City infrastructure pondered at session

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

The "infrastructure" of the City of Hereford -- streets, sewer lines and water mains -- drew the attention in a work session of the City Commission Wednesday evening.

Rick Whitehorn, city water superintendent, described the sewer and water lines, observing that in older areas of the city replacement will be necessary in the next few years.

Whitehorn reported that 15 to 20 miles of the city's 68 miles of sewer lines should be worked on. And, 15 to 20 miles of the water distribution system of 79 miles should be replaced.

He told the commission that the replacement should upgrade two-inch water lines to at least four-inch.

Asked by Mayor Bob Josserrand about preparing the water distribution and sewer system for the year 2000, Whitehorn said replacement of five miles of sewer lines would "take care of the most troubled areas."

Whitehorn said one of the most serious problems with the sewer lines is related to tree roots that invade the lines through deteriorating joints.

In the water system, he said approximately 100 of the 400 hydrants need replacement and valves in some areas are faulty.

The mayor and commission suggested to Whitehorn that he and the City Manager Chester Nolen prepare a list of needs of the water and sewer system, by priority.

Josserrand also asked Nolen to pursue a "mechanism" for assisting citizens who want their streets paved.

Noting that no contractor in Hereford now works with residents on assessment paving projects, the mayor suggested that the city search for a mechanism to accomplish that purpose.

Commissioners reported and discussed continuing projects, including:

- A new swimming pool.
- Economic development.

Josserrand hosts second breakfast

By GEORGIA TYLER

Breakfast with Mayor Bob Josserrand brought to the fore a problem that seems to have plagued a sizeable number of Hereford citizens for a long time.

During the breakfast meeting Thursday morning, Paul Coneway presented a petition, he said he will distribute for signatures, asking for changes in procedures of the Santa Fe Railway within the city limits.

Coneway's petition complained about the five railroad crossings in the city, calling the crossings "a shame and disgrace to our city and actually dangerous to vehicle crossing."

Support for Coneway's petition seemed unanimous among the 16 persons in attendance at the breakfast event, instituted last fall by Josserrand to establish communication between city government and citizens of Hereford.

The mayor reviewed projects being undertaken or continued by the city, such as the water development program, new swimming pool, trash disposal and economic development.

He also noted that bids opened, but not acted on by the City Commission, for vehicles present a continuing trouble spot.

"The police car bids will stay at home but the low on pickups is from Amarillo," Josserrand said.

He said state laws require accepting the low bid, regardless of location of the bidder.

"I think we ought to do what is in the best interest of the City of Hereford," said Earl Stagner.

Josserrand replied that the city attorney has looked into the situation in the past and found no legal solution, except to award contracts to low bidders, regardless of location.

A question asked the mayor about the city's position on rundown

Clinton calls for counsel

Reno vows investigator of S&L will be 'ruggedly independent'

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The special counsel investigation of the Clintons' 1980s Arkansas real estate investment will be "ruggedly independent" and include its relationship with a now-failed failed savings and loan, Attorney General Janet Reno says.

President Clinton reluctantly called for the investigation Wednesday, dropping his opposition to an independent review after the White House concluded there was no other way to halt a growing political controversy.

"We believe that a special counsel can conduct an independent and fair inquiry and we believe that it will show what we believe, that the Clintons did nothing wrong," Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said.

Even with their victory, Republicans who for weeks demanded appointment of a special counsel were not satisfied, questioning whether Reno's choice would be impartial and demanding that Congress conduct a special investigation of its own into the Whitewater Development Corp.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said the fact that Reno was acting at Clinton's request indicated "she's not in effect an independent attorney general."

The White House and congressional Democrats quickly accused the GOP of playing politics with the issue, and Reno sought to assure Republicans and the public that the investigation would be truly independent and comprehensive.

"The person I choose I want to be ruggedly independent," Reno said, adding that she would name someone "as soon as possible."

In a letter to Reno, White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum asked for appointment of a special counsel to "conduct an appropriate independent investigation of the Whitewater matter and report to the American people."

Reno, however, described Nussbaum's letter as seeking an outside investigation of "all matters concerning the Madison bank investigation in Arkansas."

The now-defunct Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan was run by James McDougal, who also was Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton's partner in Whitewater.

Justice Department investigators are trying to determine whether depositors' funds were diverted from Madison to help retire Clinton's 1984 gubernatorial campaign debt and whether thrift money was improperly deposited in the Whitewater account.

Some Republicans also have questioned Mrs. Clinton's legal work on behalf of the S&L in the mid-1980s when it sought approval from Arkansas regulators for a recapitalization effort.

Since the issue first surfaced during the 1992 presidential campaign, the Clintons have repeatedly said they lost nearly $70,000 on the investment and did nothing wrong.

Hereford featured in national paper

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Publisher-Editor

Hereford was revisited by The Wall Street Journal recently and a Wednesday article compares the community it featured as "a paragon of economic prowess" 27 years ago with current prospects.

"With Its Sights Set Lower, Hereford Does Just Fine," is the headline of the article, written by Michael Allen and included in the Texas Journal section of the newspaper.

Allen explains that the article 27 years ago reported the town had just capped a blitzkrieg campaign to attract new companies by landing a new $23 million sugarbeet factory. Population had soared 40 percent in five years, to 12,568, and jobs were up by 600.

The story points out that, in some ways, Hereford is now in a spot which much of rural Texas finds itself. "With oil prices in the tank, and agriculture a dwindling part of the economy, small towns throughout the state are grappling with job losses and an aging, declining population."

But even amid this gloomy outlook, "some people still view Hereford as a paragon of sorts," the article states. "Although it hasn't attracted any major businesses in years, some home-grown operations have thrived. And, while population fell slightly during the last census, Hereford still has about 10 percent more people than it did in 1970."

The article points out the "most telling example of home-grown growth" can be found at Hereford-Bio-Products and Merrick Pet Foods. It also outlines the support of Hereford Industrial Foundation in funding construction of building for Poarch Brothers to make new implements for cotton harvesters, and the county granting tax abatement for a Holly Sugar expansion.

While the 1967 article reported the city airport being a hub of activity and that "downtown throbs with new vitality," the current article reports the airport is much quieter and downtown now has its share of empty storefronts. And, it reports the town is on the verge of losing one of its cultural treasures, the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, primarily because of location and the corresponding lack of visiting tourists.

"Much of rural Texas, as much of rural America, is in a state of decline, and if Hereford has been able to hold its own, it has been successful," the article quotes Greg Taylor, a rural sociologist at Texas A&M University.

Bodyguard admits role in attack

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Tonya Harding's bodyguard told investigators that he and Harding's husband set up the attack that nearly knocked rival figure skater Nancy Kerrigan out of the Olympics, news reports say.

Bodyguard Shawn Eric Eckardt said Harding's husband, Jeff Gillooly, asked him to arrange the Jan. 6 attack, in which Kerrigan was clubbed in the knee. The Oregonian newspaper reported today, citing unidentified law enforcement sources.

By early today, no arrests had been made.

Authorities said there was no indication that Harding helped plan the attack or had any knowledge of it, according to The Oregonian and NBC.

Harvey Schiller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said Harding's participation in the Winter Games shouldn't be affected.

"There's no indication that Tonya's involved at all and our goal is to make her as competitive as possible for the games in Lillehammer," Schiller said this morning on NBC's "Today."

Schiller was reluctant to discuss the latest reports on the Kerrigan attack, saying they remained "speculative."

The investigation spread to three states as authorities in Oregon, Michigan and Arizona pieced together the story of the attack, which was apparently aimed at wrecking Kerrigan's chance to compete in last week's U.S. Figure Skating Championships, the qualifying trials for the Olympics next month in Lillehammer, Norway.

The scheme allegedly involved Eckardt, Gillooly, an Eckardt acquaintance in Phoenix and a Portland man who hit Kerrigan for $100,000, The Oregonian reported.

NBC quoted sources as saying that after the men met in Portland, the hit man went to Boston, where Kerrigan lives and trains. It was there the investigators believe he planned to attack Kerrigan, but bad weather somehow fouled the attempt, NBC said.

