A PRESIDENT ON TRIAL

Senators struggling to find common ground to avoid partisan impeachment trial

See REPUBLICANS, Page A11

What next?

Demo, GOP plans for trial differ

The Associated Press

Republicans and Democrats differ on timing and whether witnesses should testify at the impeachment trial. The two sides planned to meet today to discuss differences.

REPUBLICAN PLAN

GOP senators propose allowing each side a total of 24 hours to present its case, beginning next Thursday, after which senators could submit questions to Chief Justice William Rehnquist to ask of the lawyers. Senators would decide whether to call witnesses, with a majority vote required. After testimony of any witnesses, including questions from senators, the House prosecutors and President Clinton's lawyers would have eight hours each for closing arguments.

Republicans also would require both sides to submit their written trial arguments by 5 p.m. EST Monday. The Senate would act on the motions on Thursday and then hear opening arguments, first from the House and then from the president's lawyers. GOP House prosecutors are pressing to call several witnesses, including Monica Lewinsky, presidential secretary Betty Currie and Clinton confidant Vernon Jordan.

DEMOCRATIC PLAN

Democratic senators are backing a proposal under which the House managers would present their case on Tuesday and Wednesday. The president's lawyers would present their defense the next two days. On Jan. 19 and 20, senators could question both sides.

Each side would have three hours for closing arguments on Jan. 21 and then House managers get an additional hour for rebuttal.

The Senate would begin its deliberations on Jan. 22 and conclude on Jan. 25. It would vote on the articles of impeachment on Jan. 26.

The Democratic plan has no provision for calling witnesses. Instead, Democrats propose an up-or-down vote on the articles of impeachment after the cases are presented or, at the very least, a vote to set aside the trial and move to censure.

TV networks cover Senate trial's opening, but wonder what's next

The Associated Press

The interest in how the Senate decides to conduct the impeachment trial of President Clinton extends to the people who decide the next bed-hop or betrayal on television soap operas.

At ABC, executives who decide the daytime schedule met Thursday to talk about how an impeachment trial will affect the story lines of soap operas. They need to consider how a long trial that would lead to frequent program interruptions will affect viewers' attention spans.

The Senate still hasn't decided how to proceed. Neither have most network executives.

ABC, CBS and NBC twice broke into regular programming Thursday for the first steps of the trial. The broadcasters and cable news networks were mindful of the historic nature of the events even if they were largely ceremonial.

Cameras followed grim-faced senators signing their names to a promise to be impartial jurors, and watched House managers carry the articles of impeachment over to the Senate chamber.

The Senate was to meet today to plan how the trial will proceed.

"I think everyone is a little bit on tenterhooks here because it would be nice to know," said Beth O'Connell, NBC's executive producer for special events.

After covering the trial's opening for about a half hour at 10 a.m., the three broadcast networks returned again around 1 p.m. for the swearing in of Chief Justice William Rehnquist, who will preside over the trial.

CNN, Fox News Channel and MSNBC are expected to cover most of any public Senate action on impeachment; but moments in the Lewinsky case have generally meant ratings bumps for the cable news outlets.

It's different for the networks, which must decide whether they want to cast aside daytime programming and its lucrative advertising for extensive coverage of a case polls say many Americans wish was over.

Mail your cards, letters now; postal rates are on way up

First-class postage rising to 33 cents

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Send your cards and letters now, before the price goes up.

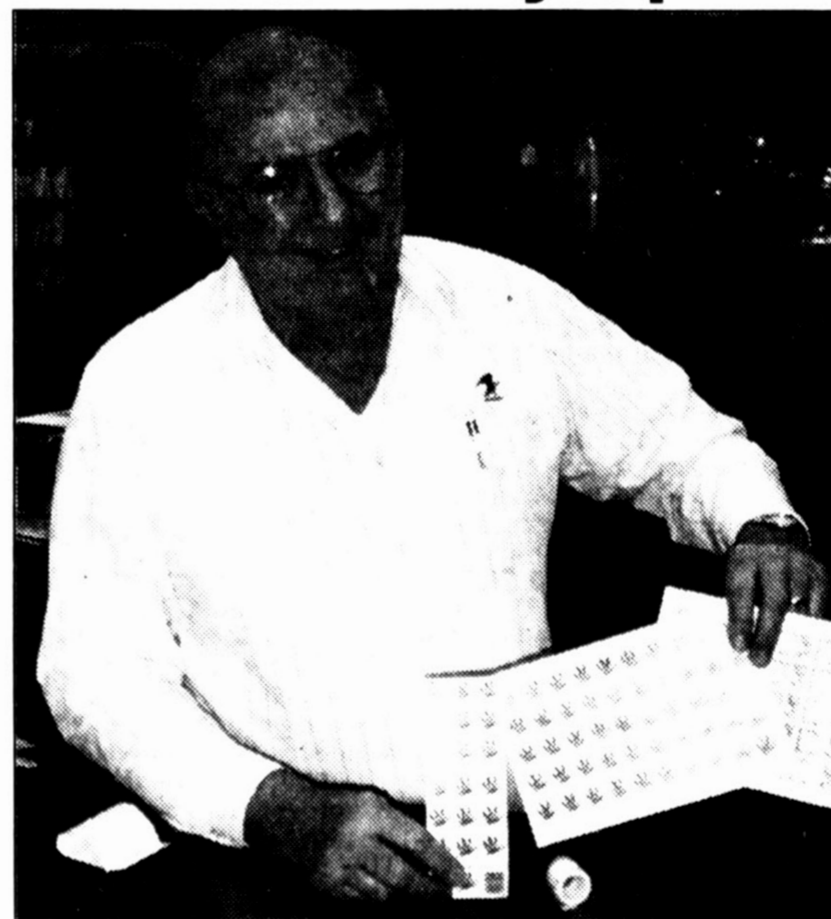

Postal rates increase Sunday for the first time in four years, raising the cost of the basic first-class letter to 33 cents, up a penny.

