Destruction of records violation of rule

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Destruction of more than two years' worth of telephone records by Gov. Ann Richards' staff sidestepped state record-keeping rules, an archivist says.

Richards now has directed her staff to do everything possible to reassemble the long-distance phone records that were destroyed last August, a spokesman says.

Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary, said Wednesday that he didn't yet know how many of the 2-1/2 years of documents might be salvaged from the phone company and other state offices.

But he said the records would be made public as soon as they are available.

State Archives director William Gooch said Richards' staff apparently misunderstood the rules requiring that detailed listings of monthly calls be saved for three years.

"They misinterpreted those rules," said Gooch, who added that the governor's office and other agencies have been reminded to keep the records for three years.

"We've received a letter from the (governor's) chief of staff. They're going to keep the telephone bills for the three-year period, as required," he said.

Richards staff chief John Fainter said Tuesday he had decided last August to destroy the itemized listings of individual long-distance phone calls because the office was "drowning in paper."

But Fainter said he believed the actions were legal, because the phone bills - the documents showing the total amounts paid monthly - were being retained for three years.

Fainter also apologized for the governor's staff giving several different explanations for the destruction of the phone records.

However, Fainter insisted that the decision wasn't related to a raid weeks before on the state Treasury, where hundreds of records of Kay Bailey Hutchison were seized.

A Republican who was elected to the U.S. Senate in June, Mrs. Hutchison now faces trial on state ethics charges including tampering with governmental records.

"To say that we were not cognizant of that (raid) would be, I think, stretching credibility. But the decision was made based on an internal decision to implement our retention policy," said Fainter.

The governor's office has been asked for an explanation by the Travis County district attorney's public integrity unit, which investigates possible wrongdoing by state officials.

Fainter said Richards' aides were cooperating.

The destruction of the Richards calling lists prompted more criticism from Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer.

"This troubling new evidence that laws may have been broken make the reconstruction of records and full public disclosure of both official and political phone lines that were in the governor's office imperative," Meyer said.

"Now, apparently, Ann Richards can destroy records at will and when caught, merely say, 'My staff did it and they're sorry,'" he said.

But Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for the governor's re-election campaign, said destruction of the records was an honest mistake caused by confusion over the regulations.

McDonald said the governor's office received two different letters from archivists in the past week. One said the governor's office was following the law; the second advises them to keep the records for three years, he said.

"It is no wonder there is confusion about how these laws are being interpreted," he said.

Archivist Gooch said that state records retention rules refer to two types of telephone records - phone logs and phone billings.

He said logs are handwritten notes made by state employees as they place each long-distance call. Those logs may be destroyed one month after calls listed on the actual phone bills are verified, Gooch said.

The billings include the total amount owed, plus the individual listings of each call made, Gooch said. All of that information, which documents spending of public funds, is to be retained for three years.

Crimestoppers reaps rewards of offering $2,200 in payoffs for criminal tips in 1993

BY RICK LANNING
Staff Writer

An investment of $2,200 in reward money has returned a big payoff to Hereford residents through the Deaf Smith County Crime Stoppers program.

Last year, police recovered $24,150 in stolen property, seized $64,500 worth of illegal narcotics, arrested 15 felons, and cleared 17 crimes because of tips phoned in by local residents, according to police.

Detective Brent Harrison is the person who coordinates the program for Hereford Police Chief David Wagner.

The department's biggest crime stopper case occurred last March when police seized 32 grams of heroin and arrested Anselmo Marinos for trafficking the illegal drug.

Marinos, now in custody in Amarillo on another charge of possession of heroin and marijuana, is also wanted in Phoenix on drug-related charges, said Harrison.

Shortly after Hereford Police arrested Marinos, they broke up another drug smuggling ring and confiscated 54 pounds of marijuana - again thanks to a local citizen who phoned in the tip.

Since the Crimestoppers program was established in 1981 by District Attorney Roland Saul, local authorities have recovered over $186,200 worth of stolen property, confiscated $80,545 worth of drugs, and brought in $10,650 through forfeitures and restitution. Detectives who assisted in some of the major drug investigations were Esrael Silva and Pete Garza.

"That isn't a bad return considering we paid out only $2,200 in rewards in 1993," said Harrison, a 1984 graduate of Hereford High School.

Harrison, 27, attended West Texas State University where he studied computers and criminal justice before he decided on a career in law enforcement.

The Crimestoppers currently pay a $500 reward to anyone who turns in a tip that solves the "Crime of the Week," he added. Tips on any other local crimes are rewarded by whatever amount the 12-member Crimestopper board decides to pay.

"We make it easy for people to become Crimestoppers," said Harrison. "They can call in their tips anonymously and we assign them a number that protects their identity."

"That is what happened when we got the tip on Marinos," he added.

Reward money is raised in the community through the efforts of the board and its advisory members. Among local community leaders who help raise reward funds are a hospital administrator, attorney, and a business owner.

People call in tips all the time, turning in suspects who are involved in a variety of crimes, ranging from murder to burglary and dealing in illegal drugs.

The local Crimestoppers work closely with the Governor's Fugitive Squad which publishes the "Texas Ten Most Wanted" program.

Police warn local residents not to try to apprehend any felony suspect.

To report a crime or turn in a felony suspect, call Crimestoppers at 364-CLUE. For information on Crimestoppers, call 364-2323.

Commission examines solid waste, streets at session

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A continuing study of services provided citizens of the City of Hereford focused on solid waste disposal and streets during a session of the City Commission Wednesday evening.

Jerry Carr, street and health department superintendent, reviewed plans for transporting Hereford's garbage to the landfill operated by the City of Amarillo near Bushland.

The commission also heard a report from Carr on streets, agreed to invite the public to a meeting to explain swimming pool plans and listened to suggestions for city improvements from a resident.

The Hereford landfill will close in April. City commissioners decided more than a year ago that expense of maintaining a landfill, because of Environmental Protection Agency regulations, would be prohibitive.

Originally, the EPA had ordered the landfill changes to be implemented last fall. However, a six-month delay gave cities more time to plan compliance. The rules now become effective April 9.

Carr observed that Hereford residents will be asked to stop placing yard clippings, tree limbs and old furniture in dumpsters.

"We can do what we used to do," Carr said, "put all that stuff in the alley for the trucks to pick up."

"You are telling us that all you want to haul to Amarillo is household garbage," Mayor Bob Josslerand remarked.

Carr reported that two tandem-axle trucks recently acquired will bear much of the load of transporting garbage to the landfill.

"We're converting another truck to dual axle so we'll have three," he continued, noting that each can haul about 15,000 pounds. Single axle trucks can transport 3,000 to 5,000 pounds.

Carr said he estimates the city is handling 19 1/2 tons of trash per day at this time of year, "but we don't have quite the volume this time of year."

City Manager Chester Nolen said the city may have to consider an ordinance to implement rules for garbage disposal.

