Nolen: Use up

By DONALD M. COOPER
 Brand Editor

It's hot, the ground's parched, and the weather forecasters say there's no relief in sight.

That's the prescription for higher water use in the city as homeowners crank up the sprinklers to try to keep their lawns from turning into barren wastelands, and parents fill up the wading pools for their kids to have a cool place to play.

Even though water usage has jumped dramatically since the heat wave and drought conditions settled in over the Panhandle, Hereford City Manager Chester Nolen says there's no plans to curtail water service.

"We (normally) average about 4 million to 5 million gallons (of water) a day. Now we're up near 7 million gallons," Nolen said.

The city's water supply system has a capacity of 13 million gallons per day, a figure that has never been approached, Nolen said.

"Our peak was 7 1/2 million several years ago," he said, adding it wasn't during a drought, so he doesn't know why the surge in water usage.

Although the city officials are joining the farmers and ranchers in hoping for rain, Nolen said there are no plans for rationing water.

"None of our water is from the surface, it's all from wells. But we always urge conservation," he said. Residents shouldn't water during the middle of the day, "all the normal things," he said.

"Just because we have the capacity doesn't mean we need to use it," Nolen said. "We've been fortunate in the last several years. When we've gone after additional water supplies, we've gotten them. But, folks just need to be careful."

Even though the city has an adequate supply of water, the drought conditions still are having an effect. The Deaf Smith County commissioners earlier in the month enacted an open-burn policy and banned the use of fireworks.

Although farmers can burn field stubble, there are restrictions, such as no burning if the wind is 10 mph or greater, and the county fire marshal must be notified in advance.

Also, the prohibition on fireworks has caused the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce to cancel its annual Fourth of July fireworks show. The show has been tentatively rescheduled for Aug. 8, during the annual Town & Country Jubilee.

More than 100 counties in Texas have adopted burn bans that prohibit open burning. Fireworks bans also are in effect in many cities and counties across the state.

Because of the drought conditions across Texas, President Clinton earlier this week declared an emergency and ordered federal assistance to help fight wildfires and prevent future outbreaks.

Clinton's declaration followed a request by Gov. George W. Bush and other state officials, as well as a determination by the Federal Emergency Management Agency that an "extreme threat" exists in population areas because of recent wildfires.

The emergency declaration means 70 percent of the state's costs in fighting fires, now raging in Edwards, Real, Jeff Davis and Falls counties, will be picked up by the federal government under FEMA's fire suppression grant program.

The federal government also will pay for 75 percent of the cost of repositioning personnel and firefighting equipment in strategic areas where the risk of fire is extremely high.

Drought-fueled fires caused an estimated 143,000 acres to burn since May 1.

'Too many of us have become passive and disengaged. Too many of us lack confidence in our capacity to make basic moral and civic judgments, to join with our neighbors to do the work of community, to make a difference.'

- Report, National Commission on Civic Renewal

Report: America becomes nation 'of spectators'

WASHINGTON (AP) - America is becoming a "nation of spectators," according to a report that says too many people have disengaged from government and community work and calls on citizens to nurture civic life back to health.

The report was released Wednesday by the National Commission on Civic Renewal, which spent 11 1/2 years studying the state of citizenship in American life. The 18-member commission is one of several groups monitoring the nation's civic and moral condition.

"Too many of us have become passive and disengaged," said the commission, chaired by William Bennett, former Republican education secretary, and former Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. "Too many of us lack confidence in our capacity to make basic moral and civic judgments, to join with our neighbors to do the work of community, to make a difference."

Bennett told a news conference the report is tough on Americans because "it holds them responsible for many of these problems. Much of what has gone wrong has not been done to us; we have done it to ourselves."

The report contends: "Never have we had so many opportunities for participation, yet rarely have we felt so powerless. In a time that cries out for civic action, we are in danger of becoming a nation of spectators."

In May, the Council on Civil Society released a report that said family-hour TV, fewer commercials, no lotteries and strengthened divorce and tax laws would be good starting places to bolster the family, revive civil society and proclaim a public moral philosophy.

The new study, however, isn't entirely gloomy. It shows stirrings of new community action. They have uncovered cases where neighborhoods are organizing to bring back jobs, more young people are volunteering and civic entrepreneurs are using the Internet to organize.

Some negative trends are reversing course. The report says the divorce rate has declined and more teens are abstaining from sex. Crime rates, while higher than a generation ago, are falling. And student performance, though far from stellar, is up from the early 1980s.

"This report confirms statistically as well as anecdotally one of our greatest suspicions - the United States is experiencing an unprecedented weakening of self-government and personal responsibility," Bennett said.

The report, which calls on every American to become active in school, church or community organization, makes these recommendations:

- Adults, whenever possible, should commit themselves to raising children in two-parent families. More must be done to stem teen pregnancy and out-of-wedlock births. Absent fathers should be reunited with their families. Barriers to adoption should be erased and foster care should be reformed.

- Citizens should get involved in neighborhood crime watches, cleaning, repairing and patrolling public parks, and providing escorts for children walking to school.

- Pupils should be given more responsibility for cleaning up and maintaining discipline. They should be encouraged to do more community work and demonstrate civic knowledge as a condition of getting a high school diploma. A voluntary national testing system should be developed.

- The entertainment industry should be held "as accountable for civic harm" as the tobacco industry is for physical harm.

FOSTER NOTES

Court rejects Starr request

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today thwarted Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's effort to get the notes taken by White House aide Vincent Foster's lawyer during a meeting shortly before Foster's 1993 suicide.

The court, by a 6-3 vote, ruled that the attorney-client privilege of confidentiality protects against disclosure of the notes even after Foster's death.

The decision, a setback for Starr, will have an enormous lasting impact on the legal profession and all Americans who at some time seek a lawyer's help.

The justices overturned a federal appeals court ruling that Washington lawyer James Hamilton's three pages of notes might have to be surrendered to a Whitewater grand jury that issued a subpoena for them in 1995.

"It has been generally, if not universally, accepted for well over a century that the attorney-client privilege survives the death of the client in a case such as this," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court. "While the arguments against the survival of the privilege are by no means frivolous, they are based in large part on speculation."

Starr is trying to determine whether presidential aides lied about whether Hillary Rodham Clinton had a role in a White House purge of its travel office staff. She has said she had no role, but a draft memo by a former White House aide given to Whitewater investigators in 1996 says the first lady was behind the dismissals in the seven-employee office.

The memo also says that Foster spoke to Mrs. Clinton about the travel office issue.

LINE-ITEM VETO

Justices throw out '96 law

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today struck down as unconstitutional the line-item veto law that let the president cancel specific items in tax and spending measures.

The 6-3 decision said the law violates that part of the Constitution requiring every bill to be presented to the president for his approval or veto.

The court said the Constitution does not allow for what, in effect, are partial vetoes.

That type of line-item veto can be authorized only through a constitutional amendment, the justices said. The law was challenged by New York City and an Idaho potato growers' group after provisions they sought were vetoed by President Clinton.

Clinton was the first president to exercise a line-item veto, an authority sought by nearly every president this century as a tool to limit pork-barrel spending.

A federal judge ruled the line-item veto unconstitutional in February, saying Congress could not delegate such authority to the president. The line-item veto law is the only major provision of the 1994 House Republican "Contract with America" campaign manifesto that Clinton endorsed.

