Chamber gears up for garage sale

By Kitt Jennings
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Frantic people dash insanely about clutching fistfuls of cash, dragging their entire family along. Residents try desperately to sell anything they own, and people awaken much earlier to prepare for the onslaught.

No, this is not a quick glance at a financial panic, it's just the annual citywide garage sale.

A project group of 100 to 150 Hereford residents are expected to prepare for Hereford's annual citywide garage sale, which will be Saturday.

Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce executive vice president Sid Shaw said Monday the garage sale participants did about $40,000 in business last year.

"That's phenomenal, isn't it?" Shaw said. He expects a similar financial turnout for this year's sale, and likely an even-larger profit.

In an attempt to draw more business at the garage sale, bargain-hunters can register at the chamber to win $250 Hereford Bucks.

"Our purpose is to have everyone in Hereford participate in a one-day event that will bring people from out of town to spend their money," said Shaw.

To publicize Saturday's event, representatives have traveled to Nazareth, Bovinia, Canyon, Amarillo, Dammit and other towns to place ads in papers and tack up posters.

"We've also used The Brand and service spots on the radio," said Shaw.

The Chamber can waive all city costs and offer sale permits for $10 until 5 p.m. today.

Commission moving on new budget

By Donald Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

It's a tedious job, but the Deaf Smith County commissioners have to do it.

The commissioners moved quickly to deal with several items on Monday's meeting agenda so they could settle in for some number-crunching.

The county commission is preparing the budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, and part of the preparations involve a review of the budget requests submitted by each department.

At the last meeting, the commissioners discussed the need for more accurate figures on housing City of Hereford inmates in the county jail, Bull Barn rental fees, new vehicles in the Sheriff's Department and use of Noxious Weed District funds to hire extra help to mow weeds.

Also at the last meeting, the commissioners had been informed it

Hospital has first prospect

Board conducts session with candidate for HRMC administrator's position

By Donald Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors have interviewed the first candidate for the vacant administrator's position at Hereford Regional Medical Center.

The directors met with Larry Langley, chief financial officer with the Borger Health Care Center, Monday night at the HRMC board room.

Langley was identified as prospective HRMC administrator by Search One, the Eu less-based recruiting firm hired by the board to carry out the search for a permanent hospital chief executive officer.

Board president Dean Crofford said this morning the interview appeared to be good. He also said the recruiting company handling the search is in discussions with three prospects and he expects the board to meet with another candidate within two weeks.

"It's going to be one of those times where we have to make sure we have the right guy. We can't afford to bring in anyone else who just stays eight or nine months and leaves," Crofford said.

Search One of Euless was retained by the board to carry out the search for a permanent hospital chief executive officer.

The position became vacant in May when John Studsrud submitted his resignation, less than a year on the job.

Studsrud had been named HRMC administrator last fall replacing Jim Robinson, who resigned in February 1998 after a conflict with the hospital's medical staff.

The board turned to the Texas Organization of Rural and Community Hospitals (TORCH) Manage-

GOP: Clinton's eyeing accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following an amiable meeting at the White House, Republican congressional leaders are saying President Clinton seems ready to work with them on re-vamping Medicare, cutting taxes and other budget issues.

But the first face-to-face budget meeting this year between the president and top lawmakers produced no specific agreements in the battle over how to spend $2.9 trillion in projected budget surpluses over the next decade.

"We want cooperation, not partisanship," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., after the hour-long Cabinet Room session Monday night. "His tone was the same."

Even House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, among Clinton's most outspoken foes, said "there's no doubt" Clinton's message was that he was ready to seriously tackle the issues separating the White House and Congress.

Republicans and Democrats alike cast the tone of the meeting positively, which considering the distrust many Republicans feel for Clinton might be a major achievement in itself.

But members of both parties speaking on condition of anonymity said there was no movement on numbers. And they said there was no change in the likely scenario that Clinton would veto a GOP-written tax cut and perhaps some spending bills before any substantive negotiations start, probably in September or later.

When the meeting was over, the dispute between the two sides loomed as large as ever.

While they generally agree the $1.9 trillion part of the surplus generated by Social

U.S., Canada slap tariffs on EU goods in trade tiff

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. consumers with a penchant for Belgian chocolates and French mineral water will find it more expensive to satisfy their cravings because of the latest trade spat with Europe.

Trade officials in both the United States and Canada pledged to act swiftly after independent arbitrators on Monday gave them to go-ahead to impose 100 percent penalty tariffs on $124 million in European goods in retaliation for the EU's ban on imports of hormone-treated beef.

The World Trade Organization panel awarded Washington $116.8 million per year, while Canada was awarded $7.7 million per year.

"While we believe the arbitrator significantly underestimated the actual trade damage to U.S. beef and beef variety meat exports, we accept the arbitrator's findings," U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said Monday.

A report from the independent World Trade Organization panel approved the sanctions at a level of about half of what the United States had asked for but twice what the EU had claimed was reasonable.

"We still believe that providing EU consumers with a choice through labeling of U.S. beef offers an appropriate solution to this impasse," he said.

But pending any settlement, officials said they will publish in the next few weeks a final list of the $116.8 million in additional European luxury goods that will be targeted for 100 percent tariffs. That list will be drawn from an initial target list in the beef dispute of $900 million in European imports ranging from foie gras and truffles to Belgian chocolates and mineral water.

The Canadian list includes beef, cucumbers, gingerbread, gini, vodka and soup. The Canadians were awarded one-seventh of what they claimed.

The tariffs are likely to force the affected products out of the market entirely in both countries.

The three arbitrators rejected an EU claim that the United States and Canada should provide a definite list of the items which would face sanctions before approval was given.

Local roundup

Boosters caution local merchants

An out-of-town company has been soliciting advertising for sports schedules that have not been endorsed by the Hereford Independent School District or the Whiteface Booster Club, according to club spokesman Mike Power.

Power said the booster club's only sanctioned fund-raiser is the one it conducts for advertisements sold for the football program.

"All other solicitations are from outside sources and should be considered money not kept in Hereford," Power stated.

Local firms generally have generated the funding for the Whiteface schedules and calendars. These firms are confirmed by the athletic department and the booster club.

Local merchants are at their own risk in purchasing advertising with an outside company.