Later in Detroit, a man brandishing a club struck Kerrigan after a practice session at the U.S. championships, severely bruising her right leg and forcing her to withdraw from the competition. The attacker escaped after breaking the glass out of a locked arena door.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association named Kerrigan to the Olympic team anyway, along with Harding, who won the U.S. championship two days after the attack.

Gillooly said Tuesday he had been questioned by the FBI, but denied any involvement. "I wouldn't do that," he said. "I have more faith in my wife than to bump off her competitor."

TCGA meeting held in Dimmitt

DIMMITT--The new administration and the 1995 farm bill offer hope for changes for the better, speakers at the Texas Corn Growers Association annual meeting said Wednesday.

Agricultural leaders from various organizations outlined their views on the future of production agriculture in a panel discussion. Each speaker expressed optimism and encouraged farmers and citizens to get involved in the process.

"For the first time in a long time, I'm feeling optimistic," said Harvey Joe Sanner, Arkansas farmer and executive vice president of American Agriculture Movement. He also expressed confidence in the ag secretary, Mike Espy.

Another American Ag Movement leader, Nebraska corn farmer Corky Jones, said it is important for the public to understand that the new farm bill affects not only the farmer but every citizen. He said agriculture profitability is "the salvation of a good standard of living."

State Rep. Pete Lancy, speaker of the House, was a featured guest speaker on the program. Other speakers included Carl King, TCGA president, and Gary Goldberg, president of the American Corn Growers Association.

Alliance names seven directors

Seven new directors were elected and Jan Furr, president pro-tem, reviewed activities and achievements of the Hereford Beautification Alliance for the past 18 months during a board meeting Tuesday night at Hereford Community Center.

Furr also named a nominating committee composed of Ruth Knox, Charmayne Klett, Bobbie Riddle, Pat Reily and Audine Dettman. They will recommend a new slate of officers to the board before the end of the month.

Mayor Bob Josserrand attended the meeting and commended HBA for their work the past year. "You have made a difference," Josserrand said of the board and executive coordinator

Jan Furr.

In her review of HBA activities, Furr highlighted the Great Texas Trash-Off with six Hereford school campuses participating; a public awareness program to inform residents about the Alliance's goals and activities; the extended beautification program within the city; recycling efforts with Hereford's ENCORE project; and conducting four clean-up days on littered and weed-infested sites within the city.

Furr said HBA "starts the new year with great promise" in working with the City of Hereford and High Plains Resource Conservation and Development in parks improvement.

When approved, the HPRC&D will provide financial and technical assistance for the project, while funds for park improvements will come from the voluntary assessment program implemented in 1991 through the city water department. The fund now totals about $120,000.

New board members elected Tuesday night were Mal Manchoe, Jan Weishaar, Joe Lambert, Wayne Winget, Lydia Villanueva, Wade Easley and James McDowell.

Membership dues for the Alliance are now due. Individual membership is $5 and businesses are $10. Membership forms can be obtained at City Hall and should be mailed to HBA, Box 1367, Hereford.

Mexican president sends mediator

Troubleshooter seeks meeting with Indian rebels

By ANITA SNOW
Associated Press Writer

OCOSINGO, Mexico (AP) - A presidential troubleshooter toured the scene of some of the fiercest fighting in a rebel uprising in southern Mexico hours after President Carlos Salinas de Gortari announced a cease-fire.

Manuel Camacho Solis, the special commissioner appointed to mediate the conflict in Chiapas state, reiterated his desire Wednesday to meet with the Indian rebels.

"I am willing to meet with the representatives of the organization when they think it is convenient," he said before traveling by car to Ocosingo.

The government news agency Notimex said without elaborating that Camacho has already established preliminary contacts with the rebels.

He was accompanied by Monsignor Samuel Ruiz, the Roman Catholic bishop of the Chiapas city of San Cristobal de las Casas and an outspoken advocate of Indian rights.

Earlier in the day, a tired-looking Salinas announced a unilateral cease-fire in southern Mexico after the army gained most of the control over the area previously dominated by the rebels.

Salinas said soldiers would fire only if they are attacked by the Zapatista National Liberation Army, which staged a New Year's uprising in Chiapas state on behalf of poor Mayan Indians.

He also called on the rebels to turn in their weapons and promised to pardon them in return.

The rebels have said they would talk to the government if they stop bombing, withdraw troops and recognize their movement. The government's initiative has prompted no immediate response from the rebels, though there also was no new fighting after the government's announcement.

The rebels have vowed to carry their war to Mexico City, a metropolis of 18 million people, if their demands are not met. The guerrillas have been blamed for a series of bombings last week in the capital and in the Pacific resort of Acapulco.

In the capital, about 11,000 people marched through the streets denouncing Salinas and calling for a peaceful solution to the conflict. "Dialogue yes, bombs no!" the marchers shouted.

The president leaves office this election year and the uprising, the first in Mexico in two decades, casts a shadow over his six-year term. It also coincided with the entrance Jan. 1 of the North American Free Trade Agreement, Salinas' crowning achievement.

The rebels had said the accord linking the economies of the United States, Mexico and Canada, is a "death sentence" for the country's indigenous and farming communities.

Salinas said army troops achieved their first goal to drive out the rebels, who had retreated to mountain and jungle hideouts after soldiers rooted them out of towns they seized.

About 14,000 government soldiers are stationed in Chiapas, compared to rebels' estimated 1,000 to 2,000 fighters.

Officials say 107 people have died in the fighting, although church groups put the number higher.

In Ocosingo, Camacho was swarmed by townsfolk as he toured the market where just a week ago lay the bodies of many of the 60 people killed here following the uprising.

"It was an historic day for the people of Chiapas," Ruiz, the bishop, told reporters after returning to San Cristobal. "We can't solve all the problems, but we understand them and are working on them."

Wednesday was the first day in a week that reporters could visit the hard-hit towns off the southbound highway and the first day people who live in those towns could travel out. Telephone service and electricity remains cut off to most of the towns and food and water supplies are low.

In the village of Oxchuc, about 700 people from the nearby mountain town of Tobilja that suffered government aerial attacks last week have sought refuge in the village school.

The refugees, all Indians, were too frightened to give their names to visiting members of the government's National Commission on Human Rights.

Rebels occupied the towns for days, saying they were fighting for better living conditions and an end to exploitation and oppression of Mexico's Indians.

Mayor meets citizens

Hereford Mayor Bob Josserand, fourth from left, visited with more than a dozen citizens Thursday morning during the second in a series of "Breakfast with the Mayor" events. Among those

The breakfast meeting also produced some questions about such issues as junk cars parked in yards and alley and private property weeds.

"Now, those are things we can do something about, if we know," said Josserand.

The proposed petition presented by Coneway is addressed to the president of the Santa Fe Railway.

"I always say you need to go to the top," said Coneway.

He reported that a survey a few years ago counted 2,800 vehicles using the Main Street crossing on the railroad in a single day.

"I don't think they're (the trains) supposed to block a crossing for more than five minutes," continued

Coneway. "But sometimes, the crossings are blocked for 30 minutes, or more."

Coneway's petition drew general approval of the citizens attending the breakfast. He said he would leave copies in several locations in Hereford to collect as many signatures as possible.

Concluding the early-morning event, Bobby Owen commended the mayor and other officials for their efforts to better the quality of life in the city.

"I want to thank the city... we're lucky. We have a place to live and work," said Owen.

Josserand responded, "We have a young city commission. They all want to make a difference here."

-- A 17-year-old female was arrested on a theft by check warrant.

-- A 23-year-old male was arrested on traffic warrants.

-- Burglary of a house was reported six miles north of Hereford.

A suggestion to employ a building supervisor for the project, with the city acting as general contractor, was received favorably by the commission. A prospect for the position will be approached, said Black.

Commissioner Wayne Winget gave an overview of the approach being taken on economic development by a joint committee of the city and Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce.

Bids opened recently for the first phase of the water development program came in approximately $70,000 under estimates, Nolen told the commission.

Bids will be reviewed and contracts awarded at the next regular commission meeting, set for Monday. Commissioners agreed that some improvements in the city's parks should be undertaken in time for use during the spring and summer.

"I know Hereford Beautification Alliance would like to see us wait for a long-range plan," said Josserand, "but I believe the people of Hereford expect us to get started."