The law let the president sign a bill and within five days go back to reject specific spending items or tax breaks in it. Congress then could reinstate the item by passing a separate bill.

Opponents of the line-item veto argued that once a law is signed by the president, it can be changed only in the way prescribed by the Constitution for enacting a law - a congressional vote followed by the president's signature.

'INDECENT' ART

Some grants can be denied

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government can deny cash grants to artists because their work is considered indecent, the Supreme Court ruled today, saying the policy does not violate artists' free-speech rights.

The 8-1 decision said the National Endowment for the Arts can consider decency, as well as artistic merit, in deciding who gets public money for the arts.

The law "neither inherently interferes with First Amendment rights nor violates constitutional vagueness principles," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court.

"So long as legislation does not infringe on other constitutionally protected rights, Congress has wide latitude to set spending priorities," she wrote. "Congress may selectively fund a program to encourage certain activities it believes to be in the public interest."

Congress set the decency standard in 1990 after a furor over the NEA's role in funding such works as the homoerotic images of Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano's photograph of a crucifix immersed in urine.

Lower courts struck down the law, saying it was too vague and violated artists' free-speech rights under the Constitution's First Amendment.

The law requires the NEA to judge grant applications on artistic merit, "taking into consideration general standards of decency and respect for the diverse beliefs and values of the American public."

The law was challenged by a group of artists, including Karen Finley, who is known for a performance in which she smeared her nude body with chocolate to symbolize the oppression of women.

A federal judge in California ruled the law unconstitutional, as did the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sharp proposes school funding relief

AUSTIN (AP) - Relief for wealthy school districts that have to share some property tax revenue with the rest of the state and a higher guaranteed funding level for poor districts were proposed Wednesday by Democratic lieutenant governor candidate John Sharp.

Sharp, the state's comptroller, also advocated setting aside $200 million annually from Texas' tobacco lawsuit settlement to pay for building and renovating classrooms. He said education must be Texas' priority.

"Do you believe our priorities are right when we've got our school children in portable buildings and we've got our prisoners in the good stuff?" Sharp asked an education conference sponsored by the Texas Association of School Administrators, Texas Education Agency and University of Texas' College of Education.

Sharp said his other two funding proposals would have to be phased in over a number of years because together, they would cost $700 million annually.

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, Sharp's Republican opponent, outlined an education and anti-gang plan he has been touting around the state.

Among Perry's points are a "reading master" program to reward expert teachers in that subject; encouragement of after-school centers by community, faith-based and law enforcement groups for students; and making gang recruitment a felony.

"My education plan will create the best schools in America," Perry said.

Perry also supports a pilot voucher program to allow parents of children in low-performing schools to use public funds to transfer them to other public, private or religious schools.

Sharp said a voucher program is "what you do when you've given up on public education. ... It's the last thing you do, not the first thing you do." He added, however, that he wouldn't rule out a pilot program if elected.

As for Sharp's proposals to change the share-the-wealth school funding system known as Robin Hood, Perry spokesman Ray Sullivan said Perry also believes the current system is "divisive and unworkable in the long run."

The system, which requires school districts with the most property wealth to share with the rest of the state, met court muster after years of litigation aimed at equalizing funding. Schools are funded with state aid, local property tax revenue and some federal money.

Under Sharp's proposals, school districts would have to share property wealth with the rest of the state when they have more than $310,000 in property value per student. The current limit is $280,000.

Currently, 85 school districts must share out of 1,044. Sharp said his plan would reduce that by 10. He said it also would affect 32 other school districts currently on the verge of having to share. That part of the plan would cost the state an estimated $84 million.

Sharp also proposes increasing from $21 to $24 the amount guaranteed to school districts for each penny of property tax over 86 cents per student. That would make up the rest of the estimated annual cost. Sharp emphasized it could not be completed in the next legislative session.

Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which has played a key role in school funding litigation, said if both parts of the plan were implemented, "My gut feeling would be low-wealth school districts would approve of that. It would increase their funding significantly."

But he said if only the wealthy districts were given relief, it would increase disparities and MALDEF would oppose that.

In other political developments: - An unscientific survey by the Texas Federation of Teachers of its members found 42.5 percent of respondents preferred Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro and 39.3 percent favored Republican Gov. George W. Bush. Another 17.2 percent were undecided and 1 percent preferred "other."

Of the 875 members responding, 42.2 percent identified themselves as Democrats, 26.5 percent as Republicans, 19.7 percent as independent and 11.7 percent as other.

Smoke in the air

Thick clouds of smoke billowed up from a wheat stubble field on North Avenue K Wednesday evening. The stubble was apparently touched off by a spark from a nearby electric watering system. Officials continue to warn residents to be aware of possible fire hazards.

Troopers temporarily assigned to Jasper

Bush refutes Mauro's claim, more should have been done

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A sizeable contingent of state law officers will be on duty at Saturday's Ku Klux Klan rally in Jasper to ensure the safety of local citizens, Gov. George W. Bush says.

"I do have concerns. I wish the KKK would go away. I wish they wouldn't show up. These are people who spread a message of hate that is harmful for the state of Texas," Bush said Wednesday.

The white supremacist group has planned a rally in the small East Texas town in the wake of the June 7 killing of James Byrd Jr., who authorities said was dragged to death because he was black.

Three white men have been charged in the death. "I'm very disappointed the KKK has decided to stir things up," Bush said. "But we'll make sure the people are safe there."

Bush said "plenty" of Texas Department of Public Safety officers will be assigned to Jasper this weekend.

The governor made the remarks after a speech to a Texas Gang Investigators Association conference in which he emphasized his commitment to tough juvenile justice laws.

Bush said he wants to increase the number of juvenile probation officers working in high-crime areas and to make regional gang databases available for law officers statewide.

Afterward, speaking with reporters, Bush lashed out at Democratic challenger Garry Mauro for suggesting if Bush had done more to end mandatory release of adult prisoners a man accused in the Jasper dragging death might still be jailed.

"I think it's shallow political rhetoric," Bush said, responding to a remark Mauro made Monday during a fund-raising trip to Washington.

Mauro accused Bush of not keeping a 1994 campaign pledge to end early release of state prisoners, saying that during Bush's first term more than 60,000 felons will have gotten out of prison early.

Mauro said Lawrence Russell Brewer, one of the men charged in the Jasper dragging death, was released early from prison.

But Bush said he worked with the Texas Legislature to end the early release of inmates convicted after Sept. 1, 1996. He said he tried to have the law applied retroactively, but a U.S. Supreme Court ruling prevented it.

Bush noted that state Rep. Allen

Hightower Jr., a Democrat and chairman of the House Corrections Committee, has come to his defense.

"I am perturbed and irritated that once again the criminal justice system is being used as a political springboard," Hightower said in a statement issued Tuesday.

"Governor Bush did everything in his power to end mandatory release both prospectively and retroactively and for anyone to say otherwise is not the truth," Hightower said.

AUSTIN (AP) - No ticket correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The jackpot was worth an estimated $10 million.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 3-15-18-20-28-30.

Saturday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $14 million.

Aquifer depth affects species

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Civil lawsuits and even criminal charges may be necessary to protect species in danger of dying because of the Texas drought, a federal official says.

The announcement came Wednesday in the wake of plummeting levels in the Edwards Aquifer. Tougher water use restrictions that would affect thousands in Bexar County and four nearby counties were expected to be ordered today.