Fourth of July STEP results

Texas launches diabetes initiative
Project seeks to identify and treat early stage diabetes

AUSTIN (AP) - An estimated 1.6 million Texans have diabetes, but only about half realize it.

That's why state officials on Monday unveiled a two-year pilot project to identify and treat diabetics. The program also will concentrate on helping the growing number of children being diagnosed.

Uncontrolled diabetes can lead to a stroke, blindness and kidney and heart disease.

"We are at a crossroads today," said Health Commissioner William Archer. "If we do not do something today then we look in the next 20 years to see significant numbers of Texans with blindness, kidney failure and death."

The Texas Diabetes Prevention and Control Initiative will be funded with a $1 million donation from health care company Bristol-Myers Squibb, said Archer. It is the largest donation to the Department of Health, he said.

"We recognize the critical need to work in concert with governments, medical institutions, international organizations and community-based groups to effectively address disease prevention and treatment," said Bristol-Myers Squibb area vice president Anthony Coles.

The state will spend $200,000 to alert the public of early signs of diabetes and for prevention efforts under the initiative, Archer said.

Public awareness programs will be focused on areas where there is a high propensity for the disease, including black and Hispanic neighborhoods, he said.

There also will be an effort to set up screening programs in rural areas, including West Texas, Archer said.

Another major aim will be to identify the thousands of Texas who don't know they have the disease, Archer said. The private-public initiative will set aside $400,000 for communities to use for diabetes screening, he said.

"We have to find the Texans that don't know they have diabetes because people with diabetes can live well," Archer said.

It's particularly important to target children who are at risk, he said.

"We need to get into the schools at an earlier age to stop the dynamic where we see 12-year-olds with significant diabetes," Archer said.

Texas has seen a significant increase in the number of obese children, Archer said. Obesity is a risk factor for diabetes, as are high or low blood sugar, family history and limited physical exercise.

Another $400,000 will be used to educate health care providers in the latest treatment technologies. Archer said some doctors don't use the protocol set out by the Texas Diabetes Council, also part of the initiative.

"Medical education and technology move at such a rapid rate that our ability to keep up with it without provider education can be quite limited," said Coles of Bristol-Myers.

Screening and treatments may start in October.

He thinks secret wedding will make marriage last

Creators Syndicate

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am 31 years old and living with a wonderful man. I want to marry "Raymond," and he wants to marry me, but he refuses to have a formal wedding. He said he has been the best man, usher and groomsman several times, and the married couples later divorced. As a result of all those failed marriages, Raymond is terrified of elaborate wedding ceremonies. He says he loves me and would be willing to be married by a justice of the peace, if I promise not to tell anyone until he's certain the marriage will last. We would then have a full-scale wedding with all the trimmings if I wanted one "just for show."

I love Raymond and am willing to go along with his proposal, but I am an only child and my mother would be extremely upset if she found out we were married and didn't tell her. What should I do? — Undecided in the South

Dear Un.: At age 31, you should feel comfortable about leading your own life. It is not essential that your mother know about your secret marriage now, although if you decide to have a big wedding later on, you should tell her. If you are looking for approval, you have mine. Mazel tov.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 52 years old and am married to a wonderful 29-year-old woman. We have two beautiful children. "Liz" is from South America and is in this country legally. The problem is her family.

When our second child was born, Liz's mother, "Isabel," came to visit and help with the baby. The first thing my mother-in-law did was pressure me to help her find a job illegally. I told Isabel she was placing my wife's immigrant status in jeopardy if we allowed her to stay with us past her visa expiration date, but she didn't care. Isabel also brought over relatives and friends and asked me to help them get work. Now, she wants me to falsify information so that her two younger children can attend high school here.

Ann, I treat Liz's family like gold, and we have never had a cross word, but I'm getting very nervous about all this "illegal" conniving, and I am at the point where I want to turn them in to the authorities. If I do this, it will surely destroy our marriage. I'm worried to death about immigration officials, but I don't want to lose my wife. Please help me. — Rocks and Hard Places in the East

Dear Rocks: Tell your super-aggressive mother-in-law to get off your back, and let her know that you flatly refuse to engage in any additional illegal activities. I urge you to see an attorney at once about getting your wife U.S. citizenship. Your lawyer should advise you every step of the way. You don't have to report Isabel, but please keep everything on the up and up, and resist all pressure to do otherwise. Peace of mind is worth a lot.

Dear Ann Landers: I agree with the writer who said people in Southern California are "different." Not responding to an RSVP is typical. This shocked me when I first moved to L.A. from New York, but now, I am neither surprised nor upset by anything people do.

Personally, I find Southern Californians delightfully flexible. They have the rare ability to understand the cosmic importance of contemplating one's navel instead of responding to a dinner invitation. I guess lying in a bathing suit in mid-December can affect the brain. — Kirk in L.A.

Dear Kirk: You will get no negative comment from me on people who live in California. My column appears in several newspapers in the Golden State, and I am not about to take a crack at them. Also, I have a sister who lives there.

Artist fulfills mother's dream by illustrating children's books

GROVES, Texas — When Norma O'Rene Montgomery Buvens was a young girl growing up in the early 1900s on a goat ranch at Pipe Creek in Bandera County, she would take her parents' Poland China pigs from their pens, bring them into the house and dress them up in her Sunday best.

"My mother had such an adventuresome soul," said Normareen Buvens Smith, 68, of Groves. "To her, the animals were her baby dolls, but of course, when she put them down to see how they looked, they would run all through the house and tear up her beautiful dresses. Oh, the stories she would tell."

Smith said her late mother wrote 21 short stories based on those childhood days in turn-of-the-century Bandera County, with the hope that someday they would be published as a series of children's books. Thirteen years after the mother's death, the daughter fulfills the dream by providing the illustrations to make the series a reality.

"Just Inside the Gate," published by Eakin Press in Austin, is the first book of Buvens' series. Smith said she is working on illustrations for her mother's next two books in the series, scheduled to come out next year.

Smith described her mother, who died in 1986 at the age of 85, as a natural-born storyteller with a remarkable memory.

"She could remember everything from the time she was nine months old, and so her stories are all absolutely factual," Smith said.

Buvens' stories are all about the antics of her and her brother, Orman, on and around the family ranch. "She thought that anything he could do, she could do just as well," Smith said.

