A year down under

Journals tell of a year on ice

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

On a warm, balmy afternoon, early in 1957, on the paradise island of Okinawa, two U.S. Navy buddies contemplate the latest volunteer assignment - a one-year stint in the ice-packed region of Antarctica, commonly referred to as the South Pole.

It took some doing, but the more gung-ho of the two finally convinced the other this would be the assignment of a lifetime.

Finally his buddy, Benjamin Forest McDowell, agreed to volunteer. As irony or luck would have it, McDowell would pass the physical while his buddy would be left behind.

The stint did have some perks - pay raise, increase in rank, and the volunteers would have their choice of future assignments.

McDowell spent six months in physical and mental preparation. Finally, as the year was drawing to a close, he headed for the ice down under.

A quick jump to New Zealand and then the adventure began.

"It was so unknown," said McDowell. "We really didn't know what to expect."

He arrived at the McMurdo Sound base and was soon assigned to the work he would do for the next 12 months.

His first task was getting used to his new uniform. Coming from Texas, McDowell was used to snow every so often, but nothing he had ever experienced had prepared him for the heavy parka or the heavy inflatable weatherproof boots.

"I never could wear them," he said. "That air in between the

'Selling' the hospital

Team: HRMC didn't market itself very well

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

It's generally accepted around Hereford Regional Medical Center that the hospital hasn't done a very good job of selling itself.

However, that's about to change - if Carolan Garza and Donna Kemp are successful with their project.

Garza, who is administrative assistant in the HRMC administration office, and Kemp, newly designated special projects coordinator, took on the duty of finding a consulting firm to help hospital personnel develop the expertise to coordinate a hospital marketing campaign - in short, sell the hospital to a community that apparently doesn't know what services are available at HRMC.

"Donna is special projects coordinator and Carolan has done some of the (marketing) work for the hospital. She (Garza) also has a real desire to do this type of work. So, we three got together to do this project," HRMC administrator John Studrud said.

"They've interviewed three firms so far. The process is to explore the possibilities of trading our awareness of the hospital as it stands today," Studrud said. "We would develop an educational campaign to create awareness of the No. 1 choice that will come out of the mid-March or late March retreat."

In mid-January, the hospital conducted a weekend retreat involving the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors, HRMC administrators and staffers, physicians and representatives of the

The purpose of the retreat was to develop a long-range strategic plan for the hospital.

One of the major recommendations to come out of the retreat was that the hospital administration must put more emphasis into selling the hospital.

Marketing will be essential for the hospital, regardless if architectural consultants evaluating the hospital's physical needs conclude a new hospital should be built or the present facility should be renovated.

At the hospital board meeting Tuesday night, Studrud emphasized the need to sell the hospital and its services to the community.

The marketing of the hospital and its services, or a bond package should the master facilities plan recommend construction of a new facility, is essential for the growth of

Marketing firm specifications

Any marketing firm that enters into an agreement with Hereford Regional Medical Center should consider the "backbone of the marketing strategy should include the employees, medical staff and (board of directors) serving as ambassadors to the community sell our hospital and its needs, according to specifications developed by administrative assistant Carolan Garza and special projects coordinator Donna Kemp.

The marketing firm will need to establish a relationship with key staff to assist the hospital with the public relations outreach and marketing campaign."

Among the suggestions for goals for the marketing firm are:

- Development of a new slogan to accommodate the direction of the district;
- Development of a new logo for the drive;
- Public speech writing and/or presentation for public appearances;
- Marketing campaign products beyond local newspaper and radio;
- Public opinion surveys;
- Special events coordination, including fund-raising activities;
- Production of newsletters, both in-house and for public distribution, to provide information for hospital employees and the community; and
- Development/improvement of media relations.

the hospital, he said.

To that end, Garza and Kemp began contacting advertising agencies and public relations firms to get a feel for what a marketing plan would entail.

Garza and Kemp presented a report that outlined the inquiries presented to several companies in Amarillo and Lubbock, some of which already have experience in the healthcare field.

Garza said they already have met with Fellers Marketing & Advertising of Amarillo, the Price Communications Group of Lubbock, and a California-based company, MTI Studios.

The California company did not come to Hereford at their request, Garza said. It has several clients, including Hereford State Bank, in the Panhandle, so its representatives already in town, "so we took

BOB JOSSERAND

Focus on the city Campfire Lodge

The recent discussion over the use of the lounge area of the Community Center is a real example of poor communication on the part of your City and others. Had I done a better job letting everyone know about the thought processes and ideas involved, your City Commission probably would not have had the vocal opposition expressed at its last meeting. It is just another instance of not letting this community know what's going on and for that, I certainly have to take the major responsibility.

The thought behind combining the Hereford Economic Development office and the Chamber of Commerce office in one location to me has a great deal of validity. In economic development work, most of the time the Economic Development Director and the Chamber Executive Vice President work hand in hand to cause things to happen. Placing both of these individuals in the same location simply makes it easier to communicate. It also provides secretarial help to the Economic Development Director as well as hopefully to provide some financial support for Chamber expenses. I know that as the City Commission, Economic Development Board and Chamber Board looked at this, it seemed to be a "win-win" situation for everyone.

The present Chamber building is not adequate size to combine both offices, so all of the various entities looked around for a location that might be appealing to potential customers of both the Chamber and the HEDC and felt the lounge room area of the Community Center offered a very viable option.

I seriously question that your City Commission, your Chamber Board, or your HEDC Board have any interest in dividing the community over such an issue as the use of the lounge area in the Community Center. If anything, all three of these entities have to depend upon a united community if we are to move Hereford forward. If this remains a contentious problem with the community, then I certainly feel that all of these entities will probably consider other alternatives. If those of you who have objections to the use of the lounge area are still violently opposed to this move after reading this and seeing, hopefully, some explanations that correct misinformation, then I would certainly request that you visit with me because at some time your City Commission must make a decision.

I do wish to clear up some misconceptions or misinformation that I have read in the "Letters to the Editor" as well as comments that were made at the City Commission meeting recently. First and foremost, it is not the intent of the City Commission to move any group out of the use of the Community Center. Other areas of the Community Center could and would be available to the groups presently using the lounge area. In addition, your City is presently doing considerable renovation at the old Campfire Lodge, and I know it was the thinking of several of us that that building truly might be more appealing for some of the meetings than the lounge area of the community center. But the Campfire Lodge renovation is a future report in Focus on Your City.

The second item was the concern that the use of the lounge area was not in line with the original intent of the donors of the Community Center. Our City attorney, after researching this very diligently, reports that the use as proposed was certainly within the intent of the original donors. In addition, the last Trustee of the Jim Hill Estate (who were the original contributors) expressed great enthusiasm for the use of the lounge area by the Chamber of Commerce and HEDC as a supporter of the community.

The third item was I think the impression, at least by some, that the lounge area has been used more often than our record show. On a regular basis, there is a duplicate bridge club that meets on Friday nights in the lounge area. There is one FCE Club that meets on the second Thursday of each month and another FCE Club that meets on both the first and third Thursday of each month, both in the afternoon. In addition, the Gideons meets on the second Monday and the Good Sam Club meets on the second Thursday of each month in the evening. Finally, the Flame Fellowship meets on the first Thursday of each month in the evening. Other than those six groups, there are no regular users except for a group of Boy Scouts which meet on Monday night on a schedule that allows for others to book the area. Again, I think the important point to make here is that all of these groups could be located elsewhere in the Community Center.

There are probably some other misconceptions that I should address in this report to the community, but I think these are probably the major misconstrued items that I have heard expressed.

Again, let me say to the community that probably a lot of the concern expressed by some of our citizens has been because the City did not do a good job of communicating the intent of this move, but also, in fact after reading these comments and explanations many of you in the community still feel this move is inappropriate, then I think we must look at other options rather than dividing the community over such a move. Again, I ask for your feedback to me or to the Commission so that we might truly make a decision based upon the wishes of this community.

Bob Josserand is mayor of Hereford.

layers acts as an insulation and my feet sweat so bad that I would have just walked around with a boot full of water."

McDowell was a Navy Seabee, assigned to scientific support crew as part of Operation Deep Freeze 4. His job was assembling the pre-fabricated buildings which were used as base headquarters.

"We had to keep moving the buildings as the camp stations kept changing," McDowell said. "Like here, the wind blows all the time and the blowing ice just covers up the buildings."

Because the buildings were portable, they had to be anchored. McDowell said it was a new experience. Portable building anchors are usually pounded deep into the ground, but because the Antarctic is just ice, they would cut holes in the surface, drop in the anchors and fill the hole with water.

It wasn't just cold, tedious work. The men also had off time. "The chaplain brought along 10,000 ping pong balls," he laughs. "Not all of us played ping pong, but we did other things."

"Some of the guys just went bonkers," McDowell said. "No one ever said anything to them about it."

One of the tasks McDowell set for himself was to keep a journal of this great frozen adventure.

His journal describes the daily work and the unusual things that happen. It describes the wide ranging temperatures of a bone chilling minus 102 degrees to a tropical heat wave of only minus five.

It also acted as a reminder that, at the time, Antarctica was still a dangerous and unknown territory.

Sometimes supplies got low and the crew had to make due with supplies on hand.

"For three months we had ham, three meals a day," he said. Then he jokes about keeping foodstuff in the refrigerator, not to keep it cold, but to keep it from freezing.

His great adventure included seal hunting to provide meat for the dog teams and finding ways to beat the odds on an ice pack.

McDowell learned to rig up long extension lines to control big equipment from a distance, mainly to keep from landing under the ice if it should crack under the weight of the tons of metal.

His frozen adventure ended 12 months later when new crews arrived as replacements.

"We asked the old man if we could ship out, and he told us if our work was done he'd sign the orders. We left the next day," McDowell said.

But he didn't go to some tropical island. McDowell's next duty was fighting the blizzards of Kodiak, Alaska.

He was ready to come back to Texas when his stint in the military was over.

"Sometimes I think I would like to go back and see the changes," he said. "But I don't want to spend another year in that kind of isolation."

WTAMU students to tour libraries

Special to The Brand
CANYON -- President's Day marks the legacy of U.S. Presidents. West Texas A&M University is planning to mark the study of presidents with an inaugural course in presidential libraries including visits to nine U.S. presidential libraries.

The students will conduct first-hand research at nine of the 12 presidential libraries May 13-28. The 3,000-mile trek will take students from the Kansas plains to the Boston coast.

"This course will give students experience with some of the finest presidential research facilities in the world," Dr. Bob Vartabedian, course instructor and professor of speech communication, said. "Regardless of how you feel about the current state of our presidency, the office has long been highly regarded, researched and remembered in these unique settings."

The students will comparatively examine the speech preparation techniques of these presidents, he said. They will also examine other speech communication resources at these isolated libraries. The students will be divided into teams to research different aspects of the president's communication at each site.

According to Judy Davidson, coordinator of museum education at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin, the concept for this class is interesting because the students will find each library and museum as different as the president whose papers and memorabilia they contain.

Research stops include:
• Dwight D. Eisenhower Library in Abilene, Kan.;
• Harry S. Truman Library in Independence, Mo.;
• Herbert Hoover Library-Museum in West Branch, Iowa;
• Gerald R. Ford Library in Ann Arbor, Mich.;
• Rutherford B. Hayes Presidential Center in Fremont, Ohio (this stop will include a visit to the First Ladies Library in Canton, Ohio);
• Franklin D. Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, N.Y.;
• John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library in Boston, Mass.;
• Lyndon Baines Johnson Library and Museum in Austin; and
• George Bush Library and Museum in College Station.

At the conclusion of the course, the group will host a forum on presidential libraries in College Station.

"This will be an opportunity for the students to present their findings in a symposium dedicated to the topic," Vartabedian said.

Class enrollment will be limited to 15 students. Graduate students will receive six hours of credit in SCOM 5590, and undergraduate students will receive six hours in SCOM 399. Cost of the trip is approximately $1,000 including transportation and lodging. Tuition and fees are additional.

Vartabedian is seeking scholarship donations to assist students who plan to take the course.

For more information about the course, contact Vartabedian at (806) 651-2795.

PORTALES—Author and cultural theorist Gloria Anzaldua will speak at 7 p.m. March 9 in the Becky Sharp Auditorium at Eastern New Mexico University.

Anzaldua, a seventh-generation Tejana writer, has done groundbreaking work on border issues, including bilingualism, Chicano identities and the border region. Her books will be available for purchase at the evening performance.

Linking her literary, artistic, and geographic sensibilities, Anzaldua uses indigenous mythology to inform her prose and poetry. Her collection, "Borderlands/La Frontera: The New Mestiza," uses these dimensions to explore ethnic and gender identities. More recently, she authored two bilingual children's books exploring these same issues.