The flow at Comal Springs in New Braunfels dropped Tuesday for the first time below the rate at which the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service claims individual members of an endangered species become at risk of dying.

Bill Seawell, assistant field supervisor for the wildlife agency's Austin regional office, told the San Antonio Express-News:

"We're looking at possible enforcement options and hopefully gaining some cooperation from some of the pumpers to try to limit the speed at which the aquifer is being drawn down.

"Law enforcement is always an option. We certainly don't want to pursue that option, but we're getting forced into a position where we may have to."

The region has suffered three months with rainfall 90 percent below normal and a month of temperatures above or slightly below 100 degrees. Wednesday's high was 97 with similar highs forecast for the next several days.

Tammy Valentine, spokeswoman for the Edwards Aquifer Authority, said, "Barring any rain late (Wednesday), we will go into Stage II Thursday."

The authority regulates withdrawals from the huge natural underground reservoir that's refilled by rainfall and streamflows. "The biggest difference between Stage I and Stage II is that the number of watering days drops to two each week," she said. The restrictions apply to Edwards Aquifer users in Bexar, Comal, Hays, Guadalupe and Caldwell counties.

The average daily flow Tuesday at Comal Springs fell to 198 cubic feet per second, or 1,481 gallons a second.

That's just below the level that the wildlife service considers necessary for effective breeding, feeding and sheltering of the fountain darter, a minnow-sized fish that lives only in Comal and nearby San Marcos Springs.

"We're discussing the situation with our law enforcement people and with our lawyers right now, and we'll take whatever action is appropriate," Seawell said Wednesday.

Civil suits are possible, as well as criminal charges against major pumpers if any of the eight federally protected species that live in the springs are found dead, he said.

Removal of samples of the species to safe indoor locations is part of the agency's plan, he said.

Local officials contend the wildlife agency has set the flow rate necessary for species survival unsupportably high.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You have printed a few stories about some of the ridiculous repercussions of the new zero-tolerance drug programs at our schools. Please print this article that recently appeared in the Watertown, N.Y., Daily Times. I do not know if good judgment and heroism can be taught, but I would hope educators could at least be trusted to recognize and reward a noble act of citizenship rather than punish it. -- Norwood, N.Y.

Dear Norwood: I received at least 40 copies of that newspaper article. I think what happened was outrageous. Here's the story:

When a 12-year-old Maryland student saw a classmate having a severe asthma attack, she shared her prescription inhaler, making her a hero to the other girl's mother. But according to officials at the sixth-grader's school, that makes her a drug trafficker. And that gets entered in her records for three years.

"She went from feeling like she was on top of the world to feeling like she had done something terribly wrong," said the girl's mother.

The incident happened when a 13-year-old girl suffered an asthma attack on the bus on the way home from school. While the bus driver called for help, the 12-year-old found her inhaler and shared it with the other girl. "I think she's a heroine," said the other girl's mother, who is outraged about the treatment from the school. Her daughter is "fine, thanks to this girl. This is what makes people not want to help other people," she said.

The school principal said she could not comment on the case. The 12-year-old's mother said the principal did exercise leniency by not suspending her daughter from school and was as fair as possible under school rules. "I'm not sure what the answer is," said the girl's mother. "I wish there was a Good Samaritan clause in the school regulations for this situation."

This is Ann speaking. I understand the need for schools to institute rules prohibiting drugs, but school authorities need to show some common sense. A distinction must be made between children who use harmful substances and those who give lemon drops to a friend or save another student's life with an inhaler.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for being such a strong proponent of Al-Anon and Alateen for families of alcoholics. The support and assistance of these wonderful programs is almost impossible to describe.

Eleven years ago, at the insistence of a counselor, I went to my first Al-Anon meeting. I wasn't sure my husband was an alcoholic, but I was in so much pain, I didn't know what else to do. The first thing Al-Anon taught me about my husband's drinking was the "Three C's" -- I didn't cause it, I can't cure it, and I can't control it.

The reason I attend Al-Anon is not to make my husband stop drinking but to find out how to have a happy, secure, serene life regardless of whether he drinks or not. I have learned how to stop being a victim, how to say what I mean and mean what I say, and how to do it in a calm manner.

The only advice I was ever given in this program was "Keep coming back. It works." I am still married to my alcoholic husband, but he started going to Alcoholics Anonymous nine months after I started Al-Anon, and today, he is in recovery. I remain active in Al-Anon because the program gives me the tools that help me live my life. Please tell your readers again, Ann, how important these programs are. -- Grateful in the USA

Dear Grateful: Thank you for the opportunity to remind my readers about Al-Anon and Alateen for families and friends of alcoholics. It costs nothing to attend meetings. They do a wonderful job and are as near as your telephone book.

WASTE WATER AND YOU COULD GET SOAKED.

If you do your part to conserve water by saving water outside your home, you will also save money:

- Water lawn only when needed;
- Do not over-water. One and a half inches of water applied once a week in the summer will keep most Texas grasses alive;
- Water early in the morning or late at night to avoid evaporation;
- Plant native plants;
- Use drip irrigation systems instead of sprinklers or set sprinklers at low angles;

- Do not cut your grass very short during the summer;
- Use a broom to sweep sidewalks - not your hose; and
- Use a bucket of soapy water to wash your car and turn on the hose only for rinsing.

Have summer fun making silly hats

You can do more with a newspaper than just read it. You can use it to make a hat...and wear it! It's as easy as one, two, three. All you need are some recycled newspapers, basic art supplies and a roll of masking tape. Put the hat on your head for July holiday celebrations, family reunions or just for fun.

BASIC DIRECTIONS: Open a sheet of newspaper and place it on your head. Get a second sheet over the first, setting in the opposite direction. Place your hand on the top of your paper-covered head while another person wraps masking tape in a circle, starting at your forehead and creating a band of tape around your head. Wrap tape around twice. Roll up all edges of newspaper toward you to create a brim. Finished!

Now it's time to decorate. Pick a theme such as one of the following:
GARDENING HAT: Glue empty seed packets above the brim to create an eye-catching band. In between the packets, glue miniature plastic fruits and vegetables and a rubber worm.

TEA PARTY HAT: Glue silk or fresh flowers and leaves around the hat. Attach streamers of ribbons and lace to the back. For added flourish, add wide ribbon to tie under your chin.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE HAT: Using poster paints, paint the bowl of the hat blue. Paint the brim in red and white stripes. Let dry. Squeeze household glue in star shapes over the blue portion and sprinkle with silver or gold glitter. Let dry and shake off excess glitter. Attach a paper flag to the side.

Tip: For a family reunion, decorate hat to represent the flag of your state or country of origin.

WACKY HAT: Paint designs in bright colors. Let dry. Wrap several pipe cleaners around your finger to form spirals. Glue the end of each pipe cleaner randomly around the hat so they spring out. Attach charms, flowers or beads to the ends.

SAFARI HAT: Paint with leopard spots, zebra stripes or camouflage designs. Glue plastic spiders, dried moss and leaves around the brim.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is manic depressive disorder genetic? What are the chances of this being passed on to the next generation by an otherwise thoughtful, caring man? — M.M.

ANSWER: Manic depression, now called "bipolar disorder," is a shift in moods from the depths of depression to a frenzy of limitless energy and unrealistic, grandiose and often foolhardy activities.

