Capsule contents revealed

A good crowd gathered Friday evening at the court house square to see the opening of the 50-year-old time capsule. Among the items were a preserved horny toad, letters, pictures and newspapers. All items will be on display at the Deaf Smith County Library. The second time capsule, buried in 1973 at the community center was opened Saturday immediately after the parade.

Heart disease to be discussed at CHIP meet

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of Deaf Smith County residents and will be a major topic of discussion this week when the Community Improvement Partnership (CHIP) conducts one of its final sessions before its report is presented to the Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors.

The CHIP partners will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C, to review out-migration, the Hereford Regional Medical Center plant and other aspects of health care in the county.

The session is a community meeting and will feature an overview of the organization's 11 months of work in evaluating all aspects of health care in Deaf Smith County. At the community meeting, the partnership will present the findings and seek comments from the public.

The community session will be conducted by Paul McGinnis of McGinnis & Associates, the Oregon-based health care consulting firm that has been working with CHIP since last year.

"There's a much clearer picture that we'll be able to take to the (Deaf Smith County Hospital District) board," community health organizer Pat Stone said.

In looking at heart disease, the partners focused on the question: Can a combination of education and available screenings for blood pressure, cholesterol and diabetes decrease the incidence of heart disease?

In their research, the committee, chaired by Frank San Miguel, determined heart disease affects 1 in every 20 Hereford area residents. For example, the Amarillo Heart Group has 1,137 Hereford residents listed as patients.

The committee also identified three major problems involving heart disease: lack of coordination of services from providers, inadequate communication of services to the public, poor communication among physicians and patients.

The committee is recommending a coordinated effort on screenings for heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes. The screenings need to be scheduled for a full year with a variety of providers and locations to

IMMIGRANTS

Cheap land lured many to region

By VIRGINIA ARTHO
Special to The Brand

Hereford's centennial celebration commemorates a frontier town that wooed numerous immigrants to the banks of its spring-fed creek and rain-filled playa.

Frontier towns like Hereford attracted settlers with endless ingenuity.

Countering the popular desert image, regional communities often chose names that evoked water, such as Blue Water (the first name for Hereford). After learning Blue Water already was in use, promoters decided on Hereford, honoring a successful breed of cattle. Still, the Hereford Commerce Club advertised in its brochure an "everlasting stream of clear, pure, freestone water" and that 18.2 inches of rainfall "comes between April and September, when it is most needed for crops."

The brochure featured photos of orchards, livestock, crops, tree-shaded picnics, educational institutions, fine homes, the train depot and carloads of immigrants.

In addition, it boasted of Hereford College, homes with "beautiful Kentucky Blue Grass lawns," new sidewalks, 100 automobiles, no saloons or "dirtreputable joints," "a magnificent school system," and seven religious denominations.

The Hereford Brand is credited for its extensive promotion of inviting settlers to Hereford. George Brandon of the Canyon City News praised Hereford as the "best newspaper town in Northwest Texas." He particularly credited The Brand for "the gain in actual settlers over other Plains counties during the past two years."

This real estate office on the south end of Main Street during the early-1900s likely was busy as immigrants were lured to the area by cheap, available land.

Advertisement was purchased in the paper by the Santa Fe Railroad, which also provided immigrant cars and reduced rates for new settlers. The railroad gleaned no profit from the rates, but it considered the costs an investment in future profits. The railroad also employed agricultural agents for promoting scientific farming in the region.

The Hereford Commercial Club set goals that included north-south trains, free mail delivery, a first-class hotel, paving, public parks, a causeway across Tierra Blanca Creek, completion of the high school and courthouse, 100,000 trees planted in and around town, 500 houses built and occupied by 2,000 progressive people, 500 new farms owned and operated by industrious farmers, a fire company organized and equipped, a flour mill, and promotion of Hereford as a health resort.

In fact, Hereford's climate was believed beneficial for certain health problems, and doctors were known to recommend consumption (tuberculosis) patients move to the area.

The almost treeless, shortgrass prairie was generally overlooked by earlier Texas settlers, but it became more desirable as land claims overpopulated other regions.

In the fall of 1925, Frank Bezner Sr., then 17, arrived in Hereford with his family.

The family moved from Lindsay, Texas, where much of the family members had settled. Land was in short supply in Lindsay so Bezner's father, Louis Bezner, purchased a quarter-section near Dawn. He and three sons arrived in Hereford in two immigrant cars with their machinery, furniture and livestock. Mrs. Bezner and the rest of the children traveled in a three-car caravan driven by Frank, Jake Bezner (Louis' brother), Fred Pittner and Joe Schmitz. Schmitz, a Realtor, worked with Frank Eberle, who sold land for Borden & McDonald.

They arrived at night and found the roads were no more than trails across the prairie. Heading in the direction

The special section commemorating Hereford's centennial that was published Aug. 2 by The Hereford Brand offered a wealth of information about the city's first 100 years.

However, there were many stories not in the special section, not only because of space limitations but also because the newspaper staff just didn't have the information.

If any of our readers have a good idea for a Centennial Year story, please call The Brand at 364-2030 and let us know about it.

Just because the special section already has been printed doesn't mean we're no longer interested in stories about Hereford's past.

of their farm, they were guided by a distant light from the Paul Artho farm. Artho then led them to their new home 2 miles away. The family moved into Hereford in 1928.

"It was different country -- cattle country -- when we came here," Bezner said. He said he missed the trees around Lindsay, adding, "It liked to killed us to come here."

The family also missed Lindsay's social activities, including dances, as well as relatives left behind and with whom they gathered several times a year.

"We were kin to everyone in Cook County," Bezner said. However, the family needed more work than hoeing and picking cotton -- all that was available around Lindsay.

ELC ELECTION

SW Bell's customers to receive new ballots

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Southwestern Bell telephone customers will get another chance later this month to decide if they want expanded local calling (ELC) between Hereford and Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

The Texas Public Utility Commission, which on June 8, voided the ballots for the election after it was determined there were discrepancies between the number of Southwestern Bell customers and the number of ballots distributed.

The PUC directed Southwestern Bell to resolve the discrepancies and provide a new list of telephone numbers in the Hereford exchange.

The PUC also has directed the telephone company to provide a commission-approved published notice, with one month allowed for publishing the notice, and distribute a ballot, marked "2nd Ballot" and printed on a different color paper from the first ballot. The different color ballot will enable both the telephone customers and the PUC distinguish between the two ballots.

The PUC staff also was directed to create a list of Hereford telephone numbers for the petition coordinator, Dennis Hicks of Hicks Well Service.

At the same time, the PUC established a new schedule for the ELC election. The ballots are to be distributed on Aug. 20. Customers who participate in the election must mail in the ballots no later than Sept. 4. The results of the balloting should be released Sept. 29.

The original ballots were sent out April 20 by Southwestern Bell to its customers in the Hereford exchange after the PUC approved a petition, coordinated by Hicks, calling for an

PARK DEDICATION — Community dignitaries, members of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society and interested residents braved a rain shower Friday evening to witness and participate in the official dedication of the Ruby K. Sears Memorial Park adjacent to the Deaf Smith County Library. The park, which was built through private donation and with labor provided by county jail inmates, is completely landscaped with brick, ornamental iron and a wide variety of floral specimens. The two-year project was conducted by the historical society in memory of Sears, who was a longtime patron of the museum and other community affairs. Sears was awarded the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Bull Chip Award of the Decade in 1980 for her work in the 1970s.

82 killed in U.S. embassy bombings

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) - Spurred by cries for help, rescue workers used backhoes and bare hands today to free people trapped under mangled steel and concrete shattered by two terrorist bombings at U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. The death toll rose to 82 before dawn.

"Help me, help me. I have gone now," gasped the latest victim, a Kenyan man buried in rubble, just before he died.

Just a few minutes apart, the suspected car bombings 450 miles from each other Friday turned busy streets in two African capitals into bloody piles of concrete and knots of steel.

The number of injured topped 1,700. At least eight Americans died in Kenya, U.S. Embassy spokesman Chris Scharf said. The State Department said a child was among those killed and five other Americans were missing.

More than two dozen FBI agents and bomb examiners boarded U.S. military flights for Africa within hours of the bombings to investigate.

"Our top priority at the scene is to determine the kind of explosive device that was used and the kind of vehicle that carried it there," FBI spokesman Frank Scafidi said in Washington. "Knowing the kind of explosive and vehicle can be like a fingerprint of who did it."

No one has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

"This appears to have been a very well-coordinated, very well-planned attack - clearly not the work of amateurs," National Security Council spokesman P.J. Crowley said in Washington.

As dawn broke under a drizzle in Nairobi today, rescuers could hear at least three people calling out from inside a debris-choked elevator shaft, plus a fourth person trapped nearby.

"It is horrific to hear moaning, sighs and whimpers from under the rubble when we can do so little to reach victims quickly," Red Cross spokeswoman Nina Galbe said.

The Kenyan government declared five days of mourning today.

The blast in Nairobi sent a crowded building toppling toward the embassy and a street packed with cars, trucks and buses. At least 75 people were killed and 1,643 wounded there, Red Cross and ambulance officials said.

More dead were expected to be found as debris is cleared.

Almost simultaneously, the U.S. Embassy in the Tanzanian capital, Dar es Salaam, was shattered by an explosion in an adjacent parking lot. At least seven people were killed and 72 hurt, officials said. It was not clear which bombing occurred first.

No Americans were believed killed in Dar es Salaam.

Car bombs were believed to have caused both blasts, Kenyan and Tanzanian officials said.

Working through the night beneath floodlights, rescuers in both capitals used pick axes, shovels and ropes to clear rubble.

After an hourlong effort in Nairobi, one person was pulled alive from the wreckage to cheers from the gathered crowd.

But another rescue attempt ended tragically.

Kenyan Sgt. David Kambi, an army engineer, said he struggled for four hours to free a 40-year-old man named Gitau whose chest was weighed down by a slab of concrete.

"I told him, 'Gitau we're going to help you,'" Kambi said. He pleaded for help twice, then died, the officer said.

In Washington, President Clinton said the United States would bring the terrorists to justice "no matter what or how long it takes."

Friday's blast in Kenya damaged at least 53 buildings, severed phone and power lines, shattered windows as far as 10 blocks away, and sent black smoke into the sky. Several people aboard two passing buses were killed by shrapnel, witnesses said. Bloodied clothing and papers lay scattered around.

Private parts of Nixon tapes to be returned to his estate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Decades after the fighting over his tapes began, Richard Nixon is finally getting at least part of his wish.

The National Archives, under a court order it had fought for years, on Monday will begin cutting up the original tapes from the Watergate years and returning portions dealing with private matters to the late president's estate.

That's a sizable chunk of the tapes - about 820 hours out of 3,700. Nixon went to his grave in 1994 immensely frustrated that the government still had custody of the material even though the Supreme Court in 1977 had ruled that private conversations would have to be returned.

The private parts of the tapes were never meant for the public's ears. "He wanted to make absolutely sure that family and personal conversations were never made public," said John Taylor, who is an executor of the Nixon estate and runs the privately-financed Nixon library in Yorba Linda, Calif.

Taylor said the executors probably would destroy the personal outtakes from the original tape. But he said nothing was being lost to history, calling the long dispute "entirely an emotional and symbolic issue."

Archivist of the United States John Carlin has asked the Nixon estate to accept a full "master preservation copy" of the tapes so that the full record will be preserved intact.

Taylor said the Nixon estate wouldn't tamper with the "preservation copy." But he also said the estate would never make public the portions that deal with strictly personal matters.

Others arriving from Lindsay included the Joe and Mary Reinart family in 1924. Their son, Elmer Reinart, also said people came to Hereford because of the availability of land and the region's development of irrigation.

"Back in those days, people were always looking for new places to go and start out at," Reinart said.

He said the trip took three days in the family's Ford Model T.

"There weren't many roads then," he said.

Reinart said his father shipped their cattle and the family's belongings by freight train. The family settled on a farm 9 miles southeast of Hereford, where the youngest brother, Leander, still resides. The family farmed with horses until 1928, raising wheat, milo and cotton.

Near Lindsay is another German settlement, Muenster, from which several Hereford families immigrated, including the Clem and Angeline Schumacher family. Daughters Adeline and Marie were 9 and 11, respectively, when the family arrived -- including two younger brothers -- arrived on Feb. 1, 1927.

Clem Schumacher was a carpenter who already had spent time in Hereford, helping build homes for friends who had relocated earlier from Muenster. His first contracted work as a new resident was helping build the new St. Anthony's Catholic School, now the Deaf Smith County Museum. Several homes he built in the 1920s and '30s are still in use.

The sisters, who would grow up to marry brothers Ed and Gene Loerwald, said the family moved to Hereford for their mother's health. Also, Adeline said, an oil boom in Muenster played a part.

"Daddy wanted to get away from the oil people. They were known as being pretty rough in those days," she said.

Schumacher heard about this area from Frank Eberle.

"He came to Muenster and Marie and I remember seeing him sitting on the hotel porch. He recruited a lot of people from Muenster to come' up

The Womble family moved from Tennessee to Amarillo in 1891, but Troy "drifted on down here looking for a place to homestead," Benny said.

