Feds get low mark for work

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House expert on the Year 2000 computer problem gives the federal government a "D" grade for its efforts to fix the computer glitch that could seriously disrupt basic public services on Jan. 1, 2000.

"The picture is a gloomy one," said Rep. Stephen Horn, R-Calif. At the current rate nearly one-third of mission-critical systems will not meet the president's March 1999 deadline for being Year 2000-compliant, he said.

But President Clinton's chief authority on the problem, John Koskinen of the Year 2000 Council, said Horn's latest assessment understates the progress being made and predicted that almost all federal "mission-critical" computer systems will be ready for the new millennium.

Some departments, such as the State Department and the Health and Human Services Department, face "significant challenges," but the bigger problem, Koskinen said, is the local governments, small businesses and foreign countries that "are at square one" in addressing the issue.

Horn, chairman of the House subcommittee on government management, information and technology, has been issuing quarterly ratings of how 24 federal agencies are coping with what is known as the "Y2K" problem.

He gave eight agencies an improved grade from August, while marking down only one: The Defense Department fell from "D" to "D-." But he said the overall administration grade was still a "D" because many of the largest

County may be confronting expensive headache in '99

By Don Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Deaf Smith County may have a big, expensive headache during the next 13 months.

That's because most of the county's computers aren't Y2K compliant.

County Clerk David Ruland said he wouldn't be surprised if the bill for bringing the county into Y2K compliance runs about $60,000. What is the Y2K problem that will affect many of the world's computers at midnight Dec. 31, 1999?

The Y2K (Year 2000) problem was created several decades ago when the first computer programs were designed. Because of limited storage space for data, code writers omitted the first two numbers of a date. For example, 1998 would read as 98, 1999 as 99, and so on. The year 2000 would be read as 00.

Because the systems were coded to assume all years begin with 19, which means computers will interpret 00 to mean 1900 unless the software is modified.

Because the computer would not recognize the data correctly, the glitch would affect all forms of financial accounting, including interest computation, due dates, pensions, personnel benefits, investments and legal commitments. It also would affect inventory, maintenance and file retention.

The City of Hereford, however, had a maintenance agreement with its new computer equipment that ensures the software would be modified to be Y2K compliant, city financial director Steve Bartels said. He noted one computer is not yet in compliance in the utilities department, but that will be brought into line soon.

"I'm not too worried about it because I have talked to some other cities with the same software and they aren't having any problems," he said.

Ruland said he has run a test on computers in his office, with five of nine machines failing. Three were determined to be Y2K compliant, and one — the file server — has not been tested.

The county judge's staff has new computers, as does corrections and supervision, Ruland said.

However, the sheriff's office probably has one machine that would pass the Y2K testing, he said.

At the Nov. 9 meeting of the commissioners' court, Sheriff Joe Brown presented an estimate on upgrading computers and software in his department. He said it was estimated that the tab would be $38,700.

Ruland said Apollo Software, which is the vendor for the county software, has estimated about $30,000 for his office, although the company included voter registration records which are not used by the county clerk's office.

Although no formal recommendation has been made to the commissioners' court, Ruland said he would probably suggest using

Report: States lagging on compliance

NEW YORK (AP) — Welfare, Medicaid, unemployment checks and other types of benefit payments will likely be delayed unless states accelerate efforts to prepare their computer systems for 2000, according to a report in The New York Times.

Only one-third of the 421 computer systems used for seven major health, welfare and nutrition programs is ready, the newspaper said, citing a recent General Accounting Office report.

Failure to fix the computer bug "could result in billions of dollars not being delivered," the report said.

The concerns are especially acute for county governments, which administer many federal programs.

"I'd be surprised if there was not some sort of dislocation and some interruption of services," said Randy Johnson, chairman of the Hennepin County Board of Commissioners in Minneapolis and former president of the National Association of Counties. "We are trying to work with our clients."

The bug that threatens so many benefits has a simple diagnosis but a massively tedious and time-consuming cure. Many computer calendars are programmed to recognize just the last two digits of a year instead of all four. That means when 2000 rolls around, many computers are expected to click back to 1900 instead of advancing ahead from 1999.

Computers can be reprogrammed.

Bivins to talk about session at local visit

State Sen. Teel Bivins will conduct a town hall meeting at 1 p.m. Dec. 1 at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

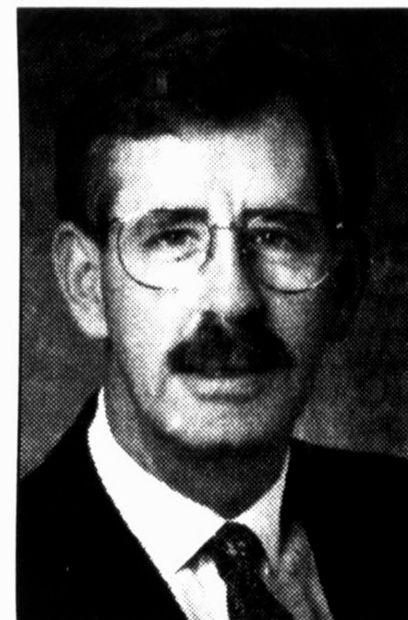

Bivins, R-Amarillo, whose Senate District 31 includes Deaf Smith County, will discuss the 76th Legislature, which will convene Jan. 12, 1999. He also will answer questions from constituents and solicit their views on statewide issues.

Much of the attention prior to the session has focused on the projected $6.3 billion state budget surplus and how to deal with it.

The Legislature will determine how to use the budget surplus, as well as debate issues such as electric deregulation, sexual predators, social promotion in the schools, and charging county inmates for room and board.

"I look forward to hearing from my constituents regarding these issues and others," Bivins said. "Their input will help me focus my energies during what I expect will be a very intense session."

Bivins is serving his fourth term in the Texas Senate. He is chairman of the Senate Education Committee. He also serves on the Finance and Natural Resources committees, as well as the Legislative Budget Board.

Christmas lighting to be Monday night

Community fellowship, holiday spirit and an appearance from Santa Claus will combine in one meeting at 7 p.m. Monday as the City of Hereford hosts the 3rd Annual Christmas-in-the-Park celebration of lights.

The popular event, set in the heart of the downtown area at Mother's Park on the corner of Main Street and Park Avenue, marks the beginning of a bright and dazzling holiday light display in the park.

Musical entertainment is tentatively planned, and the Hereford Pilot Club will serve hot chocolate during the event.

If tradition holds, Santa Claus likely will receive the honor of turning on the lighted 45-foot red cedar Christmas tree in the center of the park, and additional lighting and displays will be turned on in parks adjacent to Mother's Park.

All surrounding streets to Mother's Park, with the exception of Park Avenue, will be closed to through-traffic until the conclusion of the ceremony.

Lighting contest

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division will sponsor the annual Christmas Lighting Contest for homes and businesses.

Nominations will be accepted for any home or business in Hereford.

Entry forms are available at the chamber of commerce office. Completed entries must be returned to that office by 5 p.m. Dec. 11.

Categories are: residential, total home, or residential windows and doors; and total business, or business windows and doors.

Previous winners are eligible to enter again, but must compete in a category different from the one entered this past year.

Judging will be Dec. 14-15 and 1998 contest winners will be announced in the Sunday, Dec. 20 edition of The Hereford Brand.

Duckweed may solve a feedlot problem

Researchers think they may have found an answer to big problem for feedyards

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

The difficult task of disposing of thousands of gallons of liquid and solid animal waste from the confined animal feeding operations may soon be growing its own solution.

Two researchers, Dr. Clifford Fedler, a Texas Tech professor of civil engineering, and Nick Parker, a doctoral student working on the project, have developed a process which breaks down the waste, filters the water and provides a safe, high protein animal feed additive.

Fedler and Parker, working through a grant partially funded by the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's 319(h) program, have developed a system using duck-weed and other macrophytes to filter waste water.

Macrophytes compose a family of flowering, water growing plants such as water lilies, water hyacinths, wolffia, duckweed and knotgrass, all of which are proving useful in cleaning and filtering livestock waste water.

As well as filtering the waste water, macrophytes, particularly duckweed and water hyacinths, are proving to be an extremely high protein feed supplement.

With feedlot capacity nearing 8 million head of cattle in Texas alone, this environmental threat has become a serious problem. Fedler and Parker are hoping to turn this research into alternative treatments reaching far more than just the cattle feeding operations.

The Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce is asking residents to redeem all current-issue Hereford Bucks Certificates in their possession by Dec. 31, 1998. The Chamber is planning to issue new Hereford Bucks on Dec. 1, 1998, which will feature a different color and a one-year expiration period from the date new bills are purchased.

The Chamber reports that Hereford Bucks will continue to be honored by any Hereford business.

BRAND/Don Cooper

Two agricultural researchers believe they have found a solution to one of the biggest problems of the 8 million head of cattle passing through Texas feedyards. The researchers believe a microorganism in ponds at confined animal feeding operations (CAFOs) can help with waste disposal.

Research

Fedler says his research is based on a waste water pond, which with the pull of gravity, flows into a lagoon and both aerobic (in the presence of oxygen) and anaerobic (in the absence of oxygen) systems clean the water.

"Basically, it works with a pond inside a pond," said Fedler. "The waste is pumped into the inner pond where it is protected from wind and other variables. The anaerobic organisms breakdown organic materials."

Protecting the waste from weather extremes increases fermentation, causing breakdown to accelerate.

"The center pit allows solid material to stay without any turnover or disturbance," Fedler said. "This way we combine aerobic and anaerobic breakdown in one area."

As the anaerobic organisms breakdown the organic compounds the water moves in to the outer pond, commonly known as the facultative pond, where enzymes break down the waste's carbon chain, which make up solid matter.

Overflow runs into a second pond where duckweed, water hyacinths, and other macrophytes grow abundantly in the anaerobically filtered water, further filtering water and using the nitrogen and carbon dioxide.

This water can then be released for irrigation or used to recharge underground water supplies.

Fedler said the water can also be used to raise stocker fish, and fish that would be used for other animal feeds.

As an added benefit the plants growing in the integrated facultative ponds can be used as high protein, high moisture animal feeds.

Duckweed grown in such ponds test at about 30 percent protein, as compared to the 10 to 15 percent of normal forage diets.

"Adding duckweed to the cattle diet, cattle gained as good or better than cattle on a control diet," explained Fedler. "Interestingly enough, when we cut out the duckweed from cattle rations, the cattle continued to out perform the control group."

His research points to maximum growth rate when the diet consisted of 11-13 percent duckweed.

His research indicates that a feedlot should be able to grow enough duckweed off its own waste pits to supply each animal with 11 to 13 percent requirements.

"With a 30,000-head feedlot at an 80 percent capacity, we can produce enough duckweed just from their waste alone to supply 11 percent of their protein in the diet," Fedler said.

Duckweed is harvested with the help of an auger and screen and is added directly to the feed.

Fedler said the project shows that implementing wastewater control systems before regulations become even stricter could be advantageous for livestock producers through its by-products.

"This project demonstrates that economic liability of wastewater can produce valuable by-products to offset installation costs."

Bob Josserand of AZTX Cattle and Jerry Curtis of Beef Tech, have shown interest in the project.

Fedler invites interested cattlemen to visit the New Deal location and get a better idea how the system works.

Fedler can be reached at (806) 742-2801.

money from the Records Preservation Fund to pay for the Y2K modification.

The fund is generated by a $5 fee on all documents filed in public records. Also, fees are collected on court records filed in the 222nd District Court. At the end of October, Ruland said the two funds contained nearly $30,000.

The Associated Press reported this week the nation's bankers are telling people not to panic over the Year 2000 date change, trying to counteract doomsday scenarios of millions of Americans draining their bank accounts in December 1999.

ATM machines, credit cards, checks and banking services will be functioning normally, industry officials promised.

As for the last weekend of the millennium, their advice was: Have the same amount of cash on hand as you would for any holiday weekend.

Withdrawing massive amounts of cash could make consumers vulnerable to being robbed, the officials warned.

The Federal Reserve has ordered an additional $50 billion of new currency to put into circulation in the event people make a run on banks and automated teller machines late next year.

Fed governors have assured Congress there will be sufficient cash available to the system to cover a wave of withdrawals.

By the end of next year, $200 billion in currency will be stored in government vaults, up from the $150 billion normally held in reserve. That's in addition to the $460 billion in notes circulating in the United States and abroad.

The U.S. banking industry is spending more than $8 billion to retrofit its computer systems, which will be put through testing next year.

Some experts have expressed concern about the financial industry's vulnerability to the Y2K problem and are worried that consumers could lose faith in the security of their banks.

In Hereford, FirstBank Southwest sent a letter to its customers assuring them the bank is "aware of the importance of the Year 2000 issue and is actively preparing for the date change."

The bank developed its Y2K plan in 1997, and is now reviewing all computer systems used by the bank. The essential systems already have been modified and testing is under way, according to bank officials.

"In addition to testing our computer systems, contingency plans are being developed for processing and retaining your bank records in the event of unanticipated disruptions," according to bank officials.

Hereford State Bank officials have been working toward a goal of completing the modifications to ensure Y2K compliance by Dec. 31 — a full year before the millennium.

grammed by rewriting the software code, but many devices have embedded microchips that must be physically replaced. There are billions of software functions and billions of chips to check, with little more than a year to finish the job.

John Thomas Flynn, chief information officer of California, said governors ignore the Year 2000 problem at their peril.

"If social services are disrupted, you'll have more than computer problems," he said. "You could have civil disturbances. That's why this issue is a high priority for us."

State health department reports 4 cases of flu

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) reports that four confirmed cases of influenza have been identified in Texas during this year's "flu" season. No cases have been reported to date from Amarillo. Two of these cases resulted from infection with influenza virus type B. The other two cases were caused by influenza virus type A, one of which was identified as type A/Sydney. This is one of the three strains which is included in the 1998-99 influenza vaccine. Influenza season in Amarillo usually starts in early December and lasts until March or April with the peak number of cases being reported during the week of January. It takes approximately two weeks to develop protection after getting the influenza vaccine or "flu shot."

Persons age 65 years or older and those with chronic diseases of health conditions listed below should get a flu shot now.

The City of Amarillo, Department of Public Health continues to offer the influenza vaccine for persons in the following high-risk categories:

- Healthy persons age 65 or older
- Anyone who has a serious long-term health problem with: heart disease, kidney disease; lung disease; metabolic disease, such as diabetes; asthma; and anemia, and other blood disorders.

agencies were among the worst performers.

He gave failing grades to the departments of Justice, Energy, State, and Health and Human Services, which oversees Medicare.

Koskinen, appointed in February to lead the new Year 2000 Council, cited Horn's figures showing that 61 percent of systems are already fixed and predicted that 85-90 percent will meet the March deadline.

Horn, he said, has "served a valuable function in terms of trying to raise awareness," but he stressed that "by the next quarter report it will be clear the federal government is ahead of most private-sector areas."

Many computers are programmed to recognize only the last two digits of a year, and there are fears of massive malfunctions after Jan. 1, 2000, when machines will assume it is 1900. Many computers have embedded microchips that must be physically replaced.

In a worst-case scenario, Medicare and other federal benefits could be held up, airport traffic control could be disrupted, electric grids could break down and military computers could fail.

Horn said the Pentagon needs to focus on its strategic systems. "It goes without saying that there is zero tolerance for error when you are dealing with the defense of our nation," he said.

The Pentagon, which runs almost 40 percent of the mission-critical systems in the government, "has an aggressive program to make sure that our systems can face the Year 2000 challenge," spokeswoman Susan Hansen said.

A State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Horn was correct that only 36 percent of its major systems are ready for 2000.

Congress last month approved more than $3 billion in emergency spending to address the Year 2000 issue.

Also, Clinton has signed legislation that makes it easier to share technology on the Y2K problem.

Horn did give "A's" to three agencies: the Small Business Administration, the Social Security Administration and the National Science Foundation.

The Social Security Administration, he said, began working on the problem in 1989, eight years before most government agencies.

Impeachment

Clinton to make decision on hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — After denying legal wrongdoing in written testimony to the House Judiciary Committee, President Clinton must decide whether to mount a defense in a televised hearing.

Clinton has an invitation to appear personally, send his legal representatives and call witnesses to back his version of the Monica Lewinsky affair. Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., set the appearance for Dec. 8 or shortly thereafter, but the president has not responded.

Hyde also set that week for deliberations on articles of impeachment, with the full House possibly convening the week of Dec. 14.

In anticipation of that debate, a senior Republican committee official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Friday the staff already is starting to draft impeachment articles charging Clinton with perjury, obstruction of justice and abuse of power. But he said the scenario could change if the president presents exculpatory evidence.

In his written responses Friday, Clinton acknowledged once again that he misled his family, his staff, his friends and the American public. But in several responses to 81 questions submitted by Hyde three weeks ago, Clinton said his testimony was "not false and misleading." At the same time, he failed to recall many of the significant events in his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern.

"The committee will now carefully review those responses," Hyde said.

Many of the questions asked the president to "admit or deny" specific events or conversations. He usually was not as direct in his answers, and in at least 17 instances said he did not recall or his recollection was uncertain.

Clinton has three basic choices in responding to Hyde's invitation:

—Wage a vigorous fight that would include defense witnesses.

—Have his lawyers argue the case without witnesses.

—Decline to appear, knowing that a number of Republicans said they would not back impeachment on the House floor, and that polls show most Americans do not support Clinton's removal from office.

Clinton preceded his responses with a personal statement, asking for a "speedy and fair resolution" to the matter, which he said "long ago ceased to be primarily a legal or political issue and became instead a painful personal one."

"I never told (Oval Office secretary) Betty Currie to take possession of gifts I had given Ms. Lewinsky," the president said in response to one of the main allegations. He also insisted, "I did not tell Ms. Lewinsky to lie, and I did not tell anybody to lie about my relationship with Ms. Lewinsky."

