miniature staircases. Serving the cake was Alicia Cobos, sister of the groom.

After a wedding trip, the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

The bridegroom is a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School and is currently employed by Owens Corning in Amarillo.

True love is like ghosts, which everybody talks about but few have seen.

Hall presides at meeting of Hereford Toastmasters

Dan Hall presided at the Thursday morning meeting of Hereford Toastmasters.

Wayne Winget led the pledge and Clark Andrews gave the invocation. Winget served as toastmaster, Andrews as timer and Hall as AH counter and grammarian.

Winget also served as wordmaster and introduced the word "reiterate," then served as topicmaster for topic speakers Colcen Seright and Andrews.

Seright's topic was "What is bad about having a beauty pageant?" and Andrews' topic was "What is good and positive about a beauty pageant?"

The speaker for the meeting was Sharon Cramer who spoke on "Opera, What is That?" and was evaluated by Margaret Del Toro.

Rick Jackson told the joke and served as general evaluator.

Seright was voted the best topic speaker.

Guests in attendance were Adolfo Del Toro and Mary Limon.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

That dreaded, and longed for, day came this past week -- the first day of school.

Dreaded by most of the students and longed for by most of the parents, the first day of school means the return to a "normal" routine.

Summers are (supposed to be) a fun time and the break from the routine of the previous school year is often anxiously awaited. But after a couple of weeks, the children begin to get bored. It's too hot to play outside and there's nothing fun to do inside so they pick on each other, pester mom (if she is not employed outside the home) or call her with whinney complaints if she is at work.

Thus the reason so many parents are glad to see school resume.

So why aren't the children? It's an opportunity to get out of the house, to wear new clothes, to see old friends again. But most of them will tell you they aren't really excited about going back to school.

My daughter was always an exception to this rule (and I was always so thankful. I'm not sure how well I would have handled the crying, pouting and resisting that I saw from others).

But this year for the first time in 13 years, we haven't done the "return to school" routine.

She will start to college in a couple of weeks, but the feeling is different. Even though she will live at home and commute, she has somehow become independent this summer. While we talk about her college classes and schedule the decisions are her own as she begins to take control of her own life as an adult.

It is hard to grasp that so much could have changed in the three months since her high school graduation. That event truly marked an ending and a beginning. An ending of her life as a child and a beginning of her life as an adult.

So take heart if the ordeal of summer has nearly gotten you down. The school year has begun again and all too soon your own children will reach that summer of transition when they emerge as adults.

And you will look back like those of us before you and ask, "Where did the years go?"

JENNIFER HICKS, MICHAEL KLIESSEN

Hereford selected as site for Nov. wedding

Mark and Susan Hicks of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Jennifer Susan Hicks, to Michael Norbert Kliesen of Wright, Kan.

Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Stanley and Janet Kliesen of Wright, Kan. The couple will be married Nov. 29 in the First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School. She received a bachelor's degree in dietetics from Texas Tech University and is a December candidate for a master's degree in nutrition and food sciences. She recently completed a dietetic internship at TWU in Houston and is currently employed by Methodist Hospital in Lubbock as a dietitian.

Kliesen graduated from Spearville High School in Spearville, Kan., in 1989. He received an associates degree from Texas Christian University in ranch management in 1993 and a bachelor's degree in animal business from Texas Tech in 1997. He is currently associated with the family business in Wright.

HJH students and staff have had a very good beginning of school despite the extremely warm and humid weather. We have all water coolers and available fans "going strong" and are hoping for a cool spell soon. If you have any extra fans, bring them to us....!

Thank you to all parents who are supportive and understanding about the equality of our teaming program. When students on any one team check with friends on other teams, they learn that each team is doing practically the same thing at the same time. For example, at the present time all three seventh grade teams have correlated activities in math, science and social studies. Each team, seventh and eighth, communicates on a regular basis with the other teams to help ensure each child's opportunity for a quality education.

Each of the seventh grade teams are taking TAAS math tests, if for some reason they missed it last spring, to determine placement in TAAS/HOSTS math classes.

Seventh grade social studies classes will begin geography units this week with each team using the same materials and many of the same activities.

In ceramics, students are working on vocabulary. These student will begin "slinging mud" as soon as possible.

Volleyball is in full swing with the first games being played yesterday. There are 88 seventh graders and 58 eighth graders in the volleyball program. Check Wednesday's Hereford Brand for the season schedule for volleyball and other sports.

The counselor's office has been busy with "crowd control" as they enroll students and change schedules to better fit students' needs. Although the beams handle a few schedule changes, the majority of this work is done by Mrs. Scott. She is to be commended for her hard work, dedication and efficiency in handling this tremendous job. Thanks, Julie, we appreciate you!!!

Superlab is open from 7:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily and is available for all students. This gives students time before school and after school, as well as during the day when teachers send them to Superlab, to complete assignments.

If any club or group would like to see the courthouse project from last spring or to have students to present a program on their findings, please notify us by Sept. 15. We will be dismantling the project soon and would like to share the students' hard work with others as long as possible.

Do not wait for extraordinary circumstances to do good actions; try to use ordinary actions. John P. Richter

4-H enrollment is set at Community Center

4-H enrollment for all youth will be held Tuesday afternoon in the Community Center banquet room. The enrollment will begin at 4 p.m. and continue until 6. New 4-H'ers will have an orientation to the 4-H program beginning at 5:15 p.m. at the Community Center.

4-H is open to all youth without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin. Any youth that is between the ages of 9 to 19 or in the third grade and above can be involved in the 4-H program.

Although no enrollment fee is charged, there is an insurance fee of $2 for 4-H'ers participating in the horse project group and $1 for all other youth.

A parent will need to accompany their youth to enroll as there will be a discipline form that must be notarized. A notary will be present at the enrollment site from 4 p.m. until 6 p.m.

Youth must re-enroll every year and the new 4-H year begins on Sept. 1. All youth need to be re-enrolled no later than Sept. 5. Youth enrolling late must do so at the County Extension office located in Room 402 of the County Courthouse.

4-H youth learn leadership, community service and educational skills in a number of areas. Projects are included in many areas that would help youth to have enriched learning in their specific interest areas. In addition to projects, youth participate in monthly meetings which assist them in learning parliamentary procedure, leadership skills, and enhance their ability to work and lead different groups.

Ortiz selected to receive "TEXAS" scholarship

Lance Ortiz, son of Alfred and Vickie Ortiz of Hereford, was selected as the recipient of a $200 Raymond Raillard Scholarship from the "TEXAS" Musical Drama.

Ortiz served as a management intern for the hospitality staff during the 1997 "TEXAS" season which ran

June 11 - Aug. 23. The Raymond Raillard Scholarship was established to recognize leadership, scholarship and achievement of "TEXAS" company members. The scholarship was presented Aug. 17 at the conclusion of "TEXAS Originals", an entertainment variety show performed by the "TEXAS" cast and crew. "TEXAS Originals" is staged annually as a fundraiser for educational scholarships.

Ortiz is a junior at West Texas A&M University pursuing a degree in speech education. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha Social Fraternity where he served as an officer. He also is a student senator for the College of Fine Arts and is a member of the WTAMU Forensic Squad.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
 Today is Sunday, Aug. 24, the 236th day of 1997. There are 129 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
 On Aug. 24, A.D. 79, long-dormant Mount Vesuvius erupted, burying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum in volcanic ash. An estimated 20,000 people died.

On this date:
 In A.D. 410, Rome was overrun by the Visigoths, an event that symbolized the fall of the Western Roman Empire.

In 1572, the slaughter of French Protestants at the hands of Catholics began in Paris.

In 1814, British forces invaded Washington, D.C., and proceeded to set fire to the Capitol and the White House.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly nonstop across the United States, traveling from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., in just over 19 hours.

In 1949, the North Atlantic Treaty went into effect.

In 1954, the Communist Control Act went into effect, virtually outlawing the Communist Party in the United States.

In 1959, three days after Hawaiian statehood, Hiram L. Fong was sworn in as the first Chinese-American U.S. Senator while Daniel K. Inouye was sworn in as the first Japanese-American U.S. Representative.

In 1968, France became the world's fifth thermonuclear power as it exploded a hydrogen bomb in the South Pacific.

In 1970, a bomb planted by anti-war extremists exploded at the University of Wisconsin's Army Math Research Center in Madison, killing 33-year-old researcher Robert Fassnacht.

In 1981, Mark David Chapman was sentenced in New York to 20 years to life in prison for the murder of rock star John Lennon.

Ten years ago: A military jury in Quantico, Va., sentenced Marine Sgt. Clayton Lonetree to 30 years in prison for disclosing U.S. secrets to the Soviet Union. (The sentence was later reduced; with additional time off for good behavior, Lonetree ended up serving eight years in a military prison.)

Five years ago: Hurricane Andrew smashed into Florida, causing record damage; 55 deaths in Florida, Louisiana and the Bahamas were blamed on the storm. China and South Korea established diplomatic ties.

One year ago: Four women began two days of academic orientation at The Citadel; they were the first female cadets admitted to the South Carolina military school since Shannon Faulkner.

Today's Birthdays: TV personality Durward Kirby is 85. Former education secretary Shirley Hufstetler is 72. Composer-musician-author Mason Williams is 59. Rock musician Jim Capaldi (Traffic) is 53. Rock musician Ken Hensley (Uriah Heep) is 52. Actor Joe Regalbuto ("Murphy Brown") is 48. Boxer Gerry Cooney is 41. Actor Steve Guttenberg is 39. Baseball player Cal Ripken Jr. is 37. Actress Marlee Matlin is 32.

Thought for Today: "No one knows his true character until he has run out of gas, purchased something on the installment plan and raised an adolescent." - Marcelene Cox, American writer.

KARA SANDOVAL, JASON UNDERWOOD Couple plans to wed in January ceremony

Jim and Lorraine Sandoval of Hereford announce the engagement of their daughter, Kara Lynette Sandoval, to Jason William Underwood of Lubbock.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Dale and Pat Underwood of Denver City.

The couple will be married Jan. 3 in Lubbock.

The bride-elect is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School. She is pursuing a bachelor of science in nursing degree at Texas Tech University. She is currently the DME/lifeline coordinator of Home Health Preferred, services of St. Mary Hospital in Lubbock.

Underwood graduated from Denver City High School in 1993. He is employed by Becknell Wholesale Company and attends Texas Tech University where he is pursuing a coaching/education degree.

