Everyone getting in the act

Everyone seemed to get into the act last week during the Hereford Centennial Celebration. A parade down Main Street on Saturday drew bands and floats -- and also a motorcycling dog (above), complete with sunglasses. Meanwhile, Hayden Hacker, 2, (at right) son of Mike and Vicki Hacker, found out old-time wooden toys can be lots of fun. For a look at more of the activities, see photographs, Pages 8-11 and 13.

Commissioners get break with short agenda

By DONALD M. COOPER Brand Editor

At this time of the year, it's probably a good thing the Deaf Smith County commissioners have short agendas.

After all, the commissioners are in the early stages of developing a budget for the next fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1, so they have plenty to keep them occupied.

The commissioners moved through Monday's short agenda rapidly, opening a bid for a used copier, approving routine bills and reports, making some adjustments to this year's budget and approving a resolution concerning tobacco health payments.

When the county entered into a rental agreement for two new copiers earlier this summer, the old photocopy machines, which are obsolete, became surplus. The commissioners authorized County Clerk David Ruland to solicit bids for the old machines.

The county received a bid of $50 from S&A Enterprises for the two machines. When some question was raised about amount of the bid for two machines, Ruland noted the manufacturer no longer makes spare parts for the machines, and one already is non-operational.

"Getting $50 for them is better than paying $50 to have them hauled off," Ruland said.

The commissioners agreed, as they accepted the bid.

The commissioners also approved a resolution concerning the $338,000 which will be the county's share of the initial $300 million in tobacco settlement funds allocated to Texas counties and hospital districts will be applied to indigent care.

The money, which will be parceled out in January 1999, is expected to go to hospital districts in those counties which have such districts. Rodney Bailey, interim administrator of Hereford Regional Medical Center, presented the resolution to the commissioners on behalf of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District.

Bailey observed the county has assumed some of the responsibilities from the hospital district, specifically for indigent care, so the funds will be going to the county.

County Judge Tom Simons said the tobacco money will be used to reimburse the county for indigent care, although it is not directly targeted to tobacco-related care. He also praised the hospital district for its cooperation with the county on medical care for indigents and initial investors.

the county on medical care for indigents and jail inmates. In other business, the commissioners:

- Authorized the advertising for bids on fuel;

Reappointed Tillie Boozer to the District 3 Advisory Board; Heard a request from representatives of the Tierra Blanca Soil & Water Conservation District for funds. The county has donated $1,000 to the district in the past; and Approved a variety of line-item adjustments in the 1997-98 budget.

Partners schedule community meeting

The Community Health Improvement Partnership will conduct a communitywide health forum at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

The purpose of the meeting is to report on the CHIP findings and receive comments and suggestions from the public. Paul McGinnis of McGinnis & Associates, an Oregon-based health care consulting firm, will conduct the meeting.

The meeting will include presentations of the work from the six CHIP committees. Topics to be discussed include a review of the Hereford Regional Medical Center physical plant, cancer in Deaf Smith County, knowledge of local health care services, teen pregnancy, heart disease in the county, and out-migration (citizens leaving Hereford for health care).

The partnership has been conducting an evaluation of Deaf Smith County health care since last September. The organization is sponsored by Hereford Regional Medical Center, although the hospital has not created the agenda nor will it determine the outcome, according to community health organizer Pat Stone. The final recommendations to be presented to the Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors will be the consensus of the partnership, based on information gathered from county residents."

Candidates write books

DALLAS (AP) - If Texas' political aficionados are looking for an interesting read, they have plenty to choose from this election year.

Several Texas office-seekers have books out on everything from the Republican way to lose weight to a Democrat's take on the state's economy. John Todd, a political science professor at the University of North Texas in Denton, said most politicians who write books use them to spread their ideas among the masses.

"It gives them some intellectual credibility, even though they may have gotten some help (from ghostwriters)," Todd told The Dallas Morning News, adding that most political hopefuls' books attract a small audience.

Of the major-party contenders for nonjudicial posts on the November ballot, four have published books. Others, including Gov. George W. Bush, have not jumped onto the publishing bandwagon.

