Labor Starts War on Volstead Act

Washington, Feb. 26.—Repeal of the Volstead act and substitution of a measure permitting sale of light wines and beer was urged today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in a statement which asked all citizens to join in a campaign with this objective.

The statement denounced the Volstead act as "a social and moral failure" and "dangerous breeder of discontent and contempt for all law."

The council previously announced its intention to participate in the congressional elections—through a nonpartisan campaign committee which will endorse and oppose candidates of major political parties or enter independents if that course is considered most effective.

"Before this decision was reached," the council's announcement said, "there was caused to be made an exhaustive investigation of the Volstead act. It was shown by this investigation that there had been:

"A general disregard of the law among all classes of people, including those who made the law.

"Creation of thousands of moonshiners among both country and city dwellers.

"Creation of an army of bootleggers, "An amazingly increase in the deadly concoctions and drugs.

"An increased rate of insanity, blindness and crime among the users of these concoctions and drugs.

"Increase in unemployment.

"Increase in taxes to city, State and National Governments amounting to approximately $1,000,000,000 per year."

The federation did not protest against the constitutional amendment embodying the prohibition policy, the statement emphasized, but considered the Volstead act an improper interpretation of the amendment.

Announcement Made By Radio

The first announcement of the big cut in the price of the Fordson tractor was made through Mr. Henry Ford's radio message Thursday evening, January 26th, from our Dearborn Radio Station to Ford dealers attending a Fordson Tractor Industrial Show in Cleveland, Ohio. The context of his talk, which was very plainly heard in Cleveland and surrounding districts, is quoted below:

"It is certainly wonderful to sit here in my office and say a few words of greeting to you Ford dealers of the Cleveland territory. The radio is an outstanding tribute to man's inventive genius. They say there is nothing new under the sun, but we are constantly inventing new things, every day bringing some big improvement over the previous day's methods.

"Manufacturing operations have undergone some wonderful revolutionary changes during the past few years. We are all familiar with the big improvements in transportation methods, but the oldest industry has been the most backward in the acceptance or adoption of the new and up to date methods of doing things, and that is the farming industry. Being a farmer, I am vitally interested in all farm improvements, and with this in mind, I have spent years of time and millions in money in the development of the Fordson Tractor, which I really think is one of the biggest possible helps to profitable farming.

"As a general thing, the farmers have bettered their financial condition during the past 18 months, but the production costs of farm products are still too close to selling prices to allow fair margins of profit. What the farmer must do to put his business on a paying basis is to lower the cost of planting, cultivating, and harvesting of his crops. This alone will increase his profits, and with this thought in mind it has been our constant aim to lower the price of the Fordson so that every farmer in the land could afford to own one. It is a pleasure, therefore, to announce through the Ford dealers that we have today decided that the tractor price should again be reduced, and in considering a reduction, naturally my thought has been to make it possible for the largest number of farmers to share in the benefits to be derived through the use of our tractor, and consequently effective tomorrow, January 27th, 1922, the new price of the Fordson tractor will be $395, FOB Detroit. This is a cut of $230 off the present price, and while in making this big reduction we have taken upon ourselves a gigantic task in the reduction of manufacturing costs, still that task, in my opinion, is not larger than the farmer's problem of today and I am glad to do my part in bringing about a period of increased prosperity for the farmer. Your part is to carry this message to the farmer, thereby enabling him to produce more with less cost and shorter hours.

"I am glad to have had this opportunity of talking with you and you have my best wishes."

"A Daughter of the Desert"

High School Public Speaking Club presents "A Daughter of the Desert" Friday night, March 10, 7:30 p. m., High School Auditorium.

Synopsis:

Act I—Clarence and Lucy have an adventure. "How dare you kiss a helpless girl, sir?" Return of Ruth. The story of her secret. "I must avenge the murder of my father!" Silvera's charge. "Your father was killed by Charles Morton!" Morton confesses he is the son of the accused. The avowal of love. Hopkins dotes on custard pie. News of the Apache outbreak. Morton goes to the rescue of his men. "If I die clear my dead father's name."

Act II—Lucy in tears. "It's not my stomach, but my heart, papa." White Bird brings news of the victory over the Indians. Clarence wounded. The return. Silvera has warrant for Morton's arrest on a charge of robbery. Story of the fight. At breakfast. A toast to Lucy and Clarence's betrothal. Flapjacks and custard pie. Ruth defends the poor Indian. The arrest of Morton. White Bird's avowal. "We shall bring the guilty to justice!"

Act III—Jim Parker, a gambler "who is on the square," introduces himself. How Silvera got a scar on the back of his hand. "I put it there with my stickler!" Silvera recognizes Parker. The threat. "If you monkey with me or my friends, I'll slice, not yer hand, but yer liver!" The plot to rescue Morton. He refuses to make his escape. "I am a man of honor and my word is my bond." Morton's innocence established by Parker. A missing witness. "We must carry him to the Mexican line, if we would hope to save him!" The rescue of Morton by cowboys. Ruth has the upper hand. "Now off to the Mexican line and ride like a hell!"

Act IV—Mrs. Ogden and Lucy discuss the effect of the pie upon men. "My husband ate two lemon pies and died!" Death due to indigestion, not the pies. Hopkins makes love to Mrs. Ogden. "Your pies have gone through my stomach and captured my heart!" Arrival of Ruth and Morton. White Bird clears up the mystery of the identity of the slayer of Ruth's father. "Silvera shot him in back." Silvera returns on a mission of revenge. "I will kill your lover at your feet." Jones and Parker take a hand in the game. Silvera cornered and shot. Ruth the richest girl in Arizona. Everybody happy.

Redemption of 3 3/4 and 4 3/4 Victory Notes

Desiring to be of service to its readers, many of whom own Victory Notes, the following information is presented by The Herald with reference to the June 15, 1922, call by the Treasury for 3 3/4 Victory Notes, and the temporary redemption privilege relative to Victory 4 3/4s. Inquiries indicate there has been some misunderstanding on the part of the public.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has called Victory 3 3/4 Notes for redemption at par and accrued interest June 15, 1922. After June 15 these bonds, because they have been called, will bear no interest. It is to the owner's advantage to surrender them at that time, or any time before at par plus accrued interest, and reinvest the proceeds. For reinvestment, the U. S. Government Savings Organization at Dallas has suggested the New Issue of Treasury Savings Certificates which are to be had at postoffices or through banks in $1000, $100 and $25, maturity value, denominations, costing respectively $800, $80 and $20.

These are registered in the owner's name when purchased and are loss-proof as well as depreciation or market fluctuation-proof. They mature five years from date of purchase; bear 4 1/2 per cent interest, compounded semi-annually, if held to maturity. Over a period of five years they yield 25 per cent on the investment. They are cashable at purchaser's option before maturity. Ownership limit is $5,000, maturity value.

Until March 15, the Treasury has authorized the Federal Reserve Bank to receive 4 3/4 Victories from owners who desire to sell them to the Government at par plus accrued interest. If held after that time, unless the purchase period is extended, the 4 3/4 Victories will run on full maturity, which is May 23, 1923. Those who desire may take advantage of this temporary period and convert their bonds into cash. Reinvestment in Treasury Savings Certificates of the New Issue has been recommended.

Owners are advised to consult local bankers for specific advice.

Manna which fell from the skies a year near Jerusalem has been given in the U. S. by the Department of Commerce. It was given by the Syrian Bishop of Jerusalem. It is supposed to be the same substance that fell for the Israelites in the wilderness.

Livestock Due to Advance Fall

Farmers are urged to hold their livestock for an advance. This is the purpose of a communication sent out by the Farmers & Mechanics National bank of Fort Worth to the farmers and bankers throughout this section of the country. The letter tells that a recount of livestock on farms made by the United States department of agriculture in conjunction with the bureau of the census shows there are some twenty million fewer head of livestock on farms in the United States than had previously been announced by the bureau.

It is not usually a cause for rejoicing to find that assets have shrunk, but in this case it is not exactly a shrinkage of assets. A miscount increased the number of livestock on the farms to such an extent that, in keeping with the law of supply and demand, their value declined; a recount reveals the error and shows about twenty million fewer livestock than first counted and, again in keeping with the law of supply and demand, their value must increase.

"This should mean about $720,000,000 profit to the livestock growers of the country during the next ninety days," says the bank's communication. "This justifies an advance in livestock prices of 12 to 15 per cent over February 1 quotations. Tell your farmer friends to hold marketable animals for this advance. No such opportunity as this to help the farmer has presented itself since the end of the world war. It is the greatest event for the livestock grower that has occurred in a generation." There is much of interest to the farmer in the bank's communication, which is as follows:

"The revision of the count of live animals on farms which has been made by the United States department of agriculture in cooperation with the bureau of the census, is of grave importance to even the smallest livestock grower. Through this recount we have lost almost twenty million head of livestock, which we were supposed to have on farms in this country on Jan. 1, 1921. It has long been believed that the government reports on hogs and sheep were somewhat high in their estimates, but no one even dreamed that they were over-estimating the sheep in the country by nearly eight million head and the swine by more than ten million head.