Womble believes his father settled here because of a rumor the Santa Fe Railroad planned to build a line from Amarillo/Canyon to Clovis, N.M.

"He knew by looking at the map they would come about where Hereford is now," Womble said.

He added his father lucked out with the railroad missing his dugout by only 20-30 feet.

Mildred Hicks' parents arrived separately. Her mother, Carrie Taylor, moved from Denton in 1912 to take a teaching position at the Ford School, north of Hereford. She arrived in Amarillo by train and was picked up by a neighbor in a wagon. Hicks still has the trunk that carried her mother's belongings.

"I had all her worldly possessions in it," Hicks said.

Her father, W.M. "Mel" Stewart, and his livestock arrived in Hereford via rail in 1908. He also brought a buffet and desk that his daughter still owns. Stewart went to work on the Burch Ranch. He and Carrie Taylor later met and were married, after which she quit teaching, and they operated a ranch west of Ford.

Mildred's husband, R.D. "Don" Hicks, is the son of Clifford and Elizabeth Hicks, also immigrants to Hereford. Clifford came to the area to farm, but soon turned to construction, helping to build St. Anthony's Catholic Church and the First Methodist Church sanctuary, as well as several other buildings and homes around town.

Helen Rose's father, Clifford C. Acker, and his brother came to Hereford under tragic circumstances.

"My dad was living in Sedalia, Missouri, with an older brother and grandmother in 1902," Rose said. "His mother died when he was born, and his father before he was a year old. Here in this new territory," Adeline said.

"Mr. Eberle is Chip Guseman's grandfather, his mother Genevieve's day," Marie said. Guseman operates a ranch west of Hereford.

"We came in a Model T Ford touring car," which took two days to make the 350-mile trip from Muenster, Adeline recalled.

The family stopped at gas stations with Nehi signs.

"The more Nehi you drank, the thirstier you got," Adeline said.

They watched for towns by spotting municipal water towers. The trip was entirely on dirt roads, and the recalled the road from Dimmitt to Hereford seemed to turn every half mile.

Marie recalled the family's impressions of the new landscape as they ascended the caprock.

"It was flat and no trees; hilly and rocky compared to where we came from. When we got on top of the caprock at Silverton, the broomweeds were just about a half-foot high. Where we came from, why, we used them for umbrellas when we were playing house and used them for brooms, sweeping the yard. They were big weeds. Here, they were just like ground cover. I remember an aunt teased me about that," she said.

"There was a creek here (Tierra Blanca) with water in it and fishing and swimming holes."

Adeline recalled her father pointing out the landscape during the trip.

"He would say, 'Look at the grass! But, look at those fat cattle!' Of course, where we came from, we had meadow grass that would get 2 feet tall. We came out here and saw fat cattle on this little, bitty, dry shortgrass," she said.

Adeline said she liked Hereford in its early days; Marie said the people were friendly.

The Schumacher sisters' future husbands, two sons of Joseph and Clara Loerwald, moved to Hereford from Wichita Falls in September 1929.

Benny Womble's father, Troy Womble, is traditionally recognized as Hereford's first permanent resident.

In that year, his grandfather died and his grandmother needed a job to be able to take care of the two boys."

So she took the two boys and moved to Hereford, where her son, G.A.F. "George" Acker headed Western National Bank, and took a job as a house mother at the local college.

Rose's mother, Mary Jane Fox, and her family moved to Hereford from Oklahoma in 1913 "to join one of my grandfather's brothers because the business opportunities seemed a little greater in Hereford at that time," she said. Rose's parents met and later married in 1922, raising three daughters.

Rose, a member of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society, said her research has found the "land was so cheap that if farmers made one or two good crops, they could pretty well pay off what they owed on it. At least, if you believe some of the brochures we have at the county museum, they could. A lot of the land in this county sold for under a dollar an acre before 1910, when many of our fine, fine settlers came down here in the immigrant trains from Illinois, Ohio and Iowa."

Travel for the earliest immigrants crossing the plains to Hereford must have seemed tediously slow with infrequent landmarks to color their passing. Mirages making distant towns seem closer than they were probably frustrated them. For some, there were section gates to open and close as they crossed fenced pastureland.

Many immigrants left hills of lush green for the Panhandle's brittle, ochre prairie. They said goodbye to sheltered woods and lulling hills to say hello to an endless sky; they bid farewell to delicate wildflowers and greeted the plain's grazing herds of wildlife.

With freshening winds snapping their wagon sheets, they pitched tents, dug wells, erected windmills and made a life holding to the bright promise of unrivaled sunrises and sunsets, jeweled playas and abundant space.

election on toll-free telephone service between Hereford and the Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

By April 27, Linda Hymans, the commission's ELC coordinator, began receiving calls from Hereford subscribers who had not received a ballot.

Subscribers were asked to send Hymans a letter stating they had not received a ballot and how they would have voted.

Seventeen letters were received by the PUC; however, when the PUC staff checked those names with the master list supplied by the telephone company, the names were not on the list of subscribers.

The master list was verified with 7,592 access lines, but only 4,620 ballots were mailed. Multiple lines were eliminated, as were SW Bell test lines, leaving about 3,000 subscribers without ballots.

The PUC ordered the telephone company to file a written report explaining the discrepancies.

Hicks has said he doesn't believe the discrepancy was deliberate.

If 70 percent of the subscribers who return the second ballots approve of the ELC, the PUC would order SW Bell to stop charging long-distance toll between Hereford and the Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

Cleanup Day called successful

The Texas Country Cleanup Day held Thursday at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn was successful, according to Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County extension agent.

Newton said more than 90 people brought in materials for recycling. Materials processed included: 1,461 passenger car tires; 302 truck and equipment tires; 1,469 plastic pesticide containers; 2,550 gallons of used motor oil; 15 lead acid batteries; and 6,750 used oil filters. All items were sent to state contracted recyclers.

meet the needs of the public.

Other possible solutions discussed by the committee members include the creation of a local support group to share information and provide emotional support, and an increased awareness of CPR training and possible assistance with training more people to be able to provide CPR.

Another major health problem identified by the partners involved cancer and its effects on the population.

The committee, which was chaired by Margie Daniels, determined there is a lack of coordination among the providers and inadequate communication to the public about the availability of screenings, which has had an adverse effect on participation.

In looking at the county's out-migration problem, the committee, chaired by Chester Nolen, sought to determine exactly what medical services are being sought outside Hereford and which of those services are offered locally, either by the physicians, clinics or at Hereford Regional Medical Center.

In assessing the problem, the committee members also asked other questions, including:

- What services, now being sought out of town, do we want to offer in Hereford?

- What population is needed to support these services?

- How can we change the beliefs/attitudes about the quality of local health care services?

- Can local use of health care be increased by better cooperation among providers?

- What is the impact of health maintenance organizations (HMO) and primary provider organizations (PPO) have on out-migration?

During the research of the problem, the committee discussed the issue of insurance coverage for the larger local employers.

Nolen contacted the Hereford Independent School District, Deaf

Smith County and the City of Hereford to learn if these employers are willing to adjust their insurance plans to encourage more use of local providers. He reported none of the employers expressed any opposition, but acknowledged they had not considered the matter.

The committee ran into problems in gathering data on patients from this ZIP code who have been treated in Amarillo and Lubbock hospitals. The data would have provided the committee with information about what services were provided out of town.

t Hereford State Bank, we learned long ago that what really separates us from other banks is our people. People like Elvis Shields.

Elvis has been an employee of Hereford State Bank since 1982. She currently serves as an outside teller and diligently helps HSB customers with their drive-thru banking needs.

Elvis and her husband Travis have two children and two grandchildren. The Shields are members of the Central Church of Christ. Not a big fan of football, Elvis enjoys fishing and shooting as hobbies.

We're proud to have Elvis and the many other employees of our bank who work extra hard to make your banking easy.

All banks say they do this -- make your banking easier. Being able to do it better than anyone else is the definition of our success.

A recent survey reports that Americans greatest fears are: Speaking in public; getting fat; going out alone at night; visiting the dentist; dying; spiders and insects; swimming in the ocean; heights; flying, and large crowds. There was at least one surprise: a call from the IRS was not listed among the greatest fears!

By the time this column goes to press, most of the Centennial Jubilee will be history. It was a great celebration, thanks to a lot of planning and hard work by the Jubilee committee, Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, members of various clubs and organizations, and individual volunteers.

The celebration of Hereford's 100th birthday took place during the annual Town & Country Jubilee, making the event a little more special this year. The festive occasion attracted many former Hereford residents, a lot of them attending HHS class reunions. We hope all who attended some or all of the events took pride in the celebration.

Speaking of community pride, we read an article recently which reported a lack of civic involvement and pride in many communities across the nation. Even in Hustlin' Hereford, there are those who sit back and complain. If those soreheads had joined the effort, the Centennial Jubilee might have been even better.

How do you cure public cynicism and revive community spirit? The conclusion in the article is that Americans must regain the habit of active citizenship and take more personal responsibility for what is happening in their communities.

Citizenship begins with commitment rather than expertise. Citizens do not need special preparation, advanced education or bureaucratic permits to get involved. Despite peace and prosperity, people continue to feel alienated and dissatisfied with government and the way power is exercised by those who have it.

Only by becoming active participants in civic life -- being players instead of spectators -- will the genuine sense of civic pride and trust be rekindled. The question is how to convince apathetic people that if they'll stop being apathetic, they'll be able to help society, and help themselves.

After getting his water bill last week, Publisher Roy McQueen of the Snyder Daily News wrote: "That's all I need is one more problem -- a lawn with a drinking problem."

That may reflect the thinking of a number of Hereford residents. We've heard several complain about their recent water and electric bills this past week. On Tuesday when showers rolled across the area, the city finally received at least a temporary relief from the drought and heat. Other areas of the county, particularly to the west and northwest, had already received some beneficial rains.

An 'American people' moratorium?

"The American people ...." Is anyone else as tired of hearing that as I am?

Thanks to our political types, the term has become trivial as every group contends it's speaking for all of us. I'll never know how that's possible with so many opposing groups and factions are claiming to be the sole voice for all of us.

"The American people want tax cuts," Newt Gingrich bellows.

"The American people want to protect Social Security," President Clinton counterbellows.

"The American people want to know everything about the president's sex life," a Republican talking head intones.

"The American people don't want to know about the president's sex life," a Democratic talking head counterintones.

"The American people ...."

The term's been made so trivial, has been so overworked that I'm sick of hearing it. I think it's time to give it a vacation. I'm calling for a five-year moratorium on use of "the American people" in any public comment.

Further, I believe violators of this moratorium should be locked in a windowless room and forced to listen to Wayne Newton recordings until they sign an oath never to say "the American people" ever again.

And, while I'm at it, I also am getting tired of public officials who "welcome" investigations into their doings and "look forward" to appearing before a grand jury.

Most recently, President Clinton stood in the Rose Garden and very earnestly said he is "anxious" to testify about the Monica Lewinsky fallout before the independent counsel's grand jury.

Sure, Mr. Prez.

If Bill Clinton thinks I believe he's just champing at the bit to get in there and run the risk of getting caught (as the national talking heads say) in a "perjury trap," then I know about some land just waiting to be developed.

Remember when Newt Gingrich was under investigation for his somewhat lackadaisical attitude toward ethics? He stood before the cameras and said cheerfully how pleased he was to be the target of the investigation. He looked so happy to have investigators prowling around through his financial affairs that I can only imagine how ecstatic he must have been when the House Ethics Committee laid that $300,000 fine on him.

DON COOPER

Reflections

What about former Attorney General Ed Meese when the independent counsel was investigating him for conflict of interest? Meese said was glad to be the target of the investigation.

Sure, Ed.

Others who have been just tickled to death to have their lives opened up and examined for the world have included the late Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, former Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, former National Security Advisor John Poindexter, U.S. Rep. Barney Frank and Labor Secretary Alexis Herman.

All of these people stood proudly before the cameras and announced their pleasure at being targets of investigations.

Of course, we believed them. What rational human being wouldn't want to have to shell out hundreds of thousands of dollars in attorney fees? Who wouldn't want the sheer pleasure of having everything you've ever done in your life exposed for all the world to see and discuss?

I just wish one time to see a public official who's the target of an investigation just be honest and say he or she would really prefer to have the whole matter dropped.

Beware the office holdover

WASHINGTON (AP) - Next time the White House changes political hands, the new occupants aren't likely to leave any room for holdover staffers, remembering Linda Tripp.

With or without the kind of controversies and scandal allegations that have scarred this White House, a disaffected aide can be a headache. That, and rewarding the loyalists of the campaign, are reasons the winners recruit from their own ranks.

The whistleblower in the Monica Lewinsky case survived the switch from Republican to Democratic administrations, serving the new one so effectively as to gain a position in one of its most sensitive offices.

"I have never had any political agenda. I still don't," she said at the courthouse in defending her role and denouncing her critics after her eight days of grand jury testimony. "I have been honored to serve presidents in both parties."

She didn't sound honored in describing what she saw and heard after President Clinton took over the White House from George Bush.

"As a result of simply trying to earn a living, I became aware between 1993 and 1997 of actions by high government officials that may have been against the law," she said.