Consensus of commissioners was that rest room facilities and some picnic areas could be provided without putting a long-range plan aside.

For more than two years, a voluntary $1 per month assessment on city water bills has been collected for park improvements. Assistant City Manager Mike Hatley said the fund now stands at approximately $119,000.

Winget suggested that rest rooms be built in Dameron Park and in the park at 15th and Avenue H. "We can easily find two or three locations where rest rooms are needed."

Black agreed, saying he believes, "We need to do something, visible, and do it now."

Nolen was asked to prepare a list of places where facilities may be installed without upsetting a long-range plan.

At the conclusion of the session, Pat Reilly, reported that EnCoRe is discontinuing, at least for the time being, collection of recyclable materials each month.

Young mothers can decrease risks of getting breast cancer

BOSTON (AP) - The longer mothers breast feed, and the younger they begin, the more they lower their risk of getting breast cancer before menopause, a large study has found.

It found that a woman who begins breast feeding in her teens and continues for at least six months cuts the risk almost in half.

The study found no evidence that nursing prevents the disease from occurring after menopause. Breast cancer before menopause is relatively rare.

Except for those who began nursing in their teens, the reduction in risk was generally small, about 22 percent. The finding is still noteworthy because breast feeding represents one of the few voluntary things

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Vanna White says an electronics manufacturer spelled trouble for itself by putting out a commercial featuring a robot that resembled her.

The "Wheel of Fortune" letter-turner is suing Samsung Electronics over the ad, which features a robot in a red sequined dress and blond wig, on a set similar to that of White's show.

White testified Tuesday that she never gave Samsung permission to use her likeness in advertisements for videocassette recorders.

She said she works hard to maintain her image and does not take product endorsements lightly.

Herd to host Borger cagers Friday

Hereford will host Borger Friday in the season's first District 1-4A basketball doubleheader. The girls' varsity game will be at 6 p.m. and the boys will start at about 7:30, both in Whiteface Gym.

Both Hereford teams are coming off wins over Petersburg on Tuesday, when the Hereford girls improved to 8-12 and the boys improved to 6-14. The girls are 1-1 in district. Friday is the district opener for boys.

Borger's girls will be looking for their 20th win of the season. At 17-4, Borger had the best record by far of any district team through the non-district schedule. Their district wins over Dumas and Pampa run that record to 19-4.

Borger's boys (13-7) also had the best non-district record in the district, edging Pampa's 13-8. At 6-14, Hereford has the third-best record by one loss: Caprock and Randall both are 6-15. Dumas is 3-15.

The girls teams have all played two district games. Borger and Randall (10-9) are 2-0. Hereford and Dumas (10-10) are 1-1. Pampa (2-15) and Caprock (1-20) are 0-2.

In Friday's other District 1-4A doubleheaders, Pampa visits Dumas and Caprock plays Randall.

Hereford's sub-varsity basketball teams are in action this weekend, including three games on the undercard Friday.

The junior varsity teams also host

Borger, with the boys playing at 6 p.m. and the girls at 7:30, both in the Hereford Junior High gym. The Hereford sophomore boys also will host Borger, at 4:30 Friday.

Hereford's freshman teams will take on Amarillo High Saturday morning. The boys will play in Whiteface Gym, with a B game at 10 a.m. and an A game at 11:30. The girls will play in Amarillo, with the A game at 10 and the B game at 11:30.

Carlton elected to Hall; Cepeda snubbed again

NEW YORK (AP) - Steve Carlton is off to Cooperstown and Orlando Cepeda is off the ballot.

Carlton, the only pitcher to win four Cy Young Awards, was easily elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility, receiving 436 of 455 votes Wednesday.

Cepeda, however, fell just seven votes short in his 15th and final chance. A strong letter-writing campaign by the San Francisco Giants and members of Congress almost got him in; three years from now, he can be considered by the Veterans Committee.

"It is heartbreaking because if only seven votes could've gone the other way, it would've been enough," Cepeda said.

It takes 75 percent to be elected - 342 votes this year - in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. While Carlton got 95.8 percent, the fifth-highest in history, Cepeda got 335 votes and was stuck at 73.6 percent.

"While I've never been one to place a great emphasis on individual awards, I'm touched to be elected to the Hall of Fame," Carlton said. "To be included among the game's greatest players is truly a great honor."

Among the others who missed this year were 300-game winners Phil Niekro (273 votes) and Don Sutton (259), and Tony Perez (263). Cepeda and Perez each hit 379 home runs.

Carlton was 329-244 with a 3.22 ERA in a career from 1965-88, most of it with the Philadelphia Phillies. He is ninth on baseball's win list - second among left-handers to Warren Spahn's 363 victories - and second in strikeouts with 4,136. "Lefty" shares the NL record of 19 strikeouts in a game.

Carlton won the Cy Young Award with the Phillies in 1972, 1977, 1980 and 1982. He helped pitch Philadelphia to its only World Series victory in 1980. His greatest season was 1972, when he went 27-10 with a 1.98 ERA for a team that won a total of 59 games.

Cepeda was an 11-time All-Star. He batted .297 with 1,365 RBIs and 2,351 hits. Carlton and Cepeda played together for two full seasons and helped the St. Louis Cardinals reach the World Series in 1967-68.

Cepeda became the latest player to be a near-miss for election. Nellie Fox fell two votes shy in 1985 and Jim Bunning was seven votes short in 1988.

Cowboys must slow down Sharpe

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It doesn't take a Scotland Yard detective to ferret out the Dallas Cowboys defensive game plan this Sunday in their NFC divisional playoff game against the Green Bay Packers.

Stop Sterling Sharpe.

Sharpe, who set an NFL record with 112 receptions this year, caught three touchdown passes last week in the Packers 28-24 wildcard victory over Detroit.

Defensive coordinator Butch Davis has this simple plan: Find Sharpe, watch him, and keep him from going deep.

Davis hopes his defensive backs are hearing him. Larry Brown does.

"You better keep your focus at all times or Sharpe will beat you deep,"

Brown said. "He doesn't have blazing speed like some of those 4.2 sprinters. But he has good football speed. He just seems to be able to get away from defensive backs."

The defending Super Bowl champions know all about the mercurial All-Pro receiver of the Packers. They held him to four passes for 34 yards in a 36-14 victory in October.

But the damage Sharpe can do to a team was underlined by last week's performance.

"You don't shut him down you just try to limit the things he can do," said Dallas safety James Washington, a close friend of Sharpe. "Stopping Sharpe, particularly on third down, is a big concern."

Brown said there are times when desperate measures are called for.

"You can't let Sharpe get behind you like he did against Detroit,"

Brown said. "You can't give up that kind of play. You've got to tackle Sharpe, get a penalty, do anything you can."

Cornerback Kevin Smith said "You better not doze off out there. You'll look up and he'll have the ball."

Bill Bates, who plays linebacker in the Dallas nickel package, agreed that Sharpe can be dangerous.

"You try to make sure he doesn't get major yards," Bates said. "We controlled him last time but he's an elusive guy who is hard to bring down. He also is very good at running precise routes which he doesn't get credit for."

Davis said the Cowboys secondary had better be alert because of the way quarterback Brett Favre can scramble until Sharpe gets open.

"First of all, Sharpe is a unique wide receiver," Davis said. "He's great running with the ball after he gets it. He's like a running back in the open field. He's also a precise route runner and sometimes he doesn't get credit for it."

Davis continued: "Favre has a very strong arm. He has a similar velocity to Troy Aikman and Dan Marino. He also has mobility to break containment. Favre is growing in confidence that he can make a play. Sometimes he tries too hard but I think Detroit can tell you he can make plays. He's always looking to hook up with Sharpe. It's a big play combination."

"Stopping Sharpe can be one of the biggest challenges a secondary can have," said Davis. "He's the best."

Chiefs worry about Oilers' rush

By CRAIG HORST
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - In River Falls, Wis., the Kansas City Chiefs offensive linemen joked among themselves about who would be the first to give up a sack of Joe Montana.

The gallows humor worked fine under the hot July sun.

But it's not funny anymore with Montana playing like a fine piece of fragile crystal.

It's not funny when faced with the prospect of playing the aggressive, blitzing defense of the Houston Oilers Sunday in the Chiefs' biggest game of the year.