"We now learn that we had 456,000 more mules and 273,000 more milch cows than we were supposed to have at the beginning of last year. We learn at the same time we had 975,000 fewer horses and 877,000 fewer beef cattle than the report of a year ago indicated were on the farms at that time. In these letters to our farmer friends and customers we have tried to bring out the idea that in the very near future livestock would be a bigger asset and that its value in the markets of the country was below what it really should be.

"In view of the present revelation, the situation is proved to be much better for the farmer than we had ever hoped. By one stroke of the lead pencil of the federal estimators, nearly twenty million head of livestock have disappeared from the farms and the total number of meat animals on farms at the beginning of last year was only 136 millions while, according to the report made a year ago, it was supposed to be 155 millions, showing a shrinkage of 19 million head of meat animals alone and the shrinkage on horses made up nearly another million head.

"From the above figures we see that we had one-eighth fewer meat animals on farms at the beginning of 1921 than we thought we had.

"The new and presumably correct count of meat animals on farms shows that we started 1922 with only 134 million head of meat animals made up of 41 million beef cattle, 36 million sheep and 57 million swine so that in addition to the paper shrinkage we have a further actual shrinkage in beef cattle of 689 thousand head and in sheep of 1,401 thousand head while during the year we actually gained 896 thousand head of swine.

"While we have experienced a paper loss of 20 million of livestock and an actual reduction of more than a million head during the year, the total value of livestock on farms has shrunk from 6,061 million dollars a year ago to 4,800 million dollars at the beginning of this year, an actual loss of more than 21 per cent.

"The result of all of this calculation is that the livestock growers are 1,456 million dollars poorer than the country though they were a year ago and the total value of all livestock on farms at the beginning of this year was only 4,800 million dollars.

"The bright side of the story is that there are 21 million fewer animals than we thought there were a year ago and about 20 million of these were meat animals. The population of the country, and therefore the meat consuming ability of the country, increased during the year. It would appear that there is every reason for a considerable increase in the value of all livestock and particularly meat animals.

"With the stock of beef, pork and mutton on the hoof far below what it was thought to be, it does not take much of an optimist to expect higher prices. That this corrected government report will send meat prices up all over the world is nothing more than a natural consequence and goes almost without saying.

"The story for the dairyman is not quite so good, as we had more milch cows a year ago than we thought we had and we have made a further gain during the year, so that there is almost an over-supply of milch cows. We have more milch cows in proportion to the total number of cattle than we

THE RIGHT MEDICINE

When it comes to stoppin' crime, Law will do it, every time! Might have called the Kaiser's bluff, if we'd jes' had laws enough. Needn't had to go an' fight, if we'd kept the law in sight.

Every time they steal a car, throw a statute on the bar. . . . Every yegg-man, poor or rich, dreads the Law more than the litch. . . . Every crook that's got half sense, shoots the leadin' evidence, swipes the goods with dirty paws—runs away—an' dreads the laws!

Pile the Laws high on the shelves, where they can enforce themselves. . . . Makes no difference who's the clerk. Pass the Law an' let 'em work. . . . Legislator' settin' there, hears the cry from everywhere, tellin' of the country's needs, heaps of new-laid laws to plead! Ort to pass a million bills, which would cure our social ills. Keep 'em comin' thick an' fast, happer hard, until they're passed!

Let enforcement stand, divorced. . . . Laws ain't made to be enforced. Never mind the fools' complaint, makin' fuss because they ain't. . . . When there's crime, remove the cause,—all we need is, Laws,—More Laws!

PEOPLE OF OUR TOWN

Every town has a Jolly Fat Man like this, who likes Everybody and whom Everybody likes. He's always in Good Humor and goes about dispensing Good Cheer. This Good Scout has just as many Troubles as Anybody Else, but he does All his Worries in Private.

A recent writer in a New England paper said recently: "I saw a sign in a store which is worth shouting from the housetops. It isn't very classy, but it is mighty expressive and particularly apropos at this time. It reads, 'Now—it ain't hard times coming—it's soft times going.' Perhaps that reason is actuating many persons today in this part of the country and elsewhere who cannot believe, or will not believe that their soft times are over, and who through some peculiar reasoning of their own seem to think it their duty to make things harder than they really are. It is in large measure the contrast between what was and what is that is making cowards and weaklings of men and women everywhere, who sulk over the passing of the easy pickings of the postwar days and whimper over the necessity of earning by a fair day's work a fair day's pay. It is such persons who helped to disorganize conditions when the big days were on, who helped to further confuse the issue when the readjustment processes began, and who, today are putting every possible obstacle in the way of a return to normal progress and normal living. They have learned the trick of lashing with all its sequence of unaccomplished duties, unfulfilled obligations and unearned benefits, and because they could 'put it over' when things were short.

mal they whimper and complain cause they cannot repeat the now. They rail against the "times," but in reality they are against the passing of the soft and until they are able to see the ference between the two they will time to confuse the issues and set the return to healthy prosper Charleston (S. C.) News.

The annual report of the Spring Fire & Marine Insurance company reflects the process of getting back normal through which the country is passing. For 1921 there was a decrease in premiums of $2,485,400 compared with the previous year. The company's operations yielded only $1,000,000—or about 9 per cent more than in 1919. It is apparent the year 1919 affords a more satisfactory basis for comparing the past business than 1920. In that year the country was doing an unprecedented volume of business at peak prices. Insurance was placed freely on all of property at prices then prevailing. An insurance company is obliged to meet the additional "moral hazard" of periods of depression; for it is established fact that at such times number of criminal fires and fraudulent claims increases. The company expenses, though reduced in proportion, were proportionately higher. —field Republican.

When Economy Was Murdered Hellum costs more than hydrogen. Dead men are no use to the country. It would seem, to the man who has as he runs, that those in authority might have put these two facts together, prior, not subsequent, to the Rome disaster to the Roma. With the example of OH-2 fresh in our minds couldn't we have spent the money necessary to fill the Roma's big gas tank with noninflammable helium, especially since we have seen seven millions invested in two plants to recover helium from natural gas?

There will be "investigations," course—already Congress is talking whether or not it should sanction dirigibles. But will Congress have the courage to place the blame for the Roma disaster where it belongs—rather on a peonious policy or a taken idea of economy? Will our legislators have the nerve to face their constituents if they do not know—a Congressman's constituents are to him a hydra-headed monster and he is all too prone to forget they are just plain folk, regular fellows who would rather spend money for expensive helium than it, via hydrogen, and kill a few citizens to mark their "economy."

Making Our Schools Serve Majority. We may be dead wrong but we believe, and always have believed, that our public schools should be conducted to serve the interests of the greatest number, and not for the benefit of the one or two per cent who may go to college after graduating from high school. If the trustees of our schools can better aid the 98 per cent of our young people, and especially so without working injury on the two per cent we are with them, and believe that the people at large should back them up in their efforts.

That high schools are not required to have fourth year Latin or fourth year Mathematics is evident from the admission requirements of the principal colleges and normals in Texas. Here are a list of the colleges referred to: University of Texas, A. & M. College, College of Industrial Arts, Austin College, Baylor University, Daniel Baker, Howard Payne, Simmons, S. M. U., Southwestern, T. C. U., Trinity University. Normals: Not a single one of these schools, in their rules for admission, require fourth year English, Mathematics, Latin, Spanish, History, Home Economics, Science, Manual Training or Commercial Department. Twelve require three year English; only three require three year Latin; 3 colleges require three year Spanish and 13 require 3 year Mathematics; 12 colleges require 2 year history; 7 require 2 year Latin and 7 require 2 year Spanish; one college requires 1 year in English and four require 1 year in Science; thirteen of these colleges do not make any requirements relative to Manual Training, Commercial department or Home Economics. Nine do not require a single year in Science; three do not make any requirements relative to Latin or Spanish; only one college makes no requirement as to history.

That other high schools of Texas are not requiring students to take fourth year Latin and Mathematics is shown from a report from the following seventeen schools: Abilene, Cleburne, Corsicana, Denton, Gainesville, Greenville, Lubbock, McAllen, Nacodoches, Palestine, Plainview, Ranger, Sulphur Springs, Taylor, Vernon, Weatherford. Note first the number of courses given and then the number required.

