YOUNG FARMERS JUNIOR STOCK SHOW
Special Section, Inside

Stock show is not just animal beauty pageant

By DIANNA F. DANRIDGE
Staff Writer

It's not every steer, hog, sheep or goat that gets full-day beauty treatment, but for the 320 animals featured this week at the annual Hereford Jr. Farmers Livestock Show, it's a common enough event.

For the 117 youngsters, ages 9-20, who have put in hours preparing these animals, it is more than just a beauty pageant. It stands for pride, responsibility and a desire to perpetuate the ag industry.

These young people have worked with their animals on cold mornings and hot afternoons. They've learned to keep records on feeding, vetting, break-even costs, and cost of production.

They've learned how to handle the animals and what it takes to be a good showman. Each youngster hopes the animal being shown will place high enough to go on to one of the major stock shows in Houston, Ft. Worth, or San Antonio.

But even for those who don't go any further, the experience is well worth their efforts.

Jenna Schlabs, a sixth-grader who has been showing for at least three years, said she has learned some very good life values and skills from raising the animals.

Jenna previously showed only lambs, but this year she will show her first hog.

Jenna is not the first in her family to show stock. With four siblings who have shown livestock, she has a lot of competition just in her family.

"Giving up the animals is really hard sometime," she said. "But, Mom has started a savings account for all of us for when we go to college."

Jenna says she wants to be a veterinarian.

Youth involved in 4-H or FFA, from Deaf Smith and the four surrounding counties, are eligible to enter the Young Farmers Junior Stock Show.

This year a few rule changes (such as out-of-county exhibitors will not be allowed to participate in the auction) may have led to a decreased number of entrants, but officials consider the earlier date of the major shows to have more to do with the decrease than other factors.

Deaf Smith County Agricultural Extension Agent Dennis Newton said, "This is a great learning experience for the kids. For many of them, it is the first time they have ever had the responsibility of another living thing. It's also the first time they ever get to show off a year's worth of work."

Newton said that in today's world the opportunities to be involved in a truly family-oriented program are limited, but stock shows offer parents and all the kids opportunities to become involved and to help out.

"That's what 4-H and ag programs are all about - a cooperative effort to make lives work," Newton said.

Stock shows though aren't just for the well-off, however.

Many residents who have stock are willing to let children from low-income families have a young animal to raise, just to get them involved and allow them the experience of raising an animal.

"Stock shows are a family event, a community event and a great character builder," Newton said. "I only hope that lots of folks will come out and applaud and show the kids they appreciate their efforts," he said.

"It's just like a football game or other sporting event. The players need the fans to cheer them on," he said.

More than 2,600 schools win performance awards

AUSTIN (AP) - Nearly four of every 10 Texas public school campuses have won cash awards for student performance.

The Texas Successful School Awards System gives cash to campuses with high levels of student achievement or for increases in student performance.

State Education Commissioner Mike Moses announced Friday that 2,668 schools - 39.1 percent of public campuses - will get a total of about $2 million.

Those campuses also are eligible for a share of $500,000 set aside by lawmakers to reward innovative ways that increase the number of parents or guardians who attend parent-teacher conferences.

Area schools that made the list are Aikman Elementary, Northwest Elementary and West Central Elementary in Hereford; Adrian School; Friona High School; and Vega Elementary and Vega High schools.

Schools that earn the highest ratings of "exemplary" or "recognized" under Texas' school accountability system automatically get awards of $500 to $5,000, based on their student attendance.

Schools that are rated as "acceptable" in the accountability system also can qualify for a TSSAS award if they rank in the top 25 percent of their campus comparison group for reading and mathematics passing rates on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills.

BEEF BROUHAHA

Plaintiffs hammer on Oprah outtakes

AMARILLO (AP) - Cattlemen who believe a 1996 episode of "The Oprah Winfrey Show" unfairly portrayed the risks of U.S. beef and mad cow disease used a few high-tech tricks of their own in court Friday.

In rapid succession, jurors saw nine incidents in which Ms. Winfrey and co-defendant Howard Lyman referred to the feeding of processed livestock to cattle as "feeding cows to cows," or in similar terms.

The idea was to demonstrate how the program tried hammering home the theme, which the plaintiffs said was unfair.

"We're not creating any cannibals," testified plaintiff Bill O'Brien, owner of Texas Beef Group, an Amarillo-based feeding operation.

Winfrey attorney Charles Babcock later presented a series of stand-alone statements of his own, mostly made by his client. Almost all were softened by cautionary phrases like "could" and "may."

Babcock pounced on O'Brien when he complained

Ms. Winfrey's remarks were taken out of context. "That's exactly what you were doing this morning," Babcock said. "You were taking a few words and you were characterizing them."

Plaintiffs also complained that remarks promoting beef safety were edited out, resulting in consumers panicked about the threat of the disease in the United States.

One example of a clip that didn't make it into the show featured William Hueston, a mad cow expert for the Agriculture Department at the time, who said: "I was in Great Britain last week and ate beef. I'll go back next week and eat beef."

The practice of rendering dead livestock into pelletized feed was common in England until it was discovered that mad cow disease, or bovine spongiform encephalopathy, probably was spreading that way.

Fred Fox, chief appraiser of the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, won't be looking at the big county map after Jan. 30, because that's when his retirement starts.

Fox has had three careers here

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Brand Publisher

After Jan. 30, Fred Fox won't care what your property's worth.

That's because he's retiring as chief appraiser of the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District. The appraisal district is the agency that determines what property in the county is worth -- and that will determine how much you pay in taxes.

The appraisal district will honor Fox with a retirement party Monday afternoon, but a few of his friends may remember him best while working at two other careers in Hereford.

Fox spent 11 years with Deaf Smith Electric Co-Op, then 12 years with West Texas Rural Telephone before going to work about 23 years ago as tax assessor-collector for the Hereford Independent School District. The school job evolved into a dual position five years later in 1980 when Fox was named chief appraiser of the new combined appraisal district.

The retirement party is a come-and-go affair from 2 to 5 p.m. Monday in the appraisal district office, 140 E. Third.

Fox has been known to "wet a line" whenever possible, so some extra fishing trips figure in his retirement plans. He also noted that he and his wife, Peggy, "have plenty of grandkids to go visit."

Born in Hidalgo County in South Texas, Fox was raised in Sulphur Springs. He graduated from high school in Como, just outside Sulphur Springs.

Fox came to Hereford in 1951 while working with a contractor on installing power lines in the county. He liked Hereford and decided to stay when Deaf Smith Electric Co-Op offered him a job as a lineman and troubleshooter. When he went to work for DSREC, it was in the same building with West Texas Rural Telephone. They split in 1962 and Fox went with the telephone company. He became line superintendent during his 12 years with WTRT.

A serious accident in April 1974 changed the course of his life. Fox was working on a 100-foot tower near Muleshoe when it collapsed, and he rode it to the ground, falling about 70 feet. Fox said the tower tumbled as it went down, causing him to land on his back under the tower. He sustained serious facial, back and leg injuries.

"I had plastic surgery on my face. That's why I'm not near as good-looking as I used to be," Fox joked. Both legs were in casts for many weeks.

It was near the end of 1974 before Fox could think about going back to work. He was offered a job with the school district as a trainee to replace the tax assessor-collector, who was planning to retire.

Fox went to work with HISD in January 1975, and he has been wearing the dual hats as school tax assessor-collector/appraisal district chief since 1980. The Texas Legislature passed a bill in 1979 creating appraisal districts, which required local taxing entities to combine their offices.

Fox did a lot of work in 1980 in preparing the city, county and school to combine their tax offices. The new board appointed him as chief appraiser and he formally started that job in January 1981.

Fox said the action combined all the records of the local taxing entities

ASIAN CRISIS

Study finds U.S. could lose 1 million jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. merchandise trade deficit, already at record levels, will head higher because of the currency crisis in Asia, costing more than 1 million American jobs, a labor-backed think tank is forecasting.

"The recent collapse of Asian currencies and financial markets will have severe economic consequences for the United States," the Economic Policy Institute said Friday.

The study, titled "American Jobs and the Asian Crisis," said a flood of Asian goods made suddenly cheaper by currency devaluations would drive up the trade deficit by $100 billion to $200 billion over the next two years.

The deficit in goods was running at a record annual rate of close to $200 billion in 1997, up from $191 billion in 1996. These deficit levels already have prompted attacks on President Clinton's trade policies and were a contributing factor in Congress' refusal to grant him new trade negotiating authority last fall.

The EPI report said California, New York, Texas and North Carolina would be the hardest hit states, but that all 50 would suffer job losses from the Asian currency devaluations. It predicted the job losses would range from 1.1 million to 2.1 million.

The study concluded Texas would lose 65,024 jobs. The institute said that while the adverse unemployment effects from a swelling trade deficit could be offset by aggressive interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve, it was not certain the central bank would act quickly enough.

"There is going to be serious harm here, no matter how well and how quickly the Fed reacts," said EPI president Jeff Faux.

Many private economists have said a rising trade deficit will be the biggest negative impact on the U.S. economy from the Asian turmoil, which has forced South Korea, Indonesia and Thailand to seek more than $100 billion in bailout relief.

County commissioners

Deaf Smith County commissioners will meet at 8 a.m. Monday in the commissioners courtroom at the courthouse, 235 E. 3rd. The commissioners will discuss the 1998 programming events for the county extension office, appoint members to the child welfare board, consider extension of the lease with the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, and adopt new street names for the San Jose community.

Democratic ballot

Democratic voters will be able to let the state party know where they stand on three propositions approved for the March 10 primary ballot.

The three nonbinding propositions are:

1. Do you support a change in law requiring health maintenance organizations (HMO) to offer Texans an option to choose their own doctor?
2. Do you support a constitutional amendment prohibiting sales taxes on food and medicine?
3. Do you support a plan to better recruit and retain qualified teachers in Texas classrooms and to make computers accessible for education to all students in Texas public schools?

Filing begins Feb. 16

Filing will begin Feb. 16 for four seats on the Hereford City Commission. The filing will run through March 18.

The election will be May 2, with all ballots to be cast at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

Early voting will be April 15-28.

Voters will be asked to elect two at-large commissioners, as well as fill two single-member district spots.

The at-large seats are now held by Roger Eades and Carey Black; the single-member district seats are held by Eugene Condarco, Place 2; and Wayne Winget, Place 4.

Ex-Beatle sings at Carl Perkins' funeral

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) - George Harrison took acoustic guitar in hand and paid musical tribute to rock 'n' roll pioneer Carl Perkins, singing Perkins' early tune "Your True Love" at his funeral.

Harrison was among fans and entertainers who packed a Lambuth University auditorium Friday to remember Perkins, a contemporary of Elvis Presley - he wrote "Blue Suede Shoes" - and a key influence on generations of rockers.

Known for his lightning-quick guitar playing, Perkins was famed as one of the proponents of rockabilly, a cross of rhythm-and-blues and country music that came out of Sun Records in Memphis, Tenn., in the mid-1950s.

"Carl was the coolest cat I know," Wynonna Judd said in her eulogy. "When I watched him, I realized I could only wish to be that cool."

Perkins, 65, died Monday from complications from a series of strokes.

Animated

Don Cumpton, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, makes a point in his own animated style Friday during the chamber's annual directors retreat at the Hereford Country Club. The retreat, which constitutes a regular board meeting, also features installation of new directors and offices, as well as providing an overview of tasks the chamber will include in its operation for the coming year. The new board also is preparing for the annual chamber banquet, which will be Feb. 20 at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn. Texas Gov. George W. Bush will be the keynote speaker.

Ex-intern may admit affair with Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) - Monica Lewinsky is offering to testify that she did have a sexual relationship with President Clinton, if Whitewater prosecutors will give her immunity from perjury, a source familiar with the negotiations said today.

Such a posture leaves open, however, what Ms. Lewinsky would say on the most serious allegations against Clinton: whether he or his friend, Vernon Jordan, encouraged her to lie about the relationship under oath.

The developments came as Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, the Whitewater prosecutor, was continuing to subpoena witnesses and gather evidence in the probe of whether Clinton conspired to cover up the alleged affair with Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern.

Her chief lawyer, William Ginsburg, met Friday with Starr in the first volley of negotiations on a possible plea agreement for the young woman. She signed a sworn affidavit on Jan. 7 explicitly denying any sexual relationship with Clinton and would face perjury charges if that document no longer squares with her story.

questions of "honor and trust" in light of last year's budget-balancing deal between the White House and Congress, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said today.

Lott, R-Miss., commented in the Republicans' weekly radio address as Clinton prepared to deliver his State of the Union address Tuesday night, and to submit his fiscal 1999 budget on Feb. 2.

They also come as the president fights allegations that he had a sexual relationship with a young White House intern and subsequently asked her to lie about it.

Lott did not mention the bombshell accusations against Clinton, which have dominated news cycles since Wednesday.

"I want to make it clear that our concern about what the president may propose in his speech isn't just a matter of money," Lott said. "It's a matter of honor and trust. Will the president and Congress honor the commitments we made to you last year in the balanced-budget agreement?"

After warning that Republicans hoped Clinton would not propose "a long list of new spending initiatives," the Senate leader added, "I can answer the question for the Republican Congress. Our answer is: We gave you our word. We intend to keep it."

Wildlife officials worry about illness killing deer

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) - The emaciated mule deer stares blankly into space. Then, stumbling in small circles, it falls over dead, another victim of chronic wasting disease.

It is a grim sight for wildlife officials working in the Rocky Mountains on the border of Colorado and Wyoming, one of only two spots in the world where the disease has appeared.

The National Institutes of Health is investigating because mad cow disease, similar to the chronic wasting disease that has struck mule deer and elk, has been linked to a brain-wasting malady in humans - Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease - that has killed 20 people in Europe.

"We know there's a link between the diseases, not a causal link necessarily, but they're the same kind of disease," said Byron Caughey, biochemist at the NIH's Rocky Mountain Laboratories in Hamilton, Mont.

About 6 percent of mule deer in the area of northern Colorado and southern Wyoming suffer from chronic wasting disease, or CWD, said Todd Malmsbury, spokesman for the Colorado Division of Wildlife in Denver.

A month before the broadcast, the British government linked BSE to a similar human sickness. The practice was outlawed in the United States last summer.

A plaintiffs' chart showed that most of what Lyman said made it into the final cut, while only a fraction of the statements by Hueston and beef industry spokesman Gary Weber were left in.

Jurors had seen both the uncut and edited versions of the April 16, 1996, program on Wednesday.

A group of Texas cattlemen claim the show triggered a market plunge that cost them $10.3 million in the weeks following the show. They're also seeking unspecified punitive damages from Ms. Winfrey, her production company and Lyman, whose grave warnings about beef prompted the host to announce on the air that she was swearing off hamburgers.

O'Brien detailed how the West Texas cattle market crashed to 10-year lows in the wake of the show. He cited industry figures showing a drop from 62 cents per pound on April 16 to 55 cents eight days later.

"The Oprah show scared people and scared the markets," said O'Brien, who described the cattle market as "dead" in the days following the airing. "The markets reacted to the way the show was produced and the way it was delivered."

The defense blames the beef industry's price drop on drought and other factors.

The lawsuit is based on a 1995 Texas law holding liable anyone who makes "false and defamatory" statements about perishable food products.

into one office, effecting a tremendous savings in the total tax system. The district contracted with the school to open the offices in renovated space in the old West Central School building.

The appraisal office stayed there until 1991, when the former law offices of Witherspoon, Langley and Aikin at 140 E. Third were purchased.

"We didn't really realize just how crowded we were until we moved into the new offices," said Fox. "The building has fit us like a glove."

Fox's father died before he came to Hereford. He moved his mother here about a year after he came, and she later died in Hereford. Fred has no brothers or sisters.

He had been in Hereford several years when he met Peggy Lytal. They discovered they were raised just 30 miles apart in South Texas, but the couple didn't meet until both had settled in Hereford. After what Fox termed a "whirlwind courtship," they were married Jan. 16, 1955.

They have two children, Kevin, who lives in Silver City, N.M., and Karen Taylor, who lives in Canyon. Kevin has four sons and one daughter; Karen has two sons.

Asked about the changes he's seen in the tax district over the years, Fox said the major changes included the consolidation of the taxing entity offices, and the change in tax rolls when cattle were exempt. Another big change came when banks were assessed for taxes in a different manner.

"We've seen local entities having to require steady increases in tax dollars, even though they were operating efficiently," said Fox. "I've always been optimistic that we could maintain our tax base and grow a little."

Fox said this county has been fortunate that "we didn't lose values like some of the counties with large oil companies on the tax roll. Hopefully, the the Hereford Economic Development Corp. will help increase the tax base here, and that could slow the increase in tax rates."

Fox said he was pleased to see Danny Jones appointed to succeed him.

"Danny has a lot of experience and I believe he will make a good chief appraiser," Fox said.

Court agrees to decide COBRA issue

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court agreed Friday to decide whether a federal law assuring continued health coverage for fired and laid-off workers applies to people also covered by their spouse's health insurance plan.

The justices will use a dispute from St. Louis to resolve conflicting federal appeals court rulings on the scope of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA).

The case acted on stems from James Geissal's 1993 firing from his job at the Moore Medical Corp. An employee for seven years, Geissal had participated in Moore's group health plan.

Geissal, who had cancer, also was a beneficiary of the health plan provided by his wife's employer, Trans World Airlines. The deductibles under the TWA plan were greater, however.

When fired, Geissal elected to continue his coverage under Moore's plan. He paid the required premiums for about six months before Moore officials told him he was ineligible for COBRA benefits because of his coverage under TWA's group policy.

Moore returned the six months worth of premiums Geissal had paid and refused to pay bills submitted by his health care providers.

Geissal sued in federal court, but died before a federal judge ruled against him. His widow, Bonnie, was allowed to pursue the lawsuit against Moore.

Couples want flexibility to support each other

NEW YORK (AP) - Once upon a time, he climbed the corporate ladder and she worked to help make ends meet. Today, that's more and more a fairy tale.

Working couples, who now make up 45 percent of the labor force, mostly view their careers as equal in importance, and they want the flexibility to support each other's career needs, according to a study released today.

Many of the nation's 28 million dual earners see a second family income as giving them the freedom to take career risks - including quitting their jobs if they aren't satisfied, the yearlong study by the Catalyst group found.

"A significant portion of the labor force finds economic independence, security and satisfaction in the family's second income," said Sheila Wellington, president of Catalyst, which works to help women in business advance.

The study, based on a survey of 800 dual-earners and interviews with 25 couples, helps dispel the myth that men are the breadwinners in most families. Married women who work full-time earn an average of 41 percent of family income, according to the Department of Labor.

Yet despite the sheer number of dual-earners - and their increasing appearance in management ranks - "employers know very little about how these couples function and what they want in the workplace," said the Catalyst report, "Two Careers, One Marriage: Making it Work in the Workplace."