Mrs. Tripp did not explain, but that time frame would include the suicide of Vincent Foster, the deputy White House counsel, for whom she'd worked, and subsequent investigation; the firing of the White House travel office staff; and the admittedly improper collection of FBI background files on Republican political appointees.

Those episodes predated the Lewinsky allegations of an affair with Clinton and an attempted cover-up, which Mrs. Tripp took to special prosecutor Kenneth Starr on Jan. 12, after tape-recording telephone conversations with the former White House intern.

There also was the matter of Kathleen Willey, the White House aide said to have told Ms. Tripp in 1993 that the president had just made a sexual advance in the Oval Office. When Mrs. Tripp was quoted by Newsweek on that incident in 1997, Clinton's counsel said she was not to be believed, the comment that may have led her to start talking after taping.

"Imagine how you would feel if your boss' attorney called you a liar in front of the whole country," she said last Wednesday after her testimony. "And imagine how you would feel if that boss was the president of the United States."

By the time that happened, she was out of the White House, in a public affairs job at the Pentagon, with a hefty raise, in a job that was part-time until she got it.

Government gets ready to stick it to Indians again

One more time the government is gearing up to sock it to the Native American tribes - or maybe it's just a case of continuing to do so.

For centuries, native peoples have been at the mercies of the white man. First, they came with their diseases and alcohol, which they freely shared with a completely non-sophisticated society.

The natives who survived the attacks of polio, cholera, measles, and smallpox then had to learn that they had no tolerance of the white man's firewater.

Europeans came to this new land and found a society that was completely susceptible to their schemes, plots and cons.

One of the first agreements between the natives and Europeans was the purchase of a certain parcel of land which could be encircled by the hide of an ox.

Natives never counted on Europeans cutting the hide into small strips, tying them together and encircling the land.

But then again, they did not really understand the principle of land ownership. They took from the land only what it was willing to give and then moved on to let the land heal.

During the early years, the Spanish, the French and the English all taught different tribes acts of horror and violence, to be used on the other nationalities, but were then appalled when the tribes turned and used these acts against the settlers.

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

From then on, the native people were termed "savage, inhumane, brutes," "bloodthirsty killers" and other assorted derogatory names.

They were shot, starved, imprisoned, enslaved, separated from their tribal families and forced onto desert-like reservations.

Of all the agreements ever made between the American Indians and the white man's governments, the Indians were never the first to break the treaty. It was always the government or its representatives which would renege on an agreement.

Even after the Native Americans were herded onto the reservations, the agreements were broken. Promised rations were not available; native customs and traditions were not allowed; and the government continued to take land away once oil and minerals were discovered on it.

The Indians had their rights and dignity removed and were forced to accept the white man's traditions, religions, beliefs and clothing styles.

Many sold, denied or forfeited their natural birth rights, because of a stigma attached to being an Indian. In effect, they lost all they ever had.

What were once people content with their way of life, reliant on no one, became a society with little or no pride in themselves or their heritage.

Now different branches of the government are telling tribes that gambling on reservations may be curtailed.

Personally, I would rather know that these once-proud people had something they could rely on more than the doubtful games of chance, but if the tribes have agreed to allow the casinos on the reservations (which by the government treaties allows tribal rule), then the governments, both federal and state, should not stick their fingers in it. It is not their business.

But, hey, after more than 300 years of breaking treaties, I guess the government finds it a hard habit to break.

For years, I've heard of the mistreatment of the African people who were brought over against their will to work on our Southern plantations. Much of the mistreatment continued and even worsened even after emancipation, but through the years it has gotten better.

The black society has been encouraged and helped toward higher education; they've reached goals of teachers, judges, and heroes. They've become spokesmen for their people and made great strides in human enrichment. Many have revived African styles and decorations, making it acceptable throughout the country.

For the red man, though, the encouragement to better himself is slight and the hope to revive items of tribal culture are nearly non-existent.

It's been less than 20 years since I had a teacher who condemned all American Indians as "good for nothing drunks."

I was sent to the office that day because I refused to accept his judgment and demanded an apology on their behalf. For you see, my father was a half-breed. The blood of the Cherokee flows strong through my veins and I'm far from being a good-for-nothing drunk.

Someday I would like to see the people of all the tribes prosper, live within the individual cultures and not have to stoop to the level of accepting casinos on their lands; however, until they are encouraged to take as strong a stand as the descendants of the slaves, then there will be no change for the better.

In this country the Chinese celebrate Chinese New Year; Jews light the candles of the Menorah; Hispanics dance for Cinco de Mayo. So, when will the American Indian be allowed to live and celebrate tribal customs without the degradation which has followed through the centuries?

Expanded tax base gives breathing room

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Expanding tax bases gives local taxing entities some breathing space when it comes to setting the tax rates and drawing up budgets for the next fiscal year.

The Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, which provides the numbers the county, city and school districts crunch in budgeting, has provided figures for the effective tax rate and the rollback rate to the taxing jurisdictions in the county.

The effective tax rate is the level required to generate the same amount of tax revenue raised in the current fiscal year.

The rollback rate is the maximum tax rate the taxing entity can set before the taxpayers can initiate rollback procedures.

HEREFORD
The city's tax base for this year is $265,121,599, up nearly 8 percent from last year's $244,118,612.

Last year's tax rate of 42 cents per $100 assessed valuation generated $1,025,298.44 in operating taxes.

The effective tax for this year is 38.5 cents, while the rollback rate is 41.59 cents.

DEAF SMITH COUNTY
The county's tax base for this year is $543,902,116, up about 4.4 percent from last year's $519,995,694.

Last year's tax rate of 52.86 cents generated $2,748,696.74 in operating taxes.

The effective tax rate for this year is 50.396 cents, while the rollback rate is 61.796 cents.

HEREFORD ISD
The Hereford Independent School District's tax base for this year is $448,888,420, up 1 percent from last year's $444,397,695.

Last year's tax rate of $1.3991 generated $6,026,915.25 in operating taxes.

The effective tax rate for this year is $1.3086, while the rollback rate is $1.3953.

HOSPITAL DISTRICT
This year's tax base for the Deaf Smith County Hospital District, which administers the Hereford Regional Medical Center, is $543,287,947, up 4.4 percent from last year's $519,349,482.

Last year's tax rate of 21.45 cents generated $1,304,604.11 in operating taxes.

The effective tax rate for this year is 20.448 cents, while the rollback rate is 21.42 cents.

WALCOTT ISD
This year's tax base for Walcott Independent School District is $30,558,153, down 5.6 percent from $32,436,864 last year.

Last year's tax rate of 97.57 cents generated $315,431.20 in operating taxes.

The effective tax rate for this year is $1.0305, while the rollback rate is $1.3846.

a lot of baggage. The office of the president's counsel is among the most sensitive positions in any White House lineup; doubly so given the succession of cases, from Whitewater to sexual misconduct, raised against Clinton.

That's the office in which Mrs. Tripp, the Bush holdover, served as a staff assistant in 1993 and early 1994, gaining a hearty endorsement from Clinton's then counsel, Bernard Nussbaum. "As you know, considering the extremely sensitive matters the White House counsel's office handles on a daily basis, I desperately need a substantive, savvy and experienced professional to play a leading role on my support staff," Nussbaum wrote at the time. "Linda Tripp meets this need."

Personally, Mrs. Tripp didn't care for the Clinton crowd. She told friends they were undignified, unkempt, lax in their work habits. She'd preferred the Bush style.

"And she saw a lot of things going on in that general counsel's office," said Lucianne Goldberg, the conservative agent and Tripp confidante who had advised her to tape the Lewinsky conversations, to prove her account and to protect herself.

And her job. When Nussbaum resigned and a new lawyer took over in 1994, she was replaced. But she stayed on the payroll, roleless at an empty desk, she complained later.

Then she was moved to a public affairs job in the Pentagon, with a hefty raise. She'd earned $47,920 a year at the White House in 1993. The new job, as a public affairs specialist, paid $69,427.

She still has the job, but works at home, where she was been writing a manual on how to run the annual civilian-military conference she had been managing. The salary at last report was $88,173.

Drought, prices plague producers Farmers need more than governmental lip-service

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

Bringing a crop to harvest means investing a lot of time, a lot of money and a whole lot of work. In drought years, many producers see the time and work as a wasted effort. The money is just a dead loss.

This year, farmers and producers are getting a double whammy from the low prices and the second severe drought in three years.

Of all the crops grown in the area, the dryland wheat probably showed best yields and best return.

"This year's wheat crop had an excellent start, primarily due to exceptional moisture received through the fall and winter months," said Dr. Brent Bean, an agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"By April, some producers were even discussing prospects for a record crop," Bean said. "Unfortunately after April 1, very little rainfall occurred over most of the area. This lack of rain was accompanied by a record-setting heat wave, leading many to believe wheat yields would be poor."

However, Bean said the deep soil moisture from the fall and winter precipitation made the yields better than anyone anticipated. The test weights were very good, even though the wheat kernel size was small because of the quick dry down from the high temperatures in May and June.

Corn and cotton growers were not so lucky. The same heat wave that allowed wheat to mature and fill early also drained the soil of the needed moisture to get cotton and corn crops up and growing.

David Hunt, general manager of the Hereford Farmers Co-op Gin, said between 3,000 and 4,000 acres of cotton in Deaf Smith County has already been plowed under.

Much of what is left is the dryland cotton, but Hunt expects yields to be way below average and very short stapled.

"This will be an early year crop," Hunt said. "Cotton blooms from the bottom and we're already seeing top blooms."

Most years, ginning begins sometime after Oct. 13. This year, Hunt said he expects to start ginning by Oct. 1.

Area corn producers are having mixed reactions to the current weather conditions.

Most agree rain would have been very helpful, but they also feel lucky there has been so little hail this season.

Jerry Don Glover, president of the Texas Corn Producers Board in Dimmitt, said many producers have already abandoned their corn fields and are concentrating their remaining water supplies on cotton.

"This year we'll be lucky to get 75 percent of our normal yield. Our farmers can't take this. They could probably withstand the second drought in three years if the prices were better. But I expect many farmers to go to more cotton next year," Glover said.

According to Glover, most corn producers have put in an additional 50 percent over costs previously.

Glover blames the low prices on too few exports and very little governmental support.

"We don't need another loan. And besides that, most producers can't qualify for the emergency loans that are available. The government needs to concentrate on building a profit back into agriculture and back into the smaller communities. We've had enough lip service, now we need some real action," he said.

"The long and short of it is we're going to lose some farmers and some farming families that don't need to be lost."

Matter of Fact
Rick Perry
Texas Agriculture Commissioner

It wasn't that long ago that buying organic foods meant shopping at a small specialty store where the selection was modest and quality inconsistent. But over the last eight years, organic foods have gone from "trendy" to "mainstream" with organic products now increasingly available in conventional supermarkets.

It's not hard to find examples of growth in this sector of agriculture. All you have to do is walk past the produce aisle, the frozen food section and the deli counter to see a new array of organic items now available to consumers. And according to the National Restaurant Association, almost 60 percent of all full-service restaurants in the country now serve organic items.

If you need further proof of this surge, consider that sales of organic items have more than doubled since 1990. And during this time of tremendous growth, it's been Texas' agricultural producers leading the charge both in our state and across the nation.

With more than 20,000 organic acres certified in our state, Texas is considered the national leader in the organics industry. Our growers have set the standard for quality with a continuous commitment to the consumer. I don't call that trendy. I call that triumph for agriculture.

JESSICA EVERS keeps her eye on the ball during a Wayland Baptist University volleyball match. Evers, a graduate of Hereford High School, will be a senior setter for the Lady Pioneers.

Evers builds not just her body, but confidence as well

By BOB VARMETTE
Sports Writer

What's your motivation? Jessica Evers gets that question a lot, usually in the form of, "Why are you so into body building?" And that's followed by the inevitable questions about whatever motivated her to start in the first place.

It was seeing a movie. The flick in question was "Terminator II." In the film, Linda Hamilton stars as the heroine out to save the world from computers run amok.

Those who saw "Terminator II" know it's a sequel -- the first movie, also with Hamilton in the cast, laid the foundation for the story of "Terminator II." Those who saw both movies also may have noticed a big difference between the first and second installments -- Hamilton's physique.

Evers certainly did. "Linda Hamilton, she had all these muscles, and that's what I wanted," Evers said. "She was cut, she looked good. I knew if she could do it, I could do it. It wasn't two days after I saw that movie -- my dad had a gym downtown -- that I went in there and started working out."

Evers' dad, Rip Evers, was definitely an influence upon his daughter. The former professional wrestler is now a trainer at the Hereford YMCA, so the younger Evers has always been around the gym.

But it was that movie that got her motivated. An athlete all her life, Evers played volleyball, basketball and tennis for Hereford High School and is currently getting ready for her senior year of volleyball at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview.

But athletics was not the reason she started, and it's not the reason she continues to work out two to two and one-half hours per day, six days per week.

In fact, Evers said she could have spent her entire athletic career at Hereford High School without so much as even walking into the weight room.

"It was never part of our athletic training," she said. "Coach (Brenda) Reeh never wanted us to lift, she never had us in there doing it. . . . In any sport I've ever been in, we never had to lift."

The Lady Pioneers do have a lifting program, and coach Brad

"It's self-esteem, it makes me feel good. I can walk down the street and I'm not self-conscious about the way I look. I can wear shorter shorts or I can wear sleeveless shirts."