Genetics figures into the picture. Fifty percent of those with a bipolar disorder had a parent suffering from either depressive or bipolar symptoms.

From a different point of view, a bipolar parent has around a 27 percent chance of having a child who eventually will suffer from depression or bipolar disorder.

A bipolar disorder is not a character flaw. It is not the result of inappropriate childhood rearing.

It is a brain disorder whereby chemical messengers, communicating information from one brain cell to the next, are in disarray.

Today there are effective medicines for controlling the roller-coaster mood swings of bipolar disorder.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband is 40 years old, 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 225 pounds. He doesn't smoke, drink or take any drugs. In the 20 years we have been married, he has had three peculiar episodes when he has gotten up to go to the bathroom. He has passed out or fainted.

We're both interested to know what this could be. — V.C.

ANSWER: Micturition syncope — fainting after urinating — is peculiar but not such a rare occurrence. Your description of your husband's episodes fits that reaction.

The urge to relieve a full bladder rouses a man — and usually it is a man — from sleep. As the bladder empties, it initiates a reflex that dilates arteries and slows the heart. Blood pooling in the legs along with the slow heartbeat robs the brain of its blood supply. A faint follows.

The faint is a protective mechanism. In the horizontal position, blood gets back to the heart and then to the brain.

If your husband sits on the toilet to relieve nature's call at night, he might escape fainting. Limiting alcohol also reduces the chances of micturition syncope.

I can't let your husband off the hook with that diagnosis. He needs to mention the fainting episodes to his doctor. Irregular heart rhythms could be at play.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please comment on tinnitus. The article I've enclosed mentions it can be triggered by medications but doesn't say what medications. Can you give me their names? — Anon.

ANSWER: There is a large array of medicines that can cause tinnitus — ear ringing.

Aspirin leads the pack. The heart and blood pressure medicines verapamil (Calan, Isoptin) and enalapril (Vasotec) on occasion have induced tinnitus. Diuretics, such as furosemide (Lasix) and hydrochlorothiazide (HydroDiuril) have been implicated as well. Many anti-inflammatory drugs, including Indocin and Tolectin, can produce ear ringing. Xanax, a tranquilizer, and some antihistamines also are on the list.

Caffeine, nicotine and alcohol have been implicated as well.

Drugs are far from being the sole cause of tinnitus. There are more than 30 different conditions that can produce it. Ruling out medicines is only the beginning of a search for a cause.

I doubt you can track down the cause on your own. An ear-nose-and-throat doctor — an otolaryngologist — can lead you through the jungle of tinnitus causes.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: My mother went out of state for an extended period of time. Because she is an avid reader of our town newspaper, I saved the local section and mailed it to her once a week.

I sent them to her in used manila envelopes that I would have thrown away. I taped a piece of scrap paper over areas that had been written on and then proceeded to put on my own address label and stamp for mailing to Mom. — Lou S., Bakersfield, Calif.

Recycling is good for the environment and saves you money. However, be sure there is no printed bar code on the envelope or your letter may end up in the wrong place. — Heloise

CRIB MATTRESS
Dear Heloise: My best tip for moms with babies ready to climb out of their crib is to donate the bed but keep the crib mattress. It will slide right under a youth bed. Keeping it will help with the transition to the new bed.

Have it sheeted and it will be perfect for roll-offs, naps and sick or wet nights. It's great for a sleeper and you can drag it next to mom's bed if you have a sick or scared child. It's also great to jump on and as building material for indoor tent-making.

The child should be ready to part with it before it totally wears out. — Deborah Deminie, Scottsdale, Ariz. Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE.

Capriati wins first match after five-year absence

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) -- Five years after Jennifer Capriati last played Wimbledon and won a Grand Slam match, she returned as a wild card Wednesday, full of hope for the future and insisting she regrets nothing of her past.

Her weight up and ranking down at No. 151, Capriati drew a large crowd to Court 18, where she edged Australia's Nicole Pratt 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 despite nine foot-faults and six double-faults.

"It brings back a lot of good memories," said the 22-year-old Capriati, a quarterfinalist in 1993.

WIMBLEDON

The memory of one miserably missed call by linesmen and the umpire in the darkening evening Wednesday may cause sleepless nights by 1992 champion and No. 13 seed Andre Agassi, who left the grounds one set from elimination in the second round.

On a day when three of the top eight men's seeds lost -- No. 2 Marcelo Rios, No. 4 Greg Rusedski and No. 8 Cedric Pioline, last year's runner-up -- Agassi trailed Germany's Tommy Haas two sets to one when the match was suspended at 8:50 p.m.

Agassi angrily stabbed the spot beyond the baseline -- six inches long and wide -- where he and a wildly jeering Centre Court crowd saw a crucial ball land, but the linesmen sat impassively, the umpire shook his head, and Haas waited across the net.

Television replays confirmed that Agassi was right, that the forehand by Haas was out both ways, but the call stood and gave Haas a 6-3 lead in the third-set tiebreaker. Agassi saved one set point, but succumbed on the next to fall behind 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (4).

Meanwhile, defending champion Pete Sampras and two-time runner-up Goran Ivanisevic cruised in straight sets, and French Open champion Carlos Moya needed five sets to get past India's Mahesh Bhupathi.

In other women's matches, Lindsay

Davenport, Steffi Graf, Monica Seles and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario advanced, and No. 9 Amanda Coetzer was ousted in three sets by Naoko Sawamatsu.

The romance between Capriati and Wimbledon began when she was 14, a precocious talent with a toothy smile whose debut on Centre Court had the air of a coronation.

Princess Diana came to see her, fans went wild for her, and British newspapers splashed her ponytailed portrait on front pages, dubbing

Rockies rally past Houston

DENVER (AP) -- The sun literally set on what looked to be an easy win for the Houston Astros.

Dante Bichette and Todd Helton each homered as the Colorado Rockies overcame a six-run deficit and two homers by Jeff Bagwell to beat the Astros 8-6 Wednesday night.

Bagwell had five RBs and his 12th career multi-homer game, but the first baseman was charged with an error after losing shortstop Ricky Gutierrez's throw in the sun to open the Colorado third inning. The Rockies went on to score five unearned runs, and the Astros never recovered.

"That is twice it's happened. Both times we lost," Bagwell said, referring to a game in 1995. "I've

ROCKIES NOTES

Colorado right-hander Kevin Ritz underwent rotator cuff surgery on his right shoulder Tuesday. Ritz, who also had shoulder surgery last July, started the season on the DL and was 0-2 in his only two starts for the Rockies before going back on the DL in May. The Rockies have gone a club-record 13 games and 1 inning without committing an error. Burks extended his hitting streak to 11 games.

tried everything. I tried flip downs, my regular sunglasses, and they don't help. You can't see with that sun. You just can't see."

Bagwell's three-run homer in the first inning gave him 200 for his career, and he added a two-run shot in the third for his 14th of the season.

"The fact is we lost," Bagwell said. "We got two hits over the last six innings. You can't play that way in this park and expect to win."

Despite giving up both Bagwell blasts, Colorado's Pedro Astacio (5-8) regrouped to win for the first time in seven starts. He allowed six runs on five hits in eight innings with four walks and seven strikeouts.

"The first couple innings, I was behind the hitter every time," Astacio said. "After that, I started to throw more strikes and be more aggressive. The game's on the line. You have to hold it right there."