Clinton's lawyer, David Kendall, wrote Hyde separately, emphasizing "the president did not commit or suborn perjury, tamper with witnesses, obstruct justice or abuse power."

Clinton was only vaguely able to remember important conversations with Ms. Lewinsky as they tried to conceal their relationship; discussions with friend Vernon Jordan on finding the former intern a job; and his talks with Mrs. Currie.

But the president insisted he told the truth in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case in January and in grand jury testimony in August. "That testimony was not false and misleading," he said.

Providing one new piece of information, Clinton acknowledged that political consultant Dick Morris volunteered to conduct a poll after news of the Lewinsky matter burst into public view last January.

"What I recall is that he said the public was most concerned about obstruction of justice or subornation of perjury," Clinton testified. But he said he did not recall a comment Morris attributed to him: "Well, we just have to win then."

Reaction from Judiciary Committee members reflected their political affiliations.

Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., accused Clinton of "using tortured legal reasoning and convenient memory lapses" while offering "no exculpatory evidence" to counter the allegations.

Rep. Martin Meehan, D-Mass., called the question-and-answer exercise "pointless," contending that "absolutely no one — not the Republicans, the Democrats and certainly not the public — expected him to change his story."

Rep. Asa Hutchinson, R-Ark., said the panel still is confronted with "conflict in testimony between the president and Monica Lewinsky, still denials of any false statements under oath."

GOP lawmaker says people want Social Security overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — After campaigning 1,700 miles around his state by bus and shaking hands with thousands of constituents, Sen.-elect Jim Bunning, R-Ky., said today he took away one resounding message from old and young alike: reform Social Security.

"The message from the elections of 1998 ... is that Social Security must be strengthened and reformed," Bunning said in the weekly Republican radio address. "We need to take it out of politics, stop the distortion and get down to work."

Bunning, who will enter the Senate in January after serving six terms in the House, accused the Democrats of playing politics with Social Security rather than putting aside money to save the system.

He cited a measure he introduced, which passed the GOP-led House in September, to set aside 90 percent of projected federal budget surpluses over the next 10 years to safeguard Social Security.

Bunning said the bill was intended to keep President Clinton to his promise to save the budget surplus for Social Security.

Unfortunately, he said, the president and Democrats "chose to play politics with it" and attacked the bill as an attempt to pay for a tax cut with part of the surplus.

But Bunning said lawmakers now have "a golden window of opportunity" to reform the system. He credited congressional Republicans with such accomplishments as overhauling welfare and saving Medicaid from bankruptcy and said they lay a foundation to address Social Security.

"Those successes of the Republican Congress have laid the essential groundwork for meaningful Social Security reform," Bunning said. "Now it's time to quit playing politics with this vital program."

President announces housing grants for handicapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost $130 million in new federal housing grants will help an estimated 17,000 people with disabilities find affordable rental housing, President Clinton said today.

The money from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, in the form of vouchers and certificates through local housing authorities in more than 200 communities, will help low-income people with disabilities avoid paying more than 30 percent of their income in rent.

"Americans should never have to choose between putting a meal on the table or putting a roof over their heads," the president said in his weekly radio address.

The difference between ordinary and extraordinary is that little extra.

The Festival of Trees at Hereford Senior Citizens Center had a record-breaking auction sale last week, with the annual event raising $36,550. The event was a huge success and we pass along congratulations to the association. The beautifully decorated trees were seen by thousands and raised the curtain on another exciting Yule season.

This event, along with others, really gets you in the Christmas spirit. The annual Christmas-in-the-Park celebration of lights is set for 7 p.m. Monday in Mother's Park at the intersection of Main Street and Park Avenue. Santa Claus will turn on the downtown holiday lights and the Pilot Club will serve hot chocolate at the event. The Christmas Lighting Contest, for homes and businesses, is also being conducted by the Women's Division of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The popular Christmas Tour of Homes is scheduled next Sunday by La Madre Mia Study Club from 1 to 4 p.m. The four featured homes should attract a large attendance, and it's a real bargain at just $5 a person. Homes on the tour are those of Herschel and Ruth Black, 143 Quince; Buster and Cynthia Miller, 230 Ranger; Dwayne and Cindy Cassels, 142 Pecan; and Mick and Tommie Stevens, 408 E. 5th.

And, a bonus for that Sunday is the open house at Deaf Smith County Museum, where demonstrations are set on wrapping gift packages and making bows. Entertainment and refreshments are also offered at the museum from 2 to 4 p.m.

"When people get tired of watching bumpers rust at the wrecking yard, they come to H&R Manufacturing for a tour," Herschel Black told me this week. We were at H&R for a dinner party, and the firm is gaily decorated for the holidays. I think I counted eight Christmas trees along with the other decorative items. The Golden K Kiwanis Club made a tour of the business last week, too.

A post-Thanksgiving thought:
Thursday was a day of fellowship with family and friends, relaxing, watching parades and football games on TV, and grooming about eating too much. None of these things are bad, but the day should have meant much more. We hope the "thanks" was not squeezed out of Thanksgiving Day.

The words spoke by President Abe Lincoln on Oct. 3, 1863, are a reminder of what the day should be:

"We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of heaven. We have grown in numbers, wealth and power as no other nation has ever grown.

"But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace, and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us, and we have vainly imagined in the deceitfulness of our hearts that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace - too proud to pray to God that made us.

"It has seem to me fit and proper that God should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American people.

"I do, therefore, invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, and also those at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of Thanksgiving and Praise to our benevolent Father who dwelleth in the Heavens."

Social Security overhaul touchy subject

Sis going to have to go first with a proposal to overhaul Social Security financing to keep the system in funds after 2032. But President Clinton isn't volunteering, nor are the Republicans, who insist that the White House should be in the lead.

So they'll wait until next year.

Clinton is convening a bipartisan conference on Social Security reform on Dec. 8 and 9, but his advisers say he won't be proposing terms for change and that those sessions shouldn't be expected to yield a solution.

The political problem is that whoever puts up specific terms probably will see them torn down by the opposition. Any solution is going to involve changes some people won't like, in a system that will pay benefits to about 44 million Americans this year.

"Now that the election is over," Clinton said when it was, "it is time to put politics aside ... above all ... to save Social Security for the 21st Century."

He'd made saving the system his alliterative slogan all campaign year, and said Democrats could best be trusted to do it. But whatever is done to keep the system from running out of money as the retirement roster soars in the new century will involve unpopular steps, perhaps another increase in the eligibility age and restraints on future cost of living increases.

Republicans learned the impact of the latter the hard way in 1986, after voting in the Senate to limit inflation-indexed benefit increases. President Ronald Reagan had recommended the cost-cutting step, but after the Republican Senate voted to do it, he surrendered to the Democratic House and dropped the proposal. Republicans lost control of the Senate in that year's elections, and their leaders said it was because of the Social Security issue.

The age for full retirement benefits already is going up, gradually, from the current 65 to 67 in 2025, under an earlier financing reform law. But the Social Security Advisory Board says only one in five Americans knows it, and polls show more than 70 percent oppose further increases.

The surveys also show broad public opposition to increasing taxes or curbing benefits but majority support for an option Republicans generally favor — permitting people to make their own retirement investments with some of the funds now paid into Social Security. The administration is wary, but Clinton has indicated he might agree to limited steps in that direction.

He might have to, if there is to be anything approaching the bipartisan "true national consensus" he said it will take to produce a solution.

He had said 1998 was the year to shape it, so that changes could be enacted in 1999. "For too long, politicians have called Social Security the third rail of American politics," Clinton had said. "That's Washington language for 'It's above serious debate.' But this year, we must prove them wrong."

That hasn't happened. Indeed, Clinton demonstrated the power of the issue when he made it the keynote of his 1998 State of the Union message, saying that every penny of projected budget surpluses should be reserved until there is a solution on Social Security.

"Save Social Security first," he said, in what became a campaign theme. And not only for Democrats. Republicans said the same thing, except that they argued they could do it and cut taxes at the same time.

That debate hasn't moved; their leaders still promise tax cuts and action to preserve Social Security, saying the nation can afford both. But Clinton hasn't budged on his insistence that surpluses be saved pending Social Security reform.

Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, asked the president for specific proposals on future financing. He said that is the best, and perhaps the only hope that the Republican Congress and Democratic administration can enact an overhaul. Senate GOP leaders want his proposal first, too.

But Clinton's chief White House advisor on the issue, Gene Sperling, said the president won't be rushed, that determining his best role is a strategic issue to be settled later.

"Without a specific plan from the president, this very difficult job will become much, much harder," Archer said in

Uncle Dale delivers piano

Uncle Dale didn't have a musical bone in his body. He loved music and tried to sing, but he couldn't carry a tune to save his life. Everyone knew Uncle Dale couldn't sing, even his wife, my mother's baby sister. I guess that's why my Aunt Missie dawdled so much on Sunday mornings, so the family would be late to church and he wouldn't try to sing in the choir.

"Dale can hit all around the note, but he just can't hit on it," Dad said. Dad fancied himself a crooner like Frank Sinatra and my mother used to tell she enjoyed hearing him sing, but she just didn't want to hurt his feelings. But even though he had finally come to realize he'd never been able to sing or play an instrument, Uncle Dale still loved music; he used to sit and tap his foot, always out of rhythm, when he heard one of Eddie Arnold's records on the big RCA radio against the wall next to his green easy chair. The radio had all kinds of lights and dials, making it look something like the jukebox at the Tastee Freez, and Uncle Dale said sometimes he could tune the dial just right and pick up one of the stations in Little Rock, the big station that played the music of Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington and the Dorsey Brothers orchestras. Uncle Dale dearly loved music, especially music played on a piano, and he wanted one of his children to learn how to play the piano; I guess he wanted to sit quietly in that old green easy chair, close his eyes and listen to the notes floating through the house.

His oldest child, David, had no musical inclinations, preferring to go to the spring-fed pond in the middle of a growth of tall sweetgums, oaks and elms and play Tarzan, swinging on grapevines high into the air and out over the pond, or going down the road to Kelsey Smith's house to watch the neighbor work on his battered, green John Deere tractor.

I went with David to swing on the grapevines, but when he decided to go down the road to watch Kelsey work on the tractor, I always headed back to the house to read a magazine or a book, or just to sit in the dirt under the pin oak towering over the driveway to the little white frame house with the porch running across the full width of the front. So, when the second child, Cathy, said she'd like to take music lessons, Uncle Dale couldn't contain himself, hugging his daughter, who probably had agreed to music lessons because she wanted to make her father happy. Uncle Dale found a man in town who was selling his daughter's piano. The two men haggled for several days before finally agreeing on $200 for the Baldwin upright piano. After sealing the deal with a handshake, Uncle Dale drove out to the farm house, where Cathy, now less enthusiastic about taking piano lessons, and I piled into the old 1951 Chevrolet and went to town to see the piano. Cathy seemed more interested in lessons when she saw the well-polished piano, which seemed to tower over her. She slid cautiously onto the bench and timidly touched the ivory keys, now yellowed with age. Dale smiled broadly when Cathy pressed a key, gently as if she were afraid it would break, and an almost-inaudible musical note sounded. "What do you think, honey? Do you like it?" Dale said, his voice booming in the small, dimly lit parlor.

As another birthday nears, think about what you've learned

The holiday season has arrived with all the glory and bright colors of a perfect autumn and with it comes the realization that in only a few short weeks I'll be another year older.

Mind you, I won't be as old as my children seem to think -- still under 40 -- but I'll still be a year older and, I hope, a year wiser.

Looking back over the years, I realize the importance of another year's wisdom.

I can remember as a 5-year-old child realizing that I had learned to listen for the popping of the electric fence before taking a chance of crawling under.

I think that was also the year I finally understood why my folks had told me to stay away from the sows with litters. I learned the hard way that old mama sows don't enjoy having little kids look at their piglets.

As I reached the ripe old age of 10, I learned other facts of wisdom that have stood me in good stead. Things like rocking chairs provide great comfort and solace in times of crisis and Band-Aids can't fix all the hurts in this old world, as much as we would like them to.

The next few years proved full of learning experiences. One of the most important was that "Beauty is as beauty does." Sometimes the most physically beautiful people are only beautiful skin deep, as I learned when I compared myself to a beauty and was told: "She may be beautiful, but she has a personality like a sick camel."

There aren't many animals uglier than a camel, and anyone who has ever seen one of the foul-tempered beasts can imagine the temperament of a sick one.

Along about that time, I learned that you have to stand for something, and you have to stand against all comers.

I know that was the first time I took a stance for the American Indian. I had always known my Indian heritage, but because of some required classwork I learned of some of the true mistreatments they endured at the hands of Anglos. I still stand against the atrocities done to my ancestors.

By the time I was 12, I had realized that life just isn't fair. Get over it. By my early teen years, I realized good guys don't always win, and people don't always get what they deserve.

In my later teen years, I thought I was old enough to try to live on my own and wanted to try it. It wasn't all it was cracked up to be.

At some point in the early days of my second decade, I determined I really didn't need my mom. Before I hit 30, I knew I would always need the lady.

Somewhere I learned the loyal dog who waits at the bus stop or at the back gate is always deserving of a kind word and a fond pat. Who knows when he may no longer be here.

I've also learned that some of the most seemingly uninteresting people have some hidden talents, which others may need to take advantage. And, the day after Thanksgiving is not the day to decide to clean out the refrigerator.

If I live as long as many of my ancestors, then I should have nearly another 50 years

Cathy nodded and slid off the bench. Uncle Dale pulled out his wallet and counted out four crisp $50 bills he had gotten earlier in the day at the bank.

The humidity and heat already had become oppressive the next morning when Dad and I drove down the gravel road to the white farmhouse, surrounded by tall oaks, where my Uncle Bo and his family lived with my grandparents. Uncle Bo, my mother's only brother, and Uncle Dale came out of the house and stood on the front porch when Dad pulled our old black 1949 Oldsmobile under the tallest of the oaks next to the silver butane tank.

Uncle Bo tossed the keys to his new 1953 Chevrolet pickup toward Uncle Dale, who raised his eyebrows as he caught the keys as carefully as if they were eggs.

"You do the driving, Dale," Uncle Bo said. He reached down, grabbed me under the arms and heaved me, like a sack of potatoes, into the truck bed. "We'll ride back here." Then he swung over the side and sat with his back against the cab.

When we got to town, the three men used one-inch by eight-inch planks to make a ramp from the front porch down to the driveway. They carefully maneuvered the piano down the planks and guided it to the rear of the pickup, which Uncle Dale had backed up to the driveway to get as close as possible to the house.

It took a lot of heaving, grunting and sweating, but they managed to push the piano up the planks into the back of the pickup, and Uncle Dale slammed the tailgate into place with a flourish. Then he and Uncle Bo dropped the two hooks into their slots to lock the tailgate into place and, joined by Dad, they leaned on the sides of the pickup and looked at the piano, now sitting proudly in the back of the truck.

"Did you bring some ropes to tie it down," Uncle Bo said as he wiped his brow.

"No, I thought you had some in the pickup," Uncle Dale said.

Uncle Bo shook his head. Dad looked closely at the piano and then leaned over the side of the bed and pursed his lips.

"I think we'll be just fine if you take it easy, Dale," he said. "The side panels are pretty high and if we don't get going too fast, it'll probably ride fine. What do you think, Bo?"

"Heck if I know. I'd sure feel a lot better if we had some rope to tie it down," he said and shrugged.

"Dan Futrell's place is four or five blocks from here. I bet he'd let us borrow some rope," Uncle Dale said.

"I think he's closed today. I heard he was going to Little Rock because his boy's running in the state track meet," Uncle Bo said.

"Well, I guess I'll just take it real easy. It's sitting pretty steady and there're not any really sharp curves between here and the house. Besides after we get off the highway and on our road, there's not going to be any traffic to worry about," Uncle Dale said.

Uncle Bo looked at the piano, his brow furrowed and shook his head.

Dad glanced at Uncle Bo, then he looked at the piano and said, "Dale, just take it real gentle and I think it'll make it. Just don't hit the brakes real hard or do anything that might get it to wiggling."

Uncle Bo hoisted himself into the pickup bed. I started to climb over the tailgate, but Dad stopped me.

"Get in the cab with Dale. If that piano should shift, you'd be smushed."

"I'll be fine. I can help Uncle Bo."

"No, I think it's better if you're in the cab. I'll be back here with Bo."

I looked at Uncle Bo and he grinned at me.

I didn't want to get in the cab, but I slid into the front seat next to Uncle Dale. As I looked through the rear window, I saw Dad climb stiffly over the side of the pickup. He and Uncle Bo took positions on either side of the piano, so they could keep it steady.

Uncle Dale started the engine and gently pushed the accelerator, carefully easing out the clutch to let the pickup move slowly down the driveway and into the street.

He couldn't have been doing more than 15 mph as he drove down Fourth Street toward the high school and Yaberry's Grocery, a small red brick building directly across the street from the campus. Uncle Dale kept his eye on the mirror, watching the piano, making sure it didn't shift.

As he approached the corner, he shifted to second and prepared to turn the corner. He looked in the mirror to see if he were turning in front of a car or truck whose driver wanted to go faster. Satisfied, he began to push the accelerator toward the floor to give the pickup a little more power because the road turned and went up a slight incline. The engine sputtered and he eased off the accelerator, then when the pickup began to move smoothly again, he resumed his acceleration. But this time, the accelerator's linkage stuck and when he pushed it down to give the engine more fuel, the pedal wouldn't go any farther. He tapped it, but the linkage remained stuck, so he tapped it more firmly. Nothing happened, so he tapped it much more firmly, and this time the linkage became unstuck, and the accelerator pedal suddenly went to the floorboard.

I heard shouts of surprise from Uncle Bo and Dad when the pickup suddenly lurched forward. I looked toward Uncle Dale and he had taken his foot off the accelerator and started swinging the steering wheel so he would make the turn and avoid hitting the car coming toward him on Fourth.