-- Jessica Evers

Borden encourages Evers in her lifting regimen, but the program the rest of the Wayland volleyball team uses is nothing compared to Evers' program. She said the program the other players are on takes only about 20 minutes three days per week.

Evers devises her own programs, mostly by gleaned information from body building magazines; she said her father occasionally inputted his thoughts, but the final program was generally a product of hours of research.

And it hasn't been a one-shot deal.

The workout program she was on when she started is different than the one she's currently on to maintain. Plus, it isn't always easy to find the various aspects of a program that will develop or maintain the muscle groups she's looking to work on. There's a lot of trial and error in devising a workout program, Evers said.

"It's tough . . . and I've gone through it all. You just have to change it up," Evers said.

Body building is not just going to the weight room and tossing around the weights, even if it's for two or three hours per day, Evers said. It's a complete program, one that encompasses the lifting, but also dieting.

"You want to get lean," she said. "You've got to watch your fat intake, watch your carbohydrates and watch your protein intake."

What about those calories? "I don't worry about calories," Evers said. "You can burn calories with a workout."

Gordon captures Glen pole

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. -- Success is almost automatic for Jeff Gordon these days.

Coming off two straight Winston Cup victories, Gordon kept up an amazing string of qualifying successes Friday by taking the pole position for the Bud at the Glen.

Sunday's race will mark the 11th consecutive event in which Gordon will start in the first two rows, and the eighth time in that stretch he will start from the front row. All six of his poles this season have come during that period.

This one never was in doubt. On a warm overcast afternoon, Gordon, the ninth of 45 drivers to go, turned in a lap of 120.331 mph. The 2.45-mile, 11-turn track at Watkins Glen International is one of only two road courses on the Winston Cup schedule.

Gordon, who turned 27 last Tuesday, was surprised by his qualifying lap.

"That's by far the best lap I've ever had here," he said. "I knew it was a good lap, but it's hard to get the perfect lap on a road course. I was conservative going into the first turn. The car stuck great and I didn't make many mistakes, but I didn't know if I was aggressive enough."

Gordon again credited crew chief Ray Evernham and the rest of his Rainbow Warriors crew with giving him the right stuff at the right time.

"I told Ray what I thought we needed and he gave me exactly what we needed," Gordon said. "We worked on that transmission, like we did in California."

"We learned a lot about road racing in California," Gordon added, referring to the race in June at Sonoma, Calif., where he started from the pole and won.

NASCAR NOTEBOOK

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) -- Call him wrong-way Irwin.

During qualifying Friday for the Bud at the Glen, Kenny Irwin didn't seem to know which way to turn.

It all started when Kenny Wallace disappeared in a cloud of smoke in the final turns of the twisting 11-turn road course.

"I got on the brakes pretty good and had some smoke come up inside the car when I missed my last corner here for some reason, and I couldn't get down to the bottom," Wallace said. "When I came in I told the boys there's smoke all up in the car. I hope I didn't drop anything."

He did -- some oil -- and Irwin quickly grabbed everybody's attention when he went next.

Irwin was having a smooth run in a Ford Taurus when he came sliding through the oil and flew off course into the sand and gravel.

"When I was coming to the green, I saw some oil in turn 7 and I just couldn't get out of the way quick enough, so I just tried to run straight through the rocks," Irwin said.

However, with just a turn or two to go to the finish line, instead of just continuing on and going into the pits, Irwin reversed his field like a good running back and drove backward around the whole course and then went behind the wall for a cooling-off period.

Moments later, he came out and qualified 18th, and the car didn't seem any worse for the wear.

"It ended up where we didn't hurt anything, or it doesn't look like it," Irwin said. "Over the last couple weeks it feels like I gained 10 years qualifying. Obviously, we could have been a little better, but I think that's just going to come with time."

KODAK MOMENT: Charley Pressley is the new crew chief for Morgan-McClure Motorsports and the Kodak Chevrolet driven by Bobby Hamilton.

Pressley, 43, comes over from Larry Hedrick Motorsports, where he worked with such drivers as his brother, Robert, Harry Gant, Ricky Craven, and Steve Grissom.

"This team has a great history, and I'm looking forward to playing a part in making more history there," Pressley said. "Most of all, they really are hungry to win. Being hungry to win puts me right there in a group of guys where I have a lot in common."

Texas wins 6th in a row

ARLINGTON (AP) -- Texas closer John Wetteland faced Boston slugger Mo Vaughn with two outs in the ninth representing the tying run for the second straight game.

And the result was the same. Wetteland struck out Vaughn to register his 31st save, matching last season's total, as the Rangers won their sixth straight with a 4-3 victory over the Red Sox on Friday night.

A weary Wetteland, appearing in his fourth straight game, altered his pitching pattern from Thursday night when he went almost exclusively with his fastball.

"I wanted to pitch guys a little differently than last night," said Wetteland, who has three saves and a win over the four-game span. "Against Vaughn, I wanted to give a different look than last night, so I threw a lot more breaking balls. This would have been a difficult game to let slip away. The guys played inspired baseball tonight."

Vaughn noticed the change in Wetteland's pitch selection.

"He switched the whole pattern on me," Vaughn said. "He started me out with two hard breaking balls."

Rick Helling outdueled Pedro Martinez for his 15th victory as the Rangers tied their longest winning streak of the season.

Martinez (15-4) recovered from a three-run first to strike out a season-high 13. He allowed four runs, six hits and two walks in 6 2-3 innings.

"Anytime you face a guy like that, a Cy Young winner, you want to get off to a good start," said Will Clark, who had a two-run homer in the first for the Rangers. "From there he got into a groove and only got tougher. Three runs is a big cushion against a guy like Pedro."

Trailing 4-3 with runners on first and second and two outs, Martinez was taken out of the game in the seventh by manager Jimmy Williams after throwing 124 pitches. Martinez angrily shouted to himself as he walked to the dugout.

"I'm not big on coming out of a game," Martinez said. "It's my pride. I don't get mad at anybody."

Helling (15-6) allowed three runs and seven hits over six innings, leaving after Mike Benjamin's leadoff double in the seventh. Tim Crabbree got out of the seventh without allowing a run and the Rangers bullpen held the Red Sox scoreless on one hit over the final three innings.

Helling struck out three and walked two as he extended his career-high for victories by prevailing against the AL's ERA leader.

"When you face a guy like that, you know runs are going to be hard to come by," Helling said. "The key was getting three in the first against one of the best pitchers in baseball. From there I just tried to do my job."

Juan Gonzalez's major league-leading 119th RBI helped Texas take advantage of an error by first baseman Vaughn in the fifth, breaking a 3-all tie. Tom Goodwin led off with a single and Luis Alicea bunted. Vaughn fielded the ball and threw over the head of second

Bixler wins THSCA career award

From staff reports
HOUSTON -- Former Hereford High School golf coach Stacey Bixler received a career achievement plaque July 29 from the Texas High School Coaches Association. The award was made during the THSCA's annual coaching school.

Head golf coaches are eligible for the honor after accumulating 500 or more points determined on a system awarding points based on individual and team district, regional and state placings. Bixler accumulated 508 points in his 13 years coaching golf at Hereford High School.

Bixler enjoyed most of his coaching success on the girls side. The Lady Whitefaces twice won district titles, claimed one regional championship (1993) and placed third in the Class 4A state tournament in 1993.

Bixler also coached two Lady Whiteface golfers who placed in the Top 10 at the state meet -- Amy Conway and Paula Britten.

Bixler started his coaching career at Crockett Junior High School in Amarillo before moving to Hereford in 1976. Bixler went on to be an assistant football coach before taking over golf coaching duties in 1985.

Bixler recently resigned his position to move into administration. He is the new assistant principal at Hereford High School.

Heifers & Bulls tourney Sept. 12-13

It'll be the best of both worlds. Golfers will be able to show off their skills and get their competitive juices flowing, while terminally ill kids will be able to fulfill a wish.

The annual Heifers & Bulls Golf Tournament, which benefits the Hereford chapter of Make-a-Wish Foundation, will be Sept. 12-13 at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The tournament field will be the first 80 paid teams, and 40 teams already have signed up for the tourney, according to tournament director Bill Brown.

Entry fees are $160 per team, which includes the green fee, cart rental and the Saturday night meal.

Golfers will be able to get in a free practice round Sept. 11. Cart rental isn't included. Also, a putting contest will begin at 6:30 p.m. Sept. 11.

Prizes (in Hereford Bucks) will be $475 per team, first; $300, second; and $200, third.

The tournament meal will be Sept. 12 at the Knights of Columbus Hall. The tournament is co-sponsored by Stevens 5-Star car and truck sales and the Pitman Golf Association.

For more tournament information, call 363-7139.

Also, individuals and businesses interested in sponsoring a tee box for the Make-a-Wish Foundation should contact Bill Brown at 364-3515.

The sponsorships are $50 each and all of the proceeds will stay in Hereford.

Sponsors should make checks payable to "Make-a-Wish."

Mets hold off Rockies, 8-7

DENVER (AP) -- Mike Piazza hit his 12th homer in 22 games at Coors Field, driving in three runs as the New York Mets scored the first seven runs Friday night and beat the Colorado Rockies 8-7.

Piazza, 3-for-5, is 45-for-100 at Coors Field with 37 RBI.

Rick Reed (13-7) won despite allowing seven runs and 12 hits in six innings. Mel Rojas pitched two innings and John Franco finished for his first save since July 29, his 22nd in 28 chances.

Terry Shumpert walked leading off the ninth and Kirt Manwaring sacrificed, with Franco just throwing him out at first. Darryl Hamilton then took a called third strike and Neifi Perez lined out to shortstop.

Pedro Astacio (10-11), who had won his previous three starts, allowed eight runs and nine hits in 5 1/3 innings, but just three runs were earned. He struck out five to raise his season total to a team record 127, one more than Bruce Ruffin fanned in 1993.

John Olerud was 2-for-3 with a three-run double.

Evers

Evers' diet is also custom designed, and she is one of those people that actually studies the nutritional information about products, whether she purchases them in the store or in the restaurant.

So what's a typical meal for Evers? Chicken (no skin, of course), salads and fruits. She does allow herself the occasional indulgence, and admits to having a candy bar every now and then.

But the indulgences are infrequent and her regimented diet caused her to cast off Wayland's food plan long ago. Instead, she buys and prepares her own menu.

Evers admits that body building does very little to improve her performance in volleyball, although she firmly believes her workouts significantly decrease her chances for injury. But that's not the real reason she does it. So why?

"It's self-esteem, it makes me feel good," Evers said. "I can walk down the street and I'm not self-conscious about the way I look. I can wear shorter shorts or I can wear sleeveless shirts."

"That's just how I feel about myself. . . It's very important because that's how I feel about myself, and that's what body building is. Body building is how you look."

Her father agrees that body building can do a lot to lift self-esteem.

"I think it's great for (women)," Rip Evers said. "It'll change them completely -- physically, mentally, emotionally. They'll feel better about themselves. They won't be as tired, they'll have more energy. They can notice their energy increase in about four weeks. That confidence is what encourages them to come back."

The younger Evers said body building is not powerlifting, nor is it the competitions you see on late-night all-sports channels. She said those are extremes, often involving the use of steroids by some women.

"It's a no-no in our house, and at the Y," said Rip Evers. "I tell everyone working out, and all these young guys that ask about steroids, 'No steroids come into this gym.' It's killing people. . . It can bother your kidneys, (lead to) heart failure. It can bother your liver."

And the health hazards aside, steroids are something she wants no part of, she said, because she has no desire to look like a man. But even so, people do notice the difference.

"I get all kinds," Evers said. "I get people complimenting me, 'You look great, I wish I had the drive to do what you do.' Or I get, 'Why do you spend so much time doing this? I'm sure there's other things you could do.' People tell me I have no social life because I'm working out. Some (women) tell me they don't want to look like that because it's just not feminine."

Evers said it doesn't matter what others may have to say about body building, but she knows what her critics are getting at. And she also admits it wouldn't take that much different of a workout program to develop the bulging muscles. And then there's the steroids.

"I could," she said. "If I was on steroids, I'd look like a man. But I'm in shape, I take care of myself. I don't think I look masculine."

But her look does intimidate some people, Evers said.

"That's probably why I don't have a boyfriend," she laughed. "I've heard the word intimidation. I've heard it from the mouths of males."

"I've heard that I intimidate people, but I'm a nice person. They're too intimidated to approach me and talk to me. Just because I work out doesn't mean I'm going to body slam you later."

JARRETT'S JOLT: Dale Jarrett, third in the Winston Cup point standings, qualified 10th for Sunday's race, but could have been faster if not for a jolt coming out of the final turn.

"I made a little bit of an error," said Jarrett, who ran off onto the grass. "I just probably spooked myself a little bit. There's an oil strip on the outside going into the last corner, and I just didn't get out where I needed to be."

Jarrett said he was over the disappointment of a week ago, when he ran out of gas while leading the Brickyard 400 midway through the race and lost any chance of winning.

"Everybody is OK," he said. "Everything is fine. Hopefully, this will only strengthen our team and that's what we have to work at, to make sure it does that."

