Mother Nature's joke ...

... but cattle feeders don't think it's funny

Heavy snow, high winds created severe problems for feeding operations; some cattle suffocated, others wandered off and were struck by trains, some missing

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Mother Nature pulled a not-so-funny joke on area cattle feeders last week with a storm that dumped upwards of 12 inches of snow on the area. With the snow came high winds and cold temperatures that had adverse effects on cattle and cattle feeders. Feeders, depending on the cattle's age, size, and condition and the location of the lots, lost up to 100 head of cattle. Some suffocated; some died when they got loose and wandered onto railroad tracks; and the owners just haven't been able to locate some missing animals. David Hill, owner of Hill Cattle Co., said he lost seven or eight new arrivals from Alabama. Most were young animals which suffocated when the animals huddled together for warmth. "We didn't lose any fat cattle, but we're going to have some with lingering sickness through the spring," he said. "The ones that died were young and weak and already stressed out from a 24-hour haul."

Wade Lewis, manager at Hereford Feed Yards, said his feedlot fared pretty well and didn't lose any animals to the weather. He said the location of the yard helped protect the animals from the blowing snow. "We had some extra sickness, due to the weather, but it wasn't too bad," Lewis said. Hereford Bi-Products owner Garth Merrick said his business picked up considerably during the week, but it had tapered off and was close to normal by week's end. "Business seemed to pick up on Monday; it probably peaked along about Wednesday," Merrick said. "All together, business increased by about 40 percent through the week." He also said some animals that wandered away were hit by trains. "I can probably say that all the weather-related deaths have been cleaned up by Friday," said Merrick. Hill is one of many individuals who are still holding cattle that wandered from their home pens. Hill said most death losses occur when the animals huddle up to share each other's body heat, and the weak ones just suffocate. "If they get loose, they always head for high ground. That's when they get hit by the trains. You can't get them away from the tracks," Hill said. "But that cold wind is what really gets them. It blows hard and cold up their noses and they get to where they just can't breathe."

private producers might find the deductible costs to steep, just for a few head. "We didn't lose many," said Hill. "And something good comes from everything bad. We needed this moisture and it's able to soak into the soil." Some of the larger feeders were unwilling to discuss the losses sustained during the storm and would only say their daily losses were considerable.

Texan wants public debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Kay Bailey Hutchison, Arlen Specter and others are pushing for rules changes to open the Senate's debate on the articles of impeachment against President Clinton. "I think it is so important for the American people to see what the reasoning, what the thought process, what the points of law were on which we made this very historic decision," Mrs. Hutchison, R-Texas, said at a Capitol news conference. Specter, R-Pa., said closed-door deliberations would shift public discussions to CNN and other news shows instead of the Senate forum in which they should be conducted. "I believe it is very important for the American people to understand why we are doing what we are doing," Specter said. "The public has a right to know." Mrs. Hutchison, joined by several other Republicans and Democrats, intends to offer a motion that would permit open final deliberations. Senate rules now call for those deliberations to be closed to the public. The open-deliberations forces are "very close" to rounding up the two-thirds majority necessary to waive the Senate rules, she said. "People who had originally stated they would not support this are now changing their minds because they are beginning to see the enormity of this impact, and they're also thinking of history." She complained that few details were available from the Senate's only other impeachment trial of a president — that of Andrew Johnson in 1868 — because of the closed-door sessions.

"I think it is so important for ... people to see what the reasoning, what the thought process, what the points of law were on which we made this very historic decision." Hutchison

HRMC officials sit and wait

By Don Cooper

Administrators at Hereford Regional Medical Center haven't been saying much about plans for the hospital simply because they don't know what to say. There are two major reports — a strategic plan and a master facilities plan — that will be available by mid-to-late March, but until the two plans are formally presented, the hospital administration has little information it can present to the public about what it wants to do and where it wants to go. A preliminary draft of the strategic plan, which is the compilation of discussions at the Jan. 15-16 retreat, has been distributed among the participants at the weekend session. The participants were to review the draft and make any revisions they thought necessary and return it to HRMC administrator John Studsrud or the Houston-based consulting firm HealthExec Inc. The retreat participants had until Friday to return their revised copies. The material will be sent to the consulting firm, which will prepare a new report, expected to be available by late this month. The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board will review the final report, which will be incorporated with the Master Facility Plan. The Master Facility Plan, which is being prepared by the Lubbock architectural firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, will be completed by mid-March. Representatives of the company will be in town Tuesday to re-evaluate space requirements and availability. Studsrud said the consultants will meet with hospital personnel involved in the areas being inspected. The combined reports — from the retreat and from the architectural consultants — will be compiled and the resulting material will be presented to another community meeting, Studsrud said.

Studsrud said he hopes the next community session will involve more members of the general public, adding he hopes the group "can come up with a process ... to educate the community" on the long-term needs of the hospital. "We will add additional people from the community. This (session) will be about how to address an action plan to present to the whole community," Studsrud said. "We want people to be involved." The master facility plan being developed by the architectural consultants and the strategic plan resulting from the community retreat both will offer the community some options for health care delivery in the county. The retreat participants saw four options: •A: Major "capital investment in Hereford-based ... resources to keep them vibrant, consistent with industry standards, and capable of delivering high-quality, reasonably comprehensive healthcare services";

• B: Modest investment ... "to maintain the existing level of service ... As long as possible";

• C: Minimal investment ... with "expectation that a reduction in healthcare service delivery ... will take place over the coming 1-2 years." Most service would be contracted through regional facilities based in Amarillo;

• D: Lease or sell the hospital district's assets to an "external organization that would provide" services for a negotiated period.

The draft document also included a summary of each option:

• A: This option would result in "long-term service delivery" based in, owned and operated by Hereford entities;

• B: This option would maintain the present level of services for up to five years, after which the community "would rely upon services from an Amarillo-based or nationally based healthcare organization";

• C: This option would accelerate the shift to "reliance upon Amarillo or a nationally based healthcare organization";

• D: This option would "retain the probability of Hereford-based ... delivery but this would pursued ... through contractual arrangements with an external entity operating in Hereford."

Although the retreat participants recommended the first option, they also acknowledged the decision to build a new hospital must rest with Deaf Smith County's voters because any construction would involve a bond issue.

Also to be included in the final strategic/master facilities report will be information gathered by the Community Health Improvement Partnership (CHIP), a grassroots organization that spent about a year evaluating the health care system in Deaf Smith County.

SUMMARY

What are the advantages and disadvantages of building a new hospital in Hereford? The following include some of the pros and cons outlined in a draft report from the Hereford Regional Medical Center Strategic Planning Retreat, which was held Jan. 15-16 at the Hereford Community Center.

ADVANTAGES

- Reduction of maintenance/upkeep costs;
- Modernization of technology;
- Will be attractive to new physicians and other healthcare providers;
- Will provide additional space for additional needed services requested by the community;
- Will provide flexibility for adaptation to change;
- Will enhance marketing to other counties;
- Will reverse trend of out-migration;
- Will provide jobs and boost the Hereford-area economy;
- Will cost less to build now.

DISADVANTAGES

- Lack of community support;
- Hereford economy not expanding enough to support;
- Worries about uncertain future;
- Impact on tax rates.

tors last fall, were considered relevant to the long-range planning.

The retreat's participants concluded the CHIP study was "solid, valuable."

However, unlike the CHIP partners, the retreat participants concluded that out-migration and knowledge of services "would be ... determined as a function of decisions relative to physical plant action."

'Revue in the key of life'

Cast members of the Amarillo Little Theatre production of Robert Fulgham's "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" (from left) Art Lynch, Laura Barton, Shawn Walsh, Ken Bender, Cara Lee and Treva Bradford were in Hereford Friday night for a performance. The production was sponsored by the Hereford Community Concert Association. See review, Page 1B.

Lawmaker promises to retain current benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are just as committed as President Clinton to maintaining a strong Social Security system, a GOP lawmaker said today, announcing plans to guarantee benefits are not cut.

Rep. Paul Ryan of Wisconsin said House leaders have pledged to move quickly on his measure, which would guarantee current benefits to all Social Security recipients.

"While we must move improve the system for working Americans, the benefits today's seniors have come to count on cannot and will not be changed in any way," Ryan said in the weekly Republican radio address.

Ryan said he has talked to thousands of seniors in his home state who fear the promised Social Security reforms will end up costing them their benefits. "We know that would not be fair," he said.

Under Clinton's plan, outlined in his State of the Union address, $2.7 trillion of $4.4 trillion in projected government surpluses over the next 15 years would be devoted to bolstering the Social Security system. The administration says these proposals would stall the system from running out of cash until 2055, instead of 2032 as now projected.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has cautioned that any permanent solution to the problem almost certainly would require either benefit cuts or higher taxes, because the system is so underfunded.

Greenspan was chairman of the blue-ribbon commission that 16 years ago recommended a combination of benefit cuts and higher taxes to meet an earlier Social Security funding crisis.

Clinton has not proposed any change in benefits, but has said he and Congress must work together in a bipartisan way to see if other adjustments are needed.

Ryan said he would use his legislation to ensure that retired Americans would not lose out as a result of any alterations in the system.

Jordan declares Hussein unable to govern; power shifts to his son

AMMAN, Jordan — With King Hussein near death, Jordan's government today declared him unable to rule and handed near total political power to his oldest son.

Granting administrative powers to Crown Prince

Abdullah was the first major step toward handing him the throne. He will have all the authority of the monarch except ratifying treaties, declaring war, dismissing parliament and naming Cabinet ministers.

The Cabinet's decision effectively brings to an end the nearly half-century rule of the Middle East's longest reigning leader, who survived several coup attempts and waged war against Israel but later made peace.

"The constitutional vacuum has to be filled," said Information Minister Nasser Judeh.

Kosovo talks in trouble before start

RAMBOUILLET, France — The Kosovo peace talks were in trouble today even before they were to start, with Serb officials banning rebel negotiators from leaving the province's capital and insisting they would not negotiate with them.

The sudden move came only a day before the scheduled opening of talks in Rambouillet, outside Paris, hammered together by NATO threats in a bid by Western powers to force a quick settlement to the conflict in the separatist province.

"We consider the so-called Kosovo Liberation Army a terrorist organization, and with killers and kidnapers we have nothing to talk about," Ratko Markovic, the Serb delegation chief, said Friday.

Five members of the KLA, which has been fighting for Kosovo's independence from Serbia, were set to be part of a 16-member ethnic Albanian delegation at the talks.

But two of the five were blocked from leaving Kosovo's capital, Pristina, reportedly because they lacked passports.

William Walker, the U.S. head of the Kosovo monitoring mission, told The Associated Press he was "shocked" by Markovic's comments.

One of the three chief mediators at the talks, Wolfgang Petritsch of the European Union, said, "I really want to hear from him (Markovic) about how he envisages a real solution for Kosovo without the KLA."

Legislator offers child health care plan

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin legislator is rallying support behind a plan to provide health insurance to thousands of the 1.4 million uninsured children in Texas.

Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin, said 70 of the House's 150 members have agreed to a scaled-back version of the Children's Health Insurance Program that would provide health insurance to families making 200 percent or twice the federal poverty level.

Some lawmakers argue that the state should aim to cover families making up to 150 percent of the poverty level. The poverty level is $16,500 a year for a family of four.

CHIP is a federal and state program targeting children whose families make too much to qualify for Medicaid and not enough to afford private health insurance.

Maxey intends to bring the petition to Gov. George W. Bush, who must sign off on a CHIP plan before it is sent for federal approval.

"How can the 'compassionate conservative' have a problem with 200 percent, when governors who are much more conservative than he have gone to 200 percent?" said Maxey, referring to Bush's often quoted self-characterization.

Linda Edwards, spokeswoman for the Bush, said, "While his proposal sets the limit at 150 percent of poverty, Gov. Bush looks forward to working with legislators to develop a plan that increases the number of children covered by health insurance while maintaining the proper role of government."

Six arrested after men beaten severely

Six Hereford residents were arrested early today in connection in connection with the severe beating of two other young men.

According to a Hereford Police Department report, Nicholas Watley, 18, and Alvin Ewing, 20, were dragged from their automobile by the six.

After they were pulled from their vehicle, Watley and Ewing were beaten with a bat-type object and a large rock, police state. The two victims were stomped and struck on their heads, dragged about a block and beaten again, according to the reports.

Watley and Ewing, both with swelling about the face and head areas and suffering from loss of blood, were transported by ambulance to Hereford Regional Medical Center for treatment. Their condition has not been released by the hospital, but police indicate the injuries are not considered life-threatening.

After talking to witnesses, police officers entered a residence at 714 Irving and arrested six males, including two juveniles, in connection with the beating.

Charges of aggravated assault were filed against Michael B. Perales Jr. 18; Robert Suarez Jr., 21; Thomas Jackson Suarez, 18; and Andrew Delgado, 20. Bond was set at $50,000 each.

The assault is considered to be gang-related, according to the police report.

Other arrests Friday night and this morning include:

- A 35-year-old man was arrested in the 300 block of Bradley on charges of public intoxication;

- A 25-year-old woman was arrested on a Deaf Smith County warrant for violation of probation;

- A 49-year-old man was arrested in the 300 block of Avenue on outstanding warrants issued by Deaf Smith County;

- A 14-year-old student was arrested at Hereford High School on a charge of burglary.

Incidents

- Theft of car parts was reported at a residence in the 600 block of Irving;

- An elementary school student reported she was threatened by two other female students. School officials determined the matter could be handled without police involvement;

- A 16-year-old male is listed as a suspect in a tire-slashing incident that occurred in the 500 block of Blevins. Charges of criminal mischief are pending;

- A brown, homemade flatbed trailer was reported taken in the 100 block of East 1st. The trailer's value is $2,500;

- Harassment was reported in the 600 block of Columbus

Drive, but no charges were filed;

- A hit-and-run traffic accident was reported in the 600 block of Stanton Avenue;

- Criminal mischief to an automobile was reported in the 300 block of Avenue H;

- Theft of a cellular telephone was reported in the 800 block of East Park Avenue;

- A criminal trespass warning was issued to a juvenile at a business in the 400 block of North 25 Mile Avenue;

- Disorderly conduct was reported in the 700 block of South Texas;

- A domestic disturbance was reported in the 700 block of South Texas, but no assault was reported; and

- A woman and her husband became involved in an argument at a residence in the 800 block of Blevins. The man, who was reportedly drunk and threatening, fled the house when the woman called the police. He was not at the house when officers arrived. No charges were filed.

Public gets to see Lewinsky deposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcast across the world today from the well of the Senate, Monica Lewinsky recounted via videotape her story of a presidential affair and cover-up to Americans seeing her testify for the first time and to senators who must decide the fate of President Clinton.

