Fatherhood. Some men come by it the old-fashioned way, with the birth of their first child. Some pick it up as part of loving the child's mother. Others choose it when they see a child in need and decide to volunteer to be foster dads. And, so Steve Cathey has found his way in the hearts and lives of nearly 30 youngsters who need a positive male image. "They all have one thing in common," Cathey said. "They all need to know they are loved. That's what I offer every child that comes through my door."

He knows about loving kids, he raised three of his own and in the last seven years, he has helped with at least 25 kids he calls his own. Cathey has no doubts about the mistakes he made raising his own kids and he's learned from those mistakes.

"When you take on someone else's kids, you don't know the mistakes they made, and it's harder to correct," he said. "Sometimes you just don't know."

"Dad's good at raising kids," said Karin Cathey, one of two of his biological daughters.

"He was always good at driving a truck or building something, but this makes him happy and he's really good at it," she said. Cathey now claims seven kids, most of which clamor around him, just as other children do with their parents when anything new comes along.

They all seem interested in what's going on and getting a word in about the man they call "Dad."

"He's good for us," said one young man. "We can't walk on him, and he loves us like no one else ever has. I can't see anyone else in the role of

Steve Cathey opens his home and heart to foster children

Dad." Not all the kids look at Cathey as Dad -- at least not at first.

"It's taken some of the kids a long time to call him 'Dad,'" said Karin. "One boy called him 'Big Man' for the longest time."

Cathey gets his message out to the kids in a variety of ways. He hugs the one sitting closest to him and with a twinkling smile, he acknowledges the one sitting on the couch.

But, all's not always grins and hugs. The look in his eye changes as he addresses a sullen teen.

"It's not gonna last all day," he says in a quiet tone.

Cathey hasn't always been an easy-going father. He describes himself as "general jerk" and a "wife abuser." "It changed the night I met Jesus Christ," he said. "I had to overcome drugs and alcohol to get to where I am now."

He says he doesn't follow any particular religion, just Jesus -- and that's made all the difference.

Even his house, the place he welcomes the kids, visitors and social workers, reflects the quiet assurance of what he's doing is right.

The sign at the entrance to his place reads "Welcome to Victory Ranch."

"That's what it is," he said. "Every time one of these kids makes a break through, it's a victory. Anytime these kids learn to accept the love I offer them, it's a victory."

He said the house itself is a victory because he and his wife never thought they could get it, but somehow it all just worked out.

Victory Ranch can house up to 12 children and offer them a swimming pool and acreage to raise animals or participate in other endeavors.

Some of the kids coming under his care have had a series of bad breaks, foster parents and even run-ins with the law, but that doesn't deter Cathey.

"I've never seen a kid I wouldn't take in. They're all welcome. I love every kid I see," he said, looking around the room filled with ones he considers "his."

The idea of raising this many children could daunt the staunchest of hearts, but it's an adrenaline rush for Cathey every time another child enters Victory Ranch.

"It makes me excited. I see a new challenge in every kid," he said.

The only criteria Cathey looks at is whether or not a new child would be damaging to the kids already in residence.

Just as often happens with biological children, Cathey has experienced seeing one of his 'kids' go down the wrong track.

"I've hunted one down, and found him in jail. I told him to come on back when he gets out and we'll help him get a job and get straight-

FATHER'S DAY HISTORY

What is the origin of Father's Day?

Sonora Dodd, of Washington, first had the idea of a "father's day."

She thought of the idea for Father's Day while listening to a Mother's Day sermon in 1909.

Sonora wanted a special day to honor her father, William Smart.

Smart, who was a Civil War veteran, was widowed when his wife died while giving birth to their sixth child. Mr. Smart was left to raise the newborn and his other five children by himself on a rural farm in eastern Washington state.

After Sonora became an adult she realized the selflessness her father had shown in raising his children as a single parent. It was her father that made all the parental sacrifices and was, in the Stockpile some food, lock the doors and don't let the kids go outside: Y2K is coming!

