'I'm here to serve ...'

Castillo still sets his goals

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

If you think the senior member of the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department is a grizzled, gray-haired veteran, then you're wrong.

At nearly 18 years of service, David Castillo has been with department longer than anyone else, but he's certainly no grizzled, gray-haired veteran - he's barely out of his mid-30s.

Castillo graduated from Hereford High School in May 1981 and was hired by then-Sheriff Travis McPherson in June.

Now, nearly 18 years later, McPherson has been gone for more than a decade, but Castillo is still with the department, now headed by Sheriff Joe Brown.

"When I started, I had just gotten out of high school and I was looking for a job where I could stick," Castillo said.

sheriff's department, Castillo approached McPherson and asked about attending the police academy.

"He said, 'OK, but you still have work,' so I took the challenge," Castillo said. So he completed the course at Amarillo College, earning certification as a peace officer, while continuing to hold down his job with the sheriff's department.

Castillo was born in Edinburg, in South Texas, but his family moved to Hereford when he was 3, so "Hereford is my home."

His father, Esteban Castillo, is an instrument technician at Holly Sugar, one of the few workers to hold onto his job after the sugarbeet processing operation shut down. His mother, Angelica, is homemaker, a woman who raised six sons.

Castillo said his parents instilled in their sons a sense of pride in work and the drive to achieve.

Castillo speaks with pride about his brothers, noting that only he and his twin, Daniel, a scale technician, don't hold college degrees.

Two brothers, Joe and Adrian, are attorneys, while Jesse is a computer programmer for Conoco, and Art teaches computer science at Palo Duro High School in Amarillo.

Adrian, the baby of the family, also was the first Hispanic valedictorian at Hereford High School.

Castillo said the brothers owe their father because "he sacrificed quite a bit. We have to make sure we honor his name. We're very fortunate that none of us went down the wrong road."

He said his mother also had insisted that the boys work, putting them to work in the beet and onion fields.

"She wanted us to learn how to work .. She wanted us to know how to earn what we get," he said.

Although he has been with the sheriff's department for nearly 18 years, Castillo still sets goals for himself, and his main goal is "to become sheriff of this county. If that's not possible, I'll try another direction."

Castillo said his goal to become sheriff will not involve running against Brown.

"Some people have wanted me to run, but I don't feel that I can. I'll wait and see. I have time and I'm ready, but I have respect for the sheriff. We do have some disagreements, but I respect him," Castillo said. "I do have some ideas that I think would be good for the department."

"But there are a lot of things that can happen. I am self-motivated and I have a lot of drive. I learn from my mistakes. If you make a mistake and you learn from it, then you will be a better person."

Census reveals much about U.S. mothers

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

It's a special day for mothers - and there certainly are plenty of mothers around to enjoy the day.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau figures for 1995 (the last year available), the nation had 35 million mothers between the ages of 15 and 44. Of those, 10.8 million had one child; 13.9 million had two; 6.9 million had three; and 3.4 million had four or more.

Also, women ages 40-44 had an average of two children each. Hispanic women in the 40-44 age bracket had 2.6 children each, while African-American women had 2.1 and Anglos, 1.9.

As of 1995, Idaho had the highest birth rate, with 1,545 births to every 1,000 women ages 15 to 44. Massachusetts had the lowest rate, with 959 births per 1,000 women of child-bearing ages.

The census statistics also found that 55 percent of

Boosters, KPAN set bus-naming contest

Hereford Whiteface fans will be given an opportunity to name each of the two new commercial activity buses, acquired this past fall by the Hereford Independent School District, in a contest being promoted through Friday by the Whiteface Booster Club and KPAN Radio.

Fans are being asked to submit up to two names and turn them in to KPAN either by written nomination or through a call-in. The boosters will select the top two entries, which will be painted on the back of each bus.

Winners will be announced at Hereford High School Athlete Appreciation Day planned May 17 at Whiteface Stadium.

Prizes will include a private bus ride, along with the winners' choice of occupants, to the first home game; plus a visit to the KPAN broadcast booth with sports personalities Tom Simons and Cuby Kitchens.

he's held since 1984.

The county lockup had been cited for non-compliance by the Texas jail commission for several years. Facing the possibility of having the facility shut down, the county commissioners agreed to McPherson's request for a jail administrator and hired Charles Satterfield of Lubbock.

However, a few months later, McPherson resigned as sheriff and Brown was appointed to serve out the unexpired term. Brown had different ideas about how the jail should be run, and Satterfield would decide to leave.

"My opportunity was there. I was a supervisor and looked forward to moving out into the field," Castillo said, "but he (Brown) offered the position (of administrator)."

"It was my first challenge. ... I was 21 years of age, but I had certain goals, and I was able to make some changes where I had control, like sanitation, cleanliness. We corrected all the things we had control of" and by the time of the next state jail inspection, the corrections - lighting, sanitation, cleanliness, and record keeping - were recognized by the inspectors.

In 1986, the jail was renovated and expanded and has been certified since.

While serving as jail administrator, Castillo also accepted other responsibilities, such as warrant officer, evidence officer and, for nearly five years, K-9 officer.

When he took the K-9 officer's position, he underwent training - with Buddy, a black Labrador - under the tutelage of Leroy Azlin, a well-respected K-9 training officer for the Shreveport (La.) Police Department.

Buddy, a former drug-sniffing dog, had to undergo rigid obedience classes before the dog and Castillo arrived at "a mutual understanding."

However, after the dog accepted Castillo's control, the two became partners until Buddy was retired in 1996. Now Buddy shares the Castillo household with four other dogs.

In looking at his position with the sheriff's department, Castillo said he has a good staff, which "has made me look good."

He acknowledged he expects a lot from his staff and himself because "we serve the people of the county."

"I have a responsibility to the county, the department and the sheriff."

women ages 15-44 who had given birth the previous year were in the labor force, up from 31 percent in 1976. The highest percentage of mothers returning to the work force was 77 percent for women ages 30-44 and if the birth was her first.

In 1994, there were 10 million preschoolers whose mothers were employed outside the home. About 43 percent of the children received care from relatives other than their mothers (fathers, grandparents, siblings, aunts or uncles) during most of the mothers' working hours. Twenty-nine percent of the preschoolers were in a day-care center or nursery school, while 6 percent received care from their mothers at the workplace or while they worked from the home.

In 1995, about 20 percent of women, ages 15-44, who had never been married were mothers.

The Census Bureau also reported in 1996 that 45 percent of births in Mississippi were to unmarried women - the highest rate in the nation. Utah had the lowest rate at 16 percent, while the national average was 32 percent. In comparison with other industrialized nations, the rate ranged from 1 percent in Japan to 53 percent in Sweden.

However, after tripling over the previous 25 years, the number of single mothers in the U.S. has remained constant at 9.8 million since 1995. Also, nearly 20 percent of single mothers was raising three or more children in 1998.

About 78 percent of the single mothers maintained their own household. Of that total, about 69 percent did not have another adult in the household to assist them.

And, in 1998, 42 percent of single mothers had never been married.

Although most women are out of their teenage years before becoming mothers, about 800,000 women ages 15-19 (10 percent of the women in that age bracket) were mothers in 1995.

Thirteen percent of all births in the U.S. in 1996 were to teens. Mississippi, at 21 percent, had the highest U.S. rate; Massachusetts and New Hampshire, at 7 percent, had the lowest rate.

Bush picks up more support for likely presidential effort

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush picked up some more backing Friday for his prospective presidential campaign. But in words that might sound familiar to Bush, a fellow governor said he's holding off any endorsement until his state's legislature adjourns.

Nebraska Gov. Mike Johanns said he's waiting for the legislative session to end — the same reason Bush gives for not campaigning in other states yet — before announcing his choice for president.

Johanns visited Bush on Wednesday. Johanns said he is trying to recruit the Texas governor and his brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, for the Midwest Leadership Conference in Omaha, Neb., this August. Several presidential candidates will attend the 13-state GOP meeting.

Eventually, Johanns said, the conversation turned to the presidential race, and the Texas governor sought his support.

"He's looking to create a very strong organization in Nebraska," Johanns said. "He sees Nebraska as part of an overall strategy. I felt very good about that, and we're going to talk more."

Johanns has been mentioned as a supporter of either Bush or former Vice President Dan Quayle. However on Friday, Johanns declined to say which candidate he is considering.

A Small Investment Today for a Big Payout Tomorrow

Think dispers are expensive? Just wait until you have to pay college tuition.
Thinking about an expensive need in the future can be scary. How ill you come up with the large sums needed to pay for college, a wedding, retirement and more?

For many people, the answer is zero coupon bonds. A small investment in "zeros" today can give you a big payout in the future. In order to appreciate zero coupon bonds, you must first understand how they work.

Like other bonds, zeroes are issued by municipalities, government agencies and corporations. You buy zeroes at a discount from face value, and they compound semiannually at the yield stated at the time of purchase.

Unlike other bonds, interest is not paid semiannually or annually. Instead, the interest accrues, and you receive it at maturity. The difference in the discounted price and the face value you receive at maturity determines the amount of interest, and therefore the yield.

For example, at this writing, you can buy an 18-year $10,000 zero coupon Treasury bond (called a STRIP) yielding 5.87 percent. Your initial investment is only $3,439, and in 18 years you'll receive the full $10,000.

As mentioned, the U.S. Treasury issues zero coupon bonds called STRIPs. These securities are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. government. Zero coupon Treasury bonds are free of state and local taxes, but investors must pay federal income tax on the accrual of interest each year, even though they do not receive this amount until maturity.

Zero coupon municipal bonds are also issued by municipalities, counties, states, state agencies and special districts. Their main attraction is that they let your money grow free from federal income taxes.

Zero coupon Treasury-backed bonds, called CATs and TIGRs, are not issued directly by the Treasury but are fully collateralized by U.S. Treasury bonds. Zero coupon agency bonds are issued by government agencies. They're not directly guaranteed by the U.S. government but carry an implied guarantee.

Zeros should be purchased with the intention of holding them to maturity. However, if your circumstances change and you need your money earlier, zero coupon bonds can be traded on any business day at their current market value, which may be more, less or equal to the amount you originally invested.

If you think zeroes may be right for you, select a financial professional who is knowledgeable about them and whose firm maintains trading specialists in zero coupon bonds. Be sure you understand about pricing, liquidity, maturity, call provisions, phantom income, guarantees and taxation. If you'd like to invest a small amount today and know exactly how much you'll receive at a certain date in the future, zero coupon bonds could be just what you're looking for!

Out-of-town firms aren't sanctioned

Dear Editor:

Every year around this time, businesses in Hereford are solicited by outside commercial advertising sources for the upcoming various sports events — calendars, posters, bumper stickers — you name it, they print on it!