She recalled one story in which her mother was walking across a stream on stepping stones while holding a fish she had caught. A large water moccasin swam up to her and stood up on its tail, obviously wanting the fish, but she didn't want to surrender her prize. (She eventually gave the snake what it wanted, at the urging of her brother).

Smith laughed as she repeated the tale. "I used to be entertained by the hour by her stories," she said.

On another occasion, young Norma fell into the river, but her petticoats kept her afloat until her brother could jump in and keep her from being swept away.

"It's a wonderful thing to have these stories," Smith said. "Mother's stories are the family's living history that she's passed down to all of us. She read her stories to my six children and I've read them to my seven grandchildren."

Smith remembers her mother as being beautiful, funny and kind.

"When I was growing up, she always made even the most ordinary things seem interesting," she said. "She was a talker and this was before television, so she entertained everybody."

When Smith was born in Many, La., her mother had a photographic studio, which was most unusual for a woman in Sabine Parish at the time.

"She enjoyed art and photography and my father indulged her," Smith said.

Which was fortunate, Smith said, because her father, Joseph Hamilton Buvens, was killed in a car accident when she was 5, and her mother supported the family with the studio.

Smith learned an appreciation for photography at a young age from her mother. "She let me come in the darkroom with her, handle film and make prints," she said. "Whatever she was doing, I could do with her."

She also encouraged her love of music. Smith recalls that in 1938, her mother and her grandmother, Florence Christina O'Hanly Montgomery (known as "Mama" in the book), arranged for a large truck to come to the house with several different styles of pianos in the back.

"They let me choose my own piano and that was a big moment in my life," she said.

Her grandfather, William Jasper Montgomery, a teacher (known as "Papa" in the book) encouraged her love of reading.

Eventually all of these positive influences would lead Smith to become a music and reading teacher.

While teaching in Orange, Port Arthur and Port Neches-Groves, Smith read her mother's stories in her reading classes, which delighted her mother as much as it did her students.

But until 15 years ago, art wasn't something she counted among her talents. "Two years before mother died, she kept telling me that she wanted me to illustrate her stories, so I went to Lamar University to take art classes."

Painting became her first love. She's won best of show awards at local art shows and recently won a Grumbacher Award for a watercolor of a blooming shell ginger in her back yard. "I love to paint flowers, butterflies and babies," she said.

Virginia Messer of Eakin Press loved the stories, especially "Just Inside the Gate."

"She said it was exciting and had good moral values and people needed those things now and she really wanted to do it."

To do research for the book's illustrations, Smith went with her family to Bandera County to photograph locations.

For "Just Inside the Gate," Smith painted with oils and used watercolors and colored pencils.

"I've used all mediums for this book, but I think the next ones will be all watercolor," she said. "I really love acrylics for many reasons and did the cover as an acrylic painting, but everyone who looks at my paintings, from the publisher to my family, really think my watercolors are my best work."

West scheduled to give program

In affiliation with the Alzheimer's Association, Panhandle Chapter, the Hereford support group for family caregivers of persons with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias, will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday in Fellowship of Believers Church, 245 N. Kingwood.

Sheila West, executive director of the Alzheimer's

Association, Panhandle Chapter, will be the guest resource person for Thursday's meeting. She will present material that will help the caregivers to assess the cognitive functioning of their loved one. This assessment will help the caregiver to design a specific and personalized plan of care.

Friends, relatives and neighbors of these brave caregivers are encouraged to offer to stay with the person with Alzheimer's to allow the caregiver a rest. Respite care is vital for these caregivers whose days are typically 36-hours long.

Green Monster the All-Star focus at Fenway

BOSTON (AP) — Billy Wagner, Sean Casey and a bunch of their new National League teammates could barely contain themselves. Not only was this their first All-Star appearance, but it was coming at Fenway Park.

"I saw my first major league game there, back when I was in the Cape Cod League," Wagner said Monday. "I remember walking up the runway and the Green Monster popping out. You never forget it."

The Houston reliever hoped to add to those memories tonight, preferably by preventing any AL hitter from clearing the famous left-field wall. Then there was 10-time All-Star Ken Griffey Jr., who planned to claim a piece of the park.

"Chip some paint off the wall, put it in a bag and take it home," Griffey said. "There's something I will take from this ballpark before I leave."

Griffey made his mark Monday night, overcoming a monstrous performance by Mark McGwire to win the home run derby for the second straight year. It was his best effort yet at Fenway, where he's connected for only eight of his 379 career homers.

"It's a good ballpark to hit in," Junior said. "It's a classic. There are certain ballparks that have a lot of tradition behind them, and this is one of them. And before they tear it down, they've having an All-Star game here."

Just in time for 15-time All-Star Tony Gwynn.

"This is the one old park I haven't played in," the San Diego outfielder said. "I saw what Wade Boggs used to do here. I'm looking forward to doing it myself."

Gwynn, tied with Boggs at 2,982 career hits, won't be able to help the National League try to extend its 40-28-1 edge. Hobbled by injuries, he'll sit out as Boston ace Pedro Martinez starts for the AL against Philadelphia's Curt Schilling.

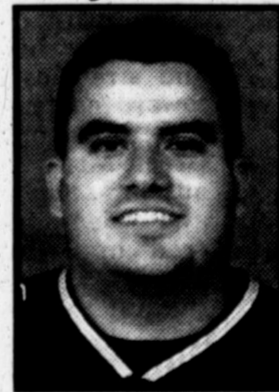

Still, Gwynn wanted to take batting practice and maybe field a few balls off the wall. How excited was he about seeing Fenway? He had a book detailing the history of the ballpark in his hotel room.

Likewise, Casey was eager to take some swings in a park

Soccer team takes New York

U.S. Women's Soccer team takes celebration to the New York with various activities

NEW YORK (AP) — In training, the U.S. women's soccer team loaded up on pasta and other foods packed with carbohydrates. On the players' first night in New York, some celebrated their World Cup victory over China by going out for Chinese food — and then dancing at the China Club.

The choices of cuisine and nightlife were just coincidence, backup goalkeeper Saskia Webber insisted with a slight grin.

"No, it has nothing to do with it," she said Monday night as she and about seven teammates entered the China Grill restaurant in midtown Manhattan to a standing ovation from patrons.