"Dale! We're losing it," Uncle Bo shouted.

Dale stomped on the brake, and I whirled to look through the cab's rear window just in time to see the piano take flight. The sun's rays glistened as the piano rose, almost majestically, and seemed to float up, up and out of the pickup bed. For a moment, it seemed to be suspended in mid-air, then it smashed onto the pavement, scattering pieces of polished ivory, wood and strings across the roadway and onto the parking area in front of the grocery store.

Both Uncle Bo and Dad stood in the bed of the pickup, their mouths gaping and their eyes wide as they watched the piano's flight to destruction. I looked at Dale, and his entire face seemed to have collapsed, and he slumped in the seat, his left hand resting on top of the steering wheel.

He rubbed his eyes with his right hand, took a deep breath, and said, "Well, s**t."

That was the first and only time I ever heard Uncle Dale swear.

He took his foot off the brake and allowed the pickup to coast to the side of the road. He sighed, switched off the ignition and sat, with both hands gripping the steering wheel, staring down the road as if he were thinking if he could back up the pieces of the piano might rejoin and it would float back into the pickup bed.

"Well, I guess we've got to get it out of the street," he said. Because he didn't look at me, I guess he just said something to keep from crying.

We got out of the pickup and walked slowly back to where Dad and Uncle Bo already had begun picking up the pieces of the piano, or what had just a few minutes earlier been a piano.

A few minutes later, all of the pieces had been tossed into the back of the pickup; Uncle Bo and I again sat in the bed, resting our backs against the cab; and Dad and Uncle Dale had gotten back in the cab.

"When you're hauling furniture, always make sure you bring some rope," Uncle Bo said and grinned. "Don't tell Dale, but that piano looked kind of beautiful floating through the air like that."

I didn't tell Uncle Dale what Uncle Bo said; I don't think he saw anything beautiful about his piano floating through the air.

No one ever talked much about the piano, not even three or four months later when Uncle Dale bought a used piano from a music store. This time he didn't worry about ropes or the piano floating through the air; the music store delivered.

—YOUR EYES—

PREGNANT?

Somewhere around the fifth month of pregnancy, you may suddenly find yourself straining your eyes to read something that you never had trouble reading before (such as the newspaper). Like so many other things during pregnancy, this has to do with hormones. Rather than rush out to have your eyes tested, do yourself a huge favor and just accept it. After you deliver, your eyes should return to normal.

If you wear contacts, you may also discover that they no longer fit correctly or that they feel comfortable. This is related to the fluid retention in your body and will also return to normal once you deliver. Consider switching in your body and will also return to normal once you deliver. Consider switching to glasses or soft contacts for the remainder of your pregnancy.

If you have other eye problems during pregnancy--such as blurring, floaters or double vision--let your doctor know right away.

Presidential hopefuls jockey for position

By Ron Fournier
The Associated Press

George W. Bush will meet Middle East leaders and maybe the pope. John Kasich will huddle with his advisers. John McCain, Dick Gephardt and several other like-minded Americans will have one final chat with their families. And then they'll decide whether or not to run for president.

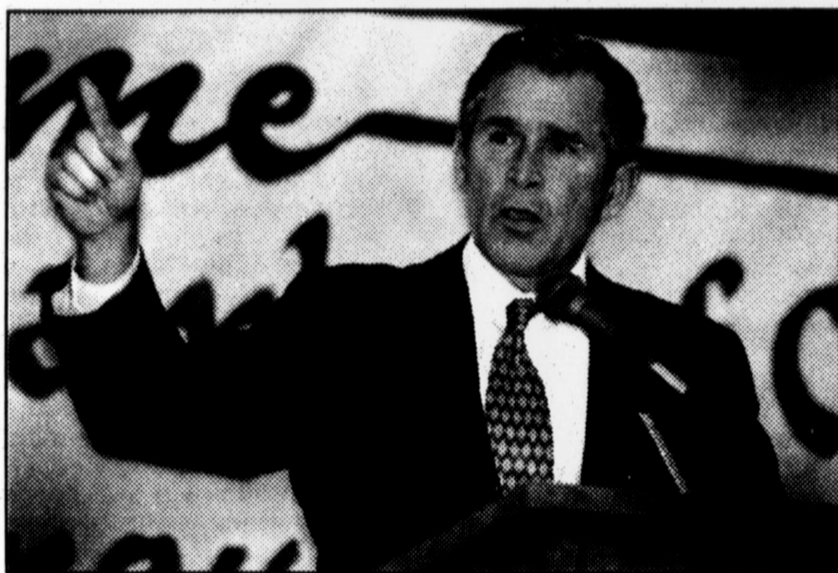

More than two dozen ambitious politicians are seriously considering presidential races, and most must make up their minds by the end of the year. There is visibility to raise, as well as the $20 million that many experts believe is needed to not to seek the nomination. His announcement, if he decides to run, would not come to June.

Bush will maintain a high profile while mulling his options. He travels overseas this month, where he will meet Israel Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and perhaps Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. A visit with the Pope John Paul II also is tentatively scheduled.

Though none of the appearances are expected to be public, advisers believe the trip will help broaden Bush's thin foreign policy portfolio in case he runs for president.

Bush will attend his brother's inauguration in January. Later in the month, he will deliver two major speeches to lay out his second-term themes and agenda. Bush plans to push a $2.7 billion tax cut with increases in education spending, a potential framework for a presidential campaign.

Other potential candidates are pondering the decision over the holidays.

Al Gore: The vice president is certain to run and hopes to minimize his opposition in Democratic primaries. He first must settle a battle among senior advisers Jack Quinn and Peter Knight, both of whom want to head the campaign.

Dick Gephardt: The House minority leader may be tempted to bypass a presidential race, hoping that Democrats pick up six seats in 2000 and make him House speaker.

Bill Bradley: The former New Jersey senator, a Democrat, just authored a book and is traveling the country. He won't decide until next month.

John Kerry: The Democratic senator from Massachusetts has decided to form a political action committee, which could be the first step toward a White House race. Supporters say he is leaning toward running against Gore. Kerry is not discouraging the speculation.

Bob Kerrey: The Democratic senator from Nebraska has raised $1 million for his 2000 re-election campaign, money that could be shifted to a presidential campaign.

Gore's standing was bolstered last week, when Attorney General Janet Reno decided against seeking a special prosecutor to investigate his actions during the campaign fund-raising inquiry. The Republican list is longer.

Lamar Alexander: The former Tennessee governor and Education secretary ran in 1996 and will run again. He will form an exploratory committee early next year so he can begin raising money that will later be matched by the government.

John Ashcroft: At least one supporter has suggested privately that the Missouri senator may yet opt out of the presidential sweepstakes to protect his Senate seat, which is being sought by the state's popular Democratic governor.

Gary Bauer: The little-known conservative activist has done surprisingly well raising money and is almost certain to run.

Steve Forbes: Like Alexander, the billionaire has been running for president since he lost the GOP nomination in 1996. His money scares the rest of the field.

Rudolph Giuliani: The New York mayor is traveling frequently, urging the party to be more moderate.

John Kasich: The House Budget Committee chairman thinks he would be a good candidate and president, but is concerned about the $20 million price tag.

John McCain: The Arizona senator and war hero will decide early. If he runs, he might be one of the first to announce. His press secretary says McCain is "currently in the process of talking to his family, his constituents in Arizona and to opinion-makers."

George Pataki: He is part of a long list of popular GOP governors, including Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin, who want to be president. They may have to wait to see if Bush fails.

Also considering bids

Lennon fans' request denied by department

NEW YORK — Strawberry Fields may be forever, but a vigil to John Lennon's memory has a curfew.

The city Parks Department says it has refused a request by his fans to extend a 1 a.m. Central Park curfew next month on the 18th anniversary of Lennon's murder.

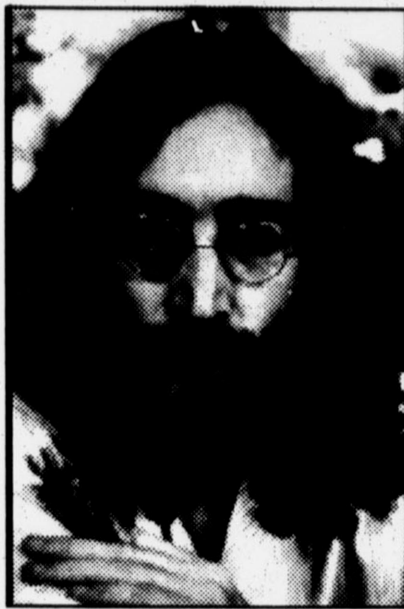

"We don't allow any events to go past one," said Parks Department spokesman Ed Sklyer. "If you make an exception there, you have to make an exception for everybody."

Fans gather annually on Dec. 8 for a vigil in a section of the park called Strawberry Fields to remember the 1980 slaying of Lennon by a deranged fan outside the nearby Dakota apartment building.

Fans gather shortly before 10:50 p.m. — the time Lennon was shot — and light candles, place photographs and sing and listen to the ex-Beatle's songs.

"They call it a vigil, but it's really more of a party," Sklyer said.

He said the crowd varies in size between a couple of dozen to more than 100.

University honors Olivia de Havilland

ST. ALBANS, England — Miss Melanie doesn't need to matriculate to get a degree.

Olivia de Havilland, 82, accepted an honorary doctorate Friday from the University of Hertfordshire at graduation ceremonies in the Abbey and Cathedral Church of St. Albans on Friday.

"You can't imagine how much it means to me to be here in this historic cathedral and to be receiving from the University of Hertfordshire the honorary degree of doctor of letters," she told 300 graduates who crowded into the church with family and friends. "For both the cathedral and the university are of special significance to my English family, and my English family is of special significance to me."

Her cousin, Sir Geoffrey de Havilland, founded the de Havilland aviation company, a predecessor of British Aerospace, and the university campus in nearby Hatfield was built on land formerly owned by the company.

"When I think of all the young people here who will shortly be receiving their degrees, I wish them three things — courage, work that they love and a passion for excellence," she said.

Even though she won her Academy Awards for "To Each His Own" (1946) and "The Heiress" (1949) and starred in such other notable films as "The Snake Pit," she will be forever remembered as Melanie in "Gone With The Wind." (She was nominated for the supporting actress Oscar but lost to co-star Hattie McDaniel, who played Mammy.)

'Puff Daddy' dishes up food to homeless

NEW YORK — Sean "Puff Daddy" Combs took time out from serving up hip-hop hits to treat more than 2,000 homeless people to Thanksgiving dinner in Harlem.

Dishing out turkey and all the trimmings in a gymnasium where he once played basketball as a child, the rapper and producer said the holiday was a time to remember those less fortunate.

"Being homeless is the worst thing in the world on a day like today," he said. "Hopefully, they won't be as lonely. They've got a family, and I am part of their family."

Fellow rapper Sister Souljah helped organize the dinner. "We're happy that we get a good crowd," she said. "But we're concerned about the state of affairs in the city."

McKellen: Theater won't die

NEW YORK — Ian McKellen can offer a ready rebuttal to the recurring obituaries written about the theater.

"Theater will never die, because what is special about theater as a form of storytelling is that it's on a human scale," says the 59-year-old actor best known for his classical stage performances. "It's not huge images on a massive screen, and images of people who are dead, or who certainly are not in the room with you. Actors on a stage ARE THERE. You're in the same space. That's why I don't like when the spaces get too big and the voices are coming through microphones."

McKellen, who's appearing onscreen these days in "Gods and Monsters" and "Apt Pupil," told The Associated Press that people will always want a more personal, intimate form

Combest names staffers for House ag committee

Special to The Brand

House Agriculture Committee chairman-designate Larry Combest, R-Texas, said Friday Alan Mackey, a Littlefield native with 27 years experience in administering federal farm programs, will be the programs/oversight specialist for the committee.

Mackey, the executive director of Lubbock County Farm Service Agency, will assist Combest and the Agriculture Committee in development of agricultural policy and review of U.S. Agriculture Department performance.

As incoming committee chairman, Combest has signaled his plans to improve the farm safety net. The new chairman plans an early review of the crop insurance program toward increasing producer participation through a revenue assurance program and enhanced coverage.

Additionally, Combest announced that three staff members with local roots will also work on the House Agriculture Committee during his tenure as chairman: Tom Sell as deputy staff director, Keith Williams as communications director, and Russell Laird as professional staff member. Sell, Williams, Laird and Mackey will take their positions with the House Agriculture Committee in early January.

Water district checking moisture of area soils

Special to The Brand

Personnel from the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 and United States Department of Agriculture-Natural Resources Conservation Service (USDA-NRCS) are now collecting data for the 1999 pre-plant soil moisture survey.

The annual survey is conducted to determine general pre-plant soil moisture availability and deficit trends within the 15-county High Plains Water District service area. Information gathered during the survey enables producers to conserve ground water by applying only what is needed to bring the five-foot root zone soil profile to field capacity during pre-plant irrigation.

There are areas within the Water District that are expected to have very good soil moisture conditions, according to Assistant Manager Ken Carver.

"The northern portions of Bailey, Lamb, Hale and Floyd Counties, as well as Castro, Farmer, Deaf Smith, Randall, Potter, and Armstrong Counties received heavy amounts of rainfall during the harvest season. The southern portions of Bailey, Lamb, Hale, and Floyd Counties, as well as Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, and Lynn Counties will likely show much drier conditions as they did not receive the above-average rainfall amounts," he said.

"Our region already contributes much in the way of agriculture production, and I am proud to be able to benefit from that heritage to shape better agricultural policy," Combest said.

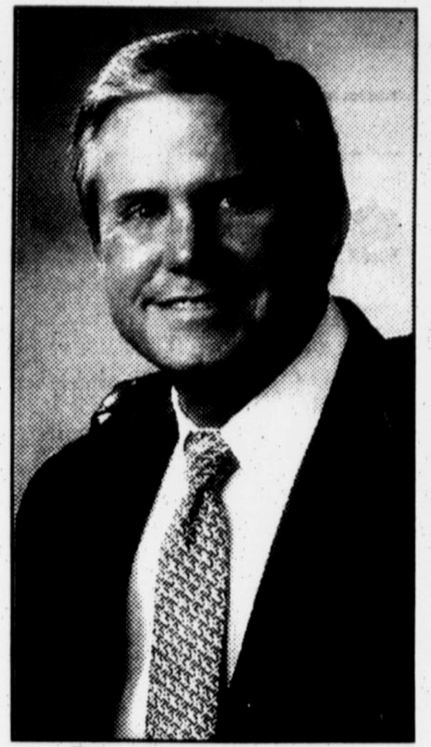

Mackey began working as a crop reporter for USDA in 1971 at age 16. Graduated in 1977 from Texas Tech University with a business management degree, Mackey served a year as USDA County Executive Director in Refugio County before being tapped as county executive director in April 1979 at Lubbock's USDA office of the Farm Service Agency (formerly Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, ASCS).

Sell, an Amarillo native, will serve as deputy staff director for the committee. Sell first came to Washington in January 1995 as a fall semester intern from Texas Tech University, then landed a follow-on stay for the summer with an internship on the House Agriculture Committee under then-chairman, Congressman Pat Roberts, R-Kansas. After completing his dual degree in business administration and agricultural economics in December 1995, Sell returned to Washington as Combest's legislative assistant for agriculture, trade and conservation issues.

Williams, a Lubbock resident, becomes the committee's communications director. Williams, former senior reporter and news anchor at KAMC-TV in Lubbock, received his 1980 journalism degree from Texas Tech University. Recipient of Associated Press and United Press International awards in Texas for his reporting, Williams was recognized as one of Texas' Best Reporters by the AP in 1986. He has been Combest's press secretary since 1989.

Idalou native Russell Laird is one of many professional staff members whose committee experience will be retained under Combest's chairmanship. Laird has most recently served as Combest's subcommittee staff director for agricultural credit, conservation and research. He began his work in Washington, D.C. as Combest's legislative assistant for agriculture in 1992. A 1992 graduate of Texas Tech University with a degree in agricultural economics, Laird served as Texas Tech student body president, and Texas Future Farmers of America state vice-president.

Stars blank Caps

DALLAS (AP)—A punishment practice on Thanksgiving Day only made the Dallas Stars work harder.

Coach Ken Hitchcock's holiday punishment detail Thursday netted the desired results as the Stars scored goals on their first two shots and went on to a 4-0 victory over the Washington Capitals on Friday night.

The Stars were criticized by Hitchcock on Wednesday after falling behind 3-0 in the first period of a 5-2 home loss to the New Jersey Devils. Dallas had been behind after the opening period in each of its previous two games.

"It was real important for us to play better early and get the lead," said Stars forward Jamie Langenbrunner, who had two assists. "It (the Thanksgiving practice) was a

Herd girls lose in semis

From staff reports

WOLFFORTH — Wolforth Frenship dropped Hereford 45-33 Friday evening in the girls semifinals of the Turkey Classic at the Tiger Pit.

Junior Valerie Guzman led the Lady Whitefaces with 12 points and Makesha Rives added six for Hereford. Liz Hubbard led the Lady Tigers with 13 points and Ameer Hillis added 11 for Frenship.

Frenship outscored the Lady Whitefaces 11-3 in the second quarter to take a 23-13 lead at halftime.

Hereford had advanced to the semifinals with a 48-47 win over Shallowater Friday morning. Tori Walker led Hereford with 15 points and Rives added 13 in the early game. Hereford got out to an 18-11 lead in a fast-paced first quarter, but the Lady Mustangs closed the margin to two points — 31-29 — at the end of two quarters.

The Lady Mustangs took a 40-36 lead into the final quarter before Hereford rallied in the final period to outscore the Lady Mustangs 12-7.