House prosecutors juxtaposed the image of Ms. Lewinsky, dressed in a dark dress, her hand raised to tell the truth, with the now-famous footage of the January 1998 news conference in which Clinton denied sexual relations with "that woman, Ms. Lewinsky."

House prosecutor James Rogan implored senators to listen to "a bright lady whose life has forever been marked by the most powerful man on earth."

"If her testimony is truthful, then the president committed the offenses in the articles of impeachment," Rogan added, calling today's extraordinary session at the impeachment trial the "first and only chance" to hear from witnesses with "direct knowledge of the unlawful conduct of the president of the United States."

The prosecutors, denied the chance to call witnesses for live testimony at the trial, played excerpts from the videotaped depositions they took earlier this week.

Ms. Lewinsky was seen staring intently at her inquisitor, Rep. Ed Bryant, as she fielded questions and gave short crisp answers.

She said that on the night Clinton called her to say she might be subpoenaed in the Paula Jones case, the president spoke of the earlier cover stories they had come up with to hide their affair.

She told prosecutors that at the time of the Dec. 17, 1997, call, she was well familiar "because it was part of the pattern of the relationship." Prosecutors contend Clinton was trying to encourage her to lie, but she has testified he never instructed her to do so.

Prosecutors also played segments of the tapes in which she described how Oval Office secretary Betty Currie came to her apartment and picked up presidential gifts that Ms. Lewinsky had received from the president.

Former health official ties hog farms, permanent environmental damage

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A former secretary of the Kansas Department of Health and Environment charged Friday that pollution from giant hog farms being developed in western Kansas will cause permanent damage and the state isn't doing enough about it.

Dwight Metzler, who was secretary from 1972 to 1979, said Kansas should make it tougher to get permits and no permits should be issued to farms with more than 100 sows.

He also said permits should not be issued until better waste treatment and odor control mechanisms are in place.

Studies done in Texas, Iowa and North Carolina showed "soils will be damaged and will require rehabilitation after 10 years," Metzler said.

The ammonia is carried aloft and deposited in the east-

"Soil cannot be compacted to prevent leakage ... Liners slow the leakage, but over several years of use, they leak as well."

Dwight Metzler

ern states, causing environmental damage there, as well, he said. And hogs carry some 70 diseases that can be transmitted to man, posing a health risk to humans, he said.

Don Brown, spokesman for KDHE, said the issues Metzler raised during a Statehouse news conference Friday came up in legislative hearings last year, when the law regulating confined animal operations was overhauled.

"The department has been regulating this for 30 years, and the biggest changes came in 1998 when tougher restrictions were put into the law,"

Brown said.

"There are a number of safeguards built into the law and regulations, and there is constant research going on looking for ways to do things better," he said.

Metzler, 82, who retired from KDHE in 1983, said he got involved in the hog farm debate because it seemed to him to be "entirely unreasonable" to put large amounts of hog waste on the land and not believe it would cause permanent damage.

Large hog operations will damage surface water, the soil and the air, he said.

"Soils cannot be compacted to prevent leakage" in waste lagoons, he said. "Liners slow the leakage, but over several years of use, they leak as well."

Metzler also said soil cannot absorb the huge amounts of phosphorous that hog waste contains. The excess is carried off in ground and surface water, allowing algae to thrive in streams and lakes, he said.

Hog manure also is high in ammonia, he said, and 66 percent to 90 percent of it goes into the air, to be carried aloft in jet streams to the eastern states. Bills before Congress, he said, would require Midwestern states such as Kansas to reduce the ammonia release by 40 percent.

Clinton supports legislation cracking down on gun shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton threw his support today behind legislation to require background checks on all firearms buyers who visit the nation's 4,000 or more gun shows each year.

The new national policy, Clinton said in his weekly radio address, should be: "No background check, no gun. No exceptions."

The National Rifle Association derided his proposal as a "public relations stunt" and argued that the federal government is not enforcing the gun-control laws it already has on the books.

Clinton said the Brady law's requirement for background checks — meant to bar felons from owning guns — no longer must exempt gun-show sales by non-licensed collectors and private hobbyists.

Such sellers make up one-quarter or more of gun-show vendors, leaving the current exemption a loophole "wide enough that criminals reach right through it, grabbing, collectively, thousands of firearms that disappear without a trace," the president said.

The proposed legislation, to be introduced in Congress by Rep. Rod R. Blagojevich, D-Ill., and Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., also would broaden the statutory definition of "gun show" to include flea markets and any other venue where two or more people are engaged in the sale of at least 50 firearms.

The administration also wants federal registration of all gun show promoters and federal record-keeping requirements extended to non-licensed firearms vendors.

The collection of information from these vendors would be "strictly limited" to data about the guns — not the buyers or sellers — so that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms could trace guns sold at gun shows if they turn up at a crime scene, said Deputy Attorney General Eric Holder.

According to Gun Show Calendar, a periodical, 4,442 gun shows were advertised around the country during 1998. The highest number, 472, were in Texas. The National Association of Arms Shows says these weekend markets draw up to 5,000 people per show for admission fees starting at $5.

Clinton's call for new legislation follows a joint report and recommendations by the Treasury and Justice departments.

Their 60-day review of the issue centered on a survey of 314 recent ATF investigations involving 54,000 firearms linked in one way or another to gun shows.

Gates donates $3.34 billion to charity

SEATTLE (AP) — The world's richest man, Bill Gates, has given away $3.34 billion in new donations for charities that fund health and education projects worldwide.

The money from Gates and his wife, Melinda, is believed to be the largest charitable gift ever made, Fortune magazine said.

The donation includes $2.23 billion to the William H. Gates Foundation, named after and administered by Gates' father, and $1.11 billion to the Gates Learning Foundation, Gates spokeswoman Rose Berg-Fosnaugh said Friday.

The William H. Gates Foundation provides grants for health, population and education projects worldwide, and various causes in the Seattle area.

My friend Marshall Day, who was editor of The Hereford Brand when I came here in 1972, is now publisher of The Gatesville Messenger. He wrote a column recently that we feel is worthy of passing along:

-I have learned that you cannot make someone love you. All you can do is be someone who can be loved — the rest is up to them.

-I've learned that no matter how much I care, some people just don't care back.

-I've learned that no matter how good your friends, they're going to hurt you every once in a while and you must forgive them for that.

-I've learned that regardless of how hot and steamy a relationship is at first, the passion fades and there had better be something else to take its place.

-I have learned that there are people who love you dearly, but just don't know how to show it.

-I've learned that true friendship continues to grow, even over the longest distance. Same goes for true love.

-I've learned that maturity has more to do with what types of experiences you've had, along with what you've learned from them, and less to do with how long you've lived.

-I've learned that it isn't always enough to be forgiven by others; sometimes you have to forgive yourself.

-I've learned that no matter how bad your heart is broken, the world doesn't stop for your grief.

-I've learned that our background and circumstances may have influenced how we are, but we are responsible for who we become.

-I've learned that two people can look at the exact same thing and see something totally different.

-I've learned that no matter the consequences, those who are honest with themselves get farther in life.

-No matter how many friends you have, I've learned that if you are their pillar, you will feel lonely and lost at times when you need them the most.

-I've learned that even when you think you have no more to give, when a friend cries out for help, you will find the strength to help.

-I've learned that credentials on the wall do not make you a decent human being.

Pie, cakes? Yes. Cookies? No

Sometimes I think I must be the only person alive who can't make cookies.

Mine never turn out right. They're never perfectly round. Usually they're somewhat burned on the bottom. Soft and chewy varieties turn out crumbly. Crunchy favorites taste like cardboard.

Even the pan cookies, you know the ones you just mix up the batter and spread it in a pan in one big sheet, are real flops.

Just forget the beautiful cut-out varieties that so many moms bake and allow their children to decorate. Mine never even resemble the hearts, stars, Christmas trees or pumpkins. I guess that's to be expected. My drop cookies don't look like cookies either.

I've never figured out what I do wrong. Most kids learn to bake cookies by the time they are 10 or so. Not me.

It's not that I can't cook anything. My stuffed peppers are beyond compare, even if I say so myself. My oriental food compares with stuff at really good Chinese restaurants.

My pies seldom stay around long enough to get cool, never mind getting stale. And I have sold my cheesecakes for as much as $50 a piece.

But cookies?

That's a totally different story. I can't even bake the kind you buy from the dairy case — even if all you have to do is slice and bake them.

For some reason, cookies just are not in my cooking repertoire.

I've gone so far as to bake cookies with a friend who has never ruined a batch of cookies in her life.

I did the same thing Betty did, step by step. From creaming the butter and sugar to using just the right spoonful and dropping them on shiny new cookie sheets.

We cooked them in the same oven at the same time.

Hers came out gorgeous — perfectly round, light, fluffy sweets ready to be served at the most prestigious of events.

Mine ran together. There wasn't a round one in the whole batch. They had a hard, lumpy texture instead of the melt-in-your-mouth goodness of my friend's.

She looked at the first batch and determined there had to be something wrong with the batter.

She tasted it, stirred it and compared it with hers. They were the same.

For the second batch, I spooned out of her cookies; she spooned out of mine.

The results were even worse. Mine were raw in the center, black on the edges, and looked like wizened, little old men.

Betty's were beautiful. For the third and final batch, I allowed her to spoon them on both cookie sheets.

They couldn't have been more perfect if they had been baked in a mold. They were perfectly round; all with the same thickness; not a black crumb in the whole bunch.

No one will ever guess how ridiculous I feel when one of my kids brings home a note requesting three dozen homemade cookies for some party or event.

Invariably I call the teacher and volunteer to bring punch, or individual pies or cupcakes, or something. No one will ever believe how often I've heard, "Well, they don't have to be fancy. Just plain sugar cookies will be fine."

These poor teachers just have never seen what my sugar cookies look like. And worse, they don't know what they taste like. Be assured, once you taste one of my cookies, you'll never want another — I promise.

Sometimes I think my kids are so deprived. They never get to help mom bake cookies, or come home and find a fresh batch of homemade walnut chocolate chip treats. They may get other things, but never cookies.

There are few times I ever feel any kinship to Ellie Mae Clampett, but when I'm with any of the so-called dumb animals and when I try to bake cookies, I feel a definite kinship to the buxom blonde.

Gee, if we only had more in common!

Gore has Clinton's backing

Walter R. Mears

The Associated Press

So far, the script for the 2000 Democratic presidential campaign is unfolding as though Vice President Al Gore wrote it.

A formidable rival is out of the way; and although he's got one challenger and there may be more, there won't be many.

Cash and the calendar are on his side. Early fund raising is going to be crucial because the nomination could be settled in a Super Bowl of presidential primary elections in just 13 months.

Only the vice president can campaign bearing government gifts, programs and proposals he relays from the White House — budget offerings for schools and science in California, farm aid in Iowa, neighborhoods in New England.

When vice presidents accept the nomination to succeed the boss, they almost always get it, even when the president isn't pushing. President Clinton is, and has been. Despite impeachment, his political and fund-raising networks are major assets for Gore.

So is the thriving economy, and the credits Clinton regularly accrords his vice president, who as regularly defends the president against Republicans he calls impeachment-obsessed.

Gore got a political break when Attorney General Janet Reno decided against seeking an independent counsel to deal with accusations of campaign fund-raising misconduct in 1996, which would have made that case an issue into the campaign year.

The Democratic public opinion polls rank Gore far ahead of former Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, the only other campaigner at this point. Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts may run, and Jesse Jackson, who has twice before, may again.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt won't. The House minority leader stepped aside, not unexpectedly, saying he'll concentrate on winning Democratic control in the 2000 elections. That would give him the majority to become speaker.

"I look forward to working closely with him as a friend and partner," said Gore.

Gore was the far front-runner, with Gephardt in or out. But the House leader had labor ties and party contacts no other challenger could match. His fund-raising potential came closest. He'd had his differences with the administration on trade deals and other issues.

So had Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Sen. Paul Wellstone of Minnesota, both of whom chose not to run.

The narrowing field recalled the Democratic drop-outs before 1992, when the candidate list narrowed to Clinton's eventual benefit. Among the no-gos that year: Gore, Gephardt and Bradley.

Front-runners have fallen before. The classic case was Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, the towering favorite in 1972 — until the voting began. Then rivals began prying his broad support apart.

Gore is going to have to deliver an independent message, not easy for a vice president, whose job description centers on loyalty. He can't afford to be seen as only an extension of the Clinton administration. There already are signs of potential trouble in two recent polls indicating that at this point, he trails leading Republican presiden-

35 years ago, the Beatles changed music

"It was 20 years ago today, Sgt. Pepper taught the band to play.
"They've been going in and out of style,
"But they're guaranteed to raise a smile,
"So let me introduce to you
"The act you've known for all these years ..."

quer America. In the winter of 1964, we needed the Beatles and they needed us.

For those of us in the United States, spirits were low; we were still coping with the assassination of President Kennedy. We needed something to cheer us up, and along came the Beatles with their exuberant music, irreverence and good humor.

For the Beatles, the United States was rock 'n' roll. Even though the band was phenomenally popular in Britain and Europe, the shores of the United States were littered with the wreckage of popular British acts who couldn't make it in America. For John, Paul, George and Ringo, musical success would be measured not by European popularity, but by American standards. They had to achieve success in the U.S. what they had in Europe. If they failed to conquer American, they would consider themselves failures.

The Beatles changed the face of rock music. For the first time, a band played its own music, rather than songs crafted by faceless tunesmiths.

The Beatles' music, mostly composed by John Lennon and Paul McCartney, was fresh and exciting.

The Beatles also didn't fear to experiment with new musical forms as they (and we) matured. They produced a wide variety of songs, from the childlike "Yellow Subma-

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

To the City Commissioners, City Manager, Chamber of Commerce and the HEDC:

I am writing to voice my strong opposition to the changes being made at the Community Center.

I would like to know why the decision to move the HEDC and the chamber offices to the Community Center was made with so little, if any, discussion on the community's part? Are you not violating the charter on the Community Center that the Jim Hill Estate set up or is that charter no longer valid?

When the Jim Hill Estate gave the money to build the Community Center, I understand that it was for the youth of this city, civic groups and others to use. I think the charter that started this stated that there would not be any private parties or business in the building. Also, that rent would not be charged for it. I don't know the exact words. Granted, the chamber or HEDC is not "a business" the same as a grocery store, hardware store or any other money-making business, but they are still a business.

What is wrong with the building the chamber is in now? I have been told that the owner of the chamber building has offered to build on or modify the building for the chamber. Was this not even considered? From what I can tell, the part of the Community Center you plan to use isn't any bigger than the chamber offices, or do you plan to eventually take over the whole building as people stop using it?