Only one of these schools gives a five year course in English while sixteen give a four year course in English. Fourteen give four year course in Latin; two schools give a three year course and one gives a two year course in Latin. Three schools give a five year course in Mathematics and fourteen give a four year course. Six schools give a five year course in History; ten give a four year course and one gives a three year course. Three give a four year course in Spanish; nine give a three year course and four give a two year course. Four schools give a five year course in Science; seven give a four year course and six a three year course. Eight schools give a four year course in Home Economics; six give a two year course while only three schools do not have the department. One school gives a 5 year Commercial department; two schools a four year course; two a three year course; three a two year course; four a one year course; while five schools are without this department.

Here are the number of courses required in these seventeen schools. Not a single one requires a fifth year course in any subject. Fourteen schools require fourth year English. Only two schools require fourth year Latin and only 3 schools require 4th year Mathematics. Eight schools require fourth year History, and one school requires fourth year Science. Three schools require third year English; one school requires third year Spanish. Twelve schools require third year Mathematics and two schools require second year mathematics. Sixteen schools do not require Commercial department and only one school requires two year course. Thirteen schools do not require Domestic Science; two require two year course and two require one year.

Thirteen schools do not require Latin while two require a two year course.

Fourteen schools do not require Spanish while two require a two year course and one school requires a three year course. One school requires three year Science, five a two year course, seven a one year course and three require no study of science.

Baptist News Notes

The monthly missionary program, was given at the home of Mrs. Hatcher on Monday, Feb. 20. A good attendance of the members was on hand to hear the interesting talks and papers on the work being opened up by our S. B. C. in Europe. This work is particularly interesting because of the history of the Baptist constituency already on these fields. The war stricken countries of Europe calls for our cooperation with these fellow workers in putting their work on a substantial basis. Mrs. Beckett as leader for the afternoon had arranged a very helpful survey of this study. Mesdames Shick and Orenbaum assisted the hostess in serving refreshments during the pleasant social hour following the program.

On Monday afternoon, March 6th, the Home Mission program for the week of prayer will be given at the church.

We very much enjoyed the helpful lectures given by Dr. Moore on the land of Palestine, and were the better prepared to enjoy the good sermon given by Pastor Bass on Sunday morning on "The Second Coming of Christ." This very timely theme is one of much interest to the Christian.

The evening service was given over to the discussion of the wise choice of Ruth, the heathen girl of Moab.

Some people in Big Spring think their environment such that they cannot live the Christian life—we wonder at such statements here in a town of churches when such beautiful characters shine forth from a land of dark heathenism.

Baptists should remember their spring payments on the $75,000,000 Fund are now in order. These payments are to keep our work moving on all the mission fields, home and foreign, and carry on other phases of the work as well.

Membership Department

Following paragraphs are excerpted from "Forty Ways in Which to Good Chamber of Commerce," by H. Combs, president National Association of Retail Secretaries, which appeared in a recent issue of the "Win. Community Builder."

Don't come to the meetings. Let sore if you are not appointed committee, but if you are appointed, do not attend the committee.

Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary, but when other members do their sleeves and willingly and helpfully work to help matters along, at the Chamber of Commerce is a clique.

Hold back your dues as long as you can or don't pay at all. Claim you don't or didn't receive a statement. Make the Secretary call a half-dozen times to collect back dues. He'll do nothing else to do.

Don't bother about getting new members. Let the Secretary do it. When a banquet is given, tell the Chamber of Commerce is money on blowouts which make noise and accomplish nothing. Don't tell the Chamber of Commerce it can help you, but if it can't, you resign.

If you actually can receive service from the work of the Chamber of Commerce without joining, don't think of joining.

It calls attention to faults and in your own business, resign at the Chamber of Commerce. Always keep your eyes open for ways wrong—when you find it, resign.

Every opportunity, threaten to resign and tell your friends about it. It gives your officers encouragement and helps to strengthen the Chamber of Commerce.

At all the Chamber of Commerce meetings, you don't give it any respect. When asked for information don't give it. When asked the Chamber of Commerce for incompleteness of their work, don't say anything.

When you pay your dues, make sure you feel that it is a Christmas gift from you. Don't consider it as an investment.

When you receive letters and notices, don't read them. If you do read them, don't do anything about it. When everything else fails, complain.

Don't attend the meetings once a year. Then claim the Chamber of Commerce don't do anything because you don't hear anything about it.

A MIDNIGHT TEST

By LYDIA LION ROBERTS.

"Is it because of someone else?" asked Austin, his gray eyes soberly watching the troubled face of the girl sitting opposite him.

"Honestly, I don't know," insisted Constance, her brown eyes lifted to his wistful, searching gaze. "I just don't feel sure, Austin, and I cannot go any further until I do."

"You have changed since George Drew came into our set," pondered the young man, and started as a flush covered the small, piquant face of his sweetheart.

"Has he—did he—" Austin stammered, and waited.

"Listen, Austin; I have always liked you better than anyone and thought once—well, I thought I should know just what to answer you when the time came. But now—I have answered you—I do not know."

"Constance, I know you love me; you are disturbed by—the other one because he is different. He is jolly where I am quiet, he is teasing and full of high spirits where I am just patient and persevering. Yet you rely on my strength."

Constance smiled slightly at the memory of the days of curls and many troubles that Austin had smoothed away for her.

"It's all right, comrade, think it over and let me know as soon as you can. It isn't much fun watching your best girl being vamped by another male star."

"Oh dear! I'm so sorry, Austin, you are so good to me that I feel like a wretch, but I can't decide yet. Mother and I are going to New York tomorrow night to stay a few days while dad finishes his business. Perhaps I'll know. . . . How does one ever know enough to be sure for years and years? But I'll try."

Austin said good-by cheerfully, but his heart was heavy as he walked back to his home.

Over and over through the next day Constance tried to decide her problem. "I wish I had never seen George," she thought, "and then I would have married Austin."

She was glad when it was time to go on the boat, for "maybe distance will help" was her last thought before she drifted to sleep with the swish of the ocean and the throb of the engines as music to her ears.

Out of a sound sleep she heard a voice calling her name and woke startled to find her mother clinging to the berth in fright and pain.

"One of my heart attacks, Constance, hurry," she gasped, and the girl tumbled out of bed and hastily gave the medicine, making her mother as comfortable as possible. An hour passed, with Constance watching every breath and giving medicine at intervals. Slowly the breath came a little easier and finally her mother spoke. "Just as soon as I can get up let us go on deck," she pleaded. "I am stifled here."

Constance looked at her watch as she carefully aided her mother's shaky footsteps through the boat to the deck. They took chairs and leaned back in a secluded corner, utterly alone. Soon her mother slept and Constance relaxed a little. She looked across the black, restless water and suddenly she thought of the miles that separated her from home.

"I might never see it again," she murmured. "I might never see the merry face of George or the quiet strength of Austin. I might never marry either one—the problem would be solved. No! I must see him—I couldn't bear it—I must go to him and hear him speak."

She leaned forward, straining her eyes to look across the spaces. "Oh, if he were only here now! Why, how simple it is after all—it is the one you turn to when there's danger or sorrow. It's the one you love so much that you feel as big as the sky and the ocean. How silly of me not to know before—it is a sure way."

In the early mail a letter sped straight to the office of a young man, who sat down suddenly and exclaimed, "Thank the fates!" when he read it, while his eyes sparkled and his mouth creased in one large, long smile.

He read again the magic words, "Take a girl and put her on a boat when she has been frightened by the sickness of a dear one; put a dark, huge sky above, and a tossing, black ocean below, have the girl miles away from anyone she knows, utterly alone and at midnight. Result—the girl will know who is the only one she can love till the stars grow cold."

A few days later the doorbell rang and Constance hurried to the door of her aunt's house, where she was staying with her mother. Two eager arms seized her and two eyes looked deep into her heart as she spoke her surprise.

"Oh, I wanted you to come! And let's never be separated again, Austin!"

Why They Wear Bow Ties.

The haberdashery clerk grinned with sympathy as his customer made his way about the shop. Then he turned to another well-known patron who was waiting for his order. "Know why it is that newly married men always buy bow neckties?" he asked. "No, well it's because they like to have their sweet young wives tie them in the morning. Married men don't buy them as often. Sure, I know! I was a bridegroom myself once."

Methodist Notes

For the sake of several anxious hearts who ask each week, "Do they count babies?" the Superintendent of our school wishes to state emphatically "We most certainly do!" Of the 438 present last Sunday at least eight were babies. It is good to see hoary aged, staid men and women, eager youth, etc. come together on the Sabbath morn for worship, but it is better still to see the blessed infants in their mothers arms; for Jesus said "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." And every Methodist believes that statement. We dedicate the little ones to Him in the ceremony of baptism—they are His, and in our school and church we never fail to do them honor. Sometimes the preachers may be skipped, or the superintendent and secretaries, in the count, but never a baby. Let me add that the babies of 2 1/2 years are taking part in the Beginners' work, and some of them can repeat scripture to the length of the 23rd Psalm and naming the apostles. Come and hear for yourself, and, seeing, believe.