One of the diners was Jim Hook, a youth soccer referee from Memphis. "This is a tremendous thrill," he gushed. "All my kids love them."

Another diner, attorney Lisa Babiskin, 27, also was thrilled for the players.

"They should absolutely go out and celebrate their accomplishment," she said.

The players hoisted champagne toasts after a dizzying tour of New York for appearances on network shows from "Good Morning America" and "Today" to CNN and Fox News Channel.

While some of the players headed home after the grueling three-week World Cup tournament, others stayed in New York for a rally set for today.

On Wednesday, some players will participate in the Ladies Professional Golf Association JAL Big Apple Classic Pro-Am in suburban New Rochelle, while others will attend the WNBA All-Star Game at Madison Square Garden that night.

"We're sharing it with New York City because big things happen here," said Brandi Chastain, standing amid midtown skyscrapers and sharing the sidewalk with the bustling suit-and-tie crowd.

It was her game-winning penalty kick Saturday at the Rose Bowl that set off a whirlwind of activity. The players were welcomed at Disneyland on Sunday, then flew overnight, landing at Newark Airport at 4:30 a.m. and piling on a bus to Manhattan.

Mia Hamm also was glad to be celebrating in New York. "It's fun," she said. "I love New York. There's so many things to do and so many things to see."

A lunchtime crowd gawked at the women in matching lavender shirts. Then the realization hit the onlookers: These were those soccer players.

If there were any doubt, the players locked arms and began singing "We are the Champions!"

"It's all worth it," said Chastain, who had not slept since early Sunday. "We're promoting women's soccer."

Chastain was on the 1991 U.S. World Cup championship team and remembered one solitary media representative greeting the team when it returned to the United States that year.

"There were 2,000 media credentialed this year," she said. "More people are paying attention to women's soccer, and we feel very proud of that."

The media push was on full blast. Full-page ads from major companies like Nike, Chevrolet and Budweiser saluted the victory in newspapers. Harper Collins trumpeted a new book by star player Mia Hamm.

Chastain thinks she and her teammates proved a crucial point.

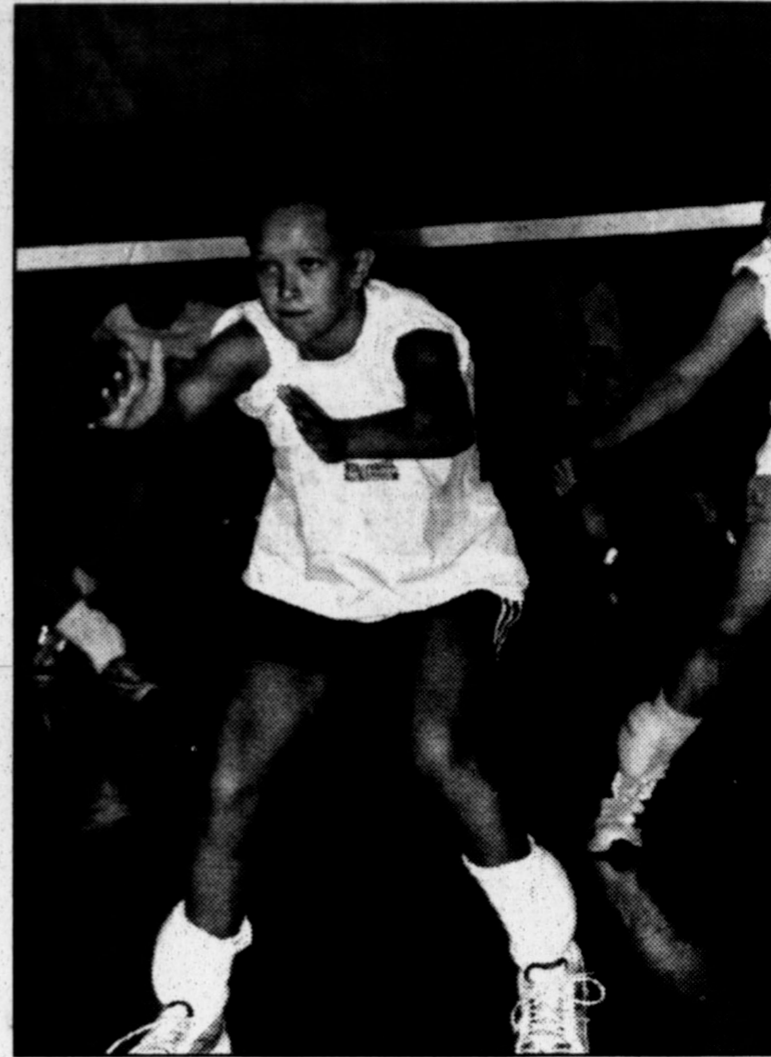

"Ninety thousand in the Rose Bowl and record television ratings gives validity to what we've been saying all along," she said. "There is a place for this team in pro sports."

After dinner Monday, around 11 p.m., eight of the players headed to The China Club.

Webber, the backup goalie, said her brother suggested the club as a great spot for some Monday night dancing.

Club owner Michael Barrett welcomed the champions. "First the China Grill, then The China Club, and they beat China," he said. "There you go."

Network apologizes for accusations against Astros owner

HOUSTON (AP) — The chief executive of Telemundo Group Inc. has apologized to Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane for allegations last month by executives of KTMD-TV that McLane made derogatory remarks about Hispanics.

Roland Hernandez, chairman and CEO of Los Angeles-based Telemundo, said Monday he thinks KTMD station manager Marco Camacho misunderstood McLane during a June 3 discussion.

Telemundo owns KTMD and six other Spanish-language television stations in the United States.

Camacho and KTMD sales manager Rod Rodriguez alleged that McLane made belittling remarks about Hispanics preceding a dinner in which the Houston Advertising Federation presented McLane its Trailblazer Award for community service.

The KTMD executives said McLane told them he does not market to the Hispanic community because it was a complicated game, because Hispanics do not read newspapers, and because Hispanic fans do not like Astrodome food and they buy cheap seats.

McLane cut short a vacation and returned to Houston when he heard the accusations and vehemently denied that he made any disrespectful remarks.

Hernandez flew to Houston in late June and sat with McLane in the Astro owner's field-level box during a game in the Astrodome. Hernandez said Monday that McLane requested the apology.