"After four years, we needed a small increase that was just enough to continue our investments to maintain quality customer and delivery service," said Frank P. Brennan, postal vice president for corporate relations. "We have plenty of stamps and are ready to serve our customers."

The rate increase takes effect despite four straight, highly profitable years for the post office, which says it needs added cash to buy equipment, cover rising costs and reduce outstanding debt.

John F. Robinson of the National Minority Business Council, denounced the increase, charging that "here is not one good reason advanced by the Postal Service to justify it."

Originally, the rate increase had been expected to take effect last summer, but it was

The post office made a profit of $550 million for the fiscal year that ended in September.

U.S. job market best in 41 years

WASHINGTON (AP) —

A burst of year-end hiring returned the nation's unemployment rate to 4.3 percent in December and helped produce in 1998 the strongest peacetime labor market in four decades.

The seasonally adjusted rate, down from 4.4 percent in November, returned to the level reached in April and, before that, in 1970, the Labor Department said today.

For the year, unemployment averaged 4.5 percent, the lowest since 3.5 percent in 1969 during the Vietnam War. The 1998 mark was the lowest peacetime rate since 1957, when it averaged 4.3 percent.

In December, employers added 378,000 jobs to their payrolls — the most in 15 months and nearly double what analysts anticipated. Some

News in brief

One killed, another wounded

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A bank robber opened fire, killing one bank employee and wounding another after he was told the branch bank did not have the $50,000 he demanded, a relative of the slain employee says.

Federal and state authorities had one man into custody on Thursday and hunted late into the night for a second man.

The women were shot at the First Federal Savings Bank shortly after noon. FBI spokeswoman Lori Bailey said one of the two bandits entered the bank while the other waited outside in a car.

Betty Paddie, 60, died at Good Shepherd Medical Center from a gunshot wound, hospital spokesman John Gilchrist said. Elizabeth "Libby" Flahie, 53, was reported in good condition with a gunshot wound, he said.

Mexico hunts fugitive bankers abroad

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Four years after its banking system nearly collapsed due to lax supervision, fraud and mismanagement, Mexico has renewed efforts to force several fugitive bankers to face prosecution. But analysts say the efforts don't go far enough.

Mexican prosecutors have suffered several embarrassments in trying bank fraud cases: Bankers have fled to foreign countries just hours before arrest warrants were issued for them, and once caught have walked free on bail, arguing that their alleged wrongdoing is not considered a major crime under Mexican law.

"The big problem is not the efforts to arrest these people," said Jonathan Heath, an independent economist. "It's whether they can be prosecuted once they have been arrested and brought back."

The fugitive bankers appear to be using the fortunes they amassed to mount sophisticated legal defenses against charges that range from making loans to themselves to stealing money from front companies.

Extraction team will carry Graham

AUSTIN (AP) — Condemned killer Gary Graham will be shackled and carried to the Texas death chamber by armored guards if he follows through on a promise to resist next week's execution, a prison official says.

Graham told reporters this week guards will have to drag him, kicking and screaming, to the gurney for his lethal injection, set for Monday. He added he will "fight like hell" against death row guards.

Larry Fitzgerald, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, told the Austin American-Statesman Graham can't stop the execution by fighting guards.

"If need be, we will keep him shackled," Fitzgerald said. "If he refuses to come out of his cell, we will use an extraction team — correctional officers suited up in body armor, basically — to remove him from the holding cell into the execution chamber."

"No matter what he does, we will carry out the sentence of death in this case if that's what we're instructed to do."

GERM-FIGHTING CELLS: New research shows that a gland that produces germ-fighting cells slows down, but does not stop working or disappear with age as once thought. The discovery means the immune system may be able to rebuild itself after cancer treatments or attacks from HIV. ... BEATEN BOY: A jury has recommended life in prison for a Corpus Christi man convicted of murder in the beating death of his 12-year-old son. The boy was beaten with a belt, a hose, a board and a rock and was thrown around a room.

Uniform back-to-school date benefits all

New calendar could decrease make-up time, drop-out rate

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Sen. Eddie Lucio says his proposed legislation to have all schools in Texas begin the academic year after Labor Day will benefit the children of migrant workers.

Lucio, D-Brownsville, introduced the bill during the last legislative session, but it died in the House. At the time, Lucio said extending students' vacation time would boost earnings for tourism spots like South Padre Island.

Between legislative sessions, however, Lucio said he realized that a uniform post-Labor Day start date would also help children of migrant workers who typically don't return to their homes until mid-fall. Starting after Labor Day would reduce the students' catch-up time and possibly their dropout rate.

"The earlier we start, the more school they miss, the more susceptible they'll be to drop out," Lucio said Thursday.

Lucio said a September start date for all schools would have also helped last summer when the state suffered through a heat wave. Also, students with summer jobs would benefit from a full summer vacation, as would teachers working on advanced degrees during the summer, according to Lucio.

Lucio said the impact of later school start dates on tourism businesses isn't as significant as the negative effect on migrant students.

"The businesses, they are going to get along. But the students who drop out, who's going to pick up the slack for them?" Lucio said at an Edinburg gathering of school and city officials Wednesday.

Among those opposing the uniform school year bill during the last session was the Texas Association of School Administrators. The organization and other school officials said earlier start dates allow the fall semester to end and exams to be given before the Christmas break.

At the Edinburg luncheon, Lucio discussed other education proposals of his, including the creation of a permanent state fund to help districts finance construction.

Another proposal calls for high school students to take the Texas Academic Skills Program test by the beginning of their senior year, so teachers can determine the students' learning deficiencies before graduation.

Currently, students take the standardized test before they start college. If they fail it, they must take remedial classes.