Anzaldua's groundbreaking collection of writings by U.S. women of color, "This Bridge Called My Back," and a multicultural feminist anthology, "Haciendo Caras/Making Face, Making Soul," are frequently cited by scholars in a wide number of fields. They are powerful lens through which to explore cultural identities and legacies, particularly in the southwestern U.S.

Anzaldua's visit is sponsored by ENMU's Diversity Committee. For more information, contact Dr. AnnLouise Keating at (505) 562-2171.

Hereford Bull

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says no amount of advance planning will ever replace dumb luck.

“Let the people know the facts, and the country will be safe.”

Abe Lincoln, 1861

The proposal to house the Hereford Economic Development Corp. and Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in the lounge area of Hereford Community Center met some unexpected opposition Monday night. The city commission tabled the plan for additional study.

Although the plan was reported by the newspaper and radio station, some residents apparently felt the city moved too fast in supporting the idea. That, along with some misinformation being spread around, resulted in a group of unhappy residents.

Mayor Bob Josseland, who missed the Monday session, discusses the plan in his “Focus on the City” column in today’s paper. As he explains, the city has no intention of moving any group out of the community center.

The city and the news media were probably at fault in not giving enough specifics about the proposal. The plan calls for only the northwest corner to be used for the office spaces. The game room on the west would still be available, as well as the remainder of the Community Center.

Six small groups have been using part of the center regularly, according to city records. Four of them meet once a month, one group meets twice a month, and a duplicate bridge club meets each Friday night. The mayor explains that other areas of the center would be available to the groups now using the facilities.

Have you ever heard of the 80-20 principle? About a century ago, an Italian economist, Vilfredo Pareto, noticed that of any group of objects, a tiny fraction contributes most of the total value.

If a company, say, sold five products, one would account for almost all the sales. If it had a hundred customers, the best 20 would make almost all the purchases.

Half a century later, an American linguist, George Zipf, noticed something similar in language. If all the words in the English language are ranked in order of how frequently they are used, the most frequently used word(the) appears approximately twice as often as the second ranked word(of), three times as frequently as the third-ranked word(and), 10 times as much as the 10th-ranked word(I), and so on.

Since then, other researchers have made similar observations in many diverse fields. The underlying principle has been summed up in the 80-20 rule. This nifty rule of thumb states that 80 percent of the total value, impact, or significance of any group of items will come from only 20 percent of those items. The flip side, of course, is that the remaining 80 percent of the items contribute only 20 percent of the value.

If you look at any aspect of your daily life, you’ll see what we mean. For example:

In almost any civic or service club, only about 20 percent of the membership will actively participate in the club’s projects. In your church, about 20 percent of the congregation will serve in positions of responsibility or attend special activities.

If you own five pair of shoes, you’ll wear one pair about 80 percent of the time. If you have 30 friends, you’ll do 80 percent of your socializing with six of them.

There are exceptions, of course. For instance, federal, state and local governmental groups really blow the theory — they take almost 50 percent of your income in taxes.

Don’t get hung up on the statistics, however. The 80-20 rule is just intended as a rough guideline. The point may be that you should concentrate your efforts on the few important things before bothering with the rest of the stuff.

Oh, Twiddle Poop?

In an era when so many hateful or ugly things can be heard, I’m constantly on the lookout for ways to make my two younger children sound more pleasant, at least to each other.

Part of this process means giving them alternatives to the harsh words which they hear uttered and screamed wherever they go.

Some of the choices I have given the kids really make them (as Mary Poppins would say) seem quite precocious.

One of the first phrases I really wanted deleted from my kids vocabulary was “you liar.”

It took a few attempts, but I finally found a term my son likes a lot better. He uses it frequently and sometimes not quite correctly.

So, if he should ever inform someone that they have a “misconceived perception of reality” it probably means he doesn’t believe what he has been told.

Now instead of getting to listen to the two of them tell me how untruthful the other is, I get to listen to: “Mom, her misconceived perception of reality is always getting me in trouble,” or “Mom, you always listen to his misconceived perceptions of reality and not mine.”

Like I said, sometimes they don’t use the phrase exactly right. Having to explain the problem with the last example usually stops the conversation or the accusations.

Somewhere along the way I’ve picked up the bad habit of swearing more than I would like and some of that has even rubbed off on the kids.

Usually when I start swearing it means I’m really angry, which is no excuse, but it happens. Even with that it is usually just d*# or h@%.

Since I had heard both the kids do the same thing, I figured we needed to eliminate those words and close relatives like dang, and heck.

So we came up with “twiddle poop.” Actually, it’s a great phrase. It covers a wide array of special needs.

Like when the over-filled trash bag bursts all over the freshly mopped kitchen floor. “Oh! Twiddle Poop!” is much better than “&^%*%& and other words. It also adds a touch of humor to the situation, and when you can laugh, it makes recleaning the kitchen floor a lot easier.

Twiddle poop covers all the not so pleasant terms ranging from the term meaning illegitimate children to the north end of a south bound horse.

Just think, when someone is being a real jerk, you know the use of expletives is only going to exacerbate the problem. Instead try telling them “Oh, you’re such a twiddle poop.” Fights over. Another phrase that really disturbs me is ‘shut-up’. I don’t think anything is as annoying.

Dianna F. Dandridge

This one was a little harder to deal with. I had a real problem finding an alternative, but it finally came to me.

The answer isn’t cute or funny, but it is an argument stopper.

It works like this: When someone has said things that you really don’t want to hear, respond in the nicest tone possible “You have the loveliest voice in town. I could listen to you all day long. If you’ll wait a minute I’ll get the tape recorder so I’ll have it whenever I need to hear the soothing tones.”

Let me tell you, not even dynamite can pry open those lips. Not only does it stop the argument, but the person who said it gets the last word on a pleasant note.

Sometimes, I’m sure this won’t always work. When you’ve just whacked you’re thumb really hard with a hammer ‘twiddle poop’ probably isn’t quite harsh enough. And telling the local bully he has a misconceived perception of reality may mean a bloody nose. Telling them how lovely their voice is may mean having to listen to some cater-wauling, but compared to the peace brought on by the use of these or similar phrases in the normal household is incomparable.

Things certainly change

Don Cooper

From my cubbyhole, I can peer out at the newsroom, where I see Brand Publisher Mauri Montgomery wearing his sports writer hat.

When I see him in his sports writer persona, with his crisply pressed dress shirts and properly knotted tie, I know how much that vocation has changed since I started in the newspaper business.

I’m not saying today’s sports writers are not as good as their predecessors. No, today’s sports writers probably are more literate, better-educated and more aware of the relationship of sports in modern society than the old-timers. Heaven knows they’re just as diligent as the old-time sports writers. But, today’s sports writers are certainly a different breed.

What’s happened to them? Well, they’ve become clean-cut and neat.

Sports writers used to be slob. Sports writers would eat with their fingers at a White House state dinner and put out cigars in a fingerbowl. They’d belch and spit on the floor and, in general, be rude, crude, ill-mannered slobs.

Once, sports writers looked like winos or some other reprobate. They kept their clothes on the floor, not on hangers in neatly arranged closets. Now they look like they are investment bankers, lawyers or someone whose hero is Ross Perot. They look like adult Mouseketeers.

Sports writers are supposed to be overweight; they should smoke cheap, foul-smelling cigars; they should have permanent ketchup stains on their wrinkled shirts. I remember one sports writer who made it easy for you to tell if he had on a new shirt — it didn’t have mustard on its front.

Look in a press box sometime and see the young sports writers sitting there. It’s disgusting. They’re clean; they’re neat; they even display good manners while eating hot dogs. They patiently wait in line to get sandwiches or drinks. You’d think you stumbled into a board meeting of IBM or AT&T instead of being at a sports event.

These sportswriters probably help old ladies across streets, do yard work for the old guy next door, find a lost kid’s parents, or hundreds of other good deeds in the community.

I still remember a veteran sports writer (long since dead) in West Texas. He was obese and usually had about a three-day growth of stubble. He wore pants that looked like something he got from a Salvation Army thrift store in 1958. He would shove everyone out of his way at the press box concession stand and grab eight or nine hot dogs. Then he would talk while wolfing them down. Chili would dribble down his chins; he would get mustard on his hands and then wipe it on his pants. He was beautifully gross and obnoxious — a real sports writer.

There was another sports writer who had paperclips instead of buttons on his sweater. Once, when he lost a button on his shirt, he merely stapled it together. He wore a greasy old Chicago White Sox baseball cap and carried sandwiches in his coat pocket. He looked like a walking Good Will store.

What do we have today? We have sports writers who are fashion-conscious. Their

Divided Congress

House and Senate need own reconciliations

Tom Raum
Associated Press

Both parties are pledging to work to repair the political damage done to Congress by the wrenching impeachment drama. But, with the two chambers all but snarling at each other near the end, some hard feelings are likely to linger.

“We would all be wise to cool the rhetoric,” Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., advised colleagues behind closed doors.

But, as the 2000 elections get nearer, emotions could intensify.

“There are a lot of wounds

there that have to be healed,” said Gerald Kerns, a professor at the University of Dayton, in Ohio. But he sees it as mostly a Republican problem, suggesting Democrats emerged from the impeachment drama unusually unified.

“I think we’re going to have a battle royale within the Republican party between the moderates and the right wing,” Kerns said.

As the Senate trial came to an end, House managers — all 13 of them Republicans — were virtually spitting their contempt for the Senate, and senators had to be reprimanded for snickering.

“We knew that everybody in the country wanted us to go away,” Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said afterward. “We could have had a better trial; we should have had a better trial.” The vitriol is strongest in the House. In the Senate, the final days of closed-door arguments seemed to have a quieting effect on members of both parties. “We spent these countless hours together,” said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

“The trouble with the House: They had a flawed beginning,” said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said it more boldly: “Extreme partisanship and prosecutorial zealotry have strained this process in its critical early junctures.”

No matter how messy, some suggested the ordeal demonstrated the wisdom of the Founding Fathers in creating bodies that operate on such different impulses.

“The whole thing is over, and our institutions are intact,” said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Moynihan contends that impeachment is potentially destabilizing to the American form of government because once set in motion “only the Congress is involved,” without the usual checks and balances among the executive, the legislative and judicial branches of government.

The constitutional rules of impeachment also impose more than the usual amount of stress on the system. Instead of being equal legislative chambers, the House in the impeachment trial became the prosecution; the Senate the judge and jury.

“The Constitution, in many ways, came alive for me for the first time,” said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

It used to be said by some political scientists that there were essentially four parties: congressional Democrats, presidential Democrats, congressional Republicans and White House Republicans.

But such distinctions are no longer so apparent, said

Commitments and Congress

New battle over who can wage war — Congress or Clinton?

Analysis

When the United States sent a peacekeeping force to Bosnia, the House and Senate grudgingly agreed in a resolution pointedly calling it President Clinton's commitment, not theirs. That line may be drawn again should Clinton send troops to Kosovo.

It is part of the unending strain between the White House and Congress over war-making, or war-risking, powers. This one isn't partisan, it is institutional.

The Kosovo mission is on hold at the moment, contingent on a peace deal that would be backed by a NATO force Serbs are resisting. There is a Saturday noon deadline for them to accept or face NATO air strikes.

But the debate about the U.S. role didn't wait. Nor did Clinton, who said in a radio address on Saturday that he is prepared to send nearly 4,000 American troops to join about 24,000 from other NATO nations to enforce peace between Serbs and ethnic Albanians.

"Now, a final decision on

Walter R. Mears

The Associated Press

troops, which I will make in close consultation with Congress, will depend upon the parties reaching a strong peace agreement," Clinton said.

But any consultations will be on a commitment that already has been made. Clinton said he believes that with an agreement, there should be an American role. And while promising to work with Congress on it, the administration isn't seeking authority to send forces. Like his White House predecessors, Clinton maintains that power is inherent in his office.

George Bush narrowly won congressional approval for the Persian Gulf War against Iraq just before it began, and said he welcomed the expression of support although he didn't need it to act.

"This administration, like previous administrations, takes the view that the president has broad authority as commander in chief, and under his authority to conduct foreign relations, to authorize the use of force in the national interest," Undersecretary of State Thomas Pickering told the House International Relations Committee a week ago.

He cited as precedents the operations ordered by Republican presidents without action by Congress. "Previous constitutional violations do not justify subsequent ones," replied Republican Rep. Tom Campbell of California.

While that has been argued since the end of World War II, the decisions have been made by presidents, sometimes with use of force resolutions approved by Congress, more often, without.

Congress tried to change the balance 25 years ago with the War Powers Act, seeking to require congressional approval to keep U.S.

forces in danger spots abroad. That hasn't worked; presidents can simply certify that the operations they order don't trigger its terms.

Clinton advised congressional leaders, but did not seek consent, in ordering U.S. air strikes against Iraq on Dec. 17, the day the House was to have started debating his impeachment, which was voted two days later.

