Festival to begin week's run

By Kitt Jennings

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

The organizers of the annual Town & Country Jubilee hope the event will help relieve the late-summer doldrums.

Between Monday and Aug. 8, Hereford should bustle with a variety of activities.

The most active day will be Saturday, Aug. 7, with almost non-stop events on tap, beginning at 8 a.m. with the annual Greg Black Memorial Fun Run & Walk at the YMCA.

Information about the Greg Black Run can be obtained by calling the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333 or the YMCA at 364-6990.

At 10:30 a.m., the Jubilee Parade will start at Hereford High School and wind its way through downtown. The parade will be followed by live entertainment at Dameron Park.

The Jubilee Junction and entertainment at the park tentatively wraps up around 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Performers this year include everything from the Merry Mixers' square dancing to Threshold '99, a youth drama group from the Nazarene Church. Five singers are also slated to perform, as well as an oldies band known simply as Those Guys.

"It'll be almost impossible to get all these people on stage in four hours," said performance coordinator Adam Treff.

John Payne, the Panhandle Rodeo Association's specialty act of the year, promises to enliven Saturday's parade with his performing flair. Assisted by members of his family, the "One-Armed Bandit," will put on a horse and animal show during the parade and later at the Junction.

If there should be rain before Saturday, the Junction activities will shift to the east of the park; events will be canceled if rain is in progress.

Saturday will also be the first day of competition at the Alford Arena for the Spicer-Gripp Roping Contest.

From 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday, the Amarillo Rattlers will give a free hockey exhibition, complete with a free clinic for kids 8 to 12 who bring their in-line skates.

Both the quilt show and Jubilee of the Arts will be 1-5 p.m. Friday at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

Artists and crafters will display their wares while quilt show registration is under way. The arts and crafts fair will continue from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday. The quilt drawing will be 4 p.m.

Interested artists and crafters should contact Shannon Redwine at 364-0244.

Sidewalk sales and merchant activities are scheduled all week long. The Farmers' Market will open at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the parking lot of Family Dollar.

Parade entry forms are free and Junction booth registration costs $40. The booth operator keeps all his or her profit.

For more information, contact the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333.

Where's the beef?

■ Since 1974, Tyler has led drive to put meat on tables at Texas Girlstown

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

For many Texans, a perfectly prepared beef steak, whether grilled at home or enjoyed at a favorite restaurant, is a regularly accepted event.

For others, such as the residents of three Girlstown campuses, beef used to be a little harder to come by. Thanks to the local Cattlewomen's Association and Marn Tyler, a local real estate agent, acquisition of beef and other meat has become somewhat easier.

Girlstown has provided homes and support for troubled girls for 50 years and for 25 of those years, beef has been on the menu, in part due to Tyler's efforts.

"It was a chance meeting with Nolan Grady at the post office that got the ball rolling," Tyler said.

In 1974, Tyler, then president of the local chapter of Cowbells, now known as the Cattlewomen's Association, learned the residents of the Borger Girlstown had gone for more than four months without any beef.

"Some of the things he told me got me to thinking. I presented the idea of 'Beef for Girlstown' to the local Cowbells. They adopted it and later that year the state chapter adopted the goal of finding and providing beef donors for Girlstown." Through the years Tyler has led the way for cattle feeders, stockmen, 4-H and FFA members and individuals to contribute to the Girlstown residents through beef donations.

"I can't think of a better way of promoting beef and help those girls, than to get donations of beef for their tables," said Tyler.

In the early years of the "Beef for Girlstown" campaign, lambs, goats and pigs and a few head of cattle were donated through the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show and the larger cattle feeders.

In 1975, Tri State Chemical entered a contest in which the winnings would be donated to a charitable cause. Harry Bryant, a representative of Tri State Chemi-

City manager proposing pay hike for city workers

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

If everything goes as Hereford City Manager Chester Nolen proposes, city employees will be pleased.

In his proposed Fiscal 2000 budget, which will be presented to the Hereford city commissioners when they meet at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Nolen recommends a 4.5 percent pay increase for most city employees.

City taxpayers have a combination of news in the budget plan.

First, Nolen recommends a tax rate of 41 cents per $100 assessed valuation, unchanged from the year that ends Sept. 30. However, because of an increase in the total assessed valuation of property in Hereford, the rate represents a 6.22 percent increase over the effective tax rate of 39.8 cents per $100 valuation. The effective tax rate is the rate required to generate the same amount of revenue as in the previous year.

Because the proposed rate represents an increase over the effective tax rate, the city will have to conduct a public hearing.

The Deaf Smith County Appraisal District set the city's tax base $273,495,540, up $6.3 million since 1998.

The proposed budget that the commissioners will receive Monday projects general fund revenue for the next fiscal year will be $4,813,573, an increase of about $87,000 from the FY 1999 budget.

Of the revenue, the city expects to collect slightly more than $1 million in ad valorem taxes; $1.2 million in sales tax/mixed drink tax; and $700,000 from operating transfers, primarily from the water/sewer fund.

On the expenditure side, Nolen recommends spending $4,780,583, which would leave a $32,990 surplus when the year ends Sept. 30, 2000.

Hospital directors to study

By Donald M. Cooper

If members of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board are blurry-eyed when they walk out of the Hereford Country Club Thursday night, at least one person will be satisfied.

The hospital district board will participate this week in a retreat designed to provide the directors with information about effective hospital management.

The retreat will begin at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the country club. Each session should wind up about 10 p.m. and will be conducted by Larry D. Krupala, president/chief executive officer of Management Services Inc., a subsidiary of the Texas Organization of Rural and Community Hospitals (TORCH).

The retreat was scheduled in part because the board has three new members - Ernest Flood, Steve Lawlis and Bobby Owen. Also, the board is under the guid-

THE HEREFORD BRAND Local roundup

Substitute teacher training scheduled by school district

Mandatory training for substitute teachers for the 1999-2000 school year in the Hereford Independent School District will be 8 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Tuesday at the HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave.

All substitutes who have been hired by the district are required to attend the training session unless they have received teacher certification from the Texas Education Agency.

Among the items to be covered are technology, classroom management and discipline, safety and emergencies, reading strategies, math strategies, and special programs.

This session is the first of two conducted each year for substitute teachers.

HISD accepts applications for substitute teaching positions through the school year.

For more information, contact the HISD personnel office at 364-0606.

HJHS photo session set

Students who will be attending Hereford Junior High School classes for the first time in 1999-2000 are encouraged to visit the campus Aug. 14, to have their photographs taken for identification badges.

This will involve all seventh grade students and those eighth graders who are new to the campus.

Students must present their Social Security card before they may have their photograph taken.

District policy requires that the badges be worn at all times while attending class on the junior high and high school campuses.

Principal Lynn Luther has scheduled specific times for students to have their photograph taken. This will reduce the delay for students waiting in line for their pictures to be taken with digital cameras.

The schedule is:

- 9 to 10 a.m. for students whose last names begin with the letters A through D.
- 10 to 11 a.m. for students whose last names begin with the letters E through J.
- 11 a.m. to noon for students whose last names begin with the letters K through N.
- 1 to 2 p.m. for students whose last names begin with the letters O through R.
- 2 to 3 p.m. for students whose last names begin with the letters S through Z.

City commissioners to meet

Hereford city commissioners will consider a request from the Hereford Economic Development Corp. regarding street closures.

The commissioners will consider the request during their meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commissioners chamber at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

The streets affected by the petition are a portion of Industrial Street, all of the strip of land/alley between Commerce and Industrial streets and between Canal and Rail avenues, all of the strip of land/alley between Industrial and Express streets, and all of Rail Avenue in Hereford Industrial Park. The closures are requested because of Farmland Industries work at its grain center complex.

Aerial spraying planned

The city has scheduled an aerial application of insecticide for mosquito and fly control next week.

The spraying will be Tuesday, weather permitting.

cal, presented Tyler with a check for $6,100, exclusively for the purchase of beef for the girls.

Tyler says she took nearly a year away from her real estate business to promote the "Beef for Girlstown" project.

"We spoke on television and radio in Amarillo and Lubbock," Tyler said, "just to get people aware of the need of beef donations for Girlstown."

Her background as a real estate agent put her in a prime position to talk to feeders and cattlemen.

"I only ask people who I think might want to contribute," she said. "In all the years I've done this, I've only had one person tell me they weren't at all interested in helping."

Since the scattered beginnings, Tyler has seen more than 35,000 pounds of beef; 13,000 pounds of pork and 1,000 pounds of lamb find a place on the Girlstown menus.

Even with the meat donations procured, other arrangements still had to be made.

Originally, Bradford Trucking would haul the live donations to Palo Duro Packing for processing, then Texas State Technical Institute would cut and wrap the meat.

All pro-bono.

Since Girlstown affiliated with Cal Farley's Boys Ranch, some of the residents of Boys Ranch now take on the duties of picking up and delivering the donations.

"This is such a worthwhile program, because you feel like you're really helping someone who needs and deserves the help," Tyler said.

"Girlstown operates only on donations. It gets no government help. It's so important to keep this organization needs in the public view."

The Cattlewomen's Association, like the Cowbells before them, work to promote beef as a wholesome and nutritious dietary component.

Tyler has served as president, chairman and on the advisory and planning boards for Girlstown.

Merchants urging residents to keep dollars in Hereford

Alco Discount Store, 115 W. Park, is encouraging local residents and back to school shoppers to keep dollars at home during the upcoming "No Tax Holiday."

Also on Aug. 7, Tejano Country FM will be making a live remote broadcast from 10 a.m. to noon and giving away T-shirts and other various items. The store will accept registrations for four free tickets to Wonderland, sponsored by the Coca-Cola company, to be given away during the tax holiday.

Also, Alco manager Dave Jorgensen said the clear plastic backpacks, now being required for junior high and high school students who carry backpacks, should be available Tuesday. Backpacks will cost $9.99. Clear or mesh backpacks are all that will be allowed in grades 7-12.

Jorgensen said the distributor had sent the clear backpacks to an Abilene warehouse rather than sending them to the Hereford store. The backpacks will be sent to Hereford by UPS on Monday, which means they should be in the store by Tuesday, Jorgensen said.

Retreat

ance of new officers, including president Dean Crofford.

"We will give each director a manual on the effective hospital administration," Krupala said. "We will work with the manual to cover several items."

"We'll talk about regulatory entities, finances and strategic planning, as well as the role of the governing board, which we see as health advocates in the community," he said.

"It (the retreat) will be very intensive. For two days, it's going to be a very intense time. Once the directors have completed the retreat, Carolan and Donna have compiled a very good handbook for them," Krupala said, referring to Hereford Regional Medical Center administrative assistant Carolan Garza and special projects coordinator Donna Kemp.

Krupala said the handbook will serve as a reference manual for the board members.

"If they have a question about regulatory agencies, they can go to that section and find the information," he said.

Krupala said the retreat will cover a considerable amount of material, but "there's no other way to do it. There is just so much material involved."

"I hope they ask questions, too. Some of the things that should come up will be the Open Meetings Act, questions about the release of information, and some liability situations that some boards can find themselves in," Krupala said. "Of course, I hope they'll have questions about some of the things going on in hospital administration today, like fraud and abuse."

"And, we'll take up the good old basic - how to run a meeting, how to keep it on track."

Krupala said the retreat likely will leave the board members exhausted, but with more knowledge about the board's role in the community and how to be effective administrators of a hospital.

"They should walk away a little blurry-eyed," he said.

expected to have $2,781,000 in revenues with expenditures of $2,428,332, leaving a surplus of $352,668.

The total revenue for Fiscal 2000 is projected at $7,594,573 and total expenditures are estimated to be $7,208,915, leaving a year-end balance of $385,658.

Nolen described the capital expenditures budget as limited, with a total of $197,120 in the general fund "wish list" and $119,700 for the water and sewer fund.

The largest capital expenditure requests is for the fire department, which is seeking $74,700 to purchase a new vehicle ($36,000), radio console ($20,000), four air packs ($10,000), a 3-inch fire hose ($3,500), a 3/4-inch fire hose ($1,000) and fire helmets ($4,200).

The police department is seeking $55,870, with nearly all of the money to go for the purchase of two police cruisers.

The John Pitman Municipal Golf Course is requesting $33,500 in capital expenditures, with the bulk of the money to go for the purchase of a replacement fairway mower ($20,500). Also in the golf course request is $12,000 for four golf carts.

The largest requests for water and sewer capital expenditures is $55,700 from the utility maintenance department, which wants to purchase a half-ton 4-by-4 pickup ($23,000) and handheld reading units ($20,000).

Tax-free days near

■ Many school items to receive exemption from state sales tax

Special to The Brand

As Hereford parents begin thinking about their children heading back to the classroom in a few weeks, they also anticipate those annual trips to the store for the purchase the back-to-school clothing. However, this year the drain on the pocketbook will be a bit lighter if those purchases are made on three specific days in August.