Josslerand asked for volunteers from the commission to work on a "public relations campaign" to help residents understand the importance of separating garbage. Commissioners Silvana Juarez, Nancy Griego and Dennis Hicks agreed to assume the task, working with Mike Hatley, assistant city manager.

Nolen estimates that the city will begin hauling trash to the Amarillo landfill during the first week of April. At that time, the Hereford landfill will be used only for non-household garbage, such as tree limbs, grass clippings and old furniture.

Carr also discussed with the commission some of the problems with city streets.

"In older areas of the city, we're seeing deteriorating curbs and gutters," he reported. Streets have been maintained through regular seal coating, although some may need more attention in the future, he said.

Carr said there are 12 miles of unpaved streets in the city, most with a caliche topping.

A problem on Country Club Drive was addressed by the commission after Carr said some drainage problems should be corrected. The commission suggested he look at the possibility of installing curb and gutter to eliminate the problem.

The commission also decided that signs should be installed on Country Club Drive to reduce truck traffic on the street. "No thru truck traffic" signs will be erected.

Roger Eades told the commission that the joint swimming pool committee has approved plans for the facility. The architect's estimate of cost of the complex stands at $1.4 million, Eades reported.

Citizens of Hereford will be invited to attend the public meeting on Feb. 16, to look at plans and hear explanations of proposals for the facility.

Davis Ford spoke to the commission for about 45 minutes, reviewing his suggestions for improvements in the city.

He called for a series of ordinances that would require residents to maintain their property. He also asked that a "code enforcement officer" be used to inspect rental property so that houses and living quarters would not become rundown.

Josslerand said the suggestions would be turned over to city staff for further study.

Commission studies city services

Koresh told followers of 'final confrontation'

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - "If you can't kill for God, you can't die for God," David Koresh told his disciples as they stockpiled weapons and fortified their compound for a "final confrontation," a former Branch Davidian testified.

Kathryn Schroeder said Koresh led the preparations in the months before last year's gun battle with federal agents.

She testified Wednesday in the trial of 11 cult members charged with murder in the slaying of the four Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents. They face up to life in prison if convicted.

The battle led to a 51-day standoff that ended when fire engulfed the compound. Koresh and more than 80 followers died in the blaze.

Schroeder said eight of the defendants had guns either during the Feb. 28 shootout or the subsequent standoff. She did not say she saw anyone firing a gun.

In 1991, Schroeder said, Koresh's preachings about Armageddon intensified and in 1992 he summoned followers from throughout the world to Waco for a final celebration.

"The message was at another level. It was very serious. It was very imminent," said Ms. Schroeder, the 31-year-old mother of four.

Koresh taught that the Branch Davidians would die in a "final confrontation with the king of the north, the beast, that we would all be a part of," she said. "We knew we would lose."

Under questioning by federal prosecutor Ray Jahn, Ms. Schroeder said at one point "the beast" was the ATF.

"At one time it was America," she said. "Basically it progressed and changed to become authority, man in authority."

Ms. Schroeder described a strict compound life in which conditions were primitive, Koresh's orders were final and Davidians confessed and were punished for the "sins" of smoking or drinking alcohol.

Always, though, there was pressure to stay at the compound. During her entire 3-1/2-year stay, she said, there was the message "if you leave you will go to hell."

As she identified the 11 defendants one by one, Ms. Schroeder beamed, and most of the Davidians smiled back. One defendant, Kevin Whitecliff, offered a salute.

Testimony in a previous court appearance revealed that Ms. Schroeder, who once was in the Air Force, was known by the nickname "Sarge."

Ms. Schroeder said she distributed weapons and ammunition to other sect members after the shootout. She testified defendants Livingston Fagan, Renos Avraam, Jaime Castillo, Graeme Cl. d. dock, Kevin Whitecliff, Clive Doyle, Brad Branch and Ruth Riddle had guns during the shootout or standoff.

Among the guns were AK-47s, AR-15s and a .50-caliber rifle, she said.

Defendants Paul Fatta, Norman Allison and Woodrow Kendrick are not accused of having been in the main compound gun battle.

Some Davidians in the compound had automatic weapons, Ms. Schroeder said, adding that Koresh indicated he and some male followers converted rifles into automatic weapons.

Schroeder was charged with murder and murder-conspiracy in the agents' deaths. In September, she pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of forcibly resisting federal officers in exchange for testifying for the government. She has not yet been sentenced. She could receive up to 10 years in prison.

The Davidians on trial could face up to life in prison if convicted.

House members urge apology, compensation for test victims

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some House members are urging the federal government to issue monetary compensation and a formal apology to people who were unwitting subjects of tests exposing them to radiation, mustard gas, LSD or other chemicals.

"What the federal government did to these people is outrageous," Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, testified Wednesday before a House subcommittee examining the government-sponsored testing.

"We can never fully compensate these people for what their government has done to them," he said. "However, we can provide some measure of relief with this payment and recognition that the United States government was wrong to conduct secret experiments on its citizens."

Although several hearings have been held on the Cold War-era radiation tests, Wednesday's hearing of the House administrative law and governmental relations subcommittee was the first examining compensation.

"To close the door on this regrettable legacy, we should focus on the proper remedies to respond to past wrongs, make certain these things can never happen again, and do the right thing today by compensating those who suffered injury," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., who brought the testing to light in 1986 but received little attention then.

While the subcommittee has yet to consider whether payment is appropriate, chairman John Bryant, D-Dallas, said: "Let me state explicitly that I think it was wrong for the government to test the effects of radiation, LSD, mustard gas or anything else on human guinea pigs without their knowledge and informed consent."

President Clinton has requested a government-wide review of records on human radiation tests and has established a working group to examine, among other issues, the

Arm-twisting fails; Clinton health plan rebuffed by group

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite extraordinary arm-twisting by President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton, a major business group rebuffed the White House health plan and threw its weight behind a much less regulatory rival bill.

Weeks of wooing of corporate America by the Clintons and senior economic aides went for naught as the New York-based Business Roundtable voted Wednesday to back the Cooper-Breaux managed competition plan as "the starting point" for reform.

White House officials suggested the deck was stacked because the chairman of the Prudential insurance company, Robert Winters, chaired the Business Roundtable task force that recommended this stand.

But John Ong, the BF Goodrich chairman who chairs the organization of 200 major corporate CEOs, denied that health and insurance companies dominate the task force. He said the business leaders back policies in the best interest of the country and the economy, not their own companies.

The Clinton plan was unacceptable because it would create new, unfunded entitlements and restrain medical spending through "government regulation ... and price controls," Ong said.

He praised the Cooper bill - authored by Reps. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., and Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, and Sens. John Breaux, D-La., and Dave Durenberger, R-Minn. - for relying instead on market forces to get the job done.