"Based upon my inquiry into the matter, and in reliance upon your representations to me, the outstanding reputation which you have earned over a long business career, and the high regard in which you are held by many outstanding individuals in this country, I believe that you did not make any racially motivated comments to our station management," Hernandez wrote McLane.

"Further, I believe that you and the Houston Astros strongly support Hispanics. Please accept my apology, and the apology of Telemundo, for any difficulties this situation has caused you and your family."

McLane said Monday he is relieved by the public apology.

"The untruthful accusations made by their Houston television station last month have caused great pain and anguish for me, my family and the Astros organization," McLane said. "The story went worldwide in a number of minutes and severely damaged my reputation."

"Having spent a lifetime honoring the values of integrity and honesty, this episode has been unsettling. Despite a rush to judgment by some, this action by Telemundo, hopefully, will help to speed the healing process."

Camacho and Rodriguez did not immediately message left by The Associated Press on Monday afternoon.

Camacho declined comment, according to a KTMD spokesman. Hernandez said Camacho still maintains he accurately interpreted McLane's remarks.

In a June 11 statement, Camacho tempered his allegations, saying he considers McLane "an honorable man and a man of integrity" and said it's clear McLane is neither biased nor insensitive toward the Hispanic community.

Telemundo owns KTMD and six other Spanish-language TV stations in the United States.

Broncos sign Tech's Reagor

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos have reached a contract agreement with second-round draft pick Montae Reagor.

Reagor, a defensive end selected 57th overall out of Texas Tech, agreed Monday to a four-year contract worth close to $2 million, his agent Vann McElroy said.

The 6-foot-1, 256-pound Reagor holds the Texas Tech records for career sacks (24.5) and tackles for loss (47). He also set the school's single-season record last year with 19 tackles for loss.

Reagor is the fourth of Denver's 12 draft picks to reach a contract agreement.

FENWAY

he'd only seen on television. "I'm going to try to hit a couple over in BP, just to say I hit one over the wall," the Cincinnati first baseman said.

Milwaukee's Jeromy Burnitz had other goals. Normally a right fielder, he was to start in left for the NL.

"I just hope I don't get a bad bounce off the wall and get embarrassed," he said.

Reds reliever Scott Williamson brought a camcorder to the home run derby and filmed all around Fenway.

"To have an opportunity to step on a field that Ted Williams played on, it's great," he said.

Williams, who will throw out the ceremonial first ball, sounded less enthused about his old haunts.

"No, I'm not sentimental about it. I want to see a new ballpark where the seats are bigger," the 80-year-old Splendid Splinter said. "I've heard a lot of fans say, 'Oh, geez, I wouldn't even think about going anyplace else.' It wasn't that great. The park is just an old park."

With a lot of history wrapped up in that wall.

At times, it was made of wood, brick, concrete and sheet metal. Now, the side facing the hitters is all tin and stretches about 240 feet toward center field.

It became known as the Green Monster in 1947 when ads for Lifebuoy, Gem Blades and other products were covered up with green paint. There's also a thin ladder running to the top — grounds crew members use it to retrieve balls that wind up in the 23-foot screen on top.

One other fact about the wall: The initials of former owner Thomas Austin Yawkey and his wife, Jean Remington Yawkey, appear on it in Morse code. Easy to overlook, a series of dots and dashes for "T-A-Y" and "J-R-Y" show up in the vertical white lines to the left of pitchers' numbers on the out-of-town scoreboard.

Hugh Bradley of the Red Sox hit the first shot over the wall on April 26, 1912 — "Few of the fans who have been out to Fenway Park believed it was possible," the Boston Herald reported the next day.

Sammy Sosa hit his first major league homer over the Monster off Roger Clemens in 1989. McGwire hit 18 home runs at Fenway.