Many back-to-school items can be purchased free of tax on these three days because of special legislation enacted by Texas lawmakers in the 1999 legislative session.

Beginning at 12:01 a.m. Aug. 6, 1999, and continuing until midnight Aug. 8, parents will not have to pay state and local taxes on the purchase of many clothing items their children need or want to begin the new school year.

In a letter to Texans, Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander said she expects the tax-free dates to save consumers $69.2 million in state sales taxes and up to another $15.5 million in local sales taxes over the biennium.

The tax cuts will allow consumers to save up to $8 in taxes for every $100 spent to purchase items which have been declared free of taxes during this three-day buying period. This will be an annual event for Texas consumers with the first Friday, Saturday and Sunday of every August declared tax free by state legislation. The cuts were approved to lighten the financial burden on parents when buying back-to-school clothing for their children.

According to Rylander, most footwear and clothing priced under $100 will be exempt from sales tax. This tax-free price is for individual items and does not include multiple purchase of items which have single item prices of less than $100.

Clothing and footwear used primarily for athletic activities or for protective wear, jewelry and other accessories, are not eligible. Tax-free items may include: Baby clothes, bathing suits, belts with attached buckles, boots (cowboy and hiking), bras, bridal apparel (not rental), some caps/hats, choir robes, coats and wraps, costumes, dresses, formal clothing, gloves, gym suits and uniforms;

Also on Rylander's list are hooded shirts and sweatshirts, hosiery, jackets, jeans, jerseys for baseball and football, jogging apparel such as bras, suits and shorts, lingerie, neckwear and ties, pajamas, pants and trousers, raincoats and ponchos, robes, shirts;

Other items may be shoes (sandals, slippers, sneakers, tennis, walking), socks, shorts, suits, slacks and jackets, sweatshirts, sweat suits, sweaters, swim suits and trunks, tuxedos (not rentals) underclothes, work clothes and uniforms.

The comptroller also lists items which will be taxed, including: Accessories, barrettes, elastic pony tail holders, wallets, watches, backpacks, baseball cleats and pants, belts buckles without belt, boots (climbing, fishing, rubber work boots, ski and waders), buttons and zippers, cloth and lace (knitting yarns and other fabrics);

Other taxed items include, dry cleaning services, football pants, golf gloves, handbags and purses, handkerchiefs, hard hats, helmets (bike, baseball, football, hockey, motorcycle, sports), ice skates, jewelry, laundering services, leather goods (except belts and wearing apparel).

Additional items may be, pads (football, hockey, soccer, elbow, knee, shoulder) personal flotation devices, rented clothing (including uniforms, formal wear and costumes), roller blades and skates, safety clothing and glasses, shoes (bicycle, cleated, bowling, golf).

Persons seeking more information may call the comptroller's toll free number at (800) 252-5555 or visit the web site at www.window.state.tx.us.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Even taxes go on summer holiday

For the weekend of August 6, 7, and 8, 1999, no local or state sales tax will be applied to most clothing and shoes priced less than $100. The tax break is expected to save Texas consumers $69.2 million in state sales taxes and up to another $15.5 million in city and county sales taxes over the next two years.

* Customers will receive the tax break on individual items regardless of the amount they buy. Clothing and footwear that are used primarily for athletic activities or for protective wear are not eligible. Also not included are accessories, such as jewelry and watches. Items that are rented, and clothing that is made to order.

Let death tax rest in peace

The debate on whether it should cost as much to die as it does to live is still being pressed among those few diehards who argue for the estate tax (commonly referred to as the death tax), and the growing number who argue against it.

The estate tax was among several tax cuts Senate Republicans were pushing for earlier this week. A similar House measure calling for the repeal of the estate tax was approved last week as part of a $792 billion tax cut measure.

While the tax currently starts with estates valued at $650,000, the crux of the debate is that approximately 50 percent of that $650,000 has already been taxed through income tax, and the other half is taxed upon death.

Opponents of the death tax say that an heir's remaining portion of the $650,000 ADT (after death tax), assuming it is further reduced through other assets, like a home, represents about one-fourth of the total. The government plucks the remaining three-fourths.

At least one study estimates the estate tax this century has consumed $497 billion in capital stock, punishing those who reinvest profits in growing businesses, rather spend the windfall.

The tax not only damages the economy, but it also targets the many two-income families that have worked for decades, saved well, and have generally tried to pass the fruits of that labor to other members of their family.

We hope the estate tax, and the resolve to ax it, won't get lost in all the posturing and partisan rhetoric as our lawmakers wring their hands over how to spend projected budget surpluses of more than $1 trillion that don't yet exist.

Since congressional leaders on both sides of the aisle seem compelled to do anything but apply these imagined surpluses to the national debt, we would all be winners if the death tax truly gets a funeral.

It is time to lay this regressive tax to rest and put it where it belongs — six feet under.

Then, and only then, might we be able to rest in peace.

 Dubya vs. the Wooden One.
 C'mon, give me a break. Think about it. We can do much, much better than these two in 2000.

Before any of you Republicans and Democrats start writing that letter to the editor blasting me for denigrating your candidate, let's get one thing straight. I'm not making a political assessment of the likely two presidential nominees; I'm making an artistic assessment.

Bland, unexciting, boring.

As an editorial cartoonist, I find both Texas Gov. George W. (or "Dubya" as he's been tagged by some pundits) Bush and Vice President Al Gore are not very good subjects.

Neither man has any really dominant features that lend themselves to cartoons. Neither man really says anything on the stump.

After all, what does "compassionate conservative" or "practical realism" really mean? I don't think either one of them knows either.

I guess "compassionate conservative" means "I feel your pain, but I won't do anything about it." And, as for "practical realism," have you ever heard of "impractical realism"?

For a cartoonist, the Clinton Administration has been a godsend, just as good as the Reagan years. Clinton, like Reagan, is easy to draw, and he always manages to provide some fodder for a cartoonist.

But Bush Administration II or the Gore Administration?

I don't think so.
 The best time I've ever had as an editorial cartoonist was the nearly five years I worked in Louisiana. For me, drawing cartoons for the Alexandria Daily Town Talk and The (New Iberia) Daily Iberian was just a case of sitting down at the drawing board and "laissez le bon temps rouler!"

For an editorial cartoonist, Louisiana really was a place to let the good times roll. The cartoons came so easily because there were so many colorful characters, saying and doing so many outrageous things.

When I arrived in Alexandria, Edwin "Fast Eddie" Edwards was in the Governor's Mansion, under investigation and soon to be under indictment.

During his successful campaign against incumbent Dave Treen, Edwards had been asked about his prospects on Election Day.

"The only way I can lose it to be caught in bed with a dead girl or a live boy," Edwards quipped.

Because Edwards spent so much time at the gaming tables in Las Vegas, traveling to the casinos with suitcases of cash and regis-Hello, Hereford.

I know something the weathermen don't. There's a 100-percent chance that it's going to rain cats and dogs in Roy, New Mexico Friday night.

My son and I have never been camping in Mills Canyon when the good Lord didn't toss around the idea of flooding the world a second time.

You haven't heard about this canyon? I'm not sure the average explorer would ever be aware the canyon existed unless they accidentally lost control of the car and hit the typically modest brown and yellow state park sign marking its vicinity.

Even then, there are no specific directions to the canyon that I can recall, and you can't see it from the road. You drive across a parcel of ranch land to get there.

The park personifies my take on the state's motto, "The Land of Pitiful Highways and Remoteness."

But once you get there, you are left humbled a little bit, wondering how many other little beautiful and secluded spots there are out there in the great beyond that you'll never see, or know.

I suppose the canyon's greatest appeal is that it isn't widely advertised, and it's easily accessible — about a 2½-hour drive.

We have rarely shared the canyon with more than a few people during previous visits there. Usually, we are only accompanied by cattle that graze the canyon's grass and drink from a quick-running and meandering Canadian River.

Packing our rain gear — a tent

So, we're packing our rain gear — a tent borrowed from Hereford City Commissioner and clothing outfitter Carey Black. He borrows my dog shears, we borrow his tent. The exchange is of mutual benefit since he is the only one who ever uses our dog shears, and judging by how poorly the tent is packed, we were the last to use it a year ago.

My wife, the worrier, still thinks she may never hear from us again. She doesn't want our pictures posted on the side of a milk carton.

I tried to reason with her, explaining that Angel Maturino Resendez, the railroad serial killer and Yosemite's Cary Stayner are now both safely hobbled by the long arm of the law.

And I reminded her my son will have his BB gun, and that he knows how to use it — the guns are famous for putting out eyes and terrible people can't maul us if they can't see us.

I don't think she fully appreciated the levity. Her brow was furrowed in deep thought, leafing through a mental collection of four or five of my worst photographs for the milk carton.

My son can hardly wait to get to "our canyon." And possessing a sense of humor himself, has asked whether I'll test the depth of the river crossing again like I did the first time we went.

"When are you going to teach me to deep-sea dive like that," he giggles.

"I think I would like to show you when we go this weekend," I reply. "But let's don't remind your mother about that little incident, OK?"

Both he and my brother will never let me forget my knee-high wade to midstream, scouting a sure path shortly before I was swallowed by a hole in the riverbed. My brand new straw Stetson, racing down the stream like a white Mississippi river boat, momentarily left my only trace.

I dried-out soon enough to enjoy our evening meal without dripping on it, put some fresh clothes on and enjoyed them for about four hours until the floodgate opened on one of New Mexico's well-known monsoonal flows.

We covered in the darkness

There in the darkness of our tent, my son and I covered from the huff and puff of the wind and ceaseless torrential downpour, and listened for changes in the deafening roar of the river — namely the noise of snapping trees and my brother's truck being swept away to Old Mexico.

After three hours of non-stop rain, my son asked if our campsite was set high enough to avoid a watershed tidal wave. At that point, I feared we might be too high since lightning was striking our clearing methodically, searching for a meaningful bond with a nylon tent.

We laid there in the darkness for a moment more before Kanen, 7 years old then, wiggled his bag closer, narrowing the pitch black void between us and wrapped an arm around me.

"Dad, what should we do?"
 I briefly considered the two of us making a run for my brother's Blazer, if it was still there.

One of the personals stands out

■ In fast-paced world, singles try a variety of ways to find partners, or enjoy romantic encounters

Years ago, as men moved west and settled in vast empty places, they discovered life without wives and women to be desolate at best.

To rectify the shortage of female companions, some ingenious individual came up with the idea of mail-order brides — women who, after a respectable Pony Express courtship, were willing to travel to unknown areas and marry the man who paid their way.

In more than 100 years, not much has changed. Probably the biggest difference is advertisers now are both male and female; participants don't have to agree to marry the person after they meet; and long moves across barren wasteland is no longer required.

Just a phone call leads to a date or two. In a fast-paced world, where no one really has a chance to get to meet suitable romantic partners, many singles have turned to various media to try to attract that someone special. The most prominent of these is the free or low-cost personal ads carried by some of the larger papers.

I don't make a habit of reading these poor pathetic pleas from the lovelorn, but every once in awhile, I'll read them just for a laugh.

The mushy ads proclaiming such pastimes as long walks in the moonlight and snuggling in front of cozy fireplaces don't do much for me. I kind of feel like those idiots need to go write a Harlequin romance novel or something, but the funny and unusual ones can catch my eye.

This week, while going through the Amarillo Daily News, one personal want ad just jumped out at me. You really have to know me to know why.

It read: "O N E DOG..."

Well, that really caught my eye. Was this someone who has absolutely no self-esteem and thinks of himself or herself as a dog or was it a warning to respondents that the dog is part of the package?

Apparently the latter is correct. The dog must be part of the package because the ad continues "... and one 6', 185 lbs SWM, 40, never been married/arrested/worked out, can't dance, quasi-bohemian, lonely intellectual, homebody, couch potato, introspective, seeks SF for friendship."

One thing this poor, lonely-heart left out was apparently a great sense of humor.

As I read further into the ad, I thought it funnier and funnier. To begin with, I know a tering under the name "T. Wong." I always stuck a suitcase with a tag "T. Wong" in every cartoon I drew of the governor.

At the time, the mayor of Alexandria was a real piece of work, John K. "Tillie" Snyder. At one City Council meeting, John K. tried to fire the police chief. He didn't have the authority to fire the chief and the council wouldn't do it, so John K. decided to tail the police chief and catch him in the act of doing something illegal.

A big white Chrysler New Yorker isn't the most inconspicuous car on the streets, so John K. spent most of his nights sitting across the street from the police chief's house.

After a while, John K. gave up his surveillance of the police chief and decided to cut juvenile crime by getting all the kids hooked on fishing.