In 53 percent of working couples surveyed, one partner's career is considered as important as the other's.

Even "primary" earners bend to the other's career. More than 35 percent of primary earners said they had made themselves available for emergency child care; 13 percent had turned down a job relocation.

Given dual-earners' needs to accommodate to each other, flexible work was crucial to them.

Almost two-thirds of men and three-quarters of women want the option to control the pace of their advancement, slowing it when family responsibilities called, without harming their careers, the study found.

Further, if given a promotion, nearly half of respondents would prefer more time off instead of getting more money.

Surprisingly, men were also eager for more flexible hours, Catalyst said. Almost one in four men have worked a flexible schedule, and nearly half would look for formal flexible schedules in a new employer.

The annual Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show gets underway Tuesday and the judging starts Wednesday. A special supplement in today's Brand includes information on the show, a list of entrants, and photos as well as an overview of last year's winners.

The special section is made possible by businesses who support this fine project for local youngsters. We hope readers will take time to look over the section and that interested residents will attend the show. The annual sale will start at 12:30 p.m. next Saturday.

Are you a bridge or domino player? These two games must be the primary pastimes for many folks in Hereford.

When Lavon and I married more than 46 years ago, I wanted her to learn how to play bridge so that we could join some friends in a club. After I attempted to teach her the basics, she "passed." She declared the game was too complicated. After working all day she didn't want to concentrate that much on a game.

But a few more lessons whetted her appetite for the card game and we soon joined a club of friends who were playing. She was hooked. Today, I jokingly tell people that I created a monster. She has a sweat shirt that a friend made for her and emblazoned on the front is: "I'd rather be playing Bridge."

When we are visiting with relatives or friends out of town and they ask Lavon what she does for fun, I answer for her. "She belongs to 29 bridge clubs," I say with a little exaggeration. She hasn't hit me, yet.

We enjoy the game. First, it's a unique game with every hand seemingly offering a new challenge. Secondly, it provides an opportunity for fun and fellowship with friends.

Speaking of games, I read a column in another paper the other day that brought home a good point. The lady remarked that she's noticed that some game players continually complain about not drawing good cards or dominos.

"I think that one of the important, unwritten, rules of any game is to play to the best of your ability the cards or dominos drawn."

Isn't that one of the unwritten rules of life? If life hands you a lemon, make lemonade. Sometimes good fortune smiles at us and sometimes it does not. Even when we draw "bad hands," we still have to do our best and win or lose with class. We're sure not going to win, either, if we tell our opponent we've got a bad hand. That's life!

We notice that "paparazzi" has been chosen as word of the year by Webster's New World College Dictionary.

Most of us didn't know what the word meant before Princess Diana was killed in an auto accident while being chased by a pack of celebrity-hunting photographers. Before it became a household word, some folks might have thought it was a new kind of pizza.

Webster's Dictionary explains paparazzi is an "Exotic," a foreign term co-opted from Italian into English to describe something new because no existing English word filled the bill.

Originally written in italics, it increasingly shows up in Roman type in recent years. Despite this descent into the linguistic melting pot of English, says Webster's, it retains its ordinal Italian plural ending, (i), as well as a distinctive Italian singular form, paparazzo.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

In the fast-paced health care world, we sometimes move so rapidly to new technology and new ideas that we don't take time to reflect on our accomplishments of the past.

For the past several years, Hereford Regional Medical Center has moved steadily ahead by looking at the past, thinking about the future, and making the right decisions at the right time.

HRMC had a banner year in 1997. The commitment of the medical staff and employees, along with the strong support of the board of directors and the community resulted in a year of accomplishment and progress.

The hospital implemented some new services and new ideas. For example, the board approved the initial phase of development for a Community Health Partnership and selected 23 community leaders to serve in the partnership. They approved a new service, the David Back Clinic, which is an innovative and very successful method of treating chronic neck and back pain. This service will be a blessing in our community because of the high volume of heavy industry here.

The hospital began a second year of participation in the Children's Trust Fund. This pumped $50,000 into the community to fund programs that will benefit children and families by making their lives safer and healthier.

HRMC also is managing the Hereford Women and Children's Crisis Center, which replaces the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence center. When funding for Rape Crisis was eliminated, this needed service might have disappeared from our community, but the hospital stepped in and revived the program.

In the hospital itself, we have seen new equipment added, new quality designations earned, and areas remodeled and refurbished. We now have a new Magnetic Resonance Imaging service one day a week, a new cardiac ultrasound service, and a new cancer outpatient clinic. WorkSmart expanded to provide service for 270 contracts.

The high level of quality at the facility was recognized when the hospital, the lab, and the home health agency all accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations. The hospital's ER also was designated as a Level IV Trauma center, which is an indication of the level of training and expertise in that area.

Building on the solid foundation of last year's work, we fully expect to see HRMC expand, innovate, change and grow in 1998 and into the 21st

Show pride in our community

C'mon, people, let's show some pride. Last weekend, Annette and I spent quite a bit of time picking up trash that some folks thought we needed in our yard.

We also picked up trash that had been so kindly deposited on the vacant lot next door.

While walking around Hereford, we have seen a lot of litter that has been tossed from passing vehicles or dropped by youngsters walking home from school.

People who so casually toss litter out the window or drop when walking along our town's sidewalks are irresponsible. They're showing a lack of pride in their town and consideration for their neighbors.

That candy wrapper or beer can that's tossed out doesn't just go away. Someone has to pick it up, either the person in whose yard it winds up or a city worker.

If another resident of Hereford has to pick up the trash, then litterer is just passing a problem off on someone else -- and that's irresponsible.

If a city worker has to pick up trash, the litterer still will wind up paying to have that beer can or sandwich wrapper hauled away, because tax dollars go to pay the city employees' salaries. Litterbug, you're still paying for trash removal.

Littering also creates environmental problems. Uneaten portions of sandwiches, hamburgers or french fries left in an alley or vacant lot are magnets for rats or other creatures who could be carrying rabies or other diseases.

Then, of course, there's just this: Litter doesn't look good, and carries the potential of costing the city

DON COOPER

much more than a city worker's salary.

Litter-strewn streets present an unattractive scene for prospective employers who might be considering moving a business or industry in Hereford.

The prospect, looking at the litter in the streets, could decide that if Hereford's residents have no more pride in their community than to trash it, then that is not the type of community that will provide the business/industry with employees who take pride in their work. If that's the case, the new plant or business likely will wind up in another community.

If that happens, we all lose.

I don't think it's asking too much to put a plastic bag in your car and put your trash in it. You can put it in your own trash can when you get home. It's not a major inconvenience to just wait until you get home before throwing away your trash.

One thing I've heard over and over since moving to Hereford last summer is the residents here are proud to be in Hereford. Let's show that you really mean it; if you're proud of your community, then don't trash it.

Now consider another friend. She grew up with four siblings. She watched her father drive away when she was only 5 and then survived a series of not-to-pleasant step fathers. She, too, graduated from high school, only she graduated as a member of "Who's Who in American High Schools."

College for her was a struggle, not academically, but financially. She worked, relied on grants, loans and scholarships. Midway through college she married a high school sweetheart, who was also going to college.

That fiasco lasted until the second child woke up in the night with an earache. He left. She managed to finish college.

The divorce granted her ex-husband weekend visitation rights. Before the year was out, he had made and broken all kinds of promises to the kids. Finally, during a weekend visit, he took the children out of state. A year and a half later, with the help of a detective and several law enforcement

Medicare commission's mission: Listen to all Americans

HORACE B. DEETS

Guest Commentary

The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 called for the creation of a Medicare commission specifically to look at the longer-term issues facing Medicare. While not the only way to ensure Medicare's future, it is a promising step.

The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) has long advocated a two-step approach to bring about changes in the Medicare.

Step 1: Reform that ensures the programs solvency for the short term was accomplished by the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, which AARP supported.

Step 2: Guaranteeing the long-term solvency of Medicare will be much more difficult to achieve, but will begin with the appointment of the Bipartisan Commission on the Future of Medicare.

For the commission to succeed, it must encourage and lead a strong, public debate about Americans' expectations of Medicare. It will want to raise a basic question: What do younger and older Americans want from Medicare in the future? More than 30 years ago, Medicare was created to provide Americans will affordable, quality health insurance when they needed it most and to establish a measure of financial security in retirement.

Deciding the future of Medicare is not simply a financial issue, it is an opportunity to make Medicare better for beneficiaries.

Moreover, the commission must also look at Medicare's future in the context of all health care. It must not solve Medicare's problems by making things worse for others in the health-care system.

This is indeed a formidable task. To meet it the commission must address a number of critical questions, including:

- Who will be eligible for Medicare?
- What should the benefits package be?

- How should the benefits package be financed, or how do we share the cost?

- What are the appropriate roles for government and the private sector?

As the commission considers these questions, it should be open to all points of view. This should not be a place where those with preconceived solutions can limit debate. Every issue should be open for discussion so all Americans -- young and old -- can begin to think through the options and understand the tradeoffs involved with those options.

Ultimately, the success of the Medicare commission will be determined by the level of public involvement in the process. I urge every AARP member and future member to become engaged in the debate over Medicare's long-term future.

That is the only way to ensure that Medicare will be there in a form our children and grandchildren can embrace.

Horace B. Deets is executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons.

energy crisis; he said it would take the moral equivalent of war to deal with it.

Not that conservation efforts didn't register. Steps including automobile mileage requirements, an increasing use of natural gas, new technologies and other measures that began with the oil crunches have changed the mix.

According to the Energy Department, the United States is now 30 percent more energy efficient than 25 years ago.

Still, when the crises eased, business went back to usual. In 1990, Congress did vote to declare that 50 percent dependence on imported oil would be the peril point for U.S. national security.

In 1994, imports exceeded half of U.S. use for the first time.

Energy Department projections show imports could reach 60 percent by 2010.

By industry account, technological advances and political changes have created new sources overseas and reduced the potential of another disruption in Middle Eastern supplies. More than half of U.S. oil imports are from Venezuela, Mexico and Canada; some 20 percent come from the Middle East.

And with times good, supplies ample and prices down about 8 percent over the past year, energy conservation policy is a footnote, if that, on the political agenda now.

That's not without risk.

Disruptions in world oil markets and energy price shocks have been factors in the last three economic recessions.

Now the energy markets are helping boost the economy. "U.S. crude oil and petroleum prices generally began 1998 as they had ended 1997, in a continuing decline brought on by world production growth outstripping demand," the Energy Department said in its latest market report.

It's a mark of better times that the strategic petroleum reserve created in 1975 to cushion market disruptions hasn't had oil added since 1994. Since then, oil from the emergency reserve has been sold twice to reduce budget deficits, and once, on President Clinton's order, in a 1996 attempt to stem a sharp increase in gasoline prices.

There could be a different kind of pressure for conservation and reduced consumption - the international agreement to combat global warming. It would take both to meet the U.S. pledge to reduce fuel emissions to 7 percent below 1990 levels by 2012, should that deal be ratified. Republican opponents say it would jeopardize the U.S. economy.

As usual, oil and politics will be a combustible mixture.

agencies, the kids came home.

The cost of locating her children cost more than just money. She sold her car and everything she owned to stay on the track of the kids. Time lost from her job ultimately cost her even that. She now drives a 15-year-old Buick and earns half what she is worth.

On the other hand, her former husband is on probation after serving six months in jail. Visits with the children are limited to two hours a month -- in the presence of a court liaison. He drives a 2-year-old Chevy sport truck.

Life's not fair.

Both the women in this comparison are making the best of what life has handed them. For one, life seems to be easy; for the other, nothing has come easy, but ...

Get the point? Life simply is not fair.

I honestly hope Friend No. 1 is never forced to face the harshest realities some people live with on a daily basis. I also hope sometime Friend No. 2 gets something of a good life; she deserves it.

Both friends make the best of this game called life. Neither has been halted by circumstance.

Maybe as we look around a see the unfairness that exists in this old world, we can look at all we have, be thankful for it, and offer someone else a hand up - if only in spirit -- so they, too, can see something good.

Hereford Regional Medical Center

Dear Editor:

Members of L'Allegra Study Club wish to extend our thanks and appreciation to the members of the community who contributed to "Project Christmas Card", one of our organization's major fund raisers.

Our special gratitude also goes out to The Hereford Brand, KPAN and all the businesses who kept our deposit canisters.

Funds generated by Project Christmas Card are earmarked for the benefit of Hereford Regional Medical Center. This year's project funds will go towards the purchase of a Multiple Anesthesia Monitor, a piece of equipment that our local physicians concurred will fulfill the greatest present need. The monitor is utilized for patient care during and after surgery.

Year after year, through this and our other fund-raising projects, we are reminded of the generosity of our citizens and particularly of their concern in contributing to the improvement of the quality of life in this community. Thank you for another successful year.

'Fast track' bill may be derailed

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton once buoyantly predicted he'd pull a 1998 victory from last year's big trade-bill defeat, but the financial crisis in Asia and domestic politics may be sidetracking the effort.

Administration officials still list "fast-track" trade authority among their top 1998 objectives. But Clinton's appetite for another bruising battle over it seems diminished, according to some supporters of the measure. Regrouping after last November's defeat of the bill is turning out to be more problematic than first expected for the White House.

Furthermore, the administration has a far more pressing international financial fight on its hands: winning congressional approval for bailing out Asian economies.

With liberals and conservatives joining forces to try to defeat the $18 billion package, it could prove to be an even harder sell than fast track.

Fast track describes the enhanced trade negotiating authority all presidents since Gerald Ford have had. It allows presidents to negotiate trade deals that can be accepted or rejected by Congress - but not modified.

Clinton used it to get the North American Free Trade Agreement and other trade deals through Congress in his first term, but it has since expired.

The president wants to use it to expand NAFTA to include Chile and to strike other trade liberalization deals in Latin America and Asia. He hoped to have it before April, when he goes to Chile for a meeting of Western Hemisphere leaders.

The fast-track legislation has wide Republican support. But a majority of House Democrats still oppose it, led by House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., a 2000 Democratic presidential hopeful.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told reporters Tuesday he hopes to see House action on fast track by mid-April. But he asserted that, to prevail, the White House needs to produce 25 additional Democratic votes "if I am to put that bill on the floor."

Chances of that seem remote, with no indication the measure has picked up any Democratic support over the long congressional winter break that ends next week.

If anything, the measure may have lost support as midterm congressional campaigns heat up.

The prospects of a widening trade deficit caused by Asia's financial crisis is dampening congressional enthusiasm toward striking new free-trade deals right now.

The measure is opposed by organized labor - still unhappy about losing the 1993 NAFTA fight - and environmental groups.

TOM BAUM

Inside Politics

As it mounts a new offensive, the business coalition supporting says it is receiving mixed signals from the White House.

"I think there is an unfortunate White House drift toward subordinating fast-track to IMF funding and other issues," said Jerry Jasinowski, president and chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"If the president wants to move forward on fast track, he's going to have to put real energy into gaining Democratic votes, which were appallingly slim in the last go-around," Jasinowski said.

But Clinton in recent days has been moving back toward the Gephardt wing of the party and shoring up his Democratic base by embracing a series of social-policy initiatives to be included in next week's State of the Union address.

Another knockdown battle with Democrats over fast-track could imperil those new initiatives, which range from expanded child care to making Medicare available to younger retirees.

Clinton had House Speaker Newt Gingrich pull the fast-track bill in the House last Nov. 10 rather than risk a near-certain defeat. At the time, he had lined up only about 40 of the House's 203 Democrats.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the administration is consulting with both Republican and Democratic leaders on possible changes. "We fully intend to submit legislation," McCurry said.

Among possible changes to boost Democratic support: tightening the environmental and labor standards contained in the bill.

But warned Republican Archer: "I would not want to reopen those. They were crafted after considerable thought."

Commerce Secretary William Daley recently conceded the Asian crisis could make reviving fast track harder.

"The short answer is it is alive," he said. "We just have got to make a judgment at what point the patient jumps up and runs."

Market's weakness may be high expectations

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market's weakness this year could be high expectations - on the part of retirees, market newcomers, the greedy and folks who consider themselves successful investors because they made money over the past three years.

The retirees have come to depend on high returns; they and the poor, more so than any other population category, understand the joy of having earned unexpectedly more money than anticipated.

Newcomers have high expectations because, as Wall Street wisdom puts it, it is easier for most people to analyze the past than to project the future, and the recent past has produced extraordinary returns.

The greedy have tasted stock market profits and they like the taste so much they just can't suppress their appetites. As they say, "If the Dow Jones industrial average has doubled in three years, it proves the case: It can do it again."

The self-described successful investors are to be watched because they're in a self-congratulatory mood. You can't argue with success, they say, pointing to one or two stocks that doubled or tripled. They think they've unlocked the secret.

But these were among the rarest of successful years in stocks. Last year marked the first time in the 101-year history of the industrial average that its gains reached or exceeded 20 percent for a third straight year.

Under the circumstances, such as the Far East monetary and economic problems, the potential pressure on profits, the gradual rise in labor costs - might it be too much to expect a fourth such year?

There are also those pricing averages to contend with; somehow, it seems, they cannot be defied for long. At the end of 1997, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock average was 22 times expected year-ahead earnings. In 1996 the ratio was 18; in 1994, 14.6.

Such numbers are not to be ignored. Like rubber bands, they can be stretched to an extent but then they break or snap back to their original size. Applied to stock prices, the more serious readjustments can be compared to earthquakes.

In the most favorable or hopeful view, the readjustments will be similar to those that have blessed the economy during the past few years, that is, slowdowns rather than deep recessions. Perhaps, it is argued, the market has become so institutionalized it will always have money pouring in - from mutual funds, 401(k) plans, and IRAs. In that scenario, they say, drops in prices generally will be considered buying opportunities.

Those who accept this point of view point to the quick recovery from the 554-point, one day drop in the industrial average last October. Investor confidence remained high and money continued to be invested in mutual funds and in stocks directly.

Others see it differently - as evidence that volatility remains a personality trait of the market. Stock prices recovered so quickly it didn't prove a thing, they say, except that the market was still vulnerable to a correction.

It is difficult for investors not to project the immediate past into the future, says Russell Redenbaugh of Cooke & Bieler, a Philadelphia money manager. It is hard, he adds, for both small investors and professionals to resist the roar of the crowd.

As he puts it, it can become almost impossible to remember that two plus two equals four, when the crowd is emotionally chanting "two plus two equals more!"

IN BRIEF

Sprewell remorseful
NEW YORK (AP) -- With time running out before his status is determined by an arbitrator, Latrell Sprewell expressed remorse for attacking P.J. Carlesimo and said he was not "another O.J. Simpson."

"I'm not as bad as everyone has made me out to be," Sprewell said in an interview with the New York Post. "It's as if I'm another O.J. Simpson. Yes, I was wrong, but I didn't kill anybody. I'm not a double murderer."