Run for the hills, right?

Well, such measures probably won't be necessary. Although scores of people act as if Y2K will bring the civilized world crashing to a halt, this computerized "crisis" may prove to be surprisingly tame when the millennium rolls around.

Some projections for the morning of January 1, 2000, predict a nation devoid of electricity, water and all other necessities, but at least in Texas, "both the private and public sectors appear to be well advanced in Y2K readiness and planning," according to a special report issued by Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander.

The Y2K problem inadvertently originated in the decision of computer programmers in the 1960s. These programmers attempted to save then-scarce hard drive space by using a shortened, two-digit dating system. The space-saving method then seeped into modern computers via outdated, 'patched-up' programming.

The feared Y2K problem itself will occur if modern computers using this shorthand dating misinterpret or reject the data on Jan. 1, 2000, caus-

"[Because of that], we feel we should be a little more sensitive to Y2K compliance than most businesses out there."

In addition to health care, phone services might also suffer. Mike Harris of West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative said, "We could have a major disruption in all telecommunications from 911 service to local long-distance." However, Harris also expressed confidence WTRT will be adequately compliant by the ing non-compliant computers to crash.

"But it's just like any other problem," said Hereford State Bank's Steve Gilbert. "You work through the solutions and keep running the business."

The Y2K problem does, however, have the potential to cause relatively serious complications in the running of many establishments.

"In a worst-case scenario, ultimately, something could malfunction and harm a patient, possibly resulting in a death," said Hereford Regional Medical Center's finance officer Rodney Bailey. "[Because of that], we feel we should be a little more sensitive to Y2K compliance than most businesses out there."

Mike Harris of West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative said, "We could have a major disruption in all telecommunications from 911 service to local long-distance." However, Harris also expressed confidence WTRT will be adequately compliant by the end of June.

Most Hereford businesses seem well prepared to handle the rollover into 2000 as well. But because so many operations depend on one another, coordination, especially with utility companies and internal vendors, will require considerable attention and effort.

Steve Bartels, city finance officer, demonstrated an acute awareness of this interdependence.

"As long as there is electricity, there will be water, but in the event of an electrical outage, we have our normal backups," he explained.

In order to prepare for the millennial date change, some businesses are planning their own strategies, while others must comply with orders from larger entities, such as the Federal Financial Interagency Examination Council or the National Credit Union Administration.

Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland lamented his office's position as a result of having to answer to higher authorities.

"Because of statutory requirements, we can't ask [Apollo Data of Austin] to come in and rewrite our software; we have to ask for bids and proposals," he said.

Most companies nationwide have adopted a basic five-step plan, or something comparable to it, for solv-

YMCA kicking off annual fund drive

Volunteers for the Hereford & Vicinity YMCA will kick off the Y's annual Sustaining Contribution Campaign on Monday. The goal for this year's campaign is $30,000.

The Hereford YMCA reaches many people each year through programs, leagues and classes. Daily use of the YMCA ranges from 70 to 300 people. In 1999, there will be more than 1,500 registered participants in YMCA youth programs.

Sustaining funds raised will be used to supplement the cost of youth programs and scholarships provided throughout the year by the YMCA.

Anyone who is not contacted by a YMCA volunteer but who wants to participate in the campaign should mail contributions to the YMCA, 500 E. 15th, Hereford 79045.

Humane Society meeting slated

The local Humane Society will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

Among the topics to be discussed will be plans for the Town & Country Jubilee, which will be in August.

All interested individuals are urged to attend.

Commissioners to hear request

Members of the Hereford City Commission will hear a request from the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce for a contribution to the 1999 Fourth of July Fireworks Show.

The commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

The commissioners also are expected to re-appoint a member to the city Building Code Board of Adjustments and Appeals, replace the city's local health authority (rabies) and receive a report from the Hereford Economic Development Corp.