Lucio's proposals won him support in Edinburg, at least. The city council passed a resolution earlier this week supporting the uniform school year bill and Edinburg school board president Adelberto Garza said the constant demand for new schools would be helped by a permanent construction fund.

"With our growth in the student population being so pronounced, we're having difficulty finding money to build schools," he said.

A last farewell— Longtime county employee Dennis Shaw, right, was honored Thursday at a retirement party in his honor in the county courtroom. County commissioner Johnny Latham, center presented Shaw with a belt buckle for his years of service. Greg Conn presented Shaw with a plaque depicting the 18 1/2 years Shaw spent using a road grader and other large road equipment.

Charter schools not yet improving scores

Moses wants to allow more time

AUSTIN (AP) — Students in independent charter schools — created to improve education by encouraging new approaches — generally performed at lower levels on the state achievement test than traditional public school students, according to a new report.

The performance record drew criticism from those who want a cautious approach toward charter schools, which operate independently of school districts and are free from many state regulations.

They said charter schools, which are publicly funded, should be shut down if they don't work.

"The report shows that on most of these charter schools, they've done a good job but unfortunately the engine doesn't run," Rene Lara of the Texas Federation of Teachers said Thursday, the day the report was presented to a State board of Education committee.

Charter school supporters pointed to the large percentage of students at the campuses who are considered at risk academically and said it's too early to judge the effort.

"A lot of students that are in these programs ... have not been successful in our public schools, so they're finding another niche, so to speak, where they can get an education. That's what we want. That was the purpose of the creation of the charters," said Education Commissioner Mike Moses.

He said he continues to support the charter school movement, which has been backed by state leaders, including Gov. George W. Bush, as a way to boost educational innovation.

"The students that are in those programs are taking the tests. They're in our accountability system. And as long as we can measure their performance, and measure their progress and report that to the public, I think that will serve as a sufficient encouragement for those schools to improve, and I'm willing to give them time to do that," Moses said.

The report focuses on Texas' first 19 open-enrollment charter schools. It reflects the second year of a study of the schools, 16 of which began operating in 1996 and three in 1997.

The schools together reported a May 1998 enrollment of 4,135. Eleven of the 19 schools served at-risk students. Such students, according to reports from school directors, made up 68 percent of the charter school population.

The Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, the statewide academic skills test, was administered last spring to students in 17 open-enrollment charter schools — including nine at which the majority of students were at risk of dropping out.

The average percentage of charter-school students passing all TAAS tests taken was lower than the state average in grades three, four, six, seven, eight and as they prepared to exit school.

In grade five, the charter school average was slightly higher than the state average — 84 percent compared to 83 percent.

The report follows last year's state accountability ratings on 20 charter schools, in which one received a high rating of recognized; nine were judged acceptable; seven received low ratings; and three weren't rated.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Here's my letter on how I met my wife. I hope you will print it.

Ann Landers: One fateful summer evening, I went to a get-acquainted party at the University of Michigan. There, I saw a beautiful, young co-ed. Her voice was soft and smooth, and her large brown eyes captivated me. I said, "I'm Marvin. What's your name?" She replied, "Laura." "Where are you from?" I asked. "Pennsylvania," she replied. "Whereabouts in Pennsylvania?" I asked. "Indiana," she answered. I was puzzled and said, "Wait a minute. I thought you said you were from Pennsylvania."

"I'm from Indiana, Pennsylvania," she said. "Indiana is the name of the city."

On our second date, I asked, "How would you like to go for an airplane ride on our next date?" She said it sounded great and asked if I was a pilot. I said yes. We went to the Ann Arbor airport, where I rented a small plane. We climbed into a little two-seater, flew over Ann Arbor and circled the university campus. "How do you like it?" I asked her. "It's wonderful!" she said. If there had been any other answer, that would probably have been our last date. We've been married for 59 years and have four children, 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. — Marvin in Washington

Dear Marvin: It took a lot of courage for Laura to fly with you in that little crate nearly 60 years ago. No wonder you fell for her. I hope you have many more happy years together.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night, I was driving in the city and hit a cat. "Just some stray animal," most people would say. I stopped my car and checked the poor creature, but it wasn't breathing. There was no identification, but I couldn't get over the guilt of thinking some child might be looking for "Fluffy" or "Tiger."

When I was growing up, my two cats were hit by cars. I begged my mother not to let them out, but she insisted that cats needed "prowling" time. That is the most insane thing I have ever heard. A pet is part of your family. Would you let a child out to play alone? Pets don't need to be out running around. Cats can be litter-trained. Dogs should be walked on a leash or kept in a fenced yard.

If one thing comes from this letter, I hope it is that people will take better care of their pets and give them the chance to grow old with the rest of the family. To the cat I hit last night — I'm sorry we couldn't have met under better circumstances. — E.M. in Lonoke, Ark.

Dear E.M.: The accident was not your fault, so please stop tormenting yourself. I have said several times that pet owners should NEVER let their pets roam free. Anyone who takes on the responsibility of caring for an animal should be willing to keep it safe from harm. Your letter may save a few of those nine lives.

Dear Ann: I have at least a dozen books on health remedies, but when a fish bone got stuck in my throat, there were no solutions in any of them. As I was dressing to go to the emergency room (and pay $518 for the service), my wife said, "Eat a slice of bread with peanut butter." I did, and the bone slid right down. — B.B. in N.Y.

Dear B.B.: Thank you for a letter that could save many readers a lot of anxiety, plus $518.

FELLOWSHIP OF BELIEVERS

The Fellowship of Believers is an experiment in trust. It is true that no one knows who all has the keys to the church. The keys are everywhere. They are everywhere because the church belongs to the people. The members come and go to check on various things and perform certain tasks quietly and, often, anonymously.