The Whiteface Booster Club would like to inform our local businesses that we do not sanction out-of-town solicitations. We appreciate the people and businesses of Hereford and their annual support of the Booster Club by our once-a-year membership drive and their ads in the football programs.

And, by the way, the Hereford State Bank always prints up wallet-size calendar of events for all the upcoming sports. These calendars are very accurate and we appreciate these so much.

Thank you, Hereford, for your great support of our young people.

He is my son, you see.

He's only just a boy, you know, He means the world to me.

I did not raise my son, deaf fan, For you to call him names; He may not be a superstar And these are high school games.

So, please don't knock those boys down there, They do the best they can; They've never tried to lose a game. They're boys, and you're a man.

This game belongs to them, you see. You're really just a guest; They do not need a fan that gripes. They need the very best.

If you have nothing nice to say, Please leave the boys alone And, if you've forgotten your manners Why don't you stay at home!

So, please don't curse those boys down there, Each one is his parents' son And win or lose or tie, you see; To us, they're Number One!

Things are different, but parents' duties are same

Ripples caused by a pebble thrown into the water ultimately reach the farthest limits of a seemingly quiet pond.

Aftershocks of a minor earthquake often cause more damage than the main tremors and at great distance from the fault line.

Like these naturally occurring events, the action of angry individuals also affects many, some at a great distance.

News in the last two weeks has been mainly about the Littleton, Colo., school shooting. No one seems to be able to point to any one thing that could have led to this violence.

The accused gunmen were both well off, from good families and intelligent. True, some of their friends probably had something to do with the incident and they may not have been as popular as some of the victims, but surely there's more to it than just being fed up with the taunts of their peers.

Their anger began long before the boys started wearing trench coats and started calling themselves the "trench coat mafia." I've learned the shooters' parents knew nothing of their bomb-making, gun buying, or murderous tendencies.

How can that be? Did the boys never slam a door or kick a pet? Did they never scream "I hate you" because of some trivial difference? Or did no one ever hear these pleas for help?

Teachers, counselors and certainly the students today have a harder time than did the previous generations, but probably the ones with it the hardest are the parents.

Parents have to play the role of teacher, counselor, and confidant and find a balance between "when we were kids" and kids' world today.

Yes, things are different. In a matter of seconds, the Internet will take us around the world to talk with someone we may never meet.

The same mechanism now provides information, almost instantly, which used to take days or even weeks to acquire.

Even this though, does not fully explain the horrors one individual inflicts on another.

I wonder if Billy the Kid was ever teased about his small stature? Did Jesse or Frank James or the Younger brothers ever feel left out? Is this why they carried their notched pistols?

The world may never know. We probably will also never know why the Colorado shooting happened. So where do we go?

The ripples these boys made are being felt as major shockwaves all around the world. So how do we prevent a repeat performance? Parents, I hate to tell you this, but here is where you can probably do the most good.

I'm probably as guilty as most of not seeing the danger signs. Sometimes it's easier to just say "they're going through a phase" than to actually look at what is happening.

It's probably easier to say "the kids need their privacy" than to open their doors and search for what we don't want to know.

If I had a nickel for every time I've heard a parent say my kid would never do that, I would probably be listed as the world's wealthiest person.

I imagine I'm not alone. The smallest, most innocuous thing often proves to be the foundation for a lifetime of anger which erupts with devastating results.

There's no magic cure to make all the pain kids today endure go away. We can't kiss it and make it better or put a Band-Aid on the boo-boo.

What we can do is open that door. The door where the kids keep their most hidden secrets and give those secrets a place and means of escape.

When the secrets are no longer secrets, they don't cause nearly the damage of a festering sore, because a secret shared is a secret halved.

This may not be the answer to all the problems, but it can't hurt.

After all, the young gunmen of the distant past probably never killed as many people in their entire lives as were killed at one time by two angry boys.

Open the doors. Talk and listen. Let the kids let the bad out and let it go.

Mom never knew about the pudding

Don Cooper

It doesn't seem that's possible, but Mom died on her birthday nearly 10 years ago. When she died, it was really a relief because she had been comatose for several days, and before she slipped into the coma, all of the remnants of her dignity had been stripped away.

Appearances were always important to my mother. I can remember many nights when she would take my father to the truck terminal, she would always make sure she was "properly dressed." She wasn't one to just throw a housecoat over her pajamas for the midnight drive to the truck terminal to take my father to work. She wanted to be "proper," as she put it, in case she was in an accident.

She loved working in her flower beds, but she always managed to dress as if she were casually strolling through a garden, not planting it.

I guess I was a constant source of annoyance to her, choosing to wear old T-shirts, faded jeans and dirty sneakers rather than the suits, crisply starched dress shirts and ties that she thought was the proper way to dress.

That was just one of the many little conflicts we had over the years. In truth, Mom and I didn't get along very well. In our relationship, there would be long periods of silence.

Maybe if our communications had been a little better, a holiday tradition never would have started, much less last for more than two decades. If I had been more open with my mother, there would never have been the Great Plum Pudding Misunderstanding.

It started out innocently enough. Sometime during 1966 — my first year in Berlin — my mother sent me a "care" package of a hideously rich, gooey cross between a cookie and a cake that she called Congo squares.

The Congo squares were wonderful and I loved them. She remembered and decided to send me a box of them.

When I got the box of Congo squares, I took them back to the barracks, where a crowd of my buddies were waiting. I hadn't told anyone what I had in the box, but they knew — they just knew. In the Army, there's a sixth sense about someone getting goodies in the mail.

I opened the box and saw the Congo squares. I took out one and before I could offer any to the crowd, they were all gone.

One Congo square — that's all I got. Anyway, in the next letter home, I told my mother how the guys loved the Congo squares.

Somehow, and to this day I don't know how, she thought if the Congo squares went over so well, then plum pudding would be simply irresistible and a few days before Christmas I got a couple of packages from my parents.

One package had a sweater, some socks and a check, which I would soon convert into beer. As I opened the second package, I imagined the delicious Congo squares. I was very disappointed when I got the package open and found a plum pudding.

Even Grumpy John and Shakey were disappointed; they thought I was getting more Congo squares.

Mom didn't remember, but I detested plum pudding. When I was about seven, she made a plum pudding before Christmas. I took one bite and swore I'd never touch plum pudding again.

Now, just before my first Christmas in Germany, plum pudding made its way across the ocean and found me.

"Here, Grumpy, you take it," I said. He snorted. "I hate plum pudding," he said and left the room.

"Don't look at me," Shakey said. My offer of the plum pudding was turned down by everyone until a couple of hours later I was able to give it to Catfish, an Alabama redneck who'd eat anything.

Sometime after New Year, I got a letter from my father. In it, he said my mother wondered if I liked the plum pudding.

Not wanting to hurt her feelings, I wrote back that it was gone within a couple of hours.

She was thrilled, and so was started the Great Plum Pudding Misunderstanding.

For the next two decades, every Christmas I could count on one thing: Mom would send me a plum pudding. I would always thank her and get rid of it as soon as possible.

She died never knowing that I detested plum pudding. I guess it was good that she never knew.

Senate balances school funding, tax cuts

Most Texans agree that improving our public schools must be the state Legislature's highest priority. After all, excellent schools mean a brighter future for our children and our state as a whole.

Texans also agree that they deserve some of the state's budget surplus back in the form of a tax cut. After all, the surplus belongs to the taxpayers, not the government. Reducing taxes also means a brighter future for our state because tax cuts spark job creation and economic development.

Education and tax reduction are both vitally important to the future of our state. Education prepares our young people for the jobs and technologies of tomorrow, and cutting taxes helps create the jobs and technologies of tomorrow. Fortunately, the Texas Senate has prioritized education and tax cuts by fashioning a school finance bill that accomplishes both goals.

In recent days, with strong bipartisan support, the Texas Senate passed Senate Bill 4, a $2.6 billion school funding package containing the biggest public school funding increase in the history of Texas. SB-4 increases the minimum teacher salary by $4,000 and improves teacher retirement benefits. The plan sends $700 million to Texas school districts to help pay for old school construction debt. This infusion of new money will allow school districts to reduce local property taxes.

Thanks to the leadership of Senate Education Committee Chairman Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) and his fellow committee members, we are making an unprecedented commitment to permanently improving school facilities funding. When Senate bill 4 becomes law, the state will be sending more than $1 billion per biennium to local school districts to help build and repair school buildings and classrooms. Even more help will soon be on the way to help fast-growth school districts deal with the influx of new students.

To help mitigate the "Robin Hood" school funding scheme, SB 4 raises the equalized wealth level from $280,000 to $300,000 per student, removing several districts from Robin Hood and helping countless others without undermining equity.

The Legislature is also considering a number of innovative ways to reward extraordinary teachers and improve academic performance. We've passed legislation to end social promotion and provide teachers with the diagnostic tools, training and technology they need to get reading right in the early grades. We're creating a Master Reading Teacher program to reward specially trained reading teachers with state-funded bonuses of up to $5,000.

We're tackling the issue of reducing school violence and juvenile justice problems. The Texas Senate recently approved $31 million in funding for before- and after-school centers, places where children can go for additional learning, mentoring and athletic activities when school is out. We've also approved legislation allowing schools to implement a zero-tolerance policy for classroom violence.

Members of the Texas Senate are proving by word and deed that improving our public schools is the Texas Senate's top budget and policy priority this session.

Our version of the state budget spends 63 cents of every new dollar available on education. But Senators also recognize once the state's priorities are met, starting with the public schools, taxpayers deserve some of their money back in the form of tax cuts.

Senate Bill 4 includes about $1.1 billion in property tax relief. In the near future, local school property taxpayers will carry less of the load as the state assumes a greater share of the school-funding burden.

Small business tax cuts, a research and development tax credit, and the elimination of sales taxes on consumer items like children's over-the-counter medicine, diapers, school clothes, and Internet access have all passed the Texas Senate with strong bipartisan support.

All together, when the Senate agenda becomes law, Texas families will see tax relief approaching $2 billion and the biggest increase in public school funding in the history of our state.

In recent years, sound financial leadership, balanced budgets, and a vibrant economy have been the hallmark of our state. As a result we have a record budget surplus this year. The surplus gives us a unique opportunity to dramatically improve school funding and cut taxes at the same time.

The Texas Senate is striking the right balance of teacher pay raises and benefit improvements, school construction and instruction funding, and significant tax cuts to ensure a bright and prosperous future for us all.

Rick Perry, a Republican, is lieutenant governor of Texas. He was elected in 1998.