In Democratic gubernatorial nominee Garry Mauro's autobiography, "Beaches, Bureaucrats and Big Oil," he chronicles his time as Texas land commissioner and discussed how government has shaped people's lives. He told the newspaper he's sold about 4,000 copies.

"If it hadn't been for the New Deal in the Thirties, my great-grandfather would never have been able to buy his 180 acres," Mauro wrote. "If it hadn't been for the G.I. Bill, my dad never could have gone to college. If it hadn't been for student loans, I never would have finished undergraduate and law school."

Democratic lieutenant governor candidate John Sharp oversaw the writing of "Forces of Change: Shaping the Future of Texas."

Sharp sticks to the numbers in this book, which his staff members mostly wrote.

Susan Combs, agriculture commissioner hopeful, dove into the romance genre in 1990 with "A Perfect Match." Reggie Bashur, a consultant for Ms. Combs, said the candidate's steamy novel is irrelevant to her bid for office.

"It was something she did for fun, to see if she could do it," Bashur said. "It's totally a nonfactor....She's out there talking about the issues the people of Texas care about. She wants to make agriculture meaningful to everyday Texans."

July sets new heat record Gore says it's proof of global warming

WASHINGTON (AP) - Last month was the hottest month on record - almost half a degree hotter than July 1997, the previous record-holder - according to government statistics released Monday.

Vice President Al Gore called a White House briefing to release the new statistics. He said July was the seventh month in a row which was hotter than the previous year

"You don't have to be a scientist to know it's been hot this summer," Gore said. "It was the hottest month on record. Period."

The administration has been focusing on the hot weather as a way of supporting its push for approval of the Kyoto Agreement signed last year. Under that agreement countries seek to reduce their emissions of carbon dioxide and other so-called greenhouse gases.

Many climate experts fear that these gasses, which have been increasing in the atmosphere, will trap the sun's heat sort of like a greenhouse, causing the Earth to increase its temperature.

Not all scientists agree some contending that the hot weather is part of the normal cycles in climate. There is also considerable skepticism in the Senate about the Kyoto agreement.

The Earth's average temperature for July was 61.7 degrees Fahrenheit, 1.26 degrees hotter than typical, according to the figures compiled by the government's National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C.

Gore also announced the establishment of eight federally funded research centers to study the effects of environmental hazards on children's health. Children, particularly those with pulmonary illnesses such as asthma, are even more adversely affected by the smog and poor air quality that rising temperatures produce. Asthma in children increased 160 percent since 1980, and is now the top reason for childhood hospitalizations, according to Gore.

Another phenomenon, the El Nino effect, which is caused by a warming of part of the Pacific Ocean, probably will make 1998 the warmest year in several centuries, many scientists say. That conclusion is one of several amassed by researchers delving into weather-releated illness and death, according to The New York Times.

The Times said the World Health Organization, for example, found a surge in the incidence of malaria worldwide, coinciding with extreme El Nino-affected weather events.

Heat wave profits pool companies

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas heat is not hurting everyone. Just ask anyone associated with construction of swimming pools.

Business is booming. Construction schedules are running behind and contractors are running short of supplies used to build swimming

They attribute the booming business to a combination of the heat and the strong economy.

Some swimming pool companies are even having to turn away business, industry officials said

At Alamo Leisure Above Ground Pools & Spas in Arlington, about 20 percent more pools had been sold through the end of July.

"I think it would be up more if we could install more pools, but we don't want to get unqualified people building pools, so we've had to turn away business because we couldn't handle it," Al Patronis of Alamo Leisure told the Arlington Morning

"It's phenomenal to what the heat did to us," Skip Gaston, a regional above-ground pool distributor from Rowlett who has retail customers in southern states from Texas to the Carolinas, said.

We are just trying to keep up with it. We came in to the year saying what are the possible effects of El Hereford; three sons, John Jr., Robert, Nino and came away thinking cold and Cruz Chavarria; four daughters, and wet. And business could have been even better.

"If we had the foresight six months ago that there would have been heat like you have in Texas, it would have been even better," said David Gottshall, vice president of marketing and sales for Huffinger Industries Inc. and its Doughboy above-ground pools division.