Nebraska holds off tenacious Buffaloes, 16-14

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Mike Rucker forced two second-half fumbles, including one that led to Kris Brown's third field goal, as No. 14 Nebraska beat Colorado 16-14 Friday.

Brown's 25-yard field goal with 8:48 to play was the difference, capping a 10-play, 49-yard drive that started for the Cornhuskers (9-3, 5-3 Big 12) when Rucker sacked Colorado quarterback Mike Moschetti.

With the Buffaloes (7-4, 4-4) facing third-and-22 at their own 35, Moschetti went back to throw. Rucker got a hand on Moschetti's throwing arm as the pocket collapsed, knocking the ball loose.

Jeremy Schletcha recovered for the Huskers at the Nebraska 43. Just under five minutes later, Brown's field goal helped Nebraska extend its streak of seasons with at least nine victories to 30 years.

Brown set an NCAA record with his 217th career extra point after Nebraska's only touchdown, a 42-yard interception return by Clint Finley in the first quarter.

Brown broke the NCAA record set by Derek Mahoney of Fresno State from 1990-93. On the same attempt, Brown also tied Mahoney's record for attempted PATs, at 222.

The Buffaloes got a last chance, starting at their own 9 after Bill LaFleur's 58-yard punt pinned them back deep.

But the drive didn't last long. Moschetti was sacked by Chad Kelsay for an 8-yard loss on second-and-7 at the 34, then threw two incompletions.

The first, apparently caught by Darrin Chiaverini near the first-down marker, was ruled incomplete after Jay Foreman knocked the ball loose and it bounced out of bounds.

The second incompleteness, on fourth-and-15 from the 26, hit Javon Green in the hands but he couldn't hold on.

Rucker and Kelsay, senior defensive ends playing their final game at Memorial Stadium, pressured Moschetti all day. Rucker had 11/2 sacks and seven tackles while Kelsay had one sack, six tackles and recovered a fumble.

Colorado's only lead came at 14-13 with 2:11 left in the third period. Moschetti rolled right and threw to tight end Andy Peeke, who went untouched 15 yards into the end zone.

That possession began after Nebraska quarterback Eric Crouch threw into the end zone for Sheldon Jackson but was intercepted by Ben Kelly. It was Kelly's fourth interception of the year and third in the end zone.

Rucker had set up that scoring opportunity when he sacked Moschetti, forcing a fumble that was recovered by Kelsay at the Colorado 18 with 9:47 left in the third.

It was the first sack of the year for Rucker, who had 15 1/2 sacks coming into this season. But the Huskers couldn't capitalize and the Buffaloes went ahead with a 13-play, 80-yard scoring drive.

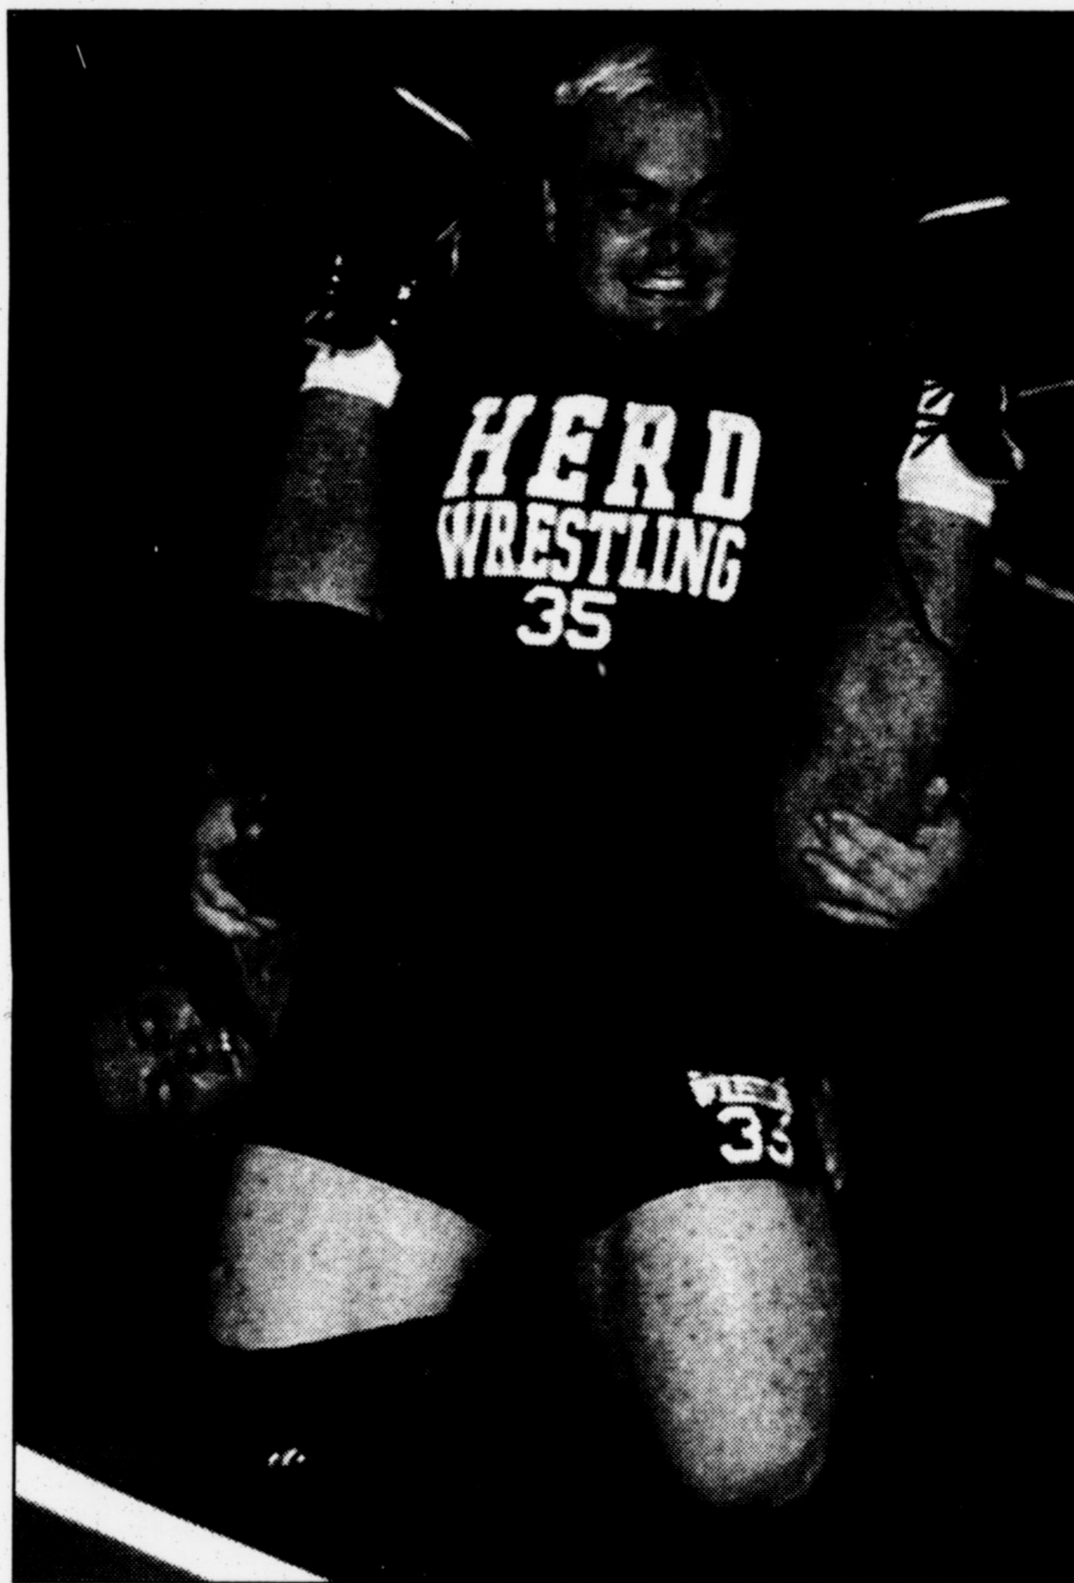

The Huskers led 10-7 at halftime after Brown made a 30-yard field goal as time expired in the half.

After Finley and Brown gave the Huskers a 7-0 lead, Moschetti answered for Colorado with a 17-yard TD pass to Green.

Marlon Barnes rushed for 102 yards on 25 carries for the Buffaloes but Colorado had only 112 rushing yards.

The Huskers also had a poor day running the ball, finishing with only 131 yards on the ground.

UT's Williams picks up 259 yards against Wrecking Crew to eclipse NCAA record

By Michael A. Lutz

AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Ricky Williams got to be the hero and almost the bad guy.

Williams became the NCAA Division I-A career rushing leader, but it took four field goals by Kris Stockton, the last with five seconds to play, and a fierce defense for Texas to beat No. 6 Texas A&M 26-24 Friday.

The loss snapped the Aggies' 10-game winning streak.

Williams entered the game with 6,020 yards, needing 63 to break Tony Dorsett's record of 6,082. He finished with 259 yards on 44 carries for a career total of 6,279. He broke the record on a 60-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

Williams also lost two fumbles that led to Aggies touchdowns, the second coming in the fourth quarter when the Aggies scored 17 points and took a 24-23 lead before Stockton kicked the game-winning field goal.

"I hope I'm considered one of the best," Williams said. "I'm just happy that I can make people proud of me, but I never thought when I was a freshman that things would turn out this way."

This season, Williams has rushed for 2,124 yards, the fifth-best total ever, behind Barry Sanders (2,628), Marcus

Wildcats top ASU, 50-42

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona junior tailback Trung Canidate ran for 288 yards in 18 carries, including touchdown runs of 80, 66 and 48 yards, as the No. 7 Wildcats held off Arizona State 50-42 on Friday night.

Arizona State's Ryan Kealy completed 33 of 56 passes for 511 yards. Four of his throws went for touchdowns, including two scoring tosses to Todd Heap.

Kealy threw a 17-yard TD pass to Heap on fourth-and-10 with 5:55 to play to cut the lead to 43-35 and a 23-yard scoring pass to Lenzie Jackson with 1:52 remaining to cut the lead to 50-42.

In between, Canidate dashed 48 yards down the right sideline to put the Wildcats ahead 50-35 with 4:02 remaining.

After Kealy's last TD pass, Arizona's Brad Brennan recovered ASU's onside kick attempt.

National title or not, K-State's Bishop already a winner

By Doug Tucker

AP Sports Writer

MANHATTAN, Kan. — When the goalline's in front of him and Michael Bishop is at his back — feet dancing, passing arm twitching — wide receiver Aaron Lockett sees fear in the eyes of defensive backs.

"If he runs the ball, they've got to come up quick and make the tackle," said Lockett, who hooked up with Bishop this season on a 97-yard pass play. "If he doesn't run, they've got to play pass coverage. They don't know what's going on."

"Next to Michael's arm, the best thing our passing game has going are Michael's legs."

It remains to be seen whether the multitalented senior quarterback can lead No. 2 Kansas State to its first national championship. A complex formula may yet exclude the Wildcats from the Fiesta Bowl.

And nobody knows whether Bishop can overcome a coach-ordered absence of hype and publicity and overtake the front-runners in the race for the Heisman Trophy.

But there is no question the 6-foot-1, 210-pound Texas native is a winner.

In two years at Blinn Junior College and nearly two full seasons at Kansas State, Bishop is 46-1 as a starting quarterback. Thanks to his open-field running, pinpoint passing and competitive fire, the Wildcats are 11-0 heading into next week's showdown with No. 6 Texas A&M in the Big 12 title game.

"Bishop is a heck of a player," Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons said. "He's probably the best in the country."

"Michael Bishop is a great quarterback," Missouri coach Larry Smith said.

Almost as volatile as he is gifted, Bishop sometimes seems to be winning and losing games all at once. In the first half against Nebraska two weeks ago, excitedly trying to avenge his only loss in college, he fumbled on three straight possessions.

But in between those fumbles, he amassed 111 yards on just two plays, a 50-yard run and a 61-yard pass.

Against Oklahoma State, he hit only 8 of 23 passes. But those 8 completions went for 287 yards and three touchdowns as the Wildcats soared 52-20.

"We're going to go wherever Michael leads us," tight end Justin Swift said.

"We believe in Michael."

He'll go into the Big 12 title game ranked 11th nationally in total offense with 286.4 yards per game. In 11 games this year, he's run for 647 yards and 13 touchdowns, and passed for 2,503 and 21. His 3,150 yards of total offense represent just one of 13 school records he's shattered in leading the Wildcats to their first unbeaten regular season in 103 years.

"He is the most significant quarterback in college football this year," Kansas coach Terry Allen said.

The son of Ethel and Artis Bishop grew up about 50 miles north of Houston and signed with Blinn because he

"He gets very upset if he loses at any video game. He's competitive in anything. If it's paper, scissors and rocks, he wants to win."

Williams, Bishop lead selections for '98 All-Big 12

DALLAS (AP) — University of Texas running back Ricky Williams headlines the third annual All-Big 12 Conference team, as selected by the league's coaches and released Friday.

Quarterback on the first team offense is Michael Bishop of Kansas State, who led the Wildcats to an 11-0 record going into the conference title game against Texas A&M.

Bishop, one of nine Kansas State players on the coaches' all-conference team, is the nation's seventh-most-efficient passer.

Paired with Williams in the starting backfield is Missouri senior Devin West.

The wide receivers are Darnell McDonald of Kansas State and Wane McGarity of Texas. The tight end is Derek Lewis of Texas.

The offensive line is comprised of Ryan Young of Kansas State, Rob Riti and Craig Heimburger of Missouri, Josh Heske of Nebraska and Jay Humphrey of Texas.

Missouri's Harold Piersey, who has four interceptions, leads a defensive backfield with true all-star credentials.

Kansas State starters Lamar Chapman and Jarrod Cooper combined to lead the Wildcats' pass defense to the No. 7 spot in NCAA pass efficiency defense.

Nebraska's Ralph Brown, a repeat member of the Coaches All-Big 12 first unit, was a key cog in the Huskers' defensive schemes throughout '98.

On the defensive interior line are Justin Wyatt of Missouri, Kelly Gregg of Oklahoma and Taurus Rucker of Texas Tech.

Defensive ends are Darren Howard of Kansas State and Montae Reagor of Texas Tech. Linebackers are Dat Nguyen of Texas A&M and Jeff Kelly of Kansas State. Defensive backs are Ralph Brown of

Record run brought smile to face of Horn's Williams

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — With a big run in a big game, Ricky Williams got the big record that had stood for more than two decades.

Williams became the leading rusher in Division I-A history Friday, breaking Tony Dorsett's 22-year-old mark in Texas' 26-24 victory over No. 6 Texas A&M.

He smashed the record with a dazzling 60-yard run in the first quarter.

"I had a smile after I broke that one tackle," Williams said. "I knew I had broken the record."

Williams, a favorite to join Dorsett as a Heisman Trophy winner, finished with 259 yards on 44 carries and 6,279 yards for his career. Dorsett rushed for 6,082 at Pittsburgh from 1973-76.

After the game, Texas fans chanted "Heisman" and a two-minute video chronicling Williams' years at Texas played on the stadium TV screen.

Texas officials presented the game ball and Williams' jersey to Dorsett and two other Heisman winners — John David Crow of Texas A&M and Earl Campbell of Texas. The jersey and the ball will be taken to the college football Hall of Fame in South Bend, Ind.

"It's special to me that those guys were on the sideline to watch me play," Williams said. "Hopefully I can be considered one of the best."

Williams came into the game needing 63 yards to break Dorsett's mark and shattered the record in dramatic fashion.

After gaining 52 yards on 13 carries, he took a handoff from quarterback Major Applewhite on first-and-10 from the Texas 40, broke a tackle by linebacker Warrick Holdman and ran down the left sideline.

He got help near the goal line when receiver Wane McGarity blocked Texas A&M's Brandon Jennings out of bounds. Williams carried defensive back Jason Webster into the end zone.

The touchdown gave Texas a 10-0 lead with 1:45 left in the quarter.

It was the longest scoring play against Texas A&M this season and typical Williams. A senior, Williams has 10 touchdown runs of 50 yards or Allen (2,342), Troy Davis (2,185) and Mike Rozier (2,148).

Stockton had field goals of 22, 24, 49 and the 24-yard game-winner after A&M rallied from a 23-7 deficit.

Williams got the rushing record early. After gaining 52 yards on his first 13 carries, he ended the suspense late in the first quarter with his big touchdown run.

"When it was time to crank it up against the No. 2 defense in the country, he did it and proved that he is the best player in the country," Texas coach Mack Brown said.

"He's one of the great backs and he had a good day," A&M linebacker Dat Nguyen said. "You give him any creases and he will take it. You can't give him the big plays, because he will break it back."

In winning, Texas (8-3, 6-2 in the Big 12) overcame a strong comeback by the Aggies.

Texas A&M (10-2, 7-1) scored 17 points in the final 8:29 and went ahead 24-23 with 2:20 left on a 1-yard touchdown run by Randy McCown.

The Longhorns started their winning drive with 2:12 left. The big gainer was Major Applewhite's 25-yard pass to Cavil to the Aggies 20. Applewhite completed seven passes in the march.

"That drive epitomizes what our offense has been the whole year," Applewhite said. "There was never a doubt that we would win the game. Our offense was poised and we just got it to a spot where Kris could win the game for us."

The Aggies began their rally from 16 points down on Russell Bynum's 30-yard field goal. McCown then hit tight end Derrick Spiller with a 17-yard touchdown pass with 7:39 to play on a short drive set up by Williams' second fumble.

Williams' first fumble came on his first carry after his record run. A&M's Cornelius Anthony recovered at the Texas 19, setting up McCown's 20-yard touchdown pass to Spiller with 14:48 left in the second quarter.