Nor was there prior approval of an earlier peacekeeping mission to the Balkans, in late 1995. That was to enforce the U.S.-brokered peace settlement of ethnic wars in Bosnia, and at one point involved 22,500 Americans. There are still about 6,700 U.S. troops there.

Ten days after Clinton approved the operation, Congress adopted a resolution agreeing to it, "notwithstanding reservations" about his decision.

The resolution, which wasn't binding, said "the president may only fulfill his commitment" for about a year, the duration he'd set but could not keep.

"We really learned a lesson in Bosnia that setting an artificial deadline doesn't work," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said. There would be no deadline on a peacekeeping mission to Kosovo, she added.

Republicans who argue that Clinton's foreign policy credibility was shaken by the impeachment charges despite his Senate acquittal say the long-missed Bosnia deadline adds to their mistrust.

"We knew that wasn't quite as honest as it needed to be," said Sen. Don Nickles, the Republican whip. "And so that is affecting right now his request for troops into Kosovo."

But it isn't a request. The next step is contingent on a peace deal for Kosovo, not permission from Congress.

"I look forward to working with Congress in making this final decision," Clinton said. But he would make it, and he's already said what it would be.

pollster Andrew Kohut. Clinton has moved the entire Democratic Party more to the center, while Republicans not only have a serious rift — but "are going to have to try to bury the bad taste they've left ... by cooperating more with Clinton and the congressional Democrats."

The liberal wing of the Democratic party has become smaller and less influential; the social-conservative wing of the Republican party, meanwhile, has grown larger and more outspoken.

Kohut said there's been an increase since the impeachment process began in the House last September among people who identify themselves as Democrats; a decrease among those identifying themselves as Republicans.

"The Republican party also hasn't had any popular leaders in quite some time," Kohut said. "I hate to say it, but the Republican party needs a Bill Clinton — someone who can bridge the gap and appeal to the independent voters."

But James Thurber of American University said the fact that only a handful of House Democrats — and no Senate Democrats — voted for impeachment glosses over the fact that there's still a lot of Democratic division, and resentment toward Clinton.

"They're angry he put them through all this. They didn't like him to begin with and now they don't trust him," Thurber said.

Sen. Wayne Allard, R-Colo., cited some advantageous side effects of the draining debate.

"It gave us a chance to get a lot of legislative work done in the last five weeks — just because we had to be here. We've been having committee meetings and hearings. We've gotten far more work done up to this point than we had a year ago."

clothes are color-coordinated; their manners impeccable. They don't smoke anything, and certainly not cheap, smoke-belching, foul-smelling cigars.

Sports has changed so drastically in the past several years, I guess it was inevitable the sports writers also would change.

Oscar Madison, as portrayed in the movies and on television by Walter Matthau and Jack Klugman, was the personification of the old sports writer. The Oscar Madison-type sports writer is a dinosaur — just like those other now-extinct sports creatures: the single-wing, the two-hand set shot, baseball flannels, Ebbets Field and the Polo Grounds, or the St. Louis Browns.

Today's sports writers, I guess, are typical of their era, just as Oscar Madison was typical of an earlier era.

But, I have to admit it. I kinda miss ol' Oscar.

Dr. Jeff Williams, D.C.

Chiropractic Q & A

Q: I saw a TV show about a chiropractor treating a professional football team. Is it common for professional athletes to use chiropractic care?

A: It is far more common than one might imagine. Professional athletes and trainers have found that regular chiropractic care often enhances an athlete's performance and is very effective in returning an injured athlete to peak performance in minimal time following an injury.

Doctors don't talk about the patients they treat any more than a patient typically discusses their health care, which is why you generally do not hear about who is being treated by a doctor of chiropractic.

Texas lawmakers not too concerned about Y2K glitch

AUSTIN (AP) — Y2K? Why worry?

State lawmakers are working to make sure government services aren't going to be affected by an anticipated year 2000 computer glitch. But when it comes to their own lives, legislative leaders appear to be greeting the turn of the century with equanimity.

Perhaps among the most cautious is Senate Health Services Committee Chairwoman Jane Nelson. She isn't panicking, but she is planning to buy a generator after hearing a computer expert at a Washington conference say that's what he was doing.

"I just don't want to get cold if my electricity goes down for even a couple of days," said Mrs. Nelson, R-Flower Mound.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said he benefited from "being a dinosaur in the computer age" and waited until recently to update the old software he used when rewriting the state's education law on his laptop.

There has been concern that computer programs written to recognize only the last two digits of a year could fail if they read 2000 as 1900.

"I waited so long to upgrade. I think my upgrade is OK," Ratliff said.

He has made no other preparations, chuckling when asked whether he plans to join survivalists in stockpiling food or building bunkers. "There's an old hillbilly song by Hank Williams Jr. that says country boys will survive, and I'm a country boy," Ratliff said. "I think I can survive. Might have to kill a few squirrels."

"My house was built in 1949. It hasn't been upgraded much. ... And I was farming before computers, and so I haven't integrated a computer system into my farming operation much."

House Speaker Pete Laney

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, said he doesn't worry about the possibility of computer failure — particularly not at his low-tech home.

"My house was built in 1949. It hasn't been upgraded much. ... And I was farming before computers, and so I haven't integrated a computer system into my farming operation much," he said.

Sen. Troy Fraser said he's making sure his business facilities and those of his customers and suppliers are Y2K compliant. He is chief development officer of a company that makes and recycles wooden pallets.

"I'm making sure at all of our facilities, the computers have been checked out and we're not going to have a failure. Even more important, we've got to make sure that whoever we are on the food chain, the people above and below us are also Y2K compliant," said Fraser, R-Horseshoe Bay.

He isn't worried about food shortages or power interruptions, but has concerns about potential problems in air traffic control and about embedded chips in equipment that could cause problems.

"I can tell you I will not be in the air at midnight on the 31st," said Fraser, who flies his own plane. "From a personal standpoint, that would be the No. 1 priority — to be on the ground in a safe place."

Rep. Warren Chisum, R-Pampa, considers Y2K a "non-event" but said he'll probably make a hard copy of his bank records and will ensure his propane tanks are full at his ranch home "just in case we have to stay out there for a week and pump water for the cattle."

"We do that anyway ... We are not going to make special provisions or take out a large sum of money and stick it in a coffee can in the ground."

Fib from Washington

John Cunniff
Associated Press

Economist charges politicians have consistently misled U.S. taxpayers about Social Security trust fund

It's a fib, said Professor Dunkelberg, one of a series of fibs he says we've been asked to accept in recent years about Social Security. But this latest fib, he said, is "the ultimate fib."

He was speaking about those who propose that government invest surplus budget funds in the stock market — thus generating a greater yield than is obtainable in Treasury bonds — rather than lowering taxes so individuals could control their own destiny.

The professor, who is the economist William C. Dunkelberg of Temple University, was asked to explain.

"It's sad enough that some silver tongued politician told Americans that Social Security was their own private retirement savings account," he began.

"Sadder still that Congress after Congress increased the promises of Social Security in order to get re-elected.

"But the ultimate fib," he said, is "that government can take money from taxpayers, create surpluses and then, instead of giving it back, use it to 'save' Social Security."

No way, he said. He made it sound elementary.

To see why, he began, "let's first understand what the so-called 'problem' really is. Then maybe it will be easier to separate real proposed solutions from the smoke and mirrors."

His listener agreed, and the professor asked him to imagine what he called a pile of "stuff," the stuff being the gross domestic product, or the sum of the nation's output of goods and services. "When Social Security started," he began, "there were about 20 workers putting stuff in the pile for every retired worker taking stuff out of it. By 2010, there'll be only two workers putting stuff onto the GDP pile for every worker taking stuff off the pile."

His listener agreed that this would eventually deplete the pile. But why is this occurring, the professor was asked?

Because, he said, "not only has Congress increased the promised amounts that retirees can take, but retirees now live much longer."

"The result is a very heavy burden for the young of the future to carry. Their incomes (their contributions to output) will be heavily taxed to add stuff to the pile, while retirees remove even more."

For Washington to create claims on the pile might be seem magnanimous, he suggested, but it does nothing meanwhile to increase the real size of the pile.

But, the listener, asked, if government invests the money in the stock market, it will cause the pile to grow faster. There was a long pause. "Well, won't it?" the listener asked again.

"No," the professor said. "In simple terms, it doesn't matter if I retire with $1 million in General Electric stock or $1 million in Treasury bonds. Either way, I'll cash them and use the money to claim stuff from the pile."

You seem to be saying, the listener said, that Social Security can be saved only by raising our national output, and that for government to invest in stocks isn't going to make the pile larger.

"That's right," said the professor, "Investing billions of taxpayers' funds in the stock market does not address the problem."

Why? His response hinted of patience extended. "Look," he said, "there are only a fixed number of shares of stock out there and they're all owned today."

"If the government runs big surpluses to buy these shares with the extra money they took from us but didn't need, then we'll have less money ourselves to buy the shares."

"But either way, we already own them all — in our 401 (k) or in our Social Security account. From society's perspective, nothing is changed. We just substitute public ownership for private ownership.

"But we still own them all."

Bulls lose again, 93-91 to Wizards

By The Associated Press

These days, a near-miss is almost good enough for the Chicago Bulls.

Brent Barry was just short on a last-second shot and the Bulls lost again, 93-91 Friday night at Washington.

The Bulls, coming off the Michael Jordan era and three straight NBA championships, dropped their sixth straight game and fell to 1-7 — their worst start since the 1978-79 season.

"We made progress tonight," first-year coach Tim Floyd said. "We think we're continuing to get better."

Mitch Richmond's basket with 17 seconds left won it for the Wizards.

"You can say what you want, I still think the Chicago Bulls are hard to beat," Washington coach Bernie Bickerstaff said.

In other NBA games, Toronto topped Milwaukee 90-82, New York slowed Philadelphia 78-67, Orlando beat Atlanta 99-94 in overtime, Sacramento defeated Charlotte 106-95, the Los Angeles Lakers downed San Antonio 106-94, Golden State defeated Dallas 84-79, Portland beat Boston 106-86, Detroit downed Phoenix 101-93 and Minnesota topped Vancouver 115-96.

The Bulls last lost six in a row in 1989 while breezing into the playoffs during Jordan's fifth NBA season.

"This team is capable of doing much more than we're showing on the court," Barry said.

The Wizards reeled off a 21-0 run in the first quarter before the Bulls came back. Barry finished with 22 points and Toni Kukoc had 18. Raptors 90, Bucks 82.

Playing for the final time at SkyDome, Toronto beat Milwaukee behind Tracy McGrady's dunking show.

The Raptors will move into the new Air Canada Center on Sunday. They finished 40-77 in the building built for baseball's Blue Jays.

Bucks star Glenn Robinson struggled through a 3-for-16 shooting performance.

Lakers 106, Spurs 94

With Dennis Rodman watching at the Forum, Shaquille O'Neal had 28 points and 10 rebounds as Los Angeles beat San Antonio for the sixth straight time.

Rodman is expected to announce his plans for this season — he might play for the Lakers, Miami or no one — on Monday. In the final minutes, the crowd began shouting "Rodman! Rodman!"

Tim Duncan had 26 points and 11 rebounds for the Spurs. O'Neal limited David Robinson to 11 points and five rebounds.

Knicks 78, 76ers 67

Allan Houston hit five 3-pointers and scored 25 points as New York won at Philadelphia.

The 76ers were held to their lowest total ever in 220 games against the Knicks.

The Knicks improved to 5-1 without Latrell Sprewell. Kurt Thomas, forced into the starting lineup by Sprewell's injury, had 14 points.

Sixers forward Tim Thomas turned his ankle badly in the fourth quarter and was carried off the court and taken to a hospital. X-rays were negative.

Kings 106, Hornets 95

Rookie point guard Jason Williams hit five 3-pointers and scored a season-high 25 points as host Sacramento won its third straight game. Charlotte lost its seventh in a row.

Williams made four-pointers in the first quarter and scored 20 points in helping the Kings take a 63-47 half-time lead.

Trail Blazers 106, Celtics 86

Brian Grant had 21 points and 18 rebounds as Portland beat visiting Boston.

Lady Whitefaces advance to Region I-4A semifinals

Rise above El Paso Bowie Lady Bears 58-45 in fifth consecutive road victory

ODESSA — If El Paso Bowie had only had one more Mary Martin, it might have made a difference here in the heart of the Permian Basin Friday night.

The 5'9" El Paso point guard hit 22 points (13 in the first half) as El Paso's Miss Everything in a Region I-4A area 58-45 loss to the Hereford Lady Whitefaces at Odessa College's Sports Center.

El Paso only had one Mary Martinez though. And Hereford had a Tori Walker, plus a Valerie Guzman, plus a deeper bench and...you get the picture.

Walker compiled 20 points, split equally over two halves while Guzman scored in every period for 16 total points to lead the Lady Whitefaces to their fifth consecutive victory on the road.