"No matter what happens, I hope to sit down with P.J. some day and have a long conversation. I want to look in his eyes so he can see how sincere I am in my apology. I wish I had taken the time to sit down before," Sprewell said.

Sprewell was in New York on Thursday to prep for his arbitration hearing, which begins Tuesday in Portland, Ore., and will last for three days.

Replay supported

SAN DIEGO (AP) -- A modified version of instant replay has the support of a key NFL precinct -- the commissioner's office.

In his state of the league address Friday, commissioner Paul Tagliabue said he would back a reinstatement of instant replay to aid game officials' calls on critical plays only.

But he said he wanted to limit replays to critical plays, the kind that can make or break a season.

Tagliabue seemed at ease during his one-hour news conference, and why not? He just oversaw negotiations for new television deals that brought the NFL nearly $18 billion over the next eight years.

Caprock edges Herd, 43-40

By BOB VARMETTE
 Sports Writer

AMARILLO -- As the game progressed, it seemed it was a game destined to go down to the last shot. It did, and the shot didn't fall.

That allowed Amarillo Caprock to beat Hereford 43-40 in front of 500 at Caprock Activity Center in District 1-4A boys basketball Friday night.

It was a game that wasn't so much won by the Longhorns as it was they survived.

"I felt like we got a lot of good looks at the basket. We just couldn't convert them," Hereford head coach Randy Dean said.

Especially the last one.

in regulation, the Whitefaces has one last possession to hit a 3-pointer to send the game into overtime.

Hereford freshman Cody Hodges took the shot -- a 20-footer from the top of the key, but the shot hit the back of the rim and bounced into the air. On its way down it did not find the net, much to the chagrin of the Whitefaces.

"We got a good look at it," Dean said. "We didn't exactly execute the play like we were supposed to, but we got an awfully good look at the basket, and that's all you can hope for in that situation."

Sophomore Greg Ewing led Hereford (11-12, 5-2 District 1-4A) with a game-high 15 points. The Whitefaces scored only 40 points, but put three players in double figures with Bryant McNutt scoring 13 points and Cody Hodges adding 10 more.

No... it's mine!

Lady Whitefaces thunder past 'Horns

By BOB VARMETTE
 Sports Writer

AMARILLO -- So what do you do when you're playing the No. 3 team in the state?

Not very well, actually.

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces took off a 6-2 run and forced the Amarillo Caprock Lady Longhorns into three turnovers in the opening minutes of the game.

And that was about as good as it got for Caprock.

Hereford cruised to a 73-49 District 1-4A girls basketball victory in front of 75 at Caprock Activity Center Friday night.

"If you're playing one of the better teams in the state and you don't play with a lot of intensity, you're asking for trouble," Caprock head coach Don Calvert said. "That's what happened to us."

Julie Rampley led Hereford (23-3 overall, 7-2 District 1-4A) with 19 points. Catie Betzen led a quartet of Lady Whitefaces also in double figures with 12 points. Misti Davis added 11, and Tori Walker and Valerie Guzman each chipped in with 10 points off the bench for Hereford.

Yanira Marrufo led Caprock (8-16, 1-8) with 14 points. Jessica Ornelas had 12 points -- all from 3-point range -- and was the only other Lady Longhorn to reach double figures.

"We came over here and wanted to get this one over quickly," Hereford head coach Eddie Fortenberry said. "I think we got that accomplished. I thought we did some good things."

A lot of good things actually. The Lady Whitefaces were 29-for-56 from the field (51.8 percent) on the night. They outrebounded the Lady Longhorns 35-19 and forced 26 Caprock turnovers.

About the only thing they didn't do well is something they usually do well -- they were only 2-for-13 on 3-point attempts.

"We shot the ball pretty well

HEREFORD (23-3, 7-2): Baker 0-1 0-0 0, Guzman 4-6 2-10, Eicke 1-3 3-5, Betzen 6-12 0-0 12, Rampley 7-10 4-19, Davis 5-14 0-3 11, Rives 1-5 3-4 5, Walker 5-5 0-0 10, Fangman 0-0 1-4 1. Totals 29-56 13-22 73.

AMARILLO CAPROCK (8-16, 1-7): Parks 2-7 2-8, Ornelas 4-13 0-0 12, Martinez 0-3 1-3 1, Morales 0-0 0-0 0, Terry 4-8 1-2 9, Soria 0-1 0-0 0, White 0-0 0-0 0, Marrufo 4-8 6-14. Totals 14-40 10-13 42.

Halftime--Hereford 46, Caprock 17. 3-Point goals--Hereford 2-13 (Rampley 1-2, Davis 1-7, Eicke 0-1, Betzen 0-2, Rives 0-1), Caprock 4-15 (Ornelas 4-13, Parks 0-1, Soria 0-1). Fouled out--None. Rebounds--Hereford 35 (Davis 6), Caprock 19 (Marrufo 5). Assists--Hereford 6 (Rampley 3), Caprock 2 (Parks, Soria). Total fouls--Hereford 18, Caprock 17. Turnovers--Hereford 16, Caprock 26. (overall)," Fortenberry said. "There's nothing wrong with that; we can live with that. We wanted to work on our shooting and we wanted to work on our execution."

While Hereford enjoyed a good night of shooting, Caprock spent much of the game shooting themselves in their collective foot.

"I really thought we'd do a better job handling the ball," Calvert said. "Whenever we came down the floor and got into our offense, we scored OK. We're so small we can't afford to turn the ball over."

The Lady Whitefaces established themselves early, pressing on defense and crashing the offensive glass.

"We've been pressured all year long, and we've handled it real well," Calvert said. "We didn't tonight, well enough to compete."

Dominating the boards throughout the game, Hereford grabbed 16 offensive boards.

"They got too many putbacks," Calvert said. "If you can't control the boards, you're not going to win the game."

Davis had six rebounds to lead Hereford, two coming on the offensive end. Rampley and Guzman each had five boards for the Lady Whitefaces.

Marrufo, a 5-11 junior, have five rebounds to lead Caprock.

SUPER BOWL XXXII

Bronco fans betting big in Las Vegas

By TIM DAHLBERG
 AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS -- One bettor has $500,000 riding on the Denver Broncos covering the spread in the Super Bowl. Others have a mere $5 wagered on whether the Green Bay Packers will score more points than Michael Jordan on Sunday.

Across this gambling city, gamblers are betting large and small, straight and strange, on what is expected to be the biggest bet Super Bowl ever.

Already, heavy betting on both teams has caused the point spread to fluctuate from 12 1/2 to 13 1/2 and back down to 11 1/2, where it was in most casinos Friday. And with the weekend at hand, oddsmakers were bracing for long lines of eager bettors up to kickoff Sunday.

"Tomorrow (Saturday) should be a madhouse and Sunday will be out of control," said John Avello, sports book manager at Bally's hotel-casino.

While the Packers remain heavy favorites to win the game, that hasn't stopped Broncos fans from wagering on their team.

So many bets were coming in on the Broncos, in fact, that the line in the game moved two full points from where it had climbed in the hours

Butler, Sharpe talk the talk

By BERNIE WILSON
 AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO -- There's no truth to the rumor that the Super Bowl has been pushed back a few days so Shannon Sharpe and LeRoy Butler can keep yakking.

The matchup between Sharpe, Denver's tight end, and Butler, Green Bay's strong safety, will be a key to Sunday's Super Bowl. They are friends, they are Pro Bowl starters and they are arguably the most animated players from either team.

The two kept talking Thursday right up to the end of the final interview sessions before the Packers try to defend their Super Bowl championship. The players don't have to meet the media Saturday.

Please see TALK, page 9A

Spurs down Mavs, 81-75

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -- San Antonio's twin tower lineup sported another high-rise Friday night.

David Robinson led a balanced attack with 17 points and 13 rebounds as San Antonio beat Dallas 81-75 Friday night for the Spurs' 19th victory in 22 games.

Tim Duncan contributed 13 points and 10 rebounds and Will Perdue had 11 points and 14 rebounds to round out a big night for the San Antonio front line.

"Tonight we did a nice job," Robinson said. "Once we got some motion, we began to get some easy shots. Teams are scared of our big lineup. We have to work to take advantage of it."

"They have some big guys and good talent down in the paint," Dallas' 7-foot-6 center Shawn Bradley said. "Our guys played well against them. They did a decent job, but with three people in the paint over 7 feet tall -- that's 21 feet of people down there. That's a lot of people."

"We fought all the way through tonight," Duncan said. "They threw a different defense at us and we had to adjust, so it was a good win for us."

Dallas was led by Dennis Scott's 17 points and Michael Finley added 15.

Coaches share only first name

SAN DIEGO (AP) -- They share the first name and the same goal at the Super Bowl. Except for that, Mike Shanahan and Mike Holmgren have very little in common.

The difference is obvious in their faces. Shanahan's eyes are deep set and piercing, a study in concentration. Holmgren's walrus mustache gives him a look of whimsy, sort of like a football Pooh bear.

Guess which one of tools around town on a Harley.

Knowing Holmgren's love for motorcycle transportation, a local dealer drove a truck full of bikes from Green Bay to San Francisco before the NFC championship game. "I was planning to ride on the Saturday before the game," Holmgren said, "but it rained like crazy so I couldn't do it."

No problem. The cycles were then driven down the California coast to be at the coach's disposal before the Super Bowl. He takes one to practice every day. "One day I rode up the coast," he said. "It was a beautiful day. It's my way of kind of relaxing."

Shanahan takes more traditional transportation. He is, after all, a more buttoned-down guy.

"It's been pretty intense," Shanahan said, referring to Denver's ride through the playoffs and into the Super Bowl. "We've got a job to do. That's my demeanor all the time. I'm just kind of serious all the time, a little bit too intense, but that's me."

When the folks from Disney World extended the traditional winning quarterback invitation to the winning coach, Shanahan politely declined should the Broncos win Sunday.

"The players play the game, the players win the game," he said. "An endorsement like that, from my perspective, should be given to the players."

Disney World? Holmgren's face lit up at the thought.

"That's one of my favorite places in the whole world to go!" Holmgren exclaimed. "I love that place!"

He won't be able to make it, either, though, because of a packed postgame schedule in Green Bay. But you could just see the wheels turning, ooooooh roller coasters and cotton candy. Let's see if I postpone this meeting and cancel that one. ...

Holmgren chuckled. "I was asking them, 'Can I pick my time?' And they didn't go for that."

Shanahan doesn't think about stuff like that. Instead, his game face is squarely in place, 48 hours before the kickoff.

"We don't talk about winning football games," he said. "We talk about preparation for the game. When you see them focus on the preparation of the game, you have a chance for success when Sunday rolls around. We've done that. I'd be surprised if our team didn't play well."

"Talk is cheap. Let's show people what we can do on the football field."

This is traditional coachspeak, a popular language in the NFL. Holmgren dips into it occasionally. His football origins are humble and his true roots are in the classroom.

He taught history and coached at Oak Grove High School and Sacred Heart Academy in San Francisco and, in between two-a-days, packed bologna sandwiches for the players.

"It's always an amazing thing to me," he said.

Sort of like a little kid riding Disney's Matterhorn or Space Mountain for the first time.

Sharks rally past Oilers

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) -- Murray Craven scored with 7:16 left to play and the San Jose Sharks came back from a two-goal deficit to defeat the Edmonton Oilers 3-2 Friday night.

Sharks' goaltender Mike Vernon stopped the final 19 shots he faced, while Stephane Matteau and Patrick Marleau scored the first two goals for San Jose, which extended its undefeated streak to three games.

Dean McAmmond and Bill Guerin scored for the Oilers, who saw a six-game winning streak halted.

The Sharks won for just the second time this season when trailing after the first period.

Craven took a pass from Mike Ricci, who recorded his 200th career assist, and beat Edmonton goaltender Curtis Joseph to the glove side from just outside the crease.

Smith rebounds from Chiefs rejection

SAN DIEGO (AP) -- Neil Smith stands 6-foot-4, weighs 269 pounds and delights in separating quarterbacks from their senses.

But a year ago, on the saddest day of his football life, this bear of a man climbed in his car and drove for hours, wiping big tears from his cheeks.

The Kansas City Chiefs told Smith, a five-time Pro Bowl defensive end, that his services were no longer needed. After nine seasons in Kansas City, during which he recorded 86 1/2 sacks, Smith was being cut loose.

"It hurt me tremendously," Smith said. "If you have feelings, you can be hurt. I think every man can cry. A man who says he doesn't cry, there's something wrong."

He drove north for nearly three hours to Lincoln, Neb., where he had starred in college, then returned home with a new resolve.

In April he signed a free-agent contract with the Denver Broncos for modest money with hefty incentives. He was guaranteed $1.5 million, but incentive clauses could have added $1 million more.

"I put my career on the table," he said, "and I rolled the dice."

He came up a winner, achieving every incentive, and now finds himself in reach of a special bonus:

a chance for a Super Bowl ring on Sunday.

"This wasn't a money issue," Smith insisted. "I always had a dream that I would one day play in the Super Bowl. I never gave up on that. I took the long road here."

"It's been a long wait. I first dreamed of playing in the Super Bowl when I was 8 or 9. As a kid I was a Dallas Cowboys fan. I saw them go to the Super Bowl and saw Ed 'Too Tall' Jones do his thing. I wanted to be like Ed."

Smith, who earned another Pro Bowl berth this season during which he had 8½ sacks despite playing much of the year with one arm because of a torn right triceps, said he signed with the Broncos because of their Super Bowl potential.

"I thought maybe I was good enough to get them over the hump," he said. "I wanted to be with a new team that was maybe one or two guys away from getting to the Super Bowl and winning it."

He's grateful to quarterback John Elway, not only for his consistent play this season, but for Elway's willingness to renegotiate his contract to make room under the salary cap to sign Smith.

"He's the guy who made room for me to get here," he said.

NBA ROUNDUP

76ers 98, Trail Blazers 87
PHILADELPHIA (AP) -- Derrick Coleman scored 14 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter as the Philadelphia 76ers snapped Portland's four-game winning streak with a 98-87 victory over the Trail Blazers on Friday night.

Allen Iverson also had 22 points for the 76ers, who won their fifth straight home game for the first time since the 1992-93 season. The 76ers are 7-3 overall in their last 10.

Arvydas Sabonis had 30 points and 12 rebounds for the Trail Blazers.

Pacers 106, Jazz 102
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) -- Rik Smits scored 25 points, including two free throws with 24 seconds left that put Indiana ahead to stay, and the Pacers overcame a 15-point deficit in the second half to defeat Utah 106-102 Friday night.

Reggie Miller scored 22 points and Antonio Davis had a season-high 21.

Mark Jackson had a season-high 18 assists for Indiana.

Karl Malone led Utah with 26 points, while John Stockton had 18 points and 11 assists.

Celtics 89, Hawks 85
ATLANTA (AP) -- Antoine Walker's basket off a jump ball with 31.7 seconds remaining broke a tie and the Boston Celtics, after squandering a 22-point lead in the second half, defeated the Atlanta Hawks 89-85 Friday night.

The Hawks took their first lead since the opening minute when Steve Smith hit a 15-foot jumper with 1:07 remaining to make it 85-83. But Ron Mercer hit two free throws with 55 seconds left and Atlanta fumbled the ball away on its next possession, resulting in a jump ball between Mercer and Tyrone Corbin at the Atlanta foul line.

Mercer tipped the ball to Walker, who drove the length of the court with Christian Laettner right on his shoulder, finishing off the play by banking in the shot with his left hand.

Walker led the Celtics with 19 points, but he had only two in the second half until the winning basket.

Heat 102, Magic 90
MIAMI (AP) -- Tim Hardaway scored 27 points as the Miami Heat beat Orlando 102-90 Friday night, extending the injury-plagued Magic's longest losing streak in six years to six games.

Jamal Mashburn scored 25 points, including 15 to help Miami build a 44-26 lead midway through the second quarter. Mashburn was 15-for-15 from the free-throw line and the Heat were 28-for-33 (85 percent).

Isaac Austin added 21 points and 10 rebounds for the Heat, who shot 53 percent from the field.

Bulls 100, Nets 98 OT
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) -- A controversial goaltending call with 0.5 seconds left Friday night gave the Chicago Bulls a 100-98 victory over the New Jersey Nets in a game Dennis Rodman missed after his first brush with trouble this season.

In the end, though, it came down to an alley-oop inbounds pass from midcourt that was grabbed by Jason Caffey as Nets rookie Keith Van Horn scrambled late onto the court after a timeout. As Caffey was ready to dunk the ball, Jason Williams came over and attempted to block the shot.

Referee Tommy Nunez called goaltending and the Nets, with only four players on the court, were out of luck.

It ruined a fine game by Williams, who had 23 points and 23 rebounds.

Michael Jordan had 32 points to lead Chicago, and Scottie Pippen had 19.

Suns 93, Nuggets 77
PHOENIX (AP) -- The Denver Nuggets tied an NBA record for most consecutive losses in one season, dropping their 23rd game in a row as the Phoenix Suns beat them 93-77 Friday night behind Antonio McDyess' season-high 24 points.

Denver, 2-38 overall and 0-22 on the road, is closing in on the all-time record set by the Cleveland Cavaliers, who lost 24 straight games over two seasons in 1982.

Cliff Robinson added 15 points for Phoenix, which won for the seventh time in 11 games.

Vancouver 88, Golden State 80
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) -- Shareef Abdur-Rahim scored 26 points, all in the first three quarters, and Vancouver pulled away down the stretch to beat Golden State 88-80 Friday night, the Warriors' 13th consecutive loss.

Golden State is four losses away from the franchise record 17-game losing streak, set during the 1964-65 season when the team was based in Philadelphia.

Sabres ice Lightning

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) -- Rob Ray scored his first goal in nearly a year, and the Buffalo Sabres extended Tampa Bay's losing streak to eight games with a 4-1 win over the Lightning on Friday night.

Ray gave Buffalo the lead late in the first period and the Sabres cruised through the final 40 minutes in earning their fourth win in five games.

Matthew Barnaby and Michal Grosseck each had a goal and an assist, and goaltender Dominik Hasek made 35 saves for the Sabres. Darryl Shannon scored with less than one second remaining. Defenseman Bryan Marchment scored the only goal for the Lightning.

Caprock

Only one other player scored for Hereford -- freshman Slade Hodges had two points.

Michael Soria led Caprock (12-12, 4-3) with 13 points. He was the only Longhorn to reach double figures.

The pace of the game was slow, sometimes painfully so. The game was tied 7-7 after one quarter and Caprock held a slim 17-16 lead at intermission.

The tempo picked up ever so slightly in the second half -- Caprock outscored the Whitefaces 26-24.