I want to know why you are taking away the very valuable meeting spaces that this community so badly needs? The center is used nearly every night of the week. You have recommended that the Nita Lea building be used for meetings. I have and do not feel comfortable being there at night. It is not centrally located. The outside lighting is terrible and there is very little parking space. It is almost impossible to unlock or lock the door at night unless you have a flashlight. The darkness around the building made me and the other ladies with me very uncomfortable. The parking also is very poor. If there were more than a few cars, most of the people would have to walk a good distance in the dark to their cars. I, for one, do not like this. The parking and the lighting at the Community Center is much better than at the Nita Lea building. It is also in a more central location and on a street that is well traveled.

You stated that the Community Center is more visible. The chamber building is just as visible. They are in the same area. Are you thinking that you will get more exposure because of the traffic at the Community Center? I don't think so, because you will be sending the ones that use it to other buildings; therefore, you won't have any more exposure than at the chamber building - thus defeating that purpose.

Maybe I am wrong or just missed it, but I do not remember there being anything in the paper that this was to be decided. I don't always see everything in the paper, so maybe I just missed it. Also, having it at the meeting when the weather was bad was a very poor choice of times. It sounded as if you wanted it this way, so you could make this decision with little or no input from the community. Maybe I am the only one that cares.

I sincerely hope that you will reconsider this. I think this is a very bad decision on your part. I don't think I am wrong because others I have talked to don't approve either. Please reconsider and give the community a chance to respond.

Dear Editor:

This is a letter to the two men who came by my house Saturday afternoon. My neighbor, Nancy Denison, was shoveling snow from my driveway. Suddenly, I heard machinery and went out to see someone using a front-end loader on my driveway and another coming with a shovel. I don't know who they are, but they certainly have my gratitude. I can now get out, thanks to two very nice men.

Dear Editor:

This letter is to the people of Hereford who passed by our home on West Park on Sunday and saw our snowman. It was a really nice snowman that our children had so much fun building, too bad that some "person" without any decency had to come into our yard in the middle of the night and add on to it. Not only our snowman was tampered with, it happened to several others around our neighborhood. Whoever you are, I hope that you would get a life and grow up! There's not much chance of you reading this letter though because you don't have enough sense to read a newspaper. As for whoever saw it before we found out about it, I'm sorry that you had to see something like that on the Lord's day, or any other day.

Patricia Serrano

Dear Editor:

The picture of my truck in Tuesday's paper. I want to thank Mr. David Soto for trying so courageously to help me move my truck, which had gotten stuck in the ice that had formed on top of the "live" railroad tracks. Also, the man and woman driving the tan/brown Bronco who also took the risk of helping a stranger in need without ever being asked. These people were willing to place themselves in one of the deadliest locations in the world to help me - a live 70 mph train track.

Not too many people would stop to help? Out here are those few people who have a large enough truck to do the job with no problem. That will for no other reason besides that they don't want to waste their time to turn their city vehicle 90 degrees to the north and drive 75 to 100 feet and bump me off the tracks so I could have saved the money I've now lost to pay the taxes that pays his salary. It's not the point of "no help," it's the point of absolute disregard for other persons in desperate need for help - even when being asked face to face to help!

But, anyhow, I (want to say) thank you to the two real heroes and also Hereford policemen and BASF (railroad) employees that were involved in the prompt response and help.

Happy to be alive.

rine" to the social commentary of "Eleanor Rigby" to the nostalgic "Penny Lane" and "Strawberry Fields Forever."

With the release of "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," the Beatles produced the first rock album to have a single musical theme.

In 1970, just six years after conquering the United States, the Beatles disbanded, with the four members all pursuing individual musical careers. Although they all achieved considerable solo success, none was able to match individually what had been accomplished as a group.

For those of us who came of age in the Sixties, the Beatles were us. They experimented, trying out new ideas, religions and music; they bickered; they matured, and their music showed the same level of growth.

In looking back at the Beatles, it's amazing to think that the band's music remains as fresh today as it was 35 years ago when John, Paul, George and Ringo first landed in New York City.

"We're Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hear's Club Band;

"We hope you will enjoy the show;

tial prospects.

Bradley says he will challenge Gore without criticizing him. That political etiquette may wear thin, or out, later in the season. Bradley can't catch Gore without telling Democrats why they should turn away from the vice president.

He's got time to try. As he said, elliptically, he doesn't know of any election that took place a year before the election.

It will take money; the standard guess is at least $20 million in hand at the beginning of next year, before the voting begins in Iowa and New Hampshire and then moves immediately to the primaries that could be decisive, in states where campaigning is costliest. California and New York will hold their presidential primaries on March 7, 2000, along with at least seven other states.

All told, 35 states may vote by March 21. That puts a premium on television campaigning, the most expensive kind.

Again, the advantage is Gore's.

Bradley knows that. "Certainly the fund-raising hurdle is a large one, but I have the confidence we'll be able to get over it," he says.

76th Texas Legislature Senate report

Will Gov. George W. Bush run for president? That's the question that seems to have dominated the first two weeks of the 76th regular session of the Texas Legislature. The ranks of the Capitol press corps have swelled with new reporters from such papers as the New York Times, the Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times. TV crews speaking foreign languages are routinely seen around the Capitol. Will he run? This is the question most frequently put to me by my constituents.

There is, of course, only one person who can answer the question. As of the week after the Super Bowl, he had still not decided. I would like nothing better than for George W. Bush to become the next president of the United States. But, at this writing, like the rest of my fellow Texans (and Americans), I don't know what he's going to do.

With regard to issues facing the state of Texas, however, the governor's positions are abundantly clear. In his inaugural address -- the best speech I've ever heard him make -- and the State of the State address the following week, George Bush reiterated the themes of his campaign: this will be a session dominated by the budget and his priorities are the school children of Texas and the property taxpayers who support them. As chairman of the Senate Education Committee and someone who feels passionately about education, I couldn't agree more.

In September, Comptroller John Sharp told Texans he anticipated a $6.3 billion budget surplus for the upcoming biennium (the two-year budget period that begins Sept. 1, 1999). That set off a feeding frenzy on how to use the surplus. At one point, it was observed that there was some $80 billion worth of proposals on how to use the $6.3 billion. Sharp's projection set up the defining issue of the 76th regular session: the budget.

I have never participated in a legislative session with a projected budget surplus. Old-timers, however, warn that such a session can be more contentious than a session with a projected deficit. If you think about it, that makes a lot of sense. In times of shortfalls, you can tell everyone seeking new funding "no." But, in times of projected surpluses, legislators must engage in the difficult task of telling some "yes" and some "no." That's hard for a politician to do.

Dealing with a projected budget surplus is the very essence of representative self-government. It puts to the test the promises, political philosophies and backbone of every member of the legislature. It is politically popular these days to align oneself with Gov. Bush. You need only look back at the campaign of 1998 to see that. The good news is that literally every major candidate made education their top priority. For most, tax relief was a close second. By the time the legislature adjourns sine die at the end of May, Texans will know whether we are true to our convictions.

Recently, the comptroller's office reduced its budget projection and determined lawmakers will have a $5.6 billion surplus to spend. The news that the legislature has a smaller surplus makes the competition for these limited funds even more intense. State employees want a pay raise, funding is desperately needed for new medications for schizophrenic patients, and we need money to build and operate new youth correction facilities.

Additional money is also needed for more caseworkers in our Child Protective Service agency and the list goes on and on. For this member of the legislature, however, all of these worthwhile projects should only be considered after we have dramatically increased the state's share of funding public education, reduced our reliance on local property taxes and provided a large appropriation to school districts dedicated to teacher compensation.

Teel Bivins, Amarillo Republican, is senator for District 31.

WTAMU political science students want Clinton out

Special to The Brand

CANYON -- Almost 65 percent of West Texas A&M University political science students surveyed believe President Clinton should resign.

Dr. Dave Rausch, assistant professor of political science, surveys his students each semester about their views of civil rights and civil liberties as well as current political issues. This semester, the president's recent legal battles provided the political questions. The students were surveyed Jan. 25.

"In order to determine my students' opinions of their president, I asked two questions," Rausch said.

The first, yes or no inquiry, "Bill Clinton is doing a good job as president," was intended to roughly estimate presidential approval.

"Only 42 percent agreed that the president is doing a good job, a number that is not surprising considering the politics of the local area," Rausch said.

With the second statement, "Bill Clinton should resign as president," 65 percent of the students agreed.

Rausch also checked responses via party lines.

Eighty-six percent of the students who identified themselves as Democrats believe Clinton is doing a good job. Only 23 percent of the Republicans agreed, while 48 percent of the independent identifiers are satisfied with the president's performance.

Republicans want the president to resign (84 percent); independents also would like him to leave office (55 percent). "Democrats, not surprisingly, think Bill Clinton should not resign," Rausch said. "Only 23 percent agreed."

Rausch also surveyed the students about term limits, political participation and old and new media usage.

While the responses on the questionnaires were given confidentially and anonymously, the sample of students should not be considered representative of all students at WTAMU because the respondents were a "captive audience."

Justice can put away gavel, get starter gun

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas can forget the gavel.

A starting gun will come in handy, though, when he serves as grand marshal for the 1999 Daytona 500.

"Having been born the same year as NASCAR, I can truly say I've grown up with stock car racing," said Thomas, who was born 1948 in the tiny town of Pin Point, Ga.

John Graham, president of Daytona International Speedway, called Thomas "a great fan and an excellent grand marshal."

Roz Kelly

LOS ANGELES — On "Happy Days," Roz Kelly played Pinky Tuscadero, Fonzie's biker girlfriend. On less happy days, you might not want to see her in action, police say.

Ms. Kelly has been jailed since Nov. 29, when she allegedly grabbed a 12-gauge shotgun and shot up her neighbor's car and apartment after being awakened by a blaring car alarm. She was to be arraigned Monday on firearms charges.

The 56-year-old actress could get up to six years in prison.

Alan Pakula

NEW YORK — Film director Alan Pakula, killed in a highway accident when a pipe crashed through his windshield, was remembered by the stars who worked with him as a passionate man who always kept his word.

About 200 friends and family attended a memorial service for Pakula, whose 16 films included "All the President's Men," "Kluge," "Sophie's Choice" and "To Kill a Mockingbird."

Mourners at the Broadhurst Theater included Gregory Peck, Meryl Streep, Kevin Kline, Harrison Ford, Glenn Close and Candice Bergen.

"Alan was organized, civilized, passionate, unhurried," said Ms. Streep, who won an Oscar for her work in "Sophie's Choice."

Peck, who played Atticus Finch in "Mockingbird," said the director "kept his word, he made no false promises, he didn't take credit for the contributions of others, he stayed off the set."

Pakula, 70, died Nov. 19 after a truck dropped a 7-foot pipe and a car kicked it up as Pakula drove by. The director's family has offered a reward to anyone with information on either the truck or its driver.

Jesse Ventura Garrison Keillor

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A book titled "Me" has Gov. Jesse Ventura asking: What about ME?

Garrison Keillor, host of public radio's "A Prairie Home Companion," wrote the book, a political satire based loosely on Ventura's election. Keillor said the book is a "rather genial novel, not mean at all."

Ventura, the former pro wrestler who won election as a third-party candidate in November, said that "writing a book based upon me, without my permission, without any of my involvement" amounts to "cheating."

Tension already exists between Keillor and Ventura.

In a Time magazine essay after the election, Keillor called the governor "this great big honking bullet-headed shovel-faced mutha who talks in a steroid growl."

Last week, Ventura proposed gradually eliminating state money for public radio and television. And on Monday, he singled out Keillor's income for criticism. "I'd like to see his W-2," Ventura said.

Keillor said he is sorry to hear the governor is steamed.

"A Minnesota humorist would be crazy to ignore Mr. Ventura," Keillor said. "He is the best show in town."

Population forum takes on new sense of urgency

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — With the world's population projected to hit 6 billion this year, a weeklong U.N. population forum opening Sunday has taken on a new sense of urgency.

Delegates from 180 countries are gathering in The Hague to take a hard look at their headway toward the ambitious goals set five years ago at a landmark U.N. conference in Cairo.

"The choice the world has to make — and make quickly — is to take action that allows for lower birth rates," said Dick Bell, a spokesman for the Washington-based Worldwatch Institute.

"This is a very urgent problem and the industrialized countries need to face their responsibilities," he said. First lady Hillary Rodham

Clinton officially opens The Hague Forum on Monday after addressing representatives of some 800 voluntary organizations meeting separately on Sunday.

In 1987, the world population was 5 billion. It is expected to hit 6 billion this year, an increase of 20 percent in just 12 years, most of it in developing nations. The program of action adopted in Cairo calls for universal access to affordable reproductive health services by the year 2015, including family planning, sexual health services and programs for adolescents.

It also calls for universal access to primary education, measures to ensure gender equity and equality, and significant reductions in infant and maternal mortality by that date. "I'm very pleased with the progress since Cairo," said Dr. Nafis Sadik, executive director of the U.N. Population Fund, which organized both conferences.

As they did in Cairo, abortion and birth control are expected to provoke heated controversy in The Hague, with delegates from the Vatican expected to be in the forefront.

Schools of lawyering, acting have things in common

By Hillel Italie

The Associated Press
What a world we live in. So many lawyers who want to be famous. So many actors who want to play lawyers. And why not? As the entertaining "A Civil Action" shows, schools of lawyering are not so different from schools of acting. In fact, they can remind you of entire civilizations.

As a Boston personal injury attorney, John Travolta embodies the external school of lawyering/acting. Let's say he represents the West. His voice is thin, hard, impatient. You always know what he's thinking about, which is himself. He has a short temper. He wears nice clothes. He wants to be famous. He is a very rich man.

His rival, a trial litigator and Harvard University professor, is played by the cagey Robert Duvall. His is the internal, Eastern style. His voice is soothing, but confounding. Everything he does is meant to distract you from what he's thinking about, which is also himself. He smiles a lot. He carries an old briefcase. He likes to toss tennis balls. He is a very rich man.

Both are bad when the story begins, and one will be good when it's over. You can figure that out by guessing who's played by the bigger star. That he becomes good with no real change in personality shouldn't surprise you. Studio bosses probably think it works that way.

Travolta's character is named Jan Schlichtmann (pronounced, at times, as "Slickman"). He has agreed reluctantly to meet with some residents in the city of Woburn, Mass. Several fatal cases of leukemia have been reported there and the community is sure toxic solvents have seeped into the water.

Schlichtmann is ready to give them the brush-off, but he learns that two major corporations may be responsible. Money is to be had. But it soon becomes about principle.