"I don't have any hard numbers right now and won't until the end of August, but I have a gut feeling we are about 40 to 50 percent ahead of last year," Gottshall said. Historic-school sale angers Hispanics

DALLAS (AP) - Hispanic leaders Diocese has decided to sell a school in the Little Mexico area to help pay for a multimillion-dollar sex abuse judgment.

group formed in February to try to save St. Ann's had hoped to raise money to buy the building them-

But they said that may not be possible because the diocese wants its bid by Wednesday.

The downtown Cathedral Santuario de Guadalupe uses St. Ann's as an outreach center offering English classes, mentoring programs, domestic-violence counseling and parenting classes. It was built in 1927 as an elementary school for boys and girls and later expanded to include a girls' high school.

"This is a very sacred historical, cultural and ongoing educational institution," said board member Helen Cedillo, whose two sisters went to school at St. Ann's.

"It's centrally located, and it takes care of the needs of all the people. We feel we are planting seeds there to make this a better Dallas.'

The diocese had to mortgage Bishop Lynch and Bishop Dunne high schools, the chancery, the bishop's residence and its undeveloped properties to pay its share of the Kos settlement and an earlier settlement of sex-abuse claims against two other priests, Weis said.

The diocese will pay more than $1 million a year in interest if it can't pay off the mortgages, he said.

The 11 plaintiffs won a record $119.6 million judgment the diocese and Kos in a civil trial. Plaintiffs in the last four months have settled with the diocese for $30.9 million, with insurers paying the majority.

Kos was convicted at criminal court in March of child molestation and sentenced to life in prison.

Is popular PB&J sandwich nutritious choice for lunchbox?

SAN ANTONIO - It's a kid's lunchbox favorite that might also be the world's fastest three-ingredient

First, assemble the components a fresh jar of thick, creamy peanut butter, two hefty slices of bread and a spoonful of your favorite jelly. Blanket one slice of bread with a smear of peanut butter, followed by a generous layer of jelly and top it with the other slice of bread. (Of course, there are those who like to spread the peanut butter on one slice of bread and the jelly on the other, then put them together. To each his own.)

That's it -- the classic American peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

How popular is it? With school just around the corner, here is a timely fact: "The Great American Food Almanac" tells us that the average American student will have consumed approximately 1,500 pounds of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches upon graduation from high school.

The Texas Peanut Producers Association adds this tidbit: Americans eat about 4 pounds of peanut butter per capita annually. And together, we eat enough each year that, if spread, it would cover the floor of the Grand Canyon.

Is it a nutritious choice for your child's lunchbox or after-school snack?

'Because bread is naturally low in fat and full of vitamins and and minerals, it creates a nutritious base for any sandwich," says Judi Adams, a registered dictitian who heads the nonprofit Wheat Foods Council.

The peanut butter adds protein, fiber, niacin and zinc, and jelly adds to the great taste. The combination helps provide children with energy they need for school, sports and fun,' Adams says.

In recent years, peanuts have taken the rap of being a high-fat food, however. Although peanuts are cholesterol-free, they do contain fat about 14 grams per ounce. More than half of that fat, though, is monounsat-

"That's the good kind of fat," says Jennifer Maranowicz, a registered, licensed dietitian with Northwest Santa Rosa Rehabilitation Center, who adds that she considers peanut butter a nutritional powerhouse.

Also, she notes, a serving of peanut butter contains nearly half of the 13 essential vitamins, including vitamin E, and minerals.

A cautionary note to parents is in order, though, says Dr. Stephen Holt, a gastroenterologist, internist and author who has specialized in nutritional studies throughout his career.

"I think peanut butter in moderation is a useful source of calories. . . . But I'd ask parents to consider carefully the amount of calories involved," emphasized Holt, who lives and works in Fairfield, N.J. "Childhood obesity, especially in the Southwest, is a terrible problem and parents should understand that peanut butter is stuffed with calories.

Holt suggests peanut butter, in moderation, as a special treat for children rather than a day-to-day staple in the diet.

I'm also a little concerned about the food-processing methods used for peanut butter, especially the hydrogenated fats," he said.