And it would have taken a brave person indeed to joke around Wednesday after one look at the stern face of 6-foot-8, 303-pound offensive tackle John Alt.

"They are a very attacking defense," Alt said. "We've got to attack them. That's our job as an offensive line - keep them off the quarterback. There are going to be some guys breaking free and it's going to be up to the quarterback to make the hot read. He's obviously the best in the business at that. But we've got to do our best to keep them off him."

Somebody asked Montana if he was "scared about getting hurt."

"No," said Monday, who has lasted 16 seasons and won four Super Bowls.

But the question has to be a legitimate concern of the Chiefs after Montana missed about half the regular season with a variety of injuries. His ribs were still a little sore Wednesday from a hit he took in the overtime victory over Pittsburgh last Saturday in the wild-card game.

Oilers coach Jack Pardee played down the Houston defense when it was praised as one of the best.

"It's really not a sell-your-farm type of thing every time," Pardee said of the Buddy Ryan-devised, blitz-oriented defense. "It's more disguised than that. But the offense

Timberwolves take revenge on Mavericks

By The Associated Press
Even the Dallas Mavericks admit they are the biggest joke in the NBA. The Minnesota Timberwolves were determined not to become their patsies.

The Wolves were stung on Dec. 23 when Dallas beat them at Minneapolis, especially when rookie Jamal Mashburn said the Mavericks wanted to beat "a quality team." Both of Dallas' victories in 32 games came at Minnesota.

"To say that after two wins is a pretty strong statement," Doug West said after scoring 23 points and holding Mashburn to four in Minnesota's 103-85 victory Wednesday night. "We cut it out and put it up on the wall in our locker room."

Before the game, the Mavericks hoped to win their first home game and avoid tying the NBA record of 16 consecutive home losses. They didn't make it, even though the Timberwolves were missing leading scorer and rebounder Christian Laettner.

"We're a joke," Mavs center Sean Rooks said. "We've got everybody and their mom making jokes about us.

We're a laughingstock. If that doesn't hit you in the gut, nothing will."

Orlando, which dropped 14 straight at home to close out the 1989-90 season, then lost two more in 1990-91, now shares the record with Dallas.

Guard Jim Jackson, who scored 24 points for Dallas, questioned the effort of some of his teammates.

"You can't just turn it on when the game starts," Jackson said. "Losing at home or on the road, it doesn't matter. This is just as bad as the others. Losing is personally wearing on me. There's no way we should be overconfident against anybody." Isaiah Rider joined West with 23 points for Minnesota.

Rockets 94, Celtics 84

Boston tied a 45-year-old team record with its sixth straight home loss and Houston broke a 12-year winless streak at Boston Garden.

The Celtics cut their biggest deficit, 63-46 with 6:40 left in the second quarter, to 68-64 with 54 seconds to go in the third.

But they came no closer as Hakeem Olajuwon matched his season high in scoring with 37 points and also had 11 rebounds and six assists.

Boston was led by Dee Brown with 16 points.

Warriors 100, Heat 92

Chris Webber spent the end of the third quarter treating a sore back, then scored 14 of his 27 points in the fourth period, lifting Golden State past Miami.

The Warriors, 13-1 overall and 7-0 at home against the Heat, outscored Miami 32-18 in the third quarter, when Chris Mullin scored 10 of his 18 points.

Matt Geiger led Miami with 22 points and 14 rebounds. Latrell Sprewell had 23 points for Golden State.

Hawks 92, Bulls 81

Atlanta beat Chicago for the first time in seven meetings and extended its Central Division lead over the Bulls to three games as Dominique Wilkins had 19 points and 10 rebounds.

The Hawks won their sixth consecutive game overall and improved their home record to 15-1 as Wilkins scored eight points in the final 7:23.

The Bulls led only once, on Horace Grant's game-opening field goal, and committed a season-high 27 turnovers. Grant finished with 18 points and 11 rebounds.

Cavaliers 118, Magic 109

Gerald Wilkins scored seven of his season-high 38 points in the final 1:15 for Cleveland at Orlando.

Wilkins made 15 of 22 shots from the field, including six of eight 3-point attempts.

Anfernee Hardaway scored 25 points and Shaquille O'Neal had 22 points and six blocked shots for the Magic.

76ers 117, Clippers 98

Jeff Hornacek scored 24 points and Dana Barros had 20 points and a career-high 12 assists as Philadelphia used 10 3-pointers to hand Los Angeles its seventh consecutive defeat.

Harold Ellis scored a career-high 23 points for the Clippers, who lost for 11th time in 13 games and dropped to 3-11 on the road.

Pacers 107, Nuggets 96

Reggie Miller scored 29 points, including 15 free throws without a miss, as Indiana won at home against Denver.

Miller, who scored 10 points in the fourth quarter, extended his free throw streak to 34 straight as the Pacers beat the Nuggets for the eighth time in nine meetings.

Aggies pull off upset of Longhorns

By The Associated Press
If Tony Barone builds Texas A&M into the basketball powerhouse he hopes, fans may look back to the season-opening victory in 1994 as a turning point.

The Aggies moved ahead of preseason Southwest Conference favorite Texas 85-84 with nine seconds left Wednesday night, then preserved the victory when Joe Wilbert blocked B.J. Tyler's jumper with three seconds to play.

In other SWC games Wednesday night, Baylor slipped past Texas Tech 83-82 and Texas Christian defeated Houston 87-76.

"We're building a program and this win should give us some confidence," Barone said. "The players should get the credit and this should help them down the road."

David Edwards, who hit two free throws with nine seconds remaining to give the Aggies the 85-84 lead, agreed with Barone about the importance of the victory for the program.

"Two years ago we would not have won this game," Edwards said. "But we've been together for three years now and that is what good teams do, they find ways to win."

Chuck Henderson helped the A&M (7-4, 1-0 in SWC) comeback by sinking two 3-pointers in the final two minutes, cutting the Longhorn lead to 84-83 before Edwards' game-winning free throws.

Tony McGinnis led the Aggies with 22 points. Edwards had 18, Damon Johnson had 17 and Henderson had 14. Johnson also had 12 rebounds.

Texas (7-6, 0-1) was led by 28 points from Tyler, who hit seven of 13 3-pointers. Albert Burditt had 20 and Roderick Anderson added 14.

Baylor also found a way to win, overcoming a 16-point second-half deficit to defeat Texas Tech 83-82 on Willie Sublett's free throw with three seconds left.

Texas Tech (4-7, 0-1 Southwest Conference) led 41-38 at the half, then traced to a 70-54 second-half lead.

But Andre Branch, who led Baylor (9-3, 1-0) with 23 points, led a 14-0 Baylor run that cut the lead to 70-68 with 5:49 left. Branch's 15-foot jumper with 18 seconds left tied the score at 82, setting up Sublett's free-throw attempts.

Tech's Jason Sasser led all scorers with 28 points, and also grabbed eight rebounds. Mark Davis scored 16 points, Lance Hughes had 11 and Koy

Georgia Tech dumps No. 1 North Carolina

By The Associated Press
It wasn't a good night to be on top. Eleven Top 25 teams were in action Wednesday night, and five of them lost. And none of the defeats was more surprising than No. 1 North Carolina's 20-point loss at Georgia Tech.

The 17th-ranked Yellow Jackets, who got a 27-point performance by Travis Best, crushed North Carolina 89-69.

It was Tech's second victory in a row over the Tar Heels when they are ranked No. 1, the other coming in the final of last year's Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. Tech also beat Duke 80-79 a year ago when the Blue Devils were ranked No. 1.

"We gave one of the finest performances I've seen since I've been coaching here," Tech's Bobby Cremins said after collecting his 250th victory at Tech and 350th overall in 19 years on the bench.

"Tech played a tremendous game," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "That's not just the coach talking. I think anyone who saw the game would say that. Maybe they're better than we are every night, but I hope not."

Best scored 10 of his 27 points in the final 2:45, eight of those on free throws, as the Yellow Jackets (10-3, 1-2 ACC), who never trailed, snapped Carolina's 10-game winning streak. The Tar Heels dropped to 12-2 and 2-1.