Military Muster

SFC Angela Gail Tanner has received her 20-year letter for retirement from the United States Army.

Tanner is the daughter of Doris Craig of Sallisaw, Okla., and Pat Nunnally of Hereford and the late J.R. Nunnally. She is the granddaughter of the late Sam Nunnally.

Tanner attended Shirley Elementary until 1968 when she moved to Oklahoma.

Local individuals who had a tremendous effect on her life were her sixth grade teacher, Mrs. Fred Mulkey and the late "Granny" London. And also Marine Doug Gallier of Umbarger who gave her the courage and heart to continue through the roughest years.

Tanner served 15 years active duty, nine of which were in Europe, and five in reserve status currently stationed in Utah. She has received numerous awards throughout her career to include special honors for Soldier of the Quarter and achieving highest physical fitness scores within her battalion.

Tanner currently works with the U.S. Forest Service during the summer and drives for the Utah school bus system during school months. She breeds and sells Rottweilers and shows American Quarter Horses.

Food and Family

By LAWRENCE HEADLEY
Food Groups:

Fats, Oils and Sweets

Experts say, when it comes to fats, oils and sweets, just a "little" is all you need.

Today the grocery stores are full of packaged foods labeled low-calorie, diet, low-fat and non-fat! Seems like everyone is concerned about the amount of sugar, fat and oil in their diets.

This concern is good -- because Americans typically consume much more sugar and fat than they need -- and this can add extra calories and unwanted pounds.

If you eat a balanced diet, then your body is getting all the natural sugar, fat and oil it needs. High-fat foods -- like butter, margarine, chips and salad dressings -- have lots of calories but provide few vitamins and minerals.

The same is true for table sugar, desserts, candy and soda pop. Try to set aside the foods that are high in fats and refined sugars as "special occasion" foods. Whenever possible, select low-fat and low-sugar foods to eat every day.

This information comes from WIC -- The Women, Infants and Children Nutrition Program at the Texas Department of Health at 1-800-WIC-3678.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've had diabetes for 13 years. Now my doctor says I have diabetic kidney disease. Protein was found in my urine. My doctor didn't say much except it was serious and he would have to watch it. Can you tell me anything about it?

— M.M.
ANSWER: Diabetes is more than a high blood sugar. It's an illness that can deal lethal blows to many organs -- eyes, heart, nerves, blood vessels and kidneys.

Urine protein is a sign that diabetes is beginning to affect the kidneys. Indeed, it is a serious sign. You can appreciate the magnitude of the problem by noting the fact that diabetes is the major cause of kidney failure.

Strict control of blood sugar can slow down kidney destruction.

Do you have a home monitor for checking your blood sugar? If you don't, get one. You need to be especially vigilant now in maintaining normal blood-sugar levels.

ACE-inhibitor drugs can retard diabetic kidney damage. The angiotensin-converting-enzyme inhibitors are commonly used to control blood pressure. If a diabetic has high blood pressure, he derives a dual benefit from ACE inhibitors.

High blood pressure adds to the damage that diabetes imposes on kidneys.

Even without high blood pressure, ACE inhibitors help preserve kidney function.

If diabetes completely disrupts kidney function, then kidney dialysis or a kidney transplant would be considered.

Such considerations are far down the road. For the moment, concentrate on scrupulous sugar control and let your doctor decide when and if ACE inhibitors should come into the picture.

I hope the Health Letter report on diabetes can help you understand further. Readers can order the report by writing to: Dr. Donohue -- HL89, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope and $3.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Three months ago I was diagnosed as having autoimmune hepatitis. I was advised to take prednisone. I told my doctor I would think it over.

What exactly is autoimmune hepatitis? How dangerous is it?

How controversial is prednisone as treatment for it? Are there alternative treatments? — J.H.

ANSWER: Autoimmune hepatitis is on the increasingly long list of illnesses whereby the body's immune system turns on itself. In this case, it attacks the liver.

Why the immune system runs amok is a question whose answer is worthy of a Nobel Prize.

Another puzzling aspect of autoimmune hepatitis is that women develop it far more often than men.

The patient feels overwhelming fatigue. Appetite is lost. The skin might yellow. Abdominal pain is frequent.

Untreated, autoimmune hepatitis is a dangerous disease, one that can lead to liver failure. If it is treated in time, the prognosis is good.

Prednisone, one of the cortisone drugs, and azathioprine are two drugs that rein in the out-of-control immune system. I know of no alternative treatments.

Don't fear taking prednisone. Autoimmune hepatitis calls for a major-league drug. Prednisone's side effects are much less worrisome than the destructive potential of the disease.

Raising cattle is pleasure to woman who won't retire

By BLAIR FANNIN
The Bryan-College Station Eagle
NORTH ZULCH, Texas - Betty Andrews begins her day at 5:30 a.m., drinking coffee while her Yorkshire terrier crunches doggie treats.
After a bite to eat, she's out the door to make her twice-a-day trek to the barn, where she will receive a form of mental therapy that doesn't require the services of a physician.
At the barn, Mrs. Andrews is greeted by 24 orphan calves. She gets pleasure seeing them running across the pasture with their tails high in the air, given a chance to live because of her tender heart and her enjoyment of farm life, particularly the cattle business. It's been in her Madison County family's blood for several generations.

The calves are something she can point her finger at and say, "God did that, but I helped, too."
While many people think cattle are raised and managed by men, there also are women like Andrews in the cattle business.
"I tell people that I'm getting filthy rich, just filthy," said Mrs. Andrews, a 63-year-old widow.
When her husband, John Andrews, died of cancer in 1994, Betty Andrews suddenly found herself with 200 head of cattle, several hundred acres of land, a smattering of farm equipment, a little debt and the dilemma of whether to continue the operation.
Her children urged her to sell out and live with them. She didn't budge.
"I wasn't going to live in a townhome and go shopping all of the time," Mrs. Andrews said. "Heck, I've got three closets full of clothes that I never wear anyway."
Mrs. Andrews, who admits to being contrary, decided to stay in the cattle business. She continued to oversee the cattle, bale hay, fix fence and carry on with the normal chores that go with running a cattle operation.
Her cousin, longtime Madison County cattleman Ray Lee Reding, tried to talk her into selling out, too. But Mrs. Andrews wouldn't listen, and decided to stay with it.
"The first year I realized I couldn't get rid of a majority of the cattle, so I went ahead with what we always had done," Mrs. Andrews said.
But she began to need help. Thanks to Reding and a few others, the operation carried on. Then the drought of 1996 hit, and changes had to be made to keep the operation afloat.

"I saw Ray at the auction one day and I said, 'Hey, cuz, I need to cut it back,'" Mrs. Andrews said.
Mrs. Andrews and Reding thinned down the herd to about 40 commercial cows. She continues to oversee them, but it's her orphan calf business that's making her money, too. Mrs. Andrews says she makes an average $50 to $100 a head off the calves she either buys at auction or, in some cases, are given to her.
Mrs. Andrews has developed quite a reputation around Madison County for raising orphan calves. Some ranchers will call her on the phone and ask if she will take a calf whose mother won't let it nurse. Some even drop them off, not wanting to worry about feeding the calf powdered milk twice a day.
"Before the drought, I kept the gates locked to keep people from stealing them," Mrs. Andrews said. "But during the drought, I kept them open. I'd go to the barn and see calves that I didn't know where they came from."
Mrs. Andrews' profits from her orphan calf business aren't going to put her in a new pickup truck every year, but it's enough to keep her satisfied. And, she said, seeing the calves survive is worth more than the profit.
"It is the most gratifying thing to me to see them racing across the pasture with their tails high in the air," Mrs. Andrews said.
Each Wednesday afternoon at 1 p.m., you'll see Mrs. Andrews at the Madisonville Livestock Auction. She also goes to the Huntsville and Buffalo sales. The regulars that make the weekly sales know her face, if not her name.
Mrs. Andrews said she loves going to the auction, and once put off a cosmetic appointment at Dillard's just so she could make it to the Bryan sale to purchase an orphan Brahman calf (one that has grown up to be a commercial cow in her herd).
She has her own special seat at the Madisonville sale, near the top of the arena.
"I sit next to the last row," Mrs. Andrews said. "The first time I went to the sale, I wanted to be able to look over them really good. I wondered why nobody else was down there [sitting in the front]. The first cow that came through, I got sprinkled. I learned nobody sits there unless it's your first time at the auction."
She also learned never to buy Jersey calves, which aren't money makers.
Mrs. Andrews is developing the "cyc" for buying cattle. Because cattle are in the auction ring for only a few seconds, a buyer has to be quick to decide whether the cow is worth a bid-paying close attention to weight, muscling, age, its udder, etc.
"I'm looking for baby calves a majority of the time," Mrs. Andrews said. "A lot of times, if there is a good white Brahman calf, I've got to have that one. I watch for pairs, too. I have bought one or two cows before, but I'm not that really good at judging cattle when those cows are coming through the ring."
The thought of going to an auction barn is a big turnoff for most women.
There's lots of cow manure, lots of tobacco being chewed by cowboys, salty talk among cattlemen, but there's a place for M.s. Andrews.
"I love going to the sale barn," she said. "I have a lot of friends out there. Some say women don't go there, but they do."
And she's no stranger to the gents at the auction barn.
"How are you today Miz Andrews?" asked one cattleman as he tipped his hat on a recent trip to the sale barn.
Mrs. Andrews makes it clear that, every time she's been to the auction sale, the cowboys always are courteous and don't treat her differently than anyone else.
"[Women] are in everything else, so why not the cattle business?" says Madisonville's Albert Glover, who was chatting with Mrs. Andrews about current market conditions recently at the Madisonville sale.
"My father always said, 'Sis, you don't need to be going to the auction by yourself,'" Mrs. Andrews said. "I told him, 'But they are so nice.' Like Albert Glover, he'll pick them [the orphan calves] out or someone will come to see me before the auction begins and say, 'Hey, there's some back there you haven't seen yet."