It took long enough, but steel shot is finally getting better

Improvement took a number of years, but the non-toxic shot that duck and goose hunters are required to use is far better today than the stuff they stoked their scatterguns with only a few years ago.

Loss of waterfowl to lead poisoning from ingesting spent lead shot that accumulated in wetlands after years of hunting was the driving factor behind regulations requiring use of non-toxic shot.

The Texas High Plains was one of the last areas to come under the requirement to use non-toxic shotshells in waterfowl hunting. Reasons included the relatively light hunting pressure here as compared to other regions of the country, the fact that ponds and marshes seldom exist year-around here, and that much waterfowl hunting is done in the fields, away from wetlands, so that any shot residue is routinely plowed under.

Steel shot requirements have been uniform and nation-wide for a number of years, now.

Back when we first had to begin using non-toxic shot, the steel loads that were available were absolute junk, to put it mildly. The steel pellets didn't hold patterns well. Being lighter than lead, the loads quickly lost velocity and didn't retain downrange energy at all. That meant blown patterns, puffed feathers, and cripples, despite what we were hearing from some industry quarters about the effectiveness of these loads. Performance of steel ammunition particularly went to pot in the face of the kind of stiff winds we commonly have on hunting days here in the Panhandle.

Because steel pellets didn't allow cramming a workable payload into many of the shotshell hulls that were available, 20 gauge loads were just too light to be workable at all. That was a big disappointment to me, as I had to shelve my favorite waterfowling piece, an 870 20 gauge, for a 12-bore 870 that

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

I have never been able to shoot nearly as well.

Apparently, the ammunition industry wasn't hearing just a few isolated complaints about the performance of the non-toxic offerings, because the "Big Three" manufacturers and some newcomers began working to improve steel loads.

Eventually, we got better burning powders, improved wad columns, and pellet sizes that would take ducks and geese down if we limited the range at which we took shots.

We all learned to use steel shot at least two sizes larger than the lead loads we formerly employed. Where you once used No. 2 shot in lead loadings to good effect on geese, you had to step-up to BB or even BBB steel loads.

The improvements have continued, including the introduction of bismuth shot and tungsten shot loads. These offerings closely emulate the lead loads that most waterfowlers grew up using.

Unfortunately, these high-tech alternative non-toxic loadings are astronomically expensive, although they greatly extend range and performance and give gunners a chance at snow geese that might otherwise be beyond range.

Better powders, wads, and hulls have also at last brought the 20 gauge offerings into the realm of reality once more. Last season, after an especially frustrating outing with my high-shooting 12 gauge, I resolved to try my full-choke 20 gauge and some steel loads on geese.

During a hunt over decoys in a boggy wheat field, I fed my 20 some three-inch, one-ounce payloads of Winchester shotshells filled with No. 2 steel. This was about the equivalent of the one-ounce loads of No. 4 lead that I first began using on waterfowl with my 20 gauge years ago. I knew that this was no long-range load, but should work within reason in the spread if we got the geese to decoy within range.

I was delighted with the performance of this combination. I managed a clean double on Canadas that flared at the edge of the spread at about the maximum range that I felt was reasonable to take the shots.

The 20-gauge and No. 2 steel combination was folding snow geese nicely again last weekend not only for myself, but for young Paten Landis, who was in the spread on his first goose hunt, and packing a 20-bore. His sister, Amanda, did a number on the snows with an 870 in 12 gauge. It was fun watching these kids take down their first geese cleanly with disciplined shooting, and ammunition that would do the job.

Now, if we can just do something about that deplorable downrange performance in high wind, we may have seen steel shot arrive as reasonably decent ammunition for use in the High Plains.

big wake-up call for us. We were embarrassed against New Jersey. We got beat up in our own building. We practiced hard and came back with one of our best team games of the season."

Mike Modano had two goals and an assist and Derian Hatcher scored twice for the Stars.

Hatcher particularly needed a better effort after being on the ice for the Devils' first three goals on Wednesday.

"Through the last two seasons, we've always bounced back from a bad game," said the Stars' captain. "We played a much better positional and defensive game tonight. You can't fall behind all the time and expect to catch up. You can't play like that all season."

Ed Belfour stopped 15 shots to register his first shutout of the season and 41st of his career. Belfour was taken out of the game on Wednesday after giving up three goals on the first five shots.

"Knowing Belfour, the way he played tonight didn't surprise me," Hitchcock said.

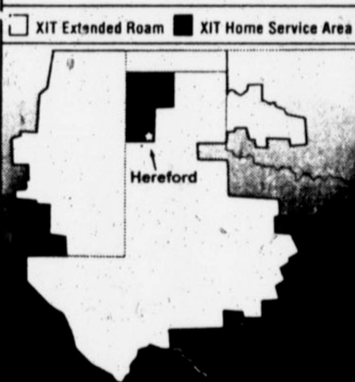

The Stars held their own late in the game when the frustrated Capitals initiated rough stuff that resulted in four fights and several other shoving matches.

"It was good for us," Hitchcock said. "We responded. That's been their (the Capitals') pattern, that when they get down, frustration sets in."

Richard Matvichuk also had two assists each for the Stars, 9-2-1 at home and 5-1-1 in their last seven games.

Washington is 1-3-0 in its last four games.

lacked the necessary high school core courses to meet NCAA requirements. That was good news for Blinn, which then won two straight national junior college championships.

Artis Bishop remembers how "tears would well up in his eyes" whenever Michael would lose in YMCA games as a kid.

His Kansas State teammates have seen those same tears of frustration in the grown-up Michael.

"He gets very upset if he loses at any video game," wide receiver Darnell McDonald said. "He's competitive in anything. If it's paper, scissors and rocks, he wants to win."

They'll never forget how he reacted last year when the powerful Cornhuskers pounded the Wildcats 56-26 and handed him his first loss since high school.

"Sometimes, I felt like some of our players gave up," Bishop said that day. "We can't have that."

"Michael almost went wild," running back Eric Hickson said. "He told us he was never going to lose again at K-State. We all listened and we believed him. He really became our leader that day."

But he also got in deep trouble. Coach Bill Snyder, horrified that one of his players would publicly say such things, immediately imposed his first media ban on his volatile quarterback. It lasted four weeks and included one embarrassing moment after a game when Snyder jerked him away from a live television interview.

Then Bishop was stricken from the interview list for six weeks this year when Snyder became upset by comments he made prior to the game against Colorado.

That was the last time most of the media heard from Bishop until Snyder apologized, relented and let him talk before last week's regular-season finale against Missouri.

But if the media ban and Snyder's disdain of preseason hype costs him the Heisman, Bishop insists he will not mind.

"The things Coach Snyder does, he does for a reason," he said. "He's not going to do anything that's going to hurt me or have a negative effect on me."

As for the Heisman? "If I had to vote, I would give my vote to (Texas running back Ricky Williams) because he's done a great job all year."

Financially strapped farmers choosing suicide over bankruptcy

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Some fatal farm accidents may be suicides in disguise as financially strapped farmers hope life insurance benefits will save their families' livelihood, agriculture officials and counselors say.

"I have received calls from people who are up against the wall financially and have explained in great detail how they are going to run themselves into a combine," said John Hansen, president of the Nebraska Farmers Union. "They have planned their own deaths and decided their families would be better off financially without them."

More farmers are considering killing themselves as they struggle to cope with low grain and livestock prices that make it difficult to continue farming, officials say. Many also are too proud to ask for help and often hide their problems from family and friends until it is too late, they say.

In South Dakota last year, at least six farmers committed suicide because of lost crops and other difficult conditions. Hansen said Friday he has heard of at least four possible farm suicides this year in Nebraska.

While farm-related suicides are difficult to track, officials said they closely will watch the number of farm fatalities listed as accidents.

"We are going to see more farm accidents that are not accidents," said Michelle Soll of Walthill, a farmer's wife who answers a Nebraska telephone hot line established during the 1980s farm crisis.

"They are not going to be obvious suicides because then the life insurance is no good."

According to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's farm safety research center, 21 farm fatalities were reported through the end of October for 1998. There were 23 farm deaths in all of last year and 20 in 1996.

Some farmers also try to end their lives in apparent car accidents, counselors said.

The number of telephone calls to the hot line that Mrs. Soll helps staff has more than doubled since July, including a sharp rise in callers talking of suicide.

The hot line, sponsored by Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska, has received four suicidal calls since August. It had received only two suicidal calls in the previous six years.

"Our call numbers shot up when people began to realize this summer that the farm prices were not going to come around," Mrs. Soll said.

Some of the callers are so upset they cannot speak or forget why they called in the first place, she said. A few can only weep.

"Some say 'I could make a lot more for my wife if she had my life insurance instead of me,'" Mrs. Soll said. "I have to keep reminding them that that is not for a long-term solution."

Counselors fear more farmers will contemplate suicide in the coming months as their farm loans are denied renewal because of the poor year.

"I think we're headed for real trouble," said Hansen, who farms near Newman Grove. "I don't think many people outside the farm community realize that."

Because of the poor farm economy, the Nebraska state government last summer established a hot line to counsel farmers suffering from depression and other forms of stress.

The best way to prevent farm suicides is to get the word out about counseling hot lines and places where farmers can go for help, officials said.

"I think the hot lines are critical," said Norma Hall, whose husband farms in Cass County, Neb. "It's important that farmers have a place they can go. It may not stop the suicides, but it may bring emotional relief to some or to their families."

EPA, hog farmers reduce fines with voluntary inspection deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hog farmers can avoid costly federal fines under a deal with the Environmental Protection Agency that allows the industry to conduct voluntary independent inspections.

The deal between the EPA and the National Pork Producers Council is the first of its kind between federal environmental regulators and a major section of agriculture.

Under the agreement, pork producers who have their farms inspected under the NPPC's EPA-approved odor and water quality assessment program will be eligible for reduced penalties for any Clean Water Act violations discovered and corrected.

Before the agreement, farmers could be fined up to $27,000 a day for violations. Under the new system, participating farmers will get a flat fine of no more than $40,000.

"This program is an example of government and industry working together to find common-sense solutions to protect public health and the environment," said EPA Administrator Carol Browner. NPPC President Donna Reifschneider called the deal a "win-win for the environment and producers."

"Problems that would have otherwise gone unnoticed will be corrected, while farmers will have strong incentives for participating," Reifschneider said. "The public will also have a better understanding of our commitment to protecting the environment."

The NPPC is paying for the program with checkoff fees that hog farmers contribute.

The deal comes at a time when hog farms, particularly large operations, have been under fire in some parts of the country.

In the November election, Colorado voters overwhelmingly approved the monitoring of large hog lots to ensure they meet stringent environmental standards. South Dakota voters approved a constitutional amendment allowing only family-controlled farms to operate in the state.

The EPA and the NPPC have been discussing environmental standards for hog farms since last year, along with state regulators and the U.S. Agriculture Department.

The NPPC has established a team of farm inspectors, also approved by the EPA. The team members include public employees, engineers, university faculty and private consultants.

Officials hope to see more than 12,000 farms participate in the program over the next three years.

The nation's hog farms are concentrated mostly in Iowa, followed by North Carolina, Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Ohio.

Pecan shortage causes price increase

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — At Pape's Pecan Co., growers arrive eager to sell their harvest. Workers load big red mesh bags of nuts onto delivery trucks. Shoppers browse through a gift store stocked with sweets.

It's as busy as it usually is before Thanksgiving.

Owner Kenneth Pape and his employees have worked extra hard to ensure a good supply of pecans after the summer's punishing drought and October's destructive flooding.

"We were harvesting my orchard when the flood hit," said Pape, a third-generation grower who lost equipment and pecans to fast-rising water in Seguin.

Other producers endured similar damage.

"There was significant loss from the flooding," said Cindy Loggins Wise, executive vice president of the Texas Pecan Growers Association, a Bryan-based industry group.

The worst losses occurred near the Guadalupe River around Seguin and Cuero, Ms. Wise said, though she noted pecan orchards were damaged in the San Antonio and Colorado river basins. Major pecan-producing areas around El Paso and San Saba weren't affected by the floods.

Fortunately for consumers, there should be plenty of pecans for holiday candies, cakes and pies, producers say.

Nuts remaining from the large 1997 harvest in Texas have been in cold storage, and some distributors buy from out of state and Mexico to supplement their supplies.

Retail prices may be slightly higher, Pape said.

A pound of shelled pecan meat in a retail store typically cost customers $4.50 to $5 last year. That price likely will range from $5 to $6 this year, according to Pape.

Pecans are alternate-bearing trees, meaning they produce large numbers of nuts every other year.

In an average year about 60 million pounds of pecans are harvested in Texas, the second-largest pecan-producing state behind Georgia. Texas harvested 90 million pounds in a bumper crop last year.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture had forecast 40 million pounds this year in Texas. Total figures aren't available, but the harvest may be only about 35 million pounds, Ms. Wise said.

Before the flooding in South Texas, weeks of dry, 100-degree weather took a toll on pecans.

"We have seen some very strange quality problems this year that people are attributing to the stress on the trees," Ms. Wise said.

Some pecans contracted a shuck disease causing husks surrounding the nuts to open prematurely. Some kernels did not fill out well. Some pecans experienced "pre-germination," or sprouting while on the trees.

A dry summer also affected pecans in Georgia, where the harvest is expected to be 60 million pounds, a 45 percent reduction from last year.

Nuts that are being harvested are of lower quality, said Tom Crocker, an Extension Service horticulturist with the University of Georgia.

"The nuts just didn't mature like we thought they would," Crocker said. "We'd hoped the rain from Hurricane Earl would help fill out the nuts. But it ended up just knocking a lot of them off the trees and even tearing off limbs."

In Texas, October floodwaters swept away bags of pecans and deposited several inches of silt in some orchards. A number of producers lost harvest equipment. Others are afraid to harvest because of possible contamination by flood debris, Ms. Wise said.

Dear Editor:
Northwest Elementary School got off to a leaky start this school year. The school, in the process of a roofing improvement project, suffered severe damage from recent rain storms. In order to make the necessary repairs to the classrooms, the students and staff were moved to the HISD administration building. We've returned to our school building, and we are gearing up for a great year.
We would like to thank our parents for their patience and support. As educators, we feel it is important to provide a safe and secure learning environment for the students. We would like you to see our school building; more importantly, we would like you to see the great things your children are doing at school.
We would like to thank the HISD administration building and the many campuses who provided the delicious food and beautiful flower arrangements. A special thanks to Bluebonnet School students for reading books to our K-5 and first-grade classes. The teachers and students enjoyed it.
We would like to thank the First General Services crew for their hard work. The crew worked diligently to repair our school. The crew worked to repair damaged classrooms, and were willing to help the teachers in any way they could.

And, maybe if I'm extremely lucky, I'll be able to just let things go. Know when to hang on, and know when the fight is up for through it all the best we can hope for is peace.

Search continuing for escapee from Texas' death row

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of officers used tracking dogs and helicopters Friday to search the woods for a murderer who made the first escape from Texas' death row since a member of the Bonnie & Clyde gang broke out in 1934.
Six other death row inmates fell to the ground and surrendered when a guard spotted them jumping from a roof inside the prison complex and fired 18 to 20 shots, prison spokesman Larry Fitzgerald said.
But Martin E. Gurule cleared two razor-wire-topped perimeter fences and avoided bullets to escape, officials said.
"We do not know if we hit him," Fitzgerald said. No blood was found, either from a gunshot wound or from injuries that might have been inflicted by the razor wire, he said.
Gurule, 29, killed the owner and a cook at a Corpus Christi restaurant during a robbery in 1992.

Forecasts of the Famous
Some are gloomy about the next millenium

By Mike Feinsilber
The Associated Press
Former baseball manager Earl Weaver foresees pennants for the long-suffering Boston Red Sox and the Chicago Cubs before 2500. Calorie counter Jenny Craig sees "a way to control fat storage on our bodies." Writer Joseph Wambaugh bleakly expects the total eclipse of the printed word from the face of the earth.
Give people who are important or famous — or almost in that league — a postcard, an invitation to write a brief prediction for the next millennium and listen for the sound of soap boxes being mounted.
But be on the lookout for an outpouring of pessimism.
Get out your handkerchiefs: seems to be the message of a number of the 650 people from 80 nations who wrote a forecast for the world as it'll be in the years 2001 to 3000.
"Concerning the improvement of the human species so that war or other criminal behavior is no longer possible, I have not much hope," wrote author James A. Michener, who died in October 1997.

"Devastating new viruses and diseases," predicts futuristic novelist Peter Straub. He also forecasts "environmental disasters; bloody racial and religious conflicts and many other poisonous inheritances from the present century."
"Yet," he adds, with a dash of hope, "I cannot believe that a humane, liberal spirit and mankind's irrepressible inventiveness will not prevail and endure."
These thoughts come from "people of accomplishment" who were sent a blank United Nations postcard and asked to fill it with their vision of the future.
The mailing of 6,000 postcards was orchestrated by David Kristof, 32, and Todd Nickerson, 30, colleagues at the high-tech firm of Lucent Technologies. Kristof says the recipients included "anyone who ever won a Nobel or ran a government."

To their surprise, 650 messages came back. They've culled them to about 250 and compiled them in a book, "Predictions for the Next Millennium." They hope to display all the replies for Empire State Building visitors waiting to ride to the top.
The enterprise was not without challenges. "Many hours were spent analyzing the handwriting," says Nickerson. The toughest to decode was actor John Gielgud. Finally, the authors photographed his card, enlarged it, posted it on a wall and solicited aid in deciphering it.
It turned out to be more prayer than prediction: "As troubles seem to continue to assail us from every part of the world, may I pray that in the new millennium we may hope that a more peaceful solution may be found to make the future less fraught with dangers and tribulations."
A number of predictors saw mankind treading beyond

Earth. Newt Gingrich, the departing speaker of the House, foresees Moon and Mars colonies by 2100, departures from the solar system by 2200, settlement beyond the galaxy by 2500. Ex-Moon walker Harrison Schmitt expects "the movement of humans into the vast reaches of the Milky Way Galaxy."
Novelist Gore Vidal anticipates "sending colonies to rocks not designed for us," but astronomer physicist James Van Allen said he doesn't anticipate human space flight to become commonplace.
Beyond all that uplifting talk, many are downbeat. Author Wambaugh predicts that not only will the printed word vanish but "with it the act of sober reflection." This, he says, "bodes ominous."
But none exceeds American artist Paul Cadmus for bleakness.
"I foresee nothing but increasing deterioration in the world," he writes. "Everything worsens: overpopulation thrives insanely."