Peanut butter does, he said, have a good protein content -- about four grams per tablespoon.

Other ways to pack more nutrition into this popular sandwich are to be To reduce the fat in a peanut butter sure to use a whole-grain bread and sandwich, try some lower-fat options, use fresh fruit, such as banana or apple slices, instead of high-sugar jellies. Fiber also boosts the nutritional value A little honey would also be a good sweetener. Or, skip the jelly altogether "Kids can be diabetic, too," says and spoon the peanut butter into crispy Maranowicz. "And peanut butter - celery sticks. (If kids like raisins, especially the crunchy kind, is a good Maranowicz says, sprinkle them over source of fiber. Fiber helps to keep the stuffed celery sticks for another blood sugar under control and reduces kids' favorite called "bugs on a log.")

Free agents long for chance to make NFL roster

By BART HUBBUCH The Dallas Morning News WICHITA FALLS -- Officially, it's the NFL. But for the lowly rookie free agent, there is very little glamour involved in training of them know will never come. The food is good and plentiful, of course. They even get a golf cart camp or the agonizing hunt for a roster spot that, deep down, many to share, just like the veterans. That's where the perks end and the drudgery begins. Two-a-day practices in the scorching sun. The screams of impatient coaches ringing in their ears. The daunting task of getting a few weeks to absorb a playbook the size of the Dallas yellow pages. And the payoff? An almost certain visit from The Turk, the dreaded assistant coach on every NFL team responsible for telling players they have been cut and need to turn in that playbook. "You learn to be on the lookout for that guy," said Josh LaRocca, the former Wishbone quarterback at Rice who has been cut twice by the Denver Broncos.

If it all seems pointless and painful, here is why they do it: The chance, however slim, to be the next Drew Pearson . . . the next Bill Bates . . . the next Kevin Mathis.

All started out as undrafted free agents, and all went on to make the Cowboys' roster. In the case of Pearson and Bates, they also went on to have long and distinguished NFL careers.

However remote their chances, that's the dream they're chasing. One look at Barry Cantrell tells you there is nothing normal about always like to stand out.' Unfortunately for Cantrell, even a record-setting Division I-AA career at Fordham couldn't make him stand out in the eyes of NFL scouts. They virtually ignored the tape he had his agent send to every team in the league. Only Dallas, Jacksonville and Miami called. The chance to work with noted kicking coach Steve Hoffman brought Cantrell to the Cowboys, even though Toby Gowin is entrenched as their punter.

Cantrell, though, has an ulterior motive. He figures there is no better way to get noticed elsewhere than to punt under the guidance of Hoffman, who has a lengthy track record of producing NFL kickers -not necessarily all of whom end up with the Cowboys.

So when Cantrell was booting three punts for a whopping 50.7yard average in last Friday's pre-season opener against Seattle, he was really doing it for a chance to wear another NFL uniform.

I'm realistic about the situation," Cantrell said. "I'm just here to do my best and get noticed. If I get noticed here, great. If someone else notices me, that would be just as good."

No one ever told Junior Filikitonga he was not tough enough, wide enough or determined enough to play in colleg; he had 52 tackles and four sacks as a senior.

But undersized linemen face a long road in the NFL, especially if they're rookies and miss an entire week of training camp with a sprained right knee. Such is Filikitonga's current lot with the Cowboys, who don't figure to keep him around much longer. "I realize that (the injury) has probably cost me a chance at the roster, and that's disappointing," he said. "That's why I'm just trying to learn as much as I can." Filikitonga thought he had a decent shot at making the Cowboys, considering how des, erate they are for defensive lineman in the wake of Tony Tolbert's release and Shante Carver's retirement.

But that shot, it seems, went out the window the moment Filikitonga twisted his knee. Now, he looks on forlornly as the Cowboys proceed without him.

Filikitonga hopes to return to practice this week, but there are no guarantees.

"Missing the (first) pre-season game was the toughest thing, because I walked on the field at Texas Stadium and a special feeling came over me," he said. "It made me feel like I missed out on something big."