CRUISIN' GORDON: Chasing Jeff Gordon may have gotten even harder.

Gordon, leading Mark Martin by 72 points in the chase for the Winston Cup title, celebrated his 27th birthday on Tuesday. But instead of doing countless promotions during the week as usual, wife Brooke had a better idea. They both took off to Bermuda for a much-needed break from the NASCAR grind.

"It was the most relaxing week I've ever had," said Gordon, who won the Brickyard 400 last week and captured his sixth pole of the year on Friday at Watkins Glen.

"Regardless of whether I won or not, we were going on vacation."

IT'S THE PITS: During qualifying Friday for the Bud at the Glen, Bill Elliott looked like he was entered in the Baja 1,000 across the desert. Driving hard entering the chicane at the end of the back straightaway, Elliott ran off the track, created a cloud of dust, then drove through the grass, ending his day. "I just got in a little too hard and hit that inside curb," Elliott said. "When it did, it just launched me straight across. I got through down here better than I had been and just drove in there a little harder. This is the way my year has been going, ain't nothing gone right to this point. . . Bobby Labonte knows the feeling. He was a distant 34th in qualifying and would have to try again on Saturday, but there was good reason for his dismal showing. Kyle Petty blew an engine in warmup and Labonte crashed his Pontiac on the oil and had to use a backup car for qualifying.

Gordon

Gordon is the defending champion at Watkins Glen.

"This race last year did a lot for me confidence-wise," he said. "I didn't know if I was capable of winning on a road course until I won here. . . I like the road courses a lot. I come here and have fun."

Ron Fellows, a road racing specialist from Canada, also enjoyed himself Friday.

Fellows, filling in this weekend for Buz McCall's regular driver, Hut Stricklin, was a surprising second at 120,002 mph, just two-tenths of a second behind Gordon.

"One of the reasons I wanted to come to this team is that I know (crew chief) Sammy Johns and I know the shock guy," Fellows said. "We put our heads together and came up with a plan and it worked pretty good."

Fellows has raced at The Glen in both the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series and the Busch Grand National stock car series.

"This is the toughest," he said.

Texas

baseball Benjamin, putting runners at second and third. Gonzalez's sacrifice fly drove in Goodwin with an unearned run.

The Rangers capitalized on a couple of rare mistake pitches by Martinez in the first. Rusty Greer hit a run-scoring double and after Gonzalez struck out, Clark hit his 16th homer, a two-run shot over the Rangers bullpen in right field.

Boston tied it with a three-run fourth, highlighted by RBI singles from Darren Bragg and Damon Buford and Scott Hattberg's sacrifice fly.

"It's a combination between Busch and the truck. It's tremendous horsepower and doesn't turn quite as well as the Busch car. With all the power, it doesn't seem like it's got as much downforce as the truck."

"But, man, it's fun. . . A top 10 would be a great race on Sunday."

Ricky Rudd was third at 119,914 mph, followed by Jeff Burton at 119,910. Boris Said, another road racer filling in for injured Jimmy Spencer, was at 119,780, with Rusty Wallace at 119,770.

Mark Martin, coming off three consecutive second-place finishes and trailing Gordon in the Winston Cup standings by 72 points, was seventh at 119,704.

"Not quite good enough for the front row, but it got us a good starting spot," the three-time Watkins Glen winner said. "We're going to be tough on Sunday."

Third-place Dale Jarrett, 193 points behind Gordon, was 10th at 119,530.

O'Meara sets sights on 3rd major of year at PGA

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer
REDMOND, Wash. -- Mark O'Meara never thought he would hear his name mentioned in the same sentence with Ben Hogan, nor does he find it appropriate even now.

Hogan was the consummate perfectionist who practiced alone and was rarely satisfied, a survivor who emerged as the most feared competitor of his time -- four-time U.S. Open champion, winner of nine major championships.

In 1953, Hogan set a standard that no one has been able to meet by winning three major championships in one year.

Since then, six players in nine seasons have come to the PGA Championship with a chance to equal him. The closest anyone came was Tom Watson in 1977, when he finished four strokes back in a tie for sixth.

The next candidate is an unlikely one.

O'Meara is a career grinder who played in 56 majors as a pro before finally winning at the Masters. At age 41, he is gray around the edges and one of the most congenial players around, a big brother to Tiger Woods.

He is playing the best golf of his life, not because he has mastered the game, but because he refuses to let it master him.

"Because I put too much pressure on myself, I didn't perform as well," O'Meara said. "I backed off and said, 'Listen, this is an important tournament, but let's keep everything in check. It's not the end of the world.' When I did that, I took a little pressure off myself and started to perform better."

He comes to Sahalee Country Club having won the Masters and the British Open, not wanting his incredible season to end, but not believing he is any different than before.

"I don't classify myself as a great player," O'Meara said. "Great players are Jack Nicklaus, Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan ... you can go on down the list. Players who have won a lot of major championships, have been incredible ambassadors to the game."

"I consider myself a consistent player, a player that tries to do the best I can at all times," he said. "Yet I try to treat my fellow competitors with the utmost respect. Maybe because of that, good things happen."

Good things?

By winning the British Open, O'Meara became the oldest player to win two majors in one year. Since 1980, only four others have won two majors in a season -- Nick Price in 1994, Nick Faldo in 1990, Tom Watson in 1982 and Jack Nicklaus in 1980.

All of them were regarded the best in the world. And yet, when O'Meara arrived at The Olympic Club for the U.S. Open, no one broached the subject of a grand slam, which was fine with him.

"I don't live for the limelight," he said.

Don't be deceived. O'Meara may be kind, but he is a killer inside the ropes. He routinely takes cash from Woods in casual rounds, despite losing about 40 yards to him off the tee.

Put him near the lead of a tournament, and he's usually there at the end.

"Winning one major is an honor," O'Meara said. "Winning two is a great thrill. And now, to have the opportunity to win a third, it means a lot. I'm just hoping to give myself a chance to win on Sunday."

That in itself would be an accomplishment.

The PGA Championship may be the less heralded of the four majors, but it always has the strongest field.

Going into the week, 74 of the top 75 players in the world rankings, and 92 of the top 100, are entered. The exception is Greg Norman, out until November with a shoulder injury.

O'Meara isn't quite sure what to expect from Sahalee, a 29-year-old course carved from a forest of Douglas fir trees outside Seattle.

Sahalee measures 6,906 yards and plays as a par 70 -- two par 5s have been converted to par 4s, including the 475-yard closing hole. The rough will be thick and punishing, as usual, but the real trouble lies among the 100-foot trees that line just about every fairway.

Paul Runyan, a two-time PGA champion and the first head pro at Sahalee, once described each hole as "playing down a cathedral aisle."

It is the first time the PGA has been played in the state of Washington since Bob Hamilton's stunning 1-up victory over Byron Nelson in 1944 at Marito Golf and Country Club in Spokane, the only major championship played that year because of the war.

Don't be surprised if the player holding the Wanamaker Trophy on Sunday has never won a major championship before -- nine of the past 10 champions won their first major at the PGA.

That could bode well for players like David Duval, a five-time winner on tour since October who has played well in all the majors this year; or for Jim Furyk, whose straight driving and smooth putting are a perfect combination for Sahalee.

And a year after 20-something stars like Woods, Ernie Els and Justin Leonard won three of the four majors, they haven't made a peep this year.

Experience has fought back in 1998, led by O'Meara and U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen, a nine-year veteran. Nick Price, 41, won two weeks ago in Memphis and will try to join Gene Sarazen and Sam Snead as three-time winners of the PGA.

Going into the Buick Open in Michigan, the last six winners of PGA Tour events have been at least 37. The last player in his 20s to win was Stuart Appleby at the Kemper Open the first weekend in June.

For sentimental favorites, look no further than Fred Couples, who learned the game on Seattle's public courses and whose father died of leukemia in November.

"I'm going to Seattle, which is important to me," Couples said at the British Open. "I hope to be ready there."

The mystery has been Tom Watson, who lacks only the PGA Championship to become the fifth player to win the career grand slam. At 48, Watson is hitting the ball well and has overcome the putting problems that haunted him for a decade. He won at Colonial, but has missed the cut in all three of the majors this year, four in a row dating to last year's PGA.

And don't count out Woods, who will be playing in only his second PGA. Woods' birdie-birdie finish at Royal Birkdale was almost enough to get him into the playoff with O'Meara and Brian Watts, the first time he's been in contention at a major since winning the 1997 Masters.

Reader supports Adrian school

Dear Editor:

In a community meeting Sunday, Aug. 2, at the Adrian School auditorium, Morris Blankenship (president of the school board) said, "The good news is our school is not closed today; it will not be closed next year or the year after." He stood in front of a crowd of about 100 parents and friends throughout the area.

Although many parents asked why Adrian is not advertising like Wildorado, Blankenship did not answer directly, rather he stated he was not comfortable with that, saying, "The philosophy works against me a little. ... I'd hate other districts to come in here and take our children." The fact remains Adrian needs transfers, just as many schools their size do. All of these schools realize transfers are a valuable asset. Although Blankenship said he saw transfers as a temporary solution, he said, "What we need is more students moving to Adrian, and there has to be a reason for them to move here. If our school closes or even the high school closes, why would anyone want to move here?"

It seemed taxes were a main objective, asking the taxpayers if they would vote for an increase of 8 percent from the current rate of $1.13, should the number of students stay below a 90 average daily attendance rate. Also adding that if we did consolidate, the taxes would go up to $1.37. Referring to the recent discussions of consolidation with Vega ISD and Wildorado ISD, he (Blankenship) said they had several meetings, but he assured the community that Adrian is not planning on consolidating and to please stop any false rumors, because they are hurting our school. He said if it should ever get to that point, there will be a timely process of voting it into existence.

Certainly, the number of students has dropped the last few years. The question at hand is what can be done to bring some of our approximately 15 students transferring out of our district back, as well as bring others in, either through transfers or by moving to Adrian. The number of students was not confirmed, but Pat Blankenship (superintendent/principal) said there were approximately 80-plus, which is an increase from last year. The funding from the state is based on the ADAR, which in Adrian ISD needs to be at 90 students or above to be paid as a sparse district. Morris Blankenship explained the funding based on the sparse funding developed by the state to help small schools, like Adrian. Saying the state will pay for 130 students if we are above the 90 ADAR of that year or the year prior, adding why it is crucial that we have 90-plus students. Although we can continue without, we will need to raise taxes to help the decrease in funding. The School Board has a responsibility to Adrian taxpayers to keep the school in the best interest of our community. Let them know your thoughts. Also, you can come to the next School Board meeting ... Aug. 10 at 8 p.m.

Letters to the Editor

There was a new family at the meeting, Kathy Hogrebe and her husband, both of the interstate trucking industry, are moving to Adrian from Santa Fe, N.M. She said they decided to make Adrian the permanent base because of the school and peaceful town atmosphere. There are two other families moving to Adrian for these benefits as well. Blankenship said there are several houses that could be for sale or rent, urging any resident with an empty house to put it up for rent if possible, adding the school housing will be offered if needed to bring in more students. He also said, "What would your property be worth if the school closed?" We need to do more to keep our town here. Bringing a business to town was also suggested. That would sure help to keep Adrian on the map.

There are more things I like about Adrian and the school than dislike. I know the benefits of large (cities) as we moved here from Phoenix, Ariz. Yes, they have band, maybe football, but let's face it -- those extracurricular programs should not get in our way of a better foundation for our kids. Besides, who knows if Adrian had the students to support other programs, they probably would increase their programs. I am a strong advocate for this school, having home schooled my children two years prior to moving here. I love the small size, student/teacher ratio, the safety of seeing how the school maintains authority in not letting the students get out of control as I saw in Phoenix (It seemed to me they spent too much time just trying to get in control of the class and have some order). Also, the community involvement is a great benefit.

Cynthia Reid,
Adrian

Dear Editor:

We wish to give a word of appreciation and encouragement to the Hereford Ministerial group who were responsible for the community-wide service this past Sunday evening in Dameron Park.

Our forefathers would have been blessed as we were. Thank you for the wonderful singing by individuals and groups. Brother Randy Bird's message made us aware, again, how far we can go with God's leading. Together in Christ, our community will accomplish much.

Bush helps ranchers

AUSTIN (AP) - In an effort to make it easier for Texans to feed their livestock in the face of the drought, Gov. George W. Bush has ordered the temporary suspension of a state law requiring a commercial license for people hauling hay beyond 150 miles of their homes.

The governor's executive order waives the Texas Transportation Code requirement for 90 days, starting Aug. 5. He acted under authority of the Texas Disaster Act, which allows the governor to suspend any regulatory statute that hinders response to a disaster.

The depletion of pasture forage and hay supplies due to the drought has made it necessary for many farmers and ranchers to buy hay from suppliers outside of their immediate areas.

"The drought has been devastating for many Texas farmers and ranchers. I hope this action will help farmers and ranchers weather this crisis and get feed to their livestock," Bush said.

Tri-State Fair hitting road in the region

AMARILLO - The Tri-State Fair is taking to the road. The 75th Tri-State Fair bus tour will make five stops around the Panhandle Tuesday, reviving an old tradition as part of an outreach program with Amarillo and its sister communities of the Panhandle.