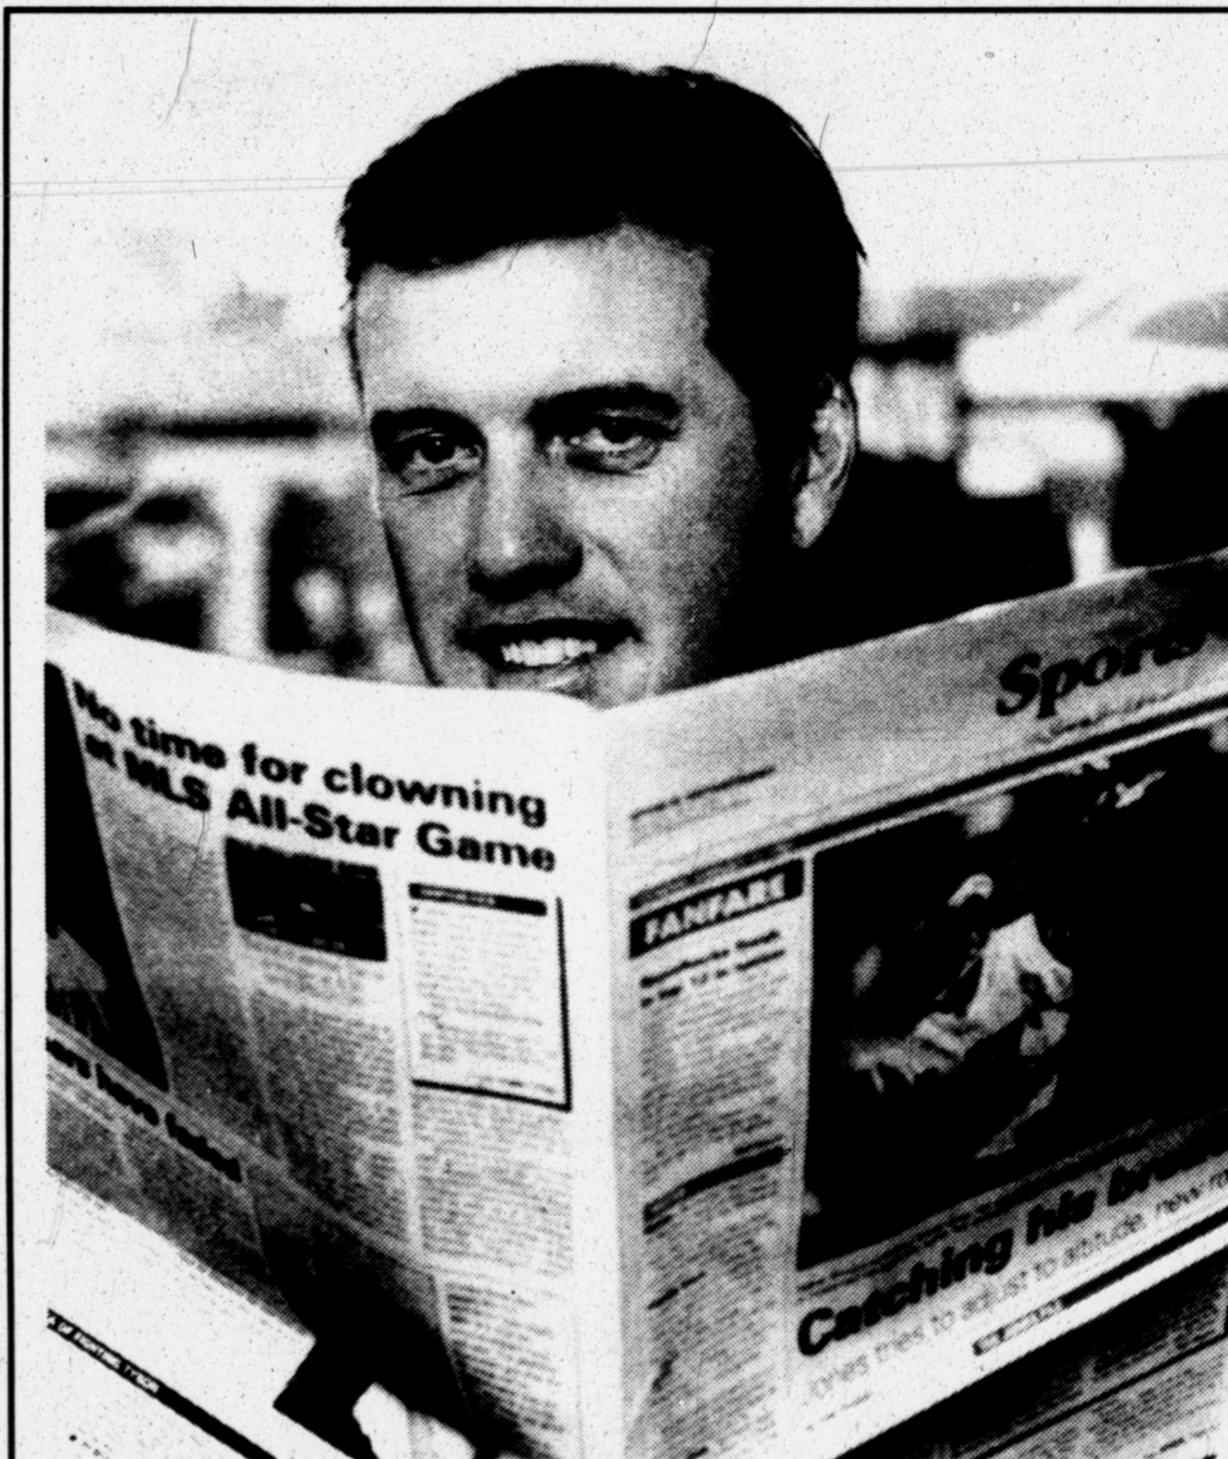

Rocky Colavito connected for the AL in the 1961 All-Star game at Fenway, stopped by rain after nine innings for a 1-1 tie.

Williams preferred to pull the ball to right. He put on a one-man show in the 1946 All-Star game at Fenway with two home runs, including a drive off Rip Sewell's "eephus" pitch, in going 4-for-4 with five RBIs in a 12-0 rout.

Marked at 310 feet down the line in left, many believe the wall isn't even that far.

"The wall's 290 feet," Williams insisted. "When I first got there in left field, they had a rise out there to let you know you're getting near the fence. But that was taken out."

"But still I knew the wall was only 290 feet. And I had a good conception of how close I was," he said.

"Encourage your children to read a newspaper every day. It will make them stars in the most important game of all—the game of life."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
 Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

CLASSIFIEDS/NEWS

The sale of a large locally-owned and established business, located in an attractive and proven traffic area and generating average gross sales in excess of $438,000, is being considered as a retirement option. The sale of the business would include the property, building and company vehicle, store fixtures, an extensive current inventory and accounts receivable if so desired - asking price $300,000. Seller will liquidate soon if no suitable buyers are found. Interested parties should direct all inquiries to P.O. Box 673CT with name, return address and phone number. Only serious offers will be entertained.

CAMPAIGN 2000 Presidential candidate fires salvo at GOP, exits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing the Republican establishment of leaving behind its principles, presidential candidate Sen. Bob Smith of New Hampshire has decided to leave the party and become an independent. "Pollsters and consultants should not be ... leading our country," Smith said today. "That's what's been happening to the Republican Party." Smith indicated he will continue his campaign for the presidency but under the banner of another party. "The American people want a voice and they are going to get it in this campaign," he said today on NBC's "Today." His platform, he said, is unchanged: "It's pro-life, it's pro-Second Amendment, it's pro-military, it's pro-sovereignty, it's pro-character and integrity." "Many who want to lead our party — specifically candidate Bush — won't take a position on these issues," Smith said, referring to GOP front-runner George W. Bush, the Texas governor. Interviewed Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live," Smith said: "I came into the Republican Party on principle, and I'm leaving on principle." He decried leaders in his party "who believe that electing people with an 'R' next to their name is more important than principle." He said he has been speaking with other political groups about his race for the presidency, including the U.S. Taxpayers Party. "I'm certainly interested," Smith said of the Taxpayers Party. But, he added, "It would be very presumptuous to say that the nomination is mine." As Smith became the first dropout of the campaign for the Republican nomination, Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, weighed the fate of his presidential campaign after signaling over the weekend he was considering quitting the race. Several Republicans said an announcement of Kasich's plans could come as early as Wednesday.

In the days leading up to Smith's announcement, a string of GOP leaders have blasted his decision. Jim Nicholson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, told Smith in a letter the defection was a "serious mistake for you personally, with only a marginal political impact — and a counterproductive one at that." On Monday, New Hampshire Republican Chairman Steven Duprey continued the criticism, saying Smith had bailed out of the party because his message could not distinguish him among the field of GOP candidates. "America has never liked a sore loser," Duprey said on CNN's "Crossfire." Smith brushed off the attacks by the party leaders. "This is the establishment. They're interested in poll numbers. They're interested in how much money you have. They're interested in your name recognition," he said. "They've walked away from the principles."