After her husband died, it took a while for Mrs. Andrews to go back to the sale barn, but she finally put all of the sadness behind and decided she needed to get on with her life.
"[Auctioneer] Tommy Coleman came up to me and said, 'Glad you're back.' That really touched me," she said.
At the sale, a nice Brahman-Charolais calf ran through the ring. The auctioneer switched his eyes to Mrs. Andrews.
"Here we go," she said, and began to bid. Mrs. Andrews and a professional order buyer went back-and-forth. When the bid got up to $110, she stopped.
"I can't come out [paying that much]," Mrs. Andrews said. Nothing else that came through the ring caught her attention.
After the auction, Mrs. Andrews climbed into her late model 3/4-ton Ford pickup and headed to the beauty shop. Normally, her nail day is Thursday, and Friday is hair day. This particular week, her beautician was going out of town on Friday, so Mrs. Andrews had to be worked in on Wednesday.
The beauticians greeted Mrs. Andrews with smiles and the small talk began. One made the comment that a lot of bull is shot between them, and that she always checks Mrs. Andrews' shoes.
"I still get my nails done once a week, my hair done once a week," Mrs. Andrews said. "I think it's important to keep some time that's there to say, 'Hey, this is my time.' For a long time after my husband died, I didn't do that. My father was still living, and I'd be busy taking care of my parents. I didn't ever take any time out for myself."
"I got to a point where I was about to get sick. I decided I needed to take the time out to get my nails done, do some of the things that I wanted to do. That's as important to me as this business."
One of Mrs. Andrews' recent orphan calf purchases, a $25 Limousin-Hereford heifer, took a lot of work to get back on the right track.
"It hadn't sucked a cow or been bottle fed," Mrs. Andrews said. "I put some milk in a bottle, powdered milk, but it wouldn't take that. It finally would take cow milk, so I would go out and milk one of the cows and put it in a bottle and feed it to the calf."
After several weeks, the calf finally graduated to nursing one of Mrs. Andrews' Holsteins.
"Now, when it sees me, it runs across the pasture and greets me with a nudge like, 'Let's eat!'" she said.
Her afternoons are devoted to taking care of her elderly mother, who requires round-the-clock supervision. Mrs. Andrews relieves the hired help that looks after her.
When she's not caring for her mom, she's back at the farm filling creep feeders, fixing fence, mowing or putting out hay if it's winter time. Her pastures are spread throughout North Zulch and Madison County and she stays in her pickup most of the day, especially during winter time when she has to put out hay for all of her cattle.
She hires a high school youth to help her unload feed and do other chores that are required in the afternoons. Mrs. Andrews finally is back at the house about 7 p.m., where she works in the greenhouse or goes inside to do needlepoint, read or update her cattle ledgers.
Her office is filled with pictures of family and friends. Mrs. Andrews says she keeps her own books, but hires a professional to do her yearly tax work. She keeps detailed records of all of her cattle, and most of them have a name.
Her hands have scars where she's been kicked by cows, and she doesn't wear any rings because the last time she was kicked the doctor claimed he was going to have to cut her ring off because her hand was so swollen.
Mrs. Andrews admits she's been pinned on the ground by a bull two times, much to Reding's displeasure.
She seldom watches television and seldom cooks for herself, only if her kids or grandkids are in for a visit.
"I got to a point where I wanted so much food," she said. "I'll go to the cafeteria about three times a week. When I come in at night, I'm pretty tired."

On weekends, her son will drive in from Friendswood, work on some of the equipment, but isn't much into working with the cattle - just like his father, Mrs. Andrews said.
"[John] enjoyed working with the equipment, fixing it up, working it over and so forth," Mrs. Andrews said. "He didn't like working with the animals, he didn't like to mow weeds, but he was fabulous at keeping the equipment up. He fixed what I tore up."
Mrs. Andrews' daughter won't have anything to do with cattle, she said, "unless it's fried."
Most of the time, Mrs. Andrews is taking care of business herself, and enjoying every minute of it.
"It's a seven-day a week job," Mrs. Andrews said. "I enjoy it. Like one person said, 'We'll be at your funeral one day, Betty, and you'll raise the casket lid and say, 'I'll bid $25!'"

YOUR EYES
Eye Care for Diabetics
Diabetics are at special risk for eye problems, so it's vital that they take especially good care of their eyes. Be sure to schedule a complete eye examination at least once a year. At that time, the optometrist will check for any changes in vision that might be related to the disease, paying particular attention to the retina (back of the eye), which can be damaged by diabetes. Some changes have no visual symptoms, so the professional checkup is vital.
There are certain danger signals, though, that should prompt an immediate examination. Blurring, double vision, floating spots, a sudden change in visual clarity, difficulty seeing from the side of the eye, or any pain or pressure should occasion a fast call to the optometrist, even if it's not time for the usual checkup.
Diabetics know that their blood pressure should be monitored, too. High blood pressure and diabetes are a bad combination--for eye health and good vision, as well as for general health.

Attitude Maintenance: A 10,000 minute check-up

Even the highest quality, most carefully constructed machinery requires maintenance to keep it operating at peak efficiency. The human mind, perhaps the world's best machine, also requires periodic adjustment and upkeep.

I'd like to propose a new attitude adjustment and maintenance concept to you. I call it the 10,000 minute check-up. You will find, if you work the math, that seven-day week contains exactly 10,080 minutes. Therefore, I'm suggesting a weekly schedule for maintaining a positive, healthy attitude.

The key to making these weekly check-ups work for you is to first realize that you are in complete control of your attitude. No circumstance, no person, no life altering condition can make you have a bad attitude ... unless you choose to allow it.

Helen Keller said, "When a door of happiness closes, another opens; but often we look so long at the closed door that we do not see the one which has opened for us." You have the power to choose. You can stare longingly at the past or expectantly into the future. You can make this week the best week of your life, if you choose to.

The check-up process

1) First, you must want to develop a more positive outlook. You are a valuable person, and you can become more positive about all aspects of your life.

Forget past mistakes, failures and problems. Instead, create a list of your most positive accomplishments during the past 12 months. Then, write down some simple goals you want to achieve. Focus your thoughts, time and effort on these two lists. Don't look back.

2) Decide that this week will be your best week ever. I can tell you from my own experience that developing a positive outlook becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Use statements like these to tune up your attitude: "Today, I'm going to have a good day. Today, I'm going to celebrate the great life I've enjoyed to date. Today, I'll enjoy God's simple gifts: the beautiful shade tree: a brilliantly colored flowers, the deep blue sky, the bright green grass, the warm sun and the fresh air. Today, I'll help someone else. Today, I'll share an act of kindness. Today is going to be the best day of my life. I do have the power to choose."

3) Limit the amount of television you watch. There is very little positive programming on TV. Instead of sitting down to watch your favorite show and ending up watching a whole night's mediocre programming, mark just one or two shows to watch each evening and then turn it off. Even the National newscasts will wear away at a good attitude.

4) Surround yourself with positive friends. Negative thinkers will drag you down to their level. If your friends constantly complain about their kids, boss, jobs, home, spouse, finances and circumstances, you need some new friends.

5) Listen to the voices of positive people with powerful thoughts. Most libraries and bookstores have tapes of America's great motivational speakers. When I'm feeling low, I tune up my mind with positive thoughts of others.

6) Read positive material. Good reading lubricates the mind with powerful healing oils. I enjoy good motivational books, the Psalms and Proverbs and articles from the Reader's Digest and Guideposts.

7) Don't worry about things you can't change. I'd also recommend that you don't worry about the things you can change - just change them.

8) Life is short, don't wait any longer to start enjoying it. Determine today to draw pleasure from the simple things in life. Realize that you won't change your attitude overnight. Start today and check your progress every 10,000 minutes.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL
The boss is on vacation, so I am privileged to write the article this week while Rebecca is cruising the lake and getting caught up on her reading.

When I was first hired for this job, I had several people congratulate me, commenting on how I would now have a chance to read all day. Nice thought, but it doesn't happen that way. The reading that I do get done is not at the library. There are other duties that press. The main difference in my reading habits is that I am now so much more aware of what is available to read. It is frustrating some days. So many books--so little time!

August 27 will be Marissa Tarr's last day at the library as our student page. Marissa was working here when I came on board almost a year and a half ago. She, along with the rest of the staff, was a great help to a ditzy woman who couldn't keep all the bazillions of details straight.

I wonder how many books she has shelved in her stay here. It must be in the millions, and most of them were on Tuesdays after holidays! Right, Marissa?

We wish her well as she goes off to explore new frontiers at North Texas State University. We will miss her.

Friends for Life: Enriching the Bond Between Mothers and Their Adult Daughters by Susan Jonas and Marilyn Nissenson, came into being when the authors, each the mother of two daughters in their twenties, searched for a book focusing on the relationship between mothers and their adult daughters, and found none. So, they wrote one.

Mostly aimed at mothers, the book is about the critical period when mothers are trying to find a balance between encouraging their daughters' independence and imparting the benefits of their own experience.

Other nonfiction includes Doreen Orion's first-hand account of being the victim of a stalker in I Know You Really Love Me. Orion, a psychiatrist, became prey to one of her own patients, pseudonym Fran. This demanding and calculating woman has followed Orion from state-to-state for eight years and continues to stalk her to this day.

Orion examines erotomania, the delusional belief of obsessive stalkers that their victims are actually in love with them, from her own personal drama, providing an overview of the disorder including: case histories of stalking victims such as David Letterman and Madonna, unbelievable true stories of the depths to which a stalker will go, and cases that led to murder of either the victim or the stalker.

Using the Internet and the World Wide Web in Your Job Search by Fred E. Jandt and Mary B. Nemnich claims to have all you need to access online career information, complete an electronic resume, and conduct an online job search.

The book includes a 3.5 inch floppy disc which will guide you in turning your resume into online format from your PC. Answer a series of questions and upload your resume to the IntelliMatch database free. They don't give any written guarantees, of course, but it is a new and different way to search for a job.

While I haven't read any of Joy Fielding's books yet, I have heard several people talk about how exciting they are. In her newest, Missing Pieces, family therapist, Kate Sinclair finds her idyllic life in a stable marriage and handsome home unraveling as her half-sister JoLynn announces her plans to marry Colin Friendly, a man on trial for the brutal murders of 13 Palm Beach women. Her aging mother is losing her grip on reality and her rebellious daughter, Sara, is falling under the influence of JoLynn, which might prove to be deadly. As the strain begins to wear on her marriage, in comes the smooth-talking Robert, her high-school crush. He displays an unhealthy interest in the outcome of Colin Friendly's trial.