The Fellowship of Believers is an experiment in trust because each year a single, non-paid layperson is chosen to serve as administrator. That person, along with a church-chosen secretary sees to all the business of the church. The church trusts the wisdom and integrity of that one person. That one person for 1998 is Carolyn Baxter. Soon the church will choose an administrator for 1999.

The church, located at 245 N. Kingwood (at Moreman), gathers on Sundays at 9:15 for coffee and refreshments. There is a unique Sunday school experience for children at 9:30. At that same time the adults meet in an open-discussion atmosphere called "Forum." This Sunday's forum will continue to explore world religions.

Gathered worship begins at 10:30. On this, The First Sunday After Epiphany, the lectionary focuses on the baptism of Jesus. The suggested gospel, Matthew 3:13-17, invites a sermon entitled, "The Good and the Bad of Baptism." Worship concludes no later than 11:25, in time for an early lunch or a football game.

A supervised nursery is available at all services.

Couch makes it official, will leave Kentucky

By Tim Whitmire
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Late in the season, Kentucky football fans chanted, "One more year." It was not to be — Tim Couch is heading to the NFL.

He is skipping his senior season to enter the NFL draft, where millions of dollars await him as a potential No. 1 pick.

"I've made my decision and I'm going into the NFL draft," Couch said at a news conference Thursday.

Couch's announcement, just one day before the NFL's deadline for early entries to its draft, ended months of questions and weeks of speculation that had reached high pitch in the days since Kentucky's season ended Jan. 1 with a 26-14 loss in the Outback Bowl.

Couch's decision to turn pro will give the expansion Cleveland Browns an opportunity to make him the No. 1 pick. Browns president Carmen Policy has said he is open to taking a franchise quarterback if one is available.

The NFL prohibits teams from commenting on underclassmen who are leaving school early until the league releases its list of players on Monday. So the Browns, who could be torn between taking Couch or Texas running back Ricky Williams, won't be able to discuss their plans with the No. 1 pick until next week.

Many scouts believe Couch — with his size (6-foot-5, 225 pounds), accuracy, touch and experience in Kentucky's pro-style passing offense — is the

NBA sides begin the healing

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — The NBA wasted no time Thursday trying to put an ugly lockout behind it, pledging to lure back fans with cheaper seats and preparing for a shortened season.

The NBA Board of Governors unanimously approved the settlement 29-0, and commissioner David Stern said the league hopes to start the season Feb. 5 and play about 50 games.

Each team will play two exhibition games — one home and one away — and admission will be free. Pre-season scrimmages also will be open to the public. Next season, at least 500 tickets for every regular-season game will be priced at $10 to lure families to arenas. Seats in large-market arenas like Los Angeles and New York sell anywhere from $25 to $1,250.

"We have some winning back of fans to do, and we're going to do it," Stern said at a news conference where he was joined by union director Billy Hunter and deputy commissioner Russ Granik. "Most important to us is that basketball games will be upon us again, and as a basketball fan and particularly a fan of the NBA, I am elated."

The six-month lockout ended early Wednesday following an all-night bargaining session between Stern and Hunter. An agreement was reached just one day before the Board of Governors would have voted to cancel what was left of the 1998-99 season.

The league, meantime, lifted its gag order on coaches, general managers and owners, all of whom were eager to get back to the business of playing ball.

"It's just the beginning stages of being able to start to do the work that all of us enjoy," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "Obviously, we're happy about the lockout being over. Happy is an understatement."

Stern and Granik also said players could use team facilities beginning Monday, although coaches will be prohibited from working with them.

The lockout will not be officially lifted until the agreement is put into writing and signed by both sides — a process that should take a week to 10 days.

"I'm shocked they think they can get it done in 10 days," said Atlanta Hawks

Superintendents favor present UIL postseason format

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — School superintendents favor the current football playoff system, which crowns two state champions in class 2A through 5A, according to a survey released Thursday by the University Interscholastic League.

The UIL conducted the survey after hearing requests to change the current playoff format.

The current format advances three district teams with the largest of the three going into a 32-team Division I playoff, and other the two into a 64-team Division II. Each division crowns a state champion.

The survey gave superintendents four options, including a plan by the Texas High School Coaches Association to advance three district teams into the playoffs but crown just one champion in each class.

Vikings will look to Edwards' experience phies from his days as a member of the now-crumbling Dallas Cowboys' 1990s dynasty. That's a big reason the Vikings paid $10 million to sign Edwards three years ago, the most they ever paid for a free agent from another team.

Edwards hasn't always been worth the investment, and it's possible this season will be his last with the Vikings even though he has two years left on his contract.

But for now, with the Vikings enjoying home-field advantage throughout the NFC playoffs for the first time since 1976, they hope Edwards' championship experience will help them through uncharted territory.

"Whenever you flash a ring up and the players don't have one, they say, 'Whoa, he's got one.' I mean, as soon as you do that you have credibility," said defensive coordinator Foge Fazio. "And having three

Tyler man recalls early days before Ryan Express rolled TYLER — Red Murff's career in baseball didn't begin until he was 30 years old, but he more than made up for it with his contributions to the game during the next 40 years.

Perhaps his greatest contribution found the spotlight again Tuesday, as Nolan Ryan, whom Murff scouted and helped the New York Mets select in the 10th round of the 1965 amateur draft, earned election to the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Ryan, who broke in with the Mets in 1966, and also played with the California Angels, the Houston Astros and Texas Rangers, will be inducted on July 25, along with former Kansas City third baseman George Brett and Milwaukee outfielder Robin Yount.

Murff, who went to Cooperstown for the first time in 1997 during Phil Niekro's induction, is ready for a return trip.

"I doubt there's anything that could keep me away," said Murff. "I had a great August that year (1997). I went to Phil's induction, and then went to Milwaukee for the 40th anniversary of the Braves world championship."