Rocks of Ages

Providing music—The brother/sister team of J.B. Noland and Eva Lookingbill have been leading the music at Summerfield Baptist Church for more years than either one is willing to count. The church recognized them recently with a special homecoming service and certificates of appreciation.

Brother/sister duo perform weekly at Baptist Church

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

In an atmosphere that is unique to rural churches, the congregation turns to the page number announced by the song leader and the pianist plays the introduction to the first hymn of the morning.

This scene has been enacted Sunday after Sunday for the better part of 50 years at Summerfield Baptist Church with the same players — J.B. Noland as song leader and his sister, Eva Lookingbill, as pianist.

Summerfield Baptist Church was already 15 years old when the Noland family arrived in Summerfield in 1917. They have been involved with the little rural church since that time.

Even though Mrs. Lookingbill was busy helping take care of her six younger brothers and sister while her mother helped in the fields, she had time for piano lessons, "but I didn't take as many as I should," she said.

Noland was helping in the fields, along with his mother, farming with teams, until 1929.

"Our dad couldn't sing a note but he wanted us kids to learn to sing so we went to singing schools. Back in those days we had two uncles who taught some of those schools and we learned from shaped notes," Noland said.

The brother and sister remembered not only singing schools, but singing conventions with "dinner on the grounds" that the whole family attended because "that was all there was to do to. A lot different than now," Mrs. Lookingbill said.

Summerfield Baptist Church has always been a rural church, but not always a small church.

"We had 100 kids in Sunday school in those days. One family would have more in church than our whole congregation now," Noland said.

Mrs. Lookingbill said she is only the pianist now because "there is not anybody else to do it. Or to take J.B.'s place either."

"It's just an accident that we are doing this together," Noland said.

The duo was honored with a special homecoming service on Sept. 27 and presented with framed certificates of appreciation.

Neither would say exactly how long they have acted as song leader or pianist for the church but Noland admits he has been leading singing off and on since he was 7 years old.

Mrs. Lookingbill was Summerfield postmaster for 44 years, retiring in 1972. She played for the church "just sometimes" before retiring. And in response to the question about how many years she has played continuously for the church, she said, "I can't say. I don't know."

While their dad apparently had no musical talent, their mother did.

"Our mother sure could sing. She sang alto," Mrs. Lookingbill said.

"Her family was all musical, except one. They had their own string band, even played at dances," Noland added.

He has utilized his singing ability in other ways through the years.

"I was part of two or three quartets through the years, one in Summerfield and one in Hereford with Homer Garrison, and Cecil and Eunice Boyer called the 'Golden Age Quartet.' We sang for nursing homes for about eight years," he said.

"He is good, even if he is my brother," Mrs. Lookingbill volunteered.

Noland has one other local claim to fame. He was the first drum major for the Hereford High School Band under the direction of Ralph Smith Sr. in 1932.

Both Noland and Mrs. Lookingbill have lived in the Summerfield area since their family settled there.

"I've lived here in this place, within a mile, ever since we moved here in 1917, all but for three months of my life. That was because there wasn't an empty house in town and we had to live in the country for three months," Mrs. Lookingbill said.

The entire Summerfield community, especially Summerfield Baptist Church, has benefitted from the loyal presence of these two pioneers.

Paper bag village is holiday fun

Sleigh bells ring in a fantasy winter wonderland! With paper lunch bags, crumpled newspaper, cardboard milk cartons, an old white sheet, odds and ends from craft projects, some twigs, berries and a splash or two of glitter, you can create a landscape to skim through on the sleigh of your dreams.

First, lay out the space where your town will nestle by tossing the sheet onto the floor, or bunch it up in a corner so its swirling folds conjure up country roads and village lanes along which you can lay your houses, inns and shops.

Note: Arrange scene on a table or shelf out of reach of children under age 4 and pets.

TO MAKE BUILDINGS: Stuff lunch bags and small gift bags with crumpled newspaper almost to the top. Cut a piece of cardboard from a cereal box the same size as the base of the bag. Set on top of the newspaper. Fold top of bag over cardboard and tape like a package.

Cover small milk and cream cartons with colored adhesive-backed paper or paint with poster paints.

Decorate the bags and cartons to resemble charming buildings. Dab a small sponge in red paint to print tiny bricks for facades. Cut out magazine pictures and glue to the bags for details. Personalize your town by clipping the face of each family member from extra photos and place them so they peer out of windows or wave from doors at passersby.

ARRANGE THE TOWN: Be city planners and set the buildings in place. Add your child's small toy vehicles and people. Plunk a small Christmas cactus in the middle of the park. The tip of a pine bough may become a tree. Or you can march a few tiny branches laden with small berries up the hillside behind the town. Sprinkle coconut, glitter and artificial snow over all, as if it had fallen the night before.

When complete, lie down on the floor as a family, so you're at eye level with your creation. Take it all in. Silent, peaceful Christmas night!

HJH Roundup

By Carolyn Waters

"Even if something is left undone, everyone must take time to sit still and watch the leaves turn." - Elizabeth Lawrence

Talk about fun! Drag racing in the halls of HJH is fun to watch and is even more fun if you're involved in the actual race! Mr. Nall's Power and Energy class members are designing and constructing dragsters made of bass wood. The students design their own dragster for best air flow and speed. The dragsters are powered by a single CO<sup>2</sup> cartridge and will travel 60 feet in less than one second. A 60-foot track is set up and the students race against one another to see the results of their work, while they learn about the importance of weight and aerodynamics.

HJH Student Council sent representatives to a district workshop recently. They met with council members from other schools and shared ideas. Those attending the meeting were Sarah Griffen, Cagney Cantu, Heather Calkins, Jesse Rangel, Tiffany Mercer, Catherine Beville, Sabrina Garcia, Richard Rieves, Tiffany Smith, Shantel DelGado, Amber Scott and Yvonne Garcia.

Eighth grade students are studying early colonialism and have become acquainted with Benjamin Franklin and his many contributions to our nation. Hopefully they will adapt some of his philosophy to their own lives - especially his ideas about constant self-improvement and to never stop learning. Students are beginning to see how history of the past can be real and be used today.

Athletic group pictures will be taken on Wednesday during athletic periods.

PRIDE Certified recognition will be held during fourth period on Thursday.

Girls basketball teams will be involved in a basketball tournament Thursday through Saturday. This will be a good opportunity to see some good games and to get involved in the HJH athletic program.

"Problems in life are very real, but they can be mastered, and they can transform you in a positive way. Problems are opportunities, but seizing these opportunities takes work, takes compassion, takes time." - from "Saint Maybe"

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: At this time of year, thousands (maybe millions) of people are busy preparing those ghastly Christmas letters. Nothing will deter them. They will send those messages come hell or high water, so will you kindly print a timely message for THEM?

Dear Friends and Family Members: Please show a little consideration for those who are having a tough time making ends meet. Many of us are tapped out and cannot afford to take fabulous trips. Your glowing travelogue of the glories of Venice and the grandeur of Rome are a bit too much.

Please do not tell us about your new $700,000 home or the Lexus your husband had parked in the driveway as a "surprise." We just had our 1992 Chevy fixed up and hope it makes it through the winter.

Spare us the details of the Ivy League schools your children are attending and the honors and awards they have received during the year. Our kids are just average, and we hope they will graduate from the local community college. Just let us know in a handwritten note that your family is well and doing something useful. - Your Cousins in Illinois

Dear Cousins: Thank you for expressing sentiments that are sure to be shared (and appreciated) by millions of readers. Including me.

Dear Ann Landers: Normal-size people do not realize the humiliation and insults overweight people must endure. And we are expected to be "jolly" about it. If we don't laugh along with them when they insult us with their jokes, we are considered poor sports.

Not long ago, you printed a letter from a woman who said her overweight daughter-in-law had broken one of her good, but fragile, chairs. You advised her to steer the relative to something sturdier next time. Because I am extremely overweight, I try to make sure I sit in chairs that will hold me. Last summer, I stood all evening at a lawn party because there were only aluminum chairs, which I did not trust to support my weight.

I did, however, break a rocking chair in my daughter's home recently, and this is what I am writing about. I called my homeowner's insurance company the next day. They contacted my daughter and promptly sent her $500 to replace the chair.

Most people don't know their homeowner's policy covers damage or breakage by members of the family. I'm sure the insurance companies won't be happy to read this in your column, but the consumers will. - Anonymous in Prospect Park, Pa.

Dear P.P., Pa.: I don't agree that the insurance companies won't be happy to see your letter in my column. It is a testament to the bona fide benefits of having insurance. You've given them a splendid endorsement, and they paid you nothing for it.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help my husband and me resolve a problem without alienating two close members of our family.

We are in our 80s and no longer entertain at home. We often invite these family members to join us for dinner in a restaurant. We aren't cheap, but it annoys us when they order the most expensive things on the menu. There is no way we can stop inviting them to dine with us, nor would we want to, but how can we keep the bill within reasonable limits? - New York Dilemma

Dear New York: As the hosts, it is perfectly proper for you to order for the table. Ask their preference - fish, chicken or chopped beef. For dessert, ask, "Would you like sherbet or pie?" That should do it.

Gem of the Day: The early bird may get the worm, but the second mouse is the one that gets the cheese.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Book selections make luxurious reading

By The Associated Press
Skip the how-to and practical advice books for now and make gift selections for a luxurious read:

— A history of the world can be gleaned from passages in the Bible, and the Bible has inspired some of the greatest art in the world. A confluence of art, history and the Bible is celebrated in "From Eden to Armageddon" (Shadow Mountain, $39.95), selected by Denny L. Brown. The choices include Thomas Cole's landscape, "The Subsiding of the Waters of the Deluge," Rembrandt's "Supper at Emmaus," DaVinci's "Last Supper," and Michelangelo's "The Sacrifice of Noah." The relevant passages accompany each picture.

— How many Sarahs, Eves, Rachels, Ruths, Rebeccas, or Hannahs do you know? They're common names passed down from uncommon women recorded in the Old Testament. Author Miki Raver brings them to life in "Listen to Her Voice: Women of the Hebrew Bible" (Chronicle Books, $27.50 hardcover). Passages from the Bible about each of 18 women are extracted, followed by the author's analysis and history.

— As you savor your glass of red, consider that it took millions of years for the soils, or terroirs, of the Bordeaux region of France to evolve into the distinctive mix in which to grow the grapes that make the wine taste as it does. "Bordeaux" (Abbeville Press, $75 hardcover), by Michel Dovaz, traces the history and the processes that still produce some of the world's most treasured wines. Photographs are by Michel Guillard.

— The war with the American colonies wasn't the only rebellious challenge faced by the British in the late 18th century. "The Year of Liberty: the Great Irish Rebellion of 1798" (Times Books, $35 hardcover), by Thomas Pakenham, recounts how Irish revolutionaries and the British government both miscalculated, resulting in one of the most violent and disastrous events in the history of Ireland.

— Worrying about the Y2K problem is probably symptomatic of the human animal. "For thousands of years the effort to measure time and to create a workable calendar was one of the great struggles of humanity," writes David Ewing Duncan in "Calendar: Humanity's Epic Struggle to Determine a True and Accurate Year" (Avon Books, $23 hardcover). Everybody had to find a method to count the days until the harvest, to calculate when taxes were due, or the exact moment to make a sacrifice to appease an angry god. The author covers the effort from pre-history to the Internet culture.

— The lines outside movie houses for summer disaster films suggest people are fascinated by what's awful and awe-inspiring. "Devastation! The World's Worst Natural Disasters" (DK Publishing, $24.95 hardcover), by Lesley Newson, lets the reader leisurely contemplate floods, earthquakes, volcano eruptions, tornadoes, pestilence and disease.

— "Chasing Rickshaws" (Lonely Planet, $34.95 hardcover), by Tony Wheeler with photographs by Richard Anson, offers a look at that still-favored mode of Asian transportation. This is the travel publisher's first large format gift book.

— "Eye of the Beholder: The Photography of James L. Stanfield" (National Geographic, $40 hardcover) is a selection from 30 years of images made by the National Geographic photographer. They range from a picture of a tough, begrimmed woman coal miner at home in West Virginia with her teen-age daughter, dressed in wedding whites, to one showing a Tunisian shepherd braving a sandstorm.

— A collection of black-and-white abstract photographs by Claire Yaffa is presented in "Light & Shadow" (Aperture, $25 hardcover), accompanied by poetry by Jeffery Beam and a foreword by Gordon Parks.

— "Yellowstone" (Firefly, $24.95 paperback), by Norbert Rosing, is a pictorial appreciation of the first and favorite U.S. National Park.

— Before there was a Mark McGwire, there were Reggie Jackson, Lou Brock, Ken Griffey Sr., Henry Aaron, Mike

Schmidt and hundreds of other memorable players of the game played between the bases. "Reflections of the Game: Lives in Baseball" (Willow Creek Press, $29.50) is an affectionate look at the sport through the lens of Ronald C. Modra of Sports Illustrated.

— New York has a special place in the hearts of sports fans, as Mayor Giuliani might tell you. In "East Side, West Side: Tales of New York Sporting Life" (Total Sports, $34.95 hardcover), Lawrence S. Ritter remembers not only Ebbetts Field and the original Yankee Stadium but places like the Bronx Velodrome and Olympic Field in Harlem — and those who made them important, like Smokey Joe Williams of the old Negro League and heavyweight champion Max Baer.

— You won't find any gossip tidbits here, but in some ways it's a more humanly revealing picture of the former First Lady. "Cooking for Madam: Recipes and Reminiscences from the Home of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis" (Scribner, $30 hardcover), by former nanny and cook Marta Sgubin, offers charming vignettes about family celebrations along with favorite reci-

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have an icemaker that is about 15 years old. In the past, when the ice tray would retain shards of ice and begin to overflow and cause all sorts of problems, I would remove the tray and find roughness in the bottom of the cups. Not realizing what it really was, I bought a new tray. This happened again several years later and I bought another new tray. Well, the third time, I checked it out a little deeper. It was not indentations in the plastic but deposits! Lime deposits!

So, out came the trusty vinegar, a 10-minute soak and, voila, no new tray purchase necessary. It's making ice now, just like it used to.

Thought maybe someone else living in a limestone area with an icemaker would like to know what to do. Saved me a trip to the repair shop on Labor Day. — J.B.B., Huntsville, Ala.

Well, this just may be worth a try, and it sure beats buying new trays. Vinegar is such a great cleaner and it's cheap, too! For an eight-page pamphlet filled with easy, money-saving ways to use vinegar around your home in place of expensive cleaners, just send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001.

NURSING-HOME CLOTHES

Dear Heloise: Please remind your readers that when you have some clothes to give away, a good idea might be to go and leave them at a nursing home, as some residents don't have any family to buy some for them. Or if there are already family members there, when they pass away, leave them for some other resident. It's an act of kindness that would be greatly appreciated. — A.J. Bastarache, New Brunswick, Canada

This is an excellent way to pass clothing on to a good cause. Thanks so much for dropping us a line. — Heloise

SWEPT AWAY

Dear Heloise: Another cat story. One day while I was sweeping my porch, my cat, Smokey, got in my way with each stroke of the broom.

So, I started sweeping him across the back and sides. Now every time he sees me with a broom, he comes running so I can sweep him off as well as the porch. — Betty Kouns, Montezuma, Ind.

HAND SANITIZER

Dear Heloise: I have a hint for cleaning eyeglasses. While we were traveling, I had a small bottle of instant hand sanitizer in the car. My daughter said to put just a little amount on my glasses and wipe it off. They never shined so much and also they smelled clean. Now I use it all the time. — Irene Noonan, Carrollton, Texas

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

The Successful Family

By Matilda Boozer
LPC, NCC, DAPA
TIME-OUT: HOW AND WHEN TO USE
AND WHEN NOT TO USE

First of all, parents sometimes need time-outs also. When you are angry, take a time-out break and pull yourself together before you do or say things you will regret later. Time-out is a temporary isolation of the child from others because he/she chose to act inappropriately. It is a technique that lets children know that when they choose to be mean to each other, they will have to be by themselves for a while sitting quietly. Time-out is not isolating a child for a long time.

It is not solitary confinement in some dark room. It is not a threat of the loss of a parent's love or protection. Time-out is a temporary insolation of the child from others because he/she chose to act inappropriately. It is a technique that lets children know that when they choose to violate a rule, they will have to sit quietly by themselves for a while. Usually the time is the same as the child's age in minutes. Example: a six-year-old takes a six minute time-out.

WHEN TO USE TIME-OUTS? Use it when the child has seriously violated one or more of the family rules. Some examples: deliberately breaking something; throwing objects in the house; ignoring a request to stop doing something, abusive behaviors to others such as hitting, kicking, swearing or pulling hair.

WHEN NOT TO USE TIME-OUT? Do not use time-out for minor infractions of family rules, for behaviors you find partially annoying or unacceptable, or for normal accidents. Try ignoring the behavior or use another form of behavior management instead of time-out. The selected use of time-out will increase its effectiveness as a management technique.

BEFORE YOU USE TIME-OUT? Explain time-out and make sure your child understands it. Before using time-out as a form of punishment, make sure the child understands what time-out is and what you expect once he/she is in time-out. Using time-out before the child completely understands the concept is unfair and will only cause the child confusion.