The bus tour will include stops in Hereford, Dimmitt, Tulia, Silverton and Clarendon.

The Hereford stop will be 9-10 a.m. at the Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

The tour is intended to boost interest in the fair, as well as in Panhandle agricultural products. There will be a roundtable discussion with community leaders at each stop, enabling them to become acquainted with the fair and learn about the area's largest fair, as well as share ideas of concern and mutual benefit.

Entertainment will be provided at each stop by the Big Texan Opry Singers and country singer Ed Montana. Also, advance tickets will be available for fair entertainment. Tickets will be available for the Steve Wariner concert, $9.80 each; Wrestle Fest II professional wrestling, $50, $20, $15 and $10; Kevin Sharp concert, $5; and Professional Rodeo, $12 and $5. All tickets, when purchased in advance, include the price of the fair's gate admission.

Junior Historians explore old Route 66

Today's youth learn firsthand how things were in 'times gone by'

Of the 178 miles of old Route 66 across Texas, approximately 150 miles remain for exploration and enjoyment. And explore and enjoy were what 10 Junior Historians and their sponsors did recently.

The group began their journey by traveling to Glenrio on the Texas-New Mexico border, where most of the original buildings are still intact.

Stopping at the Adrian Cafe for homemade pie and viewing antiques; Landergerin, the mid-point of Route 66; on to Vega, the "Heart of Route 66," to view the historic courthouse square and to Wildorado where lunch was enjoyed at Jesse's Cafe prepared the group for the two-day journey.

The famous Cadillac Ranch west of Amarillo was the last stop before traveling through Amarillo on the old route and then down some of the best thumpy-thump road cracks that Texas has to offer on the way to Conway. Groom with its Golden Spread Cafe, Leaning Water Tower and the world's second-largest cross was the next stop.

From Groom to Jericho, which was the beginning of the Jericho Gap Mud segment of Route 66, and then to Alanreed gave the "now experienced" explorers the opportunity to see the oldest Baptist Church and the oldest cemetery on the route in Texas, the 66 Super Station and the remains of the reptile ranch.

After a slow drive through McLean to view the downtown murals and the first Phillips 66 service station built in Texas, the route led to Lela, an observation of examples of the once-famous rattlesnake signs, and then to Shamrock with a tour of the era section of town that ended at the U-Drop-Inn, which is the most famous building left along old Route 66.

After entering Oklahoma, the first stop was in Sayre where a small portion of the movie "The Grapes of Wrath" was filmed. After spending the night in Elk City, the historians toured the Old Town Museum and the very-recently-opened, (June 6, 1998),

National Route 66 Museum.

As the group "headed back" west, they toured Erick, Oklahoma. The stretch of Route 66 from Sayre to Erick has been named Roger Miller Memorial Highway and through Erick it becomes Roger Miller Boulevard. The late country music legend, "Mr. King of the Road," was a native of Erick and had often traveled the Mother Road, Route 66.

Sheb Wooley Avenue crosses the boulevard in the center of town. Wooley, another native son, is remembered for his role in the TV series, "Rawhide" and for writing and performing "The Purple People Eater." At this crossroads, all four corner buildings face the intersection -- a configuration seen nowhere else along the Oklahoma route.

Texola, the next stop, and evidently never a very wide spot in the road, has had three different names -- Texokla, Texola and Texoma. Pictures of several historians inside the Old Territorial Jail, built in 1910, and at other abandoned buildings proved to be interesting highlights of this brief stop.

Crossing back into Texas with a stop at the Devil's Rope Museum in McLean brought an added attraction of the viewing of a Mother Road video at the museum.

Heading west again, a brief stop was made at the original Route 66 camping place at Lake McLellan where, by careful observation, traces of the old road may be seen in right-of-way cuts in the area.

As the group of historians traveled the old road across the Panhandle and into Oklahoma, they had the opportunity to remember those who had traveled well before them, many in broken down vehicles, always hoping for a better life somewhere down the road. They, too, felt the hot Texas wind and observed the vastness of the area. As they listened to old stories of the road at the small town shops and at the museums, they learned firsthand some of the history of the area and of "times gone by."

Junior Historians who traveled the Mother Road, Route 66, were Josh Rowe, Melissa Warren, Jacob Murray, Ty Grimsley, Justin Kerr, Glen Castro, Amber Eckert, Bethany Fitzgerald, Clay McNeely, and Kyle Grimsley. Sponsors were Diedra Drake and Carolyn Waters.

HJH Roundup

"The art of teaching consists of helping students feel that although you may stand in front of them, you're really behind them."

Coming soon -- actually very soon! The new school year! On Tuesday, all seventh grade students are to be at HJH for orientations and registration. On Thursday, all eighth graders will report to register. Each of these meetings this week begin at 7 p.m. Parents should attend these activities with the students.

If students and parents are unable to attend these scheduled meetings, they may receive information at the HJH office on Friday. All new students to HISD must register in the office. Any student who owes a fine from last year should pay this before classes begin.

HJH welcomes 13 new teachers this school year. Included in this group are: Cindy Bailey, Math 8; Marietta Mugford, History 7; Berlinda Monsebaes, ESL; B.J. Brooks, Band; Claudia Ramirez, P.E., Athletics and Spanish; Teresa Allen, Reading; Michelle Beltran, Speech/Theater; Connie Fuller, English 7; Dawn Mason, Reading 7; Lisa Larremore, English 8; Travis Schulte, Health, Athletics; Jane Gulley, Choir and Susan Daniel, Math 7.

Junior Historians and their sponsors wish to thank all who have purchased cookbooks and T-Shirts during the Hereford Birthday celebration. We have had excellent response and will use the proceeds to further our history pursuits and for community projects.

To the person or persons who "borrowed" the Junior Historians' project board, we really planned to use it during Jubilee. Even though that time has passed, we really do expect this to be returned as we need it for future projects and do have quite a bit invested in it.

Junior Historians will be inviting students to attend an organization meeting very soon. We plan to have a high school chapter this year and high school students will be notified very soon about a meeting, also.

Those who plan to be in athletics this year should have had a physical before classes begin. This is learning responsibility when you do things as instructed. Do not plan to miss school for these physicals!!

"If the teacher is not respected and the students not cared for, confusion will arise, however clever one is." -- Lao-Tse

— YOUR EYES —

When Contacts Aren't Enough

Most contact lens wearers choose them because they don't want to wear glasses. And contacts are as effective as glasses -- often more so -- to improve visual acuity. But there's one situation where glasses are still vital: out in the sun. Tinted contacts may enhance eye color, but they don't screen out the sun's rays.

Years ago, folks wore sunglasses for comfort -- and that's still an issue for many contact lens wearers who are extra-sensitive to glare. Today we've also learned that the sun's ultraviolet and infrared rays pose real danger to the eyes as well as the skin. That's why we advise wearers of contacts to add the protection of sunglasses -- either prescription lenses to be worn without contacts (a good choice when swimming at the beach, for instance) or quality plano lenses to wear over contacts.

Your optometrist is your guide to quality sunglasses rated for the protection your eyes need.

The extra long chapel train had a wide illusion panel covered in heavily beaded lace medallions.

The bride's veil, which was her mother's, was a Juliette cap of Alencon lace accented with seed pearls. She wore pearl earrings which were also her mother's.

Bridal attendants hung green cowl back gowns with long, full skirts with a velvet tank-style bodice. The back and skirt were in georgette. They carried bouquets of assorted white flowers and ivy.

The couple was honored with a reception at the Hereford Country Club.

Assisting with the reception were Kinann Campbell, Allison Farr, Karon Harder, Amanda Wood and Abigail Adams.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Had I not read the report in the paper with my own eyes, I wouldn't have believed it, but there it was. The news story said an 18-year-old senior in Dorset, Vt., while giving the commencement address at her high school graduation, nonchalantly removed her cap and gown and proceeded to continue with her remarks while totally naked.

The girl explained this extraordinary gesture by saying she wanted to express herself as a confident individual "for it is only then, when I am open and free, that truth and wisdom will reveal themselves."

Ann, I am all for freedom of expression, which is guaranteed by the First Amendment, but to get naked in front of the whole graduating class? Isn't that going a bit too far? Am I a prude? Is this sort of exhibitionism to be accepted in the name of freedom of speech?

I am a 33-year-old mother of three children, and I'd like to know if I need to rethink my views. -- New Hampshire

Dear New Hampshire: I, too, am all for freedom of expression, but there is another issue to be considered -- indecent exposure, which is against the law.

One thing is certain, however. No one in that graduation class will ever forget the commencement address.

Dear Ann Landers: While reading the Sunday paper, my husband said to me, "I feel strange," as he moved his hand across the middle of his chest. I went immediately to the kitchen, got an aspirin, gave it to him and then called 911.

An ambulance arrived in about eight minutes. My husband was checked briefly and loaded into the ambulance for the 21-mile ride to the hospital. Halfway there, he went into cardiac arrest. His cardiologist said he had no permanent heart damage, thanks to the aspirin and my quick-thinking phone call for emergency care.

Nearly every nurse asked me, "How did you know to give him an aspirin?" I could only say, "I had read somewhere to take an aspirin and call 911." They agreed that my quick action had saved my husband's life. They also said that writing to you would probably get this vital information to the greatest number of people in the shortest period of time. Please tell your readers about this. -- M.H. in Centralia, Mo.

Dear Centralia: That aspirin may well have saved your husband's life, and writing to me is sure to save the lives of others. For those who want to know why this small tablet performs such a miracle, it is because aspirin is a blood thinner. It dissolves clots. No other headache medication will do this. It must be aspirin. Every home should have a bottle in the medicine chest at all times.

Dear Ann Landers: Please repeat that classic about "Lady Godiva." I never laughed so hard in all my life. A whole new generation hasn't seen it, and it's about time they did. -- Also from Ohio

Dear Ohio: Here it is -- again:

An Ohio housewife was doing her laundry in the basement and impulsively decided to take off her soiled housedress and throw it into the machine. Her hair had just been set in rollers and the pipes overhead were dripping. She spotted her son's football helmet in the corner and put it on her head.

There she stood, stark naked (except for the football helmet), when she heard a cough. The woman turned around and found herself staring into the eyes of the meter reader from the gas and electric company. As he headed for the door, his only comment was "I hope your team wins, lady."

Do you have questions about sex but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. The formal length, full skirt featured scalloped edges bordered with beaded lace.

Her veil of illusion was attached to a wide headband covered with miniature roses and baby's breath.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white silk sweetheart roses and baby's breath accented with glitter, pearls, net and satin ribbon.

The bride wore jewelry given to her by her parents on her 15th birthday.

Bridal attendants wore dresses with a white brocade top and hunter green princess-style skirt. They carried round bouquets of mauve and hunter green flowers with hunter green satin pearl ribbons.

Flower girls' dresses were of white satin with lace and pearls.

The couple was honored with a reception in San Jose Community Center.

Those assisting with the reception were Patsy Gonzales, Stella Valdez, Lupe Castillo, Becky Valdez, Margaret Gomez and the Guadalupeans.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: So many weddings are planned for the spring and summer, and I'd like to share what my mom did for me.

My wedding bouquet had ivy in it. While my husband and I were on our honeymoon, my mom rooted a few stems in a glass of water. She and I both have ivy plants as a reminder of my wedding. I also have one rooting to give to my mother-in-law. — Brenda J., Billings, Mont.

That is a wonderful living reminder. The ivy can go on and on for years, even can be passed down to your children. — Heloise

BABY TOWELETTES

Dear Heloise: After I learned that models use baby towelettes for emergency removal of makeup, I purchased a large economical supply of them and cut them in half. I'm still trying to see how many uses I can find for these great little inexpensive moist cloths. One is perfect for removing ink from my fingers after reading the morning paper.

A supply of them in a 3-by-5 zip-top bag goes in my purse for use in restrooms that have only hot air to dry hands. — Frances Munson, Fayetteville, Ark.

PET PAL

Dear Heloise: B.B., my little 10-pound cockapoo, was a lively little squirt and absolutely loved the beach. One day she was playing and running after sea gulls when she ran into the ocean and disappeared under the waves. I frantically yelled for her and other people came over to see what was happening.

After what seemed like an eternity, a little white head appeared as she bodysurfed on top of a big wave. She had her front legs out just as if she had bodysurfed her whole life. After resting briefly and shaking off the water, back in she went. She was a typical blond California surfer. It was so adorable that people actually videotaped her as she ran in and out.

She was 18 years old when she passed away and I miss her dearly. I'll never forget those great surfing days. — Jane Mulrenan, San Antonio, Texas

What an image! Are there any other surfing, skiing or swimming pets out there? We would love to hear from you. — Heloise

PLASTIC GLOVES

Dear Heloise: When my daughter was home, she was the one selected to make potato salad for a crowd of about 100 people. She has very long fingernails and, therefore, was puncturing the tips of her rubber or plastic gloves. I told her to put a small cotton ball in the tip of each finger of her gloves. The cotton balls prevented her nails from going through the tips. One pair was all she needed to complete the job. — Florence Riener, Stewart, Minn.

SOFTENING BUTTER

Dear Heloise: Sometimes I decide to make cookies at the last minute. For those times when the recipe calls for softened butter or margarine, I have a great way to do this quickly.