As her orderly life disintegrates, Kate comes to realize that there is no one she can trust, nowhere she can run...and no way she can deny that she and her family may be the next targets of a demented serial killer.

The Good Brother by Chris Offutt is about Virgil Caudill who has always toed the line of the law, leaving the hell-raising to his brother, Boyd. Now Boyd is dead, and family and friends expect Virgil to avenge the death adhering to the old unwritten code of the Kentucky hills.

Determined to escape the cycle of retaliation, but unwilling to break the code, Virgil gives up his Kentucky life and identity to disappear among people who are as foreign to him as their Montana landscape. As he makes a new life for himself full of love, purpose, and community, the past overtakes him with devastating consequences.

Helping Your Child
Learn to Write

Learning to write is an important task of childhood. The U.S. Department of Education has noted that "children who are encouraged to draw and scribble stories at an early age will later learn to compose more easily, more effectively, and with greater confidence than children who do not have this encouragement."

Parents can assist their children in acquiring writing skills in a number of ways:

felt pens, envelopes, tape and staples, so that children can explore writing at any time.

*Provide blank forms, memo pads, prescription pads and pads for taking orders in restaurants for make believe play. Make believe play of this type will stretch the child's imagination and broaden their experiences.

*Help the child in writing letters to grandparents, sick friends, authors of books and famous people.

*Put little notes in lunch boxes and back packs. These can be picture notes or simple messages like "Hi! I hope you are having a good day. I love you!"

*Help children write and illustrate their own books by stapling the pages

*Model writing for children so they will recognize the importance of writing. You can encourage this by writing their private notes, writing letters to family and friends (be sure to allow the child to draw a picture or write a letter to include), letting them observe you writing grocery lists or recipes.

*Praise children's attempts to spell as these show they are learning the relationship between writing and speech. "Correct" spelling will come later.

*Avoid criticizing neatness, spelling, grammar. It is important that children learn that writing is communication and that it is fun.

Red Cross Update

The Board of Directors of the Tri County Chapter of the American Red Cross would like to thank Genevieve Miller, chairwoman of the 80th Anniversary Celebration committee and all of the volunteers for their work. The celebration gave us a look back at the history of the American Red Cross in the United States and in our area.

The board and the volunteers will be looking to the future and planning for continued chapter activities. The history of our chapter is a special project of Genevieve Miller, who is planning to continue working to gather information about volunteers and projects. Please contact her if you have information or pictures to share. Call her 258-7512 or write to her at Box 4, Dawn, Texas 79025.

A CPR class will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Red Cross office with the Adult Rescue Breathing, Choking and CPR sections being taught. The Infant and Child sections will be taught at 7 p.m. Sept. 2 at the office. Call the office to register for this class.

The Successful Family

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION

What are the costs? Children who are abused and neglected often grow up with serious health, emotional and developmental problems. For every $3 spent on prevention, it is estimated that we save at least $6 that might have been spent on treatment services, including child welfare services, special education, medical care, foster care, counseling, and juvenile justice services.

Professionals in these fields know the impact of child abuse on our children and our community. They may also have insight into effective means of prevention. Talk with them. Let them know you support their efforts and ask for their help in prevention initiatives.

What about prevention? Encourage parents to teach their children what to do when they feel unsafe or if they are approached by a stranger. Support the school district and counselors who are presenting programs to the children on safety, understanding domestic violence, developing abuse-free relationships, and respect for self and others.

The best means of preventing child abuse and neglect is linking parents and caregivers to the resources and support they need in order to provide for the safety and healthy development of their children. Form a partnership with the school district and community to prevent child abuse and neglect.

Find out how you can help and be a part of preventing child abuse and neglect. For more information and suggestions contact Tilli Boozer, counselor and facilitator at 364-HELP or 363-7668. THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY program will begin Oct. 7 through Nov. 18 from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. for the Children's Trust Fund sessions. The program is for the entire family and parents must accompany their children.

Farm and Ranch

Company turns field remains into pressed wood furniture

Kansas wheat farmer finds new markets for stubble

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) - William Morgan's wheat once was used only in bread, cereal and other food products. But now his crop is finding its way into cabinets, kitchen counters and furniture.

The central Kansas farmer no longer plows under or burns the stalks. This year, he sold the leftover wheat straw to a company that grinds it into a coarse powder, combines it with glue and presses it into a board.

The company is part of a new industry that is looking to the Midwest's treeless farm fields for raw materials for office furniture and shipping crates.

In North Dakota, Great PlainsWood Ltd. of Larimore is seeking investors for a $22 million plant south of the Larimore Farmers Elevator.

"The project is received extremely well. People understand it. The product is superior to conventional particle board, but the investment part has still been slow," said Pat Downs, a developer with Grand Forks Regional Development Corp.

Proposed plants in Larimore, Rolla and Harvey, N.D., have business plans and are seeking financing, Downs said. Discussions are under way in five other North Dakota areas.

"We're just taking a drop of what's produced," Downs said. "That's why there's such an availability to have numerous plants. That's why Kansas is so excited about it - they're in the same wheat-growing area we are. And, in fact, for this to work, we need a number of plants out there."

The Composite Panel Association, a trade group based in Gaithersburg, Md., knows of at least six plants in the United States that are producing or plan to produce boards from agricultural residue, spokesman Tom Julia said.

Supporters claim the new "strawboard" will replace wood-based particle board and give wheat farmers more money for their crop. But the strawboard industry still has to prove itself to become commercially successful, Julia said.

Strawboard manufacturers say their product is stronger and lighter, holds a screw better and is more moisture-resistant than wood-based particle board.

Julia's organization supports strawboard development and believes it will become an addition to the particle board industry, which started as a way to use scrap wood. The price of the two products is about the same.

Most of the 4-by-8-foot boards produced at Cen Kan Enterprises in Hutchinson are sold to the cabinet and ready-to-assemble furniture industry.

The Cen Kan plant is surrounded by about 50,000 tons of stacked straw bales collected for the past three years and stored under plastic tarps. The boards produced at the plant are 97 percent wheat straw and 3 percent resin, a type of glue.

Strawboard plants around the world also use stalks from rice and sugar cane plants to make boards similar to strawboard, said John Marwood, interim general manager at Cen Kan.

Morgan, who raises about 2,000 acres of wheat with his father-in-law, has sold his straw to Cen Kan for three years, even though the plant began limited production only last month.

The sale earns Morgan an extra profit of $8 to $10 an acre on his wheat crop after he pays someone to bale the straw and deliver it to the plant. All Morgan has to do is make sure the combine dumps the straw in a neat row, rather than spreading it across the field.

"What would Jesus do" Cowboy style

By CHRISTINE LAUE
Corpus Christi Caller-Times
REFUGIO, Texas - It's where pews are folding chairs and the floor is dry grass and dirt, welcoming a spit of chewing tobacco. The cattle dog is usher, and the only communion is orange juice and soft drinks to keep the congregation cool.

A red tent near the outdoor TPR rodeo arena Sunday morning served as a temporary chapel in a place cowboys call heaven - the country.

With the blue sky as a backdrop, the Rev. Jeff Hogner of Madisonville preached on "what would Jesus do?"

If Jesus team roped and lost, he wouldn't pout, Hogner said.

The message of living a Christ-like life rang through two speakers to a crowd of about 30 cowboys, cowgirls and their kin, all of whom were the early birds at the Fourth Annual Refugio County 4-H Boosters Benefit Team Roping. The event, which this year was the first all-female team roping to be held in South Texas, also marked the first cowboy church service in Refugio County, one of the latest places the growing cowboy ministry has touched.

As Hogner's wife, Carol Hogner, launched into the 9 a.m. service with song, neighing horses contributed cascading notes, and horse trailers rattled over the rock road as ropers arrived in their trucks.

Jeff Hogner used the Jesus Christ, roper, analogy to drive home a message.

"Folks, if you're walking a Christ-like life, people are watching you," said Hogner, whose powder-blue shirt showed signs of the morning's rising heat.

He shared his first-person story on a rodeo family who let him stay at their home after he had open-heart surgery.

"That's the kind of love that's out there in the team-roping world," he said.

Hogner, a team roper who was a welder for a natural gas company several years ago when he got the calling to cowboy ministry, said there is a stereotype of cowboys that feeds peer pressure.

"Down deep inside, almost everybody (in the rodeo) was raised with that cowboy ethic of being kind, of being good. But unfortunately, there's that drinking image ..."

Hogner said after the service, before heading to Pasco, Wash., for another service. "This gives them an opportunity to separate themselves from the image that a lot of cowboys have of the partying."

While his message probably wasn't that different from other sermons going on at the same time at nearby country churches, the analogies were uniquely cowboy. Prayers didn't stray from the norm - thanking the Lord, praying for forgiveness and asking for guidance - except for just a few requests slipped in.

"We pray for cattle that run straight and true," Hogner quickly said with cowboy hat removed and head bowed.

Most of the audience members removed their gimme caps and cowboy hats when praying. A few tapped their lace-up ropers to the recorded songs.

As Carol Hogner sang into the microphone, she raised her left hand and closed her eyes.

She sang original songs written by a friend, a version of "Amarillo By Morning" with altered lyrics, and an upbeat country song about finding a new dance partner.

"Stopped doing a two-step
Started doing a new step
I'm dancing hand-in-hand with the Lord."

In the audience, Rebecca Gonzales of Rosharon sang along while petting a Boston terrier that trotted under chairs throughout the service. The dog and his pal, a blue healer, weaved between audience members, brushing against their hands. Gonzales, a team roper who offered testimony at the service, later said the cowboy church services were like spiritual food that gets her through the day and invigorates her so much on ropings that she recently won one.

Extension Agent's Notes

By Dennis Newton
County Extension Agent
The past several weeks I have had the opportunity to see agriculture form Canada to Mexico.

The second week in July, I attended the National Association of County Agricultural Agents Annual Meeting and Professional Improvement Conference in Burlington, Vermont, where I had the opportunity to tour several farms in the area south of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, Vermont and New York.

The farmers we visited in Canada were producing potatoes and corn in a "muck" soil. That is soils, which stay wet most of the time and have tile drainage to keep the water from drowning the plants.

The water table is very shallow and the water simply seeps to the surface during periods of heavy rainfall.

Vermont farmers were producing Maple syrup, corn and a variety of vegetables.

Many farms were diversified operations involving small dairy operations as well as the previously mentioned crops.