Budget work starts

County estimates it will have $2.5 million available in revenue from its tax levy on property

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

As the Deaf Smith County commissioners begin the process of developing a budget for the first year of the new millennium, they still have more than three months left in this budget year.

The preliminary budget package presented last week at the commissioners' meeting showed a projected $2,517,665 in ad valorem tax revenue, with another $360,000 in sales tax revenue.

The budget also calls for $31,000 in revenue from state sources. These include the bingo tax, $10,000; mixed drink tax, $8,500; state comptroller-county judge, $10,000; and SO training, $2,500.

A major source of revenue for the county will be generated by various fees collected by the county offices. These fees are expected to be $361,700 during the next fiscal year.

The anticipated fees of office are:
 ✓ County judge, $400;
 ✓ Sheriff, $50,000;
 ✓ Sheriff Work Release, $5,000;
 ✓ Criminal district attorney, $7,000;
 ✓ County clerk, $75,000;
 ✓ Probate, $300;
 ✓ Court reporter fees, $2,000;

✓ Tax-OSF, $43,000;
 ✓ Tax-titles, $18,000;
 ✓ Motor vehicle sales tax, $90,000;
 ✓ Parks & Wildlife, $500;
 ✓ Returned check fee, $500;
 ✓ District clerk, $32,000; and ✓ Justice of the peace, $38,000.

An additional $35,000 in revenue is expected to be generated by a variety of state and jury fees.

The preliminary budget also anticipates the county will collect $247,000 in fines, with the largest amount, $140,000, coming from the justice of the peace's office.

Miscellaneous income is pegged at $88,000, with $38,000 of that coming from jail expense refunds.

The total general revenue projected in the FY 2000 budget is $3,722,865, up from $3,688,039 budgeted for the year ending Sept. 30.

The total expenditures are estimated to be $3,976,993, an imbalance of $254,128. That will be offset, however, by an estimated $401,872 fund balance at the end of the current fiscal year.

The county's estimated property valuation is $561,599,432. If the tax rate were set at 52.86 cents per $100 assessed valuation, with the county collecting 97.5 percent of the taxes due, a total of $2,894,399 would be generated through ad valorem taxes. Of that total, $376,744 would be distributed to the road & bridge funds, leaving a total of $2,517,655 available for the county's general fund.

'Stealth' bomber criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The B-2 "stealth" bomber touted by the Pentagon as a star performer in Kosovo is tricky to maintain and hobbled by technical flaws, congressional investigators say.

The $2 billion plane has passed most operational tests, but deficiencies were identified "that will limit, or under some circumstances slow, its pace in flight operations," says a report released this week.

General Accounting Office auditors questioned the durability of the special materials that make the B-2 nearly invisible to enemy radar and said cockpit equipment does not perform as advertised, preventing the air crew from determining the enemy's exact location.

The report also found the planning system for missions insufficient and said the aircraft's use is limited by the fact that all the planes are housed and maintained at one Air Force base in Missouri.

The sixth GAO report in five years on the B-2 was completed before the 11-week Balkan air war ended June 9.

President Clinton praised the success rate in Kosovo, calling it a marvel and its crews a testament to American military prowess.

Six B-2s flew 30-hour nonstop missions from Whiteman Air Force Base to Yugoslavia and back.

Debate turns to House, Senate negotiators

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the death of the House's gun-control bill, Congress' response to a rash of school shootings now rests with a small panel of lawmakers whose talks will start with the stricter Senate measure opposed by the National Rifle Association.

Even as they left behind the marathon proceedings Friday, lawmakers of both parties were girding for battle.

They immediately began blaming each other for the 280-147 defeat of a gun-control bill after bloody school shootings in Colorado and Georgia.

President Clinton, in his weekly radio address today, called the situation in Congress unacceptable.

"We can't allow the gun lobby to rewrite our laws and undermine our values," the president said in the broadcast, taped at the summit of world leaders in Cologne, Germany.