Murff and his wife, Sarah, recently moved to Tyler from Brenham. Sarah, who retired from teaching in the Brenham school system in June, is a Tyler native and wanted to return to her home.

Also, Murff pitched for the Tyler East Texans in 1952, where he led the team in victories with 27.

This was two years after Murff quit his job at Union Carbide to pursue a baseball career at age 30. He eventually went on to play for Dallas in the Texas League, where he earned minor league player of the year honors in 1955, before being purchased by the Milwaukee Braves in 1956.

Despite a ruptured disk in his back, Murff contributed to the Braves' 1957 World Championship, with a roster that included Warren Spahn, Eddie Mathews and Henry Aaron.

After retiring, Murff spent some time managing a Braves farm team in Tampa, Fla., where he came across Niekro and turned him on to the knuckleball that would come to define that pitcher's career.

Following the Braves, Murff returned to Texas as director of Texas scouting for the Houston Colt .45s in 1961. Two years later, Murff left that post and went to the New York Mets.

The day Murff first saw Ryan, he came across him by accident. After scouting a pitcher at the Galveston Tournament in 1964, Murff stopped at Clear Creek High School to talk to a friend before going to Houston.

president Stan Kasten, noting that lawyers have a tendency to bring the process to a halt once they start fighting over contract language.

On this day, however, even the opposing attorneys mingled and joked with each other, joining in on the collective sense of relief at having a settlement at last.

While owners spoke of repairing relations with fans, Stern cleverly ducked a question about whether he was bluffing when he set Thursday as the deadline for scrapping the season.

The commissioner simply grinned and said: "You didn't pay to find out."

Hunter talked about repairing the partnership between the opposing sides.

"We're glad this is over," he said. "Our players are anxious to play, and we're anxious to join hands with David, Russ and the owners of the 29 teams to really create a strong and familial relationship — one that will take the NBA to another level and to bring back the fans."

"The only regret I have is that it took us so long to get where we are," Hunter said. "We're glad to be back, and we'll do whatever we have to do in order to demonstrate that."

The unanimous vote by the Board of Governors was taken by a show of hands, rather than secret ballot, during a two-hour meeting.

The players approved the seven-year collective bargaining agreement by a 179-5 vote on Wednesday.

Stern and Granik opened the meeting by addressing representatives from each of the 29 teams, and league attorney Joel Litvin explained the details of the new pact.

Hunter then was brought into the room and given a chance to speak to the owners, just as Stern was permitted to speak to the players a day earlier.

"No applause was asked for or offered," New Jersey Nets president Michael Rowe said.

Granik said the agreement should be in written form by Jan. 18, after which training camps will open and teams will be permitted to sign free agents and make trades.

The regular season will last through the end of April, and the playoff format will remain unchanged. The NBA Finals should conclude by June 29 or 30.

"We're all happy to be back in the basketball business," Granik said.

Players will be faced with an exhausting schedule until playoffs start. Teams will be asked, on occasion, to play three games in three nights, something that hasn't happened in more than 10 years.

Teams also will play a limited number of non-conference games, with many of the best matchups televised by NBC.

Union president Patrick Ewing was not present at the final bargaining session or at Thursday's news conference. Union attorney Jeffrey Kessler said Ewing was busy working out, trying to shed some of the weight he gained during the lockout.

Format

tendent Jack Patton said he didn't recall participating in the survey, but added he would "probably" favor keeping the present playoff format.

Of the 695 superintendents surveyed, 366 favored the current system. The single-champion format was second with 263. Both of those options easily outdistanced two others that would have flipped playoff brackets every other year or advanced four teams in 5A districts to the playoffs.

"Schools seem to be very satisfied with the current system, particularly those schools who haven't been to the playoffs very much but can go under this system," said UIL Athletic Director Charles Breithaupt.

Coaches association Executive Director Eddie Joseph criticized the current system as doing too little to reward a district champion. Its plan would have given district champions a first round bye.

"We have people who are very, very unhappy with the format that we have. You get two 10-0 teams playing each other while two 3-7 teams play each other. The district champion gets no advantage whatsoever for winning the district. It doesn't make sense," Joseph said.

It doesn't make much sense to Hereford coach Craig Yenser who guided the Whitefaces to their first Class 4A playoff berth since 1992 with an 8-2 regular season in 1998.

Yenser said he wouldn't favor one of the options the superintendents were surveyed on — three district teams advancing to the playoffs, but crowning only one champion per classification. Such a format would require an additional round, requiring the two teams that advanced to the championship game to play seven playoff games.

"Personally, I think you create more problems than you would solve," Yenser said. "Adding a playoff game, and having seven playoff games — I don't think that's the answer."

Yenser said he would be in favor of adding a Class 6A and taking the top two teams out of each district.

The current system also creates too many state champions, said Midland Lee coach John Parchman, who sits on the coaches association board of directors.

Midland Lee won the 1998 Class 5A Division II state championship for its first state title.

"It's too watered down. There's too many champions," Parchman said.

Class 5A has been using the two-champion format since 1990 and Class 4A since 1996. Last year was the first two-champion season for classes 2A and 3A.

Class 2A was the only classification to favor the one-champion format.

Breithaupt says he thinks the 2A and 3A schools will learn to like the two-champion system. "It bears out the experience factor," he said. "The bigger classes have been doing it longer."

Joseph questioned the timing of the survey. The UIL said the survey would be conducted in January but it was sent out and returned in December, Joseph said.

The coaches association had little time to rally support for its option, Joseph said.

Breithaupt conceded there was "miscommunication" on the survey dates, but said the coaches have known since June the UIL would consider alternative formats.

In a best-of-all-possible-worlds scenario, Yenser said he would like to see the UIL return to the top two teams in each district advancing to the playoffs and crowning one state champion in each of the five classes.