While the mixer is stirring the cold butter, I simply plug in my hair dryer and blow the warm air toward the butter as it turns. It softens to just the right consistency instead of liquefying as it does in the microwave. — Pam Ogburn, Peoria, Ill.

The Successful Family

By MATILDA J. BOOZER
DAPA, LPC, NCC

Control is the use of your personal power to manage, dictate, and steer your own behavior -- or another person's behavior and needs -- for self gain.

Controlling another person's behavior is necessary when that person is unable to meet his/her own basic needs. Infants, elderly, disabled, mentally ill, and bedridden patients all require help in meeting their basic needs. In these instances, controlling a major part of a person's life is positive and appropriate.

Controlling another person's life when that person has the capability of managing his/her own behavior or meeting his/her own needs is an inappropriate use of control.

Not allowing children to take responsibility for their own behavior is using control in a negative way. Using control in a negative way leads to negative feelings. These negative feelings will only lead to rebellion, inadequate feelings of self, and extreme forms of dependency.

REWARDS are the single most powerful means of helping children learn to behave appropriately. Rewards help children and teens develop a positive self-esteem and a positive self-concept by communicating who they are and what they do are important. Just as you will do more for a boss or customer who rewards you so will your children do more for a reward than they will avoid doing out of fear of punishment.

Rewards are very powerful in motivating all of us to success. When we feel good about ourselves we use appropriate behavior, have more energy, and enjoy life to the fullest.

*Praise is the single most powerful reward a child, or anyone, can receive. Use praise for just being (I love you; you're a great daughter, husband, teen, parent, boss) and praise for doing (what a great job washing the car, good effort for buttoning your shirt) two to three times each day. Don't forget -- praise yourself each day.

*Nurturing touch: There are three types of touch: hurting, scary, and nurturing. Each of us has a personal touch history which includes all three types of touch. Gentle hugs, back rubs, soft strokes on a child's back with gentle rocking are all nice, positive types of nurturing touches. Everyone wants recognition. Nurturing touch is a nice way to let children know you value them. Use nurturing touch with praise. Together they make a powerful combination.

*Privileges serve as excellent rewards for us all. A privilege can be extra TV time, getting to stay up past curfew, getting a few extra stories read at night, or other behaviors your children enjoy. They should never include basic needs the child has such as stimulation, time with parents, security, love or trust.

*Objects in addition to praise and touch are some ways parents like to reward. Objects can include almost anything that ranges from stickers to assorted toys. Find out what your child likes and occasionally reward him or her with an object.

There is no such thing as recognizing too much good in children. Encourage children to behave. What you pay attention to is what you get more of.

Contact Tilly Boozer for information on programs available for your family success. 364-4357.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Getting to the heart of the matter

If you study business writings, you'll learn that every author has a few pet strategies for business success. Some may focus on technology, branding or positioning. Others may champion quality control, financial management or personnel skills.

If you record all the great writers' "must-do" tips, the list would be a mile long. Most items on the list would qualify as good advice and would help you succeed in business.

I have a "must-do" for that list. I believe satisfying customers should be at the top. You see, satisfied customers are the heart of the matter.

The wrong focus

The line was long, and the customers were growing restless.

One customer asked if there had been a death behind the counter. Another wondered how you could tell - no one was moving. I heard one harried worker tell another to hang on because the owner was on her way.

Sure enough, the owner appeared in moments. She immediately surveyed the lines and went to an order station. I expected the owner to open the register and get things moving. Instead, she ran the register totals to see what volume of business the store had done for the day. After repeating the action on the drive-through register, she disappeared into her office.

A few moments later, she came out of the office and began picking up trash and restocking inventory. I wanted to yell, "Please wait on customers, we're all tired of waiting."

For this small-business owner, other elements were more important than caring for customers. Customers came after procedures. Customers came after seeing what kind of day the store was having. Customers weren't the heart of the matter, they were just an unwanted-by-product of doing business. The business wouldn't exist if the competition was stronger.

Getting to the heart

There are many ways to keep your customers satisfied. Here are a few quick tips to help you get to the heart of the matter.

• Focus. From the top down the emphasis of every organization must be to serve the customer. When the owner has other priorities, employees aren't at fault when the system breaks down.

• Training. Personnel experts cite stress as a major cause of employee turnover. One major cause of stress is the lack of a through training program. Businesses are so desperate for warm bodies to go to work that they just stick the newly hired folks into a slot and hope they can help.

• Make one sale at a time. It may sound trite, but you really can't do two things at one time. Therefore, put all of your energy into serving one customer and serving that customer well.

• Ignore distractions. Recently, while traveling, I stopped at a well-known ice cream chain to enjoy one of the chain's cool treats. There were only two others in line so I assumed it would be a brief wait. That's when I noticed two store folks were talking which left only one working.

I waited. Finally, the manager noticed I was watching his visit and approached the counter to take my order. Just then the phone rang. The manager excused himself and hurried to the phone. He turned his back to me and began a lengthy conversation. I waited a full minute then left. As I backed out, the manager came to the window and gestured to me that I was still number one in his book.

• You're only as good as your last customer moment. You can never relax. Customers are like elephants; their memories are good. Every customer service moment must be a positive one, because customers really are the heart of the matter.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Can you believe it? Hereford is 100 years old? Are we ready for the next 100 years? Come by the library and view the contents of the time capsule. I know many of you were unable to see all the items taken from the capsule so come into the library and see them on display.

While you are in the library take a good look around and find a good book to read.

Out of Nowhere by Doris Mortman promises to be a heart-pounding thriller. When Ricki Baird was only 9 years old, her mother, a financial officer for an international bank, helped destroy a major drug money laundering operation.

From that day on Ricki Baird no longer existed. Mother and daughter were taken from their home and moved to the unknown in the Witness Security Program. The grown up Amanda Maxwell returns to that Miami home years later.

Working as a forensic photographer for the NYPD Amanda knows there is only one other person who knows the truth about her identity, her dad. When Lionel Baird is found dead, Amanda suspects the suicide was staged. Then a newspaper reporter begins a series of stories on Wall Street money laundering, and sets the spotlight on the old Baird case.

Amanda realizes her anonymity and her life are in danger. Setting a cunning complex trap Amanda may be able to catch the killer before the killer can find her.

In Elmer Kelton's new book The Smiling Country cowboy Hewey Calloway returns. Hewey was first introduced in "The Good Old Boys", but would not leave the free cowboy life for Spring Renfro.

Now it is 1910. Fences, trucks and automobiles have put an end to the free-wheeling cowboy life. Hewey works for the J Bar outfit and fights to remain devoid of unwanted responsibility. He is wary of having to look after his nephew who embraces the cowboys' life.

Then everything changes when Hewey is badly injured while trying to break a horse. While recovering from the injuries, Hewey has time to reflect back on his life that promises a future of emptiness, loneliness and regret. Now is the time for Hewey to decide how to change that future.

John Jakes's American Dream continues the saga of the Crown family of Chicago that was introduced in Homeland. Twenty six-year-old Fritz Crown yearns to be a successful actress.

To follow her theatrical dream Fritz will have to defy her father and move to the unfamiliar streets of Manhattan. As time passes Fritz must then cross the continent to a boomtown called Hollywood.

There she joins P.W. Griffin, Mary Pickford, and Charlie Chaplin. Finding romance both on and off the screen, California seems a paradise of pleasure and prosperity. Then the great world conflict begins and even America cannot remain isolated.

Fritz's younger brother Carl and their cousin Paul wish to follow their dreams of becoming daring aviators. Paul wants to capture the whole adventure on film. Soon both will witness the violence, wonder and splendor that will transform the world forever.

The Other Side of the River by Alex Kotlowitz is a true story of two Michigan towns, St. Joseph and Benton Harbor. A prosperous lake shore community, St. Joseph is 95 percent white while Benton Harbor is 92 percent black and impoverished.

When Eric Meginnis is found dead in the river, each town suspects the other of foul play. Citizens must reverse the attitudes and misconceptions that undermine race relations in America.

Fields of Glory is the fourth in Gilbert Morris' "The Wakenfield Dynasty." Evan Morgan, a young man of deep convictions and passions; Amos Wakefield, a young man determined to live up to his family's noble name; and Jenny Clairmont, a young runaway, are the featured characters of Gilbert's story.

The outspoken young minister John Bunyan, shares the adventure in English history when the movement for religious liberty begins.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Sharp proposes National Guard transport hay, feed

AUSTIN (AP) - State Comptroller John Sharp suggested to state legislators Frodau that Texas follow Oklahoma's lead and use the National Guard to transport hay to ranchers whose cattle herds are starving in the drought.

Sharp's proposal was one of many offered to a joint hearing of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Appropriations Committee as lawmakers assessed the financial impact of the drought.

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said the drought has resulted in $1.75 billion in direct losses to farmers and ranchers with a ripple effect of just under $5 billion in losses to the Texas economy.

Both Sharp and Perry said those numbers will grow and far exceed the 1996 drought, which cost farmers $1.9 billion directly and the state economy roughly $5 billion.

"We've got chest-high dried out corn stalks, stunted rows of cotton plants and deeply cracked fields with nothing growing," Perry said. "Even though it's early August, it looks like the dead of winter wherever you go."

To help ranchers hold onto cattle herds wasting away in the drought, Sharp recommended having the Texas National Guard help transport hay.

Sharp said in Oklahoma 50 Guard trucks are transporting hay to devastated ranchers at a cost of roughly $10,000 per day.

Under the Texas Disaster Act, Gov. George W. Bush has ordered the temporary suspension of a state law requiring a commercial license for people hauling hay beyond 150 miles of their homes.

Bush said he hoped suspending the law would free up commercial hauling to desperate ranchers.

"Having the Texas Guard distribute hay is a feasible option we are looking at," said Bush spokeswoman Linda Edwards. "But private transportation companies are starting to express interest in the transportation of hay, and we want to see first if that will provide the solution."

Among other proposals aimed at helping farmers, Sharp recommended the state pay for eradicating boll weevils in cotton growing regions while the cotton-munching pests' numbers are down.

Both Sharp and Perry recommended that the state should use prison labor to clear water-gulping brush, such as cedar, mesquite and cactus, from areas near crops and cattle grazing lands.

Sharp said that drought losses are not expected to have an impact on the preliminary state budget surplus of $3.7 billion that he announced in July.

Perry said the Texas Department of Agriculture is working to inform farmers of federal disaster assistance, such as low-interest loans.

But Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, said Rio Grande Valley farmers have been hit so hard by the drought that loans wouldn't help because growers couldn't pay them back.

"People don't know if they can pay back the loans," Lucio said.

Sharp said people who live in urban areas should be just as concerned about the drought as rural areas because any debt incurred by banks as a result of farming losses ultimately are felt by the entire economy.

Sen. Steve Ogden, R-Bryan, proposed that the state provide farmers with land affected by the drought with a one-time reimbursement of up to $10,000 for feed, seed and fertilizer.

Ogden said his proposal would likely cost $400 million and could come out of the budget surplus.

"We will either put that surplus back into state government or give it back to the taxpayers," Ogden said. "I think this would be a good way to help the taxpayers who need it most right now, farmers."

Sharp's proposal to have the state pay for boll weevil eradication and Ogden's plan were applauded by the Texas Farm Bureau.

"I personally know a lot of producers who are leaving agriculture," said Texas Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman.

"I am fearful that we are close to losing a large number due to this year's drought, which follows on the heels of several years of bad weather coupled with this year's extremely low prices for our major commodities in Texas."

Prices top discussions during wheat meeting

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Joe Ed Kinder sold his first crop of wheat in 1957 while he was still in high school. As he remembers it, it sold for about $2.38 per bushel.

Still a wheat farmer, he said he could have sold yesterday for $2.26 per bushel.

"We're going to have to do something to get prices up," Kinder said Friday during a break at the Plains States Summit in Oklahoma City. "If we can do that ... we can make it through disaster years."

Kinder was one of the 200 farmers, politicians and agriculture industry leaders gathered at the summit, called by Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating. Keating said he organized the event to give farmers and ranchers a voice to tell the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Congress what types of programs are needed to help them survive a disastrous market and weather conditions.

The gathering included representatives from 15 states and the federal government.

The mood at morning meetings was generally positive, with state representatives encouraging bipartisan cooperation to develop programs to help the industry.

But there was a fair amount of frustration about what many said were unfair trade agreements with other countries, most notably Japan, as well as inadequate and even worthless farm loan programs.

Lee Scott, with the Oklahoma Peanut Commission, said that in general, the summit was a good idea. But unless something comes out of the meeting, it will have been for naught.

"They have all these meetings and talk about the problems," Scott said. "Hell, we know what the problem is."

Scott, who planted milo this year on his farm south of Ardmore, had no crop.

He said he was encouraged to see representatives from several states, but he said farmers and ranchers have to talk with their politicians and demand that they work toward changing export and farm policies.

Kinder, a Chattanooga area wheat and cotton farmer who said he will survive this year, said farmers have to stop listening to economists and politicians who say they can grow their way out of economic crisis. Farmers and producers, he said, must start operating like other businesses, and cut back when times get tough.

"We can't expect the politicians to do it for us," he said. "We've got to be willing to make some cuts."