Last Tuesday night Mrs. Flewellen's class met at the home of Avanel Talbot. The room was decorated with American flags in honor of Washington's Birthday. About eighteen were present and had just such a lively rollicking time as only those of that joyous age can have. Refreshments of most appropriate character were served and greatly enjoyed. This class has a contest on between Panthers and Wildcats, that bids fair to be a riot. If the girls will rally round as nobly as the boys, we may have fifty present in this one class this Sunday. Get on one side or the other at once, all you who don't belong.

Mrs. Miller's class of girls had a candy pull last Saturday. It was so cold and disagreeable, not all were present, but those who did venture to the top of the hill had a dandy time and all the candy they could desire. On Friday afternoon the Coffee Memorial class met with the teacher, Mrs. C. E. Talbot. Quite a good number were present, and a good program was keenly enjoyed by the class, and a few visitors. This was a business meeting and Mrs. True was elected president of the class with Mrs. Patton secretary and Mrs. Talbot treasurer. Delicious refreshments were served by our hostess, who was assisted at this time by Miss Avanel, the daughter of the house.

Last Sunday afternoon the Juniors had their social service program at the church at 3. Mrs. Davis had charge, and a splendid program was rendered by these well-trained young people who attend the features.

drill," and seventy cents was realized from a mere game, that was both instructive and recreational. The Mission Study the Juniors are having is unusually good. Miss Willie Sikes has charge of the girls, who use "Under Many Flags"—a foreign mission study; and T. B. Reeves, the boys, using "Stay at Home Journeys."

There were 42 present in the League last Sunday. We are glad to note this steady increase. After the regular program, cherries from a cherries tree were given all present as a favor. Next Sunday the Beginners are to be given cherries, too; they would have been given Sunday, but the tree was to be a surprise at the League. These candy cherries are very realistic and all children like them.

The last Sunday of the month is always celebrated by a mission special at the Sunday School's close. We had a veritable treat this time. Miss Miriam McDonald, using a large map of Africa on the board, gave a most graphic "Journey from Cairo to Cape Town," taking us with her from the Land of the Nile, through desert land, jungle land and over vast inland seas, to the coast at the extreme south of this immense "dark continent." This great road was even now under construction and will make this little known, mysterious, huge area, one of the wonder spots of the world, both historically and geographically. Miss McDonald was on firm ground, and it was a delight to travel with such an extremely interesting and well informed young person.

At the morning hour Bro. Hardy's sermon was well chosen indeed. Placing the physical and the moral kingdoms parallel, he illustrated in a splendid manner how we can grow to physical perfection in this world beset by germs of every sort of disease, and also thru divine help in Christ, grow into perfect love and full stature of the soul, even though all the hosts of evil and darkness surround us in an invisible army. It was a splendid challenge to rise to higher heights in health, in knowledge and in grace.

We never fail to have good singing, for under Mrs. Morris' splendid instruction and with a large choir of good voices, both of men and women, it is an inspiration to the entire congregation to join in. But this past Sunday we had a special—a rendition of the Lord's Prayer by Miss Vivian Johnson. It was beautiful, and was enjoyed by the large crowd of morning worshippers the church being comfortably filled. Miss Ruth Johnson is our S. S. pianist and an artist at the piano. We have good music always and Miss Ruth has promised us a new song to learn this

Monday at three the Circle was entertained at the "Y" by the February group of hostesses. Mrs. Hardy and Mrs. Musgrove had charge of the program, taken from "The Voice," and several good numbers were given. Miss Gay, a most delightful guest, gave us a wonderful piano solo. Being encored, she gave us a reading. We had a most happy social hour, at the close of which we were served a salad course, including in honor of the Patron of February, a most delicious individual cherry pie, heaped high with whipped cream. We are so glad, after a hundred years, to know it will be the cream instead of George that gets the whipping. This day marked our very highest attendance at a social gathering of the Auxiliary—in regular Circle session. 95 plates were served to the 84 women and 11 children present. It did seem for awhile that we had overtaxed the capacity of the "Y." Every chair was taken and the lawn seat brought up and crowded at that, the children and women who entertained, had to stand. Mrs. Myers was assisted by the following: Mesdames Thomas, Cordell, Upshaw, Tucker, McPherson, LaBert, Woodall, Griffice, Allen and Williams.

Dues to the amount of $20.00 was collected by our treasurer, Mrs. Canble, who also secured several new pledges, bringing our pledge up to about $225. Next Monday is business meeting. Come to the church at 3 for a most profitable hour. A surprise awaits you. Every Methodist woman invited. Be on time.

WOMEN GIVE OUT

Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every Big Spring woman who is having backache, blue and nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, should be glad to heed this Big Spring experience:

Mrs. J. B. Sloan, 200 Austin St., says: "Quite a while ago kidney trouble came on me all of a sudden. I had sharp pains in my back over my kidneys which were so bad sometimes I could hardly catch my breath. Nights it hurt me so I would roll from side to side and was very restless. My kidneys acted irregularly. I felt all worn out. I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to say they gave me immediate relief."

Prayer is such a solemn, such a sacred attitude of mind, so difficult really to attain, it seems strange when we get into the proper atmosphere we should waste time begging for what we have right at our feet. Why should we pray to be unselfish when all we have to do is to be unselfish, why pray for guidance down a proper pathway when we know just how to travel if we will? We can all be what we want to be if we really want to be that way. The good Lord has given us that power without the asking. Seems to me the only kind of prayer that's in order is a word for the poor fellow that don't want to be and a determination on our own part to measure up to the job of living.

All the arguments against the national adjusted compensation bill for those who answered the call of their country produce the same logical result: They prove the absolute necessity for the United States to keep faith with those who kept faith with it. The arguments for such legislation merely strengthen the position of those who favor simple justice for the men and women who laid aside their daily vocations and "did their bit," while those who were not selected remained at home and in peace and safety, reaped the rich rewards of conditions which necessitated the payment of exorbitant wages and salaries and the receipt of abnormal profits. Consider, therefore, the adverse arguments, the chief of which is that any adjusted compensation bill—it is viciously misleading to call it a "bonus" bill in the ordinary acceptance of the word—will cost large sums of money. Of course it will. It cost the service men "large sums of money" to don the uniform of their country and receive $1 a day. Those favored one who did not put on that uniform made "large sums of money" in the aggregate. Those who received $8 and $10 and $15 a day cost the people of the United States "large sums of money." Those who made enormous profits in the ordinary transactions of business cost the people of the United States "large sums of money." Adjusted compensation cannot be negotiated on any other basis than the expenditure of "large sums of money," but these sums are negligible in comparison with the vastly larger amounts expended for the benefit of those who not only did not interrupt their daily activities, but derived extraordinary benefits from their immunity.—Kansas City Journal.

The Texas Chamber of Commerce has officially favored the recognition of Mexico by the United States. This makes one more American organization which believes in justice. The railroads have recognized that peace exists in Mexico. American business men have become satisfied that it is safe to trade with the sister republic. Tourists are arranging to spend a part of the coming summer in Mexico. Mexico has removed the head tax hitherto assessed against persons visiting that republic. The Mexican people are anxious to trade more largely with this country. Professing a mighty love for humanity, we are expending most of it on Europe; particularly showing favors to Russia. Nobody appears to be able to supply a logical reason for our attitude toward Mexico. And yet, we still have hope that eventually the administration will awaken to the fact that a friendly neighbor is being treated like a step-child. Remember: We recognize Germany.—Galveston Tribune.

One law for rich and poor alike; law that knows no exception, that is impersonal, above both reproach and human interference; such is the idea held up to "law-abiding people." Let us thank God, then, that we are not all "law abiding" and that even some government servants can violate a man-made law when it runs counter to the dictates of sweet humanity and the teachings of One who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them no, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Mrs. Dionisio Zalewaska, a resident of Chicago, went to Poland on a visit. She took three children with her and returned with four. And the immigration authorities in New York said mother and three could come in, but Poland's quota under the immigration law was exhausted and the three months babe-in-arms born in Poland would have to stay out. Whereupon Secretary Davis calmly and quietly, and rightly, broke the law to little pieces and told the mother to bring her baby with her, quota or no quota. Some day, too far in the future, perhaps, to visualize now, enforcement of all laws will not be subject to the review of a humiliation court. Meanwhile, let us be thankful that making a man a cabinet officer, sworn to uphold the laws, doesn't necessarily make him either cruel or a fool in the face of a law higher than any congress ever passed.—Louisville Enterprise.