With Astacio in control, the Rockies tied the game at 6 on Bichette's solo homer, his 10th, against Sean Bergman (6-4) leading off the Colorado fifth. Vinny Castilla followed with a triple and scored on Ellis Burks' groundout to shortstop.

DOUBLE TEAM

Travis Schulte (above, left) and Michael Brewer lob balls to participants (right) at the Hereford High School summer tennis camp Tuesday at Whiteface Courts. Schulte is the outgoing assistant tennis coach and Brewer is the new assistant tennis coach. About 35 players are taking part in the camp's two daily sessions, according to coach Ed Coplen. Whiteface Courts and Hereford Country Club will be the venues for the Hereford Open, which will begin Friday morning and conclude Saturday afternoon, Coplen said. The tourney will feature junior high school and high school players from around the Panhandle.

Clippers take Olowokandi as No. 1 pick

1998 NBA DRAFT

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) -- Michael Olowokandi, a 7-foot-1 Nigerian who grew up in England and has been playing competitive basketball for only three years, was selected first in the NBA draft Wednesday night by the Los Angeles Clippers.

With trade rumors swirling around GM Place, the Clippers decided on Olowokandi instead of Arizona point guard Mike Bibby, the player they had been expected to take until having a change of heart over the last couple days.

Olowokandi, who averaged 22.2 points and 11.2 rebounds last season at Pacific, said he wouldn't be surprised if he was headed elsewhere in a trade.

"I have my cap on right now, but it's a little bit loose," Olowokandi said. "Anything could happen. We're going to have to wait and see."

One trade was made during the first hour of the draft, and a few more were pending. One involved the Phoenix Suns, who were supposed to be represented at the draft by the parents of guard Steve Nash. But about an hour before the first pick was made, Nash's parents said their son had been traded.

The selection of Olowokandi marked the second year a senior had been selected first overall. Underclassmen had been chosen first overall in the five previous drafts.

"Seeing my name in the No. 1 spot is unbelievable, especially when you consider where I came from three years ago -- not having played basketball -- and then to this, not the

Texas bites 'Backs

PHOENIX (AP) -- Juan Gonzalez drove in two runs, increasing his major league-leading total to 93, with a single and triple, and Rick Helling won his 11th game as the Texas Rangers beat the Diamondbacks 3-2 Wednesday night.

Mark McLemore scored all three Texas runs after singling twice and hitting a solo homer.

Helling (11-3) joined teammate Aaron Sele with the most victories in the majors, winning his fourth straight start. Helling allowed two runs -- one earned -- and five hits while striking out eight in 7 1-3 innings.

RANGERS NOTES

Helling tied Danny Darwin (1980) for the second-best record in Texas history after 14 games. Roger Pavlik was 12-2 in 1996. Helling is 6-2 in road starts, winning his last three. Tom Goodwin stole his AL second-best 25th base in the 5th. It was No. 200 of his career. The Rangers are 11-17 in a new ballpark. McLemore has reached base in 25 consecutive games. Gonzalez entered the game 0-for-9 against Blair, but went 2-for-4 Wednesday night.

John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Willie Blair (2-11) lost his fourth straight start and became the first pitcher in the majors to lose 11 games. Blair allowed nine hits, three runs and four walks in 7-2-3 innings.

Gonzalez followed McLemore's eighth-inning single with his triple off the overhanging deck in left centerfield, breaking a 2-2 tie.

The Diamondbacks scored both runs in the fifth, the only inning in which Helling allowed more than one hit, on a wild pitch and a throwing error.

With one out Blair singled and Andy Fox followed with a double. Devon White struck out swinging, but the ball got past Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez and rolled to the backstop.

Blair bowled over Helling at the plate, and Rodriguez was charged with an error on his throw when the ball rolled away again, allowing Fox to score the tying run.

Winston Cup title chase tight heading to California

By MIKE HARRIS

AP Motorsports Writer SONOMA, Calif. -- Dale Jarrett again is in the thick of the Winston Cup title chase, which he believes is shaping up to be the best championship battle ever.

"You've got all these guys within striking distance, and everybody has run well," he said.

Among them is Mark Martin, second twice and among the top five in seven of the last nine years. He shares Jarrett's assessment.

"I believe this championship is about as wide open as any has ever been," he said.

Last year, Jarrett ended up 14 points behind winner Jeff Gordon. At the top of NASCAR's point distribution, that's a four-place difference in a single race.

Jarrett hopes to make up that difference this season but knows he's up against some tough competition.

"You've got a lot of good teams out there and a lot of good race drivers that are really hungry for a championship," he said. "This is going to be fun for everybody."

Jarrett, Gordon, Martin and Jeremy Mayfield are the big four as the 33-race season nears its halfway point this weekend with the Save Mart-Kragen 350 on the road course at Sears Point International Raceway in Sonoma.

At the head of the class is Mayfield, whose best finish in the points race was 13th last year, his fourth on the circuit. Coming off his first victory, last Sunday at

"You've got a lot of good teams out there and a lot of good race drivers that are really hungry for a championship. This is going to be fun for everybody."

-- Dale Jarrett

Pocono International Raceway, Mayfield is at the crest of a season-long high.

"There isn't much time in between races," he said. "You really don't have the time to get too high after a really good week, but you don't have the time to get too low after a bad one. You race and move on."

"The thing is, if you want to stay in the points race, you have to strive for consistency. You can't afford too many of those bad weeks. We want to keep running strong every week and show people that what we've done is no fluke, either leading the points or winning a race."

Heading into the race Sunday, Mayfield is 36 points ahead of Gordon, 48 ahead of Jarrett and 53 ahead of Martin.

With 17 races left after Sonoma, the next four in the standings can't be counted out, either. Terry Labonte is 200 points behind Mayfield. Rusty Wallace is 216 back, Bobby Labonte 298, and Jeff Burton 305.

Martin, who leads everyone with four victories, is as intense as anyone about winning his first championship.

"I can just taste it," he said. "We've been close enough that we know what it feels like to take a shot at it. But you can't get too hungry or think too far ahead. We've got too much of the season yet to go."

Martin credits his team for putting him in a prominent position in the race.

"They're giving me awesome equipment, and we're just going to have to keep getting some luck and coming up with strong finishes," he said.

Five of the top eight drivers are in the new Ford Taurus, two are campaigning Chevrolet Monte Carlo and one has a Pontiac Grand Prix.

The Taurus, replacing the retired Ford Thunderbird, has been formidable. It has won seven of the 15 races.

Wimbledon

her the heir apparent to Graf and Martina Navratilova.

Capriati justified that hype back in 1990, becoming the youngest player in history to win a match at Wimbledon and going on to reach the fourth round. A year later she became the youngest woman to reach the Wimbledon semifinals when she beat Navratilova in the quarters -- her earliest exit from the All England Club in 14 years.

But the much-chronicled decline in Capriati's career began in 1992, and after falling in the first round of the 1993 U.S. Open she was gone from the game. The only news she made was bad news -- arrests for shoplifting and drug possession, followed in later years by aborted comebacks.

Capriati, looking uncomfortable talking about her past after Wednesday's match, turned frequently to an official in the interview room in hopes of curtailing the session. Asked what she's capable of achieving now, she sought to find a balance between optimism and realism.

"I have to believe in myself," Capriati said. "I believe that I can go all the way. If I don't believe that, I see no point of me being here."