In other games, No. 8 Kentucky beat Mississippi 98-64, No. 9 Purdue beat Michigan State 89-77, No. 12 Wisconsin lost to No. 18 Minnesota 90-53, No. 20 Boston College lost to Seton Hall 61-53, No. 22 Alabama-Birmingham beat Sacramento State 88-46, No. 24 Vanderbilt lost to Alabama 73-67, No. 25 Missouri lost to Notre Dame 77-73, and No. 25 Xavier of Ohio beat Dayton 57-46.

Tech also got 22 points from James Forrest, eight of those in the last 3:10 when the Jackets took control after Eric Montross' jump hook closed the deficit to 68-64 with 3:55 to play.

Montross led the Tar Heels with 20 points.

Notre Dame 77, No. 25 Missouri 73 At South Bend, Ind., Ryan Hoover hit five 3-pointers and scored 25 points, all in the second half.

Tech's Gaines takes Abilene job

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Gary Gaines, who coached Odessa Permian to the 1989 state title and was featured in the bestseller "Friday Night Lights," is returning to District 4-5A.

Gaines, 44, is giving up his job coaching inside linebackers at Texas Tech to try building a program at Abilene High that could one day challenge perennial power Permian for the district title.

The Eagles are 8-51 in the last six seasons, including 1-9 last year.

Talk continues about college basketball boycott

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Talk of boycotting college basketball games remains just that, but it's getting louder.
 Coaches across the country are lining up behind the Black Coaches Association, which is spearheading the boycott movement but won't say when it might happen.
 And while support is by no means unanimous, even those who are reluctant to walk out say they'd go along in a show of unity.
 "Sometimes you just have to do what you have to do," California coach Todd Bozeman said. "Whatever the coaches decide, I'll abide by that decision."
 BCA director Rudy Washington, the basketball coach at Drake, has said a boycott was likely and would involve players as well as coaches. It could conceivably last the rest of the season, he said.

 Washington wouldn't comment further on Wednesday, although when asked if the effort to drum up support for a boycott was going as well as he had expected, he replied, "Better."
 Coaches could act as early as Saturday, which would coincide with the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Stopping games on a weekend also would knock a number of featured matchups off television, depriving the NCAA of revenue from those telecasts.
 "With all the revenue generated from basketball, I really believe the coaches are holding a couple of aces," Oral Roberts coach Bill Self said. "If it came down to that, I think the NCAA would be hurt by a boycott."

The boycott plan was triggered by a vote at the NCAA convention against restoring a 14th scholarship to Division I men's basketball. Coaches reacted bitterly to the vote, with the BCA charging that minority athletes are hurt the most by cutbacks.
 A reduction of one scholarship means 300 fewer opportunities, the BCA says, adding about two-thirds of that total likely would be black.
 Claire L. Gaudiani, president of Connecticut College and a member of the executive committee of the NCAA President's Commission, said coaches are only looking out for their own interests in seeking another scholarship at a time when universities are trimming their academic budgets.
 "It's the wrong thing. It's the wrong way to bring change. In fact, the whole approach of the BCA has been unfortunate and misguided," she said.

 "I think the thing that disappoints me the most is that they're making it a race issue and it's quintessentially not a race issue," Gaudiani said. "They're using the intimidation factor because no one wants to be labeled a racist."
 "I think to boycott is another form of intimidation, and if there's one thing you would identify as unprofessional, it's winning by intimidation."
 "The biggest thing the coaches are looking for is there has to be a sensitivity to these issues," said

Washington State coach Kelvin Sampson, a BCA member. "A lot of people say this (one scholarship) is no big deal. This may not be, but what about the last one? What about the next one?"
 "There comes a point where you have to take a stand."
 True, Tulsa coach Tubby Smith said. But is a boycott the answer?
 "It may not be the first thing I would want to do," said Smith, who is black.
 While BCA officials continue talking to fellow coaches about their threat, they've stopped talking to the NCAA. A meeting planned today between officials of the two groups was called off by the BCA, said Cedric Dempsey, executive director of the NCAA.

 Dempsey said he had no idea what the BCA planned or when it would act. But the possibility of a boycott has college administrators scurrying to figure what they would do if it actually happened.
 All 33 Division I conference commissioners scheduled a conference call for today to discuss strategy. NCAA delegates, who often use the end of convention week for vacation, instead hurried home to deal with the BCA's threat.

can't get a comfort level because it (pressure) can come at any time from any place. What we have to do is control points and get turnovers."
 Montana said the two ways to beat the Oilers were to flood the secondary with receivers and throw the ball quickly, or use two receivers and keep plenty of blockers home. The Chiefs will use a mix, he said.
 "I think what happens in a game against a team like this is you have to throw a lot of incomplete passes and then you'll hit a big play like 40 yards or 30 yards," he said.
 "You have to be patient with it, and the key is not to give them the ball," he added. "An incomplete pass can be a plus for them, but it can also be a plus for us because we're not giving them the ball. Maybe the next time you'll hit one, and that's what you kind of have to be patient with."
 Houston beat the Chiefs 30-0 in the second game of the season for their only victory in the first five games. Then the Oilers posted an 11-game winning streak with Ryan's new defense.

 Montana missed the first Houston game, but has been healthy lately and the Chiefs have seemed to fall into an uneasy kind of rhythm in their new offense.
 "It can be frustrating and fun," he said. "It's frustrating if you've got a guy open and can't find him. Then you hit a guy and it makes up for it."
 The Oilers certainly hope to pressure Montana into frustration.
 "We plan to show him a lot of different looks," Oilers end William Fuller said. "We're going to hit him. We hope he'll make some bad decisions and he'll throw us the ball."
 That's where center Tim Grunhard and his Chiefs linemates come in.
 "If we can give him an extra second, there's going to be a guy open because of all the guys on the blitz," Grunhard said.

 "They've beat us six in a row, four in a row down there. I'm sick of all these in-a-rows. I'd give up all those games to get this one. We've got a chance at the championship, and this is the first step."
Twin Debuts
MIAMI (AP) - There were two debuts in the same game, on the night of June 25, for the Florida Marlins.
 Gary Sheffield played his first game at third base for the Marlins after being obtained in a trade with San Diego. At the same time, right-fielder Darrell Whitmore played his first game for the team after being called up from the minors.
 What made it notable was the fact that both players were born on the same day, Nov. 18, 1968.

Murder victim will not be forgotten by family

By CYNTHIA PUCKETT
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The senseless slaying of a young woman in Amarillo has kept investigators baffled for more than 15 years, and police say they have no new leads to pursue in the death of Trena Joy Anderson.

But the woman's relatives don't want her story to be forgotten or the case to be shelved.

One investigator said the murder may have been committed by someone just passing through town on Interstate 40. In that case, police may never know who killed the young woman.

Anderson, 20, was riding in a car with two friends, Larry Dean Homen, 18, and Mike Jerome Friemel, 19, after a weekend trip to Greenbelt Lake in August 1978.

Homen told police that he was driving the Grand Prix that belonged to Friemel west on Interstate 40 between Western Street and Bell Avenue when he pulled in front of another car, cutting it off. The driver of the other car, apparently angered by being cut off, started chasing the Grand Prix, Homen told police. The Grand Prix led the pursuing car through a residential area and then onto Bell Street, records show.

Homen said he stopped at the intersection of Bell Street and Plains Boulevard because the other vehicle was trying to run him off the road.

Friemel told police that he did not get a good look at the vehicle, but when Homen was forced to slow down, he said he saw the driver, later describing him as a white male with gray or blond hair, records show.

Friemel told police that he saw the driver hold a long-barreled shotgun or rifle out the window, records show. Friemel said initially that it was possible that there was a passenger in the car.

The other vehicle pulled up beside the gray and silver Grand Prix and Homen said he heard Friemel yell out that a man in the other car had a gun. Friemel said he couldn't remember saying anything to Homen relating to the gun, but said Homen did accelerate to get away from the other car, records show.

Homen told police that as he started pulling away from the intersection, he heard a shot. Homen said that he drove toward his home at 3515 Rutson Drive and had reached 34th Avenue and Bell before either he or Friemel realized that Anderson, who had been in the back seat, had been shot.

Homen said he drove to his house where his mother, a nurse, tried to revive the woman until police arrived.