"It was one of those situations where both teams struggled on offense," Dean said. "Maybe some guys got reluctant to put the ball up. Maybe that led to a lot of the pace of the game."

Both teams put up 66 shots from the floor -- Caprock was 14-for-34 (41 percent) and Hereford was 17-for-32 (53 percent).

"Both teams played good defense, no doubt," Dean continued. "I think the offensive struggle that both of us went through was really the story of the game."

Caprock's height advantage proved not to be as valuable as it might have been. The Longhorns did rebound the Whitefaces, but not decisively -- 22-18.

The 13 turnovers Hereford committed don't seem like that many, but for the tempo of the game, it didn't please Dean. And nine of the miscues came in the first half.

"We had a lot of travelling calls," he said, "which are just breakdowns in fundamentals. We never established a pivot foot and we were taking a little rocker step, and they got us for it every time."

As striking as Hereford's lack of offensive production was the Whitefaces' play on defense.

"We only gave up 43 points," Dean said. "If you hold a team to 43 points, you got to feel like you ought to win the game. Defensively, I thought we really got after it hard. I thought we did a good job of limiting some of their better players."

Rolling

Hereford also used the Lady Longhorns lack of size against them, taking it inside on the Caprock defense early and often.

"They're not a real big basketball team," Fortenberry said. "We're not either, but we're quite a bit bigger than they are, so you got to take what they give you. We told them, 'When you get the small guard posted up, take it to her,' and that's what Valerie was doing."

Guzman, a 5-7 sophomore, hit her first three shots in the third quarter, all from short range.

After jumping on the Lady Longhorns early in the first quarter, Hereford pushed their margin to 17-6 going into the second quarter, getting 11 points from Rampley in the opening period while the Lady Longhorns were 3-for-11 from the field.

Caprock only sunk deeper in the hole. The Lady Whitefaces went on a 19-3 run to start the second quarter. Hereford ended up outscoring the Lady Longhorns 29-11 in the second.

With Guzman and Walker working the inside for Hereford, the Lady Whitefaces upped their advantage to 62-24 at the end of the third. Caprock won the final quarter, 18-11, but it was far too little, far too late.

"I was pretty pleased with the effort," Fortenberry said. "The turnovers we did have were I think sloppy play both ways. When you get a lead, you tend to lose concentration."

Hereford's biggest obstacle during the game may not have been the Lady Longhorns, but rather just keeping their heads in the game after opening up a big lead.

"We're talking about three- and four-year lettermen on our team," Fortenberry said. "You don't have to say a whole lot. They understand. Some of those kids have been on the varsity since they were freshmen."

Geiberger leads at Phoenix

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) -- There was no runaway Friday in the Phoenix Open.

Kelly Gibson and Brent Geiberger saw to that. In another sense, so did Steve Jones.

Gibson shot a 5-under-par 66, improving by one stroke on his opening round, to lead the $2.5 million tournament at 9-under 133.

Geiberger was 9-under after 33 holes when play was suspended. He and 12 others will complete the second round Saturday morning.

Because frost delayed the start, no cut was made.

Fans

following the conference championship games for both teams.

"Out of every 50 tickets we're writing, 45 are on the Broncos," Avello said. "But the five that are on the Packers are for the bigger money."

While one Strip casino took a $500,000 bet on the Broncos, most of the big money bets were on the Packers. Smaller bettors, meanwhile, mostly favored the Broncos.

"After the initial rush, all the casual bettors have been betting the Broncos," said Michael "Roxy" Roxborough, who set the opening line for the game in Nevada sports books. "But the large bets are on Green Bay."

That wasn't necessarily the case at Caesars Palace, where Vince Magliulo said he has taken big bets on both teams. Still, Magliulo said most of the money has been bet on the Broncos.

"We've taken five- and six-figure bets on both teams," said Magliulo, the assistant vice president of race and sports at the resort. "But up to this point the majority of the money has come in on Denver."

While oddsmakers have had to adjust the point spread to try and balance the betting between the teams, most of the big betting will be done in the 48 hours prior to kickoff.

But even with an estimated 80 percent of the money still to be bet, bookmakers were confident they would surpass the legal sports book betting record of $70.9 million set in the 1996 Super Bowl (between Dallas and Pittsburgh). Nevada casinos have the only legal sports betting in the United States.

"You've got two very popular teams with marquee players involved," Magliulo said. "Coupled with the fact the game is so close and bettors will come here on their way to the game will certainly enhance the wagering."

While the straight betting line will get the most action in sports books,

Talk

A big topic this week is how the Packers will cover Sharpe when Butler blitzes. The Packers do, of course, have Eugene Robinson playing free safety.

But give Sharpe an opening and he takes it.

"Put it like this, and I go on record as saying, if their linebackers cover me one-on-one the entire night by themselves, with no help from anybody else, can you say, M-V-P?"

Sharpe wasn't finished on the subject. He was asked whether Butler is the only guy who can cover him.

"Plain and simple, here it is -- one-on-one, my two toughest people who have ever gone against to cover me, are Mike Shanahan and John Elway. Because if Mike doesn't put plays in, John won't throw me the ball."

"If they cover me one-on-one with a linebacker, me and John will be the co-MVP, because if I have a big day, he's throwing me the football."

The subject then swung to Robinson, whose 49 career interceptions make him the leading active player in that category. He played against Elway for 13 years in Seattle and returned an interception 58 yards against San Francisco in the NFC championship game.

"Eugene must realize that he's not going against those guys in the NFC Central," Sharpe said. "He's not playing against Brent Jones. He's playing against the best tight end in the game. Period. You can say pass catching, you can say receiving, you can say whatever. I am the best tight end in the game of football today. Period."

Sharpe led all NFL tight ends this year with 72 catches for 1,107 yards, with three touchdowns. Green Bay's defense hasn't allowed a touchdown pass in 31 quarters.

Then it was Butler's turn.

He said Sharpe was "just looking for self-motivation because he knows what kind of player I am. And he maybe thought I was going to give him something media-wise for him to get motivated."

Butler, the guy who predicted Green Bay would finish 19-0 this year, was asked if there's a better strong safety in the NFL.

"Umm, I'm thinking now, give me a minute. Probably not. Because I think every strong safety in the league, his team doesn't rely on him to make a play and if he doesn't, it can change the game."

Butler had five interceptions, 103 tackles and three sacks this season.

Butler called Carnell Lake a great strong safety, but noted Pittsburgh's defense has several other players it can rely on.

"In our team, everybody knows Reggie White, but everything kind of centers around what I do. And that's the only reason why I say that. And I say it with a lot of confidence."

bettors will be able to wager on anything from which player will score the first touchdown to whether Phil Mickelson's score in Sunday's fourth round of the Phoenix Open will be higher than the total yards gained by Green Bay's Robert Brooks.

Bettors can also bet without a point spread, getting $25 for every $10 bet if Denver wins the game outright.

Some 200 different proposition bets around the city tantalize bettors to come up with another $5 or $10 to keep their interest in a game they might otherwise be losing.

"By far the most popular bet is the player to score the first touchdown," Roxborough said. "People love that one. I think some like to get their decisions over early."

Even bettors who lose their money during the first half of the game will have a chance to get it back. Most sports books will offer an adjusted halftime line that for some gamblers will be their final chance this season.

Ward up at Office

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) -- Although Wendy Ward led the LPGA Office Depot, she got a harsh reminder that she is no Casey Martin.

Ward was assessed a two-stroke penalty Friday for accepting a ride in a golf cart, changing the 6-under-par 66 she shot in the $600,000 tournament's second round to a 68.

Ward took a ride in an unauthorized shuttle from the 18th green to the first tee on the Heritage course at Ibis Country Club.

But Ward's excuse was a simple misunderstanding of the rules.

Report: Trade dead

HOUSTON (AP) -- The proposed trade that would have sent two Houston Rockets starters to the Toronto Raptors for Damon Stoudamire and two other players is dead, according to a broadcast report.

Sources tell Houston television station KRIV that the Raptors are close to sending the high-scoring Stoudamire to Portland in a multi-player deal that would also move guard Kenny Anderson to Toronto.

Aaron Goodwin, Stoudamire's agent, said he was not ready to close the door entirely on Houston.

as 13 points, opened the fourth quarter with a 12-4 run, closing to 69-64 on Scott's jumper with 8:28 to play.

After two free throws by Finley made the score 73-70, Chuck Person answered with a 3-point field goal and a jump shot to give San Antonio a 78-70 lead with 3:05 to play.

"I was fortunate enough to be in position to get shots like I did tonight when the defense doubles down on David and Tim," Person said.

Dallas closed to 78-75 with 1:08 remaining, but Duncan added three free throws over the final 18 seconds as San Antonio won for the 13th straight time at the Alamodome.

"They are the same team that beat Seattle a couple of nights ago," San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich said. "They are playing well. We played great defense and rebounded well, but we couldn't throw it in the ocean."

"I hate to say it, but all we had to do was make some open shots and we win," Dallas coach Don Nelson said. "It was a great effort tonight."

After leading 43-35 at halftime, San Antonio scored the first five points of the second half, going ahead 48-35 on Avery Johnson's jumper.

San Antonio ended the first quarter with a 17-7 run to lead 19-13 as Jaren Jackson had eight points.

The Spurs stretched the lead to 31-18 after Duncan's three-point play with 7:10 to play in the half. Dallas answered with a 13-2 run, getting to 33-31 on Samaki Walker's three-point play, before San Antonio took a 43-35 lead at the half.

Analysis

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

Once, some judges and lawyers saw trained, professional jurors as the antidote for mind-numbing trials over complex issues. That notion's popularity has faded, and a new one has emerged: Do more to enhance citizen jurors' understanding.

Let jurors take notes? Once unthinkable, the practice already has taken hold in many courts. Let jurors question witnesses? Although rarely done, it is an idea whose time may have come.

Federal and state courts increasingly are adopting jury-friendly policies to supplement their rules on trial evidence and procedure. Such steps are spurred by the twin goals of reaching sound verdicts and making jury duty more bearable.

The American Bar Association, the nation's largest group of lawyers, wants to help courts help jurors. An ABA task force has come up with two dozen standards for "enhancing jury comprehension and minimizing jury confusion" in civil, or noncriminal, trials.

There are remarkably few formal rules in state and federal courts for the treatment of juries. The proposed civil trial standards are aimed at filling in the gaps without taking away from any individual judge's discretion.

Similar ABA standards long have existed for criminal trials. While only advisory, they often are relied on by judges.

The task force will ask the association's policy-making House of Delegates to adopt the standards next month at a national convention in Nashville, Tenn.

"We've tried not to be controversial," says Gregory Joseph, a New York City lawyer and task force member. "It's an attempt to ensure that jurors don't get left without a road map."

But the task force's report acknowledges that "ultimately the trial court must exercise its discretion in light of the circumstances before it, and nothing in these standards limits that discretion."

The 24 standards for civil trial practice are offered as useful tools for what the task force calls an era of increasingly complicated evidence and litigation.

One standard says that trial judges should give jurors, in "cases of appropriate complexity," notebooks that contain copies of the judge's instructions, selected exhibits and certain material evidence. The notebooks also should include paper for the jurors' note-taking.

The standard says the notebooks would be collected at the end of each trial day until the jury begins its deliberations, when the notebooks also would be available. When the trial ends, the standard says, all juror notes should be collected and destroyed.

Likewise, another standard says that judges sometimes can assist jurors by letting them submit written questions for witnesses. "With appropriate safeguards, juror questioning can materially advance the pursuit of truth, particularly when a jury is confronted with a complex case, complicated evidence or unclear testimony," says the task force report.

One standard suggests that judges tell jurors about the issues in dispute and the relevant legal principles even before lawyers for both sides make their opening statements. Another says judges should let jurors know whether the trial lawyers can ask them to discuss the case after it has ended, and if so, tell jurors they can decline.

Names in the News

ELTON JOHN
MIAMI (AP) - Now that Elton John has struck a sponsorship deal with Citibank, he's already breaking new ground on the road.

John will appear in the bank's commercials in exchange for sponsorship of his "Big Picture" concert tour and a $1 million donation to his AIDS foundation, a donation the bank made Thursday.

Citibank will be sole sponsor of John's 65-city international tour under the deal. Financial terms were not disclosed.

John said the sponsorship will help him sell records in places like Japan, Australia and Europe.

The tour kicked off Wednesday in Biloxi, Miss., new territory for John.

"I've never, ever played Mississippi before (and) I've been coming to America for 30 years," John said.

Row is going to do just fine with me behind bars."

Knight is serving a nine-year state prison sentence for violating terms of parole in a 1996 fight outside the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas on the night rapper Tupac Shakur was shot to death while sitting in Knight's car.

PRINCE CHARLES
LONDON (AP) - A cracked rib isn't going to stop Prince Charles from trekking through the Himalayan foothills next month.

The 49-year-old heir to the British throne hurt his rib last week when he fell off a horse while fox hunting on the north Wales border, St. James's Palace said Friday.

"A cracked rib is obviously uncomfortable, but it hasn't prevented him from carrying out his engagements - and it won't," said a spokeswoman, speaking on customary condition of anonymity.

The cracked rib is the latest of a series of riding injuries for the prince. He broke his arm in 1990 while playing polo, and four years later gave up league polo, partly because of a back injury.

Two scenic walks in the Himalayas are planned during the prince's 10-day tour of Nepal, Bhutan and Sri Lanka, which starts on Feb. 2.

MICHAEL CRICHTON
ST. LOUIS (AP) - Michael Crichton admitted in court that he once turned in under his name an English paper written by novelist George Orwell.

He did it as a Harvard University sophomore in an effort to prove that a professor was grading him unfairly, the best-selling author testified Thursday in a lawsuit alleging he stole the screenplay for "Twister."

Screenwriter Stephen Kessler brought the 1996 copyright infringement lawsuit, which seeks the movie's entire multimillion-dollar profit.

Kessler alleges that Crichton, his wife, Anne-Marie Martin, Steven Spielberg and others ripped off his screenplay, "Catch the Wind," about tornado chasers.

On cross-examination, Crichton testified that he put his name on an Orwell paper after telling another faculty member what he was doing. Crichton said it wasn't plagiarism.

"I did not pass it off as my own," said Crichton. He said the paper earned Orwell better marks than it won him.

"I was getting C-pluses. George Orwell got a B minus," Crichton said.

Crichton, who also wrote the novel "Jurassic Park" and helped create the TV show "ER," says he and his wife never heard of Kessler or his screenplay before the lawsuit.

ROBERT DUVAL
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Robert Duvall had to dig deep into his own pockets to make his latest film, a pet project he began work on 13 years ago.

Duvall, who appeared in "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now," spent $5 million to make "The Apostle" - which he wrote, directed and starred in.

"People think I'd be able to get financing easily," Duvall said in an interview published in The Outlook, a Santa Monica newspaper. "I think that's only if you're one of the top, top, top guys like (John) Travolta or (Tom) Hanks."

Election '98

By The Associated Press
Quips, quotes and tidbits from the Texas campaign trail:

SAY WHAT, JIM?
Former attorney general Jim Mattox never lacked for enthusiasm when making a speech. As a candidate for his old job, he sounded like his old self when telling an AFL-CIO gathering about the hazards of tobacco: "I feel strongly about it because I had two parents that both died as a result of having smoked. I have a wife that smokes. I've done my best to break her of it; I haven't been able to do it. But I'm going to tell you something: I'm not going to let my two little kids smoke. In fact, I'd choke 'em to death."

As laughter broke out, he added, "There may be a little hyperbole in that."

THE COOKIE CRUMBLES
Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro, a longtime friend of the First Family, ordered two dozen cookies to be sent to Hillary Clinton on Thursday.

But the order quickly was canceled after a Houston Chronicle reporter heard about it and asked what was going on.

According to the newspaper, a Mauro campaign worker had ordered Texas-shaped shortbread cookies from Austin bakery Sweetish Hill, then angrily canceled and chewed out a bakery employee after the paper's inquiry.

"We are sending her some cookies, just not from Sweetish Hill," said Mauro spokesman Joe Cutbirth.

OUTBREAK OF AGREEMENT
Except for their party labels, there's been a lot of agreement so far in the race for lieutenant governor.

Republican Rick Perry and Democrat John Sharp both lay claim to being conservative and fiscally prudent, so perhaps it shouldn't be too surprising to have heard the Democrat quoting a well-known Republican: "If you want more of something, tax it less," Sharp said, citing Ronald Reagan, who Sharp says spoke "very eloquently" on the issue.

NOW THAT'S SERVICE
Former contractor R.C. Crawford's quixotic campaign against Gov. George W. Bush in the Republican primary looks uphill all the way. But Crawford, of Round Rock, says he's got the right attitude to appeal to voters.

Crawford whipped out a handkerchief and offered shoe shines to news reporters covering his announcement late last year. "I want to be a real public servant," he explained.

The melody of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," comes from a popular English drinking song, "To Anacron in Heaven."

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: Remember the condom that whistles "Dixie"? I've had some additional correspondence with David Pressman, the attorney in San Francisco who wrote to me about the patent for this extraordinary device, and he has informed me that there are patents on other items that might be of interest to my readers. Here they are:

- an electric shocker to put in bushes to deter urinating dogs.
- a milking stool that can be strapped to a milkmaid's rear end.
- a chastity belt for bulls.
- a mattress with footholds for facilitating sex.
- a clothes hanger with breasts.
- an armored bra.
- flytrap lures with silhouettes of copulating flies.
- an electric toilet-seat warmer.
- a handkerchief edged in lace, resembling women's panties, to put in a man's breast pocket.
- diapers for canaries and parakeets.

And now, dear readers, once again, please do not ask me where you can obtain any of these items. I am not in the retail business.

Dear Ann Landers: Are people becoming meaner, or are the advances in communication simply making it easier for us to know what is happening (both good and bad) everywhere?

I just read about a woman in Illinois who was arrested for attempting to cause her one-legged boyfriend to fall and injure himself. The police claimed the 35-year-old woman greased the top of the stairway in their home, hoping that her boyfriend would fall down the steps. The scheme backfired, however, when the woman slipped on the stairs herself and was knocked unconscious. She is now in jail, charged with aggravated battery and domestic battery. How is that for poetic justice? -- An Illinois Meanie

Dear Meanie: The last I heard, that woman is still awaiting trial. It will be interesting to find out what happens.

Dear Ann Landers: Since you seem fond of unusual lawsuits, I thought you might use this one. -- Henry in Hyattsville, Md.

Dear Henry: I appreciate the item. Here is the story by Philip Pan of The Washington Post:

"A family restaurant chain agreed to pay $53,000 to a former waitress who says she was fired for refusing to sing 'Happy Birthday' to customers because it would violate her religious beliefs.

"The settlement resolves a lawsuit filed last year in Baltimore by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on behalf of a 44-year-old Jehovah's Witness, who worked only two days at the restaurant before a confrontation about the birthday song.