Sahalee promises tree problems for PGA

By DOUG FERGUSON AP Golf Writer

REDMOND, Wash. -- The tee shot hugged the branches down the left side before gently fading into the fairway on Sahalee Country Club's closing hole. That's where the fun began Monday for Colin Montgome-

The PGA Championship, as is the case with most major golf championships, puts a premium on driving accuracy. But at Sahalee, just being in the fairway isn't always enough.

Montgomerie folded his arms and squinted as he surveyed the final 200 yards to the 18th green, his eyes locked onto a 50-foot cedar just behind a 100-foot Douglas fir, both guarding the left quarter of the green.

His first shot curved into the thick of the cedar and dropped down into followed the same path, only this time it ricocheted across the fairway some 50 yards short of the green.

By this time, Montgomerie had already dropped a third ball. This one stopped 15 feet short of the hole, drawing applause from a small gallery and a sigh of surrender from the Scotsman.

"It's a lovely course," Montgomerie said. "It's a beautiful place to play and a beautiful test of golf."

Then he gazed back at the 18th fairway and smiled.

"The trees get in the way too often," he said. "That's the only problem. From above, I'm sure it looks like you can only walk single-file down the fairways."

Trees figure to be the primary problem confronting the strongest heavy, 4-inch rough, His second shot field at the last major championship of the year.

Masters and British Open champion Mark O'Meara will try to become the first player since Ben Hogan to win three majors in a year, and Davis Love III will try to become the first back-to-back PGA champion since it went to stroke play in 1958.

Sahalee will also give the 20-somethings one last chance to win a major after they took three of the four in 1997.

For all of them, Sahalee presents a new kind of challenge.

The PGA Championship returns to Washington state for the first time since Bob Hamilton's stunning 1-up victory over Byron Nelson in 1944. The PGA Tour stopped coming to Seattle in 1966, three years before Ted Robinson carved Sahalee out of a forest of trees next to Lake Sammamish.

'Guys who don't do well, or even guys who do well, always find something they don't like about a course," said Fred Couples, who learned the game on Seattle's public courses, "But I don't know what's not to like about this."

Not many dared guess what kind of score will win the Wanamaker Trophy, if only because not many have an idea what to expect. Couple occasionally plays Sahalee when he's in town, although the rough is not as punishing or the greens as table-top

Sahalee plays to a par 70 at 6,906 yards, which is relatively short until you consider the 480-yard sixth hole and the 475-yard 18th, both of which are converted par 5s.

"Short is relative," Payne Stewart said. "I hit driver and 2-iron into 18, and driver, 4-iron into another par 4. Is that short?"

The last two majors have been won at even par -- O'Meara at Royal Birkdale and U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen at The Olympic Club.

"It's hard to compare this with anything," said Bill Glasson, playing his first major of the year because of elbow surgery. "It's a nice change of pace from the typical TPC courses we play with bunkers and water. This is a natural wonder, not a manufactured

Dallas Cowboys offensive lineman Everett McIver returned to practice Monday for the first time since suffering a neck wound in a dormitory fight.

McIver, who reportedly received a six-figure payoff from Michael Irvinto remain quiet about how he was injured, had not participated in team drills since the July 29 episode.

"We're going to see how well he does today and then try to get him in the one-on-one play before the scrimmage against New Orleans on Tuesday," coach Chan Gailey said.

The rookie coach, who has only said that McIver was hurt during "horseplay" in the dorm, said the team is trying to keep the saga from becoming a distraction.

"I think if you think things are going to go completely smooth all the time you're living a little bit in a dream world," Gailey said. "There are going to be problems. There are going to be ups and downs. How you deal with it is the key. You deal with it. You go on to the next one. You work together as

"We've handled it. I've talked about it. It's done," he said. "You can't get caught up in that or you don't go forward where you are supposed to go forward."

McIver refused to comment on the incident, telling reporters: "The questions are over. I try to cooperate with you guys and you won't cooperate with me.

San Francisco fullback Marc Edwards was activated from the physically unable to perform list Monday and joined the team's training camp practices for the first time.

Edwards, expected to start in place of free agent loss William Floyd, had been sidelined since reporting for the start of camp July 17 with a bulging disc in his lower back. He received a cortisone injection and anti-inflammatory therapy to alleviate the problem.