Anderson's sisters recalled the night they got the fateful telephone call from officials telling them their sister had been shot.

Wanda Vinyard of Shamrock said that as she talked to the police officer who called her, she couldn't believe what she was hearing.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "Something like that wasn't supposed to happen to my sister."

"No one could figure out how our little sister could be shot," said Audrine Olson of Amarillo.

An autopsy performed on Anderson shows she died of a shotgun blast to the head that injured her brain and severed her spinal cord.

When the Anderson family gathered at the hospital, they not only had to deal with their sister's death, they had to deal with an inattentive staff, Olson said.

"We asked if there was someone we could go to they could tell us what happened. We were just standing there. There was no doctor; no one assisting us."

Olson said she had called her attorney when she learned of the shooting and he was at the hospital with the family. The attorney offered his home as a place for the group to meet with police officers.

Once there, two officers related the evening's events to the family and the attorney and told them that three suspects had been taken into custody, Olson said during a recent interview. Records show that the three suspects, all juveniles, were allowed to sober up before talking to police.

The officers also told the family that police were looking for a weapon that one of the three suspects said had been thrown from the vehicle along Interstate 27.

Olson said her parents, now deceased, were at that meeting. When her father, C.P. Anderson, learned about the three youngsters in custody he said, "We can't help Trena now, but we need to be concerned about the parents of those boys and what they're going to go through."

Police records show that officers spotted a red car going the wrong way on Buchanan Street, but when they tried to pull it over, the red car led officers on a high-speed chase down Amarillo Boulevard and onto the Canyon Expressway. The red car was finally stopped on Farm-to-Market Road 2219, three miles west of the Canyon Expressway, records show.

As police were preparing to take the juveniles into custody, a message was broadcast that Anderson had died.

Police records show that a 20-gauge shotgun shell was found in the red car that was the same size as a shell casing and plastic wadding found near Anderson's body. However, investigators said they never found a weapon.

The boys were booked into the city jail for investigation of homicide and then were later released after giving investigators an alibi, records show.

Another of Anderson's sisters, Clea Riley, also of Shamrock, said she would like for investigators to back up and check the gaps in information that was collected.

Olson said, "I would like to know for a fact that somebody was investigating it. That somebody cared."

Lt. Ed Smith, who heads the Potter-Randall Special Crimes unit, said investigators periodically go over unsolved cases, looking for something that might have been missed previously. Smith said it's possible that Anderson was shot by someone passing through Amarillo on Interstate 40, in which case, the homicide may never be solved.

"And it's possible that whoever shot her didn't know that someone was in the car. They might have been just trying to scare the boys, and might not have ever known that they killed someone."

Riley described her little sister as a family favorite who was always clowning around and cutting up.

"She didn't want to be boring," Riley said.

Anderson loved poetry and music and was majoring in art at West Texas State University. Her sisters said they feel fortunate that Anderson left enough paintings behind for each member of the family to have at least one.

She was the youngest of eight children; her father was a farmer, her mother a nurse.

Olson described Anderson as a joyful spirit who never harmed anyone.

Holidays were always big events for the Anderson family, which always gathered together to celebrate.

"Wouldn't it have been something to have seen Trena and her little ones at Christmas?" she said.

Bobbitt's wife testifies he used 'Marine Corps torture'

By ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press Writer

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) - Her voice breaking, Lorena Bobbitt testified that her husband often flew into a rage over irritations such as a request to turn down the TV and would rape her and use his Marine training to torture her.

Mrs. Bobbitt, on trial for cutting off her husband's penis, told the jury Wednesday that an angry John Bobbitt forced her to have anal intercourse one night after she told him the television was too loud.

"He grabbed me and he turned me ... and I was with my stomach down and he did it," she said haltingly, looking at the floor and twisting in her chair. "I was bleeding."

From then on, every time they had sex, he would threaten to do it again, she said.

Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, is charged with malicious wounding in the June 23 attack. If convicted, the Ecuadoran-born manicurist could get up to 20 years in prison and be deported.

The defense says Mrs. Bobbitt was a battered wife driven to temporary insanity when she mutilated her husband. She claims Bobbitt raped her moments before she cut off his penis. He was acquitted of that charge last year.

Bobbitt, 26, who has held a series of jobs since leaving the Marine Corps, has denied ever abusing his wife.

Dr. Sue Inman, who treated Mrs. Bobbitt for hyperventilation and other problems in 1991, testified that Mrs. Bobbitt told her she was having problems with her husband.

"She said he had sex with her without her permission. She was very embarrassed about that," she said.

Bobbitt used "Marine Corps torture techniques" to terrorize her, Mrs. Bobbitt testified. When her lawyer asked her to demonstrate, she put her hands around her neck and said her husband would choke her and twist her arms and feet.

She said her husband flew into a rage when she asked him about a telephone conversation in which a potential employer berated him for missing a job interview.

"He kicked me, he punched me, he slapped me in my face. He tortured me and he raped me," she said.

Soon after they married in 1989, Bobbitt got angry when men whistled at her and a friend on an outing to a Maryland beach, she said.

"He grabbed me and pulled me by the hair. He said, 'What are you doing?' He was very upset, very mad," she said. He ordered everyone to the car, where he kept poking her and pulling her hair, she said.

"I was just looking out the window, out the side, but he thought I was looking at guys," she said.

Mrs. Bobbitt is scheduled to retake the stand when the trial resumes Friday.

Richards, Bush spar over plan to deal with state juvenile crime

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Democratic Gov. Ann Richards has taken the wraps off her plan for reforming the juvenile justice system. But Republican gubernatorial hopeful George W. Bush's campaign says it's too little, too late.

"Gov. Ann Richards has been in office for 1,093 days. Today, for the first time, she issued a plan for juvenile justice reform," said Bush campaign manager Brian Berry.

In the proposal made public Wednesday, Richards called for tougher punishment for juveniles committing adult crimes and for instituting actions she said would allow parents, teachers, students and community residents to take back schools and neighborhoods.

"This program will give us a comprehensive system of punishments for violent juvenile offenders," she said. "It also provides a mechanism to prepare youthful offenders to get out of the cycle of crime before they reach adulthood."

Richards said her staff has been preparing the plan for months. They worked closely with the Texas Youth Commission, Texas Juvenile Probation Commission, law enforcement and school officials, she said.

"But I also sat down with high school students around the state. They told me that what they needed to reclaim their schools was real punishment for real crimes. And we've done that," Richards said.

Her proposal calls for: - Three levels of punishment for juveniles, ranging from community service to work camps to confinement of violent criminals in Texas Youth Commission facilities or prison.

- Keeping handguns away from juveniles. This would include mandatory charges against minors caught in possession of handguns and confinement for those who use guns in committing crimes. Richards also proposed increasing the penalties to giving or selling a handgun to a minor.

- A comprehensive program to make schools safer. The plan would include sending students who carry guns, deal drugs or break laws to alternative schools, TYC facilities or prison. It would authorize police and school officials to enforce truancy laws, increase counseling for youths and require tough alternative schools for troublemakers.

- Make prevention of crime by juveniles a priority, including placing police officers in schools and declaring a "zero tolerance" for truancy.

Richards said she also wants a law allowing judges to sentence to community service the parents of juveniles who commit crimes.

Bush began calling for a juvenile justice overhaul when he announced his candidacy in November.

In other political developments Wednesday:

- State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said he is returning more than $150,000 in campaign contributions. He said he doesn't think he should keep the money since he faces no opponent in the primary or general election.

Mount Everest, probably the highest mountain in the world, is estimated to be 29,002 feet tall.

Hutchison wants Tuesday start to ethics charges trial

AUSTIN (AP) - U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison wants her trial on ethics charges to begin Tuesday.

Visiting Judge John F. Onion Jr. however, did not immediately issue an order on when the trial would start. Earlier this week, Onion said the trial would be held in Fort Worth.

Court records Wednesday showed that Mrs. Hutchison's lead attorney, Dick DeGuerin, sent a letter to Onion stating, "We are ready to start trial on Tuesday."

He said Mrs. Hutchison would not claim "senatorial privilege" which would postpone the trial during the congressional session.

DeGuerin called "ridiculous" a request by prosecutors for 45 days before the trial begins.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, faces charges that during her 2-1/2-year tenure as Texas treasurer she used state funds, employees and computer equipment for personal and political purposes.