To House members, Clinton said, "You've still got an opportunity, and you've still got an obligation, to do the right thing and pass real legislation that will strengthen our gun laws, not weaken them."

GOP officials noted that Democrats comprised most of the no votes. Democrats accused Republicans of weakening the bill at the behest of the NRA.

Meanwhile, both sides huddled on strategy for looming negotiations between a small committee of House and Senate lawmakers that will be controlled by Republicans.

Minority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., said House Democrats are counting on Clinton to lead the charge for the Senate's proposed new gun controls.

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders will dispatch pro-gun-control women lawmakers to make the same pitch. They will be led by Rep. Carolyn McCarthy of New York, whose husband was shot and killed on a Long Island commuter train, Gephardt said.

"They're frankly more effective than we (male lawmakers) are," Gephardt said.

"I knew about Y2K five years ago, and since all the computers [in the school district] are new, I just never bought anything that wasn't compliant."

Diana Drew, technology director, Hereford Independent School District

ing the Y2K problem. The procedure begins with promoting awareness of the problem, and progresses into an assessment and analysis of company equipment. Information gleaned during assessment directs the process of renovation, wherein non-compliant equipment is replaced or repaired. Validation then tests these improvements, and implementation ingrains the repairs into the normal flow of business.

Diana Drew, Hereford Independent School District's director of technology, has a slightly simpler solution.

"I knew about Y2K five years ago, and since all the computers [in the school district] are new, I just never bought anything that wasn't compliant," she matter-of-factly stated.

Almost all area establishments, especially those adhering to a national plan of action, should have solutions implemented no later than the end of the summer. The few businesses that need a little more time remain confident in their ability to beat the Dec. 31 deadline.

"There are still some minor applications that are iffy," Ruland acknowledged. "But there are very few people working on a word processor who depend on it for doing calculations."

So the sentiment among Hereford businesses is basically universal: as Harris put it, "We've gotten what we need to do handled."

Bill Allen of the Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union urges Hereford residents that it is important to keep a practical focus. "[The customers'] money is safer here than in a pillow sack. Scams will be everywhere," he warned.

Murillo draws term in prison

Pablo Murillo Jr. was sentenced to seven years in prison last week after a 22nd District Court jury convicted him of burglary.

Murillo had been accused of joining Danny Zepeda in the Aug. 20, 1998 theft of a go-cart and bicycle from a residence in the 200 block of Elm. Zepeda already is incarcerated in connection with the same incident.

In his testimony, Murillo was repetitive and, at times, contradictory.

Among the witnesses called throughout the case included Deaf Smith County Deputy J.D. High, who took Murillo into custody; Hereford Police Cpl. Brian Burzynski, who took Murillo's statements; and the defendant's father, Pablo Murillo Sr. The elder Murillo required the assistance of translator Gracie Varela.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Jim English served as the prosecutor, and Maria Lopez was lawyer for the defendant. Judge H. Bryan Poff presided by appointment.

Deaf Smith Co. library sponsors reading club

It's circus time at the Deaf Smith County Library. The summer Reading Club, "Open a Book - On with the show" is now in full swing. Programs are planned for 10 a.m. Tuesdays for children age K-4 and up a mime show and clown-face craft are planned for June 22. Fun games, and more! For more information call 364-1206.

Asked why, he replied: "Because they're mothers" with an "earnestness and passion" that makes an impression with voters.

Although he voted for the Senate bill, Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said he hoped the final product "will be something close to what the House has done. They've done good work."

But the staunchest proponents of both sides of the issue agreed the outcome was uncertain at best.

"It's very difficult to handicap," said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga.

"I don't think you can forecast" the outcome, Gephardt said.

The issue went off the political charts after the April 20 shootings at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., that left 15 people dead, including the two gunmen.

With Vice President Al Gore's tie-breaking vote, the Senate last month passed a measure that would extend required background checks to all sales at gun shows.