Like so many crusaders of the West, Schlichtmann must detach himself from worldly possessions. All the firm's resources go into this case. He loses his staff, his office furniture, his partners. His house is mortgaged. You expect him to show up for work in his underwear. You expect almost anything, which is really part of the fun.

The story is based on Jonathan Harr's nonfiction best seller. That's also part of the fun. Only Hollywood can take a true story and make it seem like fiction. Why does Schlichtmann get so moved by these people when he's spent his entire career making money off of suffering clients? And if he's so moved, how come he never seems to spend time with them?

Steve Zaillian, screenwriter for "Schindler's List," wrote and directed. To his credit, he does not mistake "A Civil Action" for the previous film. He just keeps the story moving and lets the actors work.

The supporting performances are a bonus: William H. Macy, John Lithgow, Bruce Norris and Sydney Pollack as an unnervingly confident corporate executive, the kind who negotiates settlements with his feet resting on a creaky antique table.

The real Jan Schlichtmann, by the way, is still practicing in Boston and now has a wife and two sons. They live, according to the production notes, "in a beautiful home overlooking the ocean in the suburb of Beverly."

"A Civil Action," a joint release of Touchstone Pictures and Paramount Pictures, was produced by Scott Rudin, Robert Redford and Rachel Pfeffer. The running time is 113 minutes and the rating is PG-13, with mild profanity and adult situations.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions: G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

NC-17 — No one under 17 admitted.

Coalition criticizes beer ads in TP&W pamphlet

AUSTIN (AP)— A coalition to prevent underage drinking rallied behind a bill Friday to prohibit the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department from using alcohol-related advertising on the agency's documents, videos or Internet page.

That type of advertising contributes to underage drinking by linking outdoor activities, like hunting and fishing, to alcohol, according to Texans Standing Tall.

"People trust information from their government and the connection that the department is making between alcohol and outdoor recreation is obvious," said Jim Haire, a coalition member from Tyler.

The coalition criticized the inclusion of five pages of alcohol-related advertising in the Texas Parks & Wildlife Outdoor Annual, which outlines the state's official hunting and fishing regulations. The 105-page pamphlet, which is distributed free to people buying fishing and hunting licenses, also includes cigarette and tobacco advertising.

"It appears that Texas Parks and Wildlife is now reaching more kids with their alcohol ads and messages than they are with their youth programs," said Haire.

Parks and Wildlife no longer prints the manual and has no control over its contents, said department spokeswoman Lydia Saldana. Texas Monthly took over production of the yearly publication in 1995.

Prophet Jacob Kurien

God has given Jacob a phenomenal healing ministry to Hindus & Moslems.

Community Church

(Just North of 15th & Whittier)

Sunday Morning at 10:00 am & Sunday Evening at 6:00 pm

Well known in this area. God has in recent years given Jacob a phenomenal ministry to Hindus & Moslems where whole villages turn to the Lord and their priest & leaders, after intense teaching in the Word, become the new Christian pastors & evangelists. Also the Lord is now calling professions as doctors, teachers & businessmen to quit their professions and give their lives to the full time ministry. God is in a hurry.

Jacob has such a powerful healing ministry that he ministers to crowds of up to 30,000. Each time he returns from ministering overseas he brings reports of thousands being saved, of miraculous healings, restorations and lives changed by Christ.

Whitefaces win

Boy's and girl's basketball teams avenge earlier losses to Borger

when the two teams met here in the first-half of District 3-4A play, and the Lady Whitefaces returned the heart-breaking favor, 39-38, Friday on Borger's home court.

The Lady Whitefaces fell to Borger in the waning minutes of the earlier game after Hereford missed a final scoring opportunity at the foul line.

This time however, it was

See WIN, Page A10

Hereford wreaked havoc in the District 3-4A boy's and girl's basketball races Friday night in Borger — or at the very least, they've made them interesting.

The boys, now 5-2 in loop play, drummed the Bulldogs 63-44 and moved into second place behind top-ranked Amarillo Palo Duro; and the Lady Whitefaces turned the table on an earlier one-point loss and one-upped Borger 39-38 to tie Borger for third place in the district standings at 5-4 apiece.

Hereford's Slade Hodges scored a personal season-best 25 points to lead the Whitefaces in their 20th season win.

And the win was an important one.

Hereford, which had previously hovered near the middle of district standings, claimed solitary ownership of second place in the league with three games remaining.

The Whitefaces will meet the Caprock Longhorns Tuesday at the Caprock Activity center before meeting Dumas Friday and finishing with the Amarillo Palo Duro Dons Feb. 16 in Amarillo.

Friday night's Hereford win also vindicated an earlier loss 65-57 to the Bulldogs.

The Whitefaces were more focused this time, though.

They earned a slim, but early 11-9 lead coming out of the first quarter, out-scored the Bulldogs by six at halftime, by one in the third and then blistered Borger with by 10-point spread in the final period to put the victory away.

GIRL'S

More diplomacy was exemplified in the Lady Whiteface's victory.

Taking it up a notch

Hereford sophomore Slade Hodges (30) puts up a shot ahead of a block attempt from an opponent during an earlier District 3-4A game this year. The Whiteface cager scored a personal season-best 25 points Friday night as Hereford cruised to a 63-44 win over the Borger Bulldogs in Borger.

SuperSonics clip Mavericks, 92-86

SEATTLE (AP) — The Key Arena was jam packed and as noisy as ever. All is forgiven — even popular coach George Karl's departure.

And Karl's firing had nothing to do with the long NBA lockout that deprived Sonics fans from watching All-Star point guard Gary Payton.

Led by Payton, the Sonics brought 17,072 screaming fans to their feet in beating the new-look Dallas Mavericks 92-86 in overtime Friday night.

"The adrenaline I got from the fans was incredible," Vin Baker of the Sonics said. "These fans are the greatest in the world."

New coach Paul Westphal and the team's ticket buyers went home happy because Payton scored 14 of his 28 points in overtime and the fourth quarter. He scored six points in the five-minute overtime.

Payton, one of the league's premier defenders, helped hold the Mavs to 1-for-11 shooting in the extra session. Steve Nash and Samaki Walker of Dallas each was 0-for-3 in overtime.

"Gary was sensational," Westphal said. "He showed why he's one of the best players in the league. I'm already taking him for granted."

Payton scored on an 18-footer 41 seconds into overtime to snap a tie at 84, made two free throws after being fouled by Steve Nash with 3:04 left and then spun around Cedric Ceballos for a reverse layup with 2:13 on the clock for a 90-84 lead.

Said Payton: "Coach said to keep the ball in my hands. They couldn't decide whether to double-team me or not and that gave me some openings."

Baker added 18 points, while Olden Polynice, Seattle's new center, had 11 points and 13 rebounds.

The 7-foot, 250-pound Polynice gave the Sonics a force in the middle that they didn't have last season when they exited meekly in the playoffs against the Los Angeles Lakers.

They traded unproductive Jim McIlvaine to New Jersey and signed Polynice as a free agent.

"You saw exactly why we brought him here," said Westphal, noting the Sonics had a 67-49 rebounding advantage. "He contributed in a large way."

For Dallas, which lost 62 games last season, Ceballos led the way with 16 points.

The Mavs' only basket in overtime came on an offensive rebound by Hot Rod Williams with one minute left.

Coach Don Nelson thinks the Mavs have vastly improved themselves.

"I was real proud of the way the team hung in there," he said. "It feels great to competitive."

Nash, Dallas' new starting point guard who was acquired in a draft-day trade from Phoenix, didn't like starting the season against Payton.

"Gary's probably the best point guard in the world, and we compounded that with a couple of miscommunications on switches that gave him easy layups," he said. "Those are back breakers."

Fans show for NBA's opening night

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer

If there was any lingering resentment from NBA fans, it barely showed.

As for the players, there was plenty of rust to go around — but not many close games.

Opening night finally arrived Friday, 94 days late with plenty of familiar faces in new places. Most arenas were sold out or close to capacity, and several teams had someone speak to the fans before tipoff.

"We want to just say thank you for your patience, welcome back and we hope that you enjoy yourself all season long. Thank you, thank you, thank you," said Magic Johnson, who spoke to the fans at the Forum before the Lakers beat the Houston Rockets 99-91.

The only overt sign of fan retribution came in Boston, where a fan walked onto the court and threw money at the players. Kevin Willis of Toronto picked up a few bills and gave them to some fans, while teammate Doug Christie stuffed one in his sock.

"That was very tasteless, very classless," Willis said after the Raptors beat the Celtics 103-92. "We come out to entertain and if you don't like it, be man enough to walk out of the arena."

In other games, Orlando topped New York 93-85, Minnesota beat Denver 110-92,

San Antonio defeated Sacramento 101-83, Indiana downed Washington 96-81, Atlanta beat Cleveland 100-83, Philadelphia topped Charlotte 78-66, Detroit defeated Miami 95-81, Utah downed Chicago 104-96, Seattle edged Dallas 92-86 in overtime and Phoenix defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 101-92.

Lakers 99, Rockets 91
Shaquille O'Neal had 30 points and 14 rebounds, and Bryant added 25 points and a career-high 10 rebounds to spoil Scottie Pippen's debut with Houston.

Pippen, who brought the six NBA championship rings he earned in Chicago to the Rockets on Jan. 22, had 10 points, nine rebounds, seven assists and five steals in his Houston debut. But he was only 4-for-18 from the field.

Charles Barkley appeared in midseason form, both in scoring and jawing. He led the Rockets with 31 points and 15 rebounds, and took time out to utter expletives at Forum fans in the third quarter.

Magic 93, Knicks 85
At Orlando, Nick Anderson scored 19 points, and the Magic held off a late rally led by Latrell Sprewell to ruin the controversial guard's debut with New York.

Sprewell, who lost more than $6 million in salary during his 68-game suspension for choking his coach, finished with 24 points and led a fourth-quarter rally that trimmed a 21-point deficit to 87-82 in the final minute.

Timberwolves 110, Nuggets 92
Stephon Marbury had 21 points and 10 assists and Minnesota never trailed at Denver.

Joe Smith added 23 points on 10-of-11 shooting for the Timberwolves. Antonio McDyess led the Nuggets with 18 points, and Nick Van Exel had 17 points and 10 assists.

Spurs 101, Kings 83
At San Antonio, Tim Duncan launched his second season with 19 points and 17 rebounds.

Sean Elliott, returning from a knee injury that sidelined him the second half of last season, added 14 points for the Spurs.

Pacers 96, Wizards 81
At Indianapolis, Chris Mullin scored Indiana's first 10 points, and the Pacers took a lead they never lost.

Jalen Rose scored 11 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter, and Indiana capitalized on a 2he stretch, we played smart and took over the game.

The announced crowd of 19,806 was the largest for an opener in team history — almost 2,600 more than the first game at the Georgia Dome last season. Hoping to lure back fans after the lockout, the Hawks sold about half the seats in the cavernous arena for $10.

76ers 78, Hornets 66
Philadelphia won in Charlotte for the first time in nearly seven years, holding the Hornets to 34 percent shooting.

Charlotte was without its two best players, Glen Rice and Anthony Mason, who are recovering from elbow surgery. Derrick Coleman had four shots blocked and put up two airballs in his debut for the Hornets. He had 11 points on 4-for-13 shooting and added 15 rebounds.

Pistons 95, Heat 81
Jerry Stackhouse scored 24 points and Grant Hill had 19 as Detroit won at Miami.

The defeat was an unexpected blow for the Heat, who lost only 11 home games all last season in winning the Atlantic Division.

"We came in here and laid an egg — a big one," Miami's Tim Hardaway said.

Jazz 104, Bulls 96
At Salt Lake City, Karl Malone had 21 points as the Jazz overcame a stunning shooting display by Toni Kukoc to beat Chicago on the floor where Michael Jordan clinched the Bulls' sixth title in June.

Kukoc scored 22 of his 32 points in the second half and nearly brought the Bulls back from an 18-point deficit.

SuperSonics 92, Mavericks 86, OT

At Seattle, Gary Payton scored six of his 28 points in overtime as the Sonics opened the season under new coach Paul Westphal.

Vin Baker added 18 points, while Olden Polynice, Seattle's new center, had 11 points and 13 rebounds.

For Dallas, which lost 62 games last season, Cedric Ceballos led the way with 16 points.

Suns 101, Clippers 92
At Los Angeles, Tom Gugliotta had 24 points and 17 rebounds for his new team. Gugliotta, signed as a free agent from the Minnesota Timberwolves, shot 7-of-14 from the field and 10-of-13 on free throws. The Suns used a 17-0 run in the first 5 1/2 minutes of the second half to take the lead for good.

Borger's turn. Despite a third quarter Borger scoring flurry that left Hereford trailing 31-23, the Lady Whitefaces managed to hack their way to within a one-point deficit in the final minutes of the contest.

And Tori Walker, who singed Borger with 21 points as the Lady Whiteface's leading scorer, made a 3-point play with less than 20 seconds remaining to give Hereford a 38-35.

Borger answered at the buzzer with a 3-point desperation shot, but this time Hereford won the cliffhanger.

pleased coach Gregg Popovich in the process in the Spurs' 101-83 opening-night victory over Sacramento on Friday night.

"We're always going to be really pleased when the bench can come in like that and maintain things," Popovich said. "I definitely felt good seeing those guys come out and spread the floor and knock down the shots they were brought here to knock down."

Kerr and Elie scored 11 and 14 points, respectively, enabling the starters to get some rest as the hectic, shortened NBA season got under way.

"I enjoy the game. I like getting everybody fired up. I play with a lot of emotion," Elie said. "I'll play the whole game, I don't care."

Elie, who was on Houston's two championship teams, was signed as a free agent last month. Kerr was acquired in a trade with Chicago, which dismantled its championship squad in the offseason.

"This is a great way to start," Kerr said. "Our starters got a lot of rest."

Tim Duncan led the Spurs with 19 points and 17 rebounds to launch his second season in the NBA in a big way. He ignited a pivotal third-quarter scoring binge as San Antonio amassed a lead the Kings could not overcome.

"We played our hearts out," new Sacramento coach Rick Adelman said. "We did miss a lot of shots, which is a sign of a young team. We need to come out more mentally tough in the third."

San Antonio outscored Sacramento 37-21 in the third period and was ahead 82-57 entering the fourth.

Rookie Jason Williams led the Kings with 21 points, and Chris Webber — making his debut with Sacramento after being traded by Washington — had 20 points and 12 rebounds.

"It was a tough loss. We just have to stick together," Webber said. "Unlike college where you have a week before you play again, here we play again right away. We only have to sit with this for one day."