The Cooper bill would not force any employer to provide health insurance or pay for it. Cooper claims his insurance reforms, purchasing pools for small business and subsidies for people up to 200 percent of poverty would solve the problem for up to 80 percent of the uninsured.

The White House had hoped that corporate America - which already insures most of its workers - would rally behind its proposal to make every employer kick in. The administration has proposed picking up the health tab for early retirees, to the delight of big automakers. The chairman of General Motors, John F. Smith Jr., sat beside Mrs. Clinton at last week's State of the Union address.

"He was sitting there for a reason," White House counselor David Gergen said Wednesday.

But the White House has come up empty in its efforts to entice the National Association of Manufacturers, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce or other major groups to get behind the Clinton plan.

Cooper, who calls his bill "Clinton lite," said Wednesday evening the Business Roundtable action was "a strong boost."

"We already had a lot of small businesses on our side. Now with big businesses endorsing it, we have a stronger hand," said Cooper, who has 56 co-sponsors from both parties in the House.

His managed competition bill is anathema to some fellow Democrats, who attacked it at a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee hearing Wednesday.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., the health subcommittee chairman, told Cooper, "People are going to be losing what they already have and forced into the lowest price HMO (health maintenance organization) because that's all they'll be able to afford."

Cooper denied that would happen, but said, "Our approach is to help every American afford Chevrolet benefits before we subsidize anyone's Cadillac benefits."

Cooper would allow businesses to deduct health expenses only up to what it would cost to buy the lowest-priced standard health plan in a region.

Ong said the Business Roundtable had serious difficulties with that part of Cooper's plan.

At the White House, spokesman Jeff Eller said, "We're very disappointed. ... We think it was a mistake by them to take so firm a position so early in the process."

U.S. spacecraft takes Russian on mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Discovery blasted off at dawn today with five Americans and the first Russian to fly on a U.S. shuttle, opening a new space age free of Cold War rivalry.

Discovery roared away on the eight-day science mission at 7:10 a.m. EST. The spaceship rose into a clear sky; the rising sun gave the huge clouds of vapor left in its wake a pale orange glow.

Discovery quickly settled into its a 218-mile orbit.

On board was cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who wore a Russian flag patch on the shoulder of his orange flight suit. Just before liftoff, the head of Russia's space program, Yuri Koptev, wished Krikalev good luck and a safe return home.

It's the first U.S.-Russian manned mission since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking and the first time ever that astronauts and cosmonauts have been launched in the same spaceship.

The Russians were treated to a rare, trouble-free launch: on time and with perfect weather. NASA had worried all week that the temperature might be too low for a safe liftoff, but it turned out to be 46 degrees Fahrenheit, a little warmer than expected.

The United States and its former Space Race rival expect Discovery's voyage to lead to more joint missions and, by 2001, a shared space station. Up to 10 shuttle dockings are planned with Russia's Mir space station.

Two days after reaching orbit, the crew is to release a flying saucer-like satellite. It will be used to grow thin, high-quality semiconductor films in the ultra-pure vacuum it creates as it hurtles through space.

The $13.5 million satellite - a steel disk 12 feet in diameter - will be retrieved with the shuttle's robot arm two days later.

Scientists believe the film samples could surpass those grown on Earth. But Loren Pfeiffer, a physicist at AT&T Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J., said similar results eventually could be obtained on Earth.

Discovery is also carrying Spacehab, a commercial laboratory in the shuttle's cargo bay. It contains 12 NASA-sponsored experiments but has no commercial customers.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You advised "Take My Car, Please" to accept her husband's clunker because some things aren't worth fighting about. You were right on the money. I, too, have a husband who kept his old car for sentimental reasons—we drive away from our wedding in that car. His '58 Chevy sat in our garage collecting dust and rats for over 20 years. Twelve years ago, someone offered us $20 for it, and we were tempted but decided not to sell it, and I'm glad we didn't.

When our daughter was to be married in 1991, I suggested to my sentimental husband that the old Chevy would make a romantic getaway car for the newlyweds. Six months and $8,000 later, we had a beautifully restored classic. Our niece used the car in her wedding last April. What was once an old junk heap is now a family tradition. Patience pays—Cruisin' in California

DEAR CRUISIN': It certainly does. The writer of the next letter makes it clear that some of the old kattrinkas are worth their weight in gold.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell your readers those old cars sitting in garages can be worth a fortune. A Model T Ford, for example, is worth from $10,000 to $100,000. A Model A is worth $10,000 and up. A Duesenberg, Cord, Auburn, Graham or Stutz-Bearcat will fetch at least $100,000. All it takes is a new paint job, a tank of gas, fresh oil in the crankcase, a hot battery and a new set of tires and presto, the car is running. Tell the woman who wrote to be patient and cash in big time.—J.L., Long Island, N.Y.

DEAR J.L.: YOU told her—and millions of others, but you didn't say where the buyers are. Here's more on the subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In reply to "Take My Car, Please," why in the world is she complaining about ONE car?

We have a 1936 Plymouth that we have agreed not to talk about because it has caused so many fights.

We also have 13 OTHER cars on our adjacent three lots and five or six more on someone else's property out of town.

These are my son's precious mementos of his days of glory. The woman who wrote should be thankful her husband has only one.—A.R., Spokane, Wash.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I, too, have a husband who brought his beat-up old truck to our first home and insisted on lugging it to our second home, too, in spite of my protests.

When our sons were 12 and 14, they started to work on the truck with their father and turned it into the envy of all who saw it.

My husband gave it to our oldest boy when he turned 16, and he, in turn, gave the truck to his brother when he turned 16. It was a great bonding and learning experience for all of us.—San Diego, Calif.

DEAR SAN DIEGO: Your letter and hundreds of others I've received are proof that cars are often like members of the family. I'll bet millions of readers have a sentimental warm spot for a car they once owned. Ours was a Hudson, circa 1935.

It was one of the fanciest cars in Sioux City. Another car in my life was a gray Chrysler that belonged to a fellow I dated in high school. Of course, it was his dad's. What lovely memories!

Gem of the Day: Recall it as often as you want. A happy moment never wears out.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Merriam-Webster's Medical Desk Dictionary contains 55,000 main entries, 150 of which have been substantially modified and updated to reflect current usage. For example, the definition of "AIDS" is based on new information received this year from the Centers for Disease Control which redefines the criteria for diagnosis - a fact that might be of use to attorneys, insurance professionals and medical writers, among others.

The dictionary contains a combination of features that are unique to a medical dictionary, including a convenient A to Z vocabulary listing for all entries, part-of-speech labels, pronunciation respelling of all entries, British spellings where needed ("anaemia" for the American "anemia," for example), prefixes, suffixes and combining forms, an essay on the history of medical English, and over 1,000 biographies of men and women whose names have become part of the medical vocabulary.