Book introduces readers to real Vietnam

Vietnam! For most Americans, Vietnam dredges up images of jungle fighting, tiger cages, 53,000 dead U.S. soldiers, and political turmoil. American political leaders thrust this country into a civil war without knowing anything about Vietnam's history, its people and its culture. For more than a decade, the people of the United States knew only that their brothers, husbands and fathers were fighting and dying in a tiny land 10,000 miles away. In the two decades that have passed since the last GIs left, Americans still do not know Vietnam and its people.

Our images of Vietnam are shaped by the books and movies, most of which focus on the war and the political events surrounding U.S. involvement. However, the books and movies do not provide insight into the history, the culture and the lives of the Vietnamese. Even the few post-war books about Vietnam since the fall of South Vietnam in 1975 examine the political environment, with little attention paid to the Vietnamese people.

"A Country, Not a War" is

Harold Truman
("A Country, Not a War: Vietnam Impressions," by Harold Truman. Pale Bone Publishing, 1999. Hardcover, 260 pages; ISBN: 0967017602)

a journal that offers an insightful commentary regarding the people and their lives in post-war Vietnam.

Author Harold Truman traveled from Ho Chi Minh

City, which most Americans remember as the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon, to Hanoi, the former North Vietnamese capital that now serves as capital city of the unified Vietnam. Along the way, he visited some of the places that are familiar to many Americans: My Lai, Da Nang, Phu Bai. Although he doesn't speak Vietnamese, he was accompanied by his wife, Petite, a Vietnamese lady who moved to the United States in the 1960s. With Petite acting as interpreter, the author was able to engage in conversation with the Vietnamese, including men who fought on both sides during the war. He seems surprised at the lack of antagonism toward Americans in Vietnam; he also is stunned by the level of corruption still prevalent in the country, which despite the economic reforms still is a Third World nation.

The concise commentary by Mr. Truman spares no one. He makes an honest appraisal of modern Vietnam, its successes and failures, and the stupidity of the American military bureaucracy, which understood neither its enemy nor its ally in the war. But he doesn't spare himself either, employing a dry humor in relating his unintentional breaches of local etiquette, offending an artist, as well as Petite's elderly cousin.

It is obvious in the book that as he traveled throughout Vietnam, the author developed a genuine affection for the people, knowledge of their history, and a respect for their culture.

"A Country, Not a War: Vietnam Impressions" is not ambitious; it isn't intended to be THE book about Vietnam. Still, it is unique. It achieves the author's goal superbly: It relates the impressions of one American about a small country that has become part of our collective psyche. For Mr. Truman, as well as for most Americans, the word "Vietnam" does produce a strong emotional reaction. Thanks to this book, we can begin to shed our long-held misperceptions of that land and its gentle people.

Kindergartener's story takes 2nd place

Special to The Brand

A Hereford elementary school student was among the winners of the Reading Rainbow Young Writers & Illustrators Contest, which was coordinated by KACV-TV.

Meredith Hays, a student at Tierra Blanca Elementary, received second place in the kindergarten category for her story "There Goes the Circus Ball."

Winners in the competition were announced last week.

McCall Money of St. Mary's Academy in Amarillo claimed the grand prize in kindergarten competition with "The Four Little Chickens."

"Teamwork in Space," written by Connor Hinckley of Arden Road Elementary in Canyon won the grand prize at the first-grade level, while Adam Prado of Amarillo San Jacinto Elementary took second place for "Whales."

Sean Osborn of Amarillo Puckett Elementary won the second-grade division's grand prize with "Take Me to Your Fishing Pond," while Abbie Adams of St. Andrew's Episcopal won second place for "The Lovely Pink Lady."

In the third-grade level, Jesse Melson of Arden Road Elementary in Canyon won the grand prize with "My Summer Adventure" and Jessica Masters of Amarillo's Paramount Terrace Elementary won second place with "The Talking Chalkboard."