What Capriati meant by "all the way," she said, was something different from what she might have had in mind five years ago. "Having it all, I guess, winning it or being at the top of what I can do," she said. "Maybe that's not No. 1. Maybe that's just No. 5, you know, but that's fine. Whatever my best is."

Always a baseliner, Capriati's greatest success against Pratt came at the net. Capriati hardly missed a volley. She also played intelligently and caught Pratt with several perfect lobs.

For all her problems in recent years, Capriati said, "I have no regrets at all."

At this point, Capriati is trying to salvage what's left of her career, knowing it's not too late at her age to put together five good years if her body is willing and she can summon the desire to play. She's been working at various times with two former coaches, Tom Gullikson and Rick Macci, in Florida, and is seeking a new full-time coach.

Chris Evert, who has been close to Capriati from the start, believes she is still just "50 percent of the player she could be."

"I'm pulling for her," Evert said. "But she has to make a commitment and get a coach, and I don't think those things have happened for a few years. She's made a half-hearted commitment. She's a good athlete who hits the ball as well as anyone else. But I don't think she has made a commitment."

Foursome shoots 29

From staff reports
The foursome of Jerry Stevens, Bill Brown, Wade Johnson and Tanner Murphy shot a nine-hole total of 29 to win the Wednesday Night Scramble at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

Two teams were tied for second two strokes back. Steve Stevens, N.D.

Kelso, Joel Sturgeon and Don Davison shot a 31. Also shooting a 31 was the team of Ed Durrett, Nelson Canode, Wally Castillo and Dewayne Robbins.

Three teams were another shot back with 32s and tied for fourth place.

Draft

No. 3 pick but the No. 1 pick," Olowokandi said. "That's something that'll take me a week or so, or a little bit longer, to get over."

The Vancouver Grizzlies, the hosts of the draft, selected Bibby second to roars of approval from a crowd of about 8,000. Bibby, who left Arizona after his sophomore season, has drawn comparisons to Jason Kidd for his playmaking skills.

He had expected to be drafted first overall, and refused to hold a workout for any team other than the Clippers.

The Denver Nuggets, coming off a season in which they won only 11 games, picked Kansas forward Raef LaFrentz with the third pick.

It was the first surprise of the night, since Paul Pierce, considered by many to be the best all-around player in the draft, had been expected to be among the top three picks. He ended up dropping to the Boston Celtics at No. 10.

The Toronto Raptors, the subject of another trade rumor involving Marcus Camby, also passed on Pierce and selected college player of the year Antawn Jamison with the fourth pick.

Dallas Mavericks general manager Don Nelson got the player he coveted. Next comes the full-court press to persuade 6-foot-11 German forward Dirk Nowitzki to give up the riches of Europe to play for one of the NBA's worst teams.

The Mavericks' predictably unpredictable leader pulled off a three-way trade during the first round of Wednesday's draft that left Dallas with Nowitzki and third-year guard Steve Nash.

But the deal was costly for Dallas, which gave up forwards Bubba Wells and Martin Muursepp and -- most importantly -- its No. 1 draft pick in 1999 to Phoenix in the trade for Nash.

Nelson's gamble is that Nowitzki, who averaged 17.5 points and 10 rebounds for DJK Wurzburg last season, will want to play in Dallas this year.

The agent for Nowitzki, who is currently in the German army, told teams that his client may choose to play professionally in Europe for the next season or two.

Matt Drudge moves out from behind the laptop

By DAVID BAUDER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The first thing you notice about Matt Drudge, out from behind the laptop and onto television, are his eyebrows.

When he arches one brow, Drudge's rubbery face is a mask of skepticism. Arch the other, and it's anger. Sometimes it seems he exercises those eyebrows for the sheer comic effect of it.

Be ready to raise your own eyebrows when you tune into "Drudge," Saturday nights on the Fox News Channel.

Drudge, 31, is a former gift shop salesman who took advantage of the Internet's anything-goes ethic to become the first cyberspace star to break into the mainstream. The "Drudge Report" is a wired-in Web site with his own gossipy reports and links to the nation's major media outlets.

Working out of his Hollywood apartment, Drudge infiltrated the political and media camp so effectively that his Web site offered the first public word on allegations that Monica Lewinsky had an affair with President Clinton.

He also ignited a debate among journalists: Is Drudge a dangerous cowboy who doesn't play by standard rules of verifying accuracy, or is he a welcome populist among pontificators? Is he a journalist at all?

"Sure, he's a journalist," said Roger Ailes, chairman of Fox's news division. "He's a citizen journalist. I don't think Ben Franklin ever went to (journalism) school, did he? And he dressed funny."

Fox was audacious enough to give Drudge the chance to go on-camera. His first weekly half-hour debuted Saturday at 8 p.m. CDT.

Dressed in the fedora hat and rumpled suit that are his trademark, Drudge sat behind a wooden desk. A video screen was hung behind him and he pecked at his laptop during breaks. He described his set as "a cross between 'Dragnet' and 'Star Trek'."

"He's unique in terms of the way he looks, sounds and thinks," Ailes said. "Whenever you have someone come on who is unique and fearless and says what is on his mind, I think that attracts people."

Drudge was "welcomed" into the TV fraternity this week by fellow talkshow host Keith Olbermann, who said on MSNBC's "Big Show": "He has gone from being an idiot with a modem to an idiot with a modem and a TV show on the most irresponsible network in America."

Drudge was quoted in USA Today as saying that Olbermann should have stuck with reading sports scores on ESPN.

Drudge is instantly combative when asked if his style - using anonymous sources and not always giving people a chance to defend themselves - exposes him to accusations of irresponsibility.

"I know that's your angle," he shoots back at an interviewer. "I'm more accurate than the mainstream press is at this point. That question should also be asked of Tom Brokaw - are your editors nervous about things that you put on? That's totally an unfair question."

Drudge said that he, unlike many reporters, has admitted to and corrected his mistakes.

Ailes said standards for Drudge's show will be the same as for others on Fox News Channel. Lawyers stand by watching Drudge in the studio, and the show is taped three hours in advance, although Ailes said the purpose is to cut down on overtime costs.

His show will be all about hot angles, an attempt to make headlines, Drudge said. His debut was devoted almost exclusively to a story in U.S. News & World Report about new tapes of Lewinsky talking about Clinton.

Literary agent Lucianne Goldberg, who is at the scandal's epicenter, was his guest. It had all the elements that make the "Drudge Report" compelling: tantalizing stories about an unlauded dress and presidential secretary Betty Currie being locked in a White House bathroom.

But it was hard - no, impossible - to tell whether these tales were true, or just a Clinton-hater's fictions. Drudge's interview was so friendly that Goldberg felt comfortable enough to smoke a cigarette on the air.

Cochran now arguing dog complaint

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Johnnie Cochran Jr. is arguing a barking dog complaint.

Cochran, who gained renown as a member of O.J. Simpson's defense team, flew in from the West Coast to defend the mother of pro basketball star Ray Allen.

Neighbors have complained that Flora Allen's two Rottweilers, Sampson and Sheba, have been bothering them with their nighttime barking. The dogs were a gift from Allen, who plays for the Milwaukee Bucks. He also stars in the new Spike Lee movie "He's Got Game."

Cochran, who is a friend of the Allen family, said Tuesday that he has hired a company to determine how much noise the dogs make. In the meantime, a judge has ordered the dogs to be kept inside the house at night.