The team is easing Edwards back into a football regimen, allowing him to take part in non-contact drills. Coach Steve Mariucci said Edwards probably would be held out of this weekend's game in Vancouver and see his first action Aug. 23 in an exhibition against Miami.

Then along came rookie Jason Fabini.

The Jets, who already have installed fresh faces at two positions on the line, seemed poised to welcome another this week. Fabini, a fourth-round draft pick out of Cincinnati, has been elevated to the first unit as Malamala finds himself on the outside looking in again.

Chance

If not for a pesky little military commitment, the result of a fouryear stint at the Air Force Academy, Morgan would be an oddity: a free agent who's a virtual shoo-in to make Dallas' roster.

Says who? Says new Cowboys coach Chan Gailey.

"He would be making a real run at earning a spot on this football team if he were going to be here," Gailey said.

Morgan, an option quarterback in high school and college, has been moved to running back by the Cowboys. He has made the move flawlessly, capturing Gailey's attention with his speed, toughness and lateral quickness.

A drop-back quarterback his whole football career, LaRocca thought seriously about transferring from Rice when Wishbone devotee Ken Hatfield was named coach after LaRocca's sophomore LaRocca stayed, though, and the payoff was immediate. The Owls, with LaRocca at the helm, used the Wishbone to beat Texas and earn a share of the Southwest Conference title.

Of course, playing the Wishbone in college doesn't do much for a quarterback's chances in the NFL, even if you're 6-2, 218 pounds and have a strong arm.

"I don't think I threw one drop-back pass as a senior, and I'm sure that was a factor in why I wasn't drafted," said LaRocca, who has been cut twice by the Denver Broncos.

LaRocca doesn't figure to last long with the Cowboys, either. He was brought in just before the pre-season opener after Dallas waived Max Knake, but Danny Gonzalez -- a fellow rookie free agent -- has made so much progress at No. 3 that LaRocca seems even more of an afterthought.

"I'm not real optimistic (about staying), but you've got to take your shot," LaRocca said.

At least LaRocca is enjoying the view. The standing-room only crowds at training camp are a far cry from his most recent football stop, as quarterback of NFL Europe's lowly England Mon-

Attendance was so poor at the Monarch's home games this year, averaging less than 6,000 a game, that the league folded the franchise.

'I see more people at these practices [with the Cowboys] than saw at most of our games."

LaRocca said. Getting cut once by the Cowboys wasn't enough to dissuade Dwayne Chandler from trying again.

Instead of trying to get a look from another NFL team, the former University of Oklahoma fullback is back in camp with the Cowboys this summer.

Chandler faces the same long odds of making the roster that he did last year. In fact, they're even longer, considering starting fullback Daryl Johnston has returned from neck surgery, backup Nicky Sualua has proven himself as the future starter and rookie free agent Bobby Rodriguez is catching the coaches' eyes.

"My first training camp was tough, because I really didn't know what to expect," Chandler said. "Now, I just go out and do my job. I don't have any control over what they (the Cowboys) are going to do or think."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/ products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

-Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no

-- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

-- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

President praises the EPA's new rule on drinking

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Squeezing in an environmental pitch during a triple-header day of money-raising for Democrats, President Clinton is hailing a new EPA rule requiring that all water utilities report regularly to households on the quality of their drinking water.

Clinton today was visiting the Harry Tracy Water Filtration Plant in the northern California city of San Bruno to highlight the new EPA regulation, which has been in the works since Congress included the requirement among 1996 amendments to the Safe Drinking Water Act.

The rule requires water companies for the first time to tell customers on their bills, via the Internet, or by other means - the origin of their drinking water and details about its quality, including contaminants it carries. The first reports by utilities are due in October 1999.

Later today Clinton was attending three fund-raisers for California Lt. Gov. Gray Davis, who is running for governor: a luncheon in San Francisco followed by a reception and dinner in Los Angeles.

Clinton flew to California late Monday after helping Democrats raise a combined $1.4 million in Louisville, Ky., and Chicago. Today's three events for Davis' campaign were to raise another $3 million.