"Jehovah's Witnesses prohibit their members from celebrating birthdays, according to the EEOC. 'It is not part of my worship,' said the woman. 'From my study of the Bible, it stems from pagan teachings and the realm of magic... when you apply for a job, you shouldn't have to put your religion on the line.'

"As part of the settlement, the restaurant agreed to adopt a new religious accommodation policy in which disputes between employees and managers are reviewed at the corporate level. The policy also sets forth a commitment to reasonably accommodate the religious beliefs of employees and specifically notes that requests to be excused from singing the happy birthday song are protected under federal law."

Case closed.
An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Envelope art

This drawing of Wolverine done on an envelope by Efrain Ramos of Hereford was submitted to the Letter Art section of Wizard, The Comics Magazine in Congers, N.Y. The drawing was selected as a winner and published in the February 1998 issue of the magazine. Ramos, 18-year-old son of Lupe Ramos, has enlisted in the U.S. Army and reported to Fort Benning, Ga., this past week to begin basic training.

The Successful Family

THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY will begin its next session this Tuesday at the HISD building. Transportation is available and there is a program for every age in the family. Door prizes will be given and drawings for grand prizes of a TV and VCR will be held on the last night. A full meal is provided for the family. The fall session was a great success with more than 292 persons participating during the sessions. We are anticipating the same support and attendance.

The program offers nurturing skills to the entire family. It is our hope that families find success in participating in the program to help create a better world through nurturing. The entire family can increase their empathy, learn ways to encourage appropriate behaviors, build self-concept and self-esteem, and learn to have fun as a family.

Debbie Canode is the new facilitator for the program. Debbie has been an outstanding educator for more than 20 years and has a master's degree in counseling. She is working very hard at making the program valid for family support and success in the community. She will be assisted by Regina Pender who teaches at Aikman.

Mark and Diane Stokes will teach the sessions in English for the tutoring program. They have two teenage daughters and bring a lot of experience to the group. Mark teaches at West Central and Diane teaches at Bluebonnet. Together, they are a dynamic duo for parenting support.

Martha Ruiz, Emilio Fuentes, and Janie Rendon will teach the sessions in Spanish. Martha has reared 11 children of her own and brings her expertise and experience to the group. Emilio is a deacon at San Jose and his children are grown with their own families. He brings intergenerational knowledge and spirituality to the sessions. Janie was teacher of the year and brings the presentation.

The teens will be lead by Karen Fangman who is a nurse for HISD. She has a teen and brings her unique ability to relate, teach and guide. She will be assisted by June Rudd, the nurse who conducted the program for the fall sessions.

Sing named Teacher of Year for social studies in California

Sandie Sing, daughter-in-law of Opal Shaw of Hereford and the late Wayne Shaw, has been named 1997 California Teacher of the Year for social studies.

Sing is a second grade teacher in the magnet program at Dutcher Elementary School in Turlock, Calif.

After beginning her career at Osborn School as a mathematics specialist in 1973, she moved to Julien School where she taught kindergarten and first grade.

From there she went to Dutcher, and taught first grade before taking the job as a second grade magnet teacher.

She will go to Long Beach at the end of February to accept her award.

Sing is married to Kenneth Shaw, a teacher with the Manteca School District.

with in Education

Catholic schools are helping to restore America's faith in education, now and for the future. The proof? A larger percentage of Catholic-educated students go to college. Parents recognize that Catholic schools do more than educate children. They prepare students for life. A Catholic education helps a child reach for a brighter future, academically and spiritually.

Join us in celebrating and supporting Catholic Schools Week.

Wheeler, Woodard to wed in Feb. ceremony

Ronnie and Vickie Wheeler of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Stephanie Eileen, to Christopher Patrick Woodard of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Linda Gilliland and Pat Woodard of Hereford.

The couple is planning to be married Feb. 21 in the First Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect graduated from Hereford High School in 1996. She is employed by Hereford Janitor Supply.

Woodard is a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School. He is a paramedic for Hereford EMS and a volunteer firefighter.

Honesty is best policy when talking to kids

WACO, Texas - Over the years, the Waco counselor has helped children deal with their fears of possibly losing a parent who's seriously ill.

In 1986, the Rev. Dr. Hal Ritter, now 49, found himself on the other side of the table when he and his wife, Michaela, had to explain to their own children, then ages 6 and 9, about his cancer.

"When we found out that I had cancer and had to have surgery, we brought the children in pretty quickly," said Ritter, a licensed professional counselor and therapist who is administrator of Hillcrest Samaritan Counseling Center. "At their ages, they had heard the word cancer but they didn't know what it meant."

The couple followed the advice Ritter gives other parents who face telling children about a serious illness or death - honesty is the best policy.

"One of the really important things when working with children, you never lie to them," he said. "There is a tendency sometimes to shield them from the truth. I'm not saying we need to tell them more than they need to know, though."

Ritter said telling children about a parent who has a life-threatening disease or illness is a lot like educating them about sex.

"Be forthright, answer questions, give them basic information, answer questions (with language they understand)," he said. "As they get older, they'll come back with more questions. Let them know that any question they want to ask is OK."

Even though Ritter recovered from the cancer, he said he and Michaela planned to prepare their children for the worst, if necessary.

"We told them that some people don't recover from it," he said. "If it had gotten to that with me, we were going to again be up-front with it."

Keeping the truth from a child can be a frightening thing, said Judy Seeber, licensed professional counselor and a children's minister at First Baptist Church of Woodway. "You may understand the medical procedure, but in their mind, they might make it worse than it really is."

Parents with serious or terminal illnesses need to let children know exactly what to expect, she said.

"Try to prepare the child ahead of time for anything he or she is going to experience or what they might see, and what treatment (the parent) is going to go through," she said. "Try to prepare for what's going to happen before it happens."

Children go through the process of understanding things at their own pace, and it's important to allow them to do so, Seeber said.

"It all depends on the child's temperament and age," she said. "You should never think they should be over something by now. Be patient and answer any questions as often as they ask, even if it's the same questions over and over."

Letting the child lead the discussion is a good approach, Seeber said.

"Let the child ask the questions and whatever direction the child goes (take over from there)," she said. "Instead of giving them a lot of information they're not interested in, let them set the pace. Then we can better understand where they are in the process."

Telling the truth can be painful, Ritter said.

"We have to trust that God will be with us through the difficult times and he will help us as parents to bring our children through it," he said.

Telling a child about a serious illness or even possible death can be just as difficult and frightening for a parent as a child, said Pat Ogden, manager of Providence Hospice.

"I think it's extremely difficult on the parent," she said. "They themselves are going to feel like they are abandoning their children and that's charged with emotion. For any parent to have to say goodbye to a child is difficult enough."

She, too, thinks honesty is the best policy when it comes to talking with children about illness and death.

HJH Roundup

"Nothing ages so quickly as yesterday's vision of the future." - Richard Corliss

Students in Mr. Rodriguez' Spanish class are serving in the HOST program at Northwest Primary School. They work one-on-one, in Spanish and English, with students in K-3. Mrs. Rule, HOST teacher at Northwest reports that this has been a very successful experience for all students. Eighth graders in this program include Diedra Carbajal, Jessica Sotelo, Marylisa Cadena, Trey Lusk, Dusty Clark, Julio Velasquez, Jessica Powers, Rocio Vasquez, Jessica Leal, Teresa Castillo, Aaron Lovett, James Moreno, Jose Vitela, Juan Ayala and Jorge Flores. Thanks to each of these students and to Mr. Rodriguez and Mrs. Rule.

History students in Mrs. Drake's classes are completing their study of the Revolution and will begin a study involving interpreting political cartoons. Students will create their own cartoons that will address a cause of situation.

Pre-algebra and algebra classes are continuing work with stated problems as they prepare for TAAS.

Science Fair and History Day activities kept students and teachers "on their toes" this past week. As rolls were checked it was a challenge to know who was absent because of illness or due to judging in one subject or the other. At least 300 students were involved in these events.

A number of students have been arriving early and/or staying late to complete or to improve upon their projects. At least two lessons can be learned from this - extra work pays off and not waiting until the last minute helps to retain the sanity of parents and teachers. More work will be done before the winners advance to higher competition. Actually, all students who did work faithfully on their projects are winners and we are proud of each and all!

Seventh graders will be trying to solve a murder that took place here at HJH. Since it was a science teacher that was murdered, we will leave it up to the students to help authorities solve this crime during their science classes. Would you believe that some other teachers are suspects? What is this world coming to, anyway????

In case you are beginning to wonder just what else we will require of these seventh graders, they are also going to free Texas from Mexican tyranny. Since we teachers have "been there, done that" many times and do know how the story ends, we find it interesting each year to observe the students' reactions as they realize that there were more Mexicans fighting for Texas' independence than other ethnic groups living in Texas at the time. We feel that all students learn more about the sharing of cultures and ideas through this study.

Junior Historians will be involved in celebrating Hereford's 100th birthday. Plans are being made to begin research, "design a T-shirt" contest and others activities, some of which will continue into the summer.

"Everything becomes a little different as soon as it is spoken out loud."

Food and Family

Some Health Tips for Those with a Sweet Tooth

It's estimated that the average person consumes about 70 pounds of sugar each year -- mostly from processed foods.

When you consider that a typical can of soda contains nine teaspoons of sugar, it's easy to see why the number is so high.

Unfortunately, sugar has no nutritional value. And excess sugar in the diet can result in unwanted pounds and serious health problems.

While our body requires sugar for energy, we get the natural sugar we need from eating a balanced diet with lots of fruits and complex carbohydrates. If you want to reduce the amount of sugar in your diet, eat fruit in place of candy and dessert -- read food labels -- and shop for low-sugar products.

This information comes from WIC - the Women, Infants and Children Nutrition Program. For a free magazine on nutrition, write us at the Texas Department of Health, Austin, Texas 78756.

Lung disease is topic of program by Stone

Persons with chronic breathing problems and their families will have a chance to learn more about medicines involved in the treatment of lung disease on Thursday, Jan. 29.

Dr. Paul Stone, associate professor with the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Pharmacy in Amarillo, will speak at 4 p.m. in the cafeteria at Hereford Regional Medical Center. He will discuss the role of medications in treating asthma, emphysema and chronic bronchitis. A question and answer session will follow.

Patients, family members and caretakers are welcome to attend this meeting sponsored by the American Lung Association of Texas, Hereford Regional Medical Center and National Home Health Care.

Interested parties should call 364-4422, locally, or 1-800-687-7904 to assure a place at the meeting. Refreshments will be served.

Oxygen will be available to patients currently using supplemental therapy.

Dr. Stone has been with the school of pharmacy since its opening, and served at the Baylor School of Medicine Pulmonary Rehab program, in Dallas before coming to the Panhandle. His expertise in treatment of breathing problems carries with it a personal interest since he suffers from asthma himself.

Military Muster

Army Pvt. Joe D. Barrera II has graduated from the basic field artillery cannon crewmember course at Fort Sill, Lawton, Okla.

The course instructed students to maintain, prepare and load ammunition for firing; operate and perform operator maintenance on prime movers, self-propelled howitzers, and ammunition vehicles; and perform crew maintenance and participate in organizational maintenance of weapons and related equipment. Students also learned to establish and maintain radio and wire communications.

Barrera is the son of David J. and Becky Barrera of Hereford. He is 1996 graduate of Hereford High School.

Sandy Josseland, left, with the Deaf Smith County Historical Society, accepts new pillows from Johnnie Turrentine and Ruth McBride, members of Bay View Study Club. The club provided the pillows and matching chair covers for the dining room of the E.B. Black House.

Rose gives program for Bay View Club

Bay View Study Club program was given by Helen Rose at its Jan. 15 meeting at the E.B. Black House with Lois Scott and Roberta Caviness as co-hostesses.

Rose's program was titled "Our Nation." She gave details on the group of members who helped write our United States Constitution. She stated there were four months of conflict, compromise and hard work all in complete secrecy.

Margaret Bell presided at the business meeting in the absence of Lou Davis.

Members were able to view the new chair covers and pillows that they had purchased for the dining room in the Black House.

Those attending were Ruth McBride, Betty Rudder, Pat Graham, Judy Mitts, Helen Langley, Virginia Garner, Lois Gilliland, Rose, Bell, Caviness and Scott.

Stubborn spirit keeps burn victim alive

SAN ANTONIO - For many months after that terrible night last February - when he was pulled from a frightening house fire, barely alive, third-degree burns over 65 percent of his body - Pedro Baeza had the very best in burn care and skilled specialists in reconstructive surgery and rehabilitation.

Now that Baeza is in the next stage of a lengthy and difficult recovery, the really big guns have arrived. Sons Josue, 19 months, and Pedrito, 6 months.

Their healing power is evident on this December day as Baeza, 32, lies in a bed at University Hospital, recovering from yet another surgery. Still feeling discomfort in his throat from the breathing tube used during the operation and obviously in pain after the latest skin-graft procedure on his badly burned neck, he balances Pedrito against his raised knees and smiles.

The baby gurgles and smiles back. Toddler Josue, too busy to sit, darts in and out of view examining every fascinating corner of the room, from the heating vent to the lighted controls on the bed.

"Now that they are here, I'm complete. Things have come together," Baeza says in Spanish.

The children arrived from their home in Santa Anita, Jalisco, Mexico, on Oct. 27. Thanks to the efforts of the Mexican consul in San Antonio, their visas permit them to stay until April. Prior to the fire, Baeza - a Mexican-born, legal U.S. resident - worked as a laborer here and often visited his family in Mexico.

"People tell me to wait, wait," Baeza said just before a friend drove him to the Nuevo Laredo airport to pick up his wife, Maria, and the children. "But I'm going to get them. I want my children here."

That was another example of the stubborn spirit that has kept Baeza alive. A body severely damaged by burns and disfigured by scars was not about to prevent him from holding the baby he had never met. Burn compression wraps were not going to keep him from playing with the son he had not seen since a pre-fire visit to Santa Anita.

Despite concerns about their reaction, the children accepted their father's scarred appearance from the start.

"He (Josue) wasn't afraid. He hugs and kisses him," Maria says.

When they arrived, the children joined Baeza, Maria and Baeza's mother, Juanita, in their one-bedroom unit at Spanish Trace Apartments. It has been home since Sept. 10, when he was discharged from the Reeves Rehabilitation Center at University Hospital.

For the man who was left broke, homeless and unable to work, funds for an apartment, food and living expenses have come from generous donations. Many readers warmly responded with money and household and clothing items after the story of Baeza's miraculous survival and painful recovery appeared in the San Antonio Express-News on Aug. 31. A special fund established at Frost Bank collected about $20,000.

"That amount has to last Pedro two years," says Kathleen Shipley, a nurse liaison at Reeves, who like many health-care professionals has taken an interest in his case. "If he's conservative, it will last."

One of Baeza's first chores upon discharge was to pick up a VIAtrans pass. He uses the bus to go to the hospital three days a week for physical and occupational therapy.

This particular neck surgery, performed by surgeon Dr. Braum Kaufman utilizing skin taken from Baeza's buttock, is his second procedure since leaving Reeves.

"He has had burn scar contractures," says Kaufman of the scar "release" and graft. "As the skin heals, it contracts. It pulls the neck down. Really, this was the last stage of fixing the left side of his face. Of course, what we just did is going to contract, though not as much."

In an operation in October, surgeons worked to release the left eyelids so that he could close them. The hope is that he can get a corneal transplant.

More operations - surgeons won't even guess how many - will follow in the months ahead, some on an outpatient basis. The purpose of the surgeries and the physical and occupational therapy is to restore as much function, range of motion and flexibility as possible to the joints of his hands, arms and legs and to make the cosmetic changes so essential to full recovery.

With each surgery, he must remain immobilized to avoid tearing the wound - for five days in this instance. The down time is a setback.

"You reach a base line and progress from that line," explains Stephanie Stevens, who manages Reeves' outpatient therapy. "With every surgery, it drops back down, and then you have to work hard to move forward again."

"It's two steps forward, one step back," Kaufman says of the progression.

Baeza is highly motivated. And, "I think having his children here has really helped with therapy. Sometimes they come with him, and it boosts his morale," Stevens says.

On this postoperative visit, it's evident that good home cooking has made a difference. His fuller face and slowly healing burn wounds testify to how far he has progressed in the past 10 months. Maria, who because of her pregnancy wasn't reunited with her husband until Aug. 30, carefully bathes him and dresses his scars each day.

"I'm surprised at how delicate he is," she remarks.

Almost from the beginning, two women, Maria and his mother, Juanita, have been the loving acolytes in Baeza's care.

After firefighters rescued Baeza from the house he was renting, set ablaze by faulty electrical wiring, he was taken to St. Luke's Baptist Hospital and then moved to the U.S. Army burn unit at Brooke Army Medical Center, where burn-care specialists and the most advanced technology likely saved his life.

Within days, Baeza's mother had flown up from Mexico and was at his bedside in the burn unit. After an initial shock - she fainted when she first saw the bandages removed - she remained in his room, day and night.

Ultimately, she became proficient at gently bathing her son and caring for his burn scars. The devoted attention continued when he was transferred to Reeves in June.

Juanita's visa expires in February, and she plans to return to Jalisco. But she has taught Maria all she knows.

Waiting in the hospital lobby for her husband to emerge from the neck surgery, 28-year-old Maria confesses she sometimes gets exhausted by the daily routine.

"What do I do all day?" she asks and answers herself in Spanish. "I clean the apartment. I take care of the children. I go to therapy with Pedro. I go shopping for food."

As she recounts her day, Pedrito blissfully naps in the two-seat stroller - a major family purchase - and Josue, in a rare moment of relative stillness, discovers a friendly toddler seated across the way.

"They are like two drops of water," the young mother says of Josue and his father - stubborn and energetic.

The stroller is a moving supply ship of formula bottles, assorted snacks, toys, blankets, diapers, changes of clothing. The family has been up since 5 that morning and won't return home until early evening. Josue will cry himself to sleep crying for "Papa."

Maria says the tiring logistics are worth it. She doesn't want to be separated from her husband again.

"I like it here," she says. "It is very pretty, very peaceful. I miss my family, but I think I have more friends here than I do in Mexico."

"The hardest part," Maria adds, "is communicating. I don't understand English."

Right now, she isn't sure if she will be able to stay in this country. She does know that her husband's medical care and employment opportunities are far better on this side of the border.

Most important, she says, the fire hasn't destroyed their love.

"We are the same - like girlfriend and boyfriend."

Baeza's next surgery probably will be reconstruction of his nose, using cartilage and skin from other areas of the body.

Kaufman says the reconstruction is vital. "People look at Pedro differently and treat him differently," the surgeon says. "In a sense he has lost function of his face. He needs that function."

Throughout this ordeal, returning to work to support his family has fueled Baeza's courage and resolve.