The win, beyond improving Hereford's record to 24-12, provided a means to the end in keeping the playoff dates coming.

The Lady Whitefaces knew El Paso was no Randall High and Hereford High School head girl's coach Key Harrison knew it too, even though he worked to keep a good poker face.

"I tried real hard to build this game up, to convince the girls that El Paso would give us as much trouble as a team like Randall," Harrison said. "But I guess I wasn't very convincing — they saw the same game films I saw, and they knew. We came out pretty good, but got flat-footed in the first half."

The Lady Whitefaces will now meet eighth-ranked Amarillo Palo Duro Tuesday in the Region I-4A semifinals.

Walker and Mary Martin duked it out early in a first-quarter bucket-fest that left Martin with eight points — El Paso's entire first-period total — and Walker with 10.

Walker split two perfect appearances at the foul line with two field goals for eight consecutive unanswered and a 10-2 Hereford lead with 2:58 remaining.

Her wingman, Guzman, added four points and Rachel Chavez connected for two to heave Hereford into the second quarter grasping a 16-8 edge.

But El Paso came back and won the second period. After Chavez hit a 15-foot jumper to bring Hereford out

Warriors edge Dallas, 84-79

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — With time running down, John Starks pulled up for a running jumper and saw it swish through the net. Then, he thumped his chest and stroked his hand triumphantly beneath his jersey logo.

"We're warriors, baby," Starks said after scoring 16 points, including the 8-foot runner with 10.8 seconds left, in Golden State's 84-79 win over the Dallas Mavericks on Friday night.

"Warriors hang in there, and that's what we've been doing. We are going out there and playing the way we are capable of playing, and when you are doing that, good things are going to happen."

Lately, that has been the case for the Warriors.

Since opening the season with five losses, Golden State has four straight wins, matching Miami and Cleveland for the longest winning streak in the NBA this season.

It's the Warriors' longest winning streak in more than three years. And it's the strongest sign yet the team is moving in the right direction after the previous four seasons of organizational chaos and defeat, typified by Latrell Sprewell's attack on coach P.J. Carlesimo last December.

"It can be tough, but if these guys put their minds to it, we can go more than four. We should just keep pushing hard as a team," said Chris Mills, who came from New York to Golden State with Starks and Terry Cummings in the Sprewell trade last month.

Michael Finley had 19 points to lead Dallas, but he went 0-for-9 from the field in the fourth quarter and finished just 4-of-19. Gary Trent added 18 points and Steve Nash had 14 for the Mavericks, who have lost seven straight since beating the Warriors in double overtime for their only win of the year.

"This is definitely the toughest loss of the year," Dallas center Shawn Bradley said. "It is for me — I can tell from Steve and Michael. I know the general feeling is pretty down because we played like we should've won."

Cedric Ceballos, who went 0-for-7 from the floor, said the Mavericks' problems stem from their lack of shooting accuracy.

"We had a chance, but we're still not making shots," Ceballos said. "We just have to keep fighting. We'll pull out of this somehow, some way."

Taking a 62-60 lead into the fourth quarter, Golden State stretched its lead to 75-65 when Tony Delk converted a three-point play with 6:37 remaining.

But the Warriors failed to score for the next 4 1/2 minutes, during which the Mavericks used a 14-0 run to go in front 79-75.

Trent fueled the surge with eight of his points, but Starks, who also had a career-high 10 rebounds, made a pair of free throws to end the Warriors' drought. Mills' 3-pointer put Golden State back in front, 80-79, with 1:39 left.

With 35 seconds remaining, Finley drove the lane and tried to muscle in a layup, but Erick Dampier swatted it away. Starks then hit the runner and Jason Caffey stole Dallas' ensuing inbounds pass, finishing the scoring with a breakaway slam.

Dallas shot only 33 percent from the field. The Warriors weren't much better, converting 39 percent.

"I've got a bitter taste in my mouth, but we can also learn from it," Bradley said. "We're not going to lose every game. We're just going to go out and get it the next night."

Estes leads Nissan Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Estes has the Nissan Open lead and a firm grip on reality. Estes, whose only Tour win came five years ago, fashioned a 4-under-par 67 Friday to go to 9-under through two rounds, good for a one-shot lead atop a jammed leaderboard.

The pack on his heels included Ernie Els and Davis Love III, a shot behind, and Tiger Woods and David Duval, four strokes off the pace.

"Leading after 36 holes doesn't really mean much," said Estes, a self-described realist who began the second day at Riviera Country Club tied with Duval for the lead.

"Even leading after 54 holes doesn't mean much. I remember David Duval's 59 at the Hope."

Asked if anyone in particular worried him, Estes grinned and said, "Oh, a list of about 20, 30, 40 people. There's Ernie, Tiger, David, Fred (Couples), all the usual suspects."

Els, a two-time U.S. Open champion making his first PGA appearance since last September, had a second-round 66 to move into a tie with Love, Rick Fehr and Alan Bratton at 8-under-par 134.

Love shot a 65, Fehr a 66, and Bratton, who earned the final spot in the tournament by beating a 16-year-old on a qualifying playoff hole, shot his second 67.

Defending champion Billy Mayfair was three strokes off the lead after a 67. Woods had a 68 and Duval, looking merely mortal for a change with a 71, were in a group at 5-under.

Els was pleased with his play.

"I'm looking forward to this weekend," he said. "I really enjoy the course; it's a classic. You have to play a lot of different iron shots."

Bratton is the relative stranger in the bunch near the top. When he came into the press room to face the media for the first time on the PGA Tour, he was greeted by "Who are you?"

He laughed and offered a brief but colorful bio: A former Oklahoma State player (and college player of the year in 1994), he has spent the past few years playing in India, India, Thailand, Singapore and Korea, in addition to some mini-tour appearances in America.

Adding to Bratton's unlikely story is the fact he barely even made it into the Nissan.

The 27-year-old Bratton, vying along with some 140 others for the two open spots in the tournament, edged, among others, high school junior James Oh, and Henry Liaw, a 13-year-old eighth grader.

Bratton and Oh were tied at the end of regulation in qualifying, but Bratton birdied the first playoff hole and Oh's 8-foot birdie try lippled out to give Bratton the spot.

Jerry Stackhouse had 23 points and 10 assists as visiting Detroit stopped a five-game losing streak.

Stackhouse scored six points in the final 25 seconds. Grant Hill added 21 points for the Pistons.

Stephon Marbury scored 23 points along with 10 assists and Joe Smith added 21 as Minnesota beat Vancouver.

Dating back to last year, the Timberwolves have won a team-record 10 straight regular-season home games.

front 18-10 in the dawn of the second quarter, El Paso busied itself with catching up.

The Lady Bears, despite shooting 38 percent and going 0-4 from the bonus line in the first half, mauled Hereford 13-9 to narrow the Lady Whiteface's halftime lead to 25-21.

One of El Paso's 30 fans should have recorded the score for posterity's sake.

As it turned out, that was the closest El Paso came to fame.

The Lady Bears felt the heat of Hereford's full-court press in the opening of the third period and watched helplessly as the Lady Whitefaces racked off nine unanswered points.

El Paso didn't get back on the scoreboard again until Bernice Castro sank two free throws off a Makesha Rives foul with just over three minutes left in the stanza.

Hereford followed that scoring punch with two 3-point artillery shots from Guzman, a field goal apiece from Brionne Yosten, Toni Eicke and Tori Walker; and a 6-7 barrage from the foul line in the final quarter to clinch the match.

"I'm tickled with these girls' success this year," Harrison said. "They've played hard to get this far. You can't ever count them out."

But again, Harrison knows what the Lady Whiteface know. The Palo Duro program is several talent steps beyond El Paso's.

"Beyond natural talent and ability, I've always felt there's still a lot of luck involved in how a game, a season and even the playoffs wind up," Harrison said. "These girls know what Palo Duro has and I guarantee you they'll be pumped up and ready to play."

Maximize the effectiveness of electronic snow goose calling

A flock of four snow geese banked a half-mile away and made a deck-hugging beeline for our mixed spread of Flambeau shells and North Wind socks. The quad snows came on with short, steady wingbeats, then characteristically began to climb a few hundred yards downwind of the decoys...Nothing we hadn't seen hundreds of times before when goose hunting late in the season...What happened next, however, was totally out of character for these awesomely wary waterfowl.

At altitude well beyond steel shot range the snows locked their wings and to the utter astonishment of A.T. Griffin, Greg Whitaker and myself, steadily spilled altitude as they parachuted to the "sweet spot" we had left in our spread of white decoys...They came like they were on a string.

In seconds they were hovering at 25 yards, just above where we sat, decked-out in white parkas, amidst the decoys. Once we saw them hanging above us with their pink feet extended, we could stand it no longer.

Shotguns leaped to shoulders. Pump guns coughed. Two mature and two gray-flecked juvenile snow geese thudded to the ground in the wake of a barrage of steel BB's and No. 2 shot from 12 and 20-gauges.

The "string" drawing those snows was a Johnny Stewart tape recording of the calling of live snow geese on the ground. The goose-Grammy-winning sound was spewing from the speakers of two cassette recorders. Our hunt-opening quadruple score introduced us to unexplored territory--legalized electronic goose calling--made possible by the special snow goose rules that went into effect February 16, and continue statewide through April 25.

Liberalized rules during this special late season allow extended shooting hours, no bag limit, unplugged shotguns, and electronic calling. These incredibly-relaxed regulations are intended to boost the harvest of overabundant light geese that are destroying their nesting habitat in the Arctic tundra.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

As many as six million snow geese are now thought to be winging up and down the flyways of North America. Even in the local region, where snow geese were seldom seen not that many years ago, sizable flocks of lesser snow geese are present. Over 100,000 snow geese are thought to be present in the northern Panhandle currently, and we may see continued presence of goodly numbers as migrant birds from Mexico move through late this month and into March.

During our adventure of electronic discovery that lasted a little over two hours, A.T., Greg and I hit a lick to protect the tundra. We bagged 24 light geese including 10 mature snows, four juvenile snows, and 10 Ross' geese. Certainly, this was no world-record bag of light geese, but we were impressed. We bagged eight geese each under less-than-ideal conditions--clear skies, sun in our faces, on February 18--mighty late for light geese to be so cooperative over decoys.

We employed a spread of good decoys set up in a field the geese had been using for a couple of mornings. We were reasonably well hidden. Those were all factors in our success, but electronic calling gave us a big edge on this day.

Is electronic calling the "silver shot pellet" to solve the snow goose population explosion? Probably not, but used correctly, it appears that electronic calling can be a mighty effective tool that can significantly boost hunter harvest of light geese during special season extensions.

This powerful snow goose hunting tool should come with its own warning label... USE JUDICIOUSLY, NOT CONSTANTLY!

Years ago we lured scads of crows with electronic calls. The technique worked wonderfully until crows began to wise up and grow tone deaf to the "tunes" we were playing. Once the crows learned about electronic calls, you couldn't lure one in on a bet.

They wised-up especially quickly when you ran the tape constantly.

Snow geese, being no less adaptable than crows, will figure electronic calls out too, if constantly exposed to them.

If we want to quickly reduce the effective life of electronic snow calling, all we have to do is let the call run constantly while hunting. Snows aren't tone deaf. They'll figure-out the sham fast enough.

To maximize the effective life of electronic snow goose calling, we're still going to have to use our wooden and plastic calls to initially attract snow geese. If we get the birds interested in the spread with this calling, then we can turn on the tape and close the sale once they get closer. Don't let 'em hear the top 40 tunes excessively, or they'll soon get burned-out on them. Don't let the light geese hear the electronic call any longer than is necessary to bring them into effective shotgun range.

Let's use electronic snow goose calls properly. After all, the yelp of snow geese hovering well within range above the spread needs to remain long-playing music to a goose hunter's ear.

Spring training

Clemens moves to Yankees; Galarraga out with cancer

By The Associated Press

How was that for a first day of spring training?

On the day workouts for the 1999 season officially began, two stories that will have a profound effect on the two best teams in the game shook up baseball.

The New York Yankees completed their winter-long courtship of Roger Clemens, acquiring the five-time Cy Young Award winner from Toronto for David Wells, Graeme Lloyd and Homer Bush on Thursday.

"It's just another indication of how the business of baseball is these days," pitcher Mike Stanton said. "We won 125 games, but you're still always looking to make yourself better. What can you say? It's one of those things that happens in baseball."

The Atlanta Braves were dealt a serious blow when doctors announced that first baseman Andres Galarraga has a cancerous tumor in his back and will miss the 1999 season.

"It's just another indication of how the business of baseball is these days," pitcher Mike Stanton said. "We won 125 games, but you're still always looking to make yourself better. What can you say? It's one of those things that happens in baseball." Mike Stanton, Yankee pitcher

"I think the potential for his recovery is very good with successful treatment," Dr. Lee Kelley said. "There's no widespread involvement, so the outlook is very good. I think there's a good possibility that he can look forward to playing in 2000."