The grand prize and second-place winners got to read

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

Bush cannot avoid queries

With his declaration in Iowa last weekend that he wants to change his address from Austin to Washington, D.C., Texas Gov. George W. Bush will find the gloves have been taken off by that national media and others who covet the same residence.

The governor will also likely find out that vague platforms such as "compassionate conservatism," and failure to provide specifics about where he stands on issues will work against him over the long haul.

As a presidential candidate, the voters will expect — and deserve — to learn exactly what that means.

And like it or not, Gov. Bush will have to confront and answer unpleasant questions from the press about his background, not only his self-described "irresponsible" youth but also about his financial dealings over the years.

By most accounts, Texas has prospered and grown under Bush's reign as governor, but the nation's voters will still have serious questions about some of the governor's personal and business attributes — not only from his days as an oil man and his stint as a partner in a major league baseball team, but how he managed to skip over a long list of recruits for a berth in the Air National Guard.

Although he is the front-runner for the Republican nomination and even leads the Democratic front-runner, Vice President Al Gore, in nearly all of the political polls, Gov. Bush has demonstrated two troubling tendencies.

Despite an amiable and well-spoken demeanor, one of the governor's worst liabilities appears to be his testiness when confronted with questions about things he prefers not to answer.

Some of his earliest critics have said Gov. Bush's propensity of deciding what questions are deserving of answers is a sign of arrogance. If that perception takes hold, his campaign could collapse as swiftly as those of two other well-heeled Texans, former Gov. John Connally and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

The second concern comes with the governor's early manipulation of the English language to skirt those uncomfortable questions. While that is often the mark of a skillful politician, it also draws some unfavorable comparison to the current occupant of the White House.

Does this mean Gov. Bush is lacking in the integrity and character that many voters now say is of paramount importance in a president?

Of course not. However, the voters do deserve to know exactly where the candidates — all of them — stand on the issues that affect us all. The voters need to have clear, unambiguous statements that define precisely who the presidential candidate is and what he or she will do as leader of the United States.

With think it is refreshing to see a presidential candidate draw a line in the sand — and we're impressed even more when that same candidate refuses to straddle it to suit the polls.

Bushspeak

GOP leader's sounding positively Clintonesque

By Ron Fournier

The Associated Press

George W. Bush says he's for instant checks at gun shows, but he let legislation on the issue die in Texas. He says the subject "needs to be worked out" in Washington — then opposes the solution passed by the Senate.

What looks at first to be a Texas-sized flip flop is instead an example of how Bush speaks in vague terms with versatile words that don't pin him down on a contentious issue. It is an age-old political skill that President Clinton turned into an art form.

From abortion to Kosovo to gun control, hate crimes, affirmative action and the environment, the front-running Republican presidential contender uses precisely imprecise language to leave himself wiggle room.

"I think comparisons to Clinton can be strained in some major ways, but in small areas like careful word choice and artful policy positions, they both show political deftness and skill of a similar sort," said Bruce Buchanan, professor of government at the University of Texas, a presidential specialist who has watched Bush's career up close.

The Texas governor's supporters don't like the comparison.

"Governor Bush exercises responsible leadership — leadership that seeks to unify people and find common ground rather than pit people against one another," spokeswoman Mindy Tucker said.

From abortion to Kosovo to gun control, hate crimes, affirmative action and the environment, the front-running Republican presidential contender uses precisely imprecise language to leave himself wiggle room

"He states his position clearly and responsibly. Some media and Democrats want to try to goad him into saying what he's against. But Governor Bush wants people to know what he is for," she said.

Bush said in May he is for a constitutional amendment to make abortion illegal — just what the conservative wing of his party wanted to hear.

In the same interview, he said Americans' "hearts are not right" on the issue, thus concluding that there is no sense in pushing for an amendment opposed by many moderate voters.

Affirmative action is another issue that divides the left from right. With three squishy sentences in April, Bush seemed to oppose and support it. "I'm for affirmative access. I think the state ought to do everything in its power to provide equal opportunity for all citizens. I think quotas put one group of people against another."