BEN AFFLECK

NEW YORK (AP) - Ben Affleck, who's out to save the world in "Armageddon," admits that he's had some real-life disasters with romance.

"I have a real capacity for the head-on collision," the actor says in the upcoming USA Weekend. "I'm so compromising ... then it blows up."

Affleck, 25, is fearless as a wildcat oil driller in the new action movie "Armageddon." It's the real-world stuff he finds frightening.

"Beautiful women scare me," he said. They're "more trouble than handsome men, let me tell you. A lot of handsome men are shy. But women are taught to trade on that beauty, and they take advantage."

Last fall, Affleck broke up with his girlfriend of seven years. Of his current love interest, Gwyneth Paltrow, he says she's "the smartest woman I have ever met."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
 Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 -- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

GOP bids to knock out NEA

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans are muscling toward the House floor a number of spending bills that bear a definite conservative stamp, including one that would kill the National Endowment for the Arts and another that would eliminate President Clinton's national service program.

With lawmakers intensifying their work on fiscal 1999 spending bills, the House Appropriations Committee planned to vote on a pair of such measures today. A $13.4 billion measure financing Interior Department and cultural programs would eliminate the arts endowment, which got $98 million this year and for which Clinton requested $136 million.

The same committee was working on a $70.9 billion measure for veterans, housing, environmental and science programs. It would eliminate the AmeriCorps national service program, which got $426 million this year and, like the arts endowment, is an annual target of conservatives.

Conservatives concede that opposition from Democrats and moderate Republicans means some of their efforts will fail. And the Appropriations Committee of the more centrist Senate has already written bills that would finance the NEA and AmeriCorps.

Even so, conservatives say the Republicans will benefit from their strategy in the November elections. "It will force votes on the floor that identify the differences between us and the people we're running against," said Rep. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., a conservative leader.

GOOD GOLLY, MISS MOLLY

Ex-Republican may head Texas Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) - Molly Beth Malcolm, who wants to lead the struggling Texas Democratic Party into political battle, knows the enemy. The Republicans once counted her among their own. "Because I have been in that party and I have seen it from the inside, I'm uniquely qualified to fight it," said Mrs. Malcolm, 43, a former public school teacher and school counselor from Texarkana.

Texas Democrats will decide whether they agree at their state convention opening Friday in San Antonio. A Saturday vote is scheduled to replace outgoing chairman Bill White of Houston. Also seeking the top job is San Augustine County Judge Curt Goetz, who made his first Democratic political speeches as a child campaigning in his dad's state representative race.

Quoting a friend and Baptist minister, Goetz maintains, "We are very, very happy to welcome converts to our church. We don't necessarily make them deacons on the first Sunday." Mrs. Malcolm said her track record since leaving the GOP shows "This isn't the first Sunday in church."

The Democratic Party is what I believe in and work for." If elected, she may be the first former Republican to head a state Democratic Party in the nation. Democratic National Committee spokesman Tony Wyche said he knows of no other.

Mrs. Malcolm said her epiphany came at a GOP precinct meeting in 1992, when she had been involved in Republican politics for three years. She and her husband were living in Longview. Despite opposition from the Malcolms and another couple, she said others there approved "the most horrendous resolutions that were against basic human rights that I've ever heard" on subjects including abortion, sex education, textbooks, AIDS and immigration.

Defeated was her proposal to remove abortion from the Republican platform. She calls abortion a private matter, not a government issue. Mrs. Malcolm, then a drug-free schools coordinator, went home and called a Democratic friend.

"I said, 'I'm ready for recovery. I've hit bottom tonight,'" she recounted. "We started Recovering Republicans."

Since then, Mrs. Malcolm has plunged into Democratic politics with a convert's zeal. She is president of Texas Democratic Women, serves on the State Democratic Executive Committee, helped organize the Texarkana College 21st Century Democrats, worked in Democratic U.S. Rep. Max Sandlin's campaign and was on his congressional staff.

She has been moderator for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro's town hall meetings, and she had the idea for "What it means to be a Democrat" cards.

Mrs. Malcolm snagged endorsements from two key groups, the Texas AFL-CIO and the Tejano Democrats. Backers praise her enthusiasm and potential to rejuvenate the party.

"Somebody who has walked the other side of the street can know better about how to bring back some that have left the party," said state AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn. "She wore the shoe. It pinched her. It made her uncomfortable."

Not so fast, say GOP activists pointing to their party's gains. Republicans swept all statewide offices on the 1996 ballot, took control of the state Senate for the first time in more than a century and have sitting Gov. George W. Bush, a 53-point favorite over Mauro in the latest poll.

Susan Weddington, who heads the state GOP, said if Mrs. Malcolm is elected, "She's got to feel like the captain being given the wheel just shortly before the Titanic goes down."

"The only difference between the Democratic Party and the Titanic is the Democratic Party is falling apart before it even hits the iceberg."

Gore making swing through Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) - Vice President Al Gore will be raising both money and issues during a two-day swing through Texas.

During appearances in Houston, El Paso and San Antonio, Gore is to raise campaign money for two fellow Democrats, address the state party convention and talk about wildfires, child safety, welfare and education.

In Houston, Gore was scheduled to be a guest of Friendswood High School for today's panel discussion on school violence, youth crime and children's safety. The appearance makes good on a longstanding request by Rep. Nick Lampson, D-Beaumont, for a Gore visit. Safeguarding children became a crusade for Lampson after a 12-year-old Friendswood girl, Laura Smither, was kidnapped and murdered last year.

"Anytime he can bring the issues of child safety to the national forefront, he's thrilled and honored to do so," said Lampson's special assistant, Jacquelyn

Davis. From children's issues, Gore was making the jump to campaigns, headlining a Houston fund-raiser for freshman Rep. Jim Turner of Crockett.

The luncheon is expected to bring in $100,000 for the East Texas lawmaker's re-election, said campaign manager Russell Langley.

Then it was on to West Texas for a University of Texas at El Paso forum this evening on education and a fund-raising dinner for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro.

The Mauro dinner, expected to bring in $150,000, comes just two days after President Clinton and Hillary Clinton sought to provide a boost to the campaign of their longtime friend, who is lagging substantially behind Gov. George W. Bush in the polls and the money chase.

The twin Clinton events were expected to net his campaign $250,000.

in brief

House votes to block FDA OK of abortion-inducing drugs
 WASHINGTON (AP) - The government would be barred from using taxpayer dollars to test, develop or approve drugs that induce abortion - such as the French abortion pill RU-486 - under legislation passed by the House.

But the ban is unlikely to survive the Senate. Abortion opponents claimed victory after the vote Wednesday, while women's advocates assailed the action as an assault on their constitutional right to end unwanted pregnancies. "The federal government has no right to use taxpayer dollars to develop abortion drugs," said Rep. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., sponsor of an amendment prohibiting such spending by the Food and Drug Administration. "The business of the FDA is to protect lives, not facilitate death."

CNN hires attorney to check report U.S. used nerve gas
 ATLANTA (AP) - Stung by controversy over a report alleging that U.S. forces used nerve gas to hunt down Vietnam War defectors, CNN has hired attorney Floyd Abrams to independently investigate the story's accuracy. Abrams, a prominent First Amendment lawyer who has represented major news organizations, will look at the network's research and process in compiling the report. He will present his findings to CNN executives. "If we were wrong, we'll tell you that. If we were right, we'll tell you that," CNN anchorman Jeff Greenfield said Wednesday. The report, which was compiled by CNN journalists, aired two weeks ago and Time magazine published an article based on the report a day later. Both organizations are owned by Time Warner.