Sean Elliott, returning from a knee injury that kept him sidelined the second half of last season, scored 14 points for the Spurs.

"I thought he had an outstanding game for being out as long as he's been," Popovich said. "Sean was really a big, big bright spot."

David Robinson, playing only 25 minutes and sitting out the final quarter, had 12 points and 10 rebounds. He said he was glad to get some rest — and a victory.

"It's great to win the first one," he said. "We've got to come out here and we've got to make a stand. It's a short season."

Spurs fans showed few signs of anger over the prolonged NBA lockout, though there were some empty seats. The Spurs management welcomed fans back with a live band outside the Alamodome and warm words from Spurs chairman Peter Holt before tipoff.

Proposal would allow keeping two "hammer handle" walleye

Caught my first finned "hammer handle" during a late spring outing to Lake Meredith about four years ago. Joe Kraai and his son, Kevin, had invited me along on what turned out to be the single best fishing day I've ever experienced on Lake Meredith.

Working from a boat that Joe was constantly motoring into position, we were casting night crawlers into the shallow water just off the windswept, rocky shoreline of a point...Our arms grew tired from reeling in "hammer handles."

That's the moniker that Joe, then district supervisor with the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department's inland fisheries office in Canyon, bestowed on walleyes in the sub-keeper 13-15 inch class. Those fish, just under the 16-inch minimum length limit, were about the length of a hammer handle. We caught a few 16-inchers that day, and released untold numbers of "hammer handles" that scarfed our nightcrawler offerings and provided loads of fun.

Joe skipped TP&WD's inland fisheries office in Canyon for many years, and did as much to boost walleye and smallmouth bass fishing in the Texas High Plains as any human could. One policy that was Joe's brainchild was a 16-inch minimum length limit for walleye, launched in September, 1987. Kraai felt that fishermen were overharvesting walleye in all the lakes in the High Plains. Establishing a minimum length limit allowed fish populations to rebuild.

"Back then, the big complaint was there were no fish. After a few years of the 16-inch minimum length, the complaint changed to there are too many little fish. That's a problem I never thought I would have," Kraai said.

Today, Joe is in San Angelo, where he's regional program director in charge of the Canyon office and four others. He maintains a keen interest in fishing fortunes in the Panhandle. Joe chose Charlie Munger, a veteran of years of his tutelage in Panhandle work, as his successor at the Canyon office.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

Given developments in the fishery the past few years, Charlie came up with his own proposal for a change in regulations that could ultimately improve the walleye angling. After the current 16-inch minimum length limit and bag limit of five fish per day to a five-fish daily bag, only two of which can be less than 16 inches in total length. The proposed change would impact reservoirs including Meredith, Greenbelt, Palo Duro, Canyon, Diversion, Moss Creek, New Ballinger, O.H. Ivie, and White River.

The Texas Parks & Wildlife Commission will make the final decision on the walleye proposal at a public meeting on April 15 in Austin.

Why allow keeping a couple of "hammer handle" walleye? According to Munger, the 16-inch minimum length limit led to more walleye in Lake Meredith, densities of legal-size fish increased, and angler catch rates improved.

After more than a decade under the 16-inch minimum length limit walleye growth rates have now declined and relative weights have been below national averages. Since 1989, the relative abundance of gizzard shad, an important forage species, has been declining. The white bass population in Lake Meredith has remained strong, causing competition with walleye for prey.

"By legalizing some harvest of walleye under 16 inches, we hope to increase overall angler harvest rates, reduce the number of 13-15-inch walleye in the population, and consequently increase growth rates and condition of walleye," says Munger.

"Although similar regulations have been enacted for walleye in other states, this is a unique regulation for Texas and there might be some potential problems. Anglers may experience some initial confusion. Law enforcement may perceive problems with culling, especially if too many under-sized walleye die after being kept and later released by anglers. Reducing the density of walleye may allow the white bass population to increase, and negate the effect of the regulation," he says.

There's no doubt that the minimum length limit on walleye boosted fisheries fortunes on Lake Meredith. Since the 16-inch minimum length limit was implemented in 1987 the average catch rate of walleye has tripled. The bulk of the increase came in fish 13-16 inches long. This greatly increased angler catch rates, and has also increased predatory pressure on gizzard shad. Reduced forage availability has also reduced the condition of predators in the lake, including walleye.

"Condition of walleye in Lake Meredith has declined due to a large increase in population. The objective of the proposed regulation is to reduce the number of walleye under 16 inches, which should reduce predatory pressure on gizzard shad. We've gone with a recommendation of only two walleye under 16 inches so that some harvest would occur, but not so much that the population as a whole would be damaged. Hopefully, this will be a long-term solution and we won't have to continue to change regulations," says Munger.

Stewart takes lead at Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Taking the lead after two or three rounds of a tournament is nothing new to Payne Stewart. Winning is another story.

Stewart still remembers what happened the last time he had the lead in the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. Johnny Miller chipped in from the junk on the eighth hole, closed with a 66 and beat him by one stroke in 1986.

And no one lets Stewart forget what happened last year, when he had a 4-stroke lead going into the final round of the U.S. Open, shot 74 and lost by one stroke when Lee Janzen had a 68 at Olympic Club.

On Friday, Stewart started eagle-birdie-birdie at Poppy Hills for an 8-under-par 64, giving him a 3-stroke lead after two rounds and two gorgeous days on the Monterey Peninsula.

"I want to win golf tournaments again," said Stewart, who hasn't made a bogey in 23 holes and was at 11-under 133. "And I've got to get myself in position to win the golf tournaments."

Now comes the hard part.

Things aren't sorted out at Pebble Beach until today, when everyone has had a chance to play all three courses in the rotation. Beyond that, Stewart will have to be at his best to hold off a list of challengers that once again includes David Duval. PGA champion Vijay Singh had a 67 at Poppy Hills and was at 136 along with Frank Lickliter, who had a 68 at Poppy.

But the name to fear these days is Duval, who three-putted for a bogey on his 17th hole at Poppy, but still managed to squeeze out a 7-under 65. He was four strokes back at 137, along with Craig Stadler, Fred Couples and Charles Warren.

"I've always felt that if you want to do well at this tournament, you have to pick up some ground here," said Duval, trying to win for the 10th time in his last 30 tournaments. "I left several out there today that I should have made, just shots that had no business being where they were." Warren, in his first year on tour out of Clemson, had a 6-under 66 for the best score at Spyglass.

On another day with hardly a trace of wind, Pebble Beach was loaded with low numbers. Couples chipped in for eagle on the 18th for a 65, while Davis Love III finished birdie for a 65 that put him at 138.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson had a 67 at Poppy and was at 139. Also at Poppy were Tiger Woods, who birdied three of the five par-5s, but didn't make up any more ground and finished at 3-under 141, and five-time Pebble winner Mark O'Meara, who shot 72 and was at 143.

Stewart figures he's due, and it might as well be this week.

"Does this place owe me one? I think you create your own destiny," Stewart said. "Obviously, in the near misses that I have had, I didn't play well enough to win. So be it. I'm going to see what I can do this week."

If he's looking for a smooth week, not even two days of mostly sunny skies and mild breezes can guarantee that.

The greens tend to be a bit bumpy by late afternoon, and this is the place where balls have been known to disappear over the ledge, bounce off the rocks and come back into play.

Stewart should be used to that.

In the U.S. Open, Janzen had a ball disappear into a tree and was getting ready to take a stroke-and-distance penalty when it mysteriously dropped down to earth. Stewart hit a perfect tee shot that wound up in a divot.

"You've been out here long enough to know that you need some breaks to win golf tournaments," Stewart said.

Special snow goose season still in federal review process

AUSTIN—For the second time in as many weeks, the starting date of a proposed special snow goose conservation action has been postponed due to delays in the federal review process. Texas Parks and Wildlife (TPW) officials announced today that the proposed starting date for the special season is being postponed until the federal rules are finalized. Once that happens, Texas will move to pen the season immediately.

"This delay is as frustrating to us as it is to the thousands of goose hunters and guides who have stepped up to the plate to help solve this crisis," said Andrew Sansom, TPW executive director. "Based on discussions with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (service) staff last week, we thought a decision would have been reached at the federal level by Feb. 4, but it hasn't and until it does, there's nothing we can do in Texas. I've been in contact with high-ranking officials with the Service; they understand the urgency and assure me they are doing what they can to expedite the final rulemaking steps."

The Service must approve and publish rules for the special snow goose season before the measures can be implemented in Texas. The proposed rules have passed muster at the Service and are currently under review within the Department of the Interior. If approved, the measure would allow hunters more liberalized means and methods for harvesting snow geese, including use of electronic goose calls, unplugged shotguns, an extension of shooting hours to one-half hour after sunset, and no bag or possession limit for snow geese. Hunters are reminded that under current Texas game laws, use of electronic goose calls and unplugged shotguns is prohibited.

"We realize that a lot of folks have made plans to take advantage of these special measures and regret the inconvenience these delays are causing," Sansom offered. "Be assured that Texas will implement the season and notify the public as soon as a decision is finalized in Washington."

If published within the next few days, the special snow goose season could begin sometime during the week of February 15 in the Western Goose Zone. The special season would remain in place until April 25. Hunters would still have to meet all other requirements for hunting waterfowl in Texas, including purchase of state and federal duck stamps and HIP (Harvest Information Program) certification.

The delay does not affect the regular snow goose hunting seasons in Texas, which are currently open and scheduled to close on Feb. 14. Hunters are encouraged to take advantage of the current liberal daily bag limit of 2- for light geese, regardless of the outcome of the proposed conservation action.

To provide hunters with the latest information the snow goose proposals, TPW has set up a toll-free "Snow Goose Hotline" at 1-800-792-1112, select menu option 5, then 5. Additional information is available on the TPW website: www.tpwd.state.tx.us.

VALPARAISO, Ind. — Spike Lee thought he had arrived as a filmmaker when he made "Entertainment Tonight" as a college student. Then reality set in. The director of "Malcolm X," "Do the Right Thing" and "He Got Game" says an award he won while a student at Atlanta's Morehouse College prompted the segment on the syndicated television program. Afterward, he waited by his telephone for major movie studios to call him. "I waited so long, Ma Bell turned off my phone," Lee said during a speech Wednesday night at Valparaiso University. "Followed by my electricity and gas."

"... Let me tell you right now, there is no such thing as an overnight success," After one of his early filmmaking experiences flopped, he went back to his studio apartment, sat alone in his bathtub and cried his eyes out. "I was this close to quitting, but I decided to give it one more try," he said. "In retrospect, it was a lesson."

Poll: Americans feel loss of control of their health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are generally happy with their health insurance coverage, but four in 10 adults say insurers have a bigger say than doctors in the care they receive, according to a new poll.

Women are more critical than men, with 40 percent saying the health care system is in worse shape than it was five years ago, says the poll conducted for The Associated Press. The biggest complaint was the inability of people to choose their own doctor.

As these concerns grow, Congress is again considering how to give people more control over their own health care without substantially increasing costs.

Nine out of 10 Americans said they were very satisfied or somewhat satisfied with their health insurance coverage, the survey found.

But among those with concerns about health care, much of that dissatisfaction is centered around the growing loss of control people feel over their medical care, an intensely personal issue.

The poll of 1,008 people taken Friday through Tuesday was done by ICR of Media, Pa.

Making some changes in the system sounds like a good idea to Thomas Feagley, a 42-year-old father of three, whose health plan required him to change family doctors last year.

"There needs to be an investigation or some kind of fine tuning," said the custodian of athletic fields at schools near Huntingdon, in central Pennsylvania, who used the team doctor as his family physician for years. "I would have been a happy camper if I could have gotten my insurance and kept my doctor."

From youth to death

Whimsical, poignant and hilarious play offers viewers a taste of where life goes

Six-member cast covers the full spectrum

By Becky Thorn
Brand Lifestyles Editor

Amarillo Little Theatre's production of "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" provided a look at life that was gentle, funny and joyous.

The audience seemed to enjoy ALT's current touring project, sponsored by Hereford Community Concert Association, which was performed Friday night in Hereford High School auditorium.

Six actors - Art Lynch, Treva Bradford, Ken Bender, Cara Kee,

Shawn Walsh and Laura Barton - took on several roles throughout the show, performing in scenes together or delivering monologues directly to the audience.

"All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" was based on Robert Fulgham's popular book of the same name. The production took its characters through several stages of life, from childhood to death.

The players frequently gave the impression they were carrying on a one-on-one conversation with the audience, telling true-life stories that brought laughter, gave insight or provided food for thought.

Scenes in the show ranged from a boy in kindergarten who played a pig in the class production of "Cinderella," to teenagers complaining about the disgusting gunk at the bottom of their mother's sink strainer; to one of the most memorable weddings in the annals of history; to the zany older couple that celebrated Christmas in July and February.

There were some musical numbers scattered throughout the show, but this was not a musical revue as ALT's touring projects have generally been.

While ALT's production of "Always...Patsy Cline" drew a larger audience two years ago,

"Kindergarten" was more philosophical and had more depth to it.

Stage props for "Kindergarten" were kept at a minimum throughout, requiring the audience to draw on their imagination for details to fit each scene.

While the audience had numerous opportunities to laugh during the performance, they will surely have gone away reflecting on such thought provoking phrases as "a sandbox code of ethics" and "To love something and to possess something are not the same thing."

Foods: They were a lot different in those growing up years

A wiener rolled up in a slice of bread. A bowl of cold cereal and a slice of toast. Do these sound like delicacies? To me they were when I was growing up on a dryland farm in Central Texas in the drought years of the 1950s.

As I look back on those growing up years, I wonder that we didn't succumb to numerous counts of food poisoning and a vast myriad of other things.

Not only was our lifestyle drastically different then, so was our style of eating.

"Our" refers to my parents, my sister and I, not others who lived in that same area of the country during those same years. Their lifestyles were probably different from ours because, even then, we were one of the few families who still lived in the country on the family farm.)

If you have any farm knowledge at all, you must realize that living on a dryland farm in drought years

Becky Thorn

Belabored Thoughts

meant you had very little in the way of ready cash, consequently you had a very limited food budget.

Prepared foods, such as wieners (or hot dogs as we called them), cold cereal and

"store-bought" bread were a rare treat.

Our daily menus consisted of "down home" foods that were primarily made from scratch.

"Scratch" baking was one of those things I was reared doing that I can't seem to get away from. When I make a cake, I select a recipe and make it from "scratch" because that's the way I was taught to make a cake.

Those "down home" foods also included things like fried chicken, mashed potatoes and red beans (simmered on the stove for hours, not cooked in a crock pot).

These or similar items were served for the midday meal, which we always referred to as "dinner." And leftovers were not put in the refrigerator, but covered and left on the table.