Galarraga, 37, will undergo six months of treatment, which will include chemotherapy followed by radiation. He is the fourth prominent baseball player since 1996 to be stricken with cancer, following Brett Butler, Eric Davis and Darryl Strawberry.

"It's sad that he's out for the season, but it's a relief to know the cancer hasn't spread," manager Bobby Cox said.

Ryan Klesko is expected to replace Galarraga, who hit .305 with 44 homers and 121 RBIs last season. Otis Nixon and Gerald Williams are expected to share time in left field in place of Klesko.

"Our offense will be potent, but obviously not as potent without Andres," Cox said.

Clemens, coming off consecutive Cy Youngs, will report to the Yankees on Saturday. He went 20-6 last season, leading the AL in ERA (2.65) and strikeouts (271), and tying for the lead in wins.

"We've got a group of warriors here and we're getting a very big warrior," owner George Steinbrenner said. "He's a monster. He's just, 'Give me the ball' — a real competitor."

Clemens, who was also sought by Texas, Cleveland and Houston, has always been one of Steinbrenner's favorite players, and is the only five-time Cy Young winner in baseball history.

"I met my match in a guy who wants to win," Clemens said after speaking with The Boss. "This guy, he settles for nothing less. I enjoy that."

Toronto had wanted several young prospects from teams when it shopped Clemens in December, but the Yankees were able to hold onto some of the players the Blue Jays coveted most: outfielder Ricky Ledee and pitcher Ramiro Mendoza.

Wells, a quirky left-hander known as "Boomer," was the toast of New York after pitching a perfect game against the Minnesota Twins on May 17. He was one of the team's most effective pitchers with an 18-4 record and a 3.49 ERA.

Lloyd, a 31-year-old left-hander from Australia, was 3-0 with a 1.67 ERA in 50 relief appearances last year.

Bush, a 26-year-old who plays primarily at second base, hit .380 in 71 at-bats for the Yankees, but was considered expendable because New York has Chuck Knoblauch.

In other baseball news: — Mariano Rivera made it 2-0 for Yankees players in salary arbitration when he was awarded $4.25 million rather than the team's $3 million offer.

Owners are 6-2 in arbitration this year, losing only to Rivera and to Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter, who will get $5 million this year instead of the team's $3.2 million offer.

— Cleveland shortstop Omar Vizquel abandoned the idea of staying away from spring training to prod the Indians to improve his $21 million, seven-year contract.

"It's safe to say that I'll be there on time," said Vizquel, who is expected to report Monday.

— Randy Johnson said he's much more at ease in his first spring training with Arizona than he was the last two years with Seattle.

In 1997, he was coming off back surgery and was dealing with all the doubts about whether he would return to his old intimidating form. Last year, he was in a sour mood after the Mariners' decided against extending his contract.

"I think this is probably going to be one of my better spring trainings," Johnson said after his first workout with the Diamondbacks. "Last year, I had to deal with a lot of contract stuff and I'm really glad it's over and behind me."

— Right-hander Ben McDonald, sidelined nearly two years because of shoulder problems, agreed to a minor league contract with Tampa Bay.

The Devil Rays also learned outfielder Quinton McCracken has a sprained right knee.

Astro outfielder suffers knee injury

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros left fielder Moises Alou suffered a knee injury while working out in the Dominican Republic and will have an MRI performed in Houston on Monday, team officials said Friday.

Alou will miss the start of full Astros workouts Tuesday when position players join pitchers and catchers already working out. Details remained sketchy about the injury, including exactly how it occurred and which knee was hurt.

"There doesn't appear to be any structural damage, which is good news, but we don't know the extent of it until he gets the tests," general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "He can put weight on it, which is also a good sign."

Alou established career highs in almost every offensive category in his first season in Houston in 1998, including 182 hits, 124 RBIs, 38 home runs and 105 runs, helping the Astros to their second straight NL Central Division title.

The Florida Marlins traded Alou to the Astros after the 1997 season. Under his five-year contract, Alou could have demanded a trade after last season but elected to stay after the Astros sweetened his deal, reportedly by $3 million.

Drexler's TV show killed

HOUSTON (AP) — The Glide is off the air.

University of Houston coach Clyde Drexler's weekly television show has been canceled after the former NBA star failed for a third time this season to show up for the live broadcast.

"The show has wrapped up. It's ended. Whatever you want to call it," said KPRC general manager Steve Wasserman. Wasserman wouldn't speculate about whether the show would return.

Drexler said he'd like to come back to KPRC, but in a different time than Sunday night.

Senator Hillary?

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton is reportedly giving serious consideration to making a run for the U.S. Senate seat to be vacated in 2000 by New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

First lady boosts exploratory effort

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton and her advisers are contacting dozens of political consultants, Democratic donors and election law attorneys in a rapidly growing effort to determine whether she will run for the Senate in New York.

The first lady did some of her own research Friday, meeting privately in the White House with retiring New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a session that press secretary Marsha Berry called "an opportunity to explore thoughts."

Several of Mrs. Clinton's advisers say she is increasingly warming to the notion of running. They caution that her decision could be weeks or months away. The advisers, contacted by telephone in recent days, all spoke on condition of anonymity.

One longtime ally says Mrs. Clinton likely will wait until April or May to make up her mind. A second said it could be longer.

"I truly believe she will be thorough and methodical and it will take awhile," said Mandy Grunwald, a consultant in Bill Clinton's 1992 presidential campaign who remains close to Mrs. Clinton.

Vice President Al Gore, after addressing the AFL-CIO executive committee in Florida on Friday, told reporters, "If she chooses to run for the Senate, I predict she will win and be a great senator."

advantage of the situation," she said.

"It's an exploratory process," Kemp said.

"We're picking the brains of the consultants," Garza said.

After meeting with additional companies, Garza said they will review the different proposals.

"We want to know who will charge a retainer or who will charge on a per-project basis. We also want to get a feel for who we can work with the best," she said.

Kemp said they also want a firm which already has experience in the healthcare industry.

Two of the companies boast such experience. Fellers handles marketing for Covenant healthcare system, while the Price Group counts the University Medical Center in Lubbock among its clients.

The Price Group also favors testimonials in its marketing, "be it a patient or the family," Kemp said.

"We want the involvement of the community and that is a good way. We liked what they (Price) did. It really attracted us," Garza said.

"A lot of the marketing we want to do will involve the hospital staff, such as setting up tours, to let the community see the things we're doing," she said.

"We want to show off our different services. The hospital staff, the doctors and the board want to be 'ambassadors' for the hospital. We want to show the people that it's their hospital," Kemp said. "We are insisting to the consultants that WE are the ambassadors, not them."

"We know what we need to do, but we "need the consultants to give us the tools," Garza said.

They said there are plans already under way to expand the annual health fair, as well as give it more promotion and visibility, and develop a newsletter or advertising campaign to provide more information to the public about services and developments at the hospital.

"Most of all, we want people to know we are really trying to live up to our motto: 'Neighbors caring for neighbors,'" Kemp said.

Trio honored by CattleWomen

Hereford CattleWomen presented special recognitions to three people during the annual Sweetheart Dinner recently at Hereford Country Club.

Teena Hughs was named CattleWoman of the Year; Ed Yavornik was honored as CowBelle of the Year; and the 1998 Beef Booster Award was presented to Dick Chumley.

Also recognized were Stephen Edwards, the First Year Showmanship Award winner at the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show, and his parents, Tom and Monica Edwards. Edwards received the award for his general knowledge of his steer and the handling of the animal.

Yavornik, manager of Hereford Country Club, was honored as the CowBelle of the Year for his efforts to coordinate CattleWomen activities at the club.

Yavornik earned his bachelor's degree in Business Administration with an Economics and Food and Nutrition concentration from Drury College in Springfield, Mo. He then joined the ranks of the hotel management field, going to work for John Q. Hammons Hotels.

Church to observe 100th anniversary

The first church established in Hereford celebrates its 100-year anniversary this month.

The First Christian Church of Hereford was organized by 11 people in February 1899 near downtown Hereford and has served the religious community ever since.

New called Trinity Fellowship Church, the original site for the church building was at the corner of Third and Miles. In 1908, the church moved to Sixth and Main St. and held services at that location for 49 years.

The congregation moved to its present location at 401 W. Park Ave. in 1957 and completed construction on the entire site in 1963.

First Christian Church became Christ Church Fellowship in 1992 and last year, the church changed its name to Trinity Fellowship Church. Brady Boyd, who became the Senior Pastor in August of 1998, is the 20th pastor to serve the congregation.

"We are very proud of the heritage of this church. There are families still in our congregation who can trace their family history to the early days of the church and that is really remarkable," Boyd said.

Boyd says the congregation has plans to open a time capsule at the church during ceremonies on March 14.

He moved on to managing a Holiday Inn in Ellensburg, Wash., where he met his wife, Barbara. After a move to Sheridan, Wyo., he became director of purchasing for John Q. Hammons Hotels in January 1985. He opened four new hotels in Texas, including Lubbock, Houston and Fort Worth.

In January 1987, Yavornik became the general manager of Hereford Country Club. He is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and is active in the CMAA.

The 1998 Beef Booster Award was given to Dick Chumley of Conti Group Companies, Cattle Feeding Division, for being the top purchaser of Hereford Cattle Women Beef Certificates. The Beef Certificates are used at the four Conti Group Feedyards in the Panhandle (Coronado, XIT, Hartley and Cimarron), as safety incentive bonuses for completing a specified amount of time with no "lost time" due to injuries on the job.

The Hereford chapter of Texas Cattle Women sells the most Beef Certificates in the state of Texas and it is companies like Conti Group that contribute to the success of the Beef Certificate program.

The last, but certainly not least, award to be presented was the Cattle Woman of the Year. This year's recipient was Teena Hughs of Friona.

Hughs was born in Uvalde, and grew up on ranches in that area. She graduated from Hughs is very active in many church and civic organizations. In 1996, she was named Friona's Woman of the Year. She also served as Parmer County Republican Party Chairman for three years.

She attends Friona United Methodist Church and takes an active part in her sons' (Will James) and daughter's (Lauren Rose) school activities. Her husband, Feller, is employed at Paco Feedyard.

After a brief business meeting, in which it was voted on and passed to donate four $25 Beef Certificates to the "Beef Capital of the World Golf Challenge" this weekend, the dinner was adjourned.

Also in attendance were Jill Johnson and guest, Terri Johnson, Anthony and Kari Montelongo, Ed and Charlene Sanders, Jim and Zula Arney, Linda Gilbert, Charmayne Klett, Jackie Murphey, Jim and Cherokee Charlesworth and guest Mark Eakin, Barbara Chumley, and Feller Hughs.

The next regular monthly meeting will be held at noon at the Hereford Country Club, Tuesday, March 15.

In memory of our beloved wife, daughter, mother & sister

Estella Rodriguez Nikkel

One night I had a dream, I was walking along the beach with the Lord, and across the skies flashed scenes from my life. In each scene I noticed two sets of footprints in the sand. One was mine, and one was the Lord's.

When the last scene of my life appeared before me, I looked back at the footprints in the sand, and to my surprise I noticed that many times along the path of my life there was only one set of footprints. And I noticed that it was at the lowest and saddest times in my life.

I asked the Lord about it. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way. But I notice that during the most troublesome times in my life there is only one set of footprints. I don't understand why you left my side when I needed you most."

The Lord replied, "My precious child, I love you and would never leave you. During your times of trial and suffering, where you see only one set of footprints, I was carrying you."

We love you and miss you! From your mother - Amelia Galvez; brothers - George, Constantino, & Martin Galvez; sisters - Esther Galvez & Rosa Talamantes; your husband - Carl Nikkel; daughters - Veronica Cuellar & Rosa Rodriguez; your son - Michael Cuellar; your granddaughters - Melissa, Araceli, Terry & Sofia; your grandson - Michael Anthony; & your grandpa - Benigno Ramirez.

This company of professional musicians and dancer has been enjoying an international career for many years. The Rajko Ensemble will perform in Hereford High School auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The exceptional professional skills of the Rajko Ensemble are due to a special educational method that concentrates on preserving their natural aptitude for improvisations. The dancers are known and highly regarded for their virtuosity.

The company has a flexible and colorful repertoire that enables them to perform the music and dances of many genres, such as the lowlands pastoral dances of the people of Eastern Transylvania, operettas to Gypsy music to minuets and Viennese waltzes.

The Rajko Song and Dance Ensemble has toured Europe, North and South America, Australia and the Far East. They have often appeared on national television and radio in Hungary, and have a number of acclaimed recordings.

Since 1992, the company has toured France every year. This tour is about two months long and has placed them in as large a venue as 3,000 people. Their success in France has earned them a contract signed through the year 2000.