In New York, I visited the New York Potato research Station, south of Lake Placid, and a maple syrup research facility.

The thing I found interesting in all the areas was the amount of direct marketing and value added steps the producers were taking.

Granted, the farms were much smaller than those in our area, but it certainly appeared that marketing their products was the key to staying in business.

It was a most enlightening trip. The last week in July, I attended the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association Annual meeting in Laredo, where I had the opportunity to see and hear about South Texas Agriculture and learn about International marketing.

We toured ranches in Mexico and was pleasantly surprised at the advancements being made in Mexico agriculture technology.

We, also saw some excellent cattle on the tours.

What amazed me was the volume of truck traffic that was moving goods into Mexico.

Interstate 35 was right by the hotel and one afternoon I clocked almost five miles of trucks backed up to get across the border check point into Mexico.

This was very consistent throughout the four days we were there. This was great to see because international trade is a key to keeping U.S. markets active.

Both trips were great, but it is always great to get back to the good old High Plains of Texas where the winds blow, the humidity is low and the nights are cool.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive insertions, no copy change, straight word ads:

Times	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60
5 days per word	.59	11.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are 4.35 per column inch.

LEGALS
Ad rate for legal notices are 4.80 per column inch.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publisher an additional insertion will be published.

The House of the Week

Decked-Out Chalet

G-28

AN ENORMOUS WRAPAROUND DECK and soaring, angled windows make this home perfect for a scenic setting.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

In addition to its 1,933 square feet of living space, Plan G-28, by HomeStyles Designers Network, offers an enormous wraparound deck and soaring expanses of glass, making it ideal for a scenic setting.

Inside, the living and dining area features a fireplace with a raised hearth, and enormous windows to take full advantage of the outdoor setting. In the dining room, a 17 1/2-ft. vaulted ceiling and sliding glass doors to the deck create a spacious, open feel.

The main-floor master bedroom is just steps away from a linen closet and a hall bath.

The highlight of the upper floor is a balcony room with a 12 1/2-ft. vaulted ceiling, exposed beams and tall windows. A decorative railing frames an overlook to the dining area below. Two more bedrooms and a full bath with a dual-sink vanity complete the floor.

For those who choose the daylight basement foundation, a recreation room and a general-use room downstairs provide additional space for casual activities.

G-28 STATISTICS

Design G-28 has a living room, dining room, kitchen, balcony, three bedrooms and two full baths, totaling 1,933 square feet of living space. The optional daylight basement foundation, which includes a recreation room and a general use room, provides an additional 475 square feet of living space. A crawlspace foundation is also available. This plan comes with 2x6 exterior wall framing. A tuck-under garage provides 501 square feet of space.

For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.

THE LIVING AND DINING ROOMS merge, and a dramatic 17 1/2-ft. vaulted ceiling crowns the dining room. Sliding glass doors in the dining room open to the deck, while a snack bar is provided for casual dining. At the rear of the home, the master bedroom is located near a full bath. Upstairs, a 12 1/2-ft. vaulted ceiling is featured in an open balcony room, which overlooks the dining room. Two more bedrooms and a full bath complete the floor. The daylight basement option provides additional living space in its recreation room and general use room.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Time is flying by! The end of the fiscal year is Sept. 30 and that means we will be having three board members retiring and three new members coming on for a three-year term. It is only three months until the Festival of Trees and we have a nine-day tour, The Heritage of America, leaving Nov. 1. We will fly to New York City and fly home from Washington, D.C. Also the Branson tour for Dec. 8-12 is ready.

We need volunteers to help deliver meals and also at the Thrift Store and the Festival of Trees. At the Thrift Store, we need at least six people on open days, Thursdays and Fridays, and 10 on Tuesdays, restocking day. If you have some time to spare, please call me.

Twenty-six of us went to see "TEXAS" last week. It was also Hereford night and we saw so many friends and had a wonderful time. The weather was perfect.

Please pray for our sick. We have several who really need a word of encouragement.

THANKS to all who have donated to the parking lot repair fund. We need $11,225 and as of today the following people have donated $8,355.01. They are Emily Suggs, Shirley and Mildred Garrison, Lucy Martin, Lester and Viola Wagner, Audrey Powell, Guy Walser, Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Gilbreath, Virginia Garner, Labry and Jean Ballard, Jess and Pat Robinson, Roberta Caviness, Benny and Joan Womble, Richard and Virginia Winget, Opal Elliston, Edgar and Loletta Vinson, Bert Brown, Cecil and Eunice Boyer, Bartley and Jean Dowell, Belmont Watson, Katie Kendall, L.J. and Wilma Clark, Nell Culpepper and Helen Spinks.

I feel the old saying "Doing nothing is the most tiresome job in the world because you cannot quit and rest!" certainly doesn't have to happen to any of us!

See you at the Center.

HSC announces winners of Jubilee Quilt Show

Crocheted items included for first time

Winners of the 1997 Quilt Show held during the Town and Country Jubilee were announced by the Hereford Senior Citizens.

An afghan submitted by Lucy Martin received the judges choice award in the crocheted item category.

The award for the crocheted article showing the most work was presented by Julia Powell.

The award for the quilt showing the most work went to Susie Curtsinger for a Diamond Hexagon quilt started in 1939 and finished 40 years later. This quilt contains more than 9,500 pieces.

Mary Schlabs' Lone Star pattern quilt won the title for most beautiful.

Marvine Mathis entered a Twelve Days of Christmas quilt and it was the judges choice in the quilt category.

The oldest quilt, made in 1852, was a Tulip Pattern and was entered by Mary E. Williamson.

Judges were Ella Oglesby, Vera Secrest and Marvine Mathis.

"We want to extend our thanks to all who helped make the quilt show a success--those who entered items, those who worked to display, the judges, the quilters and the office staff. They all did a great job," said Margie Daniels, executive director of the Hereford Senior Citizens Association.

Betty Boggs was the winner of a handmade quilt given away in the drawing sponsored by Hereford Senior Citizens.

Quilt entries for 1997 were Bertha Arnold, Wenonah Barringer, Roy E. Barringer, Jolene Bledsoe, Jackie Cabiness, Susie Curtsinger, Bonnie Duke and Marchetta Hutcheson.

Also Shyla Martin, Marvine Mathis, Roxie Phipps, Ursula Pittner, Julia Powell, Dorene Rose, Laurence Ruther, Mary Schlabs, Jo Solomon, Marie Stringer, Bertha Tiefel, Regina Walterscheid, Estelle Ware and Mary E. Williamson.

Crocheted items entered for 1997 were by Bertha Arnold, Wenonah Barringer, Dorothy Berend, Bertha Tiefel, Maudi Joy Miller, Emily Suggs and Regina Walterscheid.

Appearance of new flu strains calls for annual renewal of shots

The flu is always new, with updated influenza strains every season.

That's why you need an updated flu shot each year, sometime between early October to mid-November. That should tide you through the flu season, which generally runs from December through March.

Combined flu and pneumonia are the sixth leading cause of death in the United States, observes the Mayo Clinic Health Letter, which also notes that less than half of people aged 65 and older - people who would benefit most - get the shots.

Influenza is a contagious disease that comes in three types of viruses - influenza A, B and C. It's uncomfortable and inconvenient for healthy children and young adults, the Rochester, Minn.-based newsletter notes, but it can be severe or even fatal for older people or those with chronic illnesses. More than 90 percent of flu deaths occur in people over 65.

Most people can tolerate the vaccine - exceptions are those who are allergic to eggs - with only some temporary soreness at the site of the shot. If you're among the exceptions, the newsletter suggests asking your doctor about antiviral drugs such as amantadine (Symmetrel) and rimantadine (Flumadine) which may help prevent Type A influenza, usually the most severe form.

President's Corner

By Norma Thurston, HSCA President

Dear Friends,

This month has come and just about gone. It has been a good one. If you have not been to see our Thrift Store and the new annex, you should. It is looking great. If you are looking for something hard to find or special you must might find it there. Peggy and our Thrift Store volunteers are to be commended for a job well done. We miss our Peggy. She certainly was an asset to our center.

We need more volunteers on Tuesdays to stock and Thursdays and Fridays to help with duties during open hours at the Thrift Store. If you have any extra time please call Margie and get on the work schedule. The funds generated through this project help with the general operating expenses. It is very badly needed.

The summer is on its way out and that means Festival of Trees. We hope everyone will try to be at the next planning meeting.

We need to start collecting items for the bazaar. Some are already putting baskets together. This is a hard job but great fun! We have already had people ask if we were going to have them again this year.

Please come help in any area you can. We need you!

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q:

I'm 58 years old and my husband died two months ago. Would you please explain widows' benefits at what age will I qualify?

A: As a widow, you can receive benefits from Social Security as early as age 60. The amount you receive depends on your age and the amount of benefits your husband would have been entitled to when he died. Widow's benefits range from 71-1/2 percent of a deceased husband's benefit amount, up to 100 percent. That means that if you wait until age 65 to begin receiving widow's benefits, you'll receive 100 percent of what your husband would have received if he were still living. Here's another point to remember: if you are entitled to benefits based on your own work under Social Security, you can elect reduced benefits as early as age 62. Then when you reach age 65, you can receive your full widow's benefits.

Q: My son just enlisted in the Navy. Do people in the military pay Social Security taxes?

A: Yes, people who serve in the military services on active duty or on active duty for training have paid into Social Security since 1957. While those who served in the military before 1957 did not pay into Social Security, their Social Security records are credit with special earnings for Social Security purposes. For more information, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and ask for the factsheet, "Military Service And Social Security."

Q: How much do you need for retirement benefits?

A: Generally, the amount of work you need is 10 years. Work credits may be earned at any time. They go with you from job to job and stay with you permanently. For more information, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and request the publication, "Retirement."

Q: Among Americans age 65 and over, how many are currently receiving Social Security benefits?

A: Among Americans 65 and over, 92 percent are currently receiving benefits and another three percent will be eligible to receive benefits when they retire.

Q: My daughter talked me into getting my monthly Social Security payments deposited directly into my bank account. At first I was reluctant, but I must confess that it's a lot more convenient for me this way. Are there any benefits to the government?

A: Yes, besides direct deposit being safer and more convenient for beneficiaries, direct deposit is more efficient and saves money for the government because it's cheaper than preparing and mailing monthly checks. The government saves 40 cents each time someone uses direct deposit instead of a check. It costs 42 cents to process and mail each check, compared to 2 cents for direct deposit. If everyone signed up for direct deposit, it would save the government $8.4 million a month!