That made serving the evening meal, which we called "supper," easier because it was always eaten at room temperature, not warmed up again.

It remains a mystery to me why this practice was acceptable and apparently safer in those days when there were less preservatives in foods.

Everything you read today cautions against leaving food at room temperature for more than a couple of hours. And there seems to be more instances of food poisoning now than in those "pre-preservative" days.

It gives some "food for thought" and leads me often to the question -- Have we made as much "progress" as we think?

Education Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"A little learning is a dangerous thing - almost as dangerous as a lot of ignorance."

HJH would like to thank Moovies 6 Theater for donating free passes to the movies for two students from each academic team for perfect attendance for the third six weeks period.

The following is advice for the Class of 2000 from the Class of 1999 - advice they may want to follow to make their remaining high school experience run more smoothly.

1. Now is the perfect time to start thinking about teachers you might want to ask for recommendations - for scholarships and jobs.

2. Study. People may tell you that it is impossible to study for the SAT or the ACT, but the growing number of test preparation classes are proving them wrong. If you don't have the money or time for one of these classes, invest in a study guide which will have vocabulary and tips for test taking.

3. Work hard. No matter how much you hate that algebra class or how you are always tired during Spanish, try your best to do well. It is important to keep your grades up in every class. Colleges often place weight on your junior and senior years, so do your best.

4. Get involved! Colleges seek those who are involved and care about their community and school. Assess your interests and join clubs or groups that support that interest. Volunteer work is a good activity to have on your resume.

5. Get in the habit of finishing assignments well before they are due. You never know what else you may have to do prior to the due date. Also, this will give you a chance to proof your work and make changes, if necessary.

Thanks to all teachers who were involved in the local Science Fair. Thanks also go to the judges and the personnel at the administration building for their contribution. Another Thank You is extended to Debbie Gallman for coordinating the fair and for the many hours she spent to make it run so smoothly.

Next weekend will afford an extra day off for school students and personnel. There will be no classes on Monday, Feb. 15.

Students who miss classes due to stock shows, contests and/or sporting events and the many other activities in which they are involved, should check with teachers before leaving about any assignments they may have. This should be routine by now, but some students seem to think that because it is a school trip, they should be excused. This is just simply learning to accept responsibility!

"Unconditional love" can be found in many forms, but never so absolute than in the eyes of a parent.

Banner named Distinguished Grad

Janie Banner was named St. Anthony's 1999 Distinguished Graduate as part of the local school's observance of Catholic Schools Week, Jan. 31-Feb. 6.

The National Catholic Education Association Distinguished Graduate award was first awarded in 1991. It was established to recognize Catholic elementary school alumni.

The award "highlights people who as adults put into practice the values and ideals they learned in their Catholic Elementary Schools."

Banner met the criteria of "having graduated from a Catholic elementary school at least 15 years ago and having made some significant contribution to American society and the Catholic Church which reflects favorably on the education the person received in the Catholic Elementary School," according to Nancy Neusch, principal of St. Anthony's School, who presented the award to Banner.

Banner entered St. Anthony's in 1958 and graduated from the eighth grade in 1966 and "she has been a busy lady since that time," Neusch said.

She has been a catechist for 27 years, led Bible study groups, youth retreats, and prayer services.

She has served on the board for the Catholic Student Center in Canyon and Hereford Day Care Center.

Banner organized the first Prayer Chain for St. Anthony's Church, has been a speaker for the Church Women United and has been a leader for some of their community services projects.

She has been a feature writer for The Hereford Brand, was co-founder of the Problem Pregnancy Center and co-leader of the RCIA program.

Banner is a second generation Catholic student, following in her parents' footsteps. Her children attended St. Anthony's and her granddaughter is pre-registered for this fall, representing the fourth generation.

Banner and her husband, Mark, who is a supervisor for Kendrick Oil Co. in Friona, have four children. Angela Baker lives in Hereford and is mother of their two grandchildren, Reagan and Lauren; Renee is an RN at Baptist St. Anthony's in Amarillo; Melani is a speech pathologist in Dallas; and Marcus is in the U.S. Army, stationed at Ft. Bliss.

4-H to hold orientation for speaking projects

Deaf Smith County 4-H will hold an orientation meeting for Public Speaking/Method Demonstration Project at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the banquet room of Hereford Community Center.

Youth and their parents are urged to attend to receive rules for the 1999 contest. Sign-up for the different project areas will take place.

The public speaking project focuses on helping youth learn to prepare an educational presentation, develop skills in presenting to audiences, and perfect skills in utilizing posters or props in presentations.

Anyone interested who is not able to be present Monday should call the County Extension office at 364-3573.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Jack Sprat and I have something in common. Our wives are both too fat. I don't know about Jack, but I haven't had sex with my wife in four years. She has gradually ballooned in size and is now at least 100 pounds overweight. There are no physical reasons for her to be so heavy. It is simply a lack of self-discipline. She loves to eat and denies herself nothing.

I love my wife and would never be unfaithful, but making love to this woman is physically and emotionally impossible. She is very sensitive about her weight and refers to herself jokingly as being "pleasingly plump." Ann, pleasingly plump she is not. She is just plain fat, and her obesity has turned me off to the point that I am impotent. Incidentally, I am an insulin-dependent diabetic, but my sex drive is still strong.

Please tell me, Ann, how do I solve this problem that has made my marriage bed a place where "nothing happens?" — Jack Sprat II

Dear Jack: The reason for your wife's obesity may be rooted in something deeper than her lack of self-discipline. One hundred pounds of excess baggage could be the result of compulsive eating, but please don't rule out a metabolic problem. I hope you will urge your wife to get a physical checkup. After that, she needs some counseling — to find out not what she is eating but what is eating her.

And you, my friend, should discuss with your doctor the reason nothing is happening in your marriage bed. While your wife's additional weight may be a turnoff, your diabetes could be a contributing factor.

Dear Ann Landers: My 21-year-old stepson lives with my husband and me. He is a good student at a nearby college and doesn't drink or do drugs. He does, however, bring his girlfriend home frequently, and she stays until the next morning — in his bed, I should add.

My husband doesn't see anything wrong with this, but I believe unmarried people should not be having sex, and they certainly should not invite their girlfriends to stay overnight when they are living in their parents' home. How can I convince my husband and stepson that this is not appropriate behavior? — Out-Voted in California

Dear Out-Voted: I agree that it is not acceptable for your stepson to invite a young woman to stay overnight in your home without your approval. But you are not going to change the behavior of a 21-year-old and shouldn't try. You do, however, have the right to say, "NOT IN OUR HOUSE." Tell your husband I said so.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a very sophisticated, attractive girlfriend. She is intelligent and has a terrific job. What's the problem? She doesn't shave her legs or under her arms. I'm too embarrassed to tell her this offends me and that it is neither ladylike nor attractive.

I have never dated a woman who didn't shave her legs. My girlfriend has more hair on her legs than I have on mine. I know that in Europe some women don't shave their legs, but is this socially acceptable nowadays in the United States? — A Hairy Situation in the East

Dear East: Unshaven armpits and hairy legs are not socially acceptable in our culture, and I cannot imagine why a sophisticated woman would not be aware of this. You should tell your friend it would please you if she would do this, although she may not.

Incidentally, there are attractively packaged shaving kits for women available in drug stores everywhere. If she agrees to shave, consider giving her one.

Dana Brisendine

Dana Brisendine, a junior at West Texas A&M University, is the newly elected president of the WTAMU chapter of Chi Omega for the 1999 school year. She is a member of the President's Honor Roll, an honor reserved for students who have demonstrated academic excellence by achieving a grade point average of 3.85 or better on a 4.0 scale.

Brisendine, daughter of Mickey and Michelle Brisendine, is a marketing major and recipient of the Bob Chester and Ocie Chism Memorial Business Scholarships.

Southwest Texas State University announces that Andrew P. Carr of Hereford earned "Dean's List" recognition for excellent academic performance for the fall 1999 semester.

SWT students must complete 12 semester hours and earn a minimal GPA of 3.5 to be recognized for the Dean's List.

Misty Dawn Dudley of Hereford graduated from Abilene Christian University with a Bachelor of Science degree in elementary education during December commencement.

She is the daughter of Dan Dudley and Jan Dudley and graduated from Hereford High School in 1994.

Wagner birthday surprise highlights meeting of American Legion, Auxiliary

Highlighting the meal prior to the meeting recently of American Legion Post 192 and Auxiliary Unit was the surprise presentation of a birthday cake to Viola Wagner, cheer chairman for the unit.

Speaker was Patricia Robinson, vice president and program chairman. She presented the story of the Four Chaplains.

The first Sunday in February has been set aside to remember the heroic deeds of the four chaplains aboard the USS Dorchester on Feb. 3, 1943. They were Father Johnny Washington, Rabbi Alex Good and Protestant ministers Clark Poling and George Fox.

Separate business meetings were held following the program. Grant Hanna, commander of the American Legion, and Troyce Hanna, president of the auxiliary, presided.

Reports were heard and plans for the 80th birthday of the American Legion were made. Details will be announced in March.

A Valentine party and games night is planned for 7 p.m. Feb. 13. Members are asked to bring their favorite finger food and come to the American Legion Hall for a time of playing favorite games.

Military Muster

Army Pvt. John W. Laird has arrived at Fort Knox, Ky., to complete basic combat training.

During the eight weeks of training, the trainee will receive instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, physical fitness, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Laird is the son of Linda K. Laird of El Paso and Alan D. Laird of Hereford.

John W. Laird

Navy Seaman Recruit Tracy J. Danley, son of Charles W. and Peggy J. Danley of Route 5 and Betty S. and Leon B. Brannon of Hereford, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Danley completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis is also placed on physical fitness.

Danley and other recruits also received instruction on the Navy's core values — honor, courage and commitment — and how to apply them in their military performance and personal conduct. Danley joins 55,000 men and women who will enter the Navy this year from all over the country.

Men and women train together from their first day in the navy just as they do aboard ships and at shore commands around the world. To reinforce the team concept, Danley and other recruits also were trained in preventing sexual harassment and ensuring equal opportunity.

Even as the naval service gets smaller over the next few years, highly motivated young people like Danley are still finding an opportunity to improve their knowledge and education as they become part of the most highly technical naval force in history. This year alone the Navy will have more than 57,000 job openings and opportunities which include guaranteed training.

He is a 1998 graduate of Hereford High School.

One night I had a dream, I was walking along the beach with the Lord, and across the skies flashed scenes from my life. In each scene I noticed two sets of footprints in the sand. One was mine, and one was the Lord's. When the last scene of my life appeared before me, I looked back at the footprints in the sand, and to my surprise I noticed that many times along the path of my life there was only one set of footprints. I asked the Lord about it. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way. But I notice that during the most troublesome times in my life there is only one set of footprints. I don't understand why you left my side when I needed you most."

CHILDREN OF DIVORCE

The incidence of divorce has been increasing rapidly in the United States during the past several decades. It is reported that close to one-third of children under 18 will be affected by the divorce of their parents. Because divorce and marital separation are emotionally comparable to losing a parent through death, and because divorce, separation, and remarriage bring about rapid and multiple changes in the family, it is a traumatic and painful process for all involved, especially the children.

In past years, little direct help was given to the children of divorce; in fact, in most instances, the children were told as little as possible about family affairs and were instructed to keep the breakup secret for as long as possible. Recently, because of the noticeable effects of family separation on children, more attention has been directed to the needs of children going through this traumatic event. I encourage you to seek help for your children to deal with their bereavement from the loss of the family unit. When you hurt, they hurt.

The lives and relationships of children in a divorcing family are profoundly affected - socially, economically, psychologically, and even legally. Children must adjust to the separation from one parent and formation of a new and different relationship with the other. A change in the family's economic status, possibly a change in the home and school environment, different parenting styles, custody battles, and sometimes a totally different lifestyle bring about a variety of feelings that may be positive or negative.

Often mothers who have been totally involved in the care of children and home have to go to work, many are unskilled and have to accept low-paying jobs. Children may be torn by conflicting loyalties, or they may learn to play the parents against each other in an effort to get their own way. Children of divorced parents may be asked to assume the role of the absent parent and to fulfill physical or emotional responsibilities beyond their maturity level.

This creates a developmental problem for the child and may throw them into an emotional or physical void that will affect their functioning as a person the rest of their lives. For some families, the separation or divorce bring relief from tension and strife; for other families, the break up brings more stress, pressure, and overwhelming burdens.

I have many adults who frequently seek help to cope with the hurt associated with divorce through individual and group counseling or through organized helping groups such as DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS program. The DRESS program is held at San Jose Community Center, 735 Brevard, each Thursday evening from 6-9 and is sponsored by Amarillo Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. The program addresses all areas of family living and dynamics - not just substance abuse issues. It is a program for all ages and every age, including grandparents, are encouraged to participate.

Don't Give Up the Ship

Editor's Note: The following essay by Kale Ann Hollingsworth, a sixth grade student at West Central Intermediate School, was chosen by the American History Committee and other Los Ciboleros DAR readers for submission to the State Chairman for judging in the State Competition.

DAR readers evaluated the essay on 12 indicators which included title page, bibliography, paper presentation, historical accuracy, originality, number of words, interest, spelling, grammar, punctuation, neatness and adherence to subject. Scores, ranging from 5 for excellent to 1 for average, were given for the 12 indicators on each individual paper.

Hollingsworth is the daughter of Dale and Kim Hollingsworth.

Don't Give Up the Ship

I am a simple blue flag with white letters that was made for an American hero. My story begins with the birth of my good friend, Oliver Hazard Perry, who was born long before I was made.

Oliver Hazard Perry was born on August 23, 1785, in South Kingston, R. I. At the age of 13 he entered the Navy as a midshipman under his father, Captain Christopher Raymond Perry. Oliver got his education on the ship that he worked on. The kind of education he received was math, how to read and write, and how to navigate. At the age of 20 he became lieutenant and took command of a 14-gun vessel named Revenge. In May 1812, he received a promotion to Master Commandant. A month later America declared war on Great Britain because of the British infringing on American trade and freedom of the seas. He was given command of 12 gun boats at New Port and New London. Oliver did not like the inactivity of this post and in September 1812, he requested duty on the high seas or Great Lakes. In February 1814, he was ordered to Commodore Isaac Chauncey's command at Sacket's Harbor. Two weeks later Chauncey decided that Oliver would be of better use in Erie, Penn., where a fleet was being constructed to take control of Lake Erie from the British.