VICE PRESIDENT GORE Called a 'stuffed shirt'

Bradley is called 'electable'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Calling Vice President Al Gore a "stuffed shirt," a powerful county Democratic leader in New York says Bill Bradley is "more electable" in the presidential race. While stopping short of an outright endorsement of the former New Jersey senator's bid for the Democratic nomination, David Alpert of Westchester County said Monday that while he could "live with either ... I think Bradley is the more exciting candidate." "When you're putting together a whole package, I think he's more electable," Alpert said. "I think Gore is a great guy, but I think he's — I'm probably using the wrong word — a stuffed shirt." Alpert said he hoped to make an endorsement in the before the end of summer. Westchester is the state's eighth largest of 62 counties in terms of Democratic enrollment, with 210,000 party members. It is located just north of New York City and is considered one of the politically crucial suburbs surrounding the city in statewide campaigns. A spokesman for Gore, Chris Lehane, said: "We're very pleased with the depth and breadth of our support throughout New York and we'll continue working to make (it) broader."

Forbes celebrating No. 52, takes potshots at Congress

STEAMBOAT ROCK, Iowa (AP) — Steve Forbes took time to scorn congressional Republicans and the "games they play," but his real passion was focused on the red, white and blue birthday cake and the 300 activists celebrating No. 52 with him. "Ground forces, the volunteers who are willing to do the work is what we're after," said Forbes. Rumbling across the state in a couple of high-tech buses, Forbes was collecting backers the old-fashioned way by meeting them one at a time, but few computer-era tricks were missed along the way. "You put all that together, message, ground forces, resources, that's how you have a chance to win," said Forbes.

He wrapped up his first colorful day on a farmhouse lawn munching pork chops to celebrate turning 52 next week. It was one of five grassroots stops, all part of a week-long tour to 26 of Iowa's 99 counties. Forbes proclaimed himself delighted with the down-home focus and promised more of the same as the campaign for a big straw poll next month gets more intense and the state's leadoff precinct caucuses near. "This is heaven on earth for a campaign," Forbes said. On the swing, Forbes was carefully selecting a message each day, and strategists created a high-tech rolling circus to take maximum advantage.

On Monday, he was slashing the "high priests of high finance," arguing that the Federal Reserve is tightening monetary policy and damaging farmers. It's a big issue in Iowa, where farm prices are at historic lows. He shifts gears today, hammering his anti-tax theme, arguing "we're all outsiders in the eyes of Washington." Wednesday he moves to anti-abortion themes, courting social conservatives leery of his position on hot-button social issues. Those themes are delivered in day-long strings of grassroots meetings, but that was only on the surface. Forbes was rolling around the state in banner-festooned buses.

From Page A1 would cost about $14,000 for a paint job on the historic E.B. Black House. However, Deaf Smith County Museum Director Paula Edwards said Monday she has received a bid from a painting contractor for $8,000. She also said the fire alarm system in the Black House is obsolete and needs to be replaced. A quote of $2,000 to replace the fire alarm system was submitted by Paul Hamilton of WT Services. The museum has enough money in its budget to pay for the fire alarm system replacement. During discussion, Commissioner Wayne Betzen asked about income from the rental of the Black House. Edwards said the museum charges a rental fee of $35 for showers and $50 for weddings, but totals for the year weren't available at the meeting. Betzen asked about raising the rental fee and Edwards said it would be considered; however, she wants the fee to stay moderate so people will continue to use the house. In other business, the commissioners tabled the appointment of election judges and alternate judges.

The Corpus Christi native formerly served as CEO of Mesa (Ariz.) General Hospital. Search One will conduct the search on a contingency basis. If the hospital board should conduct its own search and hire an administrator, it will not be required to pay anything. However, if Search One conducts the full search and finds the candidate who ultimately is hired at HRMC, the firm's fee will be 15 percent of the first year's compensation package. Using the salary and benefits package for Studsrud as a guide, the hospital board could be looking at a fee of about $12,500. TORCH, which conducted the search for the interim administrator, is receiving $9,000 per month until a permanent administrator is in place. Search One defines its mission as to provide the ideal candidate for each client. Its recruiters generally have five years of experience in the field. Its services include permanent and temporary staffing, and contract recruiting in a variety of industries, including healthcare, accounting, finance, information technology and human resources.

NAACP, AT&T join to create tech centers

NEW YORK (AP) — To help bridge the "digital divide" — the gap between white people and blacks and Hispanics in access to the Internet — the NAACP and AT&T will partner to create technology centers in 20 cities that will provide computer training and Internet seminars. "The technological segregation known as the digital divide must be narrowed," NAACP President Kweisi Mfume said Monday. Toward that end, Mfume announced that through the program AT&T will provide hardware, software and on-site support for technology in the centers. "The centers will be open after the school doors close so parents and children can learn computer usage together," Mfume said. "The old and the young learning together will help reduce that divide." NAACP spokeswoman Sheila Douglas said that outside of Baltimore, where the NAACP is headquartered, locations of the other 19 sites are yet to be determined. Ameritech Corp. and the National Urban League announced last week they will spend $350,000 to build five new Internet community centers in Aurora, Ill., Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis and Milwaukee. And 3Com Corp. said it will spend $1 million in donated equipment and training in 10 cities to help teach students to be computer network engineers. Last week, a Commerce Department report, "Falling Through the Net," said the disparity on the Internet between whites and black and Hispanic Americans is growing. The report found about 47 percent of all whites own computers, but fewer than half as many blacks do. About 25.5 percent of Hispanics own computers, but 55 percent of Asian-Americans do. Asian families also are most likely to have Internet access, with 36 percent online. The report also found a child in a low-income white family is three times as likely to have Internet access as a child in a comparable black family, and four times as likely as a Hispanic child. Most troubling for government experts were indications these disparities can't be blamed solely on differences in income. Among families earning $15,000 to $35,000, for example, more than 33 percent of whites owned computers, but only 19 percent of blacks did. That gap has widened nearly 62 percent since 1994 despite plunging computer prices. Mfume also announced a new national campaign that could involve lawsuits against entertainment industry giants to end the scarcity of black characters on television.