Study: Religion keeps blood pressure in elderly low

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Another study has linked good health with religion. The latest shows lower blood pressure among older people who have faith. The new Duke University study of 4,000 North Carolinians ages 65 or over found those who participated in religious activities were 40 percent less likely to have high blood pressure, which can increase the risk of heart disease. While the study doesn't prove a causal relationship between belief in a higher power and good health, it does provide evidence of another benefit of religious activity, study co-author Dr. Harold Koenig said.

We're becoming more aware that religious beliefs or practices is not negative for a person's health," Koenig said. "In fact they could be very

Research has shown that religious people are less depressed, have healthier immune systems and deal better with addictions than the nonreligious. San Francisco expands domestic partner benefits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - San Francisco politicians passed an ordinance that strengthens the rights of gay and lesbian couples despite a congressional backlash that could cost the city millions of dollars.

The ordinance - passed without a hint of objection - will make San Francisco the nation's only city that demands private businesses offer domestic partners the same customer discounts they extend to married couples. Mayor Willie Brown says he will sign it.

Most city businesses that might be subject to the law, such as gyms, car rental companies and insurance agencies; already comply. Still, supervisors were determined for the city to set a standard for human rights.

NEWS in brief

Wall Street finds glitches in its Y2K preparedness

NEW YORK (AP) - A test simulating trading on Wall Street around the start of the millennium showed that some firms with the best resources to overcome year 2000 computer problems couldn't handle the transactions smoothly.

About 1 percent of the trades by 28 of the richest securities firms were stymied by year 2000 changes in a recent test. That suggests the problem could be greater at smaller firms that don't have as much money.

"As you go down to smaller companies that spend less and started later' the possible risk of failure is higher," Lou Marcoccio, year 2000 research director at the Gartner Group in Westboro, Mass., said Monday.

The firms that participated in the test handle about half of Wall Street's daily trading volume.

Questions linger one year after record beef recall COLUMBUS, Neb. (AP) - Trucks packed with beef come and go at the sprawling metal-and-glass plant on the edge of town. It is a stark contrast to the picture one year ago, when trucks sat idle, the plant was closed and federal inspectors tried to determine how much hamburger potentially was contaminated with the deadly E. coli bacteria.

The Hudson Foods recall began with 20,000 pounds on Aug. 12, 1997, after 16 people in Colorado became ill from meat linked to the plant. Nine days later, it had grown to 25 million pounds of ground beef in the nation's largest meat recall.

Since then, Hudson Foods has sold the plant, which reopened with a new owner. But questions remain: Where did the tainted meat come from? Why did it take so long to learn the extent of the potential contamination? Could it happen again?

Project halted over release of data to Russia, Ukraine

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Boeing is trying to convince federal investigators that it has corrected problems that allowed possibly sensitive information to be disclosed to Russian and Ukrainian engineers working on the Sea Launch commercial rocket program.

The State Department suspended work on Sea Launch pending a review to determine whether the disclosures violated federal law, a department official said Monday, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

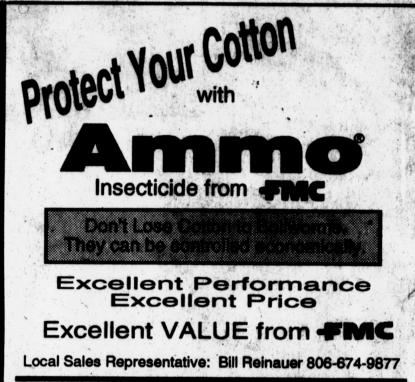

Colleges mull solutions for poor results on teacher tests BOSTON (AP) - The results were an embarrassment no matter how you looked at them: 59 percent of all aspiring teachers failing the state's est for new educators. Ever since a breakdown of the numbers were released three weeks ago, professors, deans and university presidents have been desperately searching for ways to improve their curriculums, and, subsequently, their students' scores. But educators said it's difficult to implement change without knowing precisely where their students went wrong. Although schools were told how many students passed or failed specific sections of the test, they have not received copies of the actual test questions.

"It makes it difficult to figure out how to fix it," said Thomas Del Prete, education department chairman at Clark University in Worcester.