Q: How long before retiring should I contact Social Security?

A: When signing up for retirement, we suggest you talk to a Social Security representative in the year before the year you plan to retire. That's because the rules are complicated, and it may be to your advantage to start your retirement benefits before you actually stop working.

Presenting our Volunteers

KATHRYN SMITH

Mrs. Kathryn Smith came to Hereford in 1947 from Ardmore, Okla. She and her husband, Lloyd Smith, have four children, Janice Brownlow, Pamela Brown and Neil Smith all of Hereford, and Kathy Holly of Houston.

They have nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Kathryn enjoys gardening and traveling. She volunteers at Senior Citizens five days a week, helping the disabled at lunch.

We want to thank Kathryn for volunteering. The service she gives to our people is so vital, and you can see that each one of them appreciates it, also.

Thank you, Kathryn!

Milk Gets a Makeover:
New Labels Help Make Shopping a Snap

Next time you reach for a carton of milk, you may be surprised. Milk labels are getting a facelift -- new names, but the same contents and package of nutrients.

New FDA regulations have been issued in response to milk industry and consumer group requests to make it easier to identify low fat and fat free milk. Also, use of words "fat free" and "low fat" and "reduced fat" on milk labels will be consistent with use of these words on other foods, such as crackers and cookies.

By January 1998, these new "terms" will appear on all milk labels.

Skim milk=Fat free milk:
Skim milk is fat free and that's how it will now be labeled. "Fat free" is a more familiar term and a positive description for this popular variety of milk. Many consumers mistakenly believe skim milk has been "skimmed" of nutrients. But only the fat has been removed. The words "skim" and "nonfat" may also be used on milk labels in place of "fat free."

Whether it's labeled fat free, nonfat, or skim milk, it contains 0 grams of fat and 80 calories per cup. Most important, fat free milk offers the same amount of calcium, vitamin D and other nutrients as whole milk.

A few more changes:

Other types of milk are also undergoing a name change. Milk previously labeled "2% lowfat" will not be labeled "reduced fat"; one percent milk will keep its "low-fat" descriptor. Lowfat milk may also be labeled "light", a descriptive term widely used on other foods that provide at least a 50 percent reduction in total fat compared with a full-fat version.

The labeling for whole milk (often referred to as vitamin D or homogenized milk) will remain unchanged.

Listing the percentage of milkfat, such as one percent or two percent on milk labels is now optional. But all you need to do is look for the terms

"fat free", "lowfat" and "reduced fat" to be sure you're buying the milk you want. The side of the carton with the Nutrition Facts panel will continue to provide the full nutrition information per serving of milk. So it will be easy to make comparisons.

Here's a review of the changes

A GUIDE TO NEW LABELS
(one serving is 1 cup or 8 fluid ounces)

Current Name	New Name (in Bold)	Calories	Fat ³ (g)	Sat. Fat (g)	Calcium (mg)
Skim or Nonfat Milk	Fat Free Milk or Skim or Nonfat Milk	80	0	0	300 or 30% Daily Value
1% Lowfat Milk	1% * Lowfat Milk, or Light Milk	100	2.5	1.5	300 or 30% Daily Value
2% Lowfat Milk	2% * Reduced Fat Milk	120	5	3	300 or 30% Daily Value
Whole Milk	Whole Milk	150	8	5	300 or 30% Daily Value

* The Milkfat percentages on labels are optional.

you'll see in the dairy case, along with the comparison of how different types of milk stack up.

Make milk a part of your healthy eating plan:

The Food Guide Pyramid recommends two to three servings of milk, yogurt or cheese daily for adults; growing children and teens need even more. Help meet your daily need for calcium and other important nutrients by making milk a part of your healthy eating plan.

Here are four easy ideas:

1. Wake up to a bowl of cereal topped with a cup of fat free, lowfat or reduced fat milk and you're off to a great start. Or mix eight ounces of milk in a blender with a small frozen banana and a splash of vanilla extract for a quick breakfast on the run.

2. When you hit that mid-afternoon lull, have a frothy calcium-boosting coffee latte or cappuccino.

3. Quench hunger pangs before dinner with a tall glass of ice-cold milk. Add a spoonful of chocolate syrup to sweeten the treat. Or pop a mug in the microwave for a quick calcium-packed cup of cocoa.

4. Try a dash of almond or hazelnut flavoring in a cup of steamed or microwave-heated milk for a nutritious late night treat.

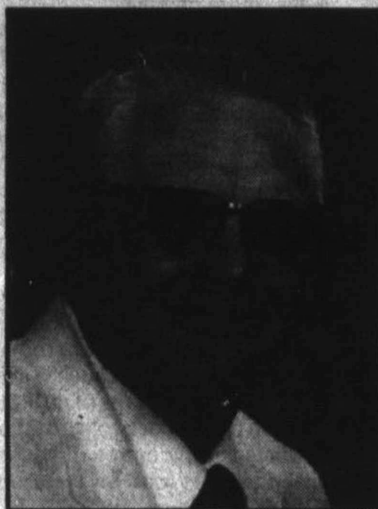

Meeting the HSCA Board Members

L.J. served a three-year term on HSCA board from 1991-1994 and is currently serving a term 1995-1998. He is the person in charge of keeping the parking lot and fence in good shape.

He retired on Dec. 31, 1986, from the Texas Department of Transportation in the engineering department after 38-1/2 years. He and Wilma have been married for 48 years and have two children, one grandchild living and four greats and do they love their grandpa!

L.J. just finished a term as president of the Hereford Lions Club. He and Wilma are members of First United Methodist Church where he has served as head usher for years and years. He was active in bowling and is enthusiastically waiting for a new bowling alley.

He was active in Little League as an umpire. Also he is an active Shriner and member of the Masonic Lodge. He is president of the Deaf Smith County Genealogy and is presently working the local cemetery

NATALIA BARKLEY

Natalia started to work for the Senior Center as food service supervisor Sept. 8, 1995. She had been employed at Bevins Nursing Home for nine years and for seven years was kitchen supervisor so was well qualified for the position. She knew all sanitation regulations and is very conscientious of them and knows the results of not following them.

Natalia has six children, 17 grandchildren and one great! Besides cooking she loves to sew, work with ceramics and porcelain.

Thank you, Natalia, for your hard work. We appreciate you very much!

Older people burn less fat during exercise

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Exercise doesn't seem to help you lose weight the way it used to, now that you're older.

Researchers at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis and the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston have come up with evidence to confirm your suspicions. Their conclusion: older people burn less fat during exercise than younger people doing a similar exercise.

"The older people had a decreased ability to oxidize fat during exercise, both at the same absolute exercise intensity - the same exact workload - and the same relative intensity, which is a lower workload because older people tend to be less fit than younger people," says Dr. Samuel Klein, principal investigator for the study.

Klein, associate professor of medicine and director of the Center for Human Nutrition at the St. Louis campus, compared six adults whose average age was 73 with six adults whose average age was 26. Subjects in both groups were sedentary and not exercising regularly at the time of the study, supported by grants from the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases.

Researchers monitored the fat and carbohydrate breakdown for participants as they pedaled stationary bikes for 60 minutes. Measurements of oxygen consumption indicated how hard they were able to exercise. Then the study subjects pedaled at speeds that made them consume identical amounts of oxygen. Older participants oxidized less than a third as much fat as their younger counterparts.

Warm up those muscles and joints with flexibility and stretching exercises before starting more vigorous workouts, the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons reminds exercisers. That will decrease chances of injury.

Here are some routines recommended by AAOS to warm up specific parts of the body:

Shoulders:

- In a standing or sitting position, interlace your fingers. With palms facing up, push your arms slightly back and up. Hold for 15 seconds.

- With your arms overhead, hold the elbow of one arm with the hand of your other arm. Gently pull the elbow behind your head. Do it slowly, and hold for 15 seconds. Stretch both arms.

- With the opposite hand, gently pull your elbow across your chest toward the opposite shoulder. Hold for 10 seconds. Repeat with the other elbow.

Lower Back:

- Lying on your back, knees up and feet flat on the floor, tighten your hip and abdominal muscles at the same time to flatten your lower back. Hold for five to eight seconds, then relax. Repeat two or three times.

Hamstring:

- Sit on the floor and straighten your left leg, resting the sole of your right foot on the inside thigh of the straightened leg. Lean forward slightly and touch your foot with your fingers. (Keep the extended foot upright with the ankle and toes relaxed.) Hold for 30 seconds. Repeat with your right leg.

- Lying on your back, pull your right leg toward your chest. If possible, keep the back of your head on the floor. Try to keep your lower back flat. Hold for 30 seconds. Repeat with your left leg.

Hip and Groin:

- Sitting on the floor with your knees bent outward, position your arms against the inside of your legs to provide slight resistance. Slowly push down on your knees and hold for five to eight seconds.

Knee and Calf:

- Leaning against a wall, hold the

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Recently you answered a 45-year-old woman who wondered if her energy level was satisfactory. One of the criteria you mentioned was that she should be able to walk one mile in a brisk 14 minutes.

To my dismay, it took me 17 minutes. Am I allowed more time for being 39 years older? — F.F.

ANSWER: Indeed a person of 84 years is allowed more time than one of 45 years. Your 17-minute mile places you in the "excellent" fitness category for your age. As a matter of fact, your pace is not bad for one half your age.

As we grow older, muscles lose strength, the heart beats less forcefully, and the lungs lose some of their capacity to hold air. You have kept these degenerative changes to a minimum.

My hat's off to you. Would that I will be in your shape at 84.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've heard fitness experts say that walking is good for the fat or the elderly but is not demanding enough for those already in good shape.

If one uses hand weights, ankle weights and walks uphill fast, can one not fashion a hard walking workout suitable for those already fit? — R.R.

ANSWER: Walking is for everybody, Superman or Joe Six-Pack.

If you are in good shape, pick up the pace and distance you walk. Turn it into a walk-jog exercise.

Hand weights add difficulty to the walk. And they can give your upper body muscles a workout. I'm all for them.

However, I have reservations about ankle weights, which can throw off your natural stride and stress joints.