This is when I was made. The ladies of Erie made me and sewed, "Don't give up the ship" across my blue front. These words came from Captain Lawrence of the USS Chesapeake. Captain Lawrence died in a battle months before with the British ship, H.M.S. Shannon. His last words after he was shot were, "Don't give up the ship, fight her until she sinks." I was presented to Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry before we went to battle on Lake Erie. One of my proudest moments came right before the battle began. Oliver held me up and asked the crew if they wanted to fly me as a battle flag and they all said, "Aye, sir." Then the battle began as the flagship Lawrence approached the British fleet. Lawrence and the crew on board took most of the enemy's fire. When the Lawrence was severely damaged, Oliver lowered me and we transferred to the lightly damaged ship, Niagara, in a small boat. When we got on that ship he took command and raised me up the Niagara's mast.

Then we formed our battle line and within 15 minutes of our transfer to the Niagara the whole British squadron surrendered.

After the battle, on the back of an old letter, Oliver wrote to General Harrison these famous words, "We have met the enemy and they are ours." Later on, Oliver and his crew received prize money for every British ship captured. Because of his actions in the battle Oliver was promoted to permanent captaincy and awarded a medal by the U.S. Congress.

We continued to serve the U.S. Navy until 1819. On August 23, 1819, while in command of the USS John Adams, Oliver died on his birthday of yellow fever at the age of 34.

Although my captain died at an early age, he played an important part in the early history of the U.S. Navy. I am happy that I was part of his short but famous career. Because of my role in the Battle of Lake Erie I am on display at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Thank You!

Our most sincere thanks to the family and friends who showed their love, caring, friendship and respect to our loved one, Virginia (Jones, Walker) Palmer with flowers, visits to the funeral homes, offers of food and other assistance, telephone calls and sympathy during our bereavement.

YOUR EYES

ARE YOU AT RISK FOR GLAUCOMA?

In the United States, chronic glaucoma is one of the leading causes of blindness. If detected and treated early, it need not cause blindness or even severe loss of vision. Unfortunately, most people do not notice any symptoms (a gradual loss of peripheral vision is the biggest sign) of chronic glaucoma until there is permanent damage. For this reason, it's important to be aware of the following risk factors.

- Age. After the age of 40, your chances of developing glaucoma increase.
- Family History. Glaucoma runs in families.
- Diabetes. Diabetics are at greater risk of developing glaucoma.
- Ethnicity. Certain ethnic groups have a greater chance of developing glaucoma. Be sure to check.

If you have any or several of these risk factors, be sure to get an annual eye exam after the age of 35.

An Escalator to Success - 20 Success Shortcuts
(Part One of a two-part series)

There's an adage that proclaims, "There is no elevator to success, you have to take the stairs." I agree, but I believe we can speed up the process.

Over the years, I've read a lot about traits and virtues found in successful people. I added a few of my own and created an escalator to success. I know it's not as quick as an elevator, but at least the stairs are moving.

Take-you-to-the-top traits.

• Successful men and women are nice. One of my frugal friends often reminds me that it doesn't cost anything to be nice. I've noticed that the higher folks rise in this life, the nicer they become. Or, perhaps they rose to high because they were so nice. Ponder that.

• Successful people are efficient. If you don't have time to do quality work the first time, when will you find time to do it over? Efficiency is getting the most done with the least time and resources. It's not only how hard you work, but also how smart you work.

• Successful folks are tenacious. They are determined to finish what they begin. When the going becomes difficult, they just keep on going. Mt. Everest was conquered one strenuous step at a time.

• Successful people have fun. It helps your success possibilities if you enjoy your work. I doubt that many folks will remember your actions 100 years from now anyway, so relax and have fun. A Latin proverb advises to "laugh if you are wise." Fun is good for us and helps us accomplish more.

• Successful people are intelligent. You're intelligent or you wouldn't be reading this. Stupid people don't read my column. (They're too busy writing letters to the editor.) Intelligence is the ability to learn, grasp concepts and grow intellectually. Intelligent people listen more than they talk. Most people would rather talk to an intelligent person than listen to one. So listen and get smart.

• Successful people pay attention to details. Henry Ford said, "Paying attention to simple little things that most men neglect makes a few men rich." A white shirt with a small ketchup stain is still 99 percent clean. But if you wear the shirt in public, most people will remember seeing the spot, not the 99 percent of your shirt that is clean.

• Successful folks are good communicators. When they write, they use small active words in clear, concise sentences and short paragraphs. When they speak they choose their words carefully so they will not be misunderstood. They practice active listening.

• Successful people take risks. They are often perceived as gutsy and wild, but the risks they take are calculated. They do take risks and they do fail. However, because they have considered both the risk and rewards, their failures are small and their wins are big and important.

• Successful men and women have strong morals and ethics. There is more to any ethics question than, "Is it legal?" The real question is always is it right or wrong. There are words that accurately describe the character of a truly successful person. Try these for starters: Integrity, honesty, generous, fair, caring, responsible, trustworthy, open, truthful and just. Successful people avoid lies and strategic omissions.

• Successful people think before they act. They plan before they commit resources. They chart their course before sailing out of sea. But they do act, they do commit and they do sail. They think before acting, not instead of acting.

Next week in part two, we'll share more shortcuts to success. Don't miss "An Escalator to Success" part two.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

My how time flies when you're having fun. It is Thursday morning, time for this article to be at The Brand, and I still haven't found the topic I want to write about.

This week has been so full of immediate deadlines that crisis management has been the norm. While trying to schedule everything in a manageable way so that I don't have a nervous breakdown or throw up my hands in frustration, I have discovered that it can't be done.

I have managed to overload my boat and the water level keeps rising. Once again, I have asked myself why? At one time I had a poster in my office that said, "Lack of planning on your part does not constitute an emergency on my part." When I was the subordinate employee, I thought this quote was great and very applicable. Now that I'm the once in charge, it seems to be even more applicable, but a lot less enjoyable.

When I find myself in this situation, I can depend on my staff to shift into the "save the sinking boss" mode. Each one will do just a little extra to help relieve some of the pressure I feel. They even understand when the pitch of my voice becomes strained and irritating.

I want to say thanks to my staff for being so understanding and helpful. I want to say to my staff, "Thanks for making the library a pleasant place to visit and work." I couldn't do it without you.

Now I must finish the book reviews so LaJuan can get them processed.

The Stargazey by Martha Grimes begins on a bleak November day. Richard Jury finds himself intrigued by the woman he sees get on the number 14 bus traveling Fulham Road. Her hair was "so gossamer pale, you could see the moon through it." Richard saw the woman leave the pub called The Stargazey, board the bus and get off at Fulham Palace Road. Being so taken with the woman, Richard follows her to the gates of Fulham Palace, but only to the gates. Later Richard wonders if the woman's death could have been averted if he had followed her further into the garden. Richard and Melrose Plant work together to solve the complex case.

Comanche Dawn by Mike Blakeley tells the story of the Comanche Nation through the eyes of the Comanches. The young warrior Horseback was born on the day the first horse came to his people. Horseback grows into a courageous leader with uncommon vision. He accepts the powerful medicine the spirits grant him on his vision quest and is guided by forces that he is unable to explain. Only the bravest of the people dare to follow Horseback on his great adventure.

W. E. B. Griffins In Danger's Path is the best corps novel yet, according to the blurb writer. FDR puts Fleming Pickering in charge of OSS's Pacific operation in an effort to unite the warring interest of General MacArthur, Admiral Nimitz, and OSS Chief Donovan. The two urgent missions he must undertake are: to contact and rescue a band of former American servicemen and their dependents on the run from the Japanese in the Gobi Desert of Mongolia, and to set up a weather station in the Gobi to help direct planned aerial attacks against Japan.

Pickering surrounds himself with the men he can trust and depend on. With luck, they may even survive.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: While recuperating from surgery in the hospital, I received many beautiful flowers from relatives and friends.

My sister-in-law who sent me flowers and lives out of the city mentioned that she wondered what type of bouquet I received. She said, "I never know what the florist actually sends when the order is placed over the phone."

This gave me the idea to take a picture of each arrangement and send it along with the thank-you note for the lovely gift.

My husband took pictures of each arrangement with me. When I sent out the thank-you notes, I carefully cut out only the arrangement and me and then pasted the cut-out picture inside the note. — Pat Berger, Houston

FAST FACTS

Dear Heloise: There are several uses which I have discovered through the years for tall potato chip cans when all the chips are gone.

1. We have used our cans on numerous occasions for carrying silverware to picnics. It is a neat and efficient way to keep track of the utensils.

2. It is also fun for younger children to decorate the can with plastic adhesive-backed paper.

3. As our children started venturing off on their own to college, I provided them with some basics for a sewing kit they may need to fix a hem or sew on a button.

—Debbie Landig, Westerville, Ohio

And, here are a few more uses for them:

- * Use them to mail cookies.
- * They're great for storing craft paintbrushes.
- * Store an opened sleeve of round crackers in one to keep them fresh. — Heloise

SOUND OFF

Dear Heloise: Why do cosmetic companies recommend that after three months you throw away unused makeup to keep from getting bacteria? How about making a three-month supply? This way it would be less expensive and you wouldn't need a list of what to throw away. — Dee Bolton, San Antonio

You're right; that's why I like to buy small sample or promotion sizes. — Heloise

Power of Planning—David Terry, left, business consultant for West Texas A&M University Small Business Development Center, talks with Jim Scott Jr. following a workshop session at the Senior Citizens Center. The workshop on detailed business planning was the first of four workshops designed to help interested individuals develop vital business skills. The next workshop will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Senior Center. Bill Harrington, assistant director of WTAMU Small Business Development Center will discuss financial basics such as tax and legal issues, basic record keeping and financial statements.

Steep expenses threaten New Mexico chili farmers

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — High labor cost, lower profits and tougher regulations are forcing many New Mexico chili farmers out of business, according to a new study.

A survey of chili farmers also showed that many were threatened by imports and faced decreasing yield, said Rhonda Skaggs, a professor of economics and business at New Mexico State University.

Skaggs presented her findings at the annual New Mexico Chili Conference this week, where agriculture and business experts discussed ways to keep one of the state's most well-known industries productive.

One of the major problems has been labor, with half the chili farmer's costs going towards finding good workers, the survey showed. Federal regulations that ban chemicals needed to control insects and diseases have also hurt farmers, Skaggs said.

To become more profitable, farmers must better manage fertilizer, reduce labor costs by becoming more mechanized, and improve water management, according to the survey.

Tim Hartz, a vegetable specialist at the University of California-Davis, said New Mexico chili farmers should try new farming methods to reduce costs and increase yields.

Hartz said California farmers can produce an average 6,000 pounds of dry chile per acre, compared to an average 4,000 pounds in New Mexico. He recommended that chili farmers use sprinkler irrigation systems and practice longer rotation periods to combat soil disease.

Hartz also advised New Mexico farmers to monitor diseases in their cotton and alfalfa fields because many strains can cross-breed into chili fields.

Peaches need more chill days Growers report too little cold weather

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Even though it is too early to speculate about how this year's peach crop will fare, Texas Agricultural Extension horticulturists say that the mild winter temperatures may set the crop slightly behind schedule.

Extension horticulturist Jim Kamas of Fredricksburg said the Hill country is a bit behind in chill hours. Peaches need a certain amount of chill hours—or the hours the trees should spend in cold temperatures in preparation for spring blooms to break out of dormancy and produce a good crop.

"Even though the warm trend in late January is fairly normal, there has not been enough chill to set the crop," he said. "We are relatively short on those chill hours, but it's too early to push the panic button."

Kamas said the peach trees in the Hill Country area usually bloom around March 10; tree growth is looking relatively good across the state.

"An ideal February would include 35 to 45 degree temperatures, and growers are really hoping that will happen," he said.

Though growers are hoping for cooler weather soon, a late frost could severely damage the peach crop once the blooms have set.

Extension horticulturist Marty Baker of Overton said peaches are extremely sensitive to changes in the weather once the fruit flowers have set.

Other areas of the state are also dealing with low chill hours and hoping for cooler weather, Kamas said.

"Cultivar get progressively more cold tolerant as you go north, so nobody really has enough chilling hours yet," he said. "Everybody is really in the same boat because the weather has been the same proportionately with respect to the cultivars' tolerances."

SWCD continues tree, shrub sale

Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District continues to offer windbreak tree sapplings and shrubs for sale.

Officials say evergreens, deciduous and shrubs, which have been grown for this climate, are available, but orders should be placed soon as some varieties are already sold out.

Tree orders will continue through the first week in March, with delivery scheduled for March 17.

Planting tips will be available.

For more information or to order trees please contact the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District office at 364-6995.

Farmers research methods to save the farm

CENTERVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Doctors, lawyers, teachers, secretaries, even plumbers have pensions and retirement savings. Farmers often have only the farm.

They and their children may spend their lives working the land — raising barns, silos and fencing; buying livestock and machinery; planting crops; improving the soil; and perhaps leasing other property.

They don't make much money. In 1995, the average farm family net income in Pennsylvania was $13,000. As the saying goes, they end up land rich and cash poor.

So how do they retire without selling everything? How can they ease into retirement and still pass on the land to their children? And how do their children get the money to buy a farm?

"We're trying to find the most cost-effective way to do that," said Pam Wolfe, 37, who with her sister eventually wants to take over her father's dairy farm in Dunbar, Pa.

"Everything we've done on that farm, I didn't do myself. The whole family did it," said her father, Albert Ferens, 61. "I want to learn about transferring the farm to the younger generation."

Mrs. Wolfe and her father were among farmers at a workshop this week sponsored by Farm Link, a nonprofit organization that wants to save Pennsylvania's family farms.

The farmers learned about business and estate planning, financing, farm management and farmland preservation. They heard a few success stories and some tales about families who didn't transfer the farm properly.

"We're having fewer and fewer people assume farms from their families. If it gets serious enough, we won't have people with on-farm experience. And eventually, that leads to more industrialization of agriculture," said Marion Bowlan, director of Harrisburg-based Farm Link. "We have a real crisis in the making if we don't get some more people into farming."

About 90 percent of Pennsylvania's farms still are family owned, but the numbers are declining precipitously, Mrs. Bowlan said.

In 1987, the state had about 51,500 farms; in 1992, that number dropped to 44,870. When the 1997 census statistics are released, Mrs. Bowlan expects the numbers to reveal even more declines.

Just as troubling are statistics that show twice as many farmers are over the age of 55 as under 35 and that a quarter of the state's farms will change hands in the next decade, she said.

Mrs. Bowlan and other experts worry that farmers aren't making provisions to hand over control to their sons and daughters early enough for the next generation to build equity to repay their parents and continue to make improvements.

"I tell farmers that if your son is 40 years old and he still doesn't own any of the business, it's unlikely he'll stick around," she said.