But he is looking at things more realistically these days. His rigid left elbow and frozen hand reveal how far he has to go.

"It will take me about two years to recover," he says. "And if they can't fix my arm and hand, I won't be able to work."

"I'm working on his hand," says Kaufman. "He'll never have a really good hand, but I can make it better. Pedro will work again, there's no question in my mind. It will just take time. He's a strong-willed guy. I admire him very much."

Before the fire, Baeza filled notebooks with his poems and song lyrics, but they were lost in the blaze.

Now, Maria says, "He is starting to write a little."

Baeza has larger literary dreams, too.

"Maybe I'll write a book about what happened to me."

YOUR EYES

Progressive Lenses

You're probably younger than your parents were at the same age. Why, a generation or so ago, 40 to 660 was middle aged, and 60-plus was old. Today, thanks to exercise and better diet, we're feeling good longer. Even the 80-year-olds are out on the golf course.

Maybe that's why youthful middle-aged people who need near-vision correction to read don't want their glasses to give away their age.

Sooner or later, almost everyone experiences presbyopia, when the eye's lens is no longer flexible enough to change focus easily from distance to near. Reading glasses solve the problem for many. Where distance correction is needed, too, and the person doesn't want to switch from one pair of glasses to another, lenses can offer both corrections in one. Traditional bifocals stack segments for near and distance correction, with a line in between. Progressive lenses offer correction for middle distances, too, and there's no tell-tale line. Ask your doctor about them.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Taking it to the next level

I visit with a lot of small-business owners. I hear two comments most often: "I'm so swamped I'll never get caught up," and "If I could get a bank to loan me more money, I could make more money."

I don't have to ask too many questions of these entrepreneurs to find that they are mired in a mud hole named "busy." This common situation causes all owners some frustration from time to time.

Often the owners' initial success leaves them so busy doing, that they don't have the time or energy to move their business to the next level. Unfortunately, if the owners get stuck in this mode, they may never execute the steps necessary to grow their businesses and improve operations.

Seven Steps

Here are some tips for climbing out of the mire and taking your business to a higher level.

• Revisit your original plan. You need a simple plan to act as a guide to establish direction for your business.

Your plan should help you answer these questions: Are we achieving what we set out to do? What business are we really in? Who are our target customers? Is there really a demand for what we sell? Are we reaching the sales and profit levels we originally projected? In what areas do we need to adjust and refocus our plan for success?

• Know what really drives your business. These are your "Critical Success Factors (CSFs)." Business drivers will vary from business to business.

A business writer might list a CSF as a working database of publishers, editors and publications who purchase articles regularly. A restaurant might focus on fast service, consistent quality and cleanliness. A plumber might consider quick response and a wide inventory of parts as CSFs.

• Break each CSF into measurable goals. You must reduce each factor into achievable, measurable objectives. Build results by analyzing the steps you must take to be successful.

For example, assume an insurance agent wishes to sell five policies each week. He knows that one customer in three buys (a CSF), so he must schedule at least 15 appointments each week to reach his goal.

• Find the money. There is a difference between being busy, and making money. Some CSFs will lead to greater profit, while others won't. If you need capital to move your business to the next level, focus on short-term factors with the greatest yield.

Know what makes money for you. You must have good records of income and expenses for this analysis.

• Stay ahead of your competitors. To do this you must know who your competitors are, and what they are doing.

I recently consulted with a small-business owner who didn't know her competitor's price for the same service she offered. She was losing business, but didn't know why.

• Do what you do well. All too often I find owners who are spread too thin. They are trying to do too many things in their business. In addition, the business itself may be too broadly focused.

The owner should focus all of his or her efforts on the 20 percent of business functions that generate the majority of profit impact. The overall business focus needs to be narrow enough to do everything well, but broad enough to capture opportunities in a changing marketplace.

• Know what you need to know. You need information to move your firm to the next level. What you do is not as important as knowing what really needs to be done.

Successful owners who keep moving up spend more time thinking and less time doing. It's a normal part of taking it to the next level.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Do you by any chance listen to the radio in the mornings? Around 8:30 a.m. on the week days KPAN has a report that tells what programs will be on the television that evening. Following that report the statement is made that if you don't want to watch any of those programs, there is an alternative to be found at Movies Six.

Well I'm here to tell you there is another alternative. Let books be your other channel, or alternative. You can read any kind of story you want - mystery, western, science fiction, true crime, history, romance, current events, gardening, cooking, do it yourself - the possibilities are endless.

While cable television has channels that number up to 43 and the movie theater has six screens, the library has over 68,000 books, 142 magazine titles, 700 videos and 700 books on tape. You better hurry and get started if you plan to make it through our collection.

The week there are even more new titles to choose from. I'll give you the true stories first.

Hijacked by Dave Hirschman is the true story of Flight 705. This is a Federal Express flight that is manned by David Sanders, Jim Tucker and Andy Peterson. There is one passenger, an off-duty colleague who is taking advantage of the generosity of FedEx allowing all employees to ride the company jet for free.

Twenty minutes after take-off, the regular "out-and-back" trip turns into a life threatening situation for the pilots and thousands of civilians on the ground. The lone passenger attacks the pilots with hammers and a spear gun. The intent is to crash the plane into the Federal Express Memphis hub, ruining the company.

While Sanders and Peterson try to subdue the attacker, co-pilot Tucker performs flight maneuvers in an attempt to knock the attacker off his feet. This uncommon event caused three men to go beyond being ordinary to become heroes.

First Seal by Roy Boehm is an autobiography of the legendary founder of the world's toughest commando force, the Navy Seals. Boehm begins by telling of the events that made him into the warrior. Boehm remembers his mother saying, "You'll either grow up a hero...or you'll end up in prison."

His Navy career began eight months before Pearl Harbor, and continued through the South Pacific, to Korea, to Castro's Cuba and into the jungles of Vietnam. As the Cold War developed, Boehm saw the need for the unconventional warrior. Drawing on his expertise as a diver and member of the Underwater Demolitions Team, Boehm unveils a disciplined, dedicated and ruthless force that is capable of attacking from the sea, air or land. This force became known as the Navy SEALs.

W.E.B. Griffin has a new "Badge of Honor" novel entitled The Investigators: Special Operations detective Matt Payne and colleagues find themselves in the middle of two major cases at the same time.

One case involves a brutal crime, dirty cops and a missing piece of vital evidence. The other case involves a group of urban terrorists and the woman Matt met at a party. As Matt becomes more deeply involved, he soon realizes it will take all his skills, concentration and cunning if he is to stay alive.

The Cobra Event by Richard Preston, the author of the Hot Zone, is the story of a secret counter-terror operation.

It is spring in New York and a 17-year-old student wakes up feeling a cold coming on. Hours later the teenager is having violent seizures and episodes of self-cannibalization. She is soon dead.

When other identical cases occur, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta is notified. The pathologist sent to investigate discovers a federal crisis: "Black biology", or the practice of chemical warfare, involves the whole country and many areas of the world.

Second Love by Judith Gould begins with Dorothy Ann Hale-Cantwell attending the grand opening of her new luxury hotel, the San Francisco Palace. Dorothy's concerns for her husband Freddy become greater when the arrival of his private helicopter is delayed.

As she waits on the penthouse balcony, her most dreaded fears are realized. Trying to cope with her devastating loss, Dorothy is unaware of the powerful businessmen who are plotting a ruthless takeover that will plunge her into a nightmare of scandal, deception, and cold-blooded murder.

Then Dorothy meets Hunt Winslow, a decorated war hero, rising political star and married man. The stakes are high but the second chance of love is worth it.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Jan. 25, the 25th day of 1998. There are 340 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Jan. 25, 1959, American Airlines opened the jet age in the United States with the first scheduled transcontinental flight of a Boeing 707.

On this date:

In 1533, England's King Henry VIII secretly married his second wife, Anne Boleyn (who later gave birth to Elizabeth I).

In 1579, the Treaty of Utrecht was signed, marking the beginning of the Dutch Republic.

In 1787, Shays' Rebellion suffered a setback when debt-ridden farmers led by Capt. Daniel Shays failed to capture an arsenal at Springfield, Mass.

In 1947, American gangster Al Capone died in Miami Beach, Fla., at age 48.

In 1961, President Kennedy held the first presidential news conference carried live on radio and television.

In 1971, Charles Manson and three female followers were convicted in Los Angeles of murder and conspiracy in the 1969 slayings of seven people, including actress Sharon Tate.

In 1978, Muriel Humphrey was appointed to fill the Senate seat left vacant by the death of her husband, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota.

Ten years ago: In his final State of the Union address, President Reagan declared America was "strong, prosperous, at peace." Vice President George Bush and Dan Rather clashed on "The CBS Evening News" as the anchorman attempted to question the Republican presidential candidate about his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

Five years ago: A gunman shot and killed two CIA employees outside agency headquarters in Virginia (A Pakistani national, Mir Aimal Kansi, was later convicted of the shootings.) President Clinton appointed his wife, Hillary, to head a committee on health-care reform.

One year ago: Responding to recent cases of deadly food poisoning, President Clinton promised to seek $43 million dollars to implement an early warning system for food contamination. Astrologer Jeane Dixon died in Washington, D.C., at age 79.

Grain storage meeting set in Amarillo

Issues and concerns affecting the stored grain industry will top the agenda for the 1998 Texas High Plains Grain Elevator Workshop scheduled at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center on Feb. 5.

The event will feature presentations on grain quality, fumigation, aflatoxin, weed control around structures and pest control issues. In addition, speakers will address all laws and regulations of interest in the grain storage and processing industry.

Registration is $25 and begins at 8 a.m. event sponsors are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Tri-State Chapter of the Grain Elevator and Processing Society, pre-registration by Jan. 30, is encouraged.

Texas Department of Agriculture has approved five continuing education units for commercial, non-commercial and private pesticide applicators. CEUs will be given in integrated pest management (2), laws and regulations (1) and general topics.

It was first organized, as a result of an integrated pest management special projects educational grant from U.S. Department of Agriculture Extension Service.

"This event has been self-supporting since 1989 due to the enthusiastic support by the Texas High Plains stored grain industry," said Patrick.

The program starts 8:30 a.m. and ends at 3:45 p.m. The morning session will be moderated by Greg Cronholm, Extension pest management entomologist from Plainview.

Stan Miller, Miller Grain Consultants, Enid Okla., will speak on key decisions and choices that impact grain quality.

Peter Dotray, Extension agronomist from Lubbock will address weed control around storage structures and Joel Goucher, Fossil Shell Supply Co., Amarillo, will feature stored grain insect control techniques using diatomaceous earth.

A&M University at College Station will discuss the realities of the sorghum ergot disease, which arrived in the U.S. last year.

Norman Goodfellow of Continental Grain Company of Amarillo, and current president of the Tri-State GEAPS chapter will serve as afternoon moderator.

Goodfellow said the partnership with the Extension Service has helped ensure sound educational programs for the stored grain industry.

"Continuing education units are available about anywhere, but we wanted something designed especially with our concerns and issues in mind," he said.

Fumigation tops the afternoon agenda, with a presentation by Jerry Meers with Great Plains Chemical of Lubbock.

Other speakers for the session include John Haliburton, Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic laboratory of Amarillo, who will address the impact of mycotoxins on livestock followed by Alex Mims with Tri-State Chemical Company of Amarillo.

Mims will discuss the hazardous materials exemption's expiration and what this will mean for the industry.

To register and obtain information, call Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist at 359-5401.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON

This past week, residents of Deaf Smith County lost a good friend and tremendous supporter of agriculture with the passing of Wes Fisher.

Wes had served on the Deaf Smith County Extension Program Council Executive Board for all my 14 years plus as extension agent in Deaf Smith County.

He had also served as a member of the Extension vegetable committee and later the Extension crops committee, as well as the Vice Chairman of the Panhandle Agrifood Master Education Council.

In all those years, even during his long illness, he continued to come and provide valuable input into planning and implementing programs. His wisdom and understanding of the importance of agriculture to our county were unmatched.

I thought it extremely fitting that during his memorial service, his concern for education and its importance to making people and communities better was mentioned.

Wes really believed that people should be continually learning and progressing.

I had the opportunity to visit with him on a number of occasions concerning lifelong learning. He told me once that in his opinion, education was the key to making our country a better place to live. Of course in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service our mission is to provide educational opportunities to farmers, ranchers, families and youth.

The passing of Wes Fisher was brought home to each of us that worked on and attended the West Texas Vegetable Conference on Tuesday.

More than 150 people attended this year's event. The program was very good. The trade show and exhibits were very informative. Wes was a big supporter of this conference and the entire vegetable industry.

Wes will be missed, but his spirit will always be in those who knew him.

Speaking of community, this week will be the annual Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show. I hope you folks will come out and support our Deaf Smith County 4-H and Hereford FFA members as they exhibit their animals.

These young people have worked many long hours in preparing for this event and it sure is good to see big crowds out to watch the show.

The 4-H and the FFA Booster Club would also like to ask for your financial support of the sale. Any amount will be appreciated. People wishing to contribute to the sale can call Mark Hicks or Teresa Dutton. For more information, call the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573.

Duane Artho and Steve Landers keep the power flowing to Deaf Smith Electric Co-op members.

Every Day We Put Our Reliability On The Line

Our commitment goes back to the mission we set more than 50 years ago — to make sure your service is as reliable as humanly possible. If that means we have to roll out at midnight in the middle of an ice storm, so be it. If it also means updating technology to provide better service, we don't hesitate.

We've got our priorities straight. Your electric co-op answers to no distant corporate tower. It serves no investors, only members like you. It's an idea we feel at home with.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Repair Holes and Cracks In Walls And Ceilings In Minutes

(NAPS)—You may not even remember how the damage happened. A door swung open and the knob dented the wall; you took down cabinets, a ceiling fan or moved appliances and there are ugly holes and cracks in the wall; a crack over the doorway keeps reappearing as the house settles. These house "battle scars" may look overwhelming, but to get walls and ceilings in shape before painting or wallpapering, Red Devil, Inc., a New Jersey-based home improvement manufacturer, has some quick fix tips that anyone can do.

Kerry Lane, technical manager for Red Devil, Inc., says all you really need to fix them is a ready-mixed filler and a few different sizes of putty knives. The putty knife should always be wider than the hole. He recommends RED DEVIL® ONETIME® Ready Mixed Filler, because it comes ready to use and is very lightweight, perfect for the do-it-yourselfer. "True to its name, it goes on once and dries in minutes," he said. "It won't crack, sag or shrink, so it will never need to be reapplied." It may be used indoors or outdoors.

Lane says patch problems can take only minutes, but while you're at it, you may want to tackle all the unsightly damage you've noticed lately. Here's how:

- Choose a putty knife that is wider than the hole or crack.
- Remove all debris and loose material from the hole or crack, even along edges.
- Spread the filler evenly to cover the hole or crack and feather the edges so it is level with the wall surface.
- Let the area dry completely before repainting or wallpapering.
- For large, gaping holes without a backing, use a piece of slat board or screen attached to a string at center. Punch it through the hole and coat the edges of the opening with filler. Pull the string forward as you apply more filler. When dry, cut the string and apply one more coat, feathering edges until the patch is level with the wall. Let it dry and repaint.

• For nail holes and thin cracks, apply filler with your finger or a small putty knife, blending until it is level with the wall.

It's a good idea to keep a tub of ready-mixed filler and a variety of putty knives on hand, so you can take care of patch problems as they occur. Also remember to keep some extra paint and wall-coverings in the house, so you won't have to match it later. The repairs can make a dramatic difference in your home's appearance and ensure the best possible results for a painting or wallpapering project.

Solomon men score big in post-Bowl 3rd Rock

The always befuddled Harry (French Stewart) lands the date of his dreams with a mysterious, beautiful woman (Cindy Crawford) in 3rd Rock From the Sun. The special hourlong episode airs Sunday on NBC following the Super Bowl.

By John Crook

©TVData Features Syndicate

Eccentric extraterrestrials Tom, Dick and Harry Solomon (Joseph Gordon-Levitt, John Lithgow, French Stewart) suddenly discover they are chick magnets in a special hourlong 3rd Rock From the Sun, airing Sunday, Jan. 25.

Supermodels Cindy Crawford, Angie Everhart and Irina Pantaeva guest star in "36! 24! 36! Dick!" as the Solomon men all end up with some out-of-this-world babes on their arms.

Of course, this makes perfect sense to the guys, but Sally (Kristen Johnston) realizes something is desperately wrong. Soon, she uncovers the truth: Tom, Dick and Harry aren't from Mars, but these women are from Venus. What's more, these Venusian vixens have - naturally - an evil plot to steal all of Earth's "pretty stuff" via a potent subliminal signal to be broadcast during the Super Bowl, while men are at their weakest intellectually.

As in last season's critically acclaimed dream episode, "A Nightmare on Dick Street," Sunday's episode gives the Rock creative team more free rein than usual, with sendups of such classic sci-fi films as Invasion of the Body Snatchers and some tongue-in-cheek riffing on James Bond movies, plus music to match.

The studio audience at the filming of the first half especially went nuts over the stunning guests, who proved themselves good sports, say Bonnie and Terry Turner, executive producers and co-creators of 3rd Rock.

"Apart from a Russian translator who helped Irina with some of her jokes, they all came alone without any entourages," Terry says.

"Everyone was just so high after the Tuesday night filming," Bonnie adds. "Cindy was loving it, and Angie was like, 'You do this every week?'"

This high-profile special episode comes at a time when, the Turners admit, the cast and crew have been battling unhappiness over their Wednesday time slot, with a lead-in by two bombs (The Tony Danza Show and the ironically named Built to Last, both already canceled) against a very aggressive ABC lineup that includes direct competition from The Drew Carey Show.

"People say we're up against Drew, but we're up against Wednesday (on ABC)," says Terry. "Spin City, Dharma & Greg, Drew Carey and Ellen - and we were the only established hit on NBC that night."

"NBC never has indicated that they do not value the show," Bonnie explains. "But they tried to tent pole the night with nothing else around us. Not even Seinfeld could sit on Wednesday night at 9 o'clock with no lead-in."

"It's not so much feeling disenfranchised or disrespected on Wednesday night as much as it's feeling not nurtured."

Most TV critics still consider 3rd Rock near the top of its form creatively, and NBC executives have confirmed that the sitcom is on its very short list of candidates to take over the crucial Thursday time slot of the departing Seinfeld next season.

"I think if (NBC brass) mean what they say when they tell us how much they love us and how strong the show is, then I hope we can be the Marines in the Seinfeld situation," Bonnie says.

"But we've been out here on the beach for a while with no air support, and it's getting kind of tough," Terry adds dryly. "We need some air cover, and we need it now."

Here's hoping NBC sends out its jet fighters, pronto.

Drew Carey, the man who opens his own Wednesday ABC sitcom with a lavish song and dance number, hosts The American Music Awards.