On Kosovo, Bush criticized Clinton for taking a ground invasion off the table, but when asked for his opinion he deftly dodged. "That's dependent upon the military advisers that would be advising me," he said.

He did make one thing perfectly clear: "I support winning."

He wouldn't take a position on a hate crimes bill in the Texas legislature, yet stood firm against hate and crime. "All crime is a hate crime," he said in May.

This self-styled compassionate conservative defends his environmental record, but has waffled on global warming.

"I think the science is still out on issues like global warming," he said in March.

"I believe there is global warming," he said May 13.

He noted still later, a "number of conservative people ... disagree about its cause and impact."

In the aftermath of the school shootings in Littleton, Colo., Bush said he supported a Republican proposal for voluntary background checks at gun shows but wanted Washington to go farther and make the checks mandatory. The GOP measure failed.

When Vice President Al Gore cast the tie-breaking vote to pass the Democratic alternative — with sponsors saying it provides for mandatory checks — Bush refused at first to say whether he supported it.

He limited his reaction to the defeated GOP version, which he said was stricter than the Democratic measure. "My vice president, I suspect, would have helped make sure" the GOP measure passed, he said.

"I suspect" is a word Clinton likes to use to leave himself an out.

The Texas governor summed up Bushspeak best himself, answering queries about a tough topic in 1989: "Those are all questions that have to be answered given the context of the moment."

The context of the moment can yield answers from Bush that seem a shade or two different from his previous responses. It might be that his opinion has changed, but more often than not it boils down to this: He never really made his opinion clear in the first place.

Do fathers deserve those gifts?

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

The demand for those hideous Father's Day gifts has no doubt crested over the past two weeks.

Ties for the fisherman and golfer, argyle socks, Bermuda shorts that soften those masculine white legs, clever coffee mugs, electric razors and nose hair trimmers, and wild polka dot boxer briefs have made their way to deserving dads by now.

Many fathers laugh and wonder what they ever did to deserve such recognition.

Like some, my dad never sought those endowments, even if his sons tried every now and then, with meager finances, to give them.

Our pocketbooks limited our scope of gifts, but never our desire to reward him with the treasures we felt he so richly deserved.

Nevertheless, the resulting trinkets were very often sent to their proper station in the family's hideous gift museum.

There, they would weather a long, slow slide into the depths of forgetfulness.

After an appropriate amount of time as an honorary display on the kitchen counter, these gifts first found their way into a closet niche or dresser drawer, always close enough to retrieve if my brother or I remembered to question their absence.

Finally, when these objects of our affection could no longer be hidden conveniently, the mementoes were given up to the bone yard for ridiculous gifts — a family garage sale.

At some point, my brother and I came to appreciate two things about our aimless quest for good gifts: both of our parents were hard, if not impossible to shop for, and neither were shallow enough to expect a gift on either Father's or Mother's Day.

Up until then, we were all miserable.

Our parents were running out of hiding places, and some of the casualties they didn't have room for were making their way back into my possession.

"Gee, don't you think we could turn that thing into a lamp or something," I would plead.

If we were lucky enough to ever stumble across something either of our parents could really use, then we showered them so relentlessly with the item on other gift-giving occasions that they could have started their own retail outlet.

On a whim, we bought my dad a nice pair of athletic warm-ups for Christmas one year. The gift was a long shot.

Beyond making an occasional fashion statement — expertly teaming athletic shorts with skinny legs, black socks and frayed leather house shoes in the height of a scalding summer — dad's idea of public casual wear was khaki slacks and dress shoes — maybe a white t-shirt if he was really slumming.

The man had only owned one pair of tennis shoes that we knew about — he never wore them, mint condition. If they had been tires, the size placards would still be pasted on the tread.

To our dismay, our fashion-plate dad actually wore and found he liked the warm-ups.

It was one of the biggest mistakes he ever made.

After we got finished with him, the poor man could have worn a different color and style every day of the year after that.