School officials are in a quandry

Here are excerpts from recent editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad:

The Advocate, Baton Rouge, La., on Colorado shootings:

The number of students making direct threats or implied threats of violence has increased tremendously since two students went on a rampage at Columbine High School in Littleton, Or, at least, people are more sensitized to the threats. ... The problem for school officials and law enforcement is, they have no magic formula that allows them to sort out which children are really dangerous and which ones are just mouthing off. ...

We can't know for sure, and even if it is a prank, it can create quite a panic. ...

Lots of people blame video games and movies for desensitizing our young people. Maybe they're right. ... Since firearms seem to be the instrument of choice for the violence, the availability of guns takes much of the blame.

Several students have made bombs, and the easy access to plans for bombs, especially over the Internet, has been cited as a contributing factor. ...

We strive to find simplistic answers so we can adopt them and move on. The fact is, these murderous youth are not the norm, not by a wide margin, and we must not forget that. But the youths who want to use threats against others, even as a prank, need to recognize that we can't tell the difference.

The Charleston (W.Va.) Gazette, on the flag amendment:

Conservatives keep telling us that the only way to protect the U.S. flag is to amend the Bill of Rights to criminalize flag desecration.

The flag, they say, is such a potent symbol that it cannot be allowed to be burnt or trampled or otherwise disrespected.

Many proponents of this amendment are well-intentioned — members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars or other former soldiers who learned their reverence for the flag under hostile fire.

Others, though, are cynical politicians eager to paint their opponents as unpatriotic.

But it matters not whether the motives behind this movement are noble or crass. The idea of protecting this symbol of liberty by curtailing liberty is simply wrong.

You cannot force patriotism, and a democratic government should not even try.

The Gainesville (Fla.) Sun, on embargo sanctions:

As a tool of foreign policy, economic and trade sanctions only rarely work. Nonetheless, according to one study, the United States has sanctions in one form or another against 26 countries that contain about half the world's population.

Surely, the United States has no more grievances with the rest of the world than other countries, but the United States is by far the greatest user of unilateral sanctions, the least effective kind of restriction on trade and investment. ...

Last year, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a low-key voice of common sense on foreign policy, proposed a comprehensive review of sanctions. His bill, co-authored with Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill, would lift those that are outdated, counterproductive or simply ineffectual. ...

Sanctions are a vital and necessary tool of both foreign policy and moral outrage.

But the present structure ... has become hopelessly unwieldy. Nobody designed it that way. It just happened.

The Lugar-Crane sanctions reform bill will make it un-

The San Francisco Chronicle, on food-buying habits:

What, you ask, is a canned vegetable? Call your friends in Little Rock.

According to a new survey of supermarket buying habits by the market research firm ACNielsen, Little Rock shoppers buy 152 percent of the national average in canned vegetables.

Happily, healthily, the San Francisco Bay Area was at the bottom of the list, consuming only 68 percent of the national average.

The survey of 52 U.S. metropolitan areas for the year ending March 20, 1999, should give plenty of fodder for those who like to scoff at the snooty lean cuisine on the left coast.

Let them laugh in their Frosted Flakes in Minneapolis, which leads the nation in breakfast cereal consumption. We would need a big bowl too if we had to venture out in their frosty mornings.

... Pittsburgh shoppers bought the least amount of charcoal. Pittsburgh also finished near the bottom in consumption of salads. What in the world are they eating over there?

Oh, they must be skipping to dessert. Sweet-toothed Pittsburgh ranks first. ...

Omaha shoppers bought 256 percent of the national average in cigarettes. It should be no surprise that three California cities — San Francisco, Sacramento and Los Angeles — were in the bottom five. After all, there is almost nowhere left to smoke legally.

We will toast our culinary good judgment with a fine cabernet. San Francisco was at 324 percent of the national average in supermarket wine purchases, No. 1 by far. This region's edge in that category surely would have been even greater if ACNielsen had not included the bottles with the screw tops.

HRMC sets special event during Week

Special to The Brand

"People Care, Miracles Happen" has been selected as the campaign theme for the 1999 National Hospital Week observance. The theme emphasizes the human side of health care, promoting the people who make a difference amid rapidly changing technology, medications and treatments.

"We never want to forget that the most important part of health care is 'care,'" Hereford Regional Medical Center administrator John Studsrud said. "Our people are warm, caring individuals who go the extra mile for our patients. This year's theme recognizes the special contributions of the people who keep hospital doors open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, so that their friends and neighbors never go without the care they need."

The campaign slogan will be used in conjunction with events planned this week as part of the special week. HRMC will sponsor its annual health fair, 9 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave

C. The public is encouraged to attend.

Celebration of National Hospital Week began in 1921 when a magazine editor suggested more information about hospitals might alleviate public fears about the "shrouded" institutions of the day. From the beginning, hospital week expanded to facilities across the nation.

Today, through promotion and participation, National Hospital Week has grown into the nation's largest health care event.

Don't blink, NBA playoffs are here

By The Associated Press

For the third straight year, the New York Knicks and Miami Heat are facing each other in a first-round series. Neither side wants a repeat of the first two meetings.

"The first two series, I guess it was a boxing match — a rumble in the jungle, or whatever it was," Knicks guard Chris Childs said. "It's hard to play a basketball game when you've got bodies on bodies without getting into a skirmish, but I think cooler heads will prevail."

Two years ago, four Knicks were suspended for leaving the bench to join in a scuffle. Miami won that series in seven games.

Last year, Miami's Alonzo Mourning and New York's Larry Johnson were suspended for fighting. New York prevailed in five.

"Guys should have learned their lessons and how suspensions hurt their seasons," Miami forward P.J. Brown said. "I'd be very surprised if there was any of that stupid stuff going on."

Also beginning today are Detroit-Atlanta, Sacramento-Utah and Phoenix-Portland.

Sunday's games are Philadelphia-Orlando, Minnesota-

San Antonio, Houston-Los Angeles Lakers and Milwaukee-Indiana.

"I wouldn't be surprised if there was a physical confrontation — pushing and shoving," Miami coach Pat Riley said. "But I'd be surprised if it went beyond that."

The teams are almost mirror images, even though Riley left New York four years ago. Riley protege Jeff Van Gundy kept the system when he became Knicks coach, and the similarities only lend intensity to the rivalry.

New York's Patrick Ewing appeared ready to go, although his sore left Achilles' tendon will be a question throughout the series. The 7-footer took part in Friday's one-hour practice before the Knicks left for South Florida.

"For what he did, he looked all right," Van Gundy said.

Detroit has barely had time to catch its breath before the playoffs.

After playing an overtime game Wednesday night at Philadelphia and returning to Detroit in the wee hours Thursday, the Pistons turned right around and practiced Friday morning before traveling to Atlanta for Game 1 of a best-of-5 series against the Hawks.

"That's where the homecourt (advantage) really helps out these teams early is that it's a travel day that they don't have to throw in," NBC analyst Doug Collins said. "And I think that's vital. When you don't have the preparation time, it really limits how much you can get involved with your team."

Don't expect a high-scoring Pistons-Hawks series. The Hawks allowed only 83.4 points per game — lowest in the league — while the Pistons also ranked among the defensive leaders at 86.9.

"We're a good defensive team," coach Lenny Wilkens said. "Offensively, we've got to move the ball. We don't have a superstar like Shaq (Shaquille O'Neal) that we can throw it to. Our shot selection has to be good."

In the Kings-Jazz series, the most intriguing matchup is at point guard with flashy rookie Jason Williams going against Utah stalwart John Stockton.

Stockton is the key to Utah's businesslike approach, while Sacramento's high-flying offensive show revolves around Williams.

"You play the game a different way if you came up when John and I did," Karl Malone said. "We grew up with strong coaches and different players to look up to than the guys do now. It's a very different time, and you can see that when John plays some of the younger kids."

As for Phoenix-Portland, the teams have been fixtures in the playoffs throughout this decade, the Blazers making the postseason 17 straight times and Phoenix 11. The last time they met, the Suns won 3-0 in a 1995 first-round series.

The Blazers have lost in the first round of the playoffs the last six years, but they didn't have homecourt advantage in any of those series.

"Now it's a sense of urgency," Portland guard Isaiah Rider said. "It's a sense of, we want to win, rather than we're happy to be here. Now we realize that we're favored to win. We're supposed to win. So it's time to take care of business."

Erratic Rockets, Lakers to meet

And both teams can only guess which version of their opponent will show up

CHARLES BARKLEY
Houston Rockets

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Both the Houston Rockets and Los Angeles Lakers must be wondering which version of the opposition they'll be playing.

Considering the erratic nature of their seasons, there's no sure way to predict the best-of-5 first-round series, which begins Sunday at the Forum.

Considering the talent level on both sides and the way each finished the abbreviated regular season, it's realistic for both to expect the best.

"If they have their heads on straight, we'll have the toughest series of anybody," Houston's Charles Barkley said. "If they play with confidence like they have been, they're a tough team to beat."

Both teams had 31-19 regular-season records. The Lakers, seeded fourth in the Western Conference, got homecourt advantage by virtue of a 2-1 record against the fifth-seeded Rockets.

"They figure to be real tough, considering that this is the time they've been waiting for all year long," Los Angeles' Kobe Bryant said of the Rockets. "It's a challenge, to go up against three of the best of all time."

Bryant referred to Barkley, Hakeem Olajuwon and Scottie Pippen.

However, the Lakers have three proven stars of their own in Bryant, Shaquille O'Neal and Glen Rice.

The future of both teams appeared to be pretty bleak as recently as last week, when each concluded a period where it suffered six losses in an eight-game span.

However, the Rockets bounced back to win their last three games, and the Lakers won their final four.

$1 million grant to fund research into pintail decline

We have written previously in this column about the disturbing decline in the pintail duck population in this country.

A good number of pintails are traditionally found in the Southern High Plains of Texas, especially in years like the 1998-99 wintering season when there were numerous shallow playas available to them. They're also found along the Gulf Coast, in Louisiana, and into Mexico.

Perhaps one of the country's largest concentrations of wintering pintails is found in California in the Sacramento Valley and the Sacramento/San Joaquin River delta.

Looking back, we can recall a heyday of pintail abundance in the High Plains during the late 1960s to mid-1970s. Pintails were so numerous that the bag limit was astonishingly generous. Based on the points system, if you chose to shoot only "stickertails" you could legally bag ten—count 'em, ten, a day.

They would fly over our farm at Hart in great waves in the evening just before sundown, bound for feeding fields, their wings whistling as they passed.

Spring would pile-up on shallow playas, especially those in grassland, in such abundance that their white markings would sparkle with eye-squinting brilliance, like glass, when you scanned the lake from a distance.