The Rajko Song and Dance Ensemble is touring the U.S. with the Splendor of Europe program. The company singers, musicians and dancers, resplendently clad in costumes, will perform everything from energetically authentic folk repertoire to waltzes and court dances, including the romantic music of Liszt and Brahms and the passionate music of Gypsy.

There is one remaining concert for the current Hereford Community Concert season, Mary Burt Seifert, soprano. Memberships for this concert will be available at the door of the Rajko Ensemble concert or by calling a member of the Hereford Community Concert Association Board. For information, call 364-5584 or 364-5736.

The Hereford Community Concert Association wants to alert all who attend this concert and any future ones at Hereford High School that the parking situation is not convenient. With the current construction around Hereford High School, the most desirable parking will be the west lot on the corner of Avenue F and Union Street. There is also a small parking lot west of the cafeteria. The streets bordering the high school are available as well. The HCCA Board does not recommend parking any where on the east side of the building.

Clay McNeely, eighth grade participated in the Area History Fair and results will be released in a later edition. His exhibit, "Find your own road," featured the scientific and technological advances in SAAB airplanes and cars.

The Geography Bee finalists should be named very soon. Clayton Patton, seventh grade, continues to study in order to be ready for the state competition.

On Tuesday, students throughout the district will be involved in TAAS writing.

Bluebonnet students will have a very busy week with TAAS on Tuesday and Jump for Heart on Thursday. On Friday, the students will be entertained by The Traveling Lantern Theatre who will perform "Dorothy in the Land of Oz." This performance will be at 2:00 and the day will end with a Student Council Dance from 6:00 to 9:00.

Tierra Blanca Primary Students also have a busy week planned. They will be involved in TAAS practice and Mrs. Oz will be on hand to work with the students in kindergarten through second grade. There will be an awards assembly for the six-weeks for K-3 students on Friday.

On Wednesday, February 24, an exciting mini-workshop is planned for parents of all Tierra Blanca kindergartners. The workshop, "How to Use TV Effectively," will offer extension activities to use with children and will focus on some of the popular children's programs. All kindergarten parents are invited to attend and should call the school office, 363-7680, for reservations and details.

Track season has begun, as well as baseball, so get out the lawn chairs and your umbrellas and join the fun.

Junior Historians have some Centennial Cookbooks on hand for those who failed to get one. These can be purchased at Kids Alley, Inkahoets, from Diedra Drake or Carolyn Waters.

ACKNOWLEDGING THE REALITY OF THE MARITAL BREAKUP

Most researchers have reported that children going through a divorce experience academic problems, especially boys. School is usually the second most stable environment for the child, and when the home environment is disrupted, it is a natural for a child to turn to the school, counselor, and teacher for support and comfort. An orderly, structured, and predictable school environment is related to the resumption of student achievement.

Some evidence exists that children who were achieving well before the family disruption and who had no previous serious personality or behavioral disorder resume their good adjustment within one to two years after the divorce. It is possible that children just entering school at the time of the divorce may be at greater risk academically, because these are the years when the foundations for learning are formed.

However, academic achievement is probably related more closely to other factors, such as socioeconomic status, than to the incidence of divorce.

School counselors are a valuable resource to you and your child during this academically challenging time of divorce. HISD is very fortunate to have a counselor on every campus. They work for you and your child. They are your best advocates in the schools. Call upon them to help you and your children during this trying time of all your lives. If you do not know who your child's school counselor is, let me encourage you to meet them today. Go in and have a conference with them and find out how they may help you and your child. This will be your tax dollars at work for you and your child's education.

Watch your young children. They often experience terrifying fantasies, feel abandoned, and tend to deny the reality of the family situation. Because of their own stress, parents often fail to reassure the children and help them understand the situation and their future. Older children, too, may experience some fantasies of disaster, reduced ability to think or cope, and even psychosomatic symptoms indicating their anxiety.

Supportive counseling and play therapy are suggested for children working through this task. The child should be confronted with the situation quickly and forcefully. An opportunity needs to be provided to discuss, process, and resolve his or her feelings about the divorce to avoid being overwhelmed by negative feelings. This can take place in family therapy sessions or individual therapy session.

The most critical factor in helping children through divorce is parental support. Both parents need to talk with all the children in a group about the decision to divorce several days before one parent leaves the home. Children should be provided with a clear explanation about why their parents are divorcing.

YOUR EYES

PUFFY EYES

Waking up with puffy eyes after a fitful night of sleeping is not uncommon. You can also get puffy eyes by crying. But lack of sleep and crying are not the only causes of puffiness. If you're menstruating or you eat salty foods or drink anything-even water--less than two hours before you go to bed, you may wake up with puffiness.

If you want to get rid of the puffiness before starting your day apply a cold compress or a cold tea bag wrapped in a tissue, for about five minutes. Tea contains tannin, a natural astringent which helps reduce puffiness.

To avoid puffy eyes in the first place, take a good look at your diet. You may be eating too many salty foods. Alcohol can also be a culprit.

Finally, when you go to bed at night, sleep with two or three pillows so your head is raised. That will help keep the fluid from pooling under your eyes.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS
Don Taylor

Six Shortcuts to Start-up Success

The American Dream to be your own boss is alive and well as we head toward a new millennium. Millions of Americans are itching to paint their names over the door of a small business they can call their own.

Every week in our office we meet with men and women who want to turn their dream into reality. All too often the conversation starts like this, "Well, I want to start my own business because I've been out of work for four months and can't find a job. Since I'm about out of savings, I need some income quick. What kind of business should I start?"

While we do not wish to squelch anyone's dreams, we often have to bring a dose of reality to these meetings. Starting a business isn't easy under the best circumstances. Starting out with little of no money increases the difficulty. Not knowing what type of business to start makes it almost impossible to achieve start-up success.

The good news is there are steps you can take that will help you eliminate mistakes and reduce your start-up risks. Here are six to get you off to a running start.

Start-up Steps

• Ask yourself why. The first step toward success is to carefully consider motivation for starting your own business. Not having a job, disliking your boss or wanting to ease your workload are not good reasons.

You will work harder in your own business than you've ever worked before. You will not generate quick income, and you may find that many of your new bosses -- sometimes referred to as customers -- are difficult to work for, too.

• Pick a business to start. The next step is to select a type of business to start. Most experts agree that it helps if you know something about the business you want to operate. It should be something that utilizes your skills and abilities and something you enjoy. It must also include products or services that potential customers need.

• Put together a plan. A business plan doesn't guarantee your success, but it will improve your chances. It will show potential lenders that you've done your homework and will help you focus on success.

A good plan should address several start-up areas. It should include market research, market potential, management issues, marketing strategies, capital needs and financial projections.

• Cover the legal bases. You should select a legal structure, check zoning requirements and secure the proper licenses and permits. You'll need to check with your local tax authorities for information on sales taxes, employee taxes and income taxes. After you've selected a name for your business, register it with the proper authorities.

• Take charge of financial issues. The first step I'd recommend in this area is to open a separate business checking account. Select a bank that can help with your future credit needs.

Create your own budget and record keeping system before you open the business. Accounting firms, business consultants and small business development centers can help in this area. Don't ignore your records. You'll need timely management information, and this can help you save on taxes later on.

• Pull the trigger. The final step is to put your plan into motion. Kick off your marketing plan and start learning customer's names. Go all out to make your service memorable. Every business is built one customer contact at a time. Get involved in your community, network with others and ask for business.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Some time ago, a patron remarked that the end of the cold war has sure wrecked havoc with the good spy and espionage novels. The Russians made such a good enemy because they were so easy to mistrust and dislike.

Wouldn't you hate to be the author that had spent five years writing the best spy novel of your career, only to have the world's events change so drastically that the story was no longer feasible? That would be my luck.

Since the fall of Communist Russia, fiction writers have struggled to find or develop another popular enemy. I have noticed an increasing focus on China, the corrupted U.S. government and the hazards of communication and information technology.

We are living in the information age caused by the change in technology. Did you know that the Internet began as a communication system that could continue through major facilities or geographical locations were destroyed?

When a message is sent on the Internet, it is broken into small pieces, packaged in smaller containers and sent over many different routes. It is the address assigned to each of the pieces that sees it to its final destination and reassembles the message into its original readable form.

If any route is blocked, the message piece finds and follows another route until it arrives at its destination address. Because of the way a message is broken up and sent by many different routes, parts of it may travel all over the world before it arrives at its final destination.

Knowing this about the way the Internet functions makes you wonder how anyone can hope to regulate, control, or make it reasonably secure. (I learned this at the latest computer training workshop I attended.)

Having that information helps to understand how Spider Web by Tom Grace could be a feasible story. Information is the most valuable commodity of our time. The CIA's response is the new top secret project, a surveillance weapon on the World Wide Web.

Nolan Kilkenny, a retired U.S. Navy SEAL finds himself in the middle of the battle to determine who will control the new surveillance weapon. After retirement, Nolan began to pursue a doctorate in advanced computer technology.

While working in his computer lab, Nolan discovers a glitch in a heavily guarded computer network. The glitch soon leads Nolan to the FBI and CIA and into a world wide hunt for three computer information pirates and the Spider.

The Spider moves silently on the web of computers spanning the globe gathering, sifting and sending information. Spider is capable of opening the most sophisticated computer security systems and gathering the information that would normally take a team of hundreds of field agents and elite computer hackers to do.

Suddenly, Nolan is heading the search for Spider, and as he moves closer to finding Spider, he moves closer to his own death.

What would you do if you received a package in the mail that had no card, note or return address? Would you open it? When struggling single parent Amy Parkens received and opened her unmarked package, she found $200,000 in cash.

In Found Money by James Grippando, Amy Parkens has no idea who or why this package has been sent to her. Amy desperately wants to keep the cash but is afraid its delivery may be a mistake, a setup, or even connected to her mother's mysterious suicide.

Amy is determined to find the source, but when she tries the money is quickly and violently taken away. Ryan Duffy, a decent, responsible small town physician from Colorado, has recently inherited his father's estate.

Ryan's father had been a hard working electrician for forty-five years and upon his death, Ryan began to go through the house. In the attic Ryan discovers a hidden fortune.

How did Mr. Duffy manage to acquire all this money? Was it extortion, burglary or some other crime? Now that Ryan has found the money what should he do with it?

Ryan must dig into his father's past to find the answers. As Amy and Ryan search for the answers, their paths cross as they travel through a maze of deception and blackmail to a man of unimaginable power.

In The Big Law, author Chuck Logan probes into the inner working of the working of the Witness Protection Program. Ex-policeman, Phil Broker, finds himself married for the second time to Army officer Nina Broker and daddy to daughter Kit. Phil is a full-time dad, now that Nina has returned to the Army and is stationed in Bosnia.

While putting groceries away and monitoring Kit, Phil decides to let the machine catch the ringing phone. When Phil finally listens to the message, is surprised to hear Caren's voice.

Caren, Phil's ex-wife, is married to Keith Angland, a St. Paul cop who has turned informant for the Chicago mob. The phone message is, "Phil, Keith's got himself in a lot of trouble and I need your help."

As the plot thickens, Caren is persuaded by reporter Tom James to confide in him and tell the whole story of her husband's involvement in the mob. Caren even entrusts Tom with the suitcase full of payoff cash.

When Caren is killed, Tom frames Keith and absconds with the suitcase full of money. Phil senses something amiss and tries to find Tom, only to discover that Tom has entered the FBI's Witness Protection Program. After further investigation, Phil becomes convinced that Tom is Caren's killer and Phil is determined to find him.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing about your response to the 59-year-old man seeking information on impotence. We respectfully believe you got it wrong.

Your reply refers to herbal products as providing "very satisfactory" results to people who wish to enhance their sexual performance. Herbal products do not undergo rigorous scientific testing. According to a recent consumer alert by the Federal Trade Commission, no herbal or all-natural substance has been shown to be an effective treatment for impotence.

Your column also refers to a Food and Drug Administration announcement that 69 people have died after taking Viagra. Yes, there have been deaths reported among the 4 million patients who have been prescribed Viagra, but no cause-and-effect relationship has been established.

Further, your readers should understand that there is a cardiovascular risk associated with sexual activity, and only a physician can determine when — or even whether — it is appropriate for a patient to resume sexual relations after a heart attack. As we have always said, Viagra is not for everyone. — Joseph M. Feczko, M.D., senior vice president, medical and regulatory operations, Pfizer Inc., New York

Dear Mr. Feczko: Your honest appraisal is refreshing, especially since Viagra is one of your biggest sellers. Here's one more:

Dear Ann: Is it true that Bob Dole has signed on to be the poster boy for Viagra? — Just Asking

Dear Just: I don't know. Ask Elizabeth.

Here is the last word from Consumer Alert in Washington, D.C.: If the product being pitched to cure impotence is "herbal" or "all-natural," dismiss it. To date, no herbal or all-natural substance has been proven effective in treating impotence. For a free brochure about impotence, write to the Sexual Function Health Council, American Foundation for Urologic Disease Inc., 1128 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md. 21201, or call 1-800-433-4215 (www.impotence.org).