The ceremony airs live in most areas Monday, Jan. 26, on ABC.

Twenty awards, as voted by the public in balloting by National Family Opinion Inc., will be presented to performers in such categories as pop/rock, country and soul.

Additionally, a special Award of Merit will go to a music industry member for "outstanding contributions to the musical entertainment of the American public."

Previous recipients of this award include Bing Crosby, Ella Fitzgerald, Perry Como, Stevie Wonder, Elvis Presley, Loretta Lynn and last year's winner, Little Richard.

In the competitive categories, Puff Daddy leads the field with five nods: favorite male pop/rock artist, favorite male soul artist, favorite rap/hip-hop artist, favorite soul album (No Way Out) and favorite new soul artist.

In other pop/rock nominations, Babyface and Beck are also up for favorite male artist, while Toni Braxton, Celine Dion and Jewel vie for favorite female artist.

The Spice Girls may be weathering severe critical scorn, but the group copped nominations for favorite band, duo or group, along with U2 and the Wallflowers, favorite new artist, against Matchbox 20 and the Wallflowers, and favorite album for Spice, which competes with Jewel's Pieces of You, Matchbox 20's Yourself or Someone Like You and Bringing Down the Horse by the Wallflowers.

Elton John, whose musical tribute to Princess Diana dwarfed the release of his new album, Big Picture, is up for favorite adult contemporary artist.

Competing with him are Michael Bolton and Celine Dion.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
OTVData Features Syndicate

Q: I know Will Smith starred in the sitcom The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, but my friends say he co-starred in another TV series. I say he just guest starred on one. Who is right? --Peggy in Plattsburgh, N.Y.

Will Smith

A: You are. Fresh Prince is Smith's only TV series role to date. During that show's run, he did also appear as himself on Blossom.

Q: I say that Charles Bronson starred in the little-known '60s series called Man With a Camera. My wife says it was Darren McGavin. Please settle this. --Gene in Illinois.

A: Bronson played freelance photographer Mike Kovac in the 1958-60 ABC police drama.

Q: It seems to me that, years ago, I saw a movie called The Rainmaker and the present one is a remake. Am I correct? --Joe Veck via e-mail.

A: Actually, three movies (including a 1926 silent film) have used this title. By far the most famous is the 1956 screen adaptation of N. Richard Nash's stage hit about a smooth-talking con man (Burt Lancaster) who rides into a drought-stricken town and changes the life of a lonely spinster (Katharine Hepburn). The story was remade under the same title in a 1982 TV movie starring Tommy Lee Jones and Tuesday Weld.

The recent legal drama in theaters is an adaptation of a John Grisham novel.

Q: Is Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman going off, or is The Magnificent Seven taking over its time slot just temporarily? --Rachel S. in Cincinnati, Ohio.

A: Quinn returns after Magnificent completes its test run. Barring any major developments, you probably can count on at least one more season from the popular family drama.

Q: I know Linda Kaye played Bet- ty Jo throughout Petticoat Junction, but what actresses played her two sisters? Who sang the theme song? Was the little dog on the show related to Benji? --P.M. Abreu, Rome, N.Y.

A: During the show's seven-year run, Billie Jo (the blonde) was played by Jeannine Riley, Gunilla Hutton and Meredith MacRae; brunette Bobbie Jo was played by Pat Woodell, then Lori Saunders.

Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs sang the theme song. The pup, a mixed breed named Higgins, was plucked by trainer Frank Inn from the Burbank Animal Shelter to make his acting debut as the Shady Rest dog; later he achieved doggy superstardom as the original Benji.

Q: I was a fan of both Lou Grant and Petticoat Junction. Is Linda Kelsey from the former the same actress as Linda Kaye of the latter? --Lindylou via e-mail.

A: No.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

It's hard to believe the first month of 1998 is almost gone. One of our Seniors was already counting the days until next Christmas. As you know that always brings back memories of the Festival of Trees. We have a planning session planned for Monday, Feb. 16 at 9 a.m. A lot of new ideas have been presented and we need your input. We would like all who work with the project and you who would like to become involved, please attend. We would really appreciate your help.

We are having in-service for all Volunteers during February. We will be calling or sending notices for each group. All Thrift Store volunteers and staff will meet Monday, Feb. 9 at 9:30 a.m. Home Delivered Meal Program volunteers Wednesday, Feb. 18 at 9:30 a.m. and Congregate Meals Program on Monday, Feb. 23 at 9:30 a.m. Please mark you calendars for these dates if you volunteer or would help in any of these areas.

We are working on our tour schedule for 1998. Presentations will be made at the center each month. If you want on our tour mailing list, please call.

We would like to tell you about the funding for the Association. We have had some people tell others that our program is completely federally funded and didn't know why we need to have donations and fund-raisers. This is far from reality. The total nutrition budget is $320,348 of which $190,248 is federal and state funds. The general operating budget is approximately $200,000 and there is no federal or state funds. Our utilities cost is about $25,000 per year. Our insurance which includes general liability, property, auto and auto liability and workers compensation is a little over $20,000 per year. The nutrition budget does not pay half of that so it has to be taken care of through the general budget. We have been receiving the same amount of federal funds for 12 years and the cost of food, utilities, insurance and labor has all risen tremendously. In other words, your donations, membership fees, memorials and fund-raisers are very vital to our operation.

If you have questions, please come to me. When false information is given out, it gets worse each time it is repeated.

We have so much sickness and grief in our community, we need to pray and encourage each other.

NHHC will conduct seminar

Representatives from National Home Health Care in Hereford will conduct a seminar about "Adaptive Living Aids" on Wednesday, Feb. 11 at 12:30 p.m. at Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Items designed to enable a person to live at home as long as possible will be featured. These will include grab bars, reachers, etc.

President's Corner

By Norma Thurston, HSCA President

Hello,

We are well into the first month of the new year. The center had a good 1997, but we are sad to say we have lost several of our good friends and they are greatly missed.

Plans have already begun for the 1998 Festival of Trees. The first planning meeting is set for 9 a.m. on Feb. 16 at the center. We would like for as many people to attend as possible so ideas and suggestions can be offered.

The weather seems to have cleared for a few days and we are grateful. The moisture has been wonderful, something we needed for awhile.

Our Thrift Store is thriving, thanks to those who have donated goods or volunteered their time as workers. Funds generated by the Thrift Store help with the center's overall day-to-day operation. As always, we need more help at the store and would appreciate anyone who'd like to volunteer during the week or for a couple of hours a month.

Come to the center and have lunch with us. It is a great place to meet old and new friends!

Love, Norma

Enjoying the dance

What better way to work off those extra holiday pounds than dancing? Or try it just for the fun of it. Line dancers meet at the Senior Center from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Monday and Friday of each week. And the Senior Center offers other activities if dancing isn't for you. Check the schedule of activities on Page 4.

Active seniors provide evidence youth not always wasted on young

By TED ANTHONY
AP National Writer

Sent home from the presidency, George Bush, 72, jumps out of a plane. Tony Randall, 77, between eight Broadway performances a week, summons the energy to father a child with his 27-year-old wife. Women past 50 bear children. Octogenarians finish marathons.

Now John Glenn - all 76 years of him - is heading back into space.

What's up with this? Youth, it increasingly appears, may not be wasted only on the young after all. And a combination of increased longevity and can-do attitudes means that being an elderly American in the late 20th century may be more fulfilling than ever.

"It's a change in public perception - the acceptance that someone older can be good," Randall said Thursday night before a performance of "The Sunshine Boys," his latest show. "They no longer condemn you to the porch swing when you're 65."

Not hardly. As the American Association of Retired Persons puts it succinctly on its World Wide Web site: "The experience of aging in America isn't what it used to be."

Consider Eva Johnson, who as a little girl loved to draw. She started painting at age 65 and now, at 100, has become a latter-day Grandma Moses, painting country scenes in Otterbein, Ind. At last glance, they were selling well.

And just last week in Boston, a woman named Ruth Rothfarb died at age 96 - after a 27-year career as a marathon runner that she began when her husband died. "I had to do something," she said. "I wasn't going to sit around doing nothing."

The list goes on: Bob Hope, 94, still performing. Anthony Quinn, 82, still fathering children. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., 95, still legislating. And, for that matter, George Dawson of Dallas, who just ended 99 years of illiteracy and learned to read. Seems he was finally bored of fishing.

"Most of the people I know are thriving," says Phil Burchill, 76, a retired probation officer from San Jose, Calif., who travels the country regularly. "I see a lot of people still at it - active, vigorous, with imagination and perspective."

Many trace the cultural rise of this age-doesn't-mean-old attitude to Ronald Reagan, the oldest president ever elected. His resonant voice, jet-black hair and past-70 machismo sent a message to his generation that achievement past retirement wasn't just windmill-tilting. Bob Dole's presidential bid in 1996 only reinforced that notion.

And now comes Glenn, already an icon of American strength, for another go-around. He will be 77 if he goes up in space as planned in October.

"I can understand this completely," says Millie Tieger, 75, a retired producer-writer from Cincinnati who hasn't slowed down much in recent years.

"I think it is a sentimental journey for him," Mrs. Tieger says. "He was the first to go, and he doesn't want his life to be over without having the experience again. He wants to say, 'I can do it again - that I'm still OK.'"

With this change in attitudes comes a change in the definition of retirement. Increasingly, "retirees" who leave lifelong careers pursue other options, becoming entrepreneurs, writing books, doing anything but nothing.

"They're able to throw off traditional constraints," says Mark

Questions raised in 134-year-old execution of female ax murderer

AUSTIN (AP) History may be proving kinder to Chipita Rodriguez than her neighbors were.

After all, San Patricio County authorities hanged her from a mesquite tree and buried her in a shallow grave.

Convicted of the ax murder of a horse trader, she remains the last woman executed in Texas.

She has been the subject of two operas, a poem, books, newspaper articles, magazine accounts, even ghost stories. In 1985, the Texas Legislature passed a resolution formally expressing sympathy to her descendants.

But since her death on a stormy November afternoon 134 years ago, questions have been raised about Chipita Rodriguez's case. Now, interest has been rekindled with the pending execution of Karla Faye Tucker.

"Any time there's a woman who's convicted of murder and about to be executed, the ghost of Chipita Rodriguez stirs," said Marylyn Underwood.

The retired Victoria College professor wrote an article on the case for the Texas State Historical Association's authoritative "Handbook of Texas."

Unlike Ms. Tucker's 14-year legal battle, things moved considerably faster in Chipita's day.

Josefa "Chipita" Rodriguez, who the Handbook says "was described as 'very old' or 'about 90' but was probably in her 60s" - was hanged on Nov. 13, 1863, three months after the slaying of horse trader John Savage.

She was indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced to death in a space of four days, then executed a month later.

There was no appeal. "Chipita Rodriguez, a 19th century inhabitant of San Patricio County and the only woman ever officially executed in the state of Texas, may have been wrongfully convicted of the crime for which she was executed," the 1985 Legislature declared.

Lawmakers said the trial appeared to violate state laws and called it "a rush to judgment that, even for 19th century Texas, was highly unusual."

Historians since have concluded that at least one other Texas woman was executed before Chipita, but none since.

Keith Guthrie of Taft, who heads the historical society in San Patricio County, has spent years researching Chipita's story.

"Most of it is legend," Guthrie said. "But a lot of the legend is true, handed down from generation to generation. Legends have a thread of truth to start and they kind of get embellished along the way."

Although details differ in the telling, the story goes something like this:

Chipita, whose parents were from Mexico and apparently died when she was young, furnished travelers with meals and a cot on the porch of her "inn" - more like a shack - along the Aransas River.

Savage, who sold horses to the

Nutrition Update

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD
Cultural and Ethical Nutrition Concerns

With the diverse cultural changes many communities have experienced in the last decade, nutritionists have accepted challenges to broaden the scope of their expertise to include eating regimens that cover all of these cultural beliefs. To educate the public and gain greater understanding of these principles of eating choices, this Nutrition Update has been written. Some principles of Vegetarian Regimen shall be presented and in future articles other cultural and ethical nutrition beliefs shall be reviewed.

Each individual must use their own judgement and follow their compliance demands to determine an eating regimen that is acceptable to their cultural and ethical beliefs.

Vegetarian eating style can be nutritionally adequate and healthful even for children of all ages. Due to their rapid growth and development, infants and young children have high nutritional needs. When all diets are appropriately planned, one can get all the nutrients needed to grow or be healthy within a vegetarian eating style.

The term "vegetarian" means different things to different people. Although most vegetarians avoid all meat, fish and poultry, individual vegetarian styles can vary. There are three major types of vegetarians:

*Lacto-ovo-vegetarians eat milk, cheese, yogurt and eggs.

*Lacto-vegetarians eat milk, cheese, and yogurt, but avoid eggs and foods containing eggs.

*Vegans avoid eating all animal products.

An important factor in planning an eating regimen is the initial start. Although breast milk is best for babies, commercial infant formula is a healthful option for mothers who cannot or choose not to breast-feed. Majority of calories and proteins are provided infants and babies during the first year. For the vegan raised babies, a commercial soy formula must be used. Soy milk does not contain the proper mix of nutrients if used as sole source of milk or formula for infants. Usually most infants need a vitamin B-12 supplement and vitamin D especially breast-fed babies.

An important principle with beginning first foods regardless of the particular regimen chosen must have a variety of foods with different flavors, colors, shapes, and textures. Variety makes mealtime more fun and helps establish a lifetime of good eating habits.

With infants the first solid foods are usually cereals. In the elderly many individuals choose cereals for an evening meal and again the choice of cereal is important as far as nutrient content. Iron is important to infants and is essential for the elderly. To enhance iron absorption in either case serve foods high in vitamin C, such as fruit juices.

Variety of fruits and vegetables can provide vitamin C and beta-carotene (vitamin A) as well as essential minerals. If fruits and vegetables are offered frequently to small children they become familiar with the flavors which set the stage for lifetime acceptance and enjoyment.

Offer grains, cooked pasta or rice, and other fiber foods. Remember that some high-fiber foods are low in calories but high in "bulk." One does not want to fill the stomach up with excess fiber and no nutrients. Water is essential and must be consumed daily in amounts to insure proper hydration as well as proper elimination.

Protein foods in most vegan regimens include yogurt, cottage cheese, tofu, and cooked beans or peas. Beans can be kidney, pinto or navy beans, lentils, or split peas. Protein foods for other regimens include meats, fish and poultry. The beans and peas are a choice for most any regimen regardless of cultural or ethical preference. Smooth peanut butter and other smooth nut butters spread on bread or crackers also provide protein.

Fatty acids are primary for growth and must be supplied by food because the body cannot make them. This means that whole milk products (whole milk or soy milk) must be served. Reduced-fat products should be avoided when growth and repair of body protein cells are imperative.

IRS scheduled to give program at Sr. Center

The TRIAD group of Hereford Senior Citizens Association has received word that the Internal Revenue Service will present a program in the Senior Center at 12:30 p.m. on Feb. 6.

This program is not planned to assist in the filing of returns but to present information that will enable individuals to correspond with those who might assist individuals in filing returns.

The public is welcome to attend and present their questions for answers from the authority.

The TRIAD organization was formed by the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the National Sheriffs Association to promote cooperation between law enforcement and senior citizens. The local unit is known as Seniors and Law Enforcement Together (SALT).

This local unit meets once a month on the first Friday at 12:30 p.m. at the Senior Center for a short, informative program. All are invited to attend.

'55 Alive' driving course can save insurance costs

A "55 Alive" Defensive Driving Course is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, Feb. 19-20, from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. each day. The class will be held at Hereford Senior Citizens Center and will be taught by Benny and Joan Womble. A fee of $8 will be charged and will go to AARP.

No written test will be administered. Completion of this course will allow participants to receive a 10 percent discount on liability insurance for the next three years.

Pre-registration is essential due to limited space. To pre-register, come by or call the center at 364-5681.

EXECUTION

Confederate Army, stayed there. On Aug. 25, 1863, his body was found downstream from Chipita's inn. He'd been killed with an ax, presumably for the $600 in gold he was carrying.

Chipita and a second defendant, Juan Silvera, were taken into custody at San Patricio. On Oct. 7, they were indicted. Two days later, a trial was held.

Although the money had been found - raising doubts about the motive - Chipita was found guilty of first-degree murder. Silvera was found guilty of second-degree murder.

On Oct. 10, despite the jury's recommendation for mercy due to "her old age and the circumstantial evidence against her." District Court Judge Benjamin F. Neal sentenced her to death.

Silvera, who some accounts speculated was her son, got five years in the penitentiary.

There were what modern Texans would consider some irregularities in the proceedings: At least three members of the grand jury also served on the trial jury; the grand jury foreman was the sheriff who arrested her; some members of both juries faced indictments of their own; and Chipita's only words in her defense were, "Not guilty."

Two lynch mobs were thwarted, and she was hanged as scheduled. "I think it's true that the jury didn't believe she did the crime but they believed she knew who did," historian Guthrie said. "There was some thinking that it was her illegitimate son and she was protecting him."

"The foreman of the jury passed down the word through his descendants that they gave her the harsh penalty to see if she wouldn't say who killed him. All she ever said was 'not guilty' in Spanish."

Court records are sketchy, the courthouse later burned, and Guthrie has found only a couple of newspaper accounts from the time.

"I don't think that there was a great deal of interest in her trial. She was a nobody," he said. "The legend takes up and fills in these spots."

Haire will speak on fraud during TRIAD meeting

"Focusing on Fraud Toward Seniors" will be the topic of a program set at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center on Feb. 20. The program will begin at noon, according to Nolan Grady of the TRIAD Council.

Greg Haire of Lubbock, representing the State Attorney General's office, will be the featured speaker. He will address the ever-growing problem of fraud aimed at Senior Citizens and provide ideas on how to recognize and combat the problem.

Senior Citizens and anyone else interested in this topic are invited to attend.

You can't keep a good detective down. In 1893, British writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote a story in which his character, Sherlock Holmes, was killed, but public demand forced him to bring Holmes back to life in another story.

Moonlight just feels right when visiting this Texas coastal inn

PALACIOS, Texas - As suggested by its name, music fills the heart as well as the ear at the unique Moonlight Bay and Paper Moon Bed and Breakfast.

Arrive here in Palacios by 4 o'clock on a Friday or Saturday afternoon and begin your visit with tea in the parlor. While you sip - and more than likely enjoy a slice of homemade cake - proprietor Gaye Hudson will sit at a 1940s grand piano and play familiar tunes from the 1940s.

In 1994, Ms. Hudson, who at that time was Gaye Rogers, acquired the Reuben Anderson Cates house of 1910 and opened it as Moonlight Bay. A year ago, she added the cottage next door, naming it the Paper Moon. Her skills as an interior designer, gourmet cook and accomplished pianist have been blended into a delightful seaside retreat with seven units.