Regarded as a landmark in medical dictionaries when it was first published in 1986, the dictionary is praised in the Harvard Health Letter as a comprehensive and up-to-date resource that enlightens rather than confounds the dictionary user and as a reference whose well-researched body of information makes it a book "built to last." You can find Merriam-Webster's Medical Desk Dictionary at many local booksellers or by calling 1-800-828-1880.

NEW YORK (AP) - And the No. 1 reason David Letterman likes working for CBS Chairman Larry Tisch: Tisch "promised to fix me up with Angela Lansbury."

At a tribute Monday for his boss, Letterman, who signed a $14 million contract with CBS last summer, pulled out one of his trademark Top 10 lists.

Among the items on the list: Tisch "would bash Ted Koppel on the knee with a metal pipe if I asked him"; "You get to meet Mr. Excitement himself, Vice President Al Gore"; and Tisch "decided to pay my salary instead of bidding for NFL football."

Letterman introduced Gore at the United Jewish Appeal-Federation of New York dinner, which honored Tisch for his philanthropy.

"He said if you do a really good job of this you can be the next secretary of defense," Letterman said.

Systematic investment can produce substantial sums

Virtually everyone with a steady income can set aside some portion of that income to invest. All it takes is discipline.

Think of this investment discipline as "paying yourself first." The temptation to buy first and save last (if there is anything left to save) is great, but this reverses the correct order of financial priorities.

By paying yourself before you pay your monthly bills, you are building a foundation for wealth creation and financial security.

If you lack the discipline to stop spending and start investing, consider participating in a mutual fund or other periodic investment program that withdraws a monthly sum from your checking account. In this way, saving becomes automatic.

If you have been holding back because you are convinced that it "doesn't pay" to put aside as little as $100, $50 or even $25 a month, it's time to reevaluate your thinking. With the power of compounding working for you, even a modest systematic investment can produce substantial sums over a period of time.

Systematic investing taps into a proven investment strategy known as "dollar-cost averaging." Put simply, dollar-cost averaging means that you purchase more shares of an investment when prices are low and fewer shares when prices are high. The result: You capitalize on market cycles through patient, long-term investing.

Keep in mind that the greatest risk you face as an investor is that you fail to reach your financial goals. The time to begin your systematic investment plan is now.

CHICAGO (AP) - Debi Thomas will be the ice maven for a local CBS station during the Winter Olympics.

The bronze medalist-turned-medical student will provide analysis of the figure skating and ice dancing competitions, Mark Toney, WBBM-TV news director, said Monday. She will also produce a video guide to figure skating.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed. Thomas won the world figure skating championships in 1986. She twice won the U.S. National Championships and took home the bronze medal at the 1988 Olympics.

"Americans love figure skating more than any other winter Olympic sport," Toney said. "It's a real coup to have Debi explain and analyze the competition."

Herd's Kuper signs to play with Longhorns

On the dotted line

Hereford's Mark Kuper signs a national letter of intent to play football at the University of Texas as his mother Renee and a KVII television cameraman look on. Mark's father Roy was forced out of town on business.

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Mark Kuper, for two years a standout Hereford Whiteface, switched breeds to Longhorn on Wednesday when he signed to play football at the University of Texas.

Kuper, a two-year, two-way starter at defensive end and tight end for the Herd, was dazzled by the long tradition of Texas Longhorn football.

"The tradition their football team has played a great deal in it," Kuper said. "I visited other schools and I didn't see a football tradition like I'm accustomed to in Hereford."

Kuper signed one portion of the national letter of intent at 8 a.m. Wednesday and faxed it to the UT athletic department, officially becoming a Longhorn. He signed the remaining portion of the letter at a noon ceremony in the HISD boardroom.

Kuper visited or considered a number of smaller schools which were interested in him, such as North Texas, Texas-El Paso, New Mexico and New Mexico State. He decided the Big Time—athletically and academically—was for him.

"If you graduate from UT it means more than if you graduate from the little schools, and it probably means more to the guy who's going to hire me," he said.

Kuper also mentioned the preferential treatment UT athletes receive, such as eating in the athletic dining hall—"It's not run-of-the-mill cafeteria food; it's really good," he said—and private rooms in the athletic dorms. He said the concept of "community showers" at other schools didn't appeal to him.

Kuper was a unanimous first-team all-district selection at both defensive end and tight end after his senior year, and at defensive end after his junior year.

In two years on defense, he recorded 141 tackles, 22 for losses, and 15 sacks. On offense, he had 15 catches--5 for touchdowns--for 231 yards.

He doesn't know whether he'll end up at defensive end or tight end at UT.

"I've played both ways since I was in ninth grade," he said. "That's a decision I'd hate to make. I'd rather the coaches say, 'Son, you're going this way.'"

Hereford football coach Danny Haney was proud of his first Division I product.

"It's a compliment to this program and the community and everything else when a young man can come out of this school and go to a big program and have a chance to play," Haney said.

"What made Mark such a catch is he had such strength in academics, and his character and family life are as good as there are. The bottom line is he's not only a good athlete, but he's a good person."

Lady Whitefaces to play home finale

The Hereford girls' basketball team will play its last home game of the season Friday, while the boys will be looking to break a four-game losing streak when Dumas comes to Whiteface Gym.

The Herd boys may be in luck; their last win was a 67-49 romp over Dumas Jan. 18. They meet again at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Hereford holds a 1-5 record in District 1-4A, 7-19 overall. Dumas is 0-6 and 3-21.

The Lady Whitefaces (3-5, 10-16) face a tough test at 6 p.m. against the Demonettes (6-2, 15-11), who beat Hereford 58-39 on Jan. 18. Dumas seems headed for at least a district playoff; they split wins with Borger, and both are tied for second with 6-2 records. Randall leads at 8-0.

Junior varsity games will be played Friday in the HJH Gym: boys at 6, girls at 7:30.

The sophomore boys' team will visit Caprock for a game at 4:30 Friday.

The Lady Whitefaces end the season Tuesday at Pampa. The Hereford boys play three more after Friday: at Pampa Tuesday; at Caprock Feb. 11; and at home against Randall Feb. 15.

As basketball season winds down, spring sports are starting to get underway. The Hereford girls' golf team will play in the San Angelo Girls Golf Classic Friday and Saturday. Look for a preview of the girls' golf season in Friday's Hereford Brand.

The Herd tennis team will play Tascosa at 4 p.m. today in Amarillo. The netters will then host several schools Saturday: Hereford will play dual matches against Pampa and Levelland, and Clovis (N.M.) will play those same two teams.

Sub-varsity basketball schedules are winding down. There will be three district basketball tournaments held this weekend, starting today: ninth grade girls' A teams in Borger; ninth grade boys at Amarillo High; and eighth grade girls at Valleyview Junior High.

The seventh grade boys' tourney in Dumas was originally scheduled for this weekend but was postponed to next weekend, Feb. 10-12.