Dear Ann Landers: I want to thank you for printing "Dogs Don't Have Souls, Do They?" by Chuck Wells of Palmyra, N.Y. The essay was about a wonderful dog that became old and sick and had to be put to sleep. I cried when I read it.

I have had Heidi, a miniature toy poodle, since she was 6 weeks old. She will be 18 years old soon. She is blind and deaf and has had several surgeries over the years. That essay made me realize I am letting Heidi suffer because I cannot bear to take her to the vet for the last time. Please thank Chuck Wells for opening my eyes. — M.S. in Manteca, Calif.

Dear M.S.: Many readers wrote to say they are experiencing the same sorrow and Chuck Wells' essay moved them deeply. He will be glad to know he helped.

Dear Ann Landers: The decade in which everybody can sue anybody is upon us, full blast. Here's the latest: A New Jersey woman has sued her polka partner for gross negligence. The woman, from Passaic, N.J., is suing her male dance partner for injuries suffered while they were doing the polka. It seems the man tripped and fell, pulling the woman down on top of him. She broke a hip. He was also injured.

A court in Passaic threw out the suit on the grounds that there is no basis in the law for a suit between dance partners in New Jersey. That decision is being appealed, and the lawsuit is now pending. What do you think about this, Ann Landers? — A Newark Reader

Dear Newark: I think the man is going to have to find a new dancing partner, at least until her hip heals. And I respectfully suggest that he stick with the waltz from now on.

Computer gurus hope to save scenic farmland, profitably

SEATTLE (AP) — A new venture — and one of the planet's oldest — has caught the eye of a handful of Microsoft millionaires: farming.

A group banding together as Farmland Acquisition, Research and Management Limited Liability Co., or Farm LLC, is buying up land in the Sammamish Valley.

The high-powered, high-tech investors have a low-key, low-tech dream: They hope to turn a profit in agriculture and save the scenic open space near their homes at the same time.

In three months, they've raised nearly $1 million and bought their first acreage. By year's end, they expect to own about 80 acres, 7 percent of the farmland in the valley on the Seattle metropolitan area's northeast corner.

"We intend to demonstrate ... the best and highest use of farmland is farming," said Roger Calhoun, the Farm LLC general manager, who holds a doctorate in biophysics and retired early from a biotechnology career.

The general idea is to raise fruit and vegetables on some parcels, lease others to new farmers and run a demonstration garden for people considering farm life.

Farm LLC's 17 members

hope to tap the growing market for high-quality organic produce. They plan to sell direct from the farm, cutting out middleman expense and keeping consumers in touch with where food comes from.

"It's really, I think, a community-driven venture, and we really hope to reach out to the community so the people will see the farm as their neighborhood farm," Calhoun said.

Other members include Microsoft engineer Bob Atkinson, writer Christine Dubois and farmer Claire Thomas, who grows organic produce on seven acres in the valley.

Most are from Microsoft, though there are some doctors and Boeing employees, Thomas said.

"We have people walking in there and plunking down $100,000," she said.

They met through Thomas' Root Connection, a co-op in which members buy shares of the harvest and get weekly allotments of produce.

Dubois said she's in it for her children.

"I want them to have the experience of a farm and know that food doesn't come from boxes on the shelf," she said.

Atkinson, who grew up on a Nova Scotia orchard, said the group will help new farmers by making small, affordable pieces of land available.

"Having access to the larger amount of capital, we can buy the 40 acres and lease 10-acre parcels," he said.

Farm LLC also will experiment with more intensive methods, such as greenhouses, to produce greater yields and year-round income and employment.

"I think that people don't really realize how much produce can be grown," Thomas said, touting the valley's rich soil as among the nation's best.

The valley has 1,140 acres of farmland, 686 of them protected by a county farm preservation program. The rest are periodically considered for soccer fields, industrial parks and other nonfarm uses.

"Most of the partnerships that come in and buy farmland are looking down the road for other uses," said county agriculture specialist Eric Nelson, who grew up on a valley dairy that's now the site of an office park.

Nelson likes Farm LLC's concept, though he worries it may drive up area land prices for full-time farmers.

"Like Microsoft millionaires have affected the housing market," he said, "the same thing could happen to farmland."

Sampling the green — This time of year most livestock are ready for a bite of fresh green stuff, but unlike Thunder's owner R.V. Tackett, most horse owners don't cater quite so much to their horses. Tackett said Thunder spends most his time up in the lot and would just stand looking at the wheat, so he decided to ride him down and just let him get a bite or two.

Blight threatens colorado crops

MONTE VISTA, Colo. (AP) — Late blight, the fungus that caused the Irish potato famine 150 years ago, is now threatening producers in southern Colorado's San Luis Valley.

The valley was the last potato-growing region of the United States to have escaped the blight since it devastated Ireland in 1845.

"It is a very serious issue facing our industry," Colorado State University extension specialist Richard Zink said. "We'll all have to work together to get ahead of it. Once you've seen it, you'll never forget it."

Last summer, the blight, which has been causing problems for some Idaho growers, appeared in the valley for the first time, affecting more than 75,000 acres of cropland.

The fungus, which breeds beneath the warm, moist canopy of the potato plant's leaves, can be controlled using chemicals. To save the potatoes, crop dusters were kept busy from dawn to dusk.

The efforts were successful. A near-record crop of more than 2.5 billion pounds worth $100 million was harvested last October.

No large-scale losses were reported last year, but nearly every San Luis Valley field was affected. Growers spent millions of dollars on chemicals.

Zink said late blight-infected seed potatoes probably will be planted this year and growers will not realize their crop is infected until July, when it is too late to plant another crop.

For the third year in a row, the valley will be quarantined by state and federal officials, who will inspect every incoming load of seed potatoes.

OJ prices fall with larger than expected orange crop

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Consumers can get their share of Vitamin C and pay less for it in the coming months.

The Agriculture Department says it expects more Florida oranges than previously forecast. The USDA has raised slightly its estimate of the state's orange crop to 194 million boxes.

The 2 percent increase over the original prediction of 190 million boxes is the result of mild winter. Each box contains 90 pounds of oranges.

The warm, wet weather this winter has revived groves previously damaged by drought, floods and wind, forecasters said.

Orange juice futures prices tumbled 9 percent Thursday in New York, the second consecutive day of sharp losses. Orange juice for March delivery fell 8.2 cents to 84.05 cents a gallon.

The release of the updated forecast prompted frozen, concentrated orange juice prices to lose nearly 18 percent after two days.

The estimated amount of juice per box was increased to a record 1.60 gallons.

Ag-commission: Small farms need additional financial support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department hasn't made enough progress in its efforts to help small farmers, say several members of a USDA-appointed commission.

Twenty-four of 29 commissioners on USDA's National Commission on Small Farms issued a report card Tuesday grading the agency's efforts to implement a January 1998 commission report on small farms. The commissioners have organized themselves as the Time to Act Campaign, an independent effort to get implementation of the report.

Test detects disease causing bacteria

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new test designed by Agriculture Department researchers could help detect a disease-causing bacteria that cost pork producers some $17 million a year.

Tests now can take five to seven days and are not always reliable. But a scientist with the Agricultural Research Service in Ames, Iowa, has designed a test that does the job in just three days. Extra time gives farmers a chance to cut losses by combining treatments such as antibiotic therapy, vaccination and getting rid of the sick pigs.

Two bacteria are the culprits behind atrophic rhinitis, which leads to weight loss and delays in delivering pork to market. Pigs with this disease also are susceptible to pneumonia.

The disease, which is highly contagious and spreads quickly among pigs in confinement houses, is linked to two toxin-producing bacteria. The bacteria reduce long bone growth, causing shortened and twisted snouts on severely infected pigs.

But detecting the disease can create costly delays for farmers because snout deformities are not always obvious. Karen B. Register, a molecular microbiologist with the Agricultural Research Service, has designed a test using probes made from the genetic material of the bacteria that can produce results in three days.

The test targets the genes in a nasal or tonsil swab taken from a live pig.

Bacteria in the samples are grown and placed on a paper-like sheet of nylon. A pink or purple color indicates the presence of one of the two toxin-producing bacteria.

Out of 10 categories rated, the agency received higher than a C in three areas. The agency rated a "D" for its efforts to ensure fair market access for those farmers and reach out to farmworkers.

The agency's highest scores, three "Bs", were for its efforts to bolster marketing opportunities for small farms, reach out to beginning farmers as well as make changes to the crop insurance program.

"In some cases, USDA has acted quickly and decisively," the report said. "But in most areas, real change is slow to come." Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman defended the agency saying that while there is still work to do, improvements such as better loan programs for small farmers have been implemented.

"I think we've done a lot of good things," Glickman said. "The fact is, the reversal of the trends towards concentration in agriculture and trying to increase family farm agriculture is a tough problem."

Since the commission's report last year, thousands of small farms — in both commodities and livestock — have had a turbulent year that included low prices, falling exports and inclement weather.

Growing concern that small farms are being overtaken by big business have led to hearings in Congress on concentration in the industry, including one Thursday by the House Agriculture Committee. Attorney General Janet Reno is scheduled to meet later this month with a group of senators who have called for an investigation of concentration in all sectors of agriculture.

"The secretary has not provided strong enough leadership to overcome some of the resistance within the bureaucracy towards strong action and reversing some of the biases that exist towards large scale corporate agriculture," said Chuck Hassebrook, a commission member from Nebraska.

Added Greg Gunthorp, a commission member and Indiana hog farmer, "I think the recommendations of the small farm commission would go a long way in promising a level playing field."

"We're not asking for somebody to throw a lot of money at the problem. We're just asking for a chance," Gunthorp said. Farmers could have a better chance if the department implemented mandatory price reporting, commissioners said, reiterating a call from last year. Under mandatory price reporting, meatpackers would have to report the price they pay for livestock. The issue failed in the last Congress and is scheduled to come up again this year.

Commissioners said Glickman already has broad authority that would allow him to implement some form of price reporting, a provision they say would have helped hog producers now getting their lowest prices in 40 years. Glickman disagrees that he has such authority.

A good year for artichokes

CASTROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Kenny Lazzarini picks a softball-sized artichoke from a bin and gives it a squeeze.

"You hear that squeak?" the grower asks. "This is going to be an excellent year."

Three rough seasons of floods, heat and El Nino rains brought soggy, small, expensive and silent artichokes to store shelves. This year, barring a late freeze, the cycle will be broken.

In the fields surrounding Castroville, the self-proclaimed Artichoke Capital of the World, chest-high plants are laden this month with the tender, edible thistles.

"We really want consumers to enjoy their artichokes this year because Lord knows, it's been rough," said Mary Comfort, executive director of the California Artichoke Advisory Board.

Artichokes, first commercially grown in the United States in 1922 by Italian immigrants, are produced exclusively in California and almost entirely on the central coast in a foggy, moist microclimate where it's never too hot or cold.

Last year, the crop value was $44 million, with most sold in large metropolitan areas on the East and West coasts. More than one-third of Americans have eaten a fresh, cooked artichoke, but those who have tried to enjoy one during the past few years have been sadly disappointed. The most severe weather problems many farmers can remember came in March 1995, just weeks before the harvest peaked. One of the most vicious storm systems in state history washed away millions of dollars worth of vegetables on the Central Coast, including about half the artichokes.

Farmers worked to recover, replanting the perennials with root cuttings.

Then came El Nino, bringing more than $500 million of damage to California's agriculture, and soaking the roots of the artichokes until they couldn't absorb nutrients from the soil.

"After El Nino, the artichokes were scarce, they were expensive and they didn't taste so good," said Ray Dei, whose family has for 35 years run the Giant Artichoke produce market in Castroville, about 80 miles south of San Francisco.

Traditional Green Globe artichoke farmers grow plants cloned from root stock planted 80 years ago. As their crops declined in recent years, large produce companies have been experimenting with several new types of harder artichokes grown from seed — the Big Heart, Imperial Star and Desert Globe.

So far these hybrids lack the flavor and texture of the classic Green Globes, but consumers — many unaware that they were trying a new variety — have had little choice.

"I tried growing them last year but people came to me and said, 'I want a real artichoke. Not one of these cardboard things,'" said Lazzarini. "I had to stop growing them."

This year has been easy on artichokes. Rainfall has been moderate, and four days of bitter temperatures in late December that almost entirely wiped out California's citrus crop barely frosted the artichokes.

Those being harvested this month are reaching store shelves with some brownish scars on the outside, but no internal damage. And when the artichoke season reaches its height in March and April, the vegetables should be green, robust, heavy and tastier than they've been in years.

Prices, which have reached as high as $3 each for jumbo artichokes in recent years, are expected to drop to below $1 each. Smaller artichokes may be as cheap as 20 cents a pound.