Part of the problem is that farmers either don't want or don't know how to pass on the farm so parents receive enough to live on and children aren't saddled with unreasonably harsh debt.

"Getting started in the planning process is the No. 1 issue. We all know it's going to happen someday, but it's so easy to put it off," said John Becker, a Penn State professor of agricultural economics who gave a workshop on estate planning.

Ed Nehrig, a fourth-generation farmer who works with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, said his father formed a limited partnership with him years ago. Now Nehrig is doing the same so his son can take over their 1,200-acre dairy and grain farm in Indiana County.

"You don't have to put it together and do it all at once. You can do a little as you go," Nehrig said. "The hardest part was just sitting down and doing it."

TAES sponsors local cotton conference

Area cotton producers will have an opportunity to hear the latest in cotton production technology at the Southwest Panhandle Cotton Conference Friday at the Hereford Community Center.

Topics which will be presented during the conference include methods and materials to control herbicide drift, by Hershel Wade of Loveland Industries; managing cotton for profit, by Dr. Randy Boman, Assistant Professor and Extension Agronomist with Texas Agricultural Extension Service; and cotton insect identification and control, by Brant Baugh, Lubbock County Extension agent.

John Saylor, a Bailey County cotton producer will present an update on the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Program.

Other items to be discussed include transgenic cotton varieties, irrigation management, marketing, seed selection, planting methods, fertilization and harvest aides.

In addition to the speakers a number of cotton specific companies will display products and wares.

Texas Department of Agriculture has approved 5.25 continuing education units for private, commercial, non-commercial pesticide applicators. CEU's will also be given for certified crop advisors.

The conference is sponsored by the Deaf Smith, Randall, Oldham, and Potter County offices of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Deaf Smith County Crops Committee and the Hereford Farmers Co-op Gin.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. Friday and the cost is $5, which includes a meal.

People planning to attend are asked to call the Deaf Smith County Extension office so meal plans can be made.

Grain elevator workshop scheduled

AMARILLO — Pest management and quality control is important to every grain producer and elevator operations.

Preparations by the grain storage industry to handle this year's crop are already underway, said Dr. Carl Patrick, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The Tri-State Chapter of Grain elevator and processing Society in cooperation with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will sponsor the Texas High Plains Grain Elevator Workshop on Feb. 11, at the Texas A&M research and Extension Center.

Agenda items include presentations on integrated pest management, rodent control, aeration, fumigation, and industry regulations.

Pesticide applicators will be able to earn continuing education units for commercial, non-commercial and private applicators.

This will be the 11th year for the workshop.

Registration begins at 8 a.m., with the program beginning at 8:30.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Night Ride Home addresses worst fear of parents

By Justino Aguilera
©TVData Features Syndicate

She once horrified audiences as the wicked nanny in The Hand That Rocks the Cradle. But now, actress Rebecca De Mornay is taking on a more sympathetic maternal role.

As Nora Mahler, De Mornay portrays a mother who loses a child in an accident in Night Ride Home, a film based on the novel by Barbara Esstman.

Airing Sunday, Feb. 7, on CBS, the story of love, loss and survival was filmed on location near Portland, Ore., and teams De Mornay with Academy Award winners Keith Carradine and Ellen Burstyn.

Both De Mornay and Carradine, who plays Nora's husband, Neal, say that in order to relate to their characters, they borrowed from their own family experiences, but the emotional journey they travel is especially intense because of the difficult subject matter of losing a son.

"I was just blown away with how incredibly heavy this movie is," says De Mornay, who committed to the role several months after giving birth to her first child.

In this 200th Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation, audiences get to see the motherly side of De Mornay, whose roles usually have edgier elements to them. Future films, for example, include two black comedies; in one, she portrays an ex-stripper.

"I wouldn't have been able to play Nora had I not given birth to my daughter," the 37-year-old actress says. "It's a whole different world once you have a child, but being a mother made the role incredibly torturous because losing a child is every mother's worst nightmare."

The film also explores the strained relationship between Nora and Neal, who have been married for nearly 20 years.

"Nora has been in a marriage in which she's had an equal part in letting it fall apart," De Mornay says. "Somehow she's fallen out of love with him."

The film also illustrates the healing of a family stricken with grief. Carradine says his character goes through a harsh transformation but becomes stronger.

"He allows himself to be dominated through his marriage," he says. "He comes to the point where he has to reclaim himself, and that's certainly different than any character I've played before."

As a parent of three children and someone who has had difficult moments in relationships, Carradine, 49, says his role paralleled his life to some degree.

"I'm a parent, and I had a marriage that didn't work," says the actor, who's currently going through a divorce after 12 years of marriage. "All of those issues in the movie were very close to me. I wasn't trying to create an elaborate group of memories."

Although Carradine's character has passive traits, he gradually becomes stronger in order to help his family survive the loss.

"It's a family in deep crises," he says. "But one is left with a sense of hope, not resolution. Everyone has to go through hardships, but the strength of the human spirit must go on and heal."

In the end, the film's message is that hope can survive the very difficult experience of losing a family member.

"Everyone of us has to experience the loss of a loved one," De Mornay concludes. "Hopefully not of a child, but there's a way through it even though your life is never the same."

Keith Carradine and Rebecca De Mornay play a husband and wife struggling to cope with the devastating loss of their child in the 200th Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation Night Ride Home. The film premieres Sunday on CBS.

HOROSCOPES

February 7-13

ARIES - March 21/April 20
Several loved ones are being secretive about a family matter. Don't get angry or push them to tell you what's going on. Try to be patient. You'll learn the facts soon enough. The person whom you've been seeing wants to take a break. While this upsets you, you know that it is the best thing to do. Aquarius plays a key role.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Don't be stubborn when it comes to a business meeting late in the week. Listen to what others have to say. Some of them make very valid points. Try to work out a compromise. A close friend is having romantic problems. Offer your advice, because you've been in his or her place in the past.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
A business associate reveals his or her true feelings for you. No matter how you feel, don't get involved with him or her. It only will create problems at work. A loved one asks for your opinion about a family matter. Be honest - even if he or she won't want to hear what you have to say.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
You have a falling out with that special someone early in the week. Cancer. While you have every right to be angry and upset, don't make any drastic decisions. The two of you can work this out if you just listen to each other. An acquaintance asks to borrow money. Don't do it!

LEO - July 23/August 23
Don't let a compliment from a co-worker go to your head. You certainly deserve the praise, but that doesn't mean that you don't have to work hard anymore. You must keep giving 100 percent. A loved one has good news. Help him or her to celebrate. Libra plays an important role.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Be honest when a good friend asks for your opinion about his or her new relationship. While he or she might not want to hear what you have to say, it still needs to be said. You meet an interesting person while running errands. Make plans to see him or her again. This could be the one!

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Don't let a minor setback get you down, Libra. You still can reach your goal; you just have to come up with another approach. If you relax and clear your head, you'll think of the perfect plan. A loved one is concerned about you. Don't ignore his or her questions. Talk freely, and tell him or her how you really are.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
You have a lot to do this week, Scorpio. Stay focused on the tasks at hand, and don't let others distract you. If you work diligently, you can get everything done and have time to enjoy yourself at the end of the week. A friend of a friend asks a favor of you. Do what you can.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Don't take your personal problems to work with you. Your superiors are expecting a lot from you this week. Don't disappoint them. A loved one lets you in on a family secret. Keep it to yourself. It's not your place to tell anyone. Leo plays an important role on Thursday.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Stand your ground when it comes to a disagreement with an acquaintance. You know that you are right. Don't back down just to end the situation. Others will support you. A close friend wants to set you up on a blind date. Don't do it. While he or she means well, the date has too much potential to be disastrous.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Don't get in over your head when trying to help a co-worker this week. Aquarius. While you want to assist this person, you have a lot of your own work to do. Don't make yourself look incompetent to make him or her look good. That special someone has a surprise for you. Enjoy it!

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
When you see something that you want this week, Pisces, go after it. No one else is going to help you get it, so take some action. A loved one needs to talk to you about a personal problem. Listen to him or her, and try to be supportive.

IN FOCUS

A lonely youth (Martin Villafaina) retreats into a fantasy world to satisfy his desire to play piano in The Planet of Junior Brown, airing Sunday, Feb. 7, on Showtime.

Junior, a teen-ager with an unquenchable appetite for food and music, must endure an overbearing mother who cuts his piano's strings and an eccentric music teacher who won't let him near her instrument.

A model of the solar system, with him as the 10th planet, inspires his fantasies of musical fulfillment.

Gregory Harrison and Melissa Gilbert star in the tense mystery drama Murder at 75 Birch, airing Tuesday, Feb. 9, on CBS.

Gwen Todson's (Gilbert) husband receives a late-night phone call from his brother Rick (Harrison) saying that his wife is dead. Rick tells police a burglar is responsible but becomes the prime suspect.

When Gwen's husband dies in a car accident on the way to the police station, she starts her own investigation and uncovers the horrible truth.

Enrico Colantoni

Q: Enrico Colantoni (Just Shoot Me) played a guy with the last name Utz on a sitcom not long ago. What was it? --Betty Maciag, Chicago.

A: He played Louis Utz, Gloria's (Jessica Lundy) ex-husband, on NBC's Hope & Gloria.

Q: My friend's brother insists that Dustin Diamond (Saved by the Bell) is the brother of Mike D. of the Beastie Boys. True? --Tara and Andrea via e-mail.

A: True.

Q: Can you help us identify a TV movie remake of the classic movie Love Her to Heaven? --The Rainer Twins in Opp, Ala.

A: You're probably thinking of Too Good to Be True, a 1988 TV movie starring Loni Anderson, Patrick Duffy and Glynnis O'Connor.

Q: Can you tell me anything about Broadside and Valentine Farrell, two shows that aired in the mid-'60s? --C.S., Riverside, Vt.

A: Kathy Nolan, Edward Andrews and Dick Sargent starred in Broadside, a 1964-65 ABC sitcom about a group of U.S. Navy WAVES assigned to an otherwise largely male-occupied South Pacific island during World War II.

Also on ABC that season, Tony Franciosa played New York publisher Valentine Farrow (not Farrell) in Valentine's Day, a sitcom that mainly followed its title character's amorous adventures.

Jack Soo and Janet Waldo co-starred as, respectively, Valentine's valet and secretary. Former opera great Helen Traubel guest starred as his mother, Muriel.

Q: Did Jamie Luner (Melrose Place) once play one of the children on Just the Ten of Us years ago? --Kelly Vamis, Berkeley, Calif.

A: Nice catch, Kelly! Yes, Luner played space case Cindy Lubbock in the 1988-90 ABC sitcom.

Q: Why does the Disney Channel insert commercials in all its programming and movies not in prime time? They are listed as a premium channel, and they charge like one. --Bill T. via e-mail.

A: While the Disney Channel still has about 4 million paid subscribers, eight years ago the channel began offering itself to cable operators as either a basic or pay service. In most markets, it no longer is a premium service.

The channel still runs its Magical World of Disney movies uninterrupted, says Rich Ross, senior vice president of programming and production, but "we break all our other series because we heard ... that people need a break. And ... every (off-network) series is created with breaks."

"In the past, (the shows) often were sealed up so pacing really looked very weird. So now we break everything outside of our prime-time movie."

HIGHLIGHTS

Soprano Harolyn Blackwell and pop singer Peabo Bryson celebrate Valentine's Day in Cincinnati Pops Holiday: Love Is in the Air Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

Chocolates, roses and mushy cards are still a few days off. The time before Valentine's Day usually holds about as much romance and fun as any other bleak February day.

But PBS offers a timely confection. Cincinnati Pops Holiday: Love Is in the Air. The hourlong salute to amour airs Wednesday, Feb. 10 (check local listings). This is the latest in a series of holiday concerts by Erich Kunzel, conductor of the Cincinnati Pops Orchestra.

Having done a big-band New Year's, a "spooktacular" for Halloween and a Christmas show, Kunzel is already gearing up for the next concert, though he's mum on which holiday it will be. However, he has much to say from a hotel room in Toronto on the importance of such shows.

"With the NEA (National Endowment for the Arts) almost a nonexistent entity, TV is not artistic-minded," Kunzel says. "If it isn't sitcoms, it's a sports event. The arts have suffered greatly. All those wonderful programs are gone.

PBS is the last bastion of presenting art in all its forms in television."

Kunzel squeezes many of those forms into this show. Besides his orchestra, there's soprano Harolyn Blackwell; pop singer Peabo Bryson, aerialist Alexander Streltsov, ballet dancers Anna Reznik and Alexei Kremnev, and jazz ensemble VocalEase.

Quite the showman, the 63-year-old conductor commands the stage of the venerable Cincinnati Music Hall. The first clues to just what sort of show follows are immediate: The stage is bathed in lavender lights. Glittery hearts and red chiffon abound, and the orchestra (and Kunzel) are clad in red.

Kunzel picked the eclectic music selections, which range from Disney to Gounod. There's Elton John's "Can You Feel the Love Tonight" from The Lion King and Leonard Bernstein's "Tonight" from West Side Story.

Kunzel does love Valentine's Day, he says. But come next Sunday, the conductor "will be right here in Toronto, all alone" for a performance. His wife had to go to Austria. Maestro, violins please.

SOAP TALK

Rinna ready to return; dark Days needs light

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Former Days of Our Lives and Melrose Place star Lisa Rinna is ready to get back to work.

The incredibly svelte actress says she has been enjoying spending time with her new baby daughter but that it's time to put her nose to the grindstone.

Would she consider coming back to daytime?

"I'm not ready to return right now, but I'll never say never. That was a good time for me," she says.

Rinna's husband, Harry Hamlin, is in the new WB Network comedy Movie Stars.

"My best friend, Jennifer (Grant), plays his wife on the show," Rinna says. "so it really feels like we are keeping it all in the family."

Dear Candace: My wife and I have watched Days for years. Our only complaint is that Stefano (Joseph Mascolo) gets away with everything. We are sick and tired of his character.

Just when we think Bo and Hope (Peter Reckell, Kristian Alfonso) are going to get together again, Stefano gets in the way.

We'd like the stories to get back to the good old days when Tom Horton (Macdonald Carey) was around. None of the characters on the show have any kind of respect for anyone.

It's not good for the general public to see so much hate on a show. It's time for us to see something positive for a change. —Aubrey Lyons, Duncan, Okla.

Dear Reader: Days is one of those shows that can get away with outlandish story lines.

Many times fans and critics believe the writers take things too far. As long as Stefano is around, there is going to be some kind of craziness going on. The bad guys almost always get away on this show.

There has been a big push from fans for Days to concentrate more on the families in Salem and less on the wild tales.

Only time will tell if the writers are listening.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