Kinder said that while he supports the summit's concept and hopes for the best, he was somewhat disappointed in what he heard during the morning sessions.

"What I'm observing is that we're sugar-coating the picture a little bit," Kinder said.

Aquatic weeds lower Rio Grande reservoir level

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) - Exotic plants clogging the Rio Grande threaten to push rock-bottom reservoir levels even lower.

Two tenacious aquatic weeds - hydrilla and waterhyacinth - have had an explosive growth increase this year in the Rio Grande and are clogging parts of the river, according to a Texas Parks and Wildlife report.

The agency prepared the report for a Texas House-Senate joint committee hearing, held Friday in Austin, on the drought's economic impacts.

The Valley has no spare reservoir water to unclog the Rio Grande. Levels in the region's two reservoirs -

Lake Amistad and Falcon Dam - are at 20 percent capacity, which is as low as they've been since at least 1970, Rio Grande Valley Watermaster Cindy Martinez said.

"Any kind of measure that we take by which we have to increase releases, that's going to affect our levels," Ms. Martinez said. "It's important that we try to eradicate these weeds."

A nearly solid mat of the weeds covers the Rio Grande top to bottom in a six-mile stretch just north of Brownsville, according to the report. Scattered areas of dense weed growth sprout along the river and its connected irrigation canals from Falcon Dam.

The plants have no natural enemies, so they grow unchecked. Once they clog parts of the river, water managers must release more water from the Falcon Reservoir to loosen dense growths.

Hydrilla is an underwater plant native to Africa, Asia and parts of Europe. In the 1950s, it came to Florida as part of the aquarium trade and has spread throughout the United States. It infests at least 85 Texas lakes.

Waterhyacinth is a floating plant native to South America which infests at least 29 Texas lakes.

It probably entered the United States at a trade expo in New Orleans in 1884. By the late 1890s, it was such a problem that Congress passed the River and Harbor Act of 1899, giving the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers authority to control the waterhyacinth population. The weed causes water to evaporate up to five times faster than its normal rate.

Officials say the immediate solution for ridding the river of weeds is a mechanical harvester.

A long-term solution, however, probably will involve animals that eat the plants like grass carp.

Discovery isn't afraid to swim with sharks

By Jennifer Miller
©TVData Features Syndicate

Sharks have an image problem. Often described as perfect killing machines and vilified by Steven Spielberg, they are now being slaughtered at a rate of 30 to 100 million per year.

The Discovery Channel would like to help. Discovery's latest Shark Week lineup, airing Aug. 9-15, takes a scholarly, sympathetic advocacy approach.

"People are fascinated more and more by science, less by the sensational, gory aspects of sharks. They've seen the shows about attacks; they're well-versed on that, and it's time to move on to other aspects about sharks -- and there's a lot of them," says Jeff Kurr, a wildlife filmmaker and shark expert who wrote, created and directed three of the eight Shark Week specials: Sharks of the Atlantic, Great White: In Search of the Giants and Shark Attack Files II.

Although Shark Week does feature the usual footage of partially maimed shark-attack victims, as well as dramatic re-enactments of attacks, the emphasis is on conservation and insight into the shark's habits and condition. For example, Great White, premiering Sunday, Aug. 9, tempers its discussion of a huge shark that attacked fishing boats off the coast of South Africa with an exploration of the reasons the enormous white sharks of the past are so infrequently seen today.

Viewers unaccustomed to lamenting the paucity of great whites in their vicinity may find themselves feeling an unfamiliar pang as experts describe the difficulty of finding sharks over 14 feet long.

"In the past, nobody wanted to save sharks," Kurr says. "Dolphins and seals and whales are so cute and cuddly, and everybody wants to save them. But sharks didn't get a lot of sympathy because of the way they look and the way they've been misperceived and portrayed in the media."

While presenting a balanced perspective, the specials often begin like traditional sensationalized shark films. For instance, the narrator of Hammerheads: Nomads of the Sea, premiering Wednesday, Aug. 12, intones, "They call it the perfect predator, a solitary, efficient killer. It takes but one shark to infest an ocean with fear. To witness a sea of sharks is beyond our worst imaginings."

However, after this ominous start, the show goes on to explore hammerheads' mysterious gatherings in the Pacific and to discuss fascinating research involving this species' ability to navigate enormous distances using the magnetic ridges in the ocean's floor.

Likewise, Zambezi Shark, premiering Monday, Aug. 10, begins, "Sharks strike more fear in the heart of man than all the rest of the Earth's creatures. The shark is the predator supreme."

The program then presents an admiring profile of the Zambezi river shark, the only shark known to swim up rivers, sometimes hundreds of miles into fresh water. The film investigates the Zambezi's incredible electroreceptors, which allow it to sense electric fields as low as one-millionth of a volt.

Kurr says educating the public about how to avoid shark attacks, as well as demythologizing the danger of sharks, is one of the purposes of Shark Attack Files II, airing Saturday, Aug. 15.

"The odds against being attacked are astronomical," he says. "Millions of people go in the water worldwide, and only a handful of attacks occur."

Prehistoric Sharks, premiering Sunday, does not feature any shark attack footage for obvious reasons. The sharks it profiles have all been dead for millions of years.

The Discovery Channel's annual Shark Week begins Sunday and ends Saturday. It features eight programs that present a comprehensive overview of contemporary and prehistoric sharks.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
You have to be patient when it comes to your career, Gemini. Don't get pushy, or you could lose out on an interesting opportunity this week. Take some time for yourself during the weekend. Relax, and enjoy the peace and quiet. This is the perfect time to clear your head.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Even though you enjoy the spotlight, try not to attract attention at work early in the week. A problem is building, and if you make a spectacle of yourself, people may think that you're involved. A friend needs your advice about a financial situation. Don't get involved with things that you know nothing about.

LEO - July 23/August 23
You're really in control of things this week, Leo. You know exactly what you want, and no one can stop you from getting it. However, don't get greedy. Just because you're on a roll, it doesn't mean that you can take things that aren't yours. A loved one has some advice for you. Listen to him or her.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Don't worry about a family situation, Virgo. Things are going to work out - even though it doesn't look like they will early in the week. Loved ones have the problem under control. Don't let an acquaintance force you to do something that you don't want to do. Stand your ground; don't be bullied. Your loved ones will respect you for this. You meet an interesting stranger late in the week. Get to know him or her better, because the attraction is mutual.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Make an effort to look at the bright side of things this week, Sagittarius. There is good and bad in every situation; focus on the good. If you don't, you're in for a stressful week. An acquaintance needs to borrow money. Don't lend him or her anything unless you're sure that he or she is reliable.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
A business rival gets the upper hand when it comes to an important project. Don't show your anger and disappointment, because it only will make you look bad in front of your superiors. That special someone has to go out of town. Don't sit around and sulk. Keep your chin up. Staying busy will get you through this separation.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
When it comes to romance, look before you leap this week, Aquarius. Things aren't always as they seem. So, get the facts before getting involved with someone new. A loved one needs your help with a family matter. Be supportive, and do what you can.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
You're on the go this week, Pisces. Don't let minor details stall your momentum. You have a lot of things that you want to accomplish before Friday. With a little determination, you can get everything done. Taurus plays a key role late in the week.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Did David Boreanaz of Buffy the Vampire Slayer use to use the name Craig Sheffer? They look exactly alike. --Jeri via e-mail.

A: The resemblance is indeed eerie, but these are two different actors.

Q: I seem to remember Marty Ingels and John Astin in a TV show about carpenters called Dickens and Fenster, but I can't find it listed in any TV encyclopedia. Did it air before or after The Addams Family? --Monette Reinhard via e-mail.

Q: When did Carolyn Jones of The Addams Family die, and how old was she? --P.D. in Gardiner, Maine.

A: The actual title was I'm Dickens-He's Fenster, a 1962-63 ABC sitcom starring Ingels as bachelor carpenter Arch Fenster and Astin as his married co-worker, Harry Dickens.

That was before Astin began what became his signature role of Gomez Addams on ABC's The Addams Family, which premiered in the fall of 1964. Carolyn Jones, who played Morticia Addams, died of cancer at age 54 on Aug. 3, 1983.

Q: My friend is convinced that Connie Sellecca played Charlie, the fifth sister on Sisters. I am sure she is wrong, isn't she? --Tikanya Foster via e-mail.

A: Actress Jo Anderson joined the cast in 1994, and was later replaced by Sheila Kelley, as half sister Dr. Charlotte "Charlie" Bennett.

Q: I remember watching as a kid a TV show about a drifter on a motorcycle. I think it was Then Came Bronson. Who was the actor, and whatever became of him? --Sonny and Sandra Hernandez via e-mail.

A: Michael Park played reporter Jim Bronson, who put his career on hold to find himself as he journeyed across America by motorcycle in the 1969-70

Stockard Channing

NBC drama. The actor, now 60, has had an erratic and unpredictable career but has kept working, often in low-budget and direct-to-video movies.

He had a recurring role in Twin Peaks, made a 1996 guest appearance on Walker, Texas Ranger, and has roughly 50 films and TV movies to his credit.

Q: I say Stockard Channing once did a movie written by Joan Rivers called The Girl Most Likely to ... , but many lists of her credits do not include this movie, and my friend says she never did it. Who is right? --Nicholas Marketto, Las Cruces, N.M.

A: You are right, Nicholas. In fact, Channing had one of her first big hits in this 1973 black comedy about an ugly duckling who was beautified by plastic surgery and sought revenge on the men who had broken her heart.

At this stage in her career, Channing has had so many triumphs that it's easy to overlook a 25-year-old TV movie.

HIGHLIGHTS

Lawyer Bobby Donnell (Dylan McDermott) and his girlfriend are on opposite sides of a murder case in a special two-hour edition of The Practice, airing Sunday, the show's new night, on ABC.

The Practice holds session on new night

By Glenn Telchman
©TVData Features Syndicate

The Practice has another trial to endure. The acclaimed legal drama from executive producer David E. Kelley is moving to a new night for the third time in its two-year history.

Beginning Aug. 9 with a special two-hour rebroadcast of last season's episodes "The Trial" and "Cloudy With a Chance of Membranes," Bobby Donnell (Dylan McDermott) and company bring their courtroom theatrics to ABC's Sunday lineup.

In "The Trial," a young woman is slain in a brutal fashion, and Assistant District Attorney Helen Gamble (Lara Flynn Boyle) is assigned to the case.

Helen and her office investigate the crime and find a prime suspect: a well-respected doctor who was having an affair with the murdered woman.

After the doctor is arrested, Bobby agrees to represent him, knowing full well that it will threaten his budding romance with Helen, whom he will now have to face in court.

The case concludes in "Cloudy With a Chance of Membranes" with several surprising twists and turns-- and an ending viewers have to see to believe.

The move to Sundays comes after a momentous year for the series. Last fall, The Practice was placed in a dead-ly Saturday lineup, and the general consensus was the program would die there. But viewers tuned in, attracted by the show's excellent writing and sharp ensemble cast.

Though the show could hardly qualify as a smashing success, it survived. And after the end of the football season, ABC moved The Practice to Monday, where it handily beat its dramatic competition.

The show now faces a new challenge, as its Sunday competition includes many prestigious TV movies and miniseries. ABC Entertainment Chairman Stuart Bloomberg says The Practice will do fine.

"I see big opportunities for us. It's the only series (in that time slot). When NBC put Law & Order on (there), it did well. I think there is a good flow from (Fox's) The X-Files into that. ... They're going to get a good audience."

As to whether Bloomberg is right, the jury is still out.

SOAP WORLD

By Candace Havens
cTVData Features Syndicate

Imagine the surprise an actor experiences when the role he plays is suddenly recast and he's out of a job.

On General Hospital, Joseph C. Phillips, who played Justus, was suddenly replaced by soap veteran Monti Sharp. The reason given for the change is that the writers want to take the character in a different direction.

Dear Candace: I think Diane (Alex Donnelley) on The Young and the Restless got just what she deserved. She dumped poor Jack (Peter Bergman) the same way Victor (Eric Braeden) dumped her. You know what they say: "What goes around comes around." Don't you agree? --Satisfied in Georgia.

Dear Reader: Diane is a bitter woman and plans to get her revenge.

Dear Candace: I understand that my favorite soap, Sunset Beach, will have yet another disaster episode. This time it features an earthquake that rocks the area. Will my favorite character, Vanessa (Sherri M. Saum), be cured of her skin problem by the time the earthquake happens? --Ronziq, East Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Reader: Vanessa's problems don't end any time soon.

Amazingly, when the earthquake scenes were being filmed, there was a real earthquake rocking the Sunset Beach set. No one knew because the fake earthquake was so realistic.

Dear Candace: I have watched Days

of Our Lives for as long as I can remember. Is there any chance Victor Kiriakis (John Aniston) is going to return?

Also, I think the writers do a lot to make sure that there is always something going on for one of the couples, no matter how far-fetched the story might be. I just wondered why the subject of Bo's (Peter Reckell) relationship with Carly (Crystal Chappell) has never come up? Billie wasn't the only woman in his life during the time Hope (Kristian Alfonso) was gone. --Sampsel in Ohio.

Dear Reader: There are no immediate plans to bring Victor back. And there is no reason to bring Carly into the picture. Bo has enough trouble.