"I don't think that's even a possibility, I don't think they'd even consider it," he said. "I don't think they'd ever go back to that, but I liked it."

kind of prospect the Browns could build a franchise around, and Couch said he hopes to get the opportunity.

"Hopefully I'll be fortunate enough end up in Cleveland, but if I don't I'll just have to make it somewhere else," he said.

Couch said he made up his mind to leave in the days immediately following the Outback Bowl.

"I've always been a competitive person, and I want to compete at the highest level," he said.

The decision was big news in Lexington, where four local television stations carried Couch's announcement live — even on a day when the U.S. Senate was beginning a presidential impeachment trial.

Wildcat fans had made their feelings known in November, when they serenaded the quarterback with a chant of "One more year! One more year!" as he stood on the sideline late in Kentucky's final home game of the season.

In conversations and on Internet forums, though, most were resigned to the inevitability of Couch's departure and understanding of his decision.

This season, Couch threw for 4,275 yards and 36 touchdowns, and completed Kentucky's transformation from an SEC doormat to contender. The Wildcats finished 7-5.

of them, you have a heck of a lot of credibility."

Edwards doesn't want to talk about the future. Taking the company line espoused by Brad Johnson, Jake Reed and other players whose futures in Minnesota are uncertain, Edwards said Thursday he'd address that issue whenever the season ends.

But Edwards talks freely about the past, and this season reminds him a lot of 1992, when the Cowboys were young and emerging and on the way to the first of three titles this decade.

"I mean, it's a lot of guys that are very, very hungry and not knowing, very curious," Edwards said.

That's where he can help.

Although he's generally quiet by nature and has had an unremarkable season — he is tied for eighth on the team in tackles, has no sacks and only one tackle for a loss — he still knows what it takes to win this time of year.

The Cowboys had home-field advantage during two of their three Super Bowl seasons and enjoyed first-round byes all three years. The Vikings' first-round bye this season was their first since 1989, and they are the first dome team ever to have home-field throughout the playoffs.

Minnesota (15-1) opens the playoffs Sunday at home against Arizona (10-7) and is favored by 15 points.

"The guys will feel it Sunday exactly what that means to have a week off, because you come in there fresh," said Edwards, whose 16 postseason games are more than any of the Vikings.

"Just imagine having a bye week and another team not."

The possibility of their first trip to the Super Bowl since '76 — and the first title in team history — has become tantalizingly close for the Vikings now that the playoffs are underway.

Edwards has helped his teammates understand they need two more wins to earn that trip to Miami.

"A lot of guys like to ask him what it's like to be in a Super Bowl, what it's like actually to be in that week," linebacker Ed McDaniell said. "But you're talking about the Super Bowl. That's something we can't even see yet. We've got two more games. So everybody's excited."

"What Dixon has pretty much been telling us is you've got to take this and be calm, take it as any other game, but bring it to another level."

Early

that is awaiting a publisher.

Ryan, meanwhile, is on the board of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission and has cattle and banking interests in his native Alvin.

And now, Ryan has a date with Cooperstown. No one could be happier than Murff.

"I feel I had a great career in baseball," said Murff. "When I started scouting Nolan in 1964, I think he was a little in awe of me, because of my major league experience. In the last 20 years, the roles have been reversed."

Beyond beauty 'Homicide' addition is doing her duty

NEW YORK (AP) — Her smile would soften the heart of Saddam Hussein. Her willow frame is a striking counterpoint to her masculine name. Her burning desire: to play roles that have nothing to do with her being drop-dead gorgeous.

Recognition as a character actress? "How badly I want that!" says Michael Michele. Now, as a regular on her dream show, "Homicide: Life on the Street," she holds her own in a squad room with the likes of Richard Belzer, Yaphet Kotto, Callie Thorne and Clark Johnson — superb character actors who, in stark contrast to Michele, look like everyday people.

The message she advances — both as René Sheppard, a Baltimore homicide detective, and as Michael Michele, a star of this splendid crime drama — is that a beautiful woman can rightfully claim a job without letting that beauty define her. In other words: "How dare you! Because YOU think I'm attractive, I can't do the job!"

Back in her native Manhattan recently to shoot a "Homicide"-"Law & Order" crossover scheduled for the February sweep, Michele is spiffy in a gray pantsuit that sets off her mocha complexion (her mom is black, her dad white).

"We said, let's see what happens if she is doing her job effectively, efficiently, and gets caught in a very brutal beat-down. Then, after she gets out of the hospital, we get to see what happens to her psychologically back in the squad room, when those same men who were oohing and aahing see a woman who has been physically altered, at least for a little while."

"Does she look like a cop? That's what we thought viewers would wonder when Sheppard was introduced," Michele says. "So we addressed that issue at the start of the season. We showed how the men in the squad room related to her, what they would say — 'Ummmmm, baby!' — and how she would respond to that."

"But we've since worked beyond that ooh-la-la stuff."

"Homicide" takes Sheppard a giant step past ooh-la-la with the story arc beginning this week (Friday at 9 p.m. CST on NBC).

"We said, let's see what happens if she is doing her job effectively, efficiently, and gets caught in a very brutal beat-down," says Michele, clearly savoring the dramatic consequences. "Then, after she gets out of the hospital, we get to see what happens to her psychologically back in the squad room, when those same men who were oohing and aahing see a woman who has been physically altered, at least for a little while."

That, she says, "is why I fought so hard to be on 'Homicide.'"

The drama premiered in January 1993, and ever since, Michele says, "Homicide" has been my shining star. "I gotta get on it, I kept telling myself." She knew it was the ideal showcase for the kind of acting she wanted to do.

Even the cast — TV's most ethnically and racially diverse — seems happenstance in its makeup. No tokenism here. No time for it: There are cases to clear, stories to tell. Meanwhile, leave it to "Homicide" to sign a pretty face, then bloody it. Just chalk the whole thing up as initiation — Sheppard's and Michele's.