Other than that, the basketball seasons for ninth, eighth and seventh grades end Monday. The junior high girls will host Borger in the HJH Gym, with games at 5 p.m. and 6:15. The HJH boys will go to Borger.

The ninth grade girls will host Canyon Monday in Whiteface Gym, with a B game at 6 p.m. and an A game at 7:30. Hereford's freshman boys will play at the same times at Canyon.

Mavericks prey on T-wolves for third time

By The Associated Press
If the Dallas Mavericks want to move up in the NBA standings, maybe they should move to Minnesota.

The Mavericks won for the third time in three tries at the Target Center this season, beating the Timberwolves 92-88 Wednesday night.

Dallas is 3-0 at Minnesota, but 1-40 in all other games. The Mavericks' only other victory came at home against Sacramento.

"We don't know why it is that we win here - if we knew, maybe we could bottle it," said Jamal Mashburn, who scored 26 points for Dallas.

Minnesota coach Sidney Lowe was not surprised that Dallas did so well.

"When they play us, they really feel they can win," Lowe said. "Their confidence level is at its highest peak against us. I don't think they get as jacked up for other teams."

Mashburn scored 18 points in the first half and kept Dallas within 45-41. Dallas started the second half with eight straight points.

Trailing 91-88 with seven seconds left, Minnesota's Micheal Williams took a 3-point shot and Doug Smith blocked it. Jim Jackson grabbed the loose ball for Dallas and made a foul shot.

"I hope this isn't a milestone," Dallas coach Quinn Buckner said. "We have a long way to go. We're in a marathon."

Hawks 118, Magic 99

Lenny Wilkens coached his 900th win in the NBA as Atlanta won at home. Wilkens is 900-760 lifetime and trails only Red Auerbach's 938 victories in the regular season.

Dominique Wilkins scored 26 points for the Hawks. Duane Ferrell and Atlanta's other reserves went on a 20-4 burst early in the second quarter.

Shaquille O'Neal scored 22 points for Orlando. He's had at least 20 points in 17 straight games.

Knicks 85, Bullets 80

Patrick Ewing had 29 points and the go-ahead basket with 1:06 left as New York won at Washington. The Knicks won their sixth in a row.

Ewing shot 13-of-21 and had 12 rebounds. Tom Gugliotta had 18 points for the Bullets.

SuperSonics 97, Celtics 84

Detlef Schrempf scored 21 points and Seattle won for just the second time in seven games. The Sonics, who lead the league with a 32-10 record, had lost two in a row.

Seattle broke it open with a 19-4 burst in the second quarter. Dee Brown scored 26 points for host Boston, which committed 26 turnovers.

Pacers 124, Hornets 112

Reggie Miller had 25 points and Indiana won its third straight game. Charlotte, playing without injured starters Larry Johnson, Alonzo Mourning and Scott Burrell, lost its fourth in a row.

Miller scored 12 points in the first quarter as the visiting Pacers took a 30-15 lead. Indiana scored 50 points in the second quarter, the most ever allowed in that period by the Hornets. Eddie Johnson had 32 points and Dell Curry 27 for Charlotte.

Cavaliers 105, 76ers 97

Cleveland beat Philadelphia for the 11th straight time as Brad Daugherty had 18 points and 10 rebounds for the visiting Cavaliers.

Cleveland led by 17 points with 7-1/2 minutes left, then held on as the Sixers rallied within five points. Clarence Weatherspoon had 31 points and 15 rebounds for Philadelphia.

Pistons 104, Bucks 90

Detroit ended its 10-game home losing streak as rookie Allan Houston scored a season-high 28 points.

Terry Mills had 24 points and 17 rebounds and Lindsey Hunter had 19 points and 10 assists for the Pistons. Detroit had lost six in a row and 21 of 22. Eric Murdock led Milwaukee with 24 points.

Warriors 97, Nuggets 84

Chris Mullin broke out of his slump by scoring 22 points and Golden State won at home. Mullin had averaged only 8.6 points in his last three games.

Latrell Sprewell added 21 for the host Warriors. LaPhonso Ellis scored 18 points for Denver.

Cowboys may try to get Zampese

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says there are three candidates to replace departed offensive coordinator Norv Turner and one of them is the favorite.

Although he won't name them, Jones may have dropped an inadvertent hint Wednesday about who would replace Turner, the new Washington coach and the architect of the offense that helped Dallas win the last two Super Bowls.

While going through a lengthy discussion of Turner's importance to the team, Jones made reference to the Los Angeles Rams' offense Turner left when he joined the Cowboys three years ago.

The key to Jones' comment could be that the coordinator of that offense - the model of the one Turner built in Dallas - is Ernie Zampese, the Rams' offensive coordinator and reportedly coach Jimmy Johnson's top choice.

"This offense is not the offense that Norv brought with him from the Los Angeles Rams. We have some very unique things that we do in the running game that's not part of the background that Norv had," Jones said.

Jones said Wednesday he has neither approached teams to request permission to speak with their coaches nor has he begun talks with anyone else.

Whoever replaces Turner will be placed in the difficult role of following an assistant coach who was well liked and very respected by his peers and players.

"I have said all along that Norv is going to be an outstanding head football coach in the NFL," Johnson said in a statement. "He has proven his abilities at this level and I wish him all the best in Washington."

"This will add another chapter to the Cowboys' long rivalry with the Redskins and we all look forward to competing against him next season."

The next offensive coordinator likely will have to be approved by quarterback Troy Aikman. Jones and Johnson have said they value Aikman's opinion and want him to discuss offensive philosophies with the new coach before he's hired.

Once Aikman and others have their say, then Johnson will basically make the decision, although Jones said he has the final word.

"I'm not worried about it, but I'm concerned," Cowboys owner Jones said. "It's important not only that our players have confidence in the coach we bring in, but he's also got to be able to sustain the level we've been playing at."

Jones said he expects to begin making contact with the top choice this week, and although the team has no timetable to make the decision, it likely will be done by March 1.

Assistant leads Indiana to victory

By FRANK ELTMAN
Associated Press Writer

Dan Dakich is no Bobby Knight. And for that, Indiana fans are probably grateful.

When Knight was ejected with two technical fouls early in the second half, Dakich, Indiana's assistant coach, engineered an 11-point rally that culminated in the 14th-ranked Hoosiers' 87-83 overtime victory over Ohio State.

"As the game wore on, particularly in the last 16 of 17 minutes of the game, I thought the Indiana coaching got a lot better," Knight said. "I thought the officiating must have been better also."

Dakich preferred to credit others. "This game was all due to our players," Dakich said.

"Knight has been ejected from two exhibitions - one of them this season - and two Big Ten games in 23 years at Indiana. Both technical Wednesday night, which came 69 seconds apart, were for arguing with officials.