If you want to add intensity to your walking program, wear a backpack. When you first start using it, put a 3-pound weight inside. If that's too easy, use a 5-pound weight.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I know you're not supposed to eat immediately before exercise. I wonder about the best time to eat after exercise. Does it make any difference if you eat right away or wait for a few hours? — G.G.

ANSWER: First things first. After exercise you're bound to be a bit dehydrated. You want to replenish body fluids as soon as you can. So make sure you drink immediately after exercise.

As for food, you can eat as soon as you feel like it.

In the four hours following exercise, your muscles are ravenous for the carbohydrates they burned for energy. Chow down on high-carbohydrate foods such as pasta, breads, cereals and potatoes.

Tennis greats remember Arthur Ashe at U.S. Open

1992 U.S. Open champion Monica Seles is one of the past winners expected at the dedication of the new Arthur Ashe Stadium in New York's Flushing Meadows. The ceremony is part of the tournament's opening day coverage, which begins Monday on USA Network. Seles also is scheduled to compete in the tournament.

When Arthur Ashe started playing tennis, there were tournaments he couldn't enter and courts across the country where he wasn't welcome to play, solely because of the color of his skin.

So it's both ironic and fitting that on Monday, Aug. 25, in front of a sell-out crowd, including dozens of tennis greats, and a prime-time viewing audience in the millions, the new, $234 million, 23,000-seat United States Tennis Association stadium in New York's Flushing Meadows will be named for Arthur Ashe.

Airing exclusively on USA Network, the half-hour ceremony, part of the opening day activities at the U.S. Open tournament, will include a trumpet fanfare, a performance of "One Moment in Time" by Whitney Houston and a fireworks display. Among those scheduled to attend are John McEnroe, Ken Rosewall, Stan Smith, Billie Jean King, Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova, Andre Agassi, Steffi Graf, Pete Sampras and Virginia Wade.

"There was a time when the USTA was thinking it would be called the USTA National Stadium," USA executive producer Gordon Beck says. At a time when ballparks and stadiums are being renamed for their corporate sponsors, he adds, "to name it after a player is pretty unique."

But Ashe himself was unique. In a world where celebrities wax and wane every quarter-hour, many are eulogized, but few are truly great. On and off the tennis court, Arthur Ashe was great.

In 1968, as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army, Ashe became the Open's first men's singles champion. For his achievement, the amateur took home just $280 for expenses, rather than the $14,000 he would have been paid as a professional.

Over his 12 years as a pro, Ashe earned 50 additional singles and doubles titles. He played on five Davis Cup teams and later coached two of them. He encouraged those who came after him, founding or helping to found the National Junior Tennis League, the USTA Player Development program, the Ashe-Bollettieri Cities Tennis Program and Arthur Ashe Kids' Day, a warm-up event for the Open.

"Two or three times," retired pro Tracy Austin recall, "he wrote me a note about my career and wished me good luck at Wimbledon, things like that."

Ashe was known for his emotional control, an unflappable calm that kept his competitors guessing and guaranteed his composure in the face of bigotry. Away from the courts, he spoke out for Haitian rights, and he was arrested for civil disobedience while protesting the United States' relations with segregated South Africa. His decision to play an exhibition match in that country is credited with helping end apartheid.

Ashe's final battle was with AIDS. A heart patient, he contracted HIV through a blood transfusion and died in 1993 at age 50, but not before establishing a fund for the defeat of AIDS.

"Arthur Ashe was an outstanding tennis player," USTA President Harry A. Marmion says, "but we are naming our new stadium in his honor because Arthur Ashe was the finest human being the sport of tennis has ever known."

The Open continues through Sunday, Sept. 7, with daily coverage through the quarterfinals on USA. The network has built a new studio in Ashe Stadium for its announcing team, which includes Austin and McEnroe. Labor Day and final-round coverage airs on CBS.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES - March 21/April 20
An upsetting situation at work has you on edge early in the week, but you can't let this stop you from giving 100 percent to your job. Take it one day at a time, and things will be back to normal by the end of the week. Your romantic life flourishes when you meet someone who sweeps you off your feet. Enjoy the moment — and the relationship.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
This is your week to shine, Taurus. You do well at work and win accolades from superiors. Your love life is also doing well. That special someone you've been seeing has a surprise for you. Don't be nervous — you're sure to love it. Scorpio and Cancer play important roles.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Things get a little crazy for you early in the week, Gemini, and you wish there were two of you. Don't panic! You can handle it. Just get organized, and you'll be fine. As for your family, loved ones call on you for help with an emergency. Remain calm. Leo plays a key role.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
You're on a definite high all week long. Everything is coming up roses, from praise at work to help from loved ones. You feel on top of the world. To make things even better, that special someone takes you out for a night on the town. Live it up!

LEO - July 23/August 23
Your outgoing personality serves you well during the middle of the week, Leo. Simply by talking with some people you meet, you make connections that will help you with future career moves. Your love life also goes well this week. That intriguing person you've been interested in finally calls you.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
You're a loner, Virgo, and it's a good thing this week. Co-workers have a spat with management and try to draw you into the middle of it. Stay out of the situation. Keep your mind on your own agenda, and you will do very well. A loved one takes you with him or her to a social outing. Try to enjoy yourself.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
You're on the move this week. Your determination to enhance your career has you going above and beyond the call of duty at work — and superiors are impressed with your efforts. You carry this resolve into your personal life also. You're no longer afraid to ask that special someone out. Sagittarius plays an important role.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
You turn over a new leaf this week, Scorpio. You make an effort to be more positive about your job, and it shows. You also make a change when it comes to your love life. Instead of settling for less than you deserve, you look for someone who will show you true affection.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
A friend misinterprets your efforts early in the week. He or she thinks you are working against him or her, when what you're really trying to do is help. Explain the situation. If you don't say anything, you can lose a close friend. Gemini plays a key role later in the week.

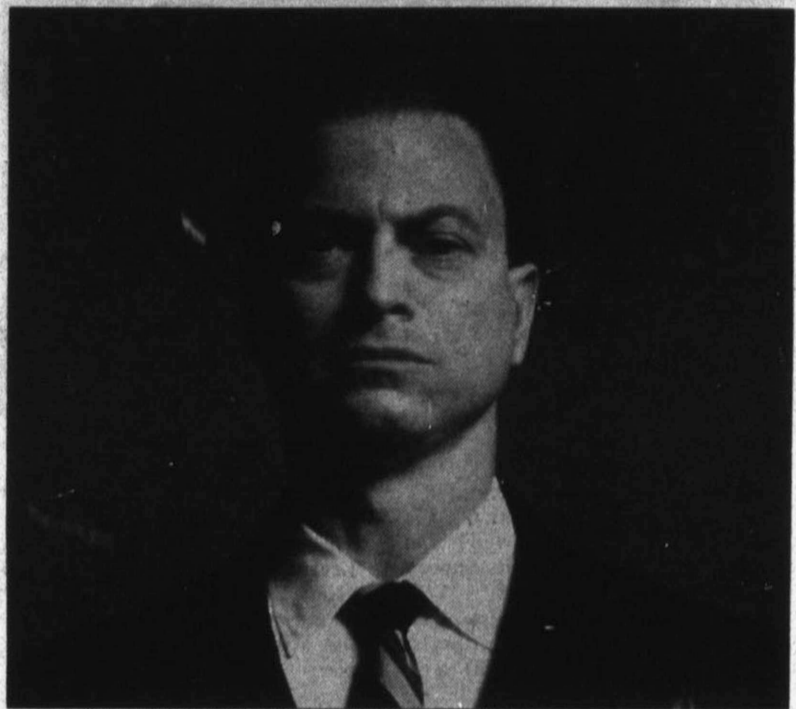

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't be shy this week, Capricorn, or you may miss out on a great opportunity. When you see something that you want, go for it. That's the only way you'll get ahead. A loved one reveals a secret to you. While it shocks you to hear it, you must be supportive. He or she needs your strength.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
You need to strive for stability at work early in the week. Things are getting out of hand, and you need to restore order before all of the progress you made recently is lost. Remain calm, and be practical. Don't let a cancelled date upset you. His or her excuse is legitimate. Taurus plays a role.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
You are the hero at work this week, Pisces. Your desire to help others gets a few co-workers out of a difficult situation and saves the company a lot of money. The higher-ups have their eyes on you. A relative you haven't heard from in a long time calls. Enjoy all the catching up you have to do.

Yo, ho, ho and a bottle of rum! Roger Daltrey takes to the high seas as 17th-century pirate William Dampier in Pirate Tales, premiering Sunday on TBS.

IN FOCUS

William Petersen reels in the role of Whip Dalton, a fishing boat captain who reluctantly sets sail to get rid of a mysterious sea creature creating havoc along the coast of a small town, in The Beast. This NBC drama airs Sunday and Monday, Aug. 24 and 25.

Whip teams up with a Coast Guard lieutenant and a marine biologist (Karen Sillas, Ronald Guttman) to try to outwit the monstrous beast before more lives are lost.

Based on a novel by Peter Benchley, the film also stars Larry Drake.

A&E Network's Biography series tickles the ivories with a poignant profile of actor-musician Oscar Levant in Oscar Levant: Brilliant Shadow, premiering Monday, Aug. 25.

Levant, a talented pianist, was taken to New York by his mother when he was a teen in the hopes he would become a successful musician and composer.

There he met George Gershwin, who would change his life forever.

Levant's musical career led to acting roles in television shows and movies.

Jason Bateman

Q: Whatever became of Jason Bateman? I remember reading a magazine article a few years ago that described him as a major talent, but apart from his sitcom last year that went nowhere, he seems to have dropped out of sight. Is he married? —Janie Post, Philadelphia.

A: We must be on the same wavelength, Janie, because when I chatted with Bateman during rehearsals for his last ill-fated sitcom, Chicago Sons, I asked him point-blank: How do you go from co-starring with Katharine Hepburn (in the TV movie This Can't Be Love) to co-starring in Simon, a WB Network situation comedy almost no one saw?

"Hey, my goal is just to be a working actor," he replied. "That's getting harder and harder, but I do whatever work is available."

Things may be looking up. The 28-year-old actor, who is single, co-stars as Bob Newhart's son in George & Leo, a promising new sitcom from CBS this fall.

His older sister, Justine, has just left Men Behaving Badly.

Q: Why is Tom Bergeron off Fox After Breakfast? They take a great show off the F/X network, change everything and create a flop. Now they add Vicki Lawrence.