...ns of United States to Erect Sub-Memorial to George Washington

Washington, Feb. 22.—Approval of plans for a magnificent building to be erected in the city of Washington, D. C., on a ridge commanding the view of the Capitol, was given yesterday at the 12th annual meeting of the George Washington National Memorial Association.

The structure and surrounding grounds will cost approximately $2,000,000. Rising two hundred feet above the ground, the memorial building will be in plain view of the national capital and will be passed by all who take the pilgrimage from Washington to Mount Vernon, home of the father of our country.

...ers of Staked Plains Lodge 598 F. & A. M. Give $1.00 Each to the Washington Memorial

The Masonic Club of Big Spring celebrated Washington's Birthday commencing at 1 p. m. with Smoker. At 7 p. m. the members were called into the dining room. The meeting was called to order by Brother John Clarke, Master of the Club, who introduced Brother J. E. Morris on Denison. Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Big Spring, Brother Morris gave us a good talk on Masonry. He also read the history of the Masonic Gavel of Big Spring. This Gavel was used by Gen. Houston, the first president of the Masonic Convention, held in Houston, Texas, December, 1837. The Gavel was used by Anson Jones, the first Master of the Grand Lodge of Big Spring. It is now owned by Brother J. E. Morris, Past Master of Hill Lodge, Austin, Texas. Brother J. E. Morris loaned this Gavel to Brother John Clarke of Big Spring, Texas to be used by him on Washington's Birthday at the Masonic Club of Big Spring. The Gavel is made of ivory with a handle. It was made in the Holy Land and presented to Brother John Clarke by the Grand Master of the Lodge of Louisiana at the time.

The History of this Gavel will be published in the Texas Freeman of Dallas.

From 4 p. m. to 7 p. m. oysters were served by the committee of ladies, consisting of Mesdames John Clarke, H. W. Leeper, A. J. Gallemore. One hundred and thirty six enjoyed the feast, with Brother John Cowan being the champion oyster eater. The official record shows 525 1-2 to his name. Brother Harvey Moore, second with 302 to his name; Brother Earl Road, third with 150 to his name. Many others entered the race.

Commencing at 7:30 p. m. sharp the entertainment for the Masons and their families commenced. The program was a snappy one from beginning to end. The Ladies of the Eastern Star exhibited their new drill with great credit and was enjoyed by all present. Brother John Clarke presided at this meeting. Opening prayer by Bro. Jas. E. Morris of Denison. Bro. Clarke, talked to the ladies and children about the Orphan's Home at Fort Worth of which the Masons of Texas are raising $300,000 for new buildings and improvements. The Masons of Big Spring have donated $550.00 to the new home with the committee still collecting. Bro. Clarke also gave us a very interesting talk on the Shriners Hospital at Dallas for crippled children. This hospital when complete will cost over $300,000, with all the money in the hands of the Building Committee. Bro. Morris talked to the ladies and children which was very interesting. It is always a great pleasure to have him with us. We had on our program for the evening Binnie Carter, Margaret Stevens, Lester Stamper, Margaret Bettie, Janice, and Ruth Mellinger, Nancy Belle Phillips, Geraldine Davis, Leslie Martin, Mary Louise Linkman, Sunshine Barnett, Louise Davies, Miss Jenkins; Mesdames J. C. Yates, Kelly Hog, and Harry Hurt; everyone that took part was at their best and all were encored.

The stereoptical views presented by Bros. G. W. Lees and J. R. Hughes were highly appreciated by all present.

Bro. Lees giving the lecture. There were about 250 present at this entertainment. Refreshments were served. This was the largest meeting ever held by the Masonic Club. A vote of thanks was extended to "Dad" Clarke for the manner in which he entertained. Bro. Clarke did not forget the committee that did the work, Brothers Bettie and T. E. Paylor. Without them it would have been a failure. Brother Clarke thanked all that took an active part to make it a success also the children for their good behavior.

Colonel Harvey Again in Trouble.

The introduction of a resolution in the House asking for the recall of Ambassador Harvey would not be a noteworthy event if a Democrat were not the author of it. But it is a Republican, Representative Ryan of New York, who has made that extraordinary, though not unprecedented proposal.

The dispatches reporting his action have not explained just what it is that has provoked Mr. Ryan into offering his resolution. But Ambassador Harvey has lately renewed his campaign of post-prandial oratory, so that one can safely surmise that he has made an addition to the fund of unhappy observations which he has created during the eleven months that he has been our spokesman in London. Possibly the particular complaint now made of him is not so grievous as the action of Representative Ryan may suggest. But the fact that Ambassador Harvey so nearly always "puts his foot into it" when he opens his mouth to speak before a formal audience is pretty good evidence of his unfitness for ambassadorial service.

The career of Ambassador Harvey and the dissatisfaction it has excited serve to emphasize the fact that Mr. Harding has not been happy in choosing men to represent us in foreign countries. Though not of diplomatic category, his choice of Mr. E. Mont Kelly to be Governor General of Porto Rico is another and signal instance of his failure to pick men suited to the duties of the places given to them. Mr. Kelly seems to have made himself eminently unpopular in Porto Rico, and that fact is, if not proof of his unfitness, at least an impeachment of his qualifications for that particular and highly important office. Of the high-ranking diplomatic appointments made by the President, only that of Mr. Herrick to be Ambassador at Paris has impressed the country as being eminently suitable. Of all the others it may be said that either the men chosen are unfit or that they have been mediocrities in our public life who have evidenced no distinctive fitness for the places given to them. When a candidate, Mr. Harding promised the country a much more capable diplomatic service than Mr. Wilson had given it, but the most generous of Mr. Harding's critics would not feel warranted in saying that he has fulfilled that promise.—Dallas News.

What Is Education?

"What is education?" Every boy or girl who attends school should be instructed in what it really is and therefore get early on the road to education. Teachers and professors are not the only force in education. There must be an active cooperation by the pupil, who will not be efficient without an understanding of what education is. In a communication to the Ohio State Journal, a citizen of Lancaster, Ohio, have been given, none is intelligible to young pupils in the schools. He recalls that a famous man declared "education is the art of thinking properly," and says:

"This definition may appear good to those persons who are educated and know what education is. It gives no information to those persons who have not the habit of proper thinking. We can illustrate the extent of its wisdom by supposing that somebody was going to the White House to call on the President and an authority on etiquette would advise him to act with propriety. 'Many persons confound knowledge with education. They believe that if a man knows a good deal he is educated. This is an unfortunate error. A man with little knowledge may be better educated than a man whose knowledge is extensive.

"There is a difficulty in giving a definition of education that would be understood by those who are not educated. A process of instruction would be necessary to impress the idea of education on the youthful mind. When pupils in the schools learn to read, they should be told what education is. This is not the course pursued by any nation in its educational system today. The child is given knowledge and allowed to learn what education is. When he discovers what education is, he has made great advancement in the enlightenment of the mind.

"Men often are surprised by the fact that persons without a college education attain to eminence. Abraham Lincoln never attended college or a high school, but he learned what education was, perhaps intuitively, and became college training, knew what education was and became President. They both owed their success to the fact that they knew what education was, which enabled them to become educated."

Presbyterian Auxiliary Notes

Last Monday's business meeting was packed full of matters of importance for the Auxiliary. All joined in earnest prayer for guidance and wisdom in electing officers and making plans for future work. Mrs. Ellington's beautiful home will be the place for the Mite Box opening, which will take place Thursday March 16th. Program and other details will be published next week. After splendid monthly reports from officers and chairmen, the annual election took place and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Barnett; vice president, Mrs. Flaniken; secretary, Mrs. J. I. McDowell; treasurer, Mrs. Barrick; secretary of literature, Mrs. Carter; secretary of foreign missions, Mrs. Harrison; secretary of home missions, Mrs. Tamsitt; secretary of C. E. and M. R., Mrs. Currie; secretary of S. E. and Y. P., Mrs. Whitney; secretary of Spiritual Resources, Mrs. Caylor; Pastor's Aid secretary, Mrs. Littler; Chairman of Circles, Mrs. James Rutherford, Ellington, and Cunningham.

Next Monday promptly at 3 o'clock the meeting for Home Mission Study will be held at the church. Every member is urged to come whether you have a book or not, and let us study together and discuss the various problems presented in our book, "From Survey to Service."

Carelessness and Selfishness

Old man Carelessness says he is not much of a mathematician, but that he can add to anyone's troubles, subtract from everyone's earnings, multiply their aches and pains, take interest out of all labor, and discount everyone's chances for safety, sanity and success. Old man Selfishness says he is at the base of all the world's troubles and disasters. Sometimes he calls himself Individual Selfishness, sometimes he is known as Occupational Selfishness, and looms large as Class Selfishness. He says he is one and the same under any cognomen.