Atop the wariness scale for ducks, they are a prize to lure close over decoys. Some of my finest waterfowling recollections call back flocks of pintails, wind whistling through their primaries as they waited down on-on-high to cautiously circle the playa where I sat hidden in cattails. Once the teal and the mallards and widgeon had already pitched in, the pintails would come, suspicious and careful, sleek fast-flyers with elongated necks and streamlined bodies. If you waited long enough, they would hurtle down to a close-quarters encounter. More than once, I dodged long-tail-sprigged drakes as they zoomed within inches of my head above my hide. It is unhappy news on the waterfowl front that the pintail population was estimated at only 2.5 million in 1998—well below the long-term mean of 4.4 million birds, and the North American Waterfowl Management Plan goal of 5.6 million pintails.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

With the return of rainfall and runoff to the prairie pothole region of North America in 1997 and 1998, experts say habitat should have been sufficient to support a population in excess of eight million "stickertails." It's an alarming disparity that only a little over a quarter of that number exists today.

Why pintails didn't respond to the markedly improved conditions on the breeding grounds isn't known yet. Many other waterfowl species did respond—some in record numbers, heightening the concern for these striking chestnut, black, and white ducks that are handsomely sleek and highly popular with many waterfowlers.

Seeking answers to the question of why North America's pintail population continues to decline, the Tuscani Research Institute of Las Vegas, Nevada has awarded Ducks Unlimited a grant of $1 million to expand scientific research on pintail migration in relation to nesting patterns, response to changes in habitat, and avian diseases. It's the largest research grant ever received by DU.

Torv Marnell, a Tuscani Institute trustee, says the grant is a unique opportunity to advance scientific knowledge of pintails at a time when the species needs help.

Learned in the research could lead to significant improvement in the North American pintail population. Appropriately, the program will be known as "Discovery for Recovery: An International Pintail Research Initiative."

Spring and summer pintail migration patterns will be studied by DU's Institute for Wetland and Waterfowl Research, along with scientists from the Western Ecological Research Center of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Also cooperating with the project will be the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, the California Department of Fish and Game, and the California Waterfowl Association.

Specially-designed radio transmitters emitting signals that can be detected by satellites will be fitted on 200 pintails, and their passage along spring migration routes and summer movement patterns will be monitored.

Spring staging areas will be identified to help determine if altered management measures are necessary.

Scientists will also be able to examine pintail movement to molting areas following nesting, so that they can determine stickertail exposure to lakes with recurrent botulism problems. Hopefully, the research will point the way to helping the population of these beautiful and sporty ducks to rebound. It's money and effort that will be well-spent.

Tom Landry hospitalized

■ Former Dallas Cowboys coach is undergoing treatment for leukemia

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry is undergoing treatment for leukemia in a local hospital, his son, Tom Landry Jr., The Dallas Morning News reported in Saturday's editions.

Landry, 74, entered the hospital Tuesday. He is expected to remain under the care of physicians for the next 30 days.

"Fortunately, this was diagnosed at an early stage and treatment was begun immediately," the younger Landry told the newspaper. "The family and doctors are optimistic that they will be successful in their efforts."

The family requested that details of where Landry is being treated remain undisclosed.

There are several types of leukemia, a cancer that impairs the production of blood cells. In all types, abnormal white cells proliferate in the bone marrow, crowding out healthy blood cells. Other organs, such as the liver, spleen or lymph nodes, may stop functioning properly if infiltrated by the leukemic cells.

Lima leads Astros over Montreal, 5-2

HOUSTON (AP) — These days, Astros pitchers are doing almost as much with their bats as with their arms.

Jose Lima won his fifth straight decision and drove in a run during a three-run sixth inning, helping the Houston Astros beat the Montreal Expos 5-2 Friday night for their seventh win in eight games.

Lima (5-1) needed defensive help to get through the first three innings but settled down to get his first complete game of the season, the fourth of his career. After the third inning, he allowed only two hits.

"I got in trouble in the first inning and Vern told me to relax," Lima said, referring to pitching coach Vern Ruhl. "So, I went back out and got in trouble again. But then I made some quality pitches. My teammates told me, 'This is just the second inning. We're going to get this guy.'"

Lima allowed nine hits — three to Rondell White — struck out four and walked none.

"This is my wife's birthday and I told her I'd bring her

"It's not an easy process to get a team to come together," said Kurt Rambis, who succeeded Del Harris as coach of the Lakers on Feb. 26. "It takes time. The players are starting to understand what we want them to do, play together."

"We are playing our best basketball at both ends of the court right now, there's no doubt about that. (But) we can still be better than what we are right now."

Rudy Tomjanovich, who coached the Rockets to consecutive championships in 1994-95, said much the same thing about his team.

"We've definitely turned some things around," he said. "Our attitude is very positive, and they like where they're at. I'm sure L.A. feels the same way."

"They had a breakthrough when they beat Portland (on April 29) They were a different team after that."

Tomjanovich referred to a 108-89 Los Angeles victory three days after the Rockets pummeled the Lakers 102-80 in Houston, their third straight loss.

"That was a low point for them," Tomjanovich said. "They hit bottom and then took a big bounce. We had our cycles, too. We're in a tough league. Look at Utah, which has the best record all season and ends up the third seed (in the West), and a team like Seattle doesn't even make the playoffs."

Pippen, a member of six championship teams with the Chicago Bulls before joining the Rockets this season, was a dominant force in the recent game between the teams at Houston.

Not only did he score 26 points, his play on the defensive end sparked, as evidenced by six steals.

"He was great at controlling the tempo," Bryant acknowledged. "He's done that for years. He's a master at that. He'll score zero points and still have a major impact on the game."

Pippen will no doubt start the series guarding Rice, who scored a season-high 40 points on Wednesday night as the Lakers concluded the regular season with a 119-91 rout of Pacific Division champion Portland.

"It's important not to let him get the hot hand going like (against the Blazers)," Pippen said. "You have to deny him the ball and make him catch the ball in uncomfortable spots. He's a pure shooter."

Game 2 is scheduled Tuesday night before the series moves to Houston for Game 3 on Thursday night and a fourth game, if necessary, on Saturday.

Blue Jays overcome Rangers

BIG BAT
Tony Fernandez hits career-high five hits as Toronto rolls over Texas, 9-6

TORONTO (AP) — Tony Fernandez continues to amaze.

The 36-year-old Fernandez had a career-high five hits as Toronto beat the Texas Rangers 9-6 Friday night.

"This guy is a marvel," Blue Jays manager Jim Fregosi said. "When I was 37, I was done. The strenuous exercise he does every day, what he does between innings when he's playing, would tire most people out."

Fernandez, who works out for a half-hour after every game, raised his average to a league-leading .383 after going 5-for-5 with three doubles and two singles, including an RBI double in the eighth.

"When he gets locked in, there isn't anybody better," Blue Jays first baseman Carlos Delgado said. "He just said to me last week, 'The older I get, the better I get.'"

Delgado was 3-for-4 with a two-run homer, and the Blue Jays backed Pat Hentgen (2-1) with 17 hits, tying a season high. Toronto overcame a pair of home runs by Juan Gonzalez to stop a three-game losing streak.

Gonzalez had a solo homer off Tom Davey in the sixth and a three-run homer off Dan Plesac in the seventh, raising his season total to seven and pulling Texas to 7-6.

Gonzalez, who has two multihomer games this season and 35 in his career, has six homers in his last seven games.

"I'm swinging the bat well," he said. "I just feel good about my approach to hitting."

Tom Goodwin and Mark McLemore hit consecutive solo homers for Texas in the first.

Hentgen, who allowed just two hits after the first inning, gave up three runs, five hits and four walks in five innings. He appreciates the offensive support Fernandez provided.

"He's the hardest working guy I've ever played with," Hentgen said. "He uses all fields. He's a tough out."

Rookie Billy Koch struck out two in two hitless innings for his first career save.

Mark Clark (2-3) gave up five runs and seven hits — six for extra bases — in five innings.

"I was down in the strike zone, but tonight it seemed like at times they knew what was coming," Clark said.

Toronto took a 4-2 lead in the first on Shawn Green's RBI groundout, Delgado's ninth homer and Mike Matheny's RBI double.

Fernandez doubled in the third and scored on Clark's wild pitch. Willie Greene's broke an 0-for-20 slump with an RBI single to make it 6-2 in the fifth.

After Gonzalez homered in the sixth, Fernandez singled in a run in the bottom half.

the ball," Lima said. "I said 'Mama, I'm bringing you the ball.'"

With the score 2-all in the sixth, Ken Caminiti singled off Miguel Batista (2-1), stole second and scored on third baseman Michael Barrett's second throwing error of the game. Astros pitchers are hitting .206 with 12 RBIs this season.

"I said to myself, if I want to win this game, I'd better get a hit," Lima said.

Carl Everett reached on Barrett's two-base error, advanced on a groundout and scored on Batista's wild pitch. Lima, who went 2-for-3 at the plate, then singled to center.

"He didn't melt in the first inning," Expos manager Felipe Alou said. "He stayed in there until his team could come back. Two runs is really not that much. A lot of pitchers would have given up four or five runs in an inning like that. He got stronger as the game progressed."

Montreal has lost five of six and 12 of 14. Batista allowed all five runs — just two earned — two runs and seven hits in six innings and struck out a season-high eight.

"I made three mistakes and we made two in the field," Batista said. "Other than that, it was OK. I pitched aggressive. That's my job."

Run-scoring singles by Vladimir Guerrero and Brad Fullmer gave the Expos a 2-0 lead in the first. Montreal got its first two batters on in the second but didn't get any runs. A double play got Lima out of the third.

"Jose really came on after the third," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "I think the Expos were trying to hit him to the opposite field and he started coming in and out with the fastball. He got it going."

Houston got its first two runs on Jeff Bagwell's RBI groundout in the first and Richard Hidalgo's run-scoring triple in the fourth. Bagwell singled in the seventh, extending his hitting streak to 13 games.

... Lima has not walked more than two batters in a game in 28 consecutive starts.

Looking at the Dead

Author examines band in context of times

By Jerry Harkavy
The Associated Press

She was never a true fan of its music, but Carol Brightman seemed destined to write about the Grateful Dead.

How many authors, after all, could claim a younger sister who spent 25 years as the band's lighting director and a literary agent whose client list included Jerry Garcia?

After overcoming initial doubts about writing the book, Brightman wove in elements of a subject she regarded as more compelling than the Grateful Dead: the political radicalism that shaped her life during the Vietnam era. The result is "Sweet Chaos: The Grateful Dead's American Adventure," a cultural history that explores the band's roots, its tie-dyed and often drugged-out following, and the mystifying way the entire scene somehow endured over the years.

None of Brightman's previous works, including her biography of artist Larry Rivers and a scholarly study of writer and literary critic Mary McCarthy, signaled an interest in Garcia or his band.