Establish rules that will warrant a time-out. These should be family rules that all family members obey. If abusive behavior to others is not allowed in the house, this means both children and parents should not be abusive.

If silliness at the dinner table is not acceptable, then everyone has to sit appropriately and eat the meal. It is important that parents follow the rules themselves, otherwise children will find the rules unjust. Modeling appropriate behavior is the best way to help a child manage his or her own behavior.

One of the important ways we grow as parents in our parenting skills is to talk and visit with other parents and families. This opportunity is waiting for you in a safe and confidential environment at the DRESS Your Family for Success program on Thursday evenings from 6-9 at the San Jose Community Center. There is a program for all ages so the children and teens will also have a place of learning. A snack supper is provided. For more information, contact The Action Mental Wellness Center or Tili Boozer at 364-4357. This program is sponsored by the Amarillo Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse. We are fortunate to have it in our community.

Is the truth always important?

No this is not a political column. It has nothing to do with our Nation's president. It's not even about lying. This column is about truth. I tricked you into reading this far with that terrific headline. But, the question remains: is telling the truth always important? The following information is true. I'll leave it up to you to determine if any of it is important.

Trivial Truths

- Bookseller magazine gives an annual award called "The Odd Title of the Year Award." The 1994 winner was Highlights in the History of Concrete. I assume the book was produced in hard cover.

- There are lots of ways to say "stupid." For example: cerebrally challenged, mentally deficient or a few clowns short of a circus. There are more: as smart as fish bait, doesn't have all his or her Cornflakes in one box, his belt doesn't go through all the hoops and she has a body by Fisher with brains by Mattel.

- We say, "the phone is ringing," but in reality all new phones chirp, beep, buzz or twinkle.

- Baseball would be more interesting if hitters got paid $1,000 for a single, $2,000 for a double, $3,000 for a triple and $10,000 for home runs and agents got nothing.

- Baseball would be more interesting if pitchers got paid $100 per strikeout, had to give back $100 for each walk and received $10,000 for each win.

- In 1929 folks had to work 19 minutes everyday to pay their federal income taxes. In 1989 the daily time had risen to 1 hour and 47 minutes. (Kinda makes you want to take that first hour and 47 minutes off doesn't it?)

- Will Rogers said, "Alexander Hamilton started the U.S. Treasury with nothing - and that was the closest our country has ever come to being even."

- Nearly 70 million sets of the game "Trivial Pursuit" have been sold.

- The Wright brothers made four flights on December 17, 1903. Their first flight - the one that is recorded in history - was the shortest of the day.

- The average person doesn't use a semicolon very often.

Most aren't sure how to use one correctly; nevertheless, they use them anyway.

- A full-size car at any rental agency really isn't.

- A double bed is perfect for one.

- The average American spends more than 4 hours per day watching television.

- There is no garbage disposal problem in California. They turn their garbage into television programs and movies and ship it all over the world.

- If George Washington had invested the quarter he allegedly threw across the Potomac River, his heirs could pay off the National debt.

- They don't make clabber like they used to.

- If you spend money on it, it's a hobby; if you make money on it, it's a business.

- You can arm your soul for the battles of the day, if you load a little prayer the first thing each morning.

- If you want to enjoy success, learn to be genuinely happy over the success of others.

- Your nose filters and humidifies about 500 cubic feet of air each day.

- John F. Kennedy graduated sixty-fourth out of his high school class of 112.

- You'll get a bang out of this. Alfred Nobel, the Swede who gave cash awards to writers and scientists (now known as the Nobel Prize). Invented dynamite.

- You can dream a life, or live a dream.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Rebecca Walls

I hope all of you had a wonderful Thanksgiving wherever you were. When I was growing up, Thanksgiving was a holiday when all of the aunts and uncles and 26 grandkids gathered at Mama's, caught up on the latest news and told the old stories again.

Being together with family was so much fun that we couldn't wait to see everyone. At that time I couldn't imagine other families not feeling the same way and doing the same things. I am very thankful I had that kind of family.

The new book selections this week include three titles that deal with families trying to mend broken relationships.

Danielle Steel's Mirror Image is about the mysterious relationships between identical twins. Olivia and Victoria Henderson were born in 1893 and their resemblance even kept their father guessing.

Their father never fully recovered from his wife's death giving birth. As the girls grew older Olivia assumed the role of mother, managing the household and the rebellious, free spirited Victoria. Victoria, on the other hand, embraced the women's suffrage.

When Victoria's life and reputation are ruined by public scandal, Charles Dawson enters the picture. A handsome lawyer, Charles is still in mourning for his wife lost on the Titanic.

Struggling to make a life for himself and 9-year old son, Charles finds a mother for his son, but has vowed never to lose his heart again. While Olivia dreams of marriage and a family, Victoria dreams of traveling to War-torn Europe.

The twins plan a deception that will last a lifetime.

The Jewels of Tessa Kent by Judith Krantz deals with a mother-daughter relationship gone wrong. Tessa Kent, a beautiful willful 14-year old, gets pregnant and has an illegitimate child. Tessa's parents, being devout Catholics, raise the baby Maggie as their daughter.

At the ripe old age of 16, Tessa is discovered by Hollywood. By the time she is 19, Tessa becomes an international movie star.

Maggie is enamored with her sister Tessa, and lives for the infrequent visits. At the age of 18, Maggie discovers the truth about her mother's identity. Maggie breaks all ties to her family and moves to Manhattan to work for the famed auction house, Scott and Scott.

Five years pass. Tessa becomes determined to end the estrangement following a life changing crisis. The only way Tessa can reach Maggie is through the auction house. Tessa must sell the famed jewels given to her by her loving husband.

Scott and Scott is promised the auction under one condition - Maggie and Tessa must work closely together on the sale. Tessa's entire future hangs on the hope of reconciliation.

The Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood by Rebecca Wells is the story of Vivi and Siddalee Walker. Siddalee, a successful theater director, lets her guard down during an interview and says some things "off the record."

When those things appear in the New York Times article, the mother-daughter relationship is almost destroyed. Siddalee becomes so determined to rebuild the relationship, that even her wedding to Connor McGill is put on hold.

Vivi's childhood friends, known as the Ya-Yas, conspire to bring everyone back together. They persuade Vivi to send Siddalee a scrapbook of girlhood mementos entitled the "Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood."

Siddalee retreats, with the scrapbook, to a cabin on Washington State's Olympic Peninsula intent on discovering just how she feels about her mother. Is it anger or tenderness?

Orchid Beach by Stuart Woods is another riveting thriller. When Major Holly Barker is forced to take early retirement as a result of a scandalous sexual harassment case, she accepts the help of her dad.

Being an Army brat, Holly knows her dad has had to make the transition to civilian life and with his help she can make it to. At the age of 34, Holly begins looking for another career.

Deputy Chief of Police in Orchid Beach, Florida seems the ideal job. When a colleague and another associate are brutally shot, Holly discovers an undercurrent of lies, deceit and evil.

Holly, surrounded by a staff of officers that cannot be trusted, finds help in a most unexpected source. Daisy, a Doberman, possesses exceptional intelligence and loyalty. Daisy becomes Holly's inseparable companion, confidant and protector.

Other titles of interest this week are:

- The Last Days of Marilyn

Monroe by Donald H. Wolfe

- Seductive Poison by Deborah Layton is a Jonestown survivors story of life and death in the People's Temple

- The Guns of Billy Free by Doug Bowman for the western readers

Project begins—L'Allegra Study Club's annual Christmas fund-raiser, Project Christmas Card, is being offered to Hereford residents again this year as a way to allow individuals to make monetary contributions in the amount they would typically spend on Christmas cards and stamps. Contribution canisters are being placed at several locations in the community. Names of contributors will be printed in a full page ad appearing in the annual Christmas Eve edition of The Hereford Brand. Everyone listed in the ad is sending a collective greeting to the whole community. Pictured above is Eva Mendoza at Terry's Floral and Design, one of the local businesses where contributions can be made.

The ancient Mayans had 18 months, each 20 days long, in the 360-day civil year. The remaining five days were days of evil omen called Vazeh. In addition to the civil, or secular, calendar, the Mayans also had a sacred, or ceremonial, calendar of 260 days.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after the third day, your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Wish granted.

The House of the Week

Shade All Around

G-99

SHUTTERED WINDOWS, a trio of dormers and a wraparound veranda are charming features reminiscent of homes built in days gone by.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Outdoor comfort is featured in plan G-99, by HomeStyles Designers Network, a delightful home with a shaded veranda that nearly surrounds it. Its spacious floor plan covers 2,059 square feet of living space.

The veranda has enough room for a hammock, and, if it rains during a family reunion, festivities can be moved to this covered area.

Inside, a living room with a fireplace is joined seamlessly with the foyer. Its many windows flood the room with natural light.

Opposite the living room, the big dining room is equally suitable for intimate meals or large dinner parties.

A well-planned kitchen and connecting breakfast room flow into one another, while a French door allows veranda access. A nearby utility room eases the burden of weekly chores.

Highlights of the master bedroom include a huge walk-in closet and a French door that offers private passage to the veranda. The bath includes a tub, a separate shower and a planter.

Upstairs, two more bedrooms, one with a large walk-in closet, flank a sitting area. The large split bath features a dual-sink vanity.

All rooms in the home have 9-foot ceilings.

G-99 STATISTICS

Design G-99 has a living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, sitting area, three bedrooms, two and one half baths and a utility room, totaling 2,059 square feet of living space. Upstairs, two bedrooms flank a sitting room and share a full bath.

Disney channel special helps families talk about AIDS

Chris, an 11-year-old from Atlanta, is one of the children featured in Friends for Life: Living With AIDS, premiering Tuesday, Dec. 1, on Disney Channel. The half-hour special spotlights kids living with HIV and AIDS who talk about their dreams and the importance of enjoying life.

To help families with 7- to 11-year-olds talk about AIDS, Disney Channel presents Friends for Life: Living With AIDS, debuting on World AIDS Day, Tuesday, Dec. 1.

The half-hour special was commissioned by the channel and executed by two-time Oscar winner Barbara Kopple and Laurie Meadoff, founder of the CityKids Foundation in New York. The special allows youngsters with AIDS to say what's on their minds.

"We took a very fresh and innocent approach that allowed the kids to fill it up with who they are and what they're about," Kopple says.

Meadoff adds, "(For them) it isn't about the issue of dying with AIDS, but of living with AIDS."

The children featured in the special range in age from 6 to 14, and all were born with HIV. Chris, an 11-year-old from Atlanta, was the first infant to receive the drug AZT.

Facts about the transmission of AIDS, everyday precautions in the handling of blood, and the youngsters' routine of taking medicine and visiting doctors are all presented in an easy, almost offhand manner. Most parents will be comfortable with the level of detail, and most children will have their curiosity satisfied.

The filmmakers are far more interested in reaching the audience on an emotional level.

"Anything that's painful or that people don't quite understand, they hold at arm's length," Kopple notes. "We thought it was very important to humanize that, to let people know there isn't anything to be afraid of (from these youngsters)."

"What really came through all the time," Meadoff recalls, "is how the kids keep aching for friends."

Inside hospitals and clinics, children with AIDS get plenty of encouragement. But community life can be very different. Chris was expelled once from a school after admitting he had AIDS, and he continues to fear that his house will be bombed. Stephanie, whose mother was infected by a blood transfusion, has been forced to move in the middle of the night. And 14-year-old Hydea faced down cruel rumors circulating around school that she had engaged in promiscuous sex.

These are hard realities. To balance them, Kopple turns her lens on positive things she found: youngsters at a 10K walk benefiting AIDS patients; a camp for kids with AIDS and their HIV-negative siblings; a Washington, D.C., elementary school teacher who asks her students whether they will remember a classmate with AIDS in years to come or simply forget about her.

There's nothing graphic about the special, and none of the objective information is new. This shouldn't be a groundbreaking film, yet Disney is handling the program with kid gloves, concerned that no one tune in without knowing exactly what it is. If that seems cowardly, consider the coverage World AIDS Day is getting on the broadcast networks. Rather than exploring the issue in sitcoms, dramas or news specials, the networks are all but silent on the subject.

This special won't put an end to AIDS, but it may open the door of understanding a little wider.

As Chris puts it, "I'm just like any regular kid; I need love."

ARIES - March 21/April 20

You have big dreams this week, Aries, but don't get carried away. If you only focus on what you want to happen, you will miss some important things that are going on right in front of you. Pay attention to those around you; they are trying to tell you something. Leo plays a key role.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

While you don't like to be the center of attention, you will be early in the week. Don't shy away from this situation; you are more than capable of handling it. Just be yourself, and you're sure to impress everyone. A close friend needs romantic advice. While you want to help, don't. He or she won't listen to what you have to say.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Be prepared. Gemini — it's going to be a long week. Every time that you think you've accomplished something, a problem will arise. Don't get discouraged. Instead, put in the extra effort to finish things correctly. It will be worth it in the long run. A loved one offers you some constructive criticism. Listen to him or her.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Your sense of humor will pull you through a difficult family situation late in the week. Share your laughter with the others involved, because they need it as much as you do. That special someone has a romantic evening planned. Let him or her know how much you appreciate the thoughtfulness.

LEO - July 23/August 23

A close friend gets into trouble this week and needs you. Don't judge him or her; just do your best to help. Your efforts will be appreciated. An interesting stranger asks you out. While you're intrigued by him or her, say no. Something just isn't right about the entire scenario.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Several co-workers are depending on you early in the week, Virgo. Don't let them down. Stay focused on the task at hand, and don't get sidetracked by personal matters. You'll have plenty of time to concentrate on your love life at the end of the week — once your work is done. Aries is involved.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

You have an easy week in front of you, Libra. So, enjoy yourself. You are ahead at work, and your romantic life is going well. Spend time with loved ones whom you haven't seen in a while. They have some interesting news to tell you. Sagittarius plays an important role late in the week.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't let your ego get the best of you at an important business meeting this week, Scorpio. Vanity only will make you lose ground with your associates. The person whom you've been seeing wants to intensify the relationship. Is that what you really want? Think about the answer before you talk with him or her.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Be honest — and gentle — when talking with a business associate who has feelings for you. Let him or her down easily, because you don't want to damage the professional relationship that you two have. An old friend turns to you for help. Do what you can for him or her.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't get too caught up in your work early in the week, Capricorn. While you have a lot of business to take care of, you also have a loved one who needs you. Don't turn your back on him or her; you're the only one who can help. The friend of a friend wants to get to know you better. Say yes.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Keep your eyes and ears open at work this week, Aquarius. Something is going on, and everyone is getting nervous. Try to find out what's causing the commotion, but don't get upset until you know all of the facts. A loved one has an important question for you. Answer it honestly.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Co-workers need you to do something for them. While you don't like to be in this situation, there's nothing that you can do to change it. Just work hard to get things done. A close friend asks for your help with a family matter. Don't get involved.

TV PIPELINE

Q: Did the little girl on Cosby star in Nickelodeon's My Brother and Me a couple of years ago? When did Anissa Jones of Family Affair die? -Tanya P. via e-mail.

A: Twelve-year-old Jurnee Smollett, who plays Jurnee in Cosby, was not in My Brother; that was Aisling Sistrunk in the Nickelodeon series.

Smollett previously played Denise in Full House and co-starred in On Our Own. She also starred in last year's acclaimed feature Eve's Bayou, co-starred in the comedy Jack and made a guest appearance on NYPD Blue.

Former child star Jones was found dead of a drug overdose on Aug. 29, 1976. She was 18.

Q: Like you, I used to think that poster in Dr. Frasier Crane's apartment referred to Austrian composer Arnold Schoenberg, until I finally got a look at the complete name. It's actually a piece by Robert Rauschenberg, the (still alive) New York artist who got his start in the 1950s and was a contemporary of Jackson Pollock, Mark Rothko and Philip Guston, among others. I hope this helps. -John Prokop, Oakland, Calif.

A: Thanks, John. And thanks to the other readers who also took time to write and clarify the real name on the Frasier hallway poster.

I wanted to clarify another point about my response. Apparently, at least one reader mistakenly took my comment about Schoenberg's demanding music appealing to an intellectual snob like Frasier Crane to mean that I thought ANYONE who likes this music is a snob. That's not what I said, but if anyone else took offense, I extend my apologies.

Q: Am I the only person who remembers Chad Everett in a TV

show about a traveling circus? -Jan via e-mail.

A: Possibly. The Roustlers, which NBC aired sporadically during its 1983-84 season, starred Everett as carnival roustabout Wyatt Earp III. Jim Varney, Mimi Rogers, Maxine Stuart and Hoyt Axton co-starred.

Q: My dad insists that actor-songwriter Paul Williams is dead. True? -C. Edward Fox via e-mail.

A: False. In fact, Williams currently plays Bailey Masterson in the CBS soap The Bold and the Beautiful.

Q: Who played a witch named Winnie in a late '80s ABC sitcom? -A reader via e-mail.

A: Corinne Bohrer, who now co-stars on Showtime's Rude Awakening, played Winnie Goodwin, the housekeeper-witch in the 1989-90 ABC sitcom Free Spirit. One of her young charges on the show was played by Alyson Hannigan, now co-starring as Willow, a fledgling witch herself, on the cult hit Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

A woman puts on a wig and leaves the house, dressed to the nines. She flirts with a handsome man at an art opening and entices him back to her car - then floors the accelerator and runs him over repeatedly.

So begins the black-comedy thriller Dead Husbands, starring John Ritter and Nicollette Sheridan. The film airs Wednesday, Dec. 2, on USA Network.

While the opening scene is not one to watch while eating dinner, the plot that unwinds holds more amusement and fewer grisly details.

Ritter plays Dr. Carter Elston, a successful author of books on relationships. As Carter heads out for the day, he leaves at home his ailing wife, Alex (Sheridan), who leaps up as soon as the door closes and heads off for high society.