He filled an abandoned swimming pool with fresh water and stocked it with 600 or 700 pounds of catfish.

The catfish began dying almost immediately and after a few days, John K. had the pool drained and the surviving catfish were dumped in a nearby bayou — but not before I got to do a cartoon about it.

In the cartoon, I drew the mayor with scuba gear in the pool telling some bewildered catfish to "live, dammit! Live!"

In New Iberia, I drew a cartoon about Errol "Romo" Romero, then sheriff of Iberia Parish. The sheriff detested Craig Romero, a distant cousin and the Parish Council president, which is about the same job as county judge.

Romo grew up in the slums, and apparently resented his cousin. Craig's father was a wealthy and powerful state senator who was tied in with the Long family.

After Romo tried to punch out Craig at a Parish Council meeting, I drew a cartoon of the sheriff as a bomb about to explode.

The day after the cartoon appeared, I got a call from the chief deputy who said Romo wanted to see me at his office.

I went over to the courthouse and sat there, somewhat uncomfortably, as Romo told me his family history, becoming tearful when he talked about his grandmother.

Although we parted amicably, whenever I went into the parish courthouse, Romo had a deputy follow me around — I guess to see if I was going to draw cartoons about him on the walls or something.

Of course, "Fast Eddie" was back while I was working in New Iberia, so both "T. Wong" and I stayed busy.

But why tempt fate when you have good tent walls to hide behind.

"Lay down, say your prayers and I'll wake you up for breakfast at sunrise in the morning," I reassured him.

"Kanen?"

"Yeah."

"Did you brush your teeth before it started raining?" I'm not positive I heard his response. Shortly after I asked, another sound probably mixed in harmony with the rolling thunder echoing relentlessly against the walls of "our canyon" that night — the sound of two snoring Montgomery men dreaming of raging floods and a camping trip into the heart of remoteness.

The milk cartons and rescue teams would have to wait until tomorrow.

Budget truce

Tax fight masks change in philosophy

By Alan Fram

The Associated Press

Just about drowned out by the partisan warfare in Congress over the Republicans' tax-cutting drive is one of the most dramatic and beneficial budget achievements in years: a bipartisan truce over two-thirds of the federal surplus.

This year's dominant battle is over how to use $1 trillion in projected surpluses over the next decade. Republicans favor tax cuts and President Clinton and Democrats prefer domestic spending.

An additional $1.9 trillion in anticipated surpluses expected from Social Security has become politically untouchable for both sides. Each party has pledged to leave the money alone, and can grab for it only at risk of being accused by opponents of stealing Social Security money.

"I think they've trapped themselves," said Robert Bixby, policy director of the Concord Coalition, a bipartisan group that advocates budget frugality. Yes, the politicians have already nibbled at the Social Security money, using it, for instance, to pay for the bombing campaign against Yugoslavia. Yes, they undoubtedly will do so again, probably this fall when a likely agreement between Clinton and Republicans will result in billions more for schools, agriculture, defense and other programs.

And yes, 10-year projections are always shaky and actual surpluses could end up being far smaller than anticipated. Neither side's grand budget plans envision using that enormous $1.9 trillion Social Security kitty for tax cuts or spending, a new and major development. That means most of the money is likely to go to reduce the national debt. Economists from Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on down say that is the best thing to do with it because reducing the debt lowers interest rates and energizes the economy in the long run.

Even if lawmakers dissipate the entire $1 trillion surplus from non-Social Security programs, "we'd have still paid down a substantial portion of the debt and achieved something that was unthinkable two years ago," said Robert Reischauer, senior fellow at the Brookings Institution.

Until recent months, neither party hesitated to use Social Security surpluses to pay for tax or spending initiatives.

That all changed last year, when Clinton — looking to prevent Republicans from using the surpluses for a tax cut — thought up his "save Social Security first" mantra. It was shorthand for not using the Social Security surpluses for tax cuts or spending, and it proved to have such undeniable political appeal that Republicans embraced it.

Then this year, something else happened. The surging economy has poured so much revenue into the federal government that projected surpluses have sprouted on the non-Social Security side of the budget, something unseen for decades.

That made the virtuous-sounding pledge to leave Social Security money alone painless as well because it turned out there was still $1 trillion in projected surpluses to play with.

First Republicans, then Democrats have tried scoring political points by trumpeting the need for a so-called lock box. That is legislation that would allegedly make it harder for lawmakers to use the Social Security surpluses for anything but shoring up the program or reducing the national debt.

Politicians always find a way around such devices, and nothing has been enacted yet anyway. Yet, the political will to avoid angering senior citizens by being seen as raiding Social Security may suffice.

"Every politician in America has heard from senior citizens saying, 'Why are you robbing my Social Security,'" said Richard May, a former GOP House budget aide who is now a consultant in Washington.

Imprisoned Native American activist Leonard Peltier is shown at Leavenworth Federal Prison with one of his paintings. Peltier's imprisonment has been the centerpiece of Amnesty International's study of human rights abuses in the United States.

Imprisoned activist tells of his journey

"Prison Writings: My Life is My Sun Dance," by Leonard Peltier; St. Martin's Press, New York; 1999; ISBN 0-312-20354-3

Political prisoners are found in places like China or Burma or North Korea or some Third World country whose name sounds like a rare disease.

When the news reports about the imprisonment of an dissident in China, most Americans shake their heads and say how good it is something like that doesn't happen in the United States.

But, if you think that doesn't happen in the United States, you would be wrong.

Leonard Peltier, an Ojibway/Lakota who has been in federal prison for more than 23 years, serving two consecutive life sentences for the deaths of FBI agents Jack Coler and Ronald Williams on June 26, 1975, on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota.

The story of Peltier's conviction and imprisonment is a classic case of justice denied. His conviction by an all-white jury was the result of FBI misconduct, which included fabrication of evidence and coercion of witnesses. During his trial, the judge refused to allow exculpatory evidence to be admitted, refused to allow the defense to question the actions of the FBI in the days leading up to the firefight in which the two agents were killed.

Also, FBI knew the AR-15 which the prosecution claimed Peltier used to kill the agents could not have been the murder weapon and even kept the information secret until it finally was discovered under a Freedom of Information request.

Now, Peltier tells his story in "Prison Writings: My Life is My Sun Dance."

While Peltier tells how he was targeted by the FBI because of his role as an activist in Indian causes, he doesn't dwell too much on the specifics of the case for which he is serving two consecutive life terms. He acknowledges the story of the aftermath of the Wounded Knee siege has been explained in detail by author Peter Matthiessen in his book "In the Spirit of Crazy Horse."

Instead, Peltier uses an eloquent mixture of poetry and prose to tell of his life in prison, his hopes and fears, and his never-ending commitment to the survival of his people.

Peltier voices his fear of life in prison, his sorrow at seeing his grandchildren only through photographs, his frustration with the legal system and his anger at his wrongful imprisonment. However, even in these moments of sorrow, frustration and anger, Peltier never gives way to self-pity.

Through it all, Peltier remains a powerful voice for Native American rights, a voice that seems to gain strength through the years.

Peltier's book is both a spiritual and emotional journey and a political manifesto, in which he calls for renewed effort to protect the rights of indigenous peoples around the world.

"I believe our work will be unfinished until not one human being is hungry or battered, not a single person is forced to die in war, not one innocent languishes imprisoned, and no one is persecuted for his or her beliefs," Peltier writes.

In the past two years, Peltier has been the centerpiece of Amnesty International's focus on human rights abuses in the United States. More than 25 million people around the world, including the late Mother Teresa, Archbishop Desmond Tutu, the Dalai Lama and former South African president and political prisoner Nelson Mandela, have signed petitions urging Peltier's release. Also, the European Parliament and the parliaments of Italy and Belgium recently adopted resolutions in his support.

In closing his book, Peltier expresses his goal simply:

"I am an Indian man. My request is to live like one."

I also hear the sound
Within and without I find
In the past already found.

I'm grateful for the awareness

Let go habits of the past
And dissolve the fear of fear.

The light is my protection
To see obstacles in the road
To see where I am going
And unload this heavy load.

The sound whirls around
In the lighting of the rod
I hear this inner music
I call the flute of God.

Light, sound and dreams
In the day, in the night
Come see what I saw
In the morning-after light
Not meaning to confuse
With these words I put down
Check it out for yourself
God, and the Light and Sound.

Special to The Brand

CANYON - The "time poor" and "place bound" will find more opportunities to pursue bachelor's and master's degrees at West Texas A&M University beginning this fall. The university, which previously offered courses leading to master of business administration and master of education in instructional technology degrees via the Internet, will now offer complete programs in those areas.

In addition, courses leading to six degree programs are being added to the distance-education curriculum. The courses scheduled for online and/or interactive television support the following programs: bachelor of science in nursing, bachelor of science in engineering technology/fire safety and protection, bachelor of applied arts and science in fire safety and protection, baccalaureate degrees with teacher certification, master of science in agriculture, and master of education in educational di-agnostician and administration.

"Non-traditional students are most likely to take advantage of these courses," Dr. Flavius Killebrew, WRAMU provost/vice president for academic affairs, said. "Work and family commitments have precluded them from taking classes delivered by traditional methods. Technology affords them the opportunity to receive instruction at all hours and in all places."

But Killebrew thinks the classes will attract traditional students as well. "We have become a 'just-in-time' culture, and these methods of delivery provide our students with more scheduling flexibility," Killebrew said.

Dina Balk, a teacher at Elkhart (Kan.) Middle School and a graduate student working on a master of education in instructional technology degree at WTAMU, agreed.

"The greatest advantage is the flexibility," Balik said. "I took classes on campus during the summer and take web-based classes during the fall and spring semesters while I'm teaching. I will graduate next spring on fall 2000 and that wouldn't have been possible without the advantage of these web-based courses."

WTAMU began offering classes via Internet and/or interactive television in the fall of 1997 with four classes of 129 students. Last spring, 415 students enrolled in 18 courses. And, this fall the 27 classes scheduled for alternative delivery are expected to attract 1,100 students.

Access to WTAMU's alternatively delivered courses extends well beyond geographic boundaries. In addition to inclusion in the university's schedule of classes and a listing on its own web site - <http://www.online.wtamu.edu>

- WTAMU courses delivered via Internet and interactive television are listed on the Southern Regional Electronic Campus web site at <http://www/srec.sreb.org>. The electronic campus is a cooperative arrangement of colleges and universities located across 15 Southern states and is coordinated by the Southern Regional Education Board.

WTAMU plans to offer about 25 percent of its course inventory via distance-education technology by 2003.

CANYON - An exhibit of works by cowboy-artist Edwin Borein will be on display through Aug. 22 at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The exhibit features 54 watercolors, etchings, and pen-and-ink sketches, all from collections of the Rockwell Museum in Corning, N.Y.

Among the works are examples of Borein's "Stampede" rodeo posters, depictions of Western wildlife and Hispanic missions, and his highly regarded imagery of longhorn cattle and cowboy life on the open range.

Borein (1872-1945) was raised in California at a time when cattle were still driven down the main street of his home town. His sensitivity to the behavior of animals, his inclination to draw what he experienced came naturally and with less formal art training.

He became a proficient roper, rider and saddlemaker. Ranching and Hispanic themes characterized his work throughout his career.

Excitement fills football team as first practice nears

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

Hereford football coach Craig Yenser had a big smile Thursday after he and his staff returned from coaching school. The smile spoke a thousand words.

The Hereford coaches returned from Fort Worth with a renewed sense of excitement and pride. They got to learn from some of the best in college football.

"The neat thing is that we had a roundtable discussion with (University of Texas Coach) Mack Brown and his staff, (Texas A&M Coach) R.C. Slocum and his staff, and (TCU Coach) Dennis Franchione and his staff," Yenser said.

"We discussed many issues on organization of staff, players and programs. It was a pretty neat experience."

Yenser and his staff also got to reacquaint themselves with other coaching buddies, too.

"The fellowship is always the neat part," Yenser said. "But also there's a renewed excitement in the coaches' association with the Texas college coaches coming in."

The reacquaintance of old coaching buddies, plus the participation of the major college coaches, really motivates a program that is already motivated by a Whiteface team that last season made its first playoff appearance in six years.

"I now I came back with a lot of great ideas on staff organization, practice organization, recruiting and other stuff," Yenser said. "It was real exciting generated by the presence of the college coaches."

It was an important discussion as the Hereford coaching staff learned a lot about how to coach kids and make them play to the best of their abilities, motivation, organization of time.

All the ideas are there, but that doesn't mean that there will be a whole lot of changes with the program.

"The issues were very interesting to me," Yenser said. "We are going to start to look at some of these things, but we're not making wholesale changes. Learning from experience, you have to be careful on taking clinic notes and making big changes."

Some of the things Yenser and his staff learned is how to handle a two-minute offense, thanks to the teachings of University of Washington Coach Rick Neuheisel.