Brightman won a National Book Critics Circle Award for "Writing Dangerously: Mary McCarthy and Her World."

The late Jerry Garcia performs in a Grateful Dead concert in Minneapolis just weeks before his death in 1995.

BOOKS & AUTHORS

She went on to edit "Between Friends: The Correspondence of Hannah Arendt and Mary McCarthy."

Brightman's literary agent, the late Lucy Kroll, also represented Garcia in his literary and film endeavors. She tried to interest Brightman in writing a biography of Garcia, an idea whose focus quickly shifted to a book about the band.

"She was the catalyst," Brightman recalled in an interview in the long-abandoned farmhouse that she helped restore, after moving to Maine from Brooklyn in the 1980s. "But I was full of reservations. I really wanted to write this book about the history of the New Left and particularly the relationship with Cuba and Vietnam."

An activist who came of age during the ferment of the 1960s, Brightman had co-founded Viet-Report, an anti-war newspaper, and traveled to North Vietnam during the height of the fighting to view the impact of the U.S. bombing campaign. She also traveled twice to Cuba with the Venceremos Brigade to help harvest sugar cane, then edited a book about the group's experiences.

Although her musical tastes tended more toward Bob Dylan, Janis Joplin and the Doors, Brightman occasionally attended Grateful Dead concerts, but only as an excuse to get together with her sister, Candace, who ran the lighting booth.

"She is the linchpin," Brightman said, noting that she never would have become involved with the band had it not been for her sister and the insider access she provided. Their brother, Christopher, also worked for the Dead as a set carpenter.

Candace Brightman was an important source for the book, along with Garcia's ex-wife, Mountain Girl, lyricist Robert Hunter and author Ken Kesey, whose acid tests during the Dead's formative years fueled the psychedelic drug culture with which the band is so closely identified.

The author never got to interview Garcia, whose health deteriorated as his drug dependence increased, culminating in his death in 1995.

Brightman recognizes there has been no shortage of books about the Dead, but she said hers is the only one that attempted to present the band in the larger context of the times.

"I'd have felt like a fraud if I had written it as some kind of expert," she said. "But I was someone from another tradition of the '60s who was looking to see where my experiences fit in with theirs."

Although they came out of the same era, Brightman's politics were at odds with the Dead's insular world view. From their base in San Francisco, Garcia and the band had little interest in the radicalism that took root across the Bay in Berkeley.

"They were very anti-political. They had no radical bones in their bodies at all," Brightman said.

In that frenetic time, the nomadic followers of the Dead came to regard the band as a safe haven from politics, she said. That laid-back sense of community endured, helping to explain why the Grateful Dead maintained and even increased its popularity while the political movement Brightman embraced all but vanished.

Judge backs cross-dresser

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge's last-minute ruling allowed a male high school senior to attend his prom the way he wanted: in woman's clothing.

Arlington High School administrators tried to prevent Dale Stewart from wearing a black formal dress to Friday night's prom because they said it violated the school's dress code.

But a federal judge in Indianapolis ruled that Stewart's decision to wear the dress was a protected form of speech.

Buzz begins about 'Star Wars'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Summer blockbuster? Without a doubt. A sci-fi masterpiece that will please all its fans? Probably not, but it's got some cool effects.

That's the buzz on the new "Star Wars" movie, now that it has been finally seen by a select few.

"Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace" was screened Tuesday night in eight North American cities for movie theater executives, their families and — apparently — a bundle of "Star Wars" fans who somehow snagged some tickets.

Almost immediately, early reviews hit cyberspace, followed by the reactions to the reviews, then the reactions to the reactions, along with all manner of counterclaims and insults over the movie, which opens nationwide May 19.

"Guys, it's a movie!" responded Tom Sherak, distribution head of 20th Century Fox, which is releasing the film for George Lucas. "It isn't the Bible! It's fun, it's enjoyable, it's escapism. But it's a movie."

Uh huh. In what was titled "What I believe to be the FIRST review anywhere on the Internet," Ronald Epstein wrote on his Home Theater Forum Web site (www.hometheaterforum.com) that while he was impressed, the movie may not satisfy hard-core "Star Wars" fans.

Mothers make life the joy that it is

The marks of nurturing

are evident even on Bradley's driveway. Weekday after-school visits by seven-year-old granddaughter, Megan, have provided Bradley with great joy and a brightly-colored mosaic of chalk drawings.

and add to the world its worth.

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

If the worth of a person is measured by her qualities and the esteem in which she is held, then a mother is exceedingly valuable.

Mother, grandmother and great-grandmother Dean Bradley is one that most would consider valuable.

One only has to observe Bradley with her family to pick up on the obvious — she is the nucleus of that unit.

Bradley has reared three daughters of her own and is actively involved with her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

During the years her daughters were growing up, Bradley was a homemaking teacher.

"I tried to teach my girls homemaking skills, but like a lot of mothers, I only had a certain amount of time to do something, so I would say, 'Here, let me do that,'" Bradley said.

Her daughters did learn some skills, as evidenced by a special bear done completely in needlepoint that usually occupies a child-size wicker rocker in Bradley's den.

The bear was a Christmas gift from her children on 1990. Her oldest daughter designed it and each one made a portion of it.

"Jeff and Jennifer (Bradley's oldest grandchildren) have some stitches on the bear, but won't show where they are," Bradley said.

Worked into the design on the back of the bear's head are the words "Stitched with Love," and on one arm, "You are 'beary' special."

Bradley's involvement with her grandchildren includes things that are fun and things that are educational, as well as things that are work.

"Because you never know when you are making a memory," Bradley said.

When her oldest granddaughter married about a year and a half ago, Bradley made the train for her wedding dress.

"I bought 100 yards of tulle and sewed it into the train. It was 10 layers of tulle. I didn't have any place to work on it except in the den, so I would hang it from the ceiling fan. And when my twin grandsons would come in, Josh would say, 'Well, the white stuff is out again,'" she said.

When her oldest grandchildren were young, Bradley always kept cookie dough in the refrigerator so that when they came to see her on Saturday they could make a pan of cookies.

"After I retired I got involved in extension work and consequently in 4-H," Bradley said. "When my oldest grandson was 9 years old he started showing at stock shows, so I have done a lot of bleacher sitting at stock shows and that type of thing."

Bradley has also helped with judging 4-H projects in food and nutrition, clothing, method demonstrations and consumer buying.

"I assure you I have done my share of spoiling my grandchildren, but I thoroughly enjoy them. I really do. Their parents have the most of the responsibility of them, but I guess I've had my share of responsibility for them, too," she said.

Bradley's family has a tradition that was begun soon after her oldest daughter was married — spending Christmas Eve at Bradley's house.

"All 19 of us assemble at my house, then we go to Christmas Eve services at church. After church we come back here for dinner and to open our gifts," she said.

Most of Bradley's family that lives in Hereford attends church regularly and they sit together as a family unit.

"I am so fortunate that my children and grandchildren live here. That's a privilege so many don't have. And when any of them accomplish something it makes me feel proud," she said.

But it's also highly likely that the loving shadow of this proud mother, grandmother or great-grandmother touched each achievement.

Movin' On

Texas Plains Chorale posed in front of the Wesley Chapel in London, England

Chorale plans performance to recognize Senior Center

Texas Plains Chorale will perform "Movin' On" at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center at 3 p.m. May 15 in observance of National Recognition Week for Senior Centers.

The program will include selections made popular during the past 100 years and "movin' on" to the next 100 years.

The Texas Plains Chorale was formed in the summer of 1996 by local musicians and friends who are interested in establishing a chorale that would allow them to use the abundance of vocal talent found in the High Plains of Texas.

Members of the chorale are from Hereford, Muleshoe, Plainview, Amarillo and Dimmitt.

The non-profit, volunteer group rehearses at least once each week. Since the group was formed, they have performed in Amarillo, Hereford and Muleshoe for various civic and church groups.

In the summer of 1998, the chorale toured the United Kingdom in concert under the auspices of Perform Europe. The choir presented a variety of musical selections to a wide audience.

The chorale is under the direction of Jane Guley. For many years Guley has taught music and directed choirs in the public schools system including Plainview, Austin, Dallas and Hereford. In addition, she has directed and performed in many church and community songs.

The Texas Plains Chorale will also perform "Movin' On" at the First Baptist Church in Muleshoe at 6 p.m. on May 16.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: Today is not just another Sunday. It's the one day in the year we set aside to honor that special person in our lives, if we are lucky enough to still have her. It's Mother's Day. I've been keeping my eyes open for a letter that might be appropriate for today's column, but nothing has surfaced, so I am going to beg your indulgence and run a column that has appeared in this space before. Here it is:

Dear Mom: I wish I could spend Mother's Day with you, but I can't, so I am writing a letter and hope you will read it in Ann Landers' column.

Mom, there are so many things I didn't understand when I was young but I understand now. I had no idea of the burdens you carried until I traveled that road myself. I didn't realize how hurt you were until I was hurt the same way by my own children.

You made me do a lot of things I didn't want to do. You said it was good for my character. I couldn't see the connection. I thought you were crazy. But now that I have kids of my own, I understand things a lot better. I am grateful that you didn't let me wear you down. Remembering your strength gives me the strength I need to stand up to my own kids when they try to con me the way I tried to con you.

I remember the times you called on the phone and I was in a hurry to get off. It makes me ashamed. I remember, too, the times I could have included you when my little family had outings and last-minute get-togethers, but I didn't.

It took me all my life to learn what a mother is. Time has a sneaky way of slipping away. We become so involved in getting from one day to the next that before we know it, the tomorrows are yesterdays. I hope this letter gives you an idea of how much I admire and respect you, Mom. I pray that I can be half the mother you are. — Anonymous

Dear Writer: I'm glad you want to stay "Anonymous." Millions of moms are going to think this letter was meant for them, and that's the way I want it. Keep reading for another.

Dear Ann Landers: In my mind, Mother is always 50 — healthy, cheerful and supportive. When I call her long distance or write a letter, that is the person I am conversing with. Mom was the one my sisters and I ran to with our problems. She was never too busy to listen. No matter how muddled things were, she always came up with a logical solution that made sense to everyone.

Now when I see my mother, slightly stooped, clasping the banister tightly before she attempts the challenge of the next step, I turn my head. It pains me to see that she really is getting old.

Why does my mother's aging bother me so? Why don't I accept the reality that is clearly before me? Because to do so would be to acknowledge that one day I will lose her. One day, I will dial her number as I've done a thousand times before, and she will no longer be there to answer. I refuse to accept the thought of her not being there for me. It is too painful.