That's wonderful news to Theresa DeCamp of Carmel, who laid out $2.99 for one artichoke last winter.

"It was incredibly expensive," she said. "But I just had to have one."

DeCamp bought artichokes last week from a roadside stand, grinning as she discussed how creamy, sweet and fun this year's crop will be.

"We'll have them for dinner," she said. "We'll have them as appetizers. We'll have them a lot."

Home processed pork keeps producers going

Producers use old methods during tough times

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — Faced with an oversupply at large slaughterhouses that kept them struggling to stay in business, hog farmers Mike and Terry Strickland decided to take matters into their own hands: They began processing their own meat for sale to area businesses.

The brothers, who farm near this west Georgia town, grow about 6,000 of the state's annual marketable hogs on their 500-acre farm.

While the Stricklands continue to produce hogs to be sold for processing, they are supplementing their business by going door-to-door selling hogs they processed, inspected and readied for sale.

Phil Williams, owner of Pine Mountain's Superval grocery, responded to their local sales pitch and sells their pork products in the town of 1,500.

So did McGuire's Family Restaurant, which boasts of serving pork chops, ribs and ham that are truly home-grown.

In 1998, Georgia's hog farmers marketed a million head of hogs for $134 million in gross receipts compared with $222 million in 1987. Ten years ago, the state had 4,000 hog farmers. Now there are 400.

"We just have too many hogs going to market. A lot of producers are going out of business now," said Rogers Bernard, executive vice president of the Georgia Pork Producers Association.

The Stricklands are also diversifying by selling mulch, hay and wheat to help pay for their feed bill that averages $7,000 a week.

Still, the brothers are uncertain they will be able to remain in the pork-producing business.

"Over the last six months we've borrowed more than $100,000 just to stay in business."

Mike Strickland, pork producer

"Over the last six months, we've borrowed over $100,000 just to stay in business," said Mike, 35, the younger of the two brothers.

The Stricklands' breeder herd of 300 hogs is the average size of most of the state's hog farms. The largest hog farm operation in the state belongs to Goldkist with its combination of farms totaling 20,000 breeder hogs.

While too few slaughtering plants are a major reason, a decline in exports to foreign markets has helped to push the supply of hogs past demand.

As a result, the selling price hit an all-time low of 8 cents per 100 pounds of pork sold last year, the lowest since the Great Depression. That compares with 47 cents in previous years. The current market rate is 27 cents to 30 cents a pound.

The state Board of Natural Resources added to state hog farmers' woes recently with a ban on new permits for hog farm operations exceeding 2,500 hogs until rules are established for waste management.

"We are trying to ride it out," said hog farmer Chuck Walls of Gainesville who has a 700-hog farm near Commerce.

"We've lost somewhere around $150,000 last year, and it will take us about a year and a half to get it back. If our feed suppliers had not been good enough to stay with us, we probably would be out of business," Walls said.

Recently, a proposal to build a $100 million packing plant between Macon and Savannah was put on hold by the packer, said Fred Sandrock, head of the Sunbelt Pork Cooperative of producers from Georgia, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Alabama.

Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said a Georgia slaughterhouse is what is needed.

"I've asked state legislators to look into the possibility of getting an authority established that could back a bond issue to build a plant here," Irvin said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Lauren Bacall brings tragic heiress Duke to life

By Justino Aguilera
©TVData Features Syndicate

She inherited a $100 million fortune at the age of 12, reportedly spied for the OSS during World War II, married several men (including a legendary Latin lover and a Hawaiian Olympic champion) and died in her mansion without friends and family, possibly at the hands of her butler.

What sounds like the dubious plot of a romance novel is, in fact, the true life story of tobacco heiress Doris Duke, who died under mysterious circumstances in 1993. Duke is brought to life again by Hollywood nobility — actress Lauren Bacall — in Too Rich — The Secret Life of Doris Duke.

The two-part TV movie airs Sunday, Feb. 21, and Tuesday, Feb. 23, on CBS.

The dramatic retelling of Duke's life is done via a deathbed flashback.

We see self-made man Buck Duke (powerfully played by Joe Don Baker) instill in his daughter a distrust of others that will haunt her to her dying day.

We also meet young Doris' uninvolved mother, Nanaline (Kathleen Quinlan), whose neglect will lead to Duke's lifelong unrequited search for acceptance and love.

It was the irony of Duke's story, in part, that led Bacall to choose the role.

"She had a very isolated and sad life," Bacall explains. "She had all this money, and she still couldn't buy what she wanted. (With too much money,) suddenly you become much more demanding."

As the story unfolds, Duke repeatedly seeks comfort, love and approval from the men least likely to provide it, including notorious Latin lover and ladies man Porfirio Rubirosa (Michael Nouri) and Hawaiian Olympian Duke Kahanamoku, with whom she had a daughter who died at birth.

"They were all interested in her money. And that obviously affected her," Bacall says. "Our backgrounds stay with us for the rest of our lives."

Duke's misfortunes make for scintillating viewing and a meaty role for the 73-year-old actress — a rarity in Hollywood these days, according to Bacall.

"It's not easy to find good material," she laments. "There are a hell of a lot of good actresses, and many of them have been looking for parts to play for many years. I find it extraordinary that they are not writing a lot of (good) parts for women."

The opportunity to work with a first-rate cast, including Emmy Award winner Richard Chamberlain, who plays butler Bernard Lafferty, and Brian Dennehy, who portrays Louis Bromfield, Duke's one true love, also served as an enticement, she adds.

While Bacall once may have crossed paths with Duke, who numbered among her friends Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, Truman Capote, Errol Flynn, Andy Warhol and Imelda Marcos, it was something entirely different for the actress to assume Duke's persona for the length of the shoot.

"It's very strange to play someone for three months," she says. "You begin to kind of take on the aura of that person. ... It's weird, but that person is very much there."

What would Bacall like viewers to take away after four hours with her heiress?

"I hope people have a sense of the life of Doris Duke," she says. "Money is what many of us want, but too much of it is destructive. I hope people understand what she went through."

HOROSCOPES

February 21-27

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A lot of people are depending on you when it comes to a business decision this week, Aries. Don't just think about yourself. You need to consider what is best for everyone involved — even if that means making some compromises when it comes to what you want. Gemini plays an important role.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

You have a lot on your mind, Taurus. Don't get stressed out about everything. Stay calm, and try to organize your schedule. You have a lot to do, but you can get it all done if you prioritize things. If you're still nervous, talk to a trusted loved one. He or she is sure to calm you down.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Try to take it easy this week, Gemini. You've been busy for quite a while. Now that you have a break, enjoy yourself. Spend some time with friends, and just relax. You deserve it. A close friend needs your help with a personal problem. Be supportive, and do whatever you can for him or her.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Don't get down on yourself for a minor mistake at work. It could have happened to anyone, and no serious consequences came from it. Just relax, and move on. That special someone has a surprise for you. Don't accept it if you're having second thoughts about the relationship. Think about what you really want.

LEO - July 23/August 23

You get caught in the middle of a disagreement between business associates early in the week, Leo. While you don't want to get involved, you have no choice. Help these co-workers to see both sides of the situation and work toward a compromise. It's not going to be easy, but you can do it. Capricorn plays an important role.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

While you want to be alone this week, you're not going to get your wish. During the day, several co-workers need your help with a project, and a loved one monopolizes your time during the evening. Be there for all of them; it's all you can do. However, don't get frustrated; they'll leave you alone by the end of the week.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

While you like to be in charge, that's not how things work early in the week. Let the more qualified person take control when it comes to a business problem. Pay attention to his or her actions, and learn from the situation.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't be possessive when it comes to that special someone. He or she truly cares for you, but he or she also needs some time alone. While you're nervous, time apart actually will strengthen your relationship. A close friend asks you for financial advice. This is important, so be honest.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

When it comes to a heart-to-heart talk with a loved one, be blunt. That's really the only way you can get your point across. While your words will sting, he or she needs to hear them. That special someone has an important question for you. Be truthful with him or her.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

While you need to show your authority at work, don't be harsh. Take the lead, but show your co-workers some compassion. They will respect you for it. A friend asks a favor of you. While you want to help, say no. Getting involved will cause you a lot of problems.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't try to force your personal views onto others, Aquarius. They are entitled to their own opinions — even if they are radically different from yours. A family friend drops by unexpectedly. Don't rush him or her out the door; he or she is there for a good reason. Cancer plays an important role late in the week.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Don't take a loved one's harsh words to heart. He or she is going through a rough time and just needs to vent a little. Listen to him or her, and try to help ease the situation. A close friend has good news and wants to celebrate with you. Enjoy!

Jackie Burkhardt (Mila Kunis) of the Fox hit That '70s Show gets some shocking news in Sunday's episode, "The Pill." Writer Linda Wallem says the message for parents is "Talk about it before it's too late."

That '70s Show addresses thorny issue of teen sex

Before its debut last fall, the writers of Fox's That '70s Show took hits from critics for allowing their characters to smoke marijuana while portraying the group to be conservative about sexual activity.

Well, that criticism doesn't apply anymore. In an episode titled "The Pill," airing Sunday, Feb. 21, the show's two young female leads face the consequences of sexual activity.

The show opens with bracing news: 15-year-old Jackie Burkhardt (Mila Kunis) is pregnant. It seems she received some bad advice from her cousin about the rhythm method of birth control.

Jackie's schoolmate Donna Pinciotti (Laura Prepon) decides such a fate is not for her. While she and her boyfriend Eric (Topher Grace) remain virgins, she shares her worries about their relationship with her mother, Midge (Tanya Roberts), herself pregnant at 16.

Linda Wallem, co-executive producer and the episode's writer, describes this as a full-blown mother-daughter talk.

"The mother went through the same thing, but she didn't have the same options. She wants to help her daughter," Wallem says. "That was the point I wanted to make in the episode: Talk about it before it's too late."

Apparently, very little of their talk made it to the screen. The next thing viewers know, Donna is taking birth-control pills.

"I don't think (Donna and Eric) are going to have sex for a long time, if I have my druthers," Wallem adds, because, as she has Donna say, "sex changes everything."

Eric's father, Red (Kurtwood Smith), is the only character to advocate abstinence -- and this is played strictly for laughs.

What's wrong with abstinence? "In theory that's a good idea," Wallem says, "but I don't know if that's always gonna happen. I wish women knew that that was more of a choice."

Overall, there are too many jokes for an episode on such a serious subject. At least parents can help make one thing clear: In real life, problems like Jackie's aren't resolved in 22 minutes.

TV PIPELINE

Jennifer Grey

Q: What has Jennifer Grey done since Dirty Dancing? I haven't seen her lately. —Kate via e-mail.

A: Actually, you may have seen her and not realized it. Grey looks quite different since she had cosmetic surgery on her distinctive nose, as you'll see in her ABC midseason sitcom It's Like, You Know. In the past five years, Grey has done seven TV movies and features, plus a guest appearance on Friends.

Q: OK, we give up. Who is the woman in the big black-rimmed glasses on those Old Navy commercials? —R. Ponce, Manhattan, Kan.

A: She's former New York fashion editor Carrie Donovan. By the way, she refuses to reveal where she found her distinctive eyewear.

Q: Please tell my family I am not crazy! I distinctly remember a '60s sitcom called My Mother the Car, in which Jerry Van Dyke played a man whose late mother was reincarnated as a 1928 Porter automobile. She spoke to him through the car's radio. —Paula Coon, Monroe, Mich.

A: Roasted by the nation's TV critics, My Mother the Car ran on NBC during the 1965-66 season. Veteran actress Ann Sothern provided the voice of Van Dyke's mother, and comic Avery Schreiber played an antique-auto collector who coveted the car.

Q: I remember a series called Adventures in Paradise starring Gardner McKay. Whatever happened to him? —Patrick in Floral City, Fla.

A: McKay, who starred as Tiki skipper Adam Troy in this 1959-62 ABC series, found himself typecast after Paradise ended its voyage. One of the two movies he made later, I Sailed to Tahiti With an All-Girl Crew, actually cast him as a character named Gardner!

Now 66, McKay has enjoyed a successful career in the years since Paradise as a playwright and Hawaiian Public Radio personality. His thriller Toyer was published in January by Little, Brown and Company.

Q: Will HBO be running any more new episodes of its series Sex and the City? —Peg in Rutland, Vt.

A: Yes, a second Sex-y season begins this summer.

Q: How old are Michael T. Weiss (The Pretender) and Jeremy Piven (Cupid)? Are they married? Also, who played Ensign Guitry on the JAG episode about a Japanese rape victim? —Lynn McGowan via e-mail.

A: Both Weiss, 37, and Piven, 33, are single.

That was Sean Murray as Ensign Terry Guitry. Earlier he played Zane Grey Hart in TV's Harts of the West and Thackery Binx, the boy turned into a cat by witches Bette Midler, Kathy Najimy and Sarah Jessica Parker, in Hocus Pocus.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