Carter sees his wife's evening clothes upon his return and suspects she is having an affair. That would be quite an embarrassment for the man whose infomercials tout "communication skills from the world's biggest relationship expert." He decides to whisk her away from New York to the joys of a small-town medical practice of which she wants no part.

Alex befriends Sheila Feinstein (Sonja Smits), who reveals a gruesome chain letter plot in which she participates. You put your husband's name on the list, and when it reaches the top, the woman who gets the letter kills him, then puts her husband's name on the bottom. Sheila, in disguise, was the opening scene's killer.

"I always loved the fantasy of it, of going to extremes," executive producer Karen Moore says. "These women are totally unequipped to carry out these murders."

The women, however, don't want to call it murder. "I prefer to think of it as societal correction," Sheila says with a sniff.

The rest of the film involves a cat-and-mouse chase of women trying to catch Carter, to stop him from discovering their pact.

Dead Husbands is a film that pokes fun at its subject. "The war of the sexes will continue until infinity, hopefully," Moore says with a chuckle. "And hopefully, it will entertain."

SENIOR SCENE

Supplement of the Hereford Brand

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Early this year I was reading "The poorest of all men is not the man without a cent but the man without a dream." This thought seemed to have been inspired from Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision the people perish."

All year we have heard rumblings concerning the economy. El Nino got the blame for a lot of it. Of course, the drought affects a lot of areas. We have had so many tell us our Festival of Trees would probably not amount to much this year, but in spite of the negative talk and attitude, some of our seniors dreamed, planned and worked all summer making wreaths, baskets, decorating trees and making other items for the festival.

All who have worked, beginning last January, believed it would be worth while and they know it takes funds to operate our center. Without the dreams of our seniors and citizens in our community not only would our center perish but so would our town!

We are so thankful to all of you who participated in the festival to help make it a great success. The auction was tremendous and more fun! Our trees and donations contributed to the auction were the best ever! We thank all who decorated trees and all the sponsors of the festival. Each and every one is very important.

Thanks to all volunteers for your long hours of work and also thanks to my staff. Most of all I thank God for the strength He gives us all, and for the generosity of our Hereford friends.

Thank you, again!
See you at the Center.

President's Corner

By Truman Thurston, HSCA President

Congratulations to all of the volunteers who made our Festival of Trees such a great success. The center is always a beautiful place during the festival, but this year has surely been the best.

The Henson family went all out this year to present a beautiful display of six trains and a most unusual display of buildings and (maybe thousands) of small items. If there is anything in our everyday life not represented in the display, I missed it.

The Hensons are leaving the train display up through Dec. 11 so that it can be viewed by our holiday guests. The contribution box was their suggestion and they hope that it will bring additional funds for the center and show our appreciation for the display. Besides their labor of love they want the contributions to benefit the center.

Please take a few moments to thank them at each opportunity and also all of the volunteers that you see.

The Memorial Tree lights are beautiful this year. Here is an unusual way to contribute to the center. Everyone can't buy a decorated tree. We just don't have enough to go around.

November has been great and we will all relax now for a short while but let us not forget the basis of the season. This month we celebrate the virgin birth of the Savior.

When we receive the cards and well wishes for the season, visits of our loved ones and friends, let us take time to thank the one who provides the only true love and comfort.

Best wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Annual Festival of Trees auction pulls in record amount for center

If there are a lot of smiles around the Hereford Senior Citizens Center these days, it's easy to understand why.

The senior citizens association's 9th Annual Festival of Trees auction was the most successful ever, raising a total of $36,550 to benefit the center.

"I had people tell me not to expect too much from this year's auction since the economy was so bad. But this was the largest amount in the nine years of the festival," Margie Daniels, executive director of the Senior Center, said.

The previous record was set four years ago when the auction brought in $28,675, according to Daniels.

"We had several businesses who came to buy a tree but weren't able to because the bidding was so high," Daniels said. "But a couple of the businesses donated the money they intended to spend to the auction without being able to take a tree."

The top-selling tree, titled "Silent Night," was purchased by Garrison and Townsend Seed Co. for $6,000. The tree was decorated by Sharon Bodner and Hereford Senior Citizens and sponsored by Bar-G Feedyard.

Coming in a close second in dollar amount was another tree decorated by Bodner and the Senior Citizens which sold for $5,600 to Stevens 5-Star Car and Truck Center. It was titled "Christmas Traditions" and was sponsored by Keeling Cattle Feeders, Inc.

The following is a summary of the auction of the trees and other items, including the names of the trees or items, the purchaser, the decorators and sponsors.

1. "Angels in Our Midst," Garrison-Townsend Inc., $750. Donated to Severe and Profoundly Handicap Unit/Shirley School. Decorated by Severe and Profoundly Handicap Unit/Shirley School. Sponsored by Jim Rich-Webster Carpets and Beef Tech Cattle Feeders.

2. 48-inch pre-lighted decorated wreath. Marie Griffin, $250.

3. "Angels Watching Over Me," Morris and Mildred Crider, $500.

"Silent Night" was the top selling tree during this year's Festival of Trees Auction. Garrison and Townsend, Inc., paid $6,000 for the tree decorated in blue and silver.

Donated to Hereford Care Center. Decorated by Girl Scouts. Sponsored by Edward Jones and Caviness Packing Co. Inc.

4. "Golden Memories," Cecil and Ella Oglesby, $600. Donated to Deaf Smith County Youth Home. Decorated and sponsored by Golden K Kiwanis.

Green Thumb seeking nominations for outstanding worker among seniors

To celebrate the ongoing contributions and accomplishments of older workers, Green Thumb is soliciting nominations from Texas employers in search of 1998's Outstanding Older Worker.

Nominees must be at least 65 years old, a Texas resident and work 20 or more hours a week for pay.

To nominate, a supervisor or co-worker must provide a brief narrative covering the older worker's overall contribution to their employer, a description of new/additional skills the nominee has learned since beginning employment, any disabilities the nominee has overcome to perform his/her job, and a description of other community involvement.

Official nomination forms may be obtained by calling Green Thumb at 1-800-880-5292 or nomination forms will be available at the local Green Thumb office, located in the Texas Workforce Commission office at 403 W. 7th, or by calling 364-2743.

Nominees may be from any occupation. Last year's state honorees included a research physician, a welder, a labor rights attorney, a heavy equipment operator, a civil engineer, a home health aide, and the owners of a children's clothing store.

The deadline for nominations is Dec. 21.

Nominations will be evaluated by a state-wide employer committee and the winner announced the later part of January 1999. The winner will attend the national Prime Time Awards in Washington, D.C., in March 1999, during presidentially-proclaimed Employ the Older Worker Week.

The visit will include an evening tour of the city's landmarks, meetings with Congressional representatives, a tour of the White House, and a gala awards dinner at the historic National Building Museum.

Green Thumb is the country's oldest and largest nonprofit provider of employment and training for older Americans. Its mission is to strengthen families, communities, and our nation by providing older and disadvantaged individuals with opportunities to learn, work and serve others.

Last year, Green Thumb brought training and employment options to more than 26,000 older Americans. In Texas, Green Thumb operates in 132 counties serving almost 1,000 mature workers.

Nutrition Update

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD
Antioxidant Vitamins for Optimal Health

Encouraging healthful eating habits early in childhood is important for maintaining these habits in adulthood. The best way to get children to eat fruits and vegetables is to offer them often and to be a positive role model.

The Food Guide Pyramid guides us on the number of servings of fruits and vegetables to eat every day.

Fruits and vegetables have been found to help prevent a host of diseases by providing essential vitamins, minerals, fiber and other nutrients, including antioxidants. While we all know it is important to eat fruits and vegetables, more than 80 percent of us don't consume the recommended two to three servings of fruits and three to five serving of vegetables each day.

Each individual should evaluate their eating habits and discover tasty and healthful ways to add fruits and vegetables to daily eating plan.

What are antioxidant vitamins and why are they important?

Our bodies are actually battle grounds for infection and diseases. Normal body functions, such as breathing or physical activity and other lifestyle habits, such as smoking, produce substances called free radicals that attack healthy cells.

When these healthy cells are weakened, they are more susceptible to cardiovascular disease and certain types of cancers. Antioxidants, such as vitamins C and E, and carotenoid, which include beta-carotene, lycopene, and lutein, help protect healthy cells from damage caused by free radicals.

The carotenoid

Among the 600 or more carotenoid in foods, beta-carotene, lycopene, and lutein are well-known leaders in the fight to reduce the damage from free radicals. Foods high in carotenoid include red, orange, deep yellow, and dark green leafy vegetables, such as tomatoes, carrots, sweet potatoes and broccoli.

Some studies have shown that beta-carotene may be an effective ally against prostate cancer. A recent study found men with the lowest level of beta-carotene in their blood were at the greatest risk of developing this cancer. Sweet potatoes, winter squash, and carrots are all good sources of beta-carotene.

Lycopene, a carotenoid found in tomatoes, is one of the most powerful antioxidants and appears to protect against many diseases, including cancers of

S.A.L.T. program is cooperative effort

On May 7, 1996, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales came to Hereford and established the Deaf Smith County TRIAD, with Sheriff Joe Brown, Police Chief David Wagner, and Senior Citizens president Gid Brown signing in agreement.

The TRIAD consists of a three-way effort among the county sheriff, the police chief and the senior citizens in this area who agree to work together to reduce the criminal victimization of older citizens and enhance the delivery of law enforcement services to this population.

Shortly after the signing, crime prevention officers from the Hereford Police Department, along with sheriff's deputies began meeting with members of the senior community at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center and established a S.A.L.T. council.

This local S.A.L.T. Council meets every second Friday of the month at the Senior Citizens Center during lunch. We normally have lunch and then hold a 30-minute meeting to conduct business or have a program on crime prevention or some other topic that relates to senior citizens.

On some occasions the S.A.L.T. committee delivers the presentations to the entire senior population who are present at the center to eat lunch.

The guest speaker for the Nov. 13 meeting was Don Cumpston, executive director of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. He told the group about the various holiday activities that were coming up in Hereford and also spoke about the future of Hereford's economic development.

Another study showed that women with the highest levels of lycopene in their blood were five times less likely to develop precancerous signs of cervical cancer than women with the lowest levels.

Lutein may decrease the risk of developing macular degeneration, the eye disease that afflicts one in three people over the age of 75. Foods rich in lutein include broccoli, Brussels sprouts, spinach, kale and egg yolk.

Vitamin E: one main mission
Research has demonstrated

Knock Wood is the title of Candice Bergen's autobiography. Her main competition growing up was from Charlie McCarthy, her ventriloquist-father Edgar Bergen's favorite wooden dummy.

the broad role of vitamin E in promoting health. For example, vitamin E may contribute to aging, infertility, heart disease, cancer and poor athletic performance.

The main role of vitamin E is as an antioxidant. It helps protect the body from cell damage that can lead to cancer, heart disease, and cataracts as we age. Vitamin E works together with other antioxidants, such as vitamin C, to offer protection from chronic diseases.

Vitamin E is found in vegetable oils, salad dressings, margarine, wheat germ, whole-grain products, seeds, nuts and peanut butter.

If you are trying to maintain a very-low-fat diet, you should evaluate your vitamin E intake to determine if you need a vitamin E supplement to get enough of this nutrient.

Vitamin C—an antioxidant workhorse

The most famous antioxidant is vitamin C, and its touted benefits are well known. Current research findings have shown that vitamin C may lower the risk of developing cataracts and other diseases.

In some studies, this antioxidant workhorse has helped lower blood pressure and cholesterol and has been shown to help prevent stroke and heart attacks.

Still more benefits of vitamin C are being discovered. Researchers have found that people who suffer from asthma, arthritis, cancer, diabetes, and heart disease have lower levels of vitamin C in their blood than non-sufferers.

To take advantage of these benefits, choose foods rich in vitamin C, such as citrus fruits (e.g., oranges, grapefruits), sweet peppers, strawberries, broccoli and potatoes.

Getting the optimal amount of antioxidant vitamins

The best way to build a healthful eating plan is to eat well-balanced meals and snacks each day and to enjoy a wide variety of foods. Eating at least five servings of fruits and vegetables daily is a good start for healthful living.

However, there may be circumstances that make healthful eating a challenge. If you are on a severely restricted low-calorie weight diet (less than 1,200 calories), or are childbearing age, or just don't eat enough fruits and vegetables, a multi-vitamin/mineral supplement may be beneficial.

Carter's latest book stresses pros of growing old outweigh cons

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter has a message of thanks for John Glenn, a fellow politician, adventurer and septuagenarian.

"I think he's doing this to promote my book," said Carter, 74.

Carter's book — his 14th — was released amid the tremendous publicity about the 77-year-old Glenn's return to space as part of the crew of the space shuttle Discovery.

In "The Virtues of Aging," Carter has a message for the rapidly growing number of older Americans: The pros of growing old far outweigh the cons.

The title refers to the virtues of experience and wisdom and the ability to share that experience with others.

The 39th president of the United States has tried to follow his own advice. After being what he calls "involuntarily retired" in the 1980 election, Carter says he went through a painful adjustment period.

Carter, who was 54 when he left the White House, quotes a recent survey that shows that the average age Americans define as old is 73.

"That left me 19 years before

I was considered old and here I was retired," Carter said. "And I was approaching this crisis in my life with no anticipation and no preparation. This afflicted me like it has many others. Rosalynn and I had to re-examine what we wanted to do with the remaining 20-25 years of our lives."

The book deals with Carter's journey through this process, which has included learning new skills from writing to mountain climbing. The Carters have climbed Mount Fuji and Mount Kilimanjaro and gone 1,000 feet above base camp on Mount Everest.

Carter says older people should stay active to keep their bodies and minds in shape.

"It's better to use recreation to preserve health rather than to use medicines and treatment to regain health," he writes.

Carter spends much of his time at The Carter Center, an Atlanta-based nonprofit organization devoted to promoting human rights, health and democracy around the world.

Besides leading peacekeeping missions overseas, Carter has continued to teach Sunday school at his Baptist church in his hometown of Plains and wield a hammer as a volunteer building houses around the country for the nonprofit group Habitat for Humanity.

One of the largest problems in the future, Carter says, is the aging of the baby boomers. Politicians and the elderly will have to make hard choices to reform Social Security and Medicare, he said.

"When Social Security was founded by Franklin Roosevelt, there were 33 workers for every retiree," Carter said. "Now we're approaching three workers for every retiree. There is going to be an unbelievable demand on the Social Security system."

Carter outlines 10 suggestions for Social Security, including reducing the amount of payments to affluent retirees and investing a portion of the Social Security fund for future use.

Carter realizes these suggestions will not be popular with the older sector that is increasing in size as well as influence — 60 percent of 60-year-olds vote compared to only 20 percent of 20-year-olds.

If something is not done, he said, Social Security may not last longer than the 2032 date recently listed as its insolvency date. Beyond that, the Social Security trustees say that payroll taxes will be sufficient to finance approximately 75 percent of scheduled benefits.

"This will probably be the most intensely debated and most important issue we will face in the next decade," Carter said. "But the power of senior citizens is going to be marshaled out of necessity to create a reasonable change of present laws."

Phoenix-area club draws seniors to share dance; maybe romance

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A lounge singer is crooning the lyrics to Eric Clapton's "Change the World" as John Tarinelli glides onto the dance floor with a white-haired woman, his latest in a string this night.

The 72-year-old holds her in his arms and swings her around until the last notes of the song fade out. Grinning ear-to-ear, he escorts his partner back to her table before he finds another dance partner.

"I try to stick with people around my age. I would feel like a fool dancing with a lot of those young girls," he says.

At most bars, Tarinelli, with a perpetual smile and a graceful dance step, might have trouble finding women his age to dance with, but not at Chances Are.

For the last five years, the suburban Phoenix restaurant and bar has been quietly attracting a middle-age and senior crowd intent on sharing a drink, dancing the night away and occasionally starting a romance.

Harriette Rader, the club's manager, says Chances Are didn't begin that way. In fact, the original owners hoped the name would be a reference to off-track betting.

The off-track betting never materialized, and the management has since installed a second dance floor to accommodate the busy weekend nights.

The name Chances Are has taken on a different meaning under the lighted red hearts over the main dance floor.

Nobody knows that better than Betty Finstad, 51, and Robert Kania, 59.

Three years ago they came to Chances Are separately and were introduced by friends. It was Kania's first time there. But once he met Ms. Finstad and knew she frequented the place, he started coming often.

"He was smitten at first sight," says Ms. Finstad, laughing. "Well, he's not denying it."

The couple continues to visit Chances Are, together now. And whenever possible, they spend the entire evening dancing.

Ted Bobrow, a spokesman for the American Association for Retired Persons in Washington, says clubs like Chances Are have been around for years, but more of them could be on the way.

"With people remaining healthier and more active as they age, it may become more popular," he says. "It's not so surprising when you think about it. People continue to be interested in socializing. It really knows no age boundaries."

Mary Lynn Kasunic, executive director of the Area Agency on Aging in Phoenix, says the market for social activities and specialized senior clubs is growing.

"With the growing aging population and more people in the 55-age range that are healthy and active, you have a whole population of seniors that are looking for those kinds of recreational type activities and looking to be in relationships," she says.

At Chances Are, the patrons include a mixture of people ranging from those who are perpetually 39 years old, as Kania claims to be, to those in their 70s. Occasionally, younger couples caught up in the swing dance revival come to take advantage of the dance floor and the music style.

"We prefer not to be called a seniors club," Rader says. It tends to offend the regulars, especially if they are in their 40s or 50s.

The following list of famous American lawyers who never went to law school might surprise you: Patrick Henry, Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln, Stephen Douglas and J. Strom Thurmond. Clarence Darrow attended one year, but dropped out, preferring to study on his own.