458 Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

ABRAHAM'S BATTLE WITH THE FIVE KINGS
ABRAHAM AND HIS NEPHEW, LOT, HAVE GONE SEPARATE WAYS BECAUSE THEIR FLOCKS ARE TOO LARGE TO EXIST TOGETHER ON THE SAME GRAZING LANDS. LOT HAS GONE TO THE PLAINS NEAR SODOM, BUT...

...ABRAHAM HAS TRAVELED FURTHER WEST WITH HIS SHEEP INTO THE LAND OF CANAAN...

THERE IS AN ABUNDANCE OF GOOD LAND FOR LOT AND FOR ME, NOW THAT WE HAVE SEPARATED!

...VIOLENT DAYS ARE IN STORE, HOWEVER, FOR ALL THOSE LIVING NEAR THE CITY OF SODOM, AS A GROUP OF KINGS MAKE CERTAIN PLANS!

WE SHALL TAKE SODOM WITH OUR ARMIES VERY EASILY!

IT IS THE SEASON FOR KINGS TO MAKE WAR IN ORDER TO GAIN MORE SLAVES AND ACQUIRE A LARGER AMOUNT OF TREASURE.

THE ARMY OF BERA, KING OF ALL SODOM, HAVING BEEN FOREWARNED, HAS GATHERED AT THE VALLE OF SIDDIM WITH BERSHA, THE KING OF GOMORRAH, AND SOME OTHER LOCAL KINGS, TO GIVE BATTLE AND TO PROTECT THEIR CITIES AGAINST THE INVADERS—BUT BERA'S PLANS ARE NOT WELL FORMULATED OR HE WOULD NEVER PICK THE SIDDIM VALLEY AS A PLACE TO FIGHT THE FOE!

Next Week THE TRAP!

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Republicans, Demos work to avoid partisan trial

The Associated Press

After swearing to judge President Clinton fairly and impartially, senators for both parties gathered today for an extraordinary private meeting aimed at working out a framework for the impeachment trial. "We're close," Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle said as he arrived.

Republicans and Democrats walked together into the Old Senate Chamber, the scene of many great debates in the first half of the 19th century, in a show of bipartisanship as both sides tried to keep the proceedings from dissolving into partisan sniping.

"Just the fact that we're meeting — I'm always optimistic," Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., said.

Majority Leader Trent Lott and Daschle, each with his own plans for a trial, invited rank-and-file members to the room that was the Senate's chamber between 1810 and 1859. Security officers guarded the doors to the chamber, and extra chairs had to be brought in — there weren't a hundred senators back in the 19th century when the chamber was in use.

An attempt to hold the same meeting in the chamber collapsed Thursday, after partisan rancor broke out only moments after President Clinton was formally made a defendant in the first presidential impeachment trial since the Andrew Johnson case in 1868. The primary cause of the rupture was a dispute over the need for witnesses, which Republicans favor and Democrats oppose.

Republicans and Democrats walked to the Old Senate Chamber, the scene of many great debates in the first half of the 19th century, in a show of bipartisanship as both sides tried to keep the proceedings from dissolving into partisan sniping.

Republicans on Thursday had scheduled votes on their proposed ground rules and also on a Democratic alternative. With a 55-45 advantage, the GOP would have won the fight, but at the price of setting a partisan tone that might never be overcome in the proceedings. Lott pulled back from the brink and kept negotiating, deciding senators should "keep calm and cool and dignified." His move prompted Daschle to proclaim: "I think there is some common ground."

"We don't want the first vote to be a partisan vote, and it came very close to being one," said Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan. Despite such hopeful statements, the two parties were unable to bridge the gap during the day — especially over the prospect that witnesses such as former White House intern Monica Lewinsky would testify about sex in the tradition-bound Senate.

Clinton is charged under two articles of impeachment, both related to his attempts to conceal his extramarital affair Ms. Lewinsky. One article charges the president with perjury before a federal grand jury, the second with obstructing justice.

Sen. Ted Stevens, an Alaska Republican serving since December 1968, echoed the thoughts of many Democratic senators, commenting he had "serious questions" about calling Ms. Lewinsky to testify about her sexual escapades with the president at the White House.

House prosecutors have failed to allay such concerns, despite expressing a willingness to avoid questions on explicit sexual material.

At the White House, spokesman Joe Lockhart told reporters, "We are convinced we can make a compelling case that will lead the United States Senate not to remove the president."

He added that the president's lawyers were "ready to go" and ready to accept Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's evidence in the Lewinsky matter in exchange for a ban on witnesses. But, he added, if the House insisted on calling witnesses it would cause a delay, "because bringing witnesses in and not stipulating to a record opens up a whole area of motions, discovery and depositions. And that takes time."

The charges against Clinton were brought in the name of the House of Representatives and "of the people of the United States of America." But as every senator was aware as the trial opened, the articles were approved by a House that voted along mostly partisan lines.

"We are now jurors," Stevens said. "We don't want chaos."

Jobs

of the gain reflected unseasonably warm weather, which produced a huge 104,000 gain in construction but much of it reflected the U.S. economy's resilience in the face of the global economic slump that began in Asia a year and a half ago.

For the year, employers added 2.9 million jobs, compared with 3.4 million in 1997. That growth was achieved despite 234,000 job losses in manufacturing and 35,000 in mining, principally oil-drilling, reflecting slack world demand.

In December, makers of computers, farm equipment and other industrial machinery recorded 10,000 job losses but manufacturers whose products are used in construction — stone, clay and glass products, furniture and fixtures — are still hiring.

Construction has been helped not only by warm weather at the end of the year but by low interest rates, a byproduct of economic problems elsewhere in the world.