Carelessness says he can divide thoughts from business and place them in the pleasure column; that he is a potent factor in all failures; and that if he once secures a mere fraction of one's time he can lessen one's chances for success. He says he is a figure to be reckoned with at all times and that he is ever "Johnny on the Spot" to cancel all one's social, moral, and business obligations.

Selfishness says that if he is not held in check the spirit of democracy will never prevail, because he is opposed to the rights and equities of all the people being duly considered in the spirit of humanity embodied in faith, hope, and charity. He winks across the table and says that only his reformed relation—Unselfishness—will be found a specific for industrial and social ills, and that this other fellow alone can preserve democracy from bolshevism and anarchy. About time Old Men Carelessness and Selfishness were put out of the way of doing harm.

Silver Teas During Lent

The ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church are having a series of Silver Teas, during the Lenten period. The first of these was held at the residence of Mrs. J. D. Biles on Thursday at 8:30. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Shine Phillips and Mrs. John Clarke.

Mr. Eteson presented the plan of the "Church's Life," the book to be studied. Mrs. W. W. Rix and Mrs. Biles were the leaders for the afternoon, the subject being "The Failure of a Nation." Mrs. Harry Hurt gave a piano number which was greatly enjoyed. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. B. C. Rix and Miss Ruth Rix on Thursday night. Mrs. Eteson and Mrs. Shine Phillips will be the leaders, subject "A Chosen Generation."

No Class Legislation

A growing tendency toward legislation is charged by Darby, president of the University of who declares it is a very serious matter. It has become altogether too late, he said, whenever anything wrong to hurry to the legislative congress and urge enactment for redress or for aid.

"It seems that every line of in the country has its eye which seeks to obtain laws for particular benefit. The pressure-making bodies does not come to us asking measures for the public, but it comes from divisions of the body which are urging special legislation. "This is not good for the citizenship and that means good for the country as a whole. Individuals we are dodging responsibilities when we seek laws that will force somebody assume the burden we should ourselves."

President Kinley declared there is a slim trouble in any other city, then the correct should get down to business and correct the trouble instead of the round-about and indirect passing it on to the legislative congress.—Fort Worth Record

How Prohibition Works
Extracts from "How Prohibition in American Cities" tell their story, preach their own sermon, their own moral. The incidents are an insignificant few among the good effects of prohibition displayed in one great exhibit Boston comes a large number of among them these:
received a call to visit a family which we found three children ill with measles," says the president of National Organisation for Public Nursing. "The home, children were in a destitute condition, no bedding, little food and the lack of necessities that are to be where intemperance rules. The was, to all appearances, a con- drunkard, seeming not to care children had no food, and con- grew worse as time went on. When came along and the impos- seemed to work. After a time he as, as he did not think that his ors were very nice. Now wife children are much better clothed; furniture has been bought and the family standards are changed." women and the children are ap- tive everywhere of the benefits of tion. "The women in these that we know, who in the past borne the brunt of the hardships," he head of the Public Health organization quoted above, almost unanimously in favor of aged conditions. There are only out of the twenty six we have who protested against the new One woman, mother of six chil- says: "I thank God for prohibi- or it has given me a home; and is going to high school instead work. If you'd told me this a go I wouldn't have believed it." are just instances of what pro- is doing in the family circles. ating to business, a step may be westward to Peoria, Ill., known greatest whisky city in the world Uncle Sam reformed. It was cheap whisky trade what Louisville was to the fine whisky trade. Located in the center of the corn belt, its immense distilleries had a capacity of grinding approximately 42,000 bushels of grain daily. Much is said of the illicit manufacture of whisky in the United States, but there will be few to dispute the statement that not all of the illicit stills in the U. S. grind 42,000 bushels of grain in a year, not to mention a day. Peoria's immense whisky trade formerly gripped the imagination of the surrounding territory. Many of the farmers believed that this market for their grain was absolutely required. The business men of Peoria were horrified at the mere suggestion that prohibition might some day be the law of the land. They were unable to see how the city could survive such a shock to its principal industry.

After prohibition, however, the Chicago Tribune headed a story as to prohibition in Peoria as follows: "Bacchus is dead! Long live Midas!" As soon as prohibition stopped the distilling of whisky, Peoria immediately stepped into a prosperity of which it had never before dreamed. The Peoria Clearing House association reported that bank clearings for the year 1918 were $249,507,480, showing an increase of about ten million dollars in 1919 and a further increase of about twenty million dollars in 1920.

The executive secretary of the Peoria Association of Commerce, writing of the value of prohibition to that town, says:

"The Peoria distilleries—thirteen in number—located in Peoria and Pekin, are now used for other purposes than grinding corn for alcohol or whisky, and similar beverages. Some may inquire what these distilleries are now used for. One of the big Pekin distilleries is now the big Liberty yeast factory, the other distillery at Pekin is used for the manufacture of food products. In Peoria the distilleries were taken over by the United States Food Products company, and they spent about five million dollars in rejuvenating the plants, and now produce all kinds of food for man and beast. This includes sugar and corn syrup and corn oils, preserves, of all kinds, yeast, white vinegar, wheat flour, etc. The breweries, three in number, are utilized for general manufacturing.

"It is also notable that Peoria has not suffered since this marvelous change in industry. The concerns occupying the old distilling and brewing plants employ more men, and more money is involved than in the old days. Our bank clearings have increased at the rate of fifteen million dollars each year since that July first enactment. Often we receive letters from those who think that Peoria received an awful jolt and that our business is stagnant. The opposite is true. I don't think there is an empty building in Peoria, and we need more residences."

Reports of better business since prohibition went into effect comes from Louisville, Washington, D. C., Richmond, Chicago, New York, San Francisco, New Orleans, and, in fact, from practically every city in the country, which likewise report fewer crimes and misdemeanors and less intoxication. Following the war, a so-called crime wave swept over the country. It was a kind of war reaction that took hold of a few unbalanced individuals who were swept off their feet by their imaginations. Had the saloons been legalized and had it been possible to buy liquor as before prohibition it is difficult to estimate how extensive this crime wave might have become. There is bootlegging and there is crime, both far more extensive than should be permitted, but both are being overcome. A report from Baltimore says:

"I know men in this city who would certainly get liquor if they could, but who are not succeeding in finding it. As for bootlegging, there is very much less of it than there was when the city was wet." Men best qualified in Baltimore to speak do not hesitate to back up this opinion, it is said.

A former bartender in Newport News, where there are immense shipyards, said: "There is no getting around it that prohibition has helped this town greatly. Men who used to come into the saloons and spend all their money now take their wages home to their families and provide for them."

A business man in the same city said: "Prohibition has helped business. Now that you have got rid of the saloons, keep them out."

Opposition to prohibition and its enforcement is being systematically attacked by the advocacy of prohibition enforcement legislation in every political unit of the country. Time works in favor of the prohibition law. The day is coming when liquor will be as little known and little thought of in the United States as a whole as it is now in Kansas, North Dakota and other states which have been under prohibition for many years.—Fort Worth Record.

Significant News

With the news plastered all over the papers that night life in New York was never so shameless as now; with the equally confident assurance, accompanied by chapter and verse, but moving pictures at their worst but faintly reflect the lives of moving picture actors and actresses; with a new divorce case rich in unprintable details for every one that fades from the boards, and with an apparently endless supply of other items of the same agreeable character, it is no wonder if the reader concludes that the world is going to the devil at record breaking speed. As he turns the pages however, his eye is caught by the headlines: "Church Bodies Gain Million Members." To the mass of readers there will be satisfaction as well as significance in the fact that the religious organizations of the country have added a million members to their lists during the year and that they now boast a total of 46,000,000 persons.

One fact like this disposes of a good many facts regarding a night life or a movie life which affects a negligible percentage of the population. It is not a spectacular occurrence; it does not prick a jaded curiosity, but for sheer meaning it outweighs pages of scandal. And it reinforces a very old lesson, that everything is a matter of emphasis and that you find what you look for. If you choose to place the emphasis upon the sordid, the flashy, and the vulgar, you can make this out to be as sordid, as flashy, and as vulgar a and the gruesome, they are there for you to look at and gloat over. If, however, your taste is for that which dignifies humanity rather than that which debases it, if you prefer decency to debauchery and refinement to coarseness, you need not go out of your own street to verify it as the normal existence. And what is exceptional where you live is exceptional where everybody else lives.—New York Tribune.

UNCLE MARK'S WILL

By PEARL FARROW.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Standing in the lower hall Mildred Arris listened intently. She heard the drip of rain on the roof of the porch, and within the house the steady tick of the tall hall clock, a rapid tick from the dining room, and even the staccato tick from her own bedroom. Until today there had been no silence like this, for in the little room opposite the hall Uncle Mark had always been noisily arguing on the latest political news or swaying ponderously in the creaking rocking chair.