Last spring, she and Earl Hudson were married and he became the co-proprietor. They'll both turn handsprings, so to speak, to keep their guests happy.

Moonlight Bay guests have a choice of four rooms, all upstairs with private baths (mostly non-adjointing). The musical theme is carried out in the names, which include Moonlight and Roses (honeymooners' choice), includes sitting room, enclosed veranda and telescope for viewing the seascape across the road), Moonglow (shares the veranda), Ebttide (bath en suite, small porch) and Stardust (smallest and least expensive at $65).

Next door, the new Paper Moon carries a literary theme throughout, with delightful wall paintings by Austin artist Roberta St. Paul. They stand out against what is primarily a stark black and white background. The 1930s cottage consists of a dining room, a kitchen and three guest rooms.

Moonlight Bay is restored to the grand lady she was in the early 1900s when Mrs. Opal Price gave beautiful parties in her elegant waterfront home. Mrs. Price was the daughter of Reuben Cates, who gave her the prairie-style home as a wedding present. Many original fixtures and leaded glass remain from that period.

A rich color scheme today is mostly in dark green and burgundy. An elaborate breakfast is served to guests of both facilities at 9 a.m. in the formal Oriental dining room of Moonlight Bay.

ACTIVE SENIORS

Hayward, a Penn State University sociology professor who studies elderly people in the workplace. "It's a period when you can take risks, and many people are."

The very idea of studying aging as anything but a medical condition is only a few decades old. As recently as the 1950s, little research had been done and relatively little was known about the social and cultural impact of aging. Now, though, it is an interdisciplinary field and studied just about everywhere.

Today, the aging baby boomer population is making sure more attention is paid. A simple demographic truism is also at play: If more people live longer, more of them are going to be doing things.

People like Glenn - who, in making his case to NASA that he would be a good subject for experimentation, argued that his superb condition, experience and records from yearly physicals provide a unique starting point for a study of osteoporosis and changes in the body's immune system during aging.

"On behalf of people my age ... I can guarantee you I'll give it my very best shot," Glenn said today. "Hopefully we can lessen the frailties of old age that plague so many people."

In other words, a young man simply wasn't the man for the job.

"Wisdom and experience can make a person perform better," says Augustine DiGiovanna, author of "Human Aging: Biological Perspectives" and a professor at Salisbury State University in Maryland.

"There's chronological age and there's biological age and there's psychological age. John Glenn might be 76, but his mind might be better than when he was 25," DiGiovanna says. "It's often use it or lose it, and he's definitely used it."

But in considering this, take heed of the following words from Randall, words that could come only from someone who is not going gentle into that good night.

"The big part is choosing your ancestors carefully. The rest is taking care of yourself," Randall says. "It doesn't do you any good to live longer if you're falling apart."

Exhibition tracks O'keefe's West Texas experience

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The big sky, wild lightning and barren terrain of West Texas fascinated young artist Georgia O'Keeffe when she lived in the state early this century.

Though she went on to achieve fame in New York and is forever linked to her beloved New Mexico, O'Keeffe spoke fondly of Texas and even called the state "my spiritual home."

Her attraction to the canyons and plains of the Panhandle and how the light and landscape of Texas helped shape her career are examined in "O'Keeffe and Texas," an exhibition opening Tuesday at the McNay Art Museum in San Antonio.

"Everybody always thinks of O'Keeffe in New Mexico," said Bill Chiego, director of the McNay and organizing curator of the show. "The early Texas years were ... not forgotten completely, but not given much attention."

The McNay exhibition aims to change that.

Featuring 50 of O'Keeffe's works, the show explores pieces she did while teaching art in 1912-18 in Amarillo and Canyon. And it looks at how her later art was influenced by what she saw and the artistic styles she adopted in Texas as a woman in her 20s.

"She became fascinated by just the vastness of the space out here, and it seemed to trigger inspiration for her," Chiego said. "The ideas that she developed here she kept using, you might say, and they became sort of building blocks for lots of compositions."

Those concepts emerged in O'Keeffe's well-known paintings of flowers, clouds, animal bones and other aspects of nature, Chiego said.

"O'Keeffe and Texas" highlights five compositional ideas in her work: light, line, landforms, geometric patterns, and solids and voids.

O'Keeffe's time in Texas marked a turning point in her career, said Sharyn Udall, who teaches art history at the University of New Mexico at Santa Fe and is guest curator for "O'Keeffe and Texas."

"In Texas, she grasped the notion for the first time that she might be able to paint full time," said Ms. Udall, who has extensively studied letters O'Keeffe wrote to friends during her time in Texas.

O'Keeffe, who died at age 98 in 1986 in Santa Fe, supervised art in the public schools in Amarillo in 1912-14 and taught art at West Texas State Normal College in Canyon in 1916-18.

During those teaching stints, O'Keeffe had her first exhibition at the influential Alfred Stieglitz gallery "291" in New York. She later moved to New York and married Stieglitz.

In her free time in Texas, O'Keeffe loved to walk for miles at Palo Duro Canyon. She enjoyed the plains. She marveled at the stars and moon, at thunderstorms and even at the sights and sounds of trains and cattle.

"Being in Texas exposed her to a whole range of new visual experiences," Ms. Udall said. "She had never been anywhere where space seemed absolutely unlimited."

Years later, in an interview with Katharine Kuh for the book "The Artist's Voice: Talks with Seventeen Artists," O'Keeffe spoke of her love of West Texas.

"I couldn't believe Texas was real," O'Keeffe said in 1960. "When I arrived out there, there wasn't a blade of green grass or a leaf to be seen, but I was absolutely crazy about it."

The McNay Art Museum has five O'Keeffe works in its permanent collection, including "Evening Star No. V," a watercolor done in 1917 while she was in Texas, and "From the Plains I," a 1953 oil painting described as her remembrance of the sound of cattle outside Amarillo.

"That sort of fascinated us, because we thought, 'Well, why was she still painting Texas 40 some-odd years later? What kept this alive in her memory?'" Chiego said.

With those five works and two owned by McNay chairman Robert Tobin as their starting point, Chiego and his staff set out to persuade other museums and individuals to loan O'Keeffe pieces for the exhibition.

"We had a lot of convincing to do for the show because the title confused people. They didn't know about her Texas years that much," Chiego said. It took more than two years to put the exhibit together.

Among the institutions loaning art for "O'Keeffe and Texas" are the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth; the Georgia O'Keeffe Museum and Gerald Peters Gallery in Santa Fe; the National Gallery of Art in Washington; and the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art, both in New York.

Finding the pieces wasn't easy. Some had changed hands several times among private collectors. "Any show like this is a lot of detective work," Chiego said.

Along with "O'Keeffe and Texas," which runs until April 5, the McNay is exhibiting "Georgia O'Keeffe: Canyon Suite" through March 22. The group of watercolors, painted during her time in Canyon, is on loan from the Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art and Design in Kansas City.

The McNay is bracing for a big crowd - perhaps as many as 100,000 during the main show's 10-week run - because of the immense popularity of O'Keeffe's work and because "O'Keeffe and Texas" will not travel to other museums.

Interest in O'Keeffe has intensified recently with the opening last year of the Georgia O'Keeffe Museum in Santa Fe.

Already, 12,000 students have reservations. A 20-minute videotape has been prepared for teachers bringing their pupils to the show.

In addition to discovering the Texas' influence on O'Keeffe, Chiego hopes the public learns from the exhibition about the "wonderful tension" between description and abstraction.

"A lot of the public is afraid of abstraction, but if they look at this show carefully they'll see how she saw abstraction everywhere in nature," Chiego said.

"She loved the landscape," he said. "Wherever she lived, she saw the world in a very powerful way, a rich way."

'Mountain men' take part in celebration

SAN ANGELO, Texas - Take an unlikely turn off Highway 163, following the scent of the river toward a brush-covered ridge in Irion County, and you might find them: the mountain men.

Dressed in buckskin clothes, powder horns for their muzzle-loaders never far from reach, they gather here - renegades from a high-tech world. To outsiders, they're anachronisms on a camp-out, but to the initiated, they're antebellum fur trappers congregating for a "ron-da-vo."

"We hoo-haw around quite a bit, especially at night," said Sonny Walker of Sweetwater, one of about 40 people attending the weekend event on the Ray Clark ranch.

Although some might call the gathering a "mountain man competition," it more properly could be labeled a historical celebration. Activities such as tomahawk-throwing and black-powder rifle shoots, the clothing, even the camping gear - all are based on the fur trade era that flourished in America in the 1830s.

A rendezvous, to use its proper spelling, was a rare time of trading, whooping and hollering for the trappers, who spent most of their time alone with the woods and rivers.

"When they left the rendezvous, they left broke just like they came, and the traders ended up with all their pelts," said Walker, a history enthusiast who works for a trucking company.

The fur traders' camp was a study in authenticity. Old Army tents and tepees spread out on a ridge overlooking the Middle Concho River, and smoke from wood stoves and campfires curled through the January air.

Near a firewood box fashioned from two young saplings, bearded men fingered necklaces and other goods displayed on an Indian blanket.

Mountain men who weren't shooting their muzzle-loaders at targets down below were getting ready for lunch - buffalo roast, fried potatoes and onions cooked over an open fire for one group of campers, biscuits and meat warmed in a Dutch oven for another. At his campsite, Walker sipped coffee from a cup made of cow horn.

Not a single plastic cup, Igloo cooler or paper plate was in sight.

"We try to keep everything they use pre-1840," the year the last rendezvous was held, explained Tim Rowe, a Midland man dressed head-to-moccasin in handmade clothes.

Competitive events, such as starting fires with flint and steel or splitting a Jack of Spades' skull with a tomahawk thrown from seven paces, follow the authenticity theme: "They were all necessary skills of the mountain men," he said.

Like many of those attending the rendezvous, Rowe and Walker belong to a club - the Society of Buckskinners, or SOBs as they call themselves. The club has a West Texas member base, but others came from groups as far away as Kentucky. A few are living history actors.

Enthusiasts often travel to rendezvous in Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming and other states. The event comes twice each year - in January and May - to the ranch in Irion County.

"We only work to finance this," said Joe Bourgeois, proudly displaying an "SOB" medallion on his cap. "Working's no fun. This is fun."

The medallion, which the group had specially made several years ago, sports a five-pointed Texas star and a Scottish thistle. The berets worn by several men harkened back to the Scots-Irish roots of many original mountaineers.

Although they shy away from being labeled "survivalists," these modern-day mountain men say they get a psychological boost from their weekends in the woods.

"My wife and I, we camp. We go to the state parks. She likes to have the showers and all that. I like the primitive stuff," said Greg Mitchell, blowing on a campfire to rekindle the coals.

It can be uncomfortable at times, the mountaineers admitted. Rowe said Saturday morning "was colder than a son-of-a-gun" in his tent, but he spoke with marked satisfaction of having chased a flock of wild turkey and deer away from camp.

"It builds self-reliance," Walker said of the mountain man gathering. "It makes you feel like you're not dependent so much on everything around you. It makes you feel like you can survive without the grocery store or the telephone."

"It's not everybody who can do that."

We wish for laziness of the wicked and silence of fools.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My son, who is 33 years old, was recently diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis.

What are the long-term effects of rheumatoid arthritis? Is there a cure? —A.M.

ANSWER: Your son is about the age when rheumatoid arthritis begins to peak. Most people receive the diagnosis between 35 and 50.

Unlike the most common arthritis, osteoarthritis — which affects only joints — rheumatoid arthritis is a systemic illness, meaning that many tissues and organs in addition to joints are affected.

For instance, the lungs and their coverings — the pleura — can suffer from the inflammation that is the hallmark of rheumatoid arthritis.

Blood vessels throughout the body often are inflamed. Such vessel inflammation can interrupt blood supply to a variety of body sites, adding to the complications.

The course of rheumatoid arthritis cannot be predicted. Some patients are only mildly affected and remain so throughout their lives. Others suffer a relentless, progressive impairment. Most patients lie between the two extremes.

Not so many years ago, aspirin was the only effective rheumatoid arthritis medicine. It still is a good drug. But the number of new drugs has grown large. Anti-inflammatory drugs, gold, penicillamine and methotrexate are examples of drugs that can keep rheumatoid arthritis in check.

At this time it's presumptuous to speak of a cure. It is not presumptuous, however, to anticipate control.

If the arthritis progresses in spite of medical treatment, the prospect of joint replacement offers hope.

Give your son the arthritis report I'm sending you. Interested readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 2, Box 5539, River-ton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10. envelope and $3.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: One of my male in-laws comes from a family where nearly all the men had early heart attacks. Wouldn't his family history call for an angiogram when he reaches a certain age? —B.W.

ANSWER: An angiogram is the procedure whereby a thin, plastic tube is threaded upward to heart arteries from the large artery in the groin. Dye is injected, and X-ray pictures are taken of the heart arteries.

In spite of your in-law's worrisome family history, an angiogram is too invasive a test for checking the health of heart arteries.

A stress test, however, is not out of the question. It is a continuous EKG taken during exercise. A patient can undergo a stress test as early as his mid-30s.

Clearly there is a genetic flaw in your in-law's family. The entire family should keep a close watch on blood cholesterol levels, and any elevation of blood pressure should be taken seriously.

A low-fat, low-cholesterol diet is one the family should literally take to heart. Each of them should adopt an exercise program. If any of them smoke, they should quit immediately.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: In 1995 I had surgery for an ovarian tumor of low malignant potential. My follow-up has been gynecological exams and a CA 125 blood test.

After the last exam, the doctor recommended another CA 125.

How often should this blood test be given? —H.C.

ANSWER: CA 125 is a protein produced by ovarian cancers. A CA 125 blood test a little like the PSA test for men with prostate cancer.

The CA 125 test is not reliable for cancer detection. It is, however, helpful in tracking a woman's progress after ovarian cancer has been diagnosed and treated. A rise in CA 125 indicates cancer has returned.

Optimal intervals for testing have not been established. Many doctors favor checking the blood every three or four months during the first two years following treatment.

After two years, testing can be done less frequently. How much less frequently is an unsettled matter.

Officials expect good show, fewer entrants

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

It's stock show season once again for area youth representing 4-H and FFA clubs in Deaf Smith, Parmer, Randall, Castro and Oldham counties.

Charla Schlabs, secretary for the Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show, said there have been a few changes in this year's rules and these changes may have led to fewer entrants.

Seventy-eight Deaf Smith County 4-Hers with 240 animals and 39 out-of-county exhibitors with 80 animals will participate in this year's stock show.

The most significant rule change involves the auction. Under the new rules, only Deaf Smith County exhibitors will be able to sell their animals in the auction.

Also, the showmanship event and the goat entries are limited to county participants.

"The fact that only county entrants will be allowed to sell at auction is only part of the reason for fewer entrants," Schlabs said. "The bigger reason is probably the fact that majors are coming up next week and that would just be too much stress on the animals, entrants and the parents."

Another change is that hogs will not be restrained on the grounds of the HYFJLS by snare, wire, rope or other means.

Getting ready for the big show

Justin and Jerad Johnson, of Hereford are active participants in the local stock show events.

Both boys have several years experience preparing stock for shows.

Washing and primping the animals is only part of what they do on a regular basis. All the animals have to be fed and cared for, as well as handled on a daily basis prior to the first event.

Justin will be showing one steer, one hog and three lambs. His brother Jerad will show two steers, one hog and two lambs.

Stand up straight

A proper stance is a must for steers entering any stock show and Jarrett May diligently works with one of steers he shows. The correct stance helps judges determine the quality characteristics and confirmation points which breeders look for in a particular species.

General rules remain same

All entries were mailed to exhibitors to entrants before the first of the year. Participants were required to return entry fees and registration forms by Jan. 15, 1998.

NO ENTRIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AFTER THE DEADLINE OR AT WEIGH-IN.

Following is a brief outline of the basic rules for the Hereford Young Farmers Jr. Livestock Show.

Entry fees were $10 per sheep or hog and $15 per steer.

Floor price will be set on all animals prior to the sale. Animals to be sold at the floor price which are not eligible to be auctioned will be moved from the barn to pens provided at the discretion of the Division Superintendent.

Ag teachers or county agents should notify the superintendent, within one hour of judging, before any animal can be pulled from the sale floor.

All animals not pulled will sell, be branded and delivered to the buyer.

Only exhibited animals may be sold on the auction floor.

All animals must be owned by the exhibitor, be under the supervised feeding of the County Agent or Vocational Ag teacher and state validated by the following dates: Calves, July 1, 1997; Lambs, Nov. 1, 1997; Hogs, Dec. 1, 1997.

Only four entries per division may be shown by an exhibitor. Only three animals per exhibitor, not to exceed two per species, can be sold in county. Only two animals per exhibitor, not to exceed one per species, can be sold. No out of county animals will be sold in the auction.

Insurance
eases plight

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) - The Agriculture Department has made its canola insurance program permanent, making it easier for wheat and barley farmers to add canola to their crop rotation.

Tom Borgen, a director of the Northern Canola Growers Association, said the decision could cause production of the plant in North Dakota to grow by leaps and bounds this year. Seeds from canola are used to make an oil prized for its low saturated fat.

In 1997, North Dakota planted roughly 490,000 acres of canola. Initial projections indicate farmers in the state could plant as many as 850,000 acres in 1998.

The state's 1997 canola production set a record, at 590 million pounds, USDA said.

As wheat prices drop, canola production will become all the more attractive, especially if farmers can insure it in the same way as other crops, Borgen said.

Oldham 4-H'er captures sheep show win

Mika Karber, a Oldham Co. 4-H member, was tabbed as the Five-County Grand Champion lamb at the Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show Friday.

Ashlee Hunt of Friona FFA took Five-County Reserve Champion lamb honors.

Savannah McKay of Deaf Smith County 4-H took the County Grand Champion lamb honors.

Amanda Andrews, a Deaf Smith County 4-H member, was tabbed as the County Reserve Champion lamb.

These champions all came out of classes in the Mediumwool division. M'Kell Jarecki of Friona FFA finished first in the Five-County senior showmanship.

In the County senior showmanship contest, Deaf Smith County 4-H'er Kylee Auckerman won first.

Ky Kirby of Dimmitt FFA finished first in the Five-County junior showmanship.

In the County junior showmanship contest, Deaf Smith County 4-H'er Eddie Trotter won first.

Lee Denzer judged the lamb show and showmanship contests.

The following is the complete results of the lamb show.

If two numbers appear, the first number is the five-county placing and the second number is the county placing.

Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show

Many fine examples of livestock will be paraded through the Hereford Bull Barn in the coming Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show Wednesday, January 28th through Saturday, January 31st, but the real prize winners will be those young men and women who are showing them. FirstBank Southwest of Hereford proudly commends each participant in this year's show - not solely for their many achievements, but more importantly for their willingness to learn, from the ground up, a trade that has made our area a leader in agriculture.