Also, a coach from Southern Methodist University lectured on passing schemes inside the 20-yard-line.

Defensively, the Hereford staff learned techniques and defensive schemes from Georgia Tech Coach Dan O'Leary.

"The had it broken down into a percentage chart of a player's success on defense," Yenser said. "Each player is rated by the number of plays he makes and his role on defense. It was

Ropin' Time at Spicer

Roper Brent Lewis ready to defend title at Spicer Grip Memorial

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

It's very tough to "three-peat" in any sport.

But the Chicago Bulls did it. Twice in the 1990s.

The Bill Russell-led Boston Celtics won eight straight NBA titles in the '50's and '60's. A mark way beyond three-peating.

Can anyone else three-peat in any sport?

Well, a roper by the name of Brent Lewis might just do it. He'll get a shot at it Saturday and Sunday when the Spicer Grip Memorial Roping Competition returns to Hereford at the Circle A Rodeo Arena, west

Roper Brent Lewis of Eloy, Ariz. will defend his roping title next week at the Spicer Grip Memorial Roping Competition, August

7 and 8. He will be partnered in the team roping with Shawn Franklin of New Mexico.

The former rodeo rookie of the year in 1991 had a combined time of 26.37 seconds in the calf roping competition after two rounds. He went on to defeat Hockley's Fred Whitfield, the leader in the pro rodeo circuit's All Around Cowboy rankings. His combined time was 141.25.

No wonder Spicer Grip was a fan of the 28-year-old roper from Eloy, Ariz. He has seen him since Lewis was a child.

Lewis is no different than most of his roping colleagues and competitors, having grown up involved in the farm and on the rodeo circuit.

"I grew up on a ranch and my dad roped," Lewis said. "I've been competing since I was nine years old in junior rodeos, roping competitions and stuff.

I've roped all my life."

And, it's also his job and first love, other than his family.

Lewis also helps train and breed horses, but his main source of income is prize money from roping competitions.

Just like anyone dreaming of competing in the rodeo circuit, he dreamed about being successful like many others in the past.

"Growing up, I've always wanted to win the world rodeo title," Lewis said. "I have made the rodeo finals six times, I've always wanted to do that."

But he has taken off the rodeo competition for awhile. He has mainly done roping on a regular basis.

"I haven't really decided to compete in the big competitions," Lewis said. "I have just taken a year or two and concentrated on roping. I haven't gone as hard as I used to."

Why not?

"I got a family," Lewis said. "I was out 250 to 300 days a year and got tired of traveling all the time. I decided to stay home and help raise my daughter."

Not only does Lewis come from a roping family, he is married to one. His wife has been involved in barrel racing and roping competitions.

And whenever he competes, his family is there to support him. They also understand the importance of roping in Lewis' life.

"They always go with me in the competitions and enjoy it.

The more I win, the better," Lewis said. "My little girl Sierra is 2 years old, but she understands exactly when I win and what I do."

And they all know how he feels. Brent's father still ropes, by the way.

Brent also is a multi-talented roper and hopes to compete with the best ropers in the country and win more than just one roping category. Which comes in handy when paying the bills.

"It's just another chance to win more money and a have a chance at an all-around title," Lewis said.

Spicer Grip must be smiling with joy for one of the kids he for was a big fan of, Brent Lewis.

"It's very important to come here to Spicer Grip. He was a good friend of mine."

of Hereford. Lewis will be partnered with a four-time National Finals Rodeo competitor Shawn Franklin of House, N.M.

Lewis realizes how special this competition is for him and for his career.

"It's very important to me to come here to the Spicer Grip Memorial," Lewis said. "Spicer Grip was a good friend of mine, kept track of my career since I was a little kid and was a very big fan of mine."

The respect Lewis has for Spicer Grip is evident with the success he has accomplished all over the roping and rodeo circuit.

Well, THAT time of the year has arrived again in Hereford.

That time when a movie like "Varsity Blues" becomes more realistic - but no Bud Kilmer, of course.

Yes, it's the start of the high school football season.

Why do people still try to find out why the U.S. Men's soccer team does so poorly in international competition? It's simple: High school football has its own dramatic moments every Thursday and Friday nights in the fall.

It's also that time of the year when local businesses decorate their display windows in maroon and white.

That time of the year when former Hereford football players pack up the family and travel to Whiteface Stadium and other Panhandle towns to see their alma mater play.

That time of the year when football and nothing else occupies the minds of the varsity football players. On Wednesday, those young men will start two-a-days practice.

The time grandmothers all over the country design custom made paraphernalia with their grandsons' name and number with glitter on their shirts.

It's exciting. Nothing in the world can top that. Except one thing.

A state championship. Hereford's football team may not be the odds-on favorite to take it all especially with other Class 4A state powers like Brownwood, Stephenville, LaMarque, Sweetwater and Grapevine, but excitement should be all but missing.

I even challenge the Herd -- not on the field, of course.

The challenge: If the Hereford Whitefaces make it past the first round of the playoffs, each member of the varsity

Cowboys dealing with injuries

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The first full-squad workout for the Dallas Cowboys was a costly one as two likely starters for the preseason opener went down with injuries Friday morning.

Right guard Mike Kiselak, playing with the first-team because of two other injuries, seriously damaged his left knee and defensive end Kavika Pittman broke several small bones in his right hand.

Coach Chan Gailey said Kiselak's injury is so bad that "the only question is whether it's a season-ender." An MRI was inconclusive and he's been scheduled to undergo arthroscopic surgery Tuesday in Dallas.

Losing Kiselak is yet another blow for a line that already is without starter Everett McIver and top backup Tony Hutson.

"It puts a dent in your plans, but, hey, that's part of the game," Gailey said. "You have to overcome that."

McIver tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee last November. He's expected to return around the season opener. His preseason replacement, Hutson, sprained the medial collateral ligament in his right knee Thursday and will be out two to four weeks.

Gailey said the most disappointing part of the injuries is that Hutson and Kiselak will miss quality practice time they can only get when McIver is out.

Second-round pick Solomon Page takes over at right guard, with World League refugee Chris Brymer and former CFL star Freddie Childress also seeing action.

"Even though Solomon has not spent significant time at guard, we certainly believe he has the ability to play there," Gailey said.

Losing Kiselak causes a bigger problem because of his versatility. He played both guard positions last year before starting at center the last seven games.

Pittman should be back in two to four weeks. Gailey expects him to be fully healed by the season opener.

"I would think Kavika could get back on the field, albeit with a cast, in two or three weeks," Gailey said. "He won't be fully healed until we get close to the first game."

Pittman's absence allows the Cowboys to give more playing time to Ebenezer Ekuban and Peppi Zellner, their top two draft picks, and recent signee Alonzo Spellman, who was out of football last season.

Dallas opens the preseason Aug. 9 against the Cleveland Browns in the Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio. The season begins Sept. 12 in Washington.

JERSEY SWITCH: Alonzo Spellman's arrival meant a number change for rookie linebacker Dat Nguyen.

Spellman wore No. 90 when he played for the Chicago Bears and wanted to keep it with the Cowboys. Nguyen, who already was wearing that number, was asked to change and he obliged.

"It's no problem. Spellman is a proven veteran. I'll do anything for the team. I'll wear no number and go out and play," said Nguyen, who switched to No. 45.

Like his first jersey, the digits add up to nine — the number he wore during his All-American career at Texas A&M.

"It's still nine," he said, pointing to the 4, then the 5.

REVVIN' IT UP FOR CHARITY: The second annual Harley Davidson ride from the Cowboys' home field, Texas Stadium, to their training camp at Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls will be held Saturday.

Proceeds from the two-hour ride will benefit the United Way of Wichita Falls and Happy Hill Farm Academy in Granbury.

The motorcycles will get to cruise around the practice field before the team's evening workout.

BLISTERING HEAT: The temperature for Friday's afternoon practice was a roasting 107 degrees, with a heat index of 109. That was quick a leap from the morning readings of 91 and 95.

The Cowboys estimated that 3,100 people braved the heat to watch the first two full-squad workouts Friday, bringing the weeklong total to 6,400.

Armstrong inspired by '89 LeMond win

NEW YORK (AP) — After watching Greg LeMond's triumphant ride on the Champs-Elysees in 1989, Lance Armstrong knew the Tour de France was in his future.

"I think the whole country watched and that did wonders for cycling in America," said Armstrong, who has overcome testicular cancer to win cycling's premier race. "That was the first time I thought and dreamed about the Tour de France."

The Texan, appearing on "Late Night with David Letterman" on Friday, has been on a whirlwind schedule of appearances in New York, making the rounds of television talk shows and a tour of the New York Stock Exchange.

LeMond nearly died after being shot in a hunting accident in 1987. Despite being written off by the cycling world, LeMond won his second and third Tour titles.

Armstrong, the 1993 world road race champion and winner of two stages of the Tour de France (1993 and 1995), learned in October 1996 that he had testicular cancer. Doctors gave him a 50-50 chance to survive.

While in the hospital, Armstrong was dropped by the French team Cofidis.

"They said it was not possible for Lance Armstrong to return," he told Letterman. "He'll never race again."

"When I decided to come back and I was looking for a team, all of the European teams said it's not possible, he'll never race again and never be the champion he was before."

Armstrong was dogged by rumors during the three-week race that his success was helped by banned substances. The International Cycling Union said tests on Armstrong had shown traces of corticosteroids, but this was traced to a skin cream he was using with a doctor's OK.

The rumors came from "a few isolated journalists," said Armstrong, who joked that he must have had "performance-enhancing chemotherapy."

"Out of the 2,000 journalists, there were a handful of people who never cover cycling," he said. "All they wanted to do was cover a scandal."

football team gets to buzz a lock of my hair.

But this challenge goes way beyond hair. It means a lot more for the thousands and thousands of high school football players in Texas.

Each dreams one thing: to go for a state title run. Even if they don't do it, they get a shot of playing football in a stadium where their heroes played.

You never now, Hereford could be playing at Texas Stadium, home of you know whom?

They could be playing down the road at Jones Stadium in Lubbock, where Pampa's Zach Thomas played.

They could be playing at Floyd Casey Stadium, where Mike Singletary played for the Baylor Bears.

They could be playing at the Astrodome, where the Oilers and Earl "Mr. Tyler Rose" Campbell burned up the Astro turf.

Or they could be playing at Darrell K. Royal Memorial Stadium, home to many memories in Texas football history, and not just Longhorns.

It's less than 30 days away. Get ready, Hereford, because you may see some fireworks colored white and maroon.

FOOTBALL

pretty interesting."

Everything they learned comes with the territory. Yenzler pointed out that football coaches are notorious of stealing other coaches' ideas.

"They take this idea from this program, one from this offense, one from this defense and implement it in their programs," Yenzler said.

But above all, the importance of being involved in coaching organizations for learning and getting involved in their profession.

"It involves coaches dealing with coaching issues," Yenzler said. "It's also important that our younger coaches to get involved."

The excitement is there as evidenced by all this. Now it is up to the coaches to pass on that excitement about football to the players.

It all has to start with the smaller basics. The smaller basics of Hereford -- two-a-days -- begin Wednesday.

"We'll try to get a lot of our kicking game, passing game and conditioning going," Yenzler said. "We'll concentrate on everybody and that everybody knows what to do as far as assignments."

That's only the first three days of practice, before they go into full pads on Aug. 9.

"The second week is a very important week for us because that's when we see which kids make varsity and which don't," Yenzler said. "It's a very important week because you don't have any games to prepare for."

What makes this week even more important is the intrasquad scrimmage on Aug. 13.

It gives players a chance to show their talents and helps coaches decide which players are going to start and which players will be on the varsity squad.

Even with the start of two-a-day practices coming, Yenzler does express his concerns even before the first whistle begins.

"Coming in, we want to make sure we have no injuries," Yenzler said. "As a team concept, we want to make sure that we start off as we left off last year. Those are our two basic concerns."

Well, it will start this Wednesday. Two-a-day practices. Extreme workouts in extremely heated conditions. But Hereford has waited months and months to the start of the season.

"It's tremendous the support we get from the community, even if we're losing," Yenzler said.

It's the time for Hereford. It's coming.

Walking "thermometers" lead to bass hotspot in cool water

Modern bass boats come equipped with no less electronic gear than the average World War II-era destroyer on anti-submarine patrol. Depth finders, contour graphs, water temperature thermometers, bells and whistles and gauges—and maybe even a couple of racks of depth charges, depending on the frustration level being endured by the angler/boat jockey.

Years ago I visited my high school friend Ronnie Barham, who was living at Mount Pleasant back then, and had invited me to come down for some bass fishing.