Now Uncle Mark was gone and Mildred, the only living soul who had cared, was all alone. She knew how all the village folk pitied her, how they were talking because Uncle Mark had left no will, and so, as they thought, she was unpaid for her long services to the eccentric old man. Because now Mark's sister, who had never been near him during his long invalidism, was coming for what was naturally hers, as the nearest relative.

After a long time Mildred sighed and moved. A gray cat came down the stairs, his eyes gleaming in the dull afternoon light. He sprang to her shoulder and she stroked him gently; his nearness recalled a duty, besides there was no reason for standing there now. She must gather together her few pitiful belongings and go away—she could not stand meeting Uncle Mark's sister—and her offers of charity. She did not know where to go; she knew only that she would go away from Greenville forever.

She wondered what Keith Wells, to whom she had been engaged for four years, would say. She would never marry him before because she couldn't leave Uncle Mark, and now—oh, well, she hadn't heard from him since her uncle's death, and although it was hard to believe that he was like all the rest, nothing seemed to matter now.

A deep sigh shook her whole body. "It isn't fair! It isn't fair!" she said with clenched fists. She climbed the stairs as if her feet were weighted and had scarcely reached the top when she heard the faint tingling of the doorbell. She had dismissed the servants directly after the funeral so she hurried down, giving a hasty look in the mirror as she passed.

But it was not a sorrowful friend offering sympathy who greeted her, but Keith—Keith Wells in the flesh, who grasped her in his arms and held her tightly, for a long, long while.

"I couldn't get here any sooner, little sweetheart," he said, "and I knew all the time how hard everything must be for you here. And you mustn't stay in this lonesome place any longer. Get your things and we'll get married tonight. And while you're getting ready I'll listen once more to that record of dear Uncle Mark's—remember—we three used to listen to it for hours?"

And so, while Mildred packed her suitcase, she could hear strains of "In Ole Virginia" fill the little room below. "It was dear of Keith to remember," she thought, and the old tune seemed to bring Uncle Mark very near.

The bright tears came to her eyes; she had finished packing and was standing beside Keith in the room which was filled with memories of the past. How happy the three had been and how quickly everything had been changed—this would probably be the last time they would ever see the old house.

And then suddenly, to the intense surprise of them both, the record changed abruptly. Instead of the round tones of the soprano the gruff voice of Uncle Mark took up the refrain, and as the song came to an end he recited the words of his last will and testament.

"And to my beloved grandniece, Mildred N. Arris, I bequeath my house and furniture. To my friend, Keith Wells, I bequeath my grandniece, Mildred Arris, and as a wedding gift to them the money found in the bottom of the old music cabinet." So the dear voice went on, not forgetting a single friend or servant. And at the end his old servant and his doctor pronounced themselves witnesses to this peculiar, yet characteristic, will.

Mildred was crying softly. "And to think," she said, "that an hour ago I was the unhappiest girl in the world. Why, Keith," she confessed, "I even doubted you, and I'm so glad you came before we discovered the will."

Keith laughed. "I'm wondering what your aunt will say when she finds that everything isn't just what she expected. I'll say one thing, though, and that is that Uncle Mark sure knew what I wanted."

"Me, too," said Mildred shyly. "And I am sure that he is happy now if he knows how happy he has made us. I wonder if he knows?"

"I am sure that he does," said Keith. "And he isn't really gone away, you know, because he will talk to us any time we want him to. Dear old Uncle Mark!"

And they put the record back on the shelf—with reverence.

Breadth and Depth.

"Do you think politics makes a man broadminded?" "Occasionally," answered Senator Sorghum. "Sometimes a rather limited mentality has to cover a large range of thought. The trouble is that the more it widens out the thinner it necessarily becomes."

The St. Lawrence Waterway

"Touching this project," says former Gov. Harding, of Iowa, "When I come before Saint Peter I hope that the harness marks will show on the collar and not on the breeching." He was speaking of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project, the movement in which eighteen Western States are associated. But it was also a graphic description of American spirit a picturesque way of identifying the plebeian tendencies which are truly American.

There was such a manifestation in the civil war period. The Pacific roads were then begun as a war measure. They were completed in the years immediately after the war. They were accompanied by a period of Western expansion which was the direct outcome of the war but which was facilitated and accelerated by that enterprise of the former generation which sent railroads reaching out into the West, reaching, reaching way beyond the occupation of the land.

By any calculation of prudence it would not be wisely done. The country was staggering under debts at that time incredibly great although we should regard them today as trivial. Half the national domain was wholly unoccupied. Of the half that lies east of the Mississippi one-half was prospective. Yet with unquestioned courage the generation of the civil war went forward into the West and gained a new empire.

Something like that spirit urges forward this St. Lawrence improvement today. To find new resources to the national domain, to quicken opportunities that are dormant, this seeking the way to the sea is, as Senator McKinley says, quoting a phrase of unknown origin, "the age-long desire of land-locked people." But to push the ocean 1,500 miles inland as our Western friends propose to do, that is a manifestation of the American spirit which knows but direction: Go forward—Washington Herald.

Money to Loan

Clyde E. Thomas, Secretary-Treasurer of the Big Spring N. F. L. Association, announces that the Federal Land Bank has sufficient money to loan to actual bona fide farmers residing on the land, either as cotton raisers or cattle men, for two purposes, to wit:—To take up vendor lien notes past due or about to mature, and to take up chattel mortgages and indebtedness against cattle and transfer the lien to the land. No money to loan to finance new purchases or to make improvements, for the present.

Charge is 1 per cent, paid at the time money is obtained, payable once. Terms are 6 per cent, 33 years time, or before, with a penalty of 1.2 per cent per annum if paid before the expiration of five years. Come in; no trouble to explain.

We Must Have Our Luxuries!

Those of us who were in business remember that along in the early summer of 1920, people began to feel that the party was over, took off their silk shirts, threw away their toys and went down and opened up a savings account. At least, that is the way these economic wizards recount it, and they invariably add: "That was when the period of depression began."

From July 1, 1920, to July 1, 1921, was supposed to have been the period in which we were all just a few jumps ahead of the sheriff, and when people just weren't buying. Some said they had no money, and others said they were waiting for still lower prices.

Regardless of how "hard up" we were during that year, we just had to have our luxuries, as Government reports show, and since these reports are based on Excise tax payments they must be accurate.

The following volumes are for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921:

So-called Luxuries	Sales 1920	Sales 1921
Candy	$ 462,729,560	$ 408,729,560
Chew, Gum	37,498,100	44,405,000
Perfumes & Cosmetics	160,693,025	145,019,100
Autos	2,008,665,000	1,675,763,800
Jewelry	537,272,100	486,078,100
Musical Instruments	275,582,420	231,358,620
Paintings and Statuary	15,431,320	11,163,370

When we compare these tables there isn't an awful lot of difference, and for a Nation that was "Hard Up" and all but ready to take the count, I think the showing was pretty good.

The big lesson that we can draw from this is: The people are not broke, and those of us who go after business in the right way are going to get it.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since. . . I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too. At all drug stores.

Honey Philosophy for 1922

We all seem to agree that New Year's resolutions are good for the soul, so why should we stop at New Year? What's the matter with a few spring resolutions, for instance; I do hereby promise myself that from this time on I won't insist on having my own way, because if I get it the world is likely to be upside down in ten minutes. What I propose to do is to find out which of the bunch of us humans has the best way and then root for that. It's better to accept the best than to force the worst just for the sake of winning, because when you win you lose, and that's a poor kind of a game to play.

BIG SPRING HERALD BY JORDAN & HAYDEN

$2.00 A YEAR IN HOWARD COUNTY
$2.50 A YEAR OUTSIDE COUNTY

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice, Big Spring, Texas, under Act of Congress, March 8th, 1897.

Big Spring, Friday, March 3, 1922

The disarmament conference has closed its sessions and has passed into history, but it wrought a work the effects of which will be felt when the bones of the men who composed it are dust. They executed "pacts," and "agreements," but what is the aggregate meaning of these terms except that it is in a restricted but nonetheless obvious sense a "league of nations." To drop into commercial vernacular, the conference has done by the retail what Woodrow Wilson proposed to do by wholesale. Its vision extended to certain nations, his vision extended to every nation of such standing as to make its cooperation necessary to make effectual his comprehensive purpose. It is not meant by what is said here to in any sense disparage the work wrought by the conference. It has been epoch-making, but every act done by it shows a coming to Woodrow Wilson and was a tribute laid at his feet, and the historian of the future will so appraise it.—Houston Chronicle.