Senate is theater as debate starts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political theatrics were on full display as the Senate kicked off debate on proposed new federal restrictions on HMOs. But behind the pep rallies and rhetoric, the debate also showcased fundamental differences between Republicans and Democrats over the role of government.

"This is really a difference in approach ... as profound as anything that divides Republicans and Democrats," Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Monday as debate began.

His GOP colleagues did not disagree.

Democrats want a broad "patients' bill of rights" that covers as many Americans as possible, and that was the first issue to hit the Senate floor. Democrats also want to allow patients to sue HMOs and collect damages when HMOs withhold treatment.

Republicans want to minimize new federal regulations, covering only those people whose health plans don't fall under state laws. On at least a dozen issues, their bill takes a more limited approach than the Democrats do.

President Clinton has urged Congress to pass HMO legislation even if it means slightly higher insurance premiums.

In a bizarre twist, each party preferred to debate the other side's legislation, hoping to spotlight its weaknesses. That led to Republican leaders introducing the Democratic bill, and the Democrats bringing forth the GOP bill.

Majority Republicans are all but certain to pass their legislation. But Democrats hope to win over a handful of Republicans on individual issues as they vote on a string of amendments.

Votes were expected today on issues including emergency room care, how many people are covered by the bill and a GOP proposal to allow the self-employed to take a tax deduction on the cost of health insurance.

A final vote on the entire bill is set for Thursday. Republicans are expected to use the final amendment to substitute the legislation they prefer for whatever remains on the table.

Before a single vote was cast, the rhetoric was already flying high.

"We support a patients' bill of rights. Republicans support a patients' bill of wrongs, a bill of goods, a profit protection program rather than a patient protection program," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., told to pep rally of some 200 cheering lobbyists and other supporters.

A half-dozen human props wearing white doctors' coats lined up behind the podium. Among the speakers was Ray Cerniglia, who quietly talked about his son Matthew, who died at age 14 after his HMO refused to pay for a cancer treatment.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton begins raising money for possible Senate campaign.

First lady beginning effort to raise campaign money

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Getting into the real nitty gritty of politics, Hillary Rodham Clinton has begun raising money for herself for the first time.

A spokesman said Monday that Mrs. Clinton has begun dialing for dollars from the White House for her Senate campaign in New York and will have her first fundraising event this week in Manhattan.

Howard Wolfson said Mrs. Clinton has been making calls to potential donors from the residential quarters of the White House using a private phone line or a personal cellular phone.

"I can tell you three things" about the fund raising, Wolfson said. "One is, it's a necessity. Two is, it's going very well. And, three is, that it's all being done appropriately and legally."

President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore came under heavy criticism for fundraising activities during their 1996 re-election campaign and several of their fundraisers have faced criminal charges in connection with that. The Democratic National Committee had to return $3 million in donations from the race.

Wolfson refused to say how much money Mrs. Clinton has raised. She formed her exploratory committee last week.

Wolfson said Mrs. Clinton would hold a $1,000-a-person event in Manhattan on Thursday morning for fewer than 100 people. That session will also serve as an organizational meeting for her fund-raising efforts with those on hand forming her core group of campaign fund-raisers.

Among those expected to attend the event are Wall Street tycoon Roger Altman, who was deputy treasury secretary during President Clinton's first term, and millionaire businessman Erskine Bowles, a former White House chief of staff.

Mrs. Clinton spent part of Monday in New York working on her fund-raising effort.

FTC decides 'Net privacy laws are not necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is recommending to Congress that new Internet privacy laws are not needed to protect consumers because companies on the Web are voluntarily creating rules for handling sensitive personal information.

In a 14-page report, the FTC acknowledged that the online industry's efforts are not widespread, and some Web sites "still do not understand the importance of consumer privacy."

But with a 3-1 endorsement, commissioners decided that new federal privacy laws are "not appropriate at this time" for the Internet, the worldwide computer network used by roughly 100 million Americans. The Associated Press obtained a copy of the report.

"You're at the dawn of this new and exciting industry, which is exceptionally dynamic," FTC Chairman Robert Pitofsky said in an interview. "Regulation that may make sense today may be obsolete by the time the ink is dry on the legislation."

Ulster Unionists upset by Blair's proposal

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British Prime Minister Tony Blair, determined to form a new Protestant-Catholic government for Northern Ireland this week, is hoping that a carefully worded bill can win over the province's biggest party.

But his legislation, published late Monday after agonizing behind-the-scenes negotiations, hasn't yet persuaded Northern Ireland's Ulster Unionists, the major Protestant party, to form the key institution envisaged in last year's Good Friday peace accord.

British lawmakers will get the chance to debate the package today. Blair's Labor Party has such a commanding majority in the House of Commons it's certain to be approved.

However, the votes that matter most this week are within the divided ranks of the Ulster Unionists, whose leader David Trimble would lead the new government — and whose executive members would have to vote Wednesday to drop their longstanding policy of demanding Irish Republican

Army disarmament before the government is formed.

If that happened, then most of the Ulster Unionists' 27 members in Northern Ireland's year-old legislature — the only institution yet formed under terms of the Good Friday accord — would have to vote to support government candidates from the IRA-linked Sinn Fein party.

OAU summit marks Algeria's re-emergence

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Torn apart and isolated as a result of a bloody Islamic insurgency, Algeria is using its new position as chairman of the Organization of African Unity to launch its entry into the international arena.

President Abdelaziz Bouteflika told 43 African leaders — a record turnout for the African organization — at the opening of the three-day OAU summit Monday that their presence should lay to rest the fears "of all those who had doubts about the ability of our country to get out of this situation."

Gross-out satire debuts at No. 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The high school gross-out satire "American Pie" netted $18.7 million in ticket sales and dethroned the critically panned "Wild Wild West" in weekend box-office receipts.

As "Pie" vaulted to the top in its debut, the sci-fi Western starring Will Smith lost nearly 40 percent of its audience in its second week, earning $16.8 million.

Crude comedies have held a grip on audiences this summer, with Adam Sandler's "Big Daddy" in third place, the "South Park" feature in eighth and the "Austin Powers" sequel in ninth.