Who will I go to when she is not there? She is the one I could always count on, no matter what — never judging me, always ready to listen and send me in the right direction. So I go on pretending, deceiving myself, seeing her as 50 forever.

If I admit that my mother really is getting old and that one day she will no longer be here, it means that finally I am the grown-up — and I am not ready for that.

Where did the years go? I cannot answer that question. The only thing I know for certain is that I am very lucky to have had her. — Anonymous, Of Course

Dear Readers: Food for thought? A whole banquet. I hope you, my dear readers, learned something today.

Special week to honor law officers

Editor's Note: National Police Week is May 9-15 and National Law Enforcement Day is May 15.

By Carolyn Waters

Beginning in May 1962, by a proclamation signed into law by President John F. Kennedy, the week of Mother's Day was established as National Police Week, with May 15 to be National Law Enforcement Day.

This week and day are set aside to show appreciation for all law enforcement officers from the many entities who serve our community, state and nation.

Approximately 604,000 sworn law enforcement officers in the United States answer the calls for the 33 million crimes committed annually, an average of one crime every two seconds.

Since the first recorded police death in 1794, there have been more than 14,000 law officers killed in the line of duty. On an average, more than 65,000 law enforcement officers are assaulted each year and some 23,000 are injured.

The deadliest year in law enforcement's history was 1974 when 268 officers were killed. The deadliest decade was the 1970s when a total of 2,175 officers were killed in the line of duty.

Texas alone has lost approximately 800 officers, with nine of those being in 1998.

At the National Law Enforcement Memorial in Washington, D.C., the 11th Annual Candlelight Vigil will take place on May 13 to honor more than 300 officers whose names have been newly engraved on the memorial walls.

Their names will be read aloud in the Roll Call of the Fallen. The list includes more than 175 officers who fell long ago, and sadly, 156 names are those of officers who were slain in the line of duty in 1998.

The following tribute to law enforcement officers by Chaplain Ken Ashlock of the Department of Public Safety Officers Association can, perhaps, serve as a thank you to our law enforcement officers in the various branches of service:

A Tribute to Police Officers

Thank God for police officers across our land,
For they give to us a strong helping hand;
They are seldom thanked for their lonely task,
So why do they do it? - Someone might say,
Because of motivation found deep down within,
To provide a safe nation for us to live in.
The officer is criticized, rejected, condemned,
But no one would live where we don't have them;
We must give respect and honor where due,
For they risk their lives for me and for you.
Crime is constantly raging--day and night,
And criminals are protected while demanding their rights.
Many crimes are committed--murder, robbery and rape,
When criminals are punished, some folks are bent out of shape.

But in the line of duty--a policeman dies,
Hardly a comment, very few cries!
But their family has lost a loved one so dear
And a part of America is no longer here.
In the Bible, Romans thirteen, one through seven,
Some valuable instructions from God are given;
He tells us to respect authorities as we should,
For God sends them to us for our own good.
Police protect us as through life we tread
And this chapter tells us they are "Ministers of God."
So to each officer who serves today,
May God be with you, and we want to say,
We thank you for what you're doing and have done,
And for each of you behind the badge and gun,
Keep up the good work you're assigned each day,
For we are behind you each step of the way!

A recently erected memorial to law enforcement officers can be viewed at Llano Cemetery East, 34th and Arthur, Amarillo. Names of those officers from this area who have given their lives in the line of duty are inscribed there.

Also, the names of officers whose survivors attend the Annual COPS Memorial have been added, as well as names of those officers who have died since retirement and those who died during their service as a law enforcement officer.

Chiropractic Q & A

Q: My boyfriend is always popping his neck, back and fingers. Is this bad for him?
A: You should discourage your boyfriend from 'popping' any of his own joints immediately. It is possible that he could actually hurt himself by moving an area of the spine that shouldn't be moved. The real danger, however, is that the repetitive movements will make the spine excessively mobile. This increased laxity in the tissues in and around the spine can create an unstable situation that could lead to back pain or a greater susceptibility to injury in stressful situations. There are theories that repeated cracking of one's back or knuckles can lead to arthritis over a period of time. Chiropractic adjustments involve the application of measured, controlled force applied to very specific locations in the body which require adjustment or movement. Just moving joints in the body without proper training or examination could cause irreparable damage.

YOUR EYES

About Cataracts

Cataracts are the gradual clouding of the natural lens of the eye. With age, most people experience some of this clouding. Smoking or excessive exposure to the sun can speed the loss of vision.

In the earliest stages, a cataract does not interfere with vision, and it's only during a routine examination that it is discovered. With time, though, vision gets hazy. The glare of bright light may make it worse. Sunglasses may be helpful, especially the newer glare-control lenses that filter out blue light. Some are self-darkening photochromatic lenses, available plain or ground to your prescription. Check color vision before wearing them for driving.

The good news is that cataracts respond well to surgery that has been made easier and less complicated in recent years. After the cloud lens is removed, it is replaced by a lens implant or a contact lens. Glasses may still be needed to fine-tune vision for distance and near-vision tasks.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Customer Service Myths - a little business fiction

My trusty old Webster's Dictionary defines "myth" as any fictitious story or idea. In the past, I've written about a few business myths. In this column, I want to focus on some of the false notions associated with caring for your customers.

A myth is not a bold-faced, outright lie. Most folks won't believe an obvious lie. Myths often contain just enough truth to make us believe they are completely true.

Some of the greatest myths are in the area of customer service. I came up with a few myths that I hope you aren't propagating your business.

Nine Service Myths

- Customers want to be treated in the same way you want to be treated. Sorry, the Golden Rule doesn't apply. Treating people just like you prefer to be treated makes the assumption that all your customers are just like you. They aren't.
- Ask your customers what is important to them. Find out what kind of service they value. Use written surveys, face-to-face encounters and continual follow-up to see what your customers want. Then see that they get it.
- Saying I'm sorry makes up for poor service. It is important to apologize for poor service. However, your apology won't appease the customers if you continue to offer shoddy service on subsequent visits. Focus on improving service and eliminating problems. You'll find that you can quit apologizing.
- My customers aren't complaining, so my service must be pretty good. Most people don't complain about pitiful service. They just take their business elsewhere.
- A complaining customer should be welcomed. Those few who do complain, can help you spot problems, find weak employees and improve every aspect of your customer care.
- My employees know how to give good service. What your employees "know" is only valuable to your business if it is also what they "do."
- Training is a good first step. However, if you don't recognize and reward good service when provided, the training will soon be forgotten.
- Customer service is all about being friendly and courteous.

I know several folks who are friendly and courteous who don't know soup from slop.

Don't get me wrong, friendly is good and courtesy is highly desirable. However, great customer service requires much more. More as in: product knowledge, convenience, follow-through, accuracy, reliability, quick response times, technical skills and consistency.

• The customer is always right. This one of the most commonly repeated myths. The fact is, customers can be just as wrong as anyone else.

However, the customer is still the customer. They are still the only reason your business exists. So, even when they're wrong, treat them right.

• My customers understand that when my employees make mistakes it isn't my fault. For the record, you are responsible for employee mistakes. When you're the boss, the buck stops at your desk.

Poor service is still poor service. Even very loyal customers will only put up with so much before they look for another source.

• Small town businesses offer better service. Why? I've never had anyone explain this one to me. Is it because in small towns everyone knows everyone else? Is the reason that folks in small towns are friendlier? Is it because they're not so busy and have more time to serve?

Then tell me why folks who live in small towns drive to bigger towns to shop. They do, you know.

• My customers know when I'm open. This may be true, but you can still lose customers if you aren't open when they want or need you to be open.

Adjust your hours for the convenience of your customers. They will reward you with more of their business.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Rebecca Walls
Mothers, aren't they wonderful? Just think, if it were not for your mother, you would not be here today. Growing up, what did you like best about your mother, what did you like least? One thing I liked best about my mother was her ability to tell family stories.

It was through those family stories that we learned right from wrong, how to control our tempers, and our family heritage. We learned the story of our own birth and how the other sisters felt about the new baby, through mother's stories.

We also learned that washing dishes could be a pleasant time when mother would talk to us about growing up, the funny things that happened that day or maybe about a story she had read. Oh, those were the days.

I also remember the times that mother made me and my sisters take responsibility for our actions, decisions and attitudes. We knew that when we did something questionable the first question mother would ask was, "Why did you do that?" "I do not know" was never an acceptable answer.

We were forced to think about what we had done until we came up with an answer. Then we would have to discuss that reason. There were many times that I had just wanted mother to spank me and be done with it. Having to answer that "why" questions forced us to voice our reasoning and the justification for that action.

By voicing our reason we could then see the folly in that line of thought. We knew that being mean just because we felt like it was a punishable offense. We also knew that when we were wrong, there would be a just punishment. Following the punishment we were always given forgiveness and the incident was forgotten.

It did not take us long to learn that repeated offenses would have a punishment that would be more serious. At the time, I guess that is what I liked the least.

Mother expected us to learn from our mistakes, and not to keep doing the same things over and over. You know, all the time I was growing up, I was never grounded. I remember having to clean a lot, but most of all I remember having to make amends with that friend or sister. Making amends meant you had to apologize, and then become friends again, by doing a good deed.

Through the years and even today, I know I can count on my mother to give wise counsel. It seems she has always been able to see beyond that one event and to see how others are affected. Mother has also been able to help us see where we were wrong and how that wrong could be made right.

She could express praise, and the pride she had for each of us. She is one in a million, and I am sorry she could not be your mother. I am convinced that the world would be very different had more people had her as their mom.

On this Mother's Day, tell your mom how much you love her and appreciate all that she has done for you. She needs to hear it from you.

Hoare and the Portsmouth Atrocities by Wilder Perkins is a maritime mystery, that reminds me of the kind of story my mother would read aloud. Of course when she came to the "spicy" parts, she would quickly read them to herself.

The story begins with Bartholomew Hoare serving as Lieutenant in King George III's Royal Navy. Being a descendant of Vikings, Hoare knew how to use his fists to defend his name and its implications from school-boys, shipmates, and generally impolite Britons at every social level.

But Hoare's promising career is ended by a musket ball to the neck. Obviously, one who gives orders must be able to speak above a whisper. It is when he is assigned to land-based duty that Hoare meets Mrs. Eleanor Graves.

Set upon by ruffians, Mrs. Graves is actively and enthusiastically defending herself when Hoare comes to her aid. After meeting Mrs. Graves, Hoare becomes a dear family friend.

Then Hoare is asked to put his talents to help a young officer who has been charged with the murder of his captain. There begins the mystery that Hoare must solve quickly if he and the young officer are to remain alive.

Ellen and the Barber by Frank O'Rourke follows the lives of three strong-willed young women during the time of the Great Depression. Set in a small Midwestern town, all three women set out to experience as much of life as possible.