She has been indicted on four felony counts and one misdemeanor.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, who won the Senate seat in a special election last year, has denied any wrongdoing and blames Democrats for trying to sabotage her political career. She is seeking re-election this year to a full, six-year term.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tax man soon will be only a computer keystroke away for Texas businesses.

As tax collectors nationwide seek to move beyond the cumbersome and sometimes error-filled paper filing system, Texas will be among the first states allowing businesses to file their returns electronically.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp joined tax officials from several other states at a news conference here Wednesday to unveil a computer network allowing the nearly-instantaneous filing.

Developed by Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Corp., the network known as Tax Connect will first be used by South Carolina and Nebraska. Texas and several other states are expected to go on-line within a year and network officials are hopeful others will join rapidly.

"It's the tax agency effort to avoid being road kill on the information highway," said Harley Duncan, managing director of the non-profit governmental consortium formed to operate Tax Connect. "We need to keep pace with our customers."

Boosters say Tax Connect will benefit both businesses and taxpayers by making tax filing more efficient and less costly.

Sharp and others stressed the advantages for companies that file tax returns in more than one state. With Tax Connect, companies can simultaneously transmit their tax filings on one standardized form to the different state tax collecting agencies.

Taxpayers will benefit, Sharp said, because tax agencies will be able to respond more rapidly to consumer inquiries; less staff will be needed to process returns; and fewer mistakes will be made.

EDS has a five-year contract with the consortium, known as the TaxNet Governmental Communications Corp., to manage the network. Company and state tax officials declined to estimate the size of the contract, saying EDS' fees will depend on how many businesses use Tax Connect.

"The number of the dollars of revenues EDS is going to realize from this contract can be anywhere from tens of millions of dollars to hundreds of millions of dollars," said EDS account manager Jim Dayboch. "It's a wide range. We're optimistic."

While in Washington, Sharp met with the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, congressional staff and a top Federal Reserve official to discuss another electronic program that concerns Texas.

Sharp and others are seeking to delay implementation of a proposed government rule that would protect welfare recipients who use debit cards to draw their food stamp and Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits.

The Federal Reserve Board wants to extend to welfare recipients who draw their benefits electronically the same protections enjoyed by regular bank customers. At issue is Regulation E, a law that protects bank customers from all but $50 in charges when their debit cards are reported lost or stolen within two business days.

While consumer groups are pushing for the added protections, Sharp and others contend that the regulation could open the door to fraud and misuse of the electronic benefits transfer program.

Texas is one of several states testing electronic benefits transfer, which allow welfare recipients to draw their benefits from automatic teller machines or stores that accept debit cards. Harris County and Chambers County will be the state's pilot programs once Sharp's agency decides which company will run the program. EDS is among five bidders.

The Federal Reserve was to have voted last year on extending Regulation E protections, but delayed the vote after Vice President Al Gore called Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan seeking a delay.

Life May Begin At Forty, But Heart Disease Can Begin At Four.

A study of more than 8,000 children lasting 15 years suggests that it's especially prudent to encourage kids in the right eating habits. A diet low in saturated fats and cholesterol can actually lower a major risk factor for heart disease in children.

HIGHLIGHTS

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Monday, Jan. 3 was the candidate filing deadline for the March 8 Democratic and Republican primaries.

Gov. Ann Richards and challenger George W. Bush should win their primaries with little opposition, and U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison will face only minor challenges for the GOP nomination.

Democratic rivals vying for the right to challenge Hutchison are former Attorney General Jim Mattox, Dallas investor Richard Fisher and U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston.

Incumbent Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who has no opposition in the primary, will run against Dallas lawyer Tex Lezar, a Republican, in the general election. Louis Podesta of San Antonio and Randy Staude of Leander have withdrawn, allowing Lezar to run unopposed in the primary.

Cameron County Judge Tony Garza has joined three state district judges in the GOP primary for state attorney general. Incumbent Dan Morales is unopposed.

Sharp to Face Doggett

Republican Teresa Doggett of Austin withdrew her candidacy for state treasurer, and instead, in an 11th-hour filing, chose to run unopposed and face incumbent state Comptroller John Sharp in the general election.

Democratic incumbent State Treasurer

Martha Whitehead faces Flint teacher Grady Yarborough in the primary. Austin bank chairman David Hartman and Houston high school student Mike Wolfe filed for the GOP primary.

Incumbent Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, a Democrat, and former Public Utility Commissioner Marta Greytak, a Republican, are running unopposed in the primaries.

Also running unopposed in their primaries for agriculture commissioner are incumbent Rick Perry, a Republican, and Sulphur Springs farmer-rancher Marvin Gregory, a Democrat.

In the Railroad Commission primaries, incumbent Jim Nugent faces state Rep. Jim Earley, D-Portland; and Democratic incumbent Mary Scott Nabers will be challenged by insurance regulator David Young of Austin. In the GOP primary, former Austin mayor Carole Keeton Rylander will run unopposed.

TBSA Survey: Taxes Are Up

A survey of 201 school districts released by the Texas Association of School Boards shows the amount of property taxes paid to those districts has risen almost 5 percent.

The increase primarily was attributed to lower homestead exemptions and not to higher tax rates. According to the survey, the average tax rate for the current school year is about the same as a year ago.

The state's new property tax system, approved by the Legislature in May, returned the state to a set of homestead exemptions set by each district's school board.

Voucher Program to Be Tested

Low income students in Houston and Dallas will be the first to benefit from an experimental program offering partial scholarships in the fall.

Applicants will be eligible to receive up to $1,300 annually for tuition and fees at private schools.

"Children's Educational Opportunity Foundations" in Houston and San Antonio and civic clubs are raising seed money from the private sector for the pilot program.

Backers say the program should demonstrate the value of issuing publicly funded educational vouchers so all students could choose the school they wish to attend.

ATM Welfare Delay Urged

U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, Texas Comptroller John Sharp and officials of 18 other states say a three-year delay is needed to bring on-line an automated welfare payment system to replace the paper-based food stamp and welfare program.

Gonzalez, who is chairman of the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, has asked Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan to delay "Regulation E," which would make states liable for fraud should a welfare recipient's plastic teller card be misused or stolen. The Federal Reserve had no immediate response to Gonzalez' request.

If granted, the delay would allow states to find less costly means of converting to an electronic system. Sharp said Texas would lose $55 million a year if Regulation E goes into effect.

Bledsoe to Quit Post

Former Texas Air Control Board Chairman Kirk Watson will replace Travis County Democratic Party Chairman Gary Bledsoe, who said he would not seek another term.

Bledsoe, an assistant state attorney general who also is president of the Texas chapter of the NAACP, said his decision not to seek reelection to the office is not related to an ongoing investigation by the district attorney into allegations that he did NAACP work on state time.

Attorney General Dan Morales has placed Bledsoe on paid administrative leave until the investigation is complete.

Other Highlights

The General Land Office, the oldest state office building, will reopen in March looking like it did 137 years ago after undergoing a $4 million face lift but serving a new function — as a center for visitors to the Capitol complex.

The Newspaper BIBLE

GOD KNOWS NO 'SUPER RACE'

The day will surely come when at God's command Jesus Christ will judge the secret lives of everyone, their inmost thought and motives; this is all part of God's great plan which I proclaim.

You Jews think all is well between yourselves and God because He gave His laws to you; you brag that you are His special friends. Yes, you know what He wants; you know right from wrong and favor the right because you have been taught His laws from earliest youth. You are so sure of the way to God that you could point it out to a blind man. You think of yourselves as beacon lights, directing men who are lost in darkness to God. You think that you can guide the simple and teach even children the affairs of God, for you really know His laws, which are full of all knowledge and truth.

Yes, you teach others--then why don't you teach yourselves? You tell others not to steal--do you steal? You say it is wrong to commit adultery--do you do it? You say, "Don't pray to idols," and then make money your god instead. You are so proud of knowing God's laws, but you dishonor Him by breaking them

No wonder the Scriptures say that the world speaks evil of God because of you. Being a Jew is worth something if you obey God's laws; but if you don't, then you are no better off than the heathen. And if the heathen obey God's laws, won't God give them all the rights and honors He planned to give the Jews? In fact, those heathen will be much better off than you Jews who know so much about God and have His promises but don't obey His laws. For you are not real Jews just because you were born of Jewish parents or because you have gone through the Jewish initiation ceremony of circumcision. No, a real Jew is anyone whose heart is right with God. For God is not looking for those who cut their bodies in actual body circumcision, but He is looking for those with changed hearts and minds. Whoever has that kind of change in his life will get his praise from God, even if not from you.