Problem was, my timing was atrocious. The few days off that I had coming fell during August, the hottest part of the summer, when bass are notoriously lockjawed.—The best time to go fishing, though, is whenever you can, right? So I loaded rods, tackle, and trappings of travel and ventured forth into the summer sauna that the local TV weathermen down there call the ArkLaTex.

Ronnie had a game plan all drawn-up to pit us against the dog days of August.

We would fish really early, getting to the water well before sunrise, and again, in the evening, when the blazing heat was subsiding. We'd head back to the house, where it was cooler, for the sweltering part of the day.

We were boatless, and would do our fishing by wading into local lakes and ponds clad in jeans and old tennis shoes. We had a fairly sophisticated system for testing water depths and temperatures...It's called feel.

The water was fairly pleasant when we'd hit it for the dawn patrol. Easing in amongst lakeside vegetation, we'd chuck topwaters and spinnerbaits into the cover as we went about this early work.

I first came to appreciate the effectiveness of the enticing Jitterbug on this trip. Ronnie was especially effective with it. He'd toss one, let it sit, jerk it a couple times, then begin the slow retrieve that evoked a gurgling, bubbling, wobbling cadence from the fat-lipped lure.

The bass couldn't stand it...They'd literally explode on

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

Ronnie's evocative offering, their robust strikes sending up geysers from the glassy surface. Sometimes they'd miss, blasting the lure clear off the water. Often enough to make it interesting, Ronnie would hook one, and a boiling, churning battle would be on.

Ronnie could work a Hula-Popper, or a Redfin with equal efficiency, too. Probably had something to do with all of the practice he was getting.

Wading with the fish, I was glad that we were a lot bigger than the scrappy bass that were attacking those lures, or they might have been making those thunderous strikes on us.

Once the sun rose, the water would heat-up amazingly in only a couple of hours. As the water temperature rose the fishing action fell off.

Evening outings found the water nearly bathtub warm when we walked in. One evening I had tied on a Creme Worm with beads and a prop on its front end, and was wading around looking for a good spot to cast to when my legs sensed the water getting cooler. In only a few steps, it got warmer again. I turned around and retraced my steps, found the cooler water again, and discovered there was a long, but narrow strip of it. Don't have a clue why it was there—a ditch or something. I decided that if cooler water was there, bass ought to be, too.

Imagining a narrow channel, I began casting the Creme Worm within its confines, letting the plastic offering sink, then retrieving slowly.

In only a few casts I felt a hard strike and began a tussle with a bass that probably would have gone in the two pound class. The fish made a couple of deep runs, then I got him turned and headed toward me. Holding the rod tip high, I brought him alongside at about belt level. Mindful of the hooks in the worm, I reached carefully for the jaw of the green-sided gamester. No monster, but fun. I wiggled the hooks loose from the big-mouthed finster and slipped him back into the water.

Re-arranging the tandem hooks in the Creme Worm, I began casting for cool water again, and had another bass of roughly the same size on in short order.

My tan-colored Creme Worm was torn to shreds by the time I landed a third fish, and I had to retreat to shore and re-rig. Excitement renders you hopelessly fumble-fingered, but I finally managed to rummage around in my tackle box, find another, and get the dual-stingered worm tied-on.

Back in the water, I shuffled in the soft mud, feeling for the cool pocket again. Two vicious-striking bass later, my remaining tan Creme Worm was a shambles, and I was wishing I had another that color.

I settled for a red one and hustled back to the cool water hot spot that had been located with the most sophisticated of water temperature sensing devices.

A long cast parallel to my position, a slow retrieve, and wham! A real scrapper of another smallish bass came to the top and tailwalked with the Creme Worm in its jaw. He jumped twice, and had my heart hammering by the time I got a thumb on his lip.

As suddenly as it began the Creme Worm feeding frenzy was over. After six bass in about thirty minutes I didn't get another strike. The best I could tell from my denim and canvas-clad sensing devices, all of the action had heated that pocket of water to the point that it boiled all of the bass out.

Rangers pummel K.C. in 9-2 victory

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers had 14 hits Friday night, and not one went for extra bases.

That's how the Rangers have been winning this season, by doing whatever it takes.

Todd Zeile and Ivan Rodriguez each had three RBIs in a 9-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

"The bottom line is we scored nine runs and we won the game," Rodriguez said. "We find ways to score. Sometimes we hit three homers and lose 5-4. So it's how you do the little things and get key hits in the right situations."

Rodriguez went 3-for-5 and Zeile drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly as the Rangers improved to 4-0 against Kansas City this season and 16-4 against the AL Central.

"We worry about runs, not the long ball," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said after the Rangers won for the 11th time in 12 games.

Esteban Loaiza (3-1) allowed two runs and six hits over six innings to win his third straight decision as the Rangers began a season-long 13-game homestand.

The Rangers played outstanding defense behind Loaiza. Two of Texas' three double plays were turned with Loaiza on the mound, and second baseman Mark McLemore had seven assists and several sparkling stops.

"We're not just an offensive team," McLemore said. "We can play defense and pitch. We're playing well in all facets of the game."

Zeile continued his personal hot streak, extending his hitting streak to 11 games. Zeile has driven in 26 runs in his last 23 games and has hit safely in 30 of his last 33 games.

"That's exactly what we thought we were getting when he came here," Oates said. "He's a consistent veteran game in and game out. He drives in 90-100 runs every year."

Mike Sweeney's two solo homers off Loaiza gave the Royals a 2-0 lead. Sweeney opened the second with a blast to left-center, then added his 17th homer leading off the fourth.

Royals starter Jay Witasick (4-8) shut out the Rangers on three hits over the first four innings before Texas broke out with three runs and four consecutive hits in the fifth.

McLemore and Rodriguez had one-out singles and Rusty Greer's single drove in McLemore. Rafael Palmeiro followed with an RBI single to tie it, then Zeile's sacrifice fly put the Rangers ahead 3-2.

Texas broke the game open with a four-run sixth. Roberto Kelly and Royce Clayton singled to knock out Witasick. Rodriguez singled against reliever Glendon Rusch, scoring Kelly, and when Carlos Beltran failed to pick the ball up error, Clayton crossed the plate.

Zeile followed with a two-run single for a 7-2 lead.

Witasick allowed five runs and nine hits over 5 1/3 innings.

Rodriguez added a two-run single in the seventh to extend Texas' advantage to 9-2. Kansas City's bullpen struggled once again, allowing four runs over the final 2-3 innings.

"We haven't had anyone come in and take control," Royals manager Tony Muser. "It hasn't happened all year."

Astros stifle Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Houston Astros improved to 7-0 against the San Diego Padres this season, winning 5-1 Friday night behind another strong effort from Shane Reynolds.

Reynolds (13-7) held the Padres to an unearned run and five hits in eight innings, struck out nine and walked one.

Tony Gwynn went 0-for-3 with a sacrifice fly, all but dashing his hopes of getting his 3,000th career hit at home.

San Diego starter Matt Clement (5-10) walked the bases loaded with none out in the second inning and Reynolds hit a sacrifice fly to tie the game at 1. Clement then walked Craig Biggio, but was bailed out when Bill Spiers grounded into a double play.

Ward homered off Clement in the third, and Biggio hit a two-run double off Carlos Almanzar in the sixth.

Summer was work time down on farm

Where has the summer gone?

How many times have you heard this question recently?

Everyone seems to be reminiscing about the "good old days" when summer break was a full three months and families could still plan vacation time in August.

Now that is hardly feasible. The first two weeks of August are reserved for "back to school" shopping and other preparations and then - school starts!!

For my sister and I, summer time was not play time. It was a full three months to work on the family farm.

Dad did custom combining for several years when we were both junior high and high school age. That meant we were expected to help, either in the field or with preparations at home to take food to the field.

My sister was generally the "outdoor" worker, helping to move equipment or drive a truck or even a tractor.

My job as the "indoor" worker was to help Mother in the kitchen so that a meal would be ready for the hungry crew. If they were working within a few miles of the house, dinner (as we called the mid-day meal) was served at the kitchen table, usually in shifts, so that the combine was always running.

If the crew was working as

Friends

Forever—Linda West Eckhardt and John Gililland enjoy a friendship that for most people happens only once in a lifetime.

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Friendships come and friendships go but true friendships last a lifetime.

So it has been with the friendship of Linda West Eckhardt and John Gililland.

Growing up as neighbors in Hereford they formed a bond such as that often shared by siblings. And that bond has lasted for more than 40 years.

When Eckhardt visited Hereford recently the two had not seen one another for several years, yet their conversation took up as if it were continuing from the day before.

"Do you remember the time we rode the milk cow?" one would ask.

And the other would respond with, "Yes, and do you remember...?" And so the reminiscing continued as the two renewed old memories.

Eckhardt finished high school in Hereford in the last 1950s. She went away to college, then married and began to pursue a career.

Gililland remained in Hereford and carries on the family business - a funeral home. He is justifiably proud of the success that his childhood playmate has achieved.

Eckhardt, who has become a widely recognized chef, is the author of 14 cookbooks and makes guest appearances on the television program "Home Matters" on the Discovery Channel.

"Her cookbooks are not just recipes. They are a collection of useful hints, memories and little known facts," Gililland said.

Her first cookbook, "The Only Texas Cookbook," contains recipes she collected when she was writing magazine pieces for Texas Monthly and other national magazines.

The book includes narratives about the recipes, histories of many of them and interesting anecdotes.

Eckhardt relates in humorous detail a story about catching, butchering and barbecuing a goat for Gililland's daughter's 16th birthday.

And the book contains recipes from other Hereford residents and their related stories.

One of her more recent works, "Entertaining 101: Everything You Need to Know to Entertain with Style and Grace," she co-authored with her daughter, Katherine West DeFoyd.

The book won The James Beard Foundation Award of Excellence.

While the mother-daughter team brings diverse and often opposing viewpoints to the book, ideas contained in it teach the working person how to streamline a dinner party and have the meal ready when the guests arrive.

"Her cookbooks are like reading a novel. They provide entertainment as well as information," Gililland said.

Eckhardt is the author or co-author of bread cookbooks that demonstrate it doesn't take a lot of time to prepare homemade bread if you utilize the microwave and a bread machine.

"Linda was raised in an environment where food and food preparation were important. Her mother and grandmother thought that eating right included fellowship at the table," Gililland said.

These values were apparently instilled in Eckhardt as evidenced by her cookbooks.

much as five miles or more from where we lived, then it was time to pack up dinner and take it to the field.

That meant the meal had to be ready by 11 a.m. or so to allow time to get it to the field by noon. And then the clean up had to be done after returning home, so that it was often 3 p.m. before the last of the dishes were washed.

Summer continued this way through wheat, oat and milo harvest. We were also expected to help with other duties, like laundry and house cleaning.

We usually had a couple of hours in the afternoon for reading a book, working on a sewing project or going for a swim in the stock tank behind the house.

There were no family vacations, either. Well, seldom ever. We did take one week-long vacation that I can remember the summer I was 12. We drove from central Texas to northern California and back in eight days. (Is that really a vacation?)

We looked forward to Labor Day weekend because it meant that we would be able to go back to school - and get a rest.

Lovelace, Carlson wed in San Antonio

Julie Lovelace and Michael Carlson exchanged marriage vows in an afternoon ceremony July 31 in Trinity Baptist Church in San Antonio.

The bride is the daughter of John and Dickie Lovelace of San Antonio.

Parents of the groom are Roy and Shirley Carlson of Hereford.

John Park, pastor of Trinity Baptist, officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Elizabeth Sullivan of East Prairie, Mo., cousin of the bride. Best man was Jeffery Carlson of Hereford, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Rebecca Sullivan of East Prairie, cousin of the bride; Heather Huitt of Houston; and Autumn Moore of Boys Ranch.

Serving as groomsmen were Brent Carlson of Hereford, brother of the groom; Chris Lovelace of San Antonio, brother of the bride; and Jeff Tickner of Denton.

Guests were seated by R.N. Hopper of Petersburg, Brad Chambers of Plainview, Cliff Rosenbaum of Austin and Jeff Stenberg of Houston.

Music was provided by solosit John Park and Merle Hilbrich at the organ for the wedding ceremony and at the piano for the reception.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal A-line style gown of moire satin with a scoop neck and back, off-the-shoulder sleeves and detachable train.

She carried a bouquet of white roses centered around one purple-throated orchid.

Bridal attendants wore ankle-length dresses of lavender, slit to the knee, with spaghetti straps and square neckline and back. They carried bouquets of assorted long-stemmed bright-colored flowers tied with lavender ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception in the church dining room following the ceremony.

The Successful Family

By Dr. Matilda J. Boozer
DAPA, LPC, NCC
Motivate and Empower
Your Family

It is surprising how often a person with a chronic illness is blamed for their condition. Families and health professionals often directly state or imply that the complications people face relate to their behavior and/or their not taking care of themselves. This applies to many diseases, for example, AIDS, depression, and diabetes, to list only three.