Ellen is the one torn between the love of two different men. Miriam, traditionally minded (whatever that is) is divided by duty to one and a last chance at happiness. Vera is the independent, adventure-seeking woman who could be destroyed by the character strength she strives to develop. This character reminds me of my great-Aunt Vera who was fiercely independent and always ready for an adventure.

You know the new book list would not be complete without murder and mayhem. So the list also includes: Suspicion by Barbara Rogan begins, "In the common course of events people choose houses. Sometimes, though, it does not work that way. Sometimes houses choose people: they reach out, they whisper, they entice and infold." Are you intrigued?

Suspicion of Betrayal by Barbara Parker. Miami attorney, Gail Connor, has just become engaged to top criminal lawyer Anthony Quintana. Gail's hectic life becomes even more so when someone begins to stalk her.

Annual banquet recognizes top FFA members

McGowan, Warren receive scholarships; 1999-2000 officers named

Success in FFA means lots of hard work, lots of hands on experience and lots of appreciation for what a person earns.

During the annual FFA Banquet and Parent appreciation dinner FFA members acknowledged the efforts of its members and their parents, with a dinner, slide show and awards to special members.

Fields of cotton and wheat, herds of cattle, and overhead sprinklers just seem natural on the High Plains.

Residents often take the appearance of the crops and livestock for granted, and have for years, with never a thought to the real producers.

But, today's FFA members think about them. They learn about agriculture from every standpoint and importance of agriculture in a modern world.

Participants in the Future Farmers of America programs develop skills, through classroom and competitive events preparing for a lifetime in agriculture.

FFA members do much more than raise livestock for stock shows.

Part of the FFA curriculum includes learning and understanding Parliamentary Procedure public speaking, livestock judging, shooting, soil and water management, and many other agriculture related topics.

For their efforts, various teams and individual members were honored at the annual banquet.

The Senior Chapter Conducting Team - Zachary Vasek, Ben Sublett, Ian Isaacson, Jerad Johnson, Chad Christie, Krista Warren, Brent Carlson and Meredith McGowan - received third in the Littlefield District.

Conducting teams are responsible for carrying out business meetings according to set rules.

Winning the Creed contest was Steven Reinart, Greenhand Creed speaker, and Laura Ontiveros, senior Creed Speaker.

Radio Script Team members, Nelson Beville, Amanda Vallejo and Eddie Trotter, were honored for their third place presentation at Littlefield District.

This year Hereford FFA had two judging teams, both earning high placings at various competitions.

The livestock team evaluates cattle, swine, and sheep. Team members, Zachary Vasek, Chad Christie, Ian Isaacson, Ben Sublett, Nelson Beville and Krista Warren, placed sixth at West Texas A&M; 11th at Clarendon; high team at South Plains, as well as several other competitors.

This year's horse team, Glenn Kahlich, Steven Reinart, Weston Wilcox and Will McGowan, ranked horses for breed characteristics, conformation and performance.

FFA members who were honored for their proficiency in special categories were: Eddie Trotter, shooting sports; Cory Marsh, soil and water management; Krista Warren, home community development; Brent Huseman, ag mechanics; Ivory Isaacson, beef production; Steven Reinart, swine production; Jared Johnson, sheep production; Chad Christie, fiber crop production; Bobbi Brethour, food science and technology; Brent Carlson, feed grain production; Nelson Beville, diversified livestock; Brianne Malamen, equine science; and Ian Isaacson, in landscape management.

Eddie Trotter was named fruit and meat salesman after selling nearly $1,400 worth of fruits and meats.

Craig Campbell won the steer proficiency award for his work with the County Reserve Grand Champion. He also placed a Ft. Worth and won the class at San Antonio, breed at Houston.

Jerad Johnson claimed the swine proficiency award. He won breed champion York and Hampshire at county and showed at Houston and San Antonio.

For the first time, a local member, Zachary Vasek, competed in the Houston Ag Mechanic Show. He designed and built the trailer he took to competition winning his division and grand champion overall.

The FFA members realize the necessity of adult advisors and sponsors. Each year they induct honorary members who have helped and encouraged the members.

This year Rhonda Johnson, Harlan Resch and Bryan Hedrick were named honorary members.

As many of these students will be leaving high school and heading for college, funding tops the list of concerns.

This year Meredith McGowan and Krista Warren have been named winners of the Ford Truck FFA Scholarships. Officers for the 1999-2000 school year will be: Will McGowan, Parliamentarian; Peyton Ward, Advisor; Jerad Johnson, Vice President; Ivory Isaacson, Sentinel; Eddie Trotter, Reporter; Ben Sublett, President; Nelson Beville, Treasurer; and Ian Isaacson, Secretary.

New FFA officers - The officers for the 1999-2000 school year were recently named during the annual FFA banquet. Serving the local chapter will be (from left) Will McGowan, Parliamentarian; Peyton Ward, Advisor; Jerad Johnson, Vice President; Ivory Isaacson, Sentinel; Eddie Trotter, Reporter; Ben Sublett, President; Nelson Beville, Treasurer; and Ian Isaacson, Secretary.

Recent rains encourage haying, field preparation

Farmers prepare for possible drought conditions

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Hay producers across the state are preparing to make hay while the sun shines, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Dr. David Bade, Extension forage specialist in College Station, said recent rains in many areas of the state have prompted pasture preparation as producers are trying to make as much hay as possible early in the season.

"A lot of producers want to be prepared if we have another drought this summer," he said. "And the long-range forecast doesn't look so good."

Bade said several producers have cut wheat and oat hay and are cutting ryegrass now.

"They're trying to get as much in storage as they can," he said.

Charles Stichler, Extension

agronomist in Uvalde, said the last of the oat hay is being baled.

"Several coastal bermuda fields are being cut to clean them up," he said. "With the beneficial rains we've had recently, producers should be making their first cuttings in about three weeks."

Stichler said a lot of forage sorghum has been planted and is growing well due to recent rains.

Lin Wilson, district Extension director in Corpus Christi, said pastures are being fertilized and weed killers are being applied.

"A lot of pastures aren't ready to cut, but are being prepared," Wilson said.

Dr. Eric Prostko, Extension agronomist in Stephenville, said preparation activity is heavy in Central Texas.

"We've had several producers springing their coastal bermuda fields in hopes that the recent rains will help the new growth," he said.

Prostko said hay prospects for the year look good.

"We've had nearly two inches of rain in as many weeks," he said. "Several fields of forage sorghum and hay grazer have been planted."

Prostko said winter grains are being cut for hay and chopped for silage.

"Producers want to make sure they will have enough feed on hand in case we have another dry summer," he said.

Bob Robinson, district Extension director in Amarillo, said beneficial rains up to 2-inches fell across the area.

"Temperatures have been below normal, and field activities have been halted due to wet conditions," he said.

Galen Chandler, district Extension director in Vernon, said the Rolling Plains received up to 3-inches of rain over several days.

"Alfalfa, sorghum, sudan and wheat hay continue to be cut and baled," he said. "Many producers are cleaning up their fields in preparation for a good hay growing season."

Chandler said range and pasture conditions continue to improve, but high winds are depleting the soil of needed moisture.

Scott Durham, district Extension director in San Angelo, said the district received scattered showers along with cooler temperatures.

"Land preparations for planting of peanuts and cotton are under way," he said. "Sorghum planting is under way as well."

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by area district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: soil moisture is short to surplus. Rains and below normal temperatures halted field activities. Wheat fair to excellent. Some wheat hay being cut. Planting of corn delayed due to wet conditions. Range fair to excellent. Alfalfa weevils damaging alfalfa.

SOUTH PLAINS: soil moisture is short to surplus. Widespread rainfall; more expected to damage in wheat fields; yield potential remains good. Pasture conditions look good; cattle body conditions getting better. Moderate peach crop expected; spraying continues.

Soy products protect against cancers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department scientists are searching through leftovers from soybean oil and protein extraction for components that might help cancer-free people avoid the disease.

The idea, according to the Agricultural Research Service, is to turn DNA-friendly compounds called chemoprotectants, into food additives and pharmaceuticals. Some natural and synthetic chemicals cause DNA disruptions that sometimes result in malignancies, but chemoprotectants help protect against irreversible cell damage, ARS said.

Soybeans and other foods contain substances called antioxidants that can help prevent cell mutations. Some of the antioxidant soy extracts, which are called isoflavones, are marketed as food additives.

ARS scientists at the National Center for Agricultural Utilization Research in Peoria, Ill., and other scientists at the University of Illinois in Champaign are looking for new chemoprotectants.

The soy leftovers make up a gooey molasses that has been used as livestock feed. Chemoprotectants isolated from the leftovers could become, pound for pound, more valuable than the main processed soy products. A light brown powder called phytochemical concentrate, or PCC, isolated from the molasses, contains a mixture of these potent materials.

In the research, university scientists are exposing cell cultures of Chinese hamster lungs and ovaries to PCC components prepared by the ARS scientists. Then they challenge the cells with a chemical known to induce tumors. Later, they assess DNA breakage in the cells and identify the most protective PCCs.

In preliminary studies, mice fed certain PCC components seem to be protected from some forms of cell damage. These components include molecules that are much more antimutagenic than flavonoids, which are antioxidants found in many foods.

The research, supported in part by the United Soybean Board, may serve as a model.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Ellington tribute lets viewers 'check his music out'

By Suzanne Gill

©TVData Features Syndicate

It's OK if you aren't familiar with Duke Ellington's great jazz music before seeing the latest Great Performances episode, Swingin' With Duke: Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra With Wynton Marsalis. Even famed trumpeter Marsalis, the program's host, admits he wasn't "turned on to Duke" until he'd reached the advanced age of 20 or 21.

"The first thing that struck me about Duke Ellington's music was the sophistication of it," Marsalis says. "It was something that I didn't really know existed in American music (outside of classical music.)"

Commemorating the centennial of Ellington's birth, the 90-minute program, produced in the new HDTV format, airs Wednesday, May 12, on PBS (check local listings). Fortunately for viewers, Marsalis is as lively a personality and as good a musician as his subject.

Marsalis and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, which specializes in Ellington's music, are joined by Dianne Reeves, a blues singer following in the footsteps of the great Ella Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald is heard as well, in vintage recordings of Ellington compositions.

Ellington, who died at age 75 in 1974, is seen and heard in footage from 1929 through the 1960s. And throughout is the best of his music: "Don't Get Around Much Anymore," "New Orleans Suite," "Take the A Train," "Mood Indigo" and more.

"He wrote 2,000 pieces of music," Marsalis says, "and there's not any composer you will ever find - even Bach - who wrote more different kinds of music."