A: Morning TV did not need another routine show, but the powers that be just never seem to learn: If it ain't broke, don't fix it! —"Seaturtle" via e-mail.

A: When I answered a similar question about Bergeron's former co-host, Laurie Hibberd, a few weeks ago, I noted at that point that Bergeron was not happy with the wholesale changes the Fox network made after moving the show from its sister cable channel.

You said it best: Fox took a delightful show and ripped out everything that was unique about it. Ultimately, Bergeron just reached his limit and decided to leave.

Q: Recently, I saw a T.J. Hooker rerun featuring Victor Jory. Can you help me remember a TV series long ago in which he played some kind of a cop? Is he still alive? —Jack B. Evett, Charlotte, N.C.

A: Jory starred as San Diego Police Lt. Howard Finucane in a 1959 syndicated program called Manhunt. The Canadian-born actor died at 79 on Feb. 12, 1982.

Q: Please help me remember the name of a 1970s TV movie in which Nancy Walker played God. I haven't seen it in years! —Anne M. O'Neill, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A: Walker co-starred in Human Feelings, a 1978 comedy in which God vows to destroy Las Vegas unless a fledgling angel (Billy Crystal) can find six virtuous people in the city.

HIGHLIGHTS

Rosa Blasi, Claude Brooks, Rick Gomez, Spencer Garrett and Andrew Dice Clay (clockwise from far right) star in the UPN sitcom Hitz, premiering Tuesday.

UPN offers some Good News and not so great Hitz

UPN has some Good News this week as three new series leave its starting gate to join the ratings race.

One of the network's more promising new series, Good News takes viewers behind the pulpit when it premieres Monday, Aug. 25.

The delightful show follows the new pastor (David P. Ramsey) at the Church of Life as he tries to win over the congregation while introducing nontraditional ideas.

Good News joins the growing list of religious-themed series popping up since the surprising success of CBS' Touched by an Angel.

What sets it apart from the others is its toe-tapping, soul-lifting gospel music.

"I like any kind of music," star Roz Ryan says. "But gospel is where my heart is."

The show revolves around a church, but executive producer Samm-Art Williams vows it won't deliver a sermon every week.

"I think as a minister, you minister, administer and counsel," he says. "So, within the framework of these things, we will have sermons. But we can't have a sermon every week.

"You go to church for church service and come to television for a sitcom. We're trying to balance it with both."

While the show has a decent chance of attracting viewers, the two other new sitcoms may not fare as well.

Hitz, debuting Tuesday, Aug. 26, centers around two pals (Claude Brooks, Rick Gomez) who work at a record company. Andrew Dice Clay stars as the company's egotistical president in a role that seems to mirror his brash stand-up schtick.

The friends have chemistry, but it may not be enough to keep viewers tuned in through the president's misogynistic remarks.

Head Over Heels, also premiering Tuesday, stars Peter Dobson and Mitchell Whitfield as brothers running a video dating service.

Patrick Bristow (Ellen), who plays a celibate videographer, is the only bright spot in this otherwise innocuous show.

A Cry for Help: The Tracey Thurman Story  (1989) Nancy McKen, Bruce Weitz. After a vicious attack by her estranged husband, a woman sues the police for ignoring her earlier pleas for protection. 2:00. August 30 5pm.

Cry Wolf ½ (1947) Erol Flynn, Barbara Stanwyck. A widow uncovers a macabre secret when she returns to her deceased husband's estate to collect her inheritance. 1:30. August 27 11pm.

D

Dance, Charlie, Dance  (1937) Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir. A phony producer attempts to swindle a young aspiring entertainer. 1:30. August 29 8am.

The Dark Command  (1940) John Wayne, Claire Trevor. The story of Quantrill's Raiders, the anti-abolitionists who terrorized Kansas during the Civil War. 2:00. August 30 7pm, 11pm.

Days of Glory ½ (1944) Tamara Toumanova, Gregory Peck. A leader of the Russian Resistance finds romance while trying to hold back the Nazis during World War II. 2:00. August 26 1pm.

Deception: A Mother's Secret (1991) Steven Weber, Katherine Helmond. Adoption proceedings dredge up painful memories for a widower who is determined to raise his late wife's son. 2:00. August 26 1pm.

Deceptions ½ (1985) Stefanie Powers, Barry Bostwick. A bored housewife and her jet-setting twin decide to switch identities for a week. Based on Judith Michael's novel. 4:00. August 30 7pm.

Max Pomeranc makes all the right moves as a 7-year-old with an amazing talent for chess in Searching for Bobby Fischer. The 1993 drama airs Monday on ABC.

SOAP WORLD

Jack Wagner visits beautiful Sunset Beach

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Jack Wagner is returning to daytime, but not as fan favorite Frisco Jones on General Hospital.

Wagner, who plays Peter Burns on Melrose Place, is going to appear in a few episodes of Sunset Beach as a personal favor to producer Aaron Spelling.

The actor will be playing a man who knew Cole (Ashley Hamilton) during his days as a jewel thief.

Sunset Beach hasn't been faring well in the ratings lately, and it looks as if Spelling is pulling out the big guns. He says he also may try to work in guest stints for Finola Hughes (Kate, Pacific Palisades) and Michelle Stafford (Joanna, Palisades, ex-Phyllis, The Young and the Restless). With Palisades gone, those actresses are about to discover Spelling sticks by his people.

Executives at Fox don't blame Spelling for the cancellation of Palisades. They say it was a problem with scheduling.

In hindsight, the executives say it would have been better to have waited and launched Palisades later in the summer.

There was some indication that it could return as a midseason replacement, but don't hold your breath.

In other news: Crystal Chappell, who plays Maggie, is departing Llanview and One Life to Live in September. The actress says she wants to move on.

Mark Valley is leaving the role of Jack on Days of Our Lives to pursue other interests. The producers are deciding whether they want to recast.

Fans of Sydney Penny should tune in to All My Children this week. The actress returns to the role of Julia for a few episodes.

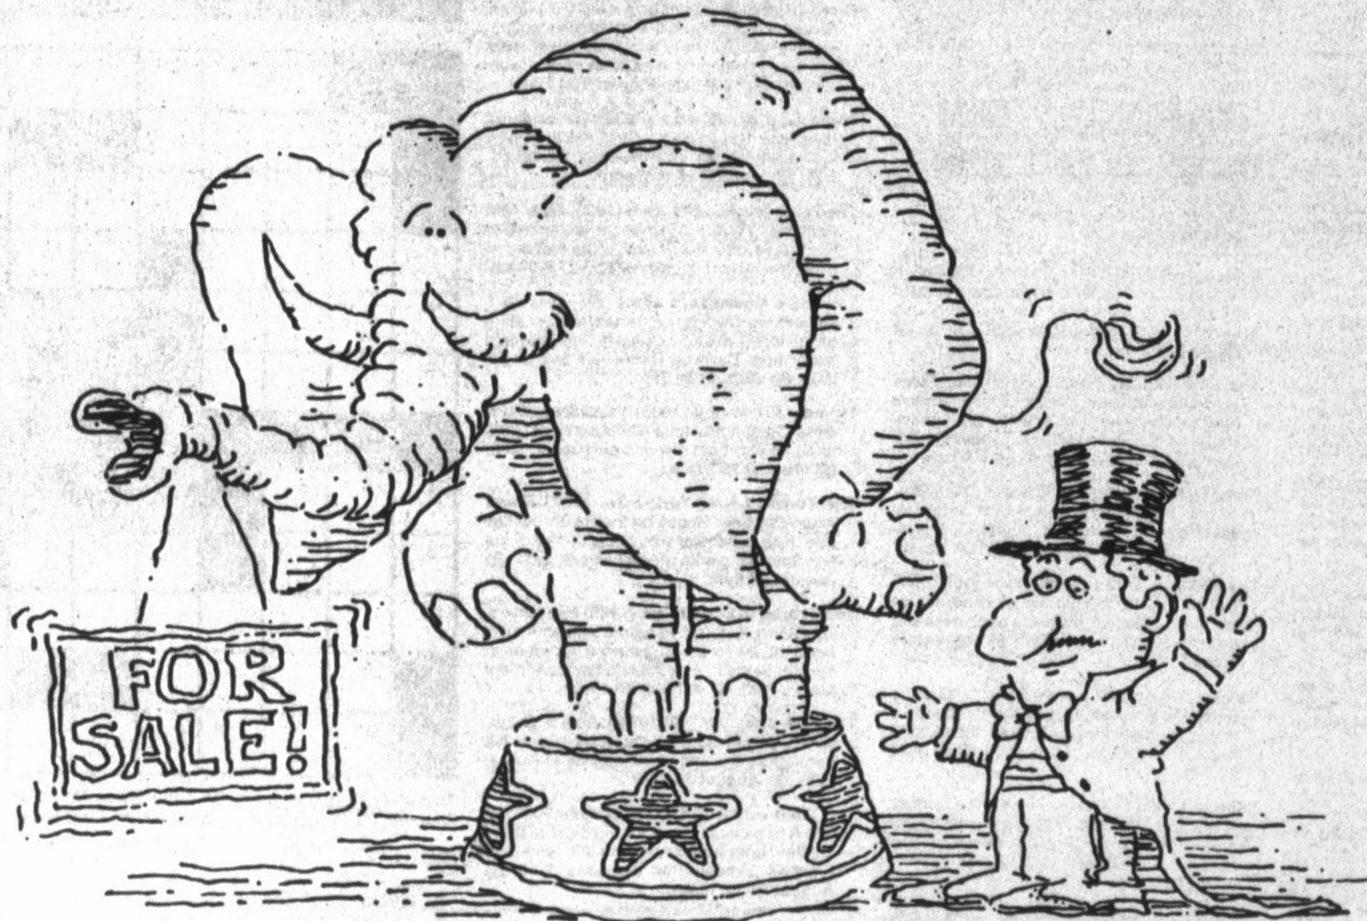

Dear Candace: What in the world is wrong with the writers on Another World? How could they think getting rid of Anna Holbrook (Sharlene) would be a good thing?

It was a big mistake. The show's in enough trouble without making fans angry. —S., Tampa, Fla.

Dear Reader: Holbrook will be back on a recurring basis. I wouldn't count her out just yet.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best.

You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day.

And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message.

People believe it when they read it in the paper.

Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.