Behavior certainly influences health. However, blame does not promote understanding and does not positively influence change. Even if change is in someone's best interest, the desire to stop, like all behavior change must come from the individual not the health professional, parent, or even friend. Many propose education as the answer. However, most people already know the possible harmful effects of their behavior.

Almost everyone knows that smoking is bad for his or her health and it is written on every pack of cigarettes. So if education is not the full answer, what is? Support and encouragement provide more motivation than facts alone.

The power of reframing can work magic. It can eliminate blame and thereby reduce guilt. It can make another seem supportive rather than judgmental. Maybe it can even provide motivation for change, which perhaps could lead to better medical outcomes. Reframing, the magic of psychotherapy, can bless our humanity and by doing so promote health. When illness is chronic, the support of reframing still helps.

Help your family to reframe their self-esteem, anxiety and health issues. Join us at DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS. This program is intended for all people interested in family problem-solving. It is organized so that the family can find quickly what is needed. It differentiates plainly between mediation and all other forms of problem solving. It describes the family's role, the optimal setting, the formalities of beginning. Then step-by-step, it takes the family through the phases of mediation: ventilation, information gathering, problem solving, and bargaining.

The program presents techniques for empowering, caucusing and breaking deadlocks. It has a very practical approach to family conflicts. It discusses both the pros and cons of co-mediation. It summarizes the ethics involved in every aspect of human interaction and lifestyle. Stress management and crisis intervention is realistic, and the tips for families are useful and ready to use. Mediation is best reserved for families who have a measure of self-control, and who are likely to abide by the agreements they make.

Mediation is often used in couple therapy and family therapy.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I recently bought SHEETS AND PILLOWCASES that I thought were a bargain. They are 50 percent cotton and 50 percent polyester, 180 thread count.

No matter what I do, I cannot get them soft. Do you have any suggestions? — M.J. in Texas

Unfortunately, the problem is probably in the material itself. Generally, for them to be soft, it is better to choose sheets that have a higher percentage of cotton or percale than of polyester.

Also, the higher the thread count, the softer the sheets are going to be. You will have to pay a little more, but a good night's sleep is worth it! Remember that sheets can last a long, long time — five, 10 or 15 years — so think of the purchase as a long-term investment.

NOTE: Try washing them several times to remove the sizing. It might help a little. — Heloise

FAST FACTS

Here are some other uses for plastic lids from coffee cans and other containers from Violet Weichlein, Alexandria, Va.

- Place under bottles of oil to catch drips.
- Put them under small plants or vases to avoid rings on furniture.
- They're great for holding cut tomatoes (cut side down) to store in the fridge.
- Use one as a dish for a child's quick snack or use as play dishes in the sandbox.

Mrs. Royce Allen Beene
...nee Jamie Dawn Simpson

Nuptials exchanged in evening ceremony

Jamie Dawn Simpson and Royce Allen Beene were united in marriage in an evening ceremony July 31 in Southwest Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Carl Simpson of Hereford and Teena Self of Amarillo.

Parents of the bridegroom are Robert Beene and Carolyn Beene, both of Amarillo.

J. Alan Ford, pastor of Southwest Baptist, officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Stephanie Wilcox of Amarillo. Best man was Robert Beene of Amarillo, twin brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Melissa Berend of Lubbock, Mandee Barron of Canyon, and Somer Holland and Amber Holland, both of Amarillo.

Serving as groomsmen were Chad Hooker of Plano, Steven Noble of Canyon, and Michael Gerber and Bill Rexrode, both of Amarillo.

Guests were seated by Chris Williams, Kurt West, Richard Wilbanks, Chris Trevino, Jeff McPherson and Travis Vasquez. Flower girl was Alissa May of Hereford, daughter of Roy and Rene Johnson.

Coe May of Hereford, son of Shirley May, was ring bearer. Sona Solano of Amarillo was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white, chapel length wedding gown. The sleeveless, textured organza bodice was embellished with alternating rows of sequins and pearls. The neckline and arms were bordered with rows of iridescent beads. The top of the bodice gave a sheer see-through affect that reached the satin underlay of the chestline. The dropped waistline fell into a rounded line of beads.

Layers of tulle fell from the waistline into a full white skirt. The bottom of the skirt was enhanced by a wide ribbon of white satin.

The back of the bodice was highlighted with a row of white, pearl buttons that extended from the neckline to the waistline. The peek-a-boo affect

She wore a full two-layered veil that extended from a white headband of satin decorated with sequins and pearls to below the waistline. The veil was outlined by a white, thin satin ribbon.

The round bridal bouquet of greenery featured 12 open, soft pink roses with Stephanotis and misty blue tied with a silver ribbon.

Bridal attendants wore long, fitted sleeveless dress of black, crepe-back satin. The rounded neckline was bordered with a row of rhinestone and the back bodice was open and rounded at the mid-back with a rhinestone border. They carried bouquets with six soft pink roses and Stephanotis.

The couple was honored with a reception at the Party Barn following the ceremony.

Angela Stansell and Julie Robinson assisted with the reception.

Erin Spies and Jessica Rexrode presided at the registry.

The three-tier mint-colored wedding cake was draped with bunches of grapes.

After a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe, the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

Special guests in attendance were Ray and Yvonne Simpson of Hereford, grandparents of the bride; Roy and Mary Alice Cline of Amarillo, grandparents of the groom; Amelia Ory of Stanton, great-grandmother of the bride; and Julie and Carl Simpson, sisters of the bride. The bride is the granddaughter of the late A.W. and Bettye Self.

The bride is a graduate of West Texas A&M University with a degree in business. She is employed at Chicago Title.

The bride is the daughter of Antonio and Maria Luisa Torres. The bridegroom is the son of Artemio and Herminia Cano.

Pastor Jesse Rincones, of Genesis Church, officiated at the ceremony.

Matron of honor was Edna Yadira Reyes of Canyon, cousin of the bride. Best man was Shama Hernandez of San Diego, Calif.

Bridesmaids were Michelle Cano of Amarillo, sister-in-law of the groom; Clarissa Cano of Amarillo, sister of the groom; Anna Maria Delgado, cousin of the bride; and Belinda Torres of Amarillo, cousin of the bride.

Serving as groomsmen were Michael Cano and James Cano of Amarillo, both brothers of the groom; Antonio Torres Jr., brother of the bride; and Samuel Casarez of Lake Moses, Wash.

Guests were seated by Armando Cano of Amarillo, uncle of the groom; Chris Cano of Omaha, Neb., cousin of the groom; and Jesus Vargas of Amarillo, brother-in-law of the bride.

Junior bridesmaid was Crystal Torres, sister of the bride and junior groomsmen was Joel I. Torres, cousin of the bride.

Flower girl was Vanessa Y. Torres, cousin of the bride and daughter of Javier and Angie Torres.

Austin T. Torres, cousin of the bride and son of Jesus and Yolanda Torres of Amarillo, was ring bearer.

Candle lighters were Esmeralda Vargas of Amarillo, sister of the bride and Sergio Contreras of Alamo, cousin of the bride. Music was provided by the WTAMU String Quartet directed by Debbie Shugart and vocalist Brenda V. Rincones.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white delustered Italian satin accented in rum pink roses. The corseted bodice was adorned in hand-beaded Alencon lace. Pink roses with tiny heather-green leaves hugged the shoulders. The snug Basque waist was enhanced by the bouffant skirt. Carriage back overskirts with scattered lace medallions were drawn up to a rose bustle piece. Rosebud-tipped streamers of satin trailed down the chapel length train.

The elbow length veil of illusion was attached to a crown adorned with pearls and crystal accents.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white sweetheart silken orchids intertwined with baby's breath and pearl accents.

Something old was "lazo" Hispanic tradition used at the bride's parent's wedding. Something new was a strand of pearls, something borrowed was pearl earrings with diamond accents and something blue was a garter.

Bridal attendants wore orchid princess style sleeveless gowns with empire waist and A-line skirt. The crepe gown was accented with satin on the scoop neck front and the back V-neckline was adorned with roses and wide streamers.

The couple was honored with a reception in the New Fellowship Hall of the church following the ceremony.

The ladies of Genesis Church assisted with the reception.

The serving table was decorated with centerpieces of mixed spring flowers designed

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have been a reader of your column for many years and know you've written extensively about the link between lung cancer and smoking. Why is it that I have never seen a letter about peripheral arterial disease caused by cigarettes? Please print this one. It could save lives.

My late mother-in-law was a very heavy smoker. She appeared to be in fairly good health until she passed 70. One morning, she got out of bed and could barely stand up because of the pain. She said it was like walking on broken glass. A diagnosis by her doctor showed the arteries in both her legs were blocked. He said in all the years of his medical career, he had never seen such diseased arteries. He recommended bypass surgery at once, but she refused. She then moved in with my husband and me, and it was apparent that she was in pain 24 hours a day. One evening, while soaking her feet, I noticed gangrene had set in. The doctor hospitalized her the following day.

Her right leg was amputated below the knee. It was a horrible experience for the family, and painful for her. One month later, the doctors took the rest of the leg. Two months after that, the same problem surfaced with her left leg, and another amputation followed. That dear woman lived for four years in a nursing home, miserable the whole time. She lost not only both legs, but her independence, her dignity and the ability to live a normal life. So, dear Ann, please keep telling your readers, especially the younger ones, DON'T SMOKE. You may use my name if you wish — Lillian Stevenson, Seminole, Fla.

Dear Lillian: You've written a powerful letter, and I thank you for it. I hope all my young readers who believe smoking is "sophisticated" will pay close attention. Ask yourself, "Could this happen to me someday?" And you older smokers who've been promising to quit "one of these days," how about NOW?
Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married for five years. We've had our ups and downs, but are doing fine now. I'm happy and satisfied in my marriage, except for one thing that drives me up the wall. Every time there is a family function or our friends ask us to go out, my husband says he doesn't feel well, or he has too much work to do.

I decided a long time ago to go without him, but it's embarrassing to always show up alone. Everyone asks, "Where's your husband?" I say, "He's not feeling well." I hate going to couple events without him, but it's either that or stay home. My husband is a decent, kindhearted guy and I don't want to divorce him over this, but a social life is important to me. He knows how I feel, but it doesn't seem to matter. What should I do? — Single File in Aurora, Ill.

Dear Aurora: Did it occur to you that your husband is unsure of himself in social situations? Start by inviting the most compatible couple you know to dinner, either at home or in a restaurant. Turn the conversation to a subject he knows something about. Open him up. Once he feels comfortable, he'll enjoy being with another couple — then, two couples. From then on — no problem.

Dear Ann Landers: Those TV sitcoms with canned laugh tracks are not only annoying but also an insult to the intelligence of the listeners. The assumption is that we don't know when to laugh. Is there a device that could block out the laugh track? The inventor of such a gadget would make a fortune. — Lawrence in Burbank, Calif.

Dear Lawrence: I know of no such device, but if you find one, please let me know. I would be happy to buy it. Price no object.

YOUR EYES
Contacts are good medicine
Millions of Americans are happily wearing contact lenses, many for the sake of appearance. Fortunately, they don't need to sacrifice the health of their eyes. In fact, contacts are more healthful and comfortable and correct more vision problems than at any time since their birth 500 years ago in Leonardo da Vinci's drawings.
There's a contact lens for just about every purpose: bifocals for presbyopia, torics for astigmatism, extended wear lenses for continuous wear, disposables and frequent replacement lenses for convenience and health, and rigid gas permeable lenses for durability and comfort.
Contacts provide crisp straight-ahead and peripheral vision. They're faster and easier to care for as new lenses such as extended wear and disposables have reduced much of the cleaning and disinfecting work. And with regular eye care appointments and proper cleaning and wearing habits, complications are minimized. For healthy and enjoyable contact lens wear, see your eye care professional.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Learning from or living with failure: It's your choice

(Part one of a two-part series)

He sat in my office slowly shaking his head. "I've failed," he said. "I wanted to make this company so successful that people would look up to me. Now, they'll see me as a failure."

The man sitting across the desk from me was a bright, honest and hard working business owner. He was coming to grips with the fact that his business wasn't going to make it. Past mistakes had piled up, and he had waited too long to address his problems. When a new, well-capitalized competitor entered the market, my client decided he had fought the battle lone enough.

As we worked on an exit strategy to minimize losses, I reminded him that one failed venture did not make him a total failure personally. I pointed out some other successful people who experienced failure early in their lives.

I reminded him that R.H. Macy had failed in several retail ventures before founding the successful chain of Macy's Department Stores. I told him about Henry Ford's early automotive fiascoes. I even shared a few of my own business mistakes.