Elsewhere Wednesday night, No. 7 Kentucky beat Alabama 82-67, No. 16 Wisconsin topped Michigan State 87-62, Marquette upset No. 17 Alabama-Birmingham 58-54, No. 18 Saint Louis beat Dayton 94-75, Virginia stopped No. 21 Maryland 73-66, Iowa beat No. 22 Minnesota 92-88, and No. 24 Florida edged Auburn 68-67.

Ohio State made three free throws on Knight's technicals and scored on the possession after each to take a 49-38 lead with 14:49 to go. After that, Indiana scored 10 consecutive points to get back into the game.

The Hoosiers (13-4, 6-2 Big Ten) extended the nation's longest home winning streak to 40 games.

Pat Graham scored 29 points for Indiana. Just 21 seconds into the game, Hoosiers forward Brian Evans dislocated his right shoulder for the second time this season. Lawrence Funderburke scored 29 for Ohio State (9-10, 2-6).

No. 7 Kentucky 82, Alabama 67

Rodrick Rhodes and Anthony Epps each scored five points during a 12-1 spurt as Kentucky stopped visiting Alabama. Kentucky (17-3, 7-2 Southeastern Conference) opened the second half with an 11-3 spurt. Alabama (10-7, 6-3) had won five in a row.

No. 16 Wisconsin 87, Michigan State 62

Michael Finley scored 32 points - 25 in the first half - to pace Wisconsin.

Texas Tech hauls in fine crop of football recruits

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

In early December, Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes sat down with his staff to target which recruits they really wanted.

They knew they'd soon have to replace running back Byron "Bam" Morris and 1992 All-America Lloyd Hill at wide receiver. Other positions were important, too, but those were the keys.

The Red Raiders more than met their needs Wednesday, getting two top running backs and five quality receivers in their 25-man recruiting class that was among the best in the Southwest Conference.

"I think it's the best class I've ever had," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "We didn't sign many defensive players, so it's an out-of-balance class, but that was the plan we started with. We got a lot of offensive guys that will have to play right away."

Also making an impressive showing was Texas A&M, which faces a one-year ban from television and the postseason and five years of probation.

It worked as the Aggies got 25 players, many of whom were highly sought by other schools. Several who signed with A&M had even given verbal commitments earlier to other schools.

"There is not a guy on our list who was not attacked at some point about A&M," Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said.

A&M reloaded its trademark corps at running back and linebacking with Kemp running back Cedric Hodge and linebackers Trent Driver of Cleveland, Phillip Meyers of Galveston Ball and Dat Nguyen of Rockport-Fulton. They also added depth in the defensive backfield and at wide receiver.

Texas brought in a solid class of 18 players, stocked mostly with linemen. The Longhorns also signed several linebackers and defensive backs, giving new defensive coordinator Gary Darnell plenty to work with.

"They fill the holes and dot different spots that give us depth as we go into the 1994 season," UT coach John Mackovic said. "We do have some good linemen. I think that was the area that just seemed to have just a lot of good prospects this year."

Baylor's class is highlighted by several skill players, including running backs Dion Marion, who led Killeen to a state title as a junior in 1991 but sat out last season because of grades, and Anthony Hodge of Tatum.

The Bears added quarterbacks Rodney Smith of Waco University and Jeff Watson of A&M Consolidated. Both combine a strong arm with fleet feet, much like departing starter J.J. Joe.

But the biggest news concerning Baylor's class was the absence of Converse Judson running back Jerod Douglas, who led the Rockets to consecutive Class 5A Division I championships and is the all-time leading 5A rusher.

He verbally committed to Baylor, but by Wednesday night his mother had not signed the necessary forms that would allow him attend the school. She's said before she wanted her son to attend Texas.

Houston hauled in a well-rounded 26-man class that includes Silsbee running back Jay McGuire, best known for rushing 400-plus yards in one game this season.

Rice's recruiting season was slowed by the defection of coach Fred Goldsmith to Duke and the subsequent hiring of Ken Hatfield.

Still, the Owls signed 14 players, including quarterback Chad Nelson, who this season led Lewisville to its first 5A title.

Southern Methodist continued moving its program forward with each recruiting class. This season, coach Tom Rossley got eight linemen out of his 17 signees, including offensive lineman Patrick Byrd of Dallas Carter.

"This has a chance to be our best class to date," Rossley said. "What jumps out about them the most is that they all come from winning programs. We need to have a winning attitude at SMU and this should help."

Texas Christian's 24-man class is highlighted by several quality running backs, most notably John Williams of Odessa Permian. He'll be competing for carries against Basil Mitchell of Mount Pleasant and Marcus Sanders of Denton.

The SWC did a good job this year of keeping top players at home. Of the top players that left the state, Tennessee likely was the best invader.

Running backs Mark Levine of Dallas Skyline and Andre Richardson of Dallas Carter, plus Stephenville quarterback Brandon Stewart all committed to become Volunteers, but the school was holding its list until this afternoon.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been told I have fibrocystic disease of my breasts. Six months ago, several lumps were discovered in my left breast. I had a mammogram and an ultrasound. The ultrasound showed that I had multiple cysts in both breasts. I was referred to a specialist in women's breasts. She is following me with ultrasound every three months and recommended I discontinue my Provera and Premarin hormone. I am also off caffeine.

What is the treatment for multiple cysts of the breasts? What causes these cysts? My physician mentioned several options; one was mastectomy. I'm 55 years old and very concerned about what may happen in the future and really don't know much about the disease and how worried I should be. Will these cysts become cancer?

DEAR READER: It is important to know what you are actually dealing with in terms of types of cell changes. However, most women who have such cysts are not at any increased risk of breast cancer. Probably less than 4 percent of women with such cysts develop breast cancer. These are the ones that have atypical breast cells. It follows that whether you have a significant increase in risk or not depends on the characteristics of the cells. If your doctor is concerned about that risk, she may want to study tissue specimens from a biopsy.

When you think of the risk of breast cancer, keep in mind that at least half of the women in the childbearing years have such cysts. Obviously half of all women don't develop breast cancer. Often the cysts disappear. The fact that it is a cyst can be identified by inserting a needle and withdrawing fluid. Any cells in the fluid can be studied.

The cysts are apparently related to hormones. They are not common after the menopause. In contrast, most cases of breast cancer occur after the menopause. Over 75 percent of breast cancers do occur in women past age 55.

Since you are concerned about breast cancer, I'm sending you my new Special Report 149, The Breast Cancer Dilemma. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/149, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Stopping estrogen in your case may help. Sometimes progesterone and anti-estrogen hormones are prescribed, in addition to measures to minimize symptoms.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Two months ago, I had what seemed to be the flu. Then I developed sharp pains in my chest that were worse when I was lying down. Often I had to sit-up to relieve the pain. I'm a 26-year-old female and knew it couldn't be a heart attack. It was so bad I saw my doctor, and after X-rays and listening to my chest, he said I had pericarditis. He gave me Relafen which controlled the pain, but when I stopped it, the pain came back. What causes pericarditis? Is there anything I can do to get rid of it?