Payrolls in related service industries also are growing strongly. Real estate firms added 5,000 jobs in December 57,000 jobs in 1998, double the gain of 1997, and mortgage brokerages added 4,000 in December and 52,000 for the year.

Retailers expanded their payrolls by 53,000 in December, reflecting big increases at restaurants, department stores and building-supply stores. Other areas of brisk job growth last year included temporary help firms, computer and management services and public relations. However, new jobs in health services totaled 131,000, about half as many as in 1997.

Katharine G. Abraham, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, cautioned that December job growth may have been inflated somewhat by a statistical anomaly. The department recorded 59,000 new jobs in government after seasonal adjustment, most of them state education jobs. But that probably reflects the fact that it surveyed a bit earlier in December than usual and a larger-than-usual number of colleges were still in session.

Generosity has its own limits

PRETORIA, South Africa — Generosity has its limits where soccer is concerned, even among world leaders like President Nelson Mandela and British Prime Minister Tony Blair.

Their nations are vying to be named host of the 2006 soccer World Cup competition.

As Mandela and the visiting Blair emerged from two hours of talks Thursday, a reporter asked Mandela if he had tried to persuade Blair to drop Britain's bid to become host for the event.

Mandela said he'd forgotten, then he asked Blair: "Will you be generous enough to do this?"

Blair responded with a grin: "Friendly rivalry is always a good thing."

Paul McCartney

ATLANTA — Paul McCartney winged his way to Georgia and was all smiles as daughter Heather unveiled a colorful line of housewares inspired by ancient Indian cultures.

"We're not nervous at all," McCartney said with a grin as he gripped his daughter's hand at a news conference Thursday. "She's my big baby."

Buyers and others at AmericasMart got glimpses of the former Beatle at the trade fair displaying Heather's work. The line includes rugs, wall hangings, pillows and other housewares inspired by the Tarahumara and Huichol Indian tribes, with whom she lived for a while.

Both Paul and Heather — Linda McCartney's daughter by her first marriage — spoke emotionally of Linda's death last year from breast cancer.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS People

Paul and Linda had three other children.

As for the housewares, McCartney said he was delighted.

"It is great," McCartney said. "It's what Linda would have liked, I know that."

Asked which designs have her mother's influence, Heather replied: "All of them — the color, the strength, the compassion for this Earth."

Rod Stewart Rachel Hunter

LOS ANGELES — Rod Stewart and Rachel Hunter have separated after eight years of marriage, according to the rock star's management company. Stewart was 45 when he married Hunter, then 21, a model with the New York Ford model agency. The couple have two children, Liam, 4, and Renee, 6. A brief statement released by the couple through Stiefel Entertainment on Thursday asked "for the media's cooperation in respecting the privacy of their two children" and said there were no "immediate plans for the couple's divorce."

Debbie Reynolds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Debbie Reynolds has joined the crusade to keep the landmark H-O-L-L-Y-W-O-O-D sign looming above the nation's entertainment capital.

"It's just a lot of wood and tin. You have to look after these things," the movie star said Thursday as she helped the Hollywood Historic Trust announce the famous 50-foot letters were available for corporate adoption at $100,000 a year.

It's part of "Extreme Shopping: Hollywood" on cable television's QVC home shopping network Jan. 22 and Jan. 23.

Corporate sponsors won't be able to affix logos to the sign but can use it in advertisements.

QVC viewers can also adopt a celebrity star along the Walk of Fame during the special Hollywood themed program.

Morning shows

NEW YORK — We're No. 2!

CBS staffers had reason to pop open champagne Thursday — the network's perennial doormat "This Morning" slipped past ABC's "Good Morning America" into second place last week behind the morning champ, NBC's "Today."

The last time the CBS morning news program climbed out of last place in the ratings was a few weeks in 1983-84 when the show was briefly ahead of "Today." CBS hadn't beaten ABC in the morning since January 1977.

It's an even bigger embarrassment for "Good Morning America." Troubled by the show's decline, ABC hopes Diane Sawyer — who was on the CBS morning show when it pulled ahead of "Today" 15 years ago — can work some magic again. The network announced this week that Sawyer and Charles Gibson will replace hosts Lisa McRee and Kevin Newman starting Jan. 18.

Starr's grand jury indicts friend who undermined Willey allegations

The Associated Press
Julie Hiatt Steele, the friend whose testimony undermined Kathleen Willey's claim that President Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance, has been indicted on charges of lying and obstructing justice. Ms. Steele was charged Thursday with three counts of obstruction of justice and one count of false statements by a grand jury in Alexandria, Va., working with Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr. Among other things, the indictment accused Ms. Steele of filing a false affidavit in Paula Jones' sexual harassment suit against Clinton, lying to two grand juries and attempting to influence the testimony of other witnesses. "I'm just shocked," Ms. Steele was quoted as saying in today's editions of the Rich- mond Times-Dispatch. "I can't believe it's all come to this." Reached at home today, Mrs. Willey said, "I regret that she brought this upon herself." Nancy Luque, a lawyer for Ms. Steele, called the indictment reckless and said it "is a glaring example of Mr. Starr's gross abuse of his prosecutorial power." "Mr. Starr has clearly timed this baseless accusation in a transparent attempt to unfairly influence the pending impeachment proceeding," Luque said in a statement. Luque said she began receiving phone calls from reporters three days ago indicating that Ms. Steele was to be indicted and accused Starr of "unlawfully leaking confidential grand jury information to the media."

The president's lawyers had used Ms. Steele's testimony in an effort to cast doubt on the credibility of Mrs. Willey, a former White House volunteer who alleges Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance toward her in the Oval Office in 1993. Clinton denies Mrs. Willey's accusation, which became a focus of Mrs. Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit. In his testimony in the Jones lawsuit, the president said Mrs. Willey "was not telling the truth" and that her credibility had been "pretty well shattered."