The truth about failure

In the past few months, I've thought a lot about this client and many others like him. I've worked with more than 2,000 business owners in the past eleven years and failures aren't that rare. I believe if you try to achieve anything worthwhile, you will experience some setbacks. Whether your failures are completely debilitating or just temporary roadblocks is up to you.

When it comes to failures in your life, you have two choices. You can choose to "live with them" or you can choose to "learn from them."

You see being knocked down in life doesn't make you a failure unless you choose not to get back up. Life is a game, and like any other game sometimes you're ahead and sometimes you're behind. Sometimes you win and sometimes you lose. Having a failure and being a failure are two entirely different things.

We don't always get to choose where we begin in life, but we can influence where we're going to end up. If you've experienced a recent failure here's some news you can use.

Making a fresh start

You may have failed in business, suffered a broken relationship or even committed a crime. Don't dwell on past failures, because today is a brand new page in your life and you can write whatever you choose on it. You can choose to make a fresh start today.

Your destiny may be great if you choose not to let failure keep you down. You're not the first to have to get back up on your feet and get on with life.

Walt Disney was encouraged to give up art and drawing early in his career. His first screen star "Oswald the Lucky Rabbit," was taken from him by a shrewd businessman who owned the rights. Disney didn't quit. He developed a new character called "Mickey Mouse." The rest of the story you know.

Henry Ford's first automobile company was a flop. Mary Kay Ash was 45, divorced, jobless and suffering from depression when she decided to start her "dream company," Mary Kay Cosmetics. Michael Jordan was cut from his junior varsity Basketball team as a teenager and yet he went on to stardom as a professional.

Failure doesn't have to stop you. If you're still breathing there is hope. Don't quit, don't give up. Learn from your failures and you'll find success.

Read next week's column and I'll give you some sure-fire ways to overcome failure. Don't miss "Learning from or living with failure" part two.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Rebecca Walls

When I was a kid growing up with my sisters and I would play a game we called "play pretend." The game began with a story plot scenario. The short scenario gave the time in history, the basic character and the beginning of the problem that needed to be solved.

Each of us would then choose our name and personality and the pretend life would begin. We could pick up the game and play off each other's clues. The game could become so real and we were so involved in it that when newcomers joined in they would often ask if it were "for reals."

As we all got older playing present gave way to playing "what if." Instead of us acting out the story, we began to develop a story of words, working off each other's thoughts. This was usually a fun game to play while traveling in a car, or while waiting in a doctor's office.

I remember one Sunday evening we were driving home from church. Daddy was in Spearman doing some wheat burning while Mother, Jeni, Kay Rue and I were at home in Texline. It was a dark overcast night and had been raining earlier.

The sandy road was wet and mother was a little nervous as the car began to sink and create deep ruts in the mud. The slickest area of the road appeared just before we topped the hill. Once on top of the hill our house came into view. All of us saw the house at the same time, and all of us were filled with the same feeling of dread.

All of us were sure that the lights were turned off when we left for town, and now the house was filled with light. Then the question came, "Mama, what are we going to do if there is a big, strange man in our house?"

"Oh, Shut up!" came mother's reply. Because she had the same thought cross her mind. There were no cars and we could see as we drove closer, the front door was wide open.

When the car came to a stop, all of us huddled together around mother and walked up onto the porch. Mother opened the screen and we all slowly went through as one big bundle. We heard a thump and turned to find Queenie, our dog, hiding behind the rocking chair.

You see, Queenie was deathly afraid of thunder. During a storm she would whine and beg to come into the house where it was safe. Well, that night when the thunder storm came and we were gone, Queenie tore her way into the house.

We checked the house and found no one else there, but we could never figure out how the dog had turned the lights on. Had we really turned them off? It was times like this that we all forgot our differences and became a team, or single unit ready to do whatever mother told us to do.

When I saw the book Sis Boom Bah by Jane Heller and read the blurb it reminded me of the many times we sisters set aside our differences to help each other over a rough spot. Deborah Peltz, a soap opera writer and Sharon Peltz, a wedding planner, are normal squabbling sisters until their mother has a heart attack.

Deborah and Sharon agree to call a truce for the sake of their mother. Then a man, their mother's cardiologist, comes into their lives. Each sister is attracted to the doctor and tells the other to butt out. The bickering takes on an entirely new light when the handsome doctor is found dead in his den.

Sharon and Deborah find their names have been added to the list of murder suspects. Once and for all, Sharon and Deborah must settle their differences and team together to get themselves out of trouble. Quicksand by William P. Wood is the "white knuckle thriller of the year." Brock Andrews is a tough, no-nonsense law officer who just happens to be the head of California's task force on narcotics and organized crime. Brock's team has successfully subdued some of the country's most violent and powerful criminals.

Edward Nelson, a disgraced CIA employee and international arms dealer is just one of them.

What makes Brock's job even more difficult is his boss and wife, Allison Andrews, letting some of these criminals walk.

What Brock does not know is that Allison has recruited Nelson as her most important undercover operator. What Allison does not know is that Nelson is planning a double cross.

In Barbara Michael's new book Other Worlds, the world's most famous crime specialists come together in an exclusive club to help solve a mystery. Tonight there are two tantalizing, unsolved cases of terror.

Redemption by Howard Fast begins with Ike Goldman, a 78-year-old retired law professor, convincing a young woman no to jump off the George Washington Bridge. After spending some time with Elizabeth, Ike finds her to be a sensitive and caring woman and someone he could love.

Then Elizabeth is accused of killing her abusive husband. Ike can't believe she is capable of such violence. Was the abuse so bad that it could drive Elizabeth to murder? Or is there a dark side to Elizabeth that Ike hasn't seen yet?

W.E.B. Griffin's The Soldier Spies opens in November 1942 in war torn Europe. OSS chief William J. Donovan finds himself fighting a battle against the rival intelligence chiefs back home. Eric Fulmar waits in the desert of Morocco for a car carrying two top level defectors, or could it be a trap?

Major Richard Canidy's mission is to penetrate the heart of Germany and kidnap the man who knows the secret of the jet engines and bring him out before the Germans hide him away.

All of just must happen as planned in order to initiate the next step. The Allies must find a way to breach the impregnable German submarine pens at Saint-Lazare. The hope is a pilotless flying bomb or that is what Lieutenant Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. thinks.

Nebraska launches corn fed beef program

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Some Nebraska beef producers don't mind being labeled one bit. In fact, they lobbied for it.

Boxed beef came off the production line at Hastings Meat Supply this week labeled for the first time as Nebraska Corn-Fed Beef.

And producers with the Nebraska Corn-Fed Beef program hope their label does as much for them as it did for Florida orange growers.

"Nebraska beef is known worldwide," said Sallie Atkins with the Nebraska Beef Board. "We feel we have a great product, and we're confident to sell it with our name on it."

The corn-fed label, featuring the state emblem and a

"Nebraska beef is known worldwide. We feel we have a great product, and we're confident to sell it with our name on it."

Sallie Atkins, Nebraska Beef Board

cowboy, is an effort by those in the beef industry to reverse downward trends in market share and prices.

The program moves live cattle pricing away from the commodity beef market into a consumer-driven market.

Instead of just producing cattle for their weight, producers in the corn-fed labeling program will produce cattle for the quality of their meat. The program sets requirements on how much corn the animals are fed and how they are raised.

Each animal's progress is charted from birth through slaughter, and the records are used to help producers market better products.

Most American beef is sold as a commodity and shipped in lots to restaurants and supermarkets with no clues about its origin.

Not so with Nebraska Corn-Fed Beef.

"Retailers are asking for it, and the industry is responding," said Ken Angermeier, director of retail marketing for the National Cattlemen's association in Chicago.

He said Nebraska is synonymous with corn-fed beef, and the new labeling can do nothing but enhance that positive image.

Sandra Milton, the corn-fed beef program's executive director, said 50 feedlots ranging in size from 100 to 40,000 head are participating.

Milton said the goal has been to build the program slowly and successfully.

The labeled products are now being marketed through mail-order operations, like Nebraska Famous Steaks.

Alan Janzen of Henderson, a Corn-Fed Beef Council member, hopes to then get into restaurant chains first and then retail outlets.

Janzen said the product will be marketed in Nebraska, Arizona and New Mexico to start. Milton hopes to have labeled products in stores by late fall.

The program's labeled package was proposed by the Nebraska Cattlemen association three years ago. Now that the product has become available, those in the industry hope it does not take as long to become popular with consumers.

The challenge in retail is to have consumers purposely seek out the branded product, and not mind paying more for it.

Strict standards and tracking will help ensure the safety of meat sold under the Nebraska label. But officials said producers still may have to have patience until the product catches on.

The program will help advertise Nebraska's beef across the world, said Gov. Mike Johanns. But, he added, "I wish I could tell you it's going to raise cattle prices a nickel tomorrow."

Drought decreases pumpkin yield

Lack of rain makes smaller, fewer golden gourds

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pumpkins could be fewer and smaller for this year's Halloween festivities if drought continues much longer in the mid-Atlantic and New England states.

Ray Waterman, a New York farmer who serves as president of the World Pumpkin Confederation, said two drought years earlier this decade were not so hard on pumpkin crops as the current drought.

"This year's got me a little scared," he said in a telephone interview from his farm near Buffalo. If fields don't start getting regular rain soon, Waterman said, those farmers who don't irrigate won't have much of a crop.

Few pumpkin farmers irrigate because it is so expensive, and many who do focus their efforts on more valuable crops such as corn, tomatoes and peppers, he said.

"It's tough out there," Waterman said.

In Lancaster County, where most of Pennsylvania's pumpkins are grown, farmer Steve Groff has 20 acres of pumpkins, half under irrigation.

"If we would get good rain in the next three weeks, this pumpkin crop could come around and be half decent," Groff said. "We're so dry that an inch of rain would only be good for a couple of days. We need consistent rain."

Unlike other crops, pumpkins have about another month before they begin to mature. Even if the rains don't come, there will still be pumpkins, just not so many and not so big as usual, Groff said.

Pennsylvania has 146 farmers growing pumpkins on 4,758 acres, according to the most recent figures provided by the National Agricultural Statistics Service. Pumpkins don't need as much water as other vegetables, just a good soaking rain about once a week, but the severe heat and dry conditions has doubled that requirement.

"Our yield is down quite a bit," said Gene Gardner, an Indiana County, Pa., farmer who has no irrigation for his three acres of pumpkins.

Getting set to go.....

Dairy producers wait expectantly for controversial regional compacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania dairy farmer Jim Van Blarcom would have replaced his aging farm equipment long ago if milk prices had been higher and more predictable.

But Van Blarcom finds it difficult to plan a budget and determine what new equipment he can afford. So he is deferring purchases for now, even though the older machinery breaks down more often and needs more helping hands to operate.

He is counting on help from Congress in the form of a bill authorizing Pennsylvania's entry into a regional dairy compact that now covers the six New England states. The measure is becoming one of the most contentious farm issues before Congress this year.

Other Northeastern states would be able to join as well, while a separate compact would be set up for the South. If the bill does not pass, the New England compact would break up Oct. 1.

"It's sorely needed to maintain our dairy industry in the Northeast part of the country," said Van Blarcom, who operates a dairy farm in Columbia Crossroads, Pa.

He said milk prices need to be higher and more stable for dairy farmers to stay in business. Dairy is Pennsylvania's leading agriculture commodity.

The compacts would allow member states to set a minimum price for Class 1 milk, the type used for drinking. That is the price that farmers get for their milk and only indirectly determines the price at the grocery store.

The minimum price is likely to be higher than what farmers have been getting, and it would dampen price swings by eliminating the lower price levels. When the market price is above the minimum price, farmers would get the higher, market price.

From 1980 to 1997, the price of milk rose just 48 cents per hundred pounds (11.6 gallons) from $13.60 to $14.08. After reaching near record levels in 1998, the price dropped by a third during the winter.

Opponents of the compacts agree that price instability is a problem for farmers, but they believe farm subsidies and insurance are among the better ways to address the farmers' plight.

Midwestern dairy farmers, in particular, complain that the compacts would unfairly upset the balance between supply and demand and hurt farmers outside the compact area.

"Producers respond to higher price incentives by producing more milk, and consumers respond by buying less milk," said Steven Etka, a lobbyist for the Upper Midwest Dairy Coalition. "The surplus ends up being dumped into the national market."

Arthur Jaeger, assistant director for the Consumer Federation of America, said consumers also hurt from higher prices.

"If you're going to stabilize prices, don't stabilize them at a level that is disadvantageous to consumers," he said. "What's wrong with letting the market determine the price?"

But Joel Rotz, dairy specialist for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, said that when market prices fall, only some of the decrease is passed on to consumers. Having the minimum price, he said, would at least keep more farmers in business.

The market price is currently determined by a complex federal formula, which is undergoing changes as well. The current formula takes into account such factors as cheese prices and the farm's distance from Eau Claire, Wis.