DEAR READER: Pericarditis means inflammation of the sac around the heart. It often occurs along with what seems like a respiratory infection. Actually, a significant number of cases are caused by viruses, and the virus may also cause pleurisy. Your doctor probably was able to hear the rubbing sound the heart makes when it rubs against the inflamed sac.

Usually, it goes away on its own, but various medicines to relieve pain, such as Relafen, are often prescribed. In severe cases, prednisone steroid is prescribed. A few individuals do have recurrent attacks, but usually the one attack is all that happens and you recover without any residual effects.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was diagnosed as having diabetes a year ago. I'm 37 years old. My blood glucose was almost 400. I weighed 189 pounds then. My weight is now down to 130, and I do not take any medications for my diabetes. It is controlled by my diet. I'm on a 1,600-calorie-a-day diet now.

Will eating things with sugar make it go up a lot if I still stay at 1,600 calories? I also like a couple of light beers sometimes. Will this make my blood sugar go up a lot? The beers I drink have 64 calories and are 7-ounce bottles. I am very concerned.

DEAR READER: Congratulations. It takes a lot of effort to lose 59 pounds. That was the most important thing you could do to help control your diabetes. Many "diabetics" who are significantly overweight are greatly benefited by weight loss and a proper diet. Your story is a good example of that. Studies have been done with men returning to live the natural life — meaning in a semi-survival situation away from civilization. In those studies, the dietary changes, along with physical activity, produced remarkably good results in many rather severe diabetics.

I am not concerned a great deal with an occasional beer since your diabetes is controlled without either insulin or various medicines. You are not likely to have the hypoglycemic reactions that can occur in diabetics who must take medicine to control their blood glucose level. Sweets are more likely to raise your blood glucose significantly. After all, they cause a rise in non-diabetics as well. It is probably best that you avoid these, or if you must indulge, do so as part of a regular meal, not just a sweet all by itself. You need to also realize that sweets often stimulate a person's appetite and they are high-calorie foods.

Get quality, value from textile products

How keen is your shopping IQ when buying clothing and home textile products? Most shoppers now that "value" means far more than just price — that quality, style, fit, design and color are all important when selecting these products.

Quality is probably the most important element in getting your money's worth, however, and there are specific things to look for that can make you a smarter clothing and home textile shopper.

Check for strong seams. Light should not show through easily when a seam is gently stretched.

Check buttons and buttonholes. Are buttonhole edges tightly sewn? Are buttons secure, and do they have adequate space behind them for easy buttoning?

Check binding on cut edges and seams. They should be bound well enough to prevent fraying.

Check for deep hems and seams. Is there adequate fabric for at least minor lengthening or enlarging of a garment?

Check for different materials in the same garment. For instance, a suede collar on a cloth garment may require more expensive "spot" cleaning.

Check care labels. They tell you whether a garment should be laundered, dry cleaned or washed by hand.

Check labels that identify the country where the product was made. Sizes of foreign-made garments can vary or be stated in unfamiliar terms, whereas Americans usually find that U.S. made garments provide more consistent sizing and dependable fit.

Federal law requires that country-of-origin labels be affixed securely and conspicuously to textile products. That's good, because research confirms that American consumers overwhelmingly believe U.S. made clothing provides better quality, value, fit and style than foreign-made clothing — particularly garments from the Far East. The high correlation of dry cleaning complaints associated with foreign-made garments supports this confidence.

Don't Assume Imports Cost Less

In terms of price, some consumers believe that imported clothing costs less. Since 1985, however, the average price that consumers have paid for imported clothing has either exceeded or equaled the average price of U.S. made clothing.

Many consumers also recognize another benefit from buying U.S. made textile products: It helps save U.S. manufacturing jobs, and studies show that manufacturing jobs are particularly critical to a healthy economy. When you can help save a job and get top quality and value, both your pocketbook and the nation's economy are winners.

Give every child healthy start

No matter how happy you are about having a baby, it's common to feel sick in the morning during the early stages of pregnancy, according to Healthy Start, a federal program providing advice on staying well and having a healthy baby.

"Morning sickness," characterized by an upset stomach and mild vomiting when you wake up, often occurs in the first three months of pregnancy. It can be caused by certain hormones that are produced by a woman's body when she is pregnant, or by a lack of Vitamin B or glycogen, the natural sugar stored in your liver.

Feeling sick or throwing up is particularly unpleasant on an empty stomach. In most cases, morning sickness eventually goes away, but Healthy Start offers tips that could ease it:

- Before going to sleep, try a protein-rich snack, such as lean meat or cheese. Protein takes longer to digest.
- Put crackers beside your bed and nibble on them before you get up on in the morning.
- Eat small but frequent meals throughout the day. Relax and eat slowly.
- Drink fruit juice right after breakfast.
- Take extra Vitamin B.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I work for an electronics service center and have received several calls from distraught microwave owners who upon buying a new unit have ruined the door front while trying to remove the manufacturer's stickers.

Chemicals which should never be used are fingernail-polish remover, ammonia, cleansers and paint thinners. These chemicals even when used in the smallest amount can cause scratches or discoloration, and some may even spread into an enormous spot.

We recommend using a penetrating lubricant oil and a soft cloth. Use care when rubbing because, as with any plastic surface, it can be scratched easily.

Just a reminder: Most manufacturer warranties will not cover any physical damage. I personally would recommend an immediate call to the consumer affairs department of the manufacturer to report the damage. Some manufacturers will work directly with the consumer to resolve the problem. — Connie Curtis, Omaha, Neb.

Thanks for sharing this invaluable information with us. You may just save someone from making a grave mistake.

A leading manufacturer said your information sounds good and recommends cooking oil to soften the stickers. — Heloise

SEAM RIPPER

Dear Heloise: I use a large seam ripper to remove can labels and to remove seals on bottles. — Evelyn Keng, Splendora, Texas

MYSTERIOUS PARTS?

Dear Heloise: We move many times, so after many moves we have accumulated multiple little mysterious things we don't know the origin of or what item they belong with (screws, strange plastic pieces, etc.).

What we do now is when we have an item that has additional parts, we store these parts in a plastic bag and on the outside mark what the item is, of course using a permanent marker.

We also have a bag of things of unknown origin so that in the future we will either find their homes or they can go into the trash. — Debbie Shahan, Fort Hood, Texas

DURABLE BOOKMARKS

Dear Heloise: As an avid reader, I came across an idea for a durable bookmark.

I bought a poly (vinyl) binder, cut it into strips and made myself 20 bookmarks. I've mailed a few to relatives already, and here's one for you. — Connie Kent, Staten Island, N.Y.