The New Jersey senator, Mr. Edge, is opposed to a soldiers' bonus on principle. He announces: "I am convinced we will be better serving those soldiers who need governmental aid by helping to secure them employment rather than by granting a measly individual and temporary subsidy." But Senator Edge so keenly desires to introduce the sales tax into our fiscal system that he would support the bonus provided that the money were raised by a tax on sales. In order to have a certain tax levied he would gladly spend two or three billions on something he could not approve on its own merits. There are others like Senator Edge in congress. For months they have been calculating on the bonus agitation to drive a sales tax through both house and senate. Once embodied in the federal revenue system the tax would always be available, they believe. It could never be repealed even after the cash bonus payments had been completed. The sales tax is a tax on the poor more than any other tax that has been suggested. It means taxing poverty in order to meet an unwarranted demand on the public treasury."—Springfield Republican.

Use of Adversity

"What do you think of unemployment?" "It was the making of me," replied Senator Sorghum. "The reason I first went into politics was that I was unable to get a regular job at anything else."—Washington Star.

WE HAVE A SORE THROAT REMEDY THAT WILL RELIEVE YOU IN A FEW HOURS. . . CUNNINGHAM & PHILIPS.

Borrowing From the Store

If you went into a department store today and said to the clerk, "I would like to borrow ten yards of cotton sheeting, a gallon and a half of varnish, a keg of nails and a pair of opera pumps, size 5A," what do you suppose the answer would be? If you fall in your attempt to borrow the goods, suppose you "buy" the goods and promise to pay for them later. What is the immediate difference in the two transactions? You have the goods and the store has your word. If it had let you borrow them, you would have had the goods and the store would have had your word. But whether you borrow from the store its goods or the value of the goods, you are borrowing just the same.

Some people don't see that. Sometimes the stores act as if they don't see it. "Credit" sounds big and "charge accounts" sounds like business. But both of them stand for debt. A debt is still a debt, even if you can pay it off on the instant. Some people seem to think an account is only an account so long as it doesn't trouble them, but when it gets to be a burden to them then they are ready to consider it a debt. Logically speaking, a charge account is an evidence of temporary embarrassment involving inability for the moment to pay cash without inconvenience.

Waking up to realizations of this sort is what makes this deflation process so painful. We've all been charging it. All over the South we've been charging it. It goes back to the old days when the plantation sold its crops once a year and paid off everybody and then "charged it" for another year. But we do it in town: True, in the larger towns we've got down to the sixty days and even thirty days as our debt period. But we still like to get it now and pay later.

The department stores of Dallas are arranging to look a little more closely at the debt aspects of credit and a little less generously upon the munificent "whosoever" policy that sold carpet tacks and tapestry to anybody and everybody who telephoned down for them during the large, loose days of spending and spreading through which we came not so many months ago. When an establishment lends you its credit it has to charge for it, of course, as well as for the goods you get along with it. But its chance of collecting the charge for that loan depends upon its collecting the loan itself. If it inspects a bit more carefully than heretofore, can you blame it? Would you do otherwise, if you were lending to the store, for example?—Dallas News.

Gov. Harding Sees Prosperity Rainbow

Governor Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, has sent a thrill through the nation in his report to Congress on the general business outlook. Summed up, he says the United States is facing an era of prosperity of longer duration than the country ever has known. While he conservatively dodges expressing a personal opinion, and says "there are those who believe" the beginning of the revival is not far distant, we cannot escape the optimistic tenor of the report. Governor Harding is too wise to quote "those who believe" unless he is convinced that "those who believe" have knowledge and opinion that command serious consideration.

Backing up the statements of the Federal Reserve governor comes the report that the steel mills are busier than they have been in a year, a strong indication of the trend of the times, and plus this we see that the first victory of the farm bloc has created a favorable reaction in all parts of the country.

The story of the business merry-go-round always has been the same—business expansion, excessive production, wild speculation and the inevitable topple over of the load, long and slow liquidation, business depression, stagnation, with the public mind finally stunned and gloom prevailing. Next comes the desire for improvement, then a recognition of the fact that the people can be prosperous whenever they want to be prosperous, because the crux of the matter is work, normal production and a cheerful aspect. Finally we get action, and a united effort to hoist the old flag once more.

Until all signs fall the new business revival will be marked by a greater control on the part of the farmer. If he keeps his head and does not rush headlong into the field of speculation Governor Harding's prediction of a long era of prosperity will be fulfilled. Let the farmer take his higher place in the order of things and show himself as a stabilizing factor worthy of his greater and well deserved recognition. Our guess is that he will. The farmer has never failed when called to service.

A Real Government Opportunity

It is hoped the passing of Will H. Hays into the movie world will not slow up the government effort to develop air communication with the millions of the American people resident in our rural districts. There is something impressive but also perhaps pitiable in noting the curious thousands of fad followers in thickly populated cities "listening in" to great broadcasting stations sending out their educational discourses and ragtime concerts while the welfare of the nation awaits the rapid and widespread transmission of useful information to the farmer. Science has wrested this great new wonder from the hidden recesses of nature's storehouse, but it remains for the government to find a practical means for its intelligent and useful application. The sixty odd millions of people who live in the little towns of the country cannot afford two or three hundred dollars for patented wireless sets and yet the hope of the world lies in their contact with the scheme of things. Instantaneous world communication will put an end to destructive wars far sooner than all the disarmament that ever has been dreamed about, and the world will be enriched beyond our imagination through its agriculture when our farmers can sense each morning the needs and the pulse of all the people. A little pep mixed with vision and realization that money spent in this way is money spent for public good will soon put Texas in touch with Broadway, and it will put the tiller of the soil so close to the Wall Street coupon clipper that misunderstanding and manipulation will melt before the sun of mutual knowledge. The government can do no more helpful thing than follow the greatest earnestness and speed the Hays plan of broadcasting information and in a way that will permit those who need it most to get it without unreasonable cost.

K. S. Beckett returned Friday from a business trip to El Paso and reports business conditions out that way as steadily improving. He states that the February express business was double that of January. All the people he talked to reported February business much better than that of January, and all seemed to be of the opinion that we had passed through the worst of the depression and all are looking forward to a good business throught 1922.

What John C. Freund said

This illustration is from an actual photograph. It shows Vasa Priboda making his comparison test at Aeolian Hall, New York City, on October 16th, 1921. John C. Freund (seated right), who is Editor of Musical America and President of the Musical Alliance of America, wrote Mr. Edison:

"When the Priboda recital was over, I was present at a tone-test in which Priboda's actual playing was compared with his RE-CREATION by the Edison Phonograph. I was astounded to find that I could not tell when Priboda was playing or when your phonograph was playing."

PRIHODA is your greatest violinist

Do you realize that the greatest vocal and instrumental performances are brought by the New Edison?

A visit to our store will disclose the surprising facts. Take the greatest violinist who records for the talking-machines. Compare him, as he sounds on the talking-machines, with Priboda, as he sounds on the New Edison. You'll find that Priboda is infinitely greater.

Why? Because Priboda's playing is RE-CREATED by a phonograph so perfect that there is no difference between the artist's living performance and his RE-CREATED performance. This has been proven by the test of direct comparison,—which no other phonograph or talking-machine can sustain.

$ (Fill in your own first payment) is the price of putting the incomparable New Edison into your home. We mean it. How much spare money have you in your pocket, or in your bank account right now? We'll accept it as a first payment so long as it is sufficient to indicate good faith. The balance you can budget to your own convenience.

Come in! Select your instrument!

Compare! Compare!

Several artists have made recordings for both the New Edison and the talking-machines. Hear the two versions—and compare! This will show you that only the New Edison brings the truly great musical performance.

Betting on Achievement

It is not difficult to understand how it comes about that most of the gentlemen who have opened up campaigns for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate from Texas have felt called upon to devote considerable lengths of denunciation or depreciation to one of the greatest achievements of the Democratic party in all its history. But it is certainly unfortunate that the Federal Reserve Bank System, for the want of understanding on the part of the public, should be made the butt of vote-hunting.

The address of Dwight F. Reardon before the Dallas County Woman's Republican Club recently is an illustration of something which ought to take place more frequently and on a larger scale. Mr. Reardon is Assistant Federal Reserve Agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, and, in consequence, was able to speak with full information on the subject. His address was intended to give a simple and readily understandable explanation of the workings of the system. Mr. Reardon incidentally paid his respects to a class of critics which, he said, belong to the party which brought the Federal Reserve System into existence. They are chiefly politicians out of office "who hope to ride into popularity by creating prejudice against the system."

It should not be necessary to make the defense of the great banking system which saved the financial structure of the United States from collapse a personal fight upon politicians in or out of office. But it may shortly become necessary to take that defense before the people in a detailed fashion in order to save the Federal Reserve plan from serious crippling of its usefulness. The member banks themselves will have to bestir themselves on this point. Instead of considering that the Reserve Bank plan is of concern only to bankers, they will have to take the public into confidence as to the reasons for the plan and the benefits of it.