Pennsylvania farmers say they are at a disadvantage because a greater portion of their milk is used for drinking and not for making cheese, which has a longer shelf life and can better withstand price swings.

Genetically modified trees increase lignin content

Altered plants grow faster, stronger

Scientists in Michigan say they are cultivating genetically modified trees that grow almost twice as fast as normal trees and may be a more environmentally friendly raw material for paper.

If the trees can be grown commercially, they could increase the timber output of forests and reduce the amount of chemicals used in bleaching paper pulp.

The scientists at the Michigan Technological University were looking for a way to grow trees with less lignin, a glue-like substance that has to be separated from wood fibers before they can be used to make paper.

The lignin is bleached out with chemicals containing chlorine, a costly process blamed for damaging rivers and wildlife habitats near paper mills.

In their study, to be published in the August issue of the journal Nature Biotechnology, the scientists describe how they knocked out a gene involved in lignin production in aspen cells. They then cultivated the cells into saplings in a greenhouse.

"What really surprised me is that they grow much faster," said Vincent Chiang, one of the researchers and the director of the Plant Biotechnology Research Center at the university.

He is not sure why the trees grow faster, but says the reduced production of lignin may leave the tree more energy for growth.

The aspens that were most affected by the gene treatment contained about 50 percent less lignin and 15 percent more cellulose, the fibrous component of wood used to make paper, chemicals and fuel alcohol.

"This is a very impressive demonstration of what tree biotechnology may be capable of," said Dr. Robert Eckert, director of strategic technology at timber giant Weyerhaeuser, based in Tacoma, Wash.

But what works in aspens may not work in the softwoods or conifers that are the main source of pulp. Eckert said such trees are harder to manipulate genetically.

Also, he said he wanted to see that the trees can survive and that the reduction of lignin persists.

"If all that falls in place, you have what could be kind of a watershed event in terms of its impact on the pulp and paper industry," he said.

Chiang said a new crop of more than 400 modified aspens is in two fields in Michigan and Wisconsin, and that his team has started trying out the same genetic treatment on other hardwood species.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Real Estate News For Consumers

LAW LETS HOMEOWNERS WITH 20% EQUITY APPLY TO CANCEL PRIVATE MORTGAGE INSURANCE

AUSTIN — A new federal law makes it easier for homeowners to cancel their private mortgage insurance (PMI) when it's no longer needed, and will keep thousands of Texas borrowers from paying unnecessary PMI premiums in the future.

The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998, which goes into effect July 29, 1999, and applies to all loans entered into after that date, requires the automatic cancellation of PMI once homeowners accumulate 22 percent equity. In addition, homeowners can request in writing to cancel their PMI when equity reaches 20 percent.

Those required equity levels are based on the original loan value, not on changing value over time, according to the National Association of Realtors, which championed the legislation.

Private mortgage insurance is used to insure conventionally financed mortgages when buyers make a down payment of less than 20 percent. (With FHA and VA mortgages, private mortgage insurance is not required.)

PMI is paid by the buyer to encourage lenders to take the risk of loaning money to consumers who have small downpayments. If a homeowner defaults on the loan, this insurance protects the loss of the lender.

Under the new law, all mortgage lenders — regardless of when home loans originated — must annually disclose to homeowners who to contact within the mortgage company regarding their PMI.

"The Realtor organization pushed for enactment of this law because, for families with new or refinanced mortgages, it will automatically lower their monthly mortgage payment once they achieve 22 percent equity," said John Walton, president of the Texas Association of Realtors.

Walton added that for Texans with home loans written before July 30, 1999, the new law should serve to remind them about their private mortgage insurance and that they can request, once they've reached 20 percent equity, to have PMI removed. Depending on the size of the mortgage, the monthly savings can range anywhere from $45 to $100 or more.

Homeowners who are currently paying PMI premiums on their monthly mortgage statement should contact their lender if equity is 20 percent or more of the original purchase price.

For more information, visit the Texas Association of Realtors' home on the Web at www.tar.org.

From the Realtors' Web site, consumers can find tips on buying and selling property; access a mortgage calculator and search the statewide database for Realtors in their area.

Leachman returns in sitcom that offers slim Thanks

By Jacqueline Cutler
©TVData Features Syndicate

The best part about Thanks, the new sitcom set in Colonial America, is imagining its sales pitch. "See, babe, we have these funny Pilgrims," it might begin. And right there, logic should rule. "Funny Pilgrims?"

"Just stick with me here. They're starving to death in that nasty winter when no one had anything to eat and everyone was dying to get back to England — or just dying. We can have witch jokes, Pilgrim jokes and sex jokes, because most Americans don't know their history anyway. It will be a riot."

Maybe it will. The series premiere, airing Monday, Aug. 2, on CBS, has a couple of jokes — though the laugh track is cued to erupt at anything — and some decent actors.

As the cast is introduced, crotchety matriarch Grammy Winthrop, played by the unsinkable Cloris Leachman, rails at Kirsten Nelson's young Pilgrim mom. Grammy Winthrop had warned the young woman to not marry that "good-for-nothing" — who happens to be Grammy's son (Tim Dutton, Frenchman's Creek).

Leachman, winner of an Oscar for The Last Picture Show and a shelf full of Emmys, seems as wacky and funny as some of her characters.

While she says she loves the new show, when asked what drew her to it, she says, with Pilgrim honesty, "Well, you have to pay the rent."

After charming viewers with her performances in The Mary Tyler Moore Show, the spinoff Phyllis and The Facts of Life; a stint as Timmy's mom on Lassie; and dozens of guest appearances over the years, Leachman wasn't keen on returning to sitcoms.

The main difference with this show, besides the fact that it's set in the 17th century, is that "it is not in a living-room set," Leachman says. "I just couldn't do another sitcom in a living-room set."

Indeed, the set for Thanks is a rustic cabin inhabited by the three adults and three children. The family also runs the general store, which could look more realistic, but at least nothing is plastic.

Among the show's problems are its variety of accents — considering the characters are supposed to be fresh off the Mayflower from England. And some of the talk is very 20th century.

A friend of the family says, "It's not my fault, James. I'm the victim here," in a decidedly surfer-dude accent.

But as the head of the house, Dutton does a steadfast job of carrying on.

One of the better jokes in the premiere is his invitation to a get-together to celebrate surviving the winter. "There will be music, but not dancing, because that's a sin," he says. "It's not a party, because that would be wrong."

It's a different kind of show, and Leachman, who knows something about being different (she sleeps on a magnetic mat and posed nude on the cover of an alternative-medicine magazine at age 71), says she finds it hilarious. "I have a silly bone, and I think this does, too," she asserts.

As a grandmother of four girls and a boy, Leachman, 73, is a natural for the role of Grammy. But she says she's still trying to nail the essence of the character.

"I'm still trying to figure out who to be ... like a wizened voice from the corner," she says, letting loose with a huge throaty laugh.

"I am looking for the most fun. That's the thing to be."

Tim Dutton, Kirsten Nelson, Jim Rash, Erika Christensen, Cloris Leachman, Andrew Ducote and Amy Centner (clockwise from left) star in Thanks, a quirky new sitcom set among the Pilgrims of the 17th century. The series premieres Monday on CBS.

Woods vs. Duval in golf's Showdown at Sherwood

ABC has reserved a special prime-time tee time for two of golf's biggest names.

From Sherwood Country Club in Thousand Oaks, Calif., Tiger Woods and David Duval, the world's two highest-ranked golfers, go head-to-head in Showdown at Sherwood, airing Monday, Aug. 2.

While this challenge event doesn't promise to be as cutthroat as a typical match, bragging rights are still a chief motivator for victory.

Duval moved past Woods in the world rankings earlier this year with a win at The Players Championship.

"It's the two greatest players in the game today," event publicist Steve Brener says. "It's match play, and they've got a great venue like Sherwood Country Club. Al Michaels is hosting it. It's got all the ingredients for a fantastic evening."

It's safe to say Woods probably has the crowd-favorite vote sewn up. But thanks to a chance to play before a prime-time audience, Duval has a solid opportunity to gain notoriety with viewers who may not be familiar with his name or game.

"With the Tiger Woods rage and the way David's been playing," Brener says, "the popularity of golf is at an all-time high. This is the next generation of professional golfers."

The boys may want to mind their manners and keep in the "friendly" spirit of the game, especially if they take a bad shot. Both players and their caddies will wear microphones for the challenge, so the viewing audience can listen in on every bit of dialogue out on the links.

"They know they're performing before probably the greatest audience ever to witness a golf match," Brener says. "I'm sure their palms will be a little sweaty when it comes to the announcement for the first tee on the first hole. These guys are competitors. They want to put on a show."

Win or lose, look toward next year. "(The event) was announced as a heavyweight showdown," Brener says. "I'm sure after the first one's over, the loser will ask for a rematch. I'd say if I lost, I'd ask for a rematch."

TV PIPELINE

Q: Near the end of Providence last season, Syd (Melina Kanakaredes) and her mafia boyfriend danced to a beautiful Italian song. Can you identify it? --Z Silberman, Auburn Hills, Mich. (and a zillion other readers).

A: It was "Con Te Partiro," a selection from tenor Andrea Bocelli's mega-selling CD Romanza. Opera purists may dismiss him as a lightweight, but the blind tenor has scored a mainstream success that is just short of phenomenal, and his music is turning up in everything from TV commercials to ice-skating specials.

Q: Help! I live in a small town and recently heard that DeForest Kelley ("Bones" McCoy of Star Trek) had died on June 11. I checked every magazine and found nothing there, nor was there anything on TV. What happened? --Shalom via e-mail.

A: The death of the beloved Atlanta-born actor was reported around the world and on virtually every entertainment news program on TV and radio, so I don't know how you managed to miss it. Kelley was 79 when he succumbed to stomach cancer. Widely known as both a gentleman and a gentle man, the actor was justifiably proud of his Star Trek legacy. He will be missed by his friends, colleagues and millions of fans.

Q: While looking up a TV listing for the movie Nightscream, I noticed Candace Cameron had another last name, Bure. Did she marry? --Melissa Wise, Chillicothe, Ohio.

A: Yes, the former Full House child star, now 23, married Valeri Bure on June 23, 1996. The actress and her husband welcomed their first child, daughter Nat. sha, on Aug. 19, 1998.

Q: My daughter swears that only one actress played Harriette Winslow on Family Matters, but I am sure there were two. Who is right? --Tammy D., Quarryville, Pa.

Melina Kanakaredes

A: You are. JoMarie Payton-Noble created the role of Harriette on Perfect Strangers, and played the role on the spinoff Family Matters through 1997. At that point, she told producers she was tired of just playing the same role and asked for an opportunity to write or direct some episodes as well. She quit, she said later, because no such offers ever materialized. Judyann Elder picked up the role through the end of that (final) season.

Q: I recently noticed the name Freddie Prinze Jr. in some movie credits. Is he the son of the young star of Chico and the Man? --M. Porter, Finley Park, Ill.

A: Yes, Prinze, 23 and a fast-rising star in his own right thanks to She's All That and other teen hits, is the son of the ill-fated comic actor Freddie Prinze, who fatally shot himself on Jan. 29, 1977. If he had lived, the elder Prinze would be 45 today.

SOAP TALK

OLTL troublemaker gets her just deserts

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

When Catherine Hickland joined One Life to Live, her role as Lindsay was supposed to be a one-time gig. That was a year ago, and she is still going strong on the daytime drama.

"I was thrilled to take the one-day part because I've been a fan of the show for the last 18 years," Hickland says. "I still watch every single episode. The fact that it turned into a contract role was a real dream come true."

Since that first day, Lindsay has been involved in a front-burner story line. "I got plunked down into the middle of the whole show. I sometimes worry that the viewers will get sick of me," Hickland says. "But I think (the writers) have done a really good job of writing me in."

Lindsay has been a troublemaker from the get-go. While she isn't exactly evil, she does seem to create havoc for other Llanview residents on a regular basis.

"She's a person who needs desperately to be loved and cared about," Hickland says. "She has never really had someone who loved her unconditionally. She's spent her entire life trying to get that."

"She's always planning dramatic things to get attention. Of course, she is also severely co-dependent," the actress says with a laugh. "She's always doing the wrong thing for the right reason."

In her current story line, Lindsay was caught messing with DNA tests while trying to find out if Nora's (Hillary B. Smith) baby was fathered by Bo (Robert S. Woods). Unfortunately, Bo will hate her if she tells her alibi. She was saved from telling the truth at the last minute, but that has created other problems.

"I think she is getting her comeuppance now that she has been arrested and tried for something she didn't do," Hickland says.

"It is a heinous crime, the hit-and-run accident and the death of Jessica's (Erin Torpey) baby. (But) as bad as she has been, she doesn't deserve this."