Ellington's diversity is evident in the music he composed for nightclubs, movies, concert halls and cathedrals. He also managed to keep an orchestra of jazz superstars together for decades, despite a grueling concert schedule on two continents. And he pursued romance with a passion that overflowed into such compositions as "Sophisticated Lady."

In interviews with 60 Minutes correspondent and jazz devotee Ed Bradley, Marsalis calls Ellington "our Homer" because "he takes our mythology and writes it down." He cites the various influences heard in Ellington's music - ragtime, Shaker hymns, Tin Pan Alley, Dixieland and, above all, the blues.

"Duke was a great student of African-American history, and of American history," Marsalis says. "He was always affirming the United States of America and also affirming the presence of the Afro-American as part of America."

Predictably, Ellington's contribution to the civil rights movement came through music.

"He did many benefit concerts," Marsalis notes. "Introducing tunes like 'The Harlem Suite,' he would say, 'You might hear the sound of some people marching ... as they attempt to get their civil rights.'"

Before the show is over, Marsalis indulges his own love of teaching by sharing Ellington's music with a student band. The music "codifies American feelings and aspirations and ideals," Marsalis says. "There's no other music that's ever been created in the United States of America that will put a kid more in touch with what it means to be American, in contemporary terms."

But the best evidence of Ellington's influence is found by listening, he says. "Just like any great figure - Bach, Ludwig van Beethoven - you don't have to talk about it," Marsalis concludes. "Check his music out."

Legendary band leader and composer Duke Ellington is the subject of the latest Great Performances showcase, Swingin' With Duke: Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra With Wynton Marsalis, airing in the new HDTV format on PBS Wednesday, May 12 (check local listings).

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ May 9-15 ★ ★

ARIES – March 21/April 20

Don't get impatient with a good friend who is trying to explain something to you. He or she is very upset. Try to help this person organize his or her thoughts and get to the heart of the matter. Once you understand what is going on, try to help with the situation. Your efforts will be appreciated.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21

Don't back down when it comes to something that you really want, Taurus. Work diligently to reach your goal. Those closest to you are more than willing to help, so don't be afraid to turn to them. The person whom you've been seeing needs a little time alone. Don't get upset. This break is sure to strengthen your relationship.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21

You have a lot on your mind early in the week, Gemini. Don't keep everything bottled up. Talk to a close friend; he or she will be there for you. A loved one needs your help with a family matter. Do what you can to help — even though you really don't want to get involved.

CANCER – June 22/July 22

Be careful this week when it comes to talking with an acquaintance. He or she is trying to get information from you. Don't tell him or her anything confidential. A loved one needs your advice about a personal problem. Be honest — even if what you have to say won't be appreciated.

LEO – July 23/August 23

You meet an interesting person late in the week, Leo. Even though you are nervous around him or her, don't be shy. Just be your normal outgoing self, and you're sure to make a good impression. A friend asks a favor of you. Do what you can to help. Libra plays an important role on Thursday.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22

You get caught in the middle of an intense disagreement between friends. Don't take sides. Just try to help everyone come to an understanding. It will be difficult, but your perseverance will pay off. That special someone gets called out of town unexpectedly. Don't get nervous; his or her reason is legitimate.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23

Try to keep your wits about you this week, Libra. There is a lot going on, and several acquaintances are trying to manipulate you. Don't be taken in by their scheme. A loved one volunteers you to handle a family matter. While you don't want to do it, there's no way to get out of it.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't get caught up in the emotion when having a heated discussion with a close friend. Try to see his or her point of view — not just your own. If you listen, you'll find that what he or she is saying makes sense. A good friend offers you romantic advice. Take it!

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21

Don't let your temper get the best of you when an acquaintance gets you into trouble. He or she really doesn't mean to cause you any harm. Unfortunately, it is working out that way. Accept his or her offer to help remedy the situation. Another Sagittarius plays a key role on Saturday.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20

That special someone doesn't want to see you anymore. Even though you are hurt, don't try to prolong the relationship. Deep down, you know that he or she isn't the right person for you. Turn to a loved one for comfort. He or she will be there for you.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18

You are on your own this week, Aquarius, and that's just how you like it. You can get a lot of things done, because you won't have any distractions. Focus on the tasks at hand; you'll make tremendous progress. A good friend asks for your advice about a personal problem. Be honest with him or her.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20

While you're not a greedy person, you don't want to give up something interesting that you find early in the week. Don't feel guilty about this;

you have every right to keep it for yourself. A close friend invites you out this weekend. Say yes, because it is sure to be a good time.

IN FOCUS

Discovery Channel's Why Dogs Smile and Chimpanzees Cry, narrated by Sigourney Weaver and airing Sunday, May 9, gives "puppy love" a whole new meaning. Once dismissed by science as blasphemous, attributing emotions to animals is now not only accepted, but proven through brain imaging. Viewers will meet Washoe, the chimp who was taught American Sign Language in 1966, and hear how she expressed empathy to a researcher who, like her, had lost a baby.

Kevin Anderson stars as Ira Einhorn in The Hunt for the Unicorn Killer, a fact-based two-part TV movie airing Sunday and Monday, May 9 and 10, on NBC. Einhorn is a respected intellectual in the '60s and '70s, lecturing at Harvard and running for office in Philadelphia. A.J. Langer

Q: What can you tell me about A.J. Langer of My So-Called Life? I would shuck corn or dig clams with her anytime. —Keith Shade, Sherman, N.Y.

A: Keith, you silver-tongued devil, I hope you have been enjoying Langer's charming performance as masseuse-process server Lauren Woods on ABC's It's Like, You Know. In addition to her So-Called role as flaky Rayanne Graff, the actress, who turns 25 on May 22, earlier played Dabney Coleman's daughter on the sitcom Drexell's Class and had recurring roles in Coach and Brooklyn South.

Her long list of guest appearances includes Seinfeld, Touched by an Angel, Blossom and Baywatch. In case it comes up during your clambake, Keith, the A.J. stands for Allison Joy.

Q: Didn't Don Knotts of The Andy Griffith Show once play a character named Wilbur on a soap opera? —J.S. McDuffie, Charlotte, N.C.

A: That's scary. Yes, Knotts played Wilbur Peterson on the now-defunct Search for Tomorrow from 1953-55.

Q: Please clarify how the Jesse and Rebecca storyline was resolved on Life Goes On. My daughter says Rebecca and Jesse got married and had a baby. I say Jesse died and Rebecca married someone else and named their baby after Jesse. —Janice Byers, Chino Valley, Ariz.

A: You're both correct, to a point. Jesse and Rebecca (Chad Lowe, Kellie Martin) got married in the series finale, but the episode then "flashed forward" a few more years to show Becca married to someone else following Jesse's AIDS-related death. She named their son after Jesse.

Several fans of the show have debated whether Jesse was actually the father of the child, but the producers have clarified in an interview that this was not the case.

Q: I noted an actress named Melody Thomas playing a tiny role in John Wayne's The Shootist. Is this by chance the Melody Thomas Scott we know from The Young and the Restless? —Robert Conrad, Dublin, Ohio.

A: It is indeed.

Q: Who played Laverne Todd's mother-in-law on Empty Nest? My friend says Polly Holliday of Alice. I'm not so sure. —Frances B. in Virginia.

A: According to a list of the show's guest stars, Ann Morgan Guilbert, now playing Yetta on The Nanny, played the formidable "Mama" Todd.

Q: I recently enjoyed seeing The Shawshank Redemption again on TV. Do you know where it was filmed? —Art Romero, N. Chatham, Mass.

A: The drama was filmed mainly at the Mansfield Reformatory in Ohio.

ABC saddles up for the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico

Even though the Preakness Stakes is the second race of the Triple Crown, it is by no means second-rate. Baltimore's Pimlico Race Course plays host to the 124th running of the Preakness. Coverage of the middle jewel in horse racing's Triple Crown airs Saturday, May 15, on ABC.

Co-anchors Jim McKay and Al Michaels, analyst Charlsie Cantey, trackside reporter Lesley Visser and race announcer Dave Johnson return to call the action and provide pre- and post-race analysis.

The Preakness is a crucial follow-up to the Kentucky Derby and a telling preview of the Belmont Stakes. By the end of the 1/3-16 mile race, one of the competing 3-year-old Thoroughbreds will either be one win away from an elusive Triple Crown sweep, or the sport will have to wait until next year for a racehorse to have its name mentioned in the same breath as Citation, Affirmed and Secretariat.

Of course, both earnings and fan interest have skyrocketed since those legendary horses last took to the track.

With $650,000 awarded for a first-place finish, Pimlico media director Ann Taylor can easily understand why the race draws a crowd of more than 90,000 and a worldwide TV audience.

"The last two years, we had horses winning the second leg of the Triple Crown (here)," Taylor says. "They won (the Derby,) the Preakness and went on to Belmont in hopes of winning the Triple Crown. That's what happened to Real Quiet in '98 and Silver Charm in '97. They both lost the last leg of the Triple Crown, but both won the Preakness."

The Preakness is limited to a field of 12 horses, as opposed to the Derby, which can have as many as 20 competitors. Taylor believes fewer horses make for a better stakes race.

"It's a more competitive race because of the size of the field," she says. "It weeds out the talent from the wannabes. That's the beauty of being in the middle."

Mourning the end of Another World

So that's it! After 35 years, it is over. In an effort to streamline its daytime schedule, NBC has canceled its longest-running daytime serial, Another World. The last episode of the drama airs Friday, June 25.

"I thank all the people working on Another World for an incredible job at giving their audience an amazing 35-year run," NBC Entertainment President Scott Sassa says. "It was a very tough decision. However, these changes allow us to take a major step toward putting our shows in pattern, which is critical to our success in this daypart."

In other words, AW drew the short straw and will be replaced by James Reilly's new soap, Passions.

AW premiered May 4, 1964, and was the first to go to the hourlong format. The show changed writers and producers over the past 10 years, during which time it lost its focus and some of its audience. It has been at the bottom of the ratings pile for years.

Earlier this year Christopher Goutman joined the show as executive producer. He tried to bring the focus back to the core families and fan favorites. Goutman was making inroads, and fans were delighted. But it was too little too late.

"Although we certainly wish the outcome were different," says Mary Alice Dwyer-Dobbin, executive in charge of productions for Procter & Gamble, "it's a sad comment on the television industry as a whole that a soap, especially one with so much history, has to be canceled to make room for a new one."

The producers promise to give fans the best show until the final episode. "The threat that we might be canceled has been out there for years," Joseph Barbara (Joe, AW) says. "We just come in and do our jobs. We try not to think about it."

After lengthy negotiations last year, Days of Our Lives was renewed through 2004. In April, Aaron Spelling's Sunset Beach was given another six-month extension.