New York, New York may not be home, sweet home
 LOS ANGELES (AP) - New York City, where nearly everyone has a housing horror story, once again is the nation's most expensive real estate market for executives, according to an annual survey. Mid-level executives living in New York City would have to fork over 43.5 percent of their income for a nice home in a decent neighborhood, according to the E&Y Kenneth Leventhal study released today. San Francisco - last year's dubious winner - ran a close second at 42.2 percent, followed by Los Angeles at 37.2 percent, the survey said. Last year, San Francisco required 39.7 percent, followed by New York at 38.3 percent and Los Angeles at 36.8 percent. Oklahoma City again was the nation's most affordable market, where the cost of a home, including rent or monthly payments and annual property taxes, averages 17.3 percent of a buyer's income - up from 16 percent last year. Richmond, Va., was nearly as inexpensive at 17.8 percent, followed by Kansas City at 18.4 percent.

Court refuses to authorize California State Bar dues
 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The state Supreme Court has refused to rescue the State Bar from imminent financial ruin by mandating that lawyers pay dues for this year. The bar, which is scheduled to lay off most of its remaining employees Friday, asked the court this week to authorize mandatory dues of $364 for 1998. That would be enough to fund lawyer discipline and other legally required activities, the bar said. The bar's sole source of money was cut off by Gov. Pete Wilson's veto of its dues bill last October. Wilson has rejected the bar's proposals to reduce and restructure its operations and has proposed instead to slash its dues and change its leadership from a board elected by lawyers to one appointed by the next governor. In his veto, Wilson said the bar had become bloated, arrogant, unresponsive to members and overly involved in liberal politics.

Department store said to be on the block
 NEW YORK (AP) - One of the nation's oldest and best-known retailers is up for sale. The New York Times reported today. Saks Fifth Avenue, which has 97 stores, could go for between $2 billion and $2.5 billion, the newspaper said. The majority owner of Saks is Investcorp International, an investment bank based in Bahrain that bought the retailer in 1990 for $1.6 billion. Investcorp has done well by investing in high-end retailers such as Tiffany and Gucci and selling them.

Nuclear plant shut down by powerful Ohio storm
 PORT CLINTON, Ohio (AP) - A powerful storm that slammed into northern Ohio forced a nuclear power plant to shut down as it knocked out power, damaged buildings and injured at least 30 people. National Weather Service forecasters said they believed a tornado was spotted near the Davis-Besse nuclear plant near Oak Harbor, about 25 miles east of Toledo. Plant officials said the idled reactor was safe and an inspection was under way to determine damage. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said it was sending a team of specialists to Davis-Besse to inspect the plant.

Researchers say 'broken' gene may help people avoid smoking
 NEW YORK (AP) - It's a strange concept - a gene that helps protect some people from becoming addicted to nicotine, but only when it is defective. Scientists say they've identified such a gene, and if their research is confirmed it could lead to medications to help millions of smokers cut back or quit. About one-fifth of the nonsmoking population carries a protective version of the gene, said Rachel Tyndale, one of the study's authors. She said the gene's influence might have saved some 7 million current residents of North America from nicotine addiction. Tyndale and colleagues at the University of Toronto reported their findings in today's issue of the journal Nature.

Attorney: Teen-ager will plead guilty in school shootings
 PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) - The 15-year-old boy accused of killing three girls and wounding five other students as they prayed at their high school will say he is mentally ill and plead guilty in hopes of getting a lenient sentence, his lawyer said. Michael Carneal is scheduled to stand trial Oct. 5 on three counts of murder and five counts of attempted murder. The teen-ager is accused of carrying a pistol, shotguns and rifles into Heath High School and opening fire in the lobby as classmates ended an informal prayer meeting.

New owners

1st quarter growth: 5.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. economy grew much more quickly than originally believed during the first three months of this year, with businesses and consumers increasing spending at a rapid rate. The nation's gross domestic product - the sum of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders - increased at a seasonally adjusted 5.4 percent annual rate over the January-March period, the Commerce Department said today. That places it among just a handful of quarters with such rapid growth during the past 15 years. The economy grew at a 6 percent rate in April-June 1996 and October-December 1987 and at a 6.4 percent rate in April-June 1984.

But much of the latest growth spurt came from a buildup in business inventories, which already is slowing growth in the current quarter. And, a separate report today from the Labor Department shows a surge in unemployment reflecting the General Motors strike.

GM, union may be heading into court

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Unable to reach a settlement, General Motors Corp. may be headed toward a legal showdown with the United Auto Workers to end costly strikes that have crippled the world's No. 1 automaker. The warning came Wednesday from GM labor chief Gerald Knechtel. "Our contention is that the strikeable issues identified by the union are contrived and that the real issues that led to these costly disputes are ones that the union has agreed to be non-strikeable," he said. The strikes by 9,200 workers in Flint, Mich., have caused the layoffs of nearly 146,500 other GM workers from 26 major assembly lines and about 100 parts plants across North America. The shutdowns have virtually halted GM's North American production. The blow to GM's second-quarter profit is expected to total more than $1 billion. In a memo titled "Aggressive Manufacturing Shut Down," the automaker on Wednesday told its managers to immediately shut down operations not associated with the launch of its new full-size pickup truck, GM spokesman Gerry Holmes said today. The shut down, which will take several days to implement, means any hourly employees still doing maintenance and other work in the plants will be sent home, Holmes said. The cuts are aimed at GM's North American operations, which has 201,000 hourly and salaried workers, he said. GM also is cutting advertising on television, magazines and newspapers for at least the next six weeks, he said. GM declined to say how much money is being slashed from its ad budget, which totaled $2.2 billion last year. GM said it filed a grievance with the union requesting "expedited arbitration" on its claim that strikes at the two Flint parts plants violate terms of the UAW-GM national contract. The move could lead to a court battle after a ruling by an arbitrator. It also could further hamper negotiations. As the first of the strikes nears the end of its third week, no significant progress has been reported in daily talks that were to resume today. GM has requested a reply from the union within 48 hours. GM delivered a letter regarding its plans Tuesday night to the UAW leadership, which is meeting at its triennial convention in Las Vegas. UAW officials dismissed GM's move as a public relations stunt.

JonBenet's parents are questioned

DENVER (AP) - The parents of slain 6-year-old JonBenet Ramsey and their son reportedly have talked to investigators from the Boulder County district attorney's office. The interviews with John and Patsy Ramsey come just weeks after police investigators turned their case over to the district attorney. They have been interviewed separately and simultaneously since Tuesday and the interrogations were expected to wrap up today, according to Boulder and Denver media reports. The Denver Post today also reported that the Ramseys' 11-year-old son, Burke, was interviewed earlier this month. Boulder County District Attorney Alex Hunter went to Atlanta, where the Ramseys moved, to conduct the interviews, according to a source quoted by the Post. Burke was in his family's Boulder home when his sister's body was found in the basement. Police briefly talked to Burke that day and were allowed to watch while social workers interviewed him, but have not talked to him since then. Hunter did not return calls from The Associated Press. Hunter's spokeswoman, Suzanne Laurion, would not comment.