Thanks a bunch for the complimentary bookmark! — Heloise

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 796000, San Antonio TX 78279-6000 or fax it to 210-HELQISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Supermarket grand opening

Owners, employees and Hereford Hustlers joined on Wednesday at the new Taylor and Sons store in Sugarland Mall for the official ribbon cutting of the business. Taylor and Sons operated at U.S. 385 and Park Avenue for 38 years before moving the family-owned market to its current location in the fall of 1993. Joining in the celebration were store manager Robert Griffith and his wife, Carol, holding the large scissors; Mable Taylor, mother of owner Wilford Taylor, beside Carol Griffith; Wilford Taylor, behind his mother; his wife, Norma and granddaughter, Autumn, beside Mable Taylor; and Jack and Helen Taylor, second and third from left, aunt and uncle of Wilford Taylor. Also present were employees of the 19,000-square-foot market.

Search still on for missing boy

AUSTIN (AP) - The search for a missing 3-1/2-month-old boy intensified today after the woman accused of kidnapping him and fleeing to Independence, Kan., was returned to Texas late Wednesday to face state and federal charges.

FBI agents and Independence police arrested Cathy Lynn Henderson, 37, about 11:40 a.m. Tuesday at an apartment in Independence that she had rented under an assumed name, officials said.

Mrs. Henderson, an unregistered day care provider, had been babysitting for Brandon Baugh and his sister, Megan, 2-1/2; and her own 4-year-old daughter, Jennifer.

Mrs. Henderson and Brandon disappeared the evening of Jan. 21. Ms. Henderson left the two other children with an in-law's daughter.

"There are some very promising leads in terms of solving this case, and we are acting on them now. I can't be more specific," Travis County Sheriff Terry Keel said late Wednesday.

Max Gieman, an FBI agent in Kansas City, emphasized that no trace of Brandon was found in Kansas City.

"We are not optimistic about the health of the child," Gieman said. "We really haven't found any trace of the child as having been here."

The FBI said Mrs. Henderson has a history of drug use and had lost custody of two of her children.

Authorities said Mrs. Henderson would appear before a U.S. magistrate today in Austin to determine legal representation and perhaps bond.

Mrs. Henderson was accompanied by a man when she applied for the Independence apartment on Jan. 25, one week before her arrest, but said nothing about having a child. The male companion, who was in the apartment when Mrs. Henderson was arrested, said he knew nothing of her past.

Byron Sage, special agent in charge of the Austin and Waco offices of the FBI, said Mrs. Henderson was trying to obtain identification when she was arrested. "There is some indication she was in the process of securing an identity," he said.

Mrs. Henderson met for four hours Wednesday morning with federal public defender Ronald Hall in Kansas City. Later, U.S. Magistrate Robert E. Larsen called a hearing in which Mrs. Henderson waived her rights to an extradition hearing, and she agreed to be returned to Texas immediately.

Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Henderson was whisked out the back door of the federal building in downtown Kansas City wearing a sweatshirt, orange jail fatigues and leg irons and handcuffs. She was hurried into an unmarked car and taken to her flight to Austin.

Her hair dyed dark auburn, Mrs. Henderson, smiling as she was led away, made no comment to reporters. The plane carrying her landed at Robert Mueller Airport in Austin about 6:10 p.m. Mrs. Henderson was put in an unmarked van with tinted windows. Reporters and photographers were kept outside the gates of the facility and could not speak to Mrs. Henderson.

She was taken to the Travis County sheriff's office, served with a state warrant on a kidnapping charge, booked and led to the department's investigative division.

Mrs. Henderson's husband, Warren Henderson, told Texas investigators last week that frustration over her own custody battles could have caused Ms. Henderson to abduct Brandon.

In 1986, according to court records, a Texas judge placed her 7-year-old daughter in foster care on grounds she was in "immediate danger." Later that year, in divorce proceedings, custody of her 4-year-old daughter was awarded to her ex-husband, though Mrs. Henderson was granted visitation rights.

However, in December 1993, court records show that charges of abuse against her caused a Texas judge to cut off Mrs. Henderson's visits. Williamson County Court-at-Law Judge Robert Morse wrote that "One or more violent acts were done that created or caused some mental or emotional injury to the child," now 11.

Still, Mrs. Henderson worked as an unregistered child-care provider in her home. Texas law requires providers to be registered if they care for four or more children.

Growth hormone ready for cows

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WOODSBORO, Md. (AP) - The milk you drink may soon come from cows injected with a genetically engineered hormone that makes them produce more. And that has many grocers and dairy farmers worried: Are consumers ready for scientists to tinker with milk?

After nine years of federal government scrutiny, a bovine growth hormone goes on sale Friday for use by the nation's dairy farmers. It will be the first major test of how the public feels about using genetic engineering to produce food.

A genetically engineered enzyme has been used for years to make cheese and researchers are developing a genetically engineered tomato. But this is the first use of genetic engineering on living creatures to produce a food that traditionally has symbolized purity.

Not to worry, says Gary Grossnickle, 41, who milks 500 cows in nearby Walkersville.

"It's the most widely tested agricultural product in history," he said.

It took nine years before the Food and Drug Administration approved the product on Nov. 5. A congressionally imposed moratorium expires today on use of the hormone, and St. Louis-based Monsanto Co., which developed the drug, will begin sales Friday. Three other manufacturers are seeking FDA approval.

Then farmers will be able to order syringes loaded with a genetically engineered copy of the growth hormone that is naturally produced by cows. Because it's created artificially, the hormone is considered a drug and its use is regulated by the FDA.

No one knows how many cows from nation's 100,000-plus dairy farms will be treated with the hormone. Many farmers and the companies they sell to still worry that consumers won't accept the milk, despite government assurances that it's no different from any other.

"We want to wait to see what the public does, see how bad they stomp their feet," said Kenneth Hein, 37, whose family has 250 milk cows in Stratford, Wis.

New York state's consumer protection chief, Richard Kessel, has asked the FDA and the state agriculture officials to require that milk made with the drug be labeled if sold in New York. Both agencies refused.

The FDA concluded that the drug is safe for humans and animals, despite an increase in udder infections common among lactating cows. Any increased antibiotic residues would be screened out in the normal inspection process, FDA says. Critics say that's not enough.

"FDA's system of policing for antibiotic residues in milk and dairy products is improving, but is still woefully inadequate," said Michael Hansen, a scientist at the Consumer Policy Institute.

Residues are a problem for people allergic to antibiotics. And more antibiotics make it more likely that drug-resistant infections will develop, Hansen said.

The directors of Grossnickle's co-op have heard that message. So even if he would like to use bovine somatotropin or BST, as the product also is called, his co-op won't take the milk.

The co-op, the Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc., said in a Jan. 18 letter to its members that all its buyers had said they will not accept milk from treated cows. The letter cited a "lack of consumer acceptance."

- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.