Ann Landers

Make life more fun

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 70 years old and finally have a question for you. When are you going to get realistic and stop this nonsense about sex being so wonderful that people can't live without it?

Tell these kids the truth, Ann. Banana splits are wonderful, but do you want a steady diet of them? Sure sex is nice, but so is the satisfaction that comes from learning to swim well, or style your own hair, or develop a talent for writing. To read your columns, one would come to the conclusion that the kids in your vicinity don't do anything but make out.

If people like you would just shut up, kids would accept the enjoyment of sex as the earned reward for the acceptance of responsibility. If you think teenage girls who allow themselves to be used by irresponsible males are having fun, you don't have a grasp of the situation. The only way a woman can get the utmost satisfaction out of sex is when she is respected. How much respect is there in wallowing around in the back seat of a car with a boy who zips up his pants and goes home?

You are in a position to teach these kids to value themselves and to value the children they are able to produce. Why don't you do it? I am sick and tired of the degradation of what can be the most beautiful experience two people can share.—Sick of Senseless Sex

DEAR SENSELESS: Letters such as yours are a challenge because part of what you say makes some sense, and then you go off half-cocked and get goofy.

For example: You will never sell teenagers on the idea that learning to swim or style their own hair is as much fun as having sex. I wouldn't try it.

You then tell me to "shut up". Sorry, but I won't shut up. I intend to keep on telling teen-agers that back-seat sex is indecent and unrewarding and may be hazardous to their health.

The vast majority of letters in this column about teenage sex are from young readers who describe their anguish and regrets at having crossed that line. Many have added, "It was a terrible disappointment. Not worth the trouble and the worry afterward."

The next time you want to tear into me, please be a little more accurate.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently read about a school in the Midwest with the most terrific program. It grades the parents.

Parents are given marks for attending parent/teacher conferences, providing a quiet place to study, reading with their children, participating in school activities and so on. Isn't that a great idea?

It is an undisputed fact that children whose parents are involved do better in school -- and in life. Think of the impact this could have on promoting education and reducing crime. We will never solve our crime and drug problems simply by having more police, more prisons, more judges and more juries. Not if we keep pumping out more criminals.

We will solve our problems only when ALL parents are held responsible for their children. This program is an excellent way to get started. It's simple and costs nothing.—Marilyn in Spokane

DEAR SPOKANE: Terrific idea. I endorse it wholeheartedly. But what happens if the parents flunk? Do you send a note home to the grandparents?

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Auditions planned for Chamber Singers

Auditions for additional members to the Hereford Chamber Singers will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday in the choir room of the First United Methodist Church.

Interested persons may contact Bobby Boyd at 364-5345 or Dee Anne Trotter at 364-1172.

The community choir was formed in 1974 and has performed in Austin, San Antonio, Seminole, Lubbock, Amarillo, Borger, Canyon, Brisbane, Australia and the country of Romania. It was organized to give adults an opportunity to sing outside of a church choir and to provide entertainment for its listeners.

This year marks the group's 20th anniversary.

LAS VEGAS (AP) - George Burns has two years to go before his 100th birthday, and the party already is a scintilla.

The comic signed in November to play three shows at Caesars Palace on Jan. 19-21, 1996. His birthday is Jan. 20.

Caesars spokeswoman Debbie Munch said Tuesday that the shows, at $100 per ticket, have been sold out and the same is expected for a fourth show added on Jan. 18.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read your column about stretching and the best time to do it. I always thought you should stretch before exercising, as before beginning a game of tennis. My impression was that the stretching decreased the risk of injuring your muscles. I gather from your column you would prefer that people stretch after exercise rather than before.

DEAR READER: The correct answer is both. You should not play a game of tennis or engage in vigorous exercise before stretching, but you do need to warm up the body first. That is why you do some light exercise first. Then after stretching you can proceed to a more vigorous level of exercise.

After your exercise period is over, whether it is walking, jogging, strength exercises or playing tennis, you should then stretch again. I think stretching after strength exercises such as lifting weights is particularly important to maintain full flexibility after a program that involves maximum, strong muscle contractions. Stretching, as after a game of tennis, when your muscles are really warm will provide the best success in regaining flexibility. Stretching exercises are not just for athletic activity either. They help those who perform vigorous labor and should precede the day of labor and follow at the end of the work period.

I have discussed the good and the bad of stretching in Special Report 76, You Need to Stretch, along with an overall stretching program. I'm sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/76, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

A good exercise program can prevent muscle soreness. The soreness is actually from injured muscles. Stretching will help to prevent bent joints and poor posture and even improves safety. When you lose the flexibility of your neck, it gets harder and harder to turn your head to see oncoming traffic when you enter an expressway. Stretching those muscles across the front of your chest helps to prevent rounded shoulders. A combination of flexibility through stretching and strength through strength exercises, which include calisthenics, is the key to good posture.

DEAR DR. LAMB: You wrote that elderly people should not be in rooms below 65 F because of the risk of hypothermia. Do you mean at night as well as during the day? I'm 78 and live in a small house with two portable electric heaters and no gas. That would be dangerous in my opinion. As it is, I have no heat at night and wake up to a room temperature in winter varying from 44 F to 54 F. Daytime temperature is about 65 F. What are the symptoms of hypothermia? When I visit my daughter in California where the rooms seem hot to me, the kids are always sick.

DEAR READER: It is safer to keep the room environment at 65 F or more for elderly people. There is a variation in tolerance though. Some people -- those who live in cold climates -- may acclimatize to cold, possibly by developing brown fat, which gives off heat. Your California grandchildren probably don't have any brown fat. Wear a nightcap and warm night clothes if you can't keep the temperature at adequate levels.

The first evidence of hypothermia is confusion and a decline in mental functions, which is why most people who develop hypothermia are not able to take steps to protect themselves. After that, loss of muscle coordination, drowsiness, and slurred speech may occur. It may be confused with a stroke or with senility.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I don't know what to expect, but I hope you can give me some information. My 58-year-old husband was always in good health, then he developed a shaky hand. It was his left hand so it didn't bother him too much. It was worse when his hand was lying in his lap, but when he used his hand the shaking would stop. Things got worse and his left leg also began to shake. I finally got him to see a doctor, and he was diagnosed as having Parkinson's disease of the brain.

The doctor has him on Sinemet which controls his shaking for three or four hours, but then he starts shaking again.

I am concerned about what is going to happen to my husband. Is the disease fatal? Will it affect him in other ways?

DEAR READER: Individuals who have Parkinson's disease seldom die from it. The deaths that do occur are complications such as pneumonia, hip fractures and falls or choking on food, drink or secretions. It can be a long, slow illness over years.

A small area of the brain stops producing enough of a brain chemical called dopamine. Its absence starts interfering with the normal contraction and relaxation of the muscles. That causes the tremor first, and later the muscles are more or less always contracted. That makes the body stiff and may even pull the trunk forward until a person can't sit upright. The face may become an expressionless mask, and there is difficulty in walking with a normal gait.

These changes are important because a good physical therapy program with major efforts to maintain muscle function helps to maintain more normal function.

Chad Beavers awarded degree

Chad Michael Beavers of Hereford was among 224 students from Angelo State University to receive a degree during the fall commencement at the university.

Beavers received a bachelor of arts degree with a major in psychology and communication.

NEW YORK (AP) - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani knows when to share the stage - and when to ground the hottest act in town.

Giuliani's son, Andrew, has been the talk of New York since the Jan. 2 inauguration, when the moon-faced 7-year-old joined him at the podium, blowing kisses, mimicking the speech and spilling water on his father.

Andrew's antics became fodder for editorial writers and cartoonists and were satirized by David Letterman and NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

But Giuliani left the kid at home Monday when he appeared with Letterman on CBS' "The Late Show."