Then we started pestering him ceaselessly about not wearing them often enough to suit us. And he couldn't wear the same pair twice in one week, we wouldn't let him.

"Dad, you don't have to wear out those warm-ups before you can wear the other new ones we got you," I would protest.

"Well, I like these. Is there anything wrong with that?"

Well yeah, there was. If he didn't start wearing those others out any quicker, then we were going to be forced to find another gift that he liked. I couldn't bear the thought of starting from scratch again.

If my dad is as smart as I know he is, he should have long ago suggested rain checks from his two boys on Hallmark holidays, and redeemed them for free labor on those household chores my mother nags him daily to finish.

OK, there you go. That idea has some merit.

I can easily envision it as a double stamp day. Dad redeems his check and gets the free labor. Mom redeems hers and gets her house finished. And my brother and I would never again have to think. It sounds wonderful.

But then again, if we didn't give them those timeless and useless treasures they have found such great use for and comfort in over the years, our parents would never have anything else to put in the family garage sale.

And what a terrible waste that would be.

There'll always be books

Don Cooper

For those of us who love to read, it just feels good to pick up a book.

I love the little crack that a new hardcover book makes when you open it for the first time. There's even an aroma about a new book seems to clear the cobwebs and make brain cells start functioning.

In recent years, the rapid growth of audio books and the Internet have led many people to claim books are outdated and, like the dinosaurs and liberal Republicans, become extinct.

However, two people who work in the world of book publishing are pretty certain that books will always be around.

Cherise Grant, who is an editor for publishing giant Simon & Schuster, told a group of writers who gathered last weekend in Amarillo for the annual Frontiers in Writing conference that the electronic books now so popular on the Net will not eliminate the book in its current form.

"The Internet is affecting publishing and sales," Grant said. However, she sees the Net as complementing, not replacing, the familiar printed book.

"There will always be books. You can't have a beautifully designed art book on the Web," she said.

Donald Maass, a literary agent in New York and published author, pointed out amazon.com, the big online book store, sells 2-4 percent of all books sold in the United States. This means there will be significant changes over the years in how books are marketed, but the printed book will not be replaced by electronic books.

However, Maass observed the way books are published already is being affected by modern technology.

Maass said "on-demand printing" means books will never go out of print because they are stored digitally and can be printed when a specific number of orders are placed through to the publisher or through on-line book stores.

As a reader, I am glad to see the publishing industry, while gearing up to accommodate new technology, will continue to put out books in "real book" form.

The e-books might be all right for a traveler sitting in an airport terminal, but there's nothing quite so comforting as curling up in an easy chair with a good book, one printed on paper with pages you have to turn.

Gore trying to balance loyalty, independence

Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

Loyal to a political fault, Vice President Al Gore is out to show his independence — without breaking allegiance with the boss he is campaigning to succeed.

That is the balancing act required of the No. 2 man when he runs for No. 1. For Gore, it means boasting about policy successes while rebuking, more forcefully than before, President Clinton's personal misconduct and deceptions in the Monica Lewinsky sex scandal.

It means claiming joint sponsorship of the economic steps Gore credits for "our strongest economy in the history of the United States," while promising more from a new Democratic administration.

"Now we must build on that foundation," Gore said Wednesday in Carthage, Tenn., as he formally announced what he's been doing, running for president in 2000.

A vice president or former one has been a major party nominee for president in all but two of the past 10 elections. Not since 1952 has an incumbent vice president who sought nomination been denied it. Four of the last seven presidents had been vice president, although only George Bush in 1988 won election while serving as VP.

Gore has both special standing and special problems in running for the White House. He knows the job; vice presidents usually do. He has been Clinton's partner as well as his understudy, part of the team that made the policy decisions. They weren't his, and he kept quiet when he disagreed.

There are polls to indicate a downside, suggesting what's been termed Clinton fatigue.

Clinton is, after all, an impeached president. Gore, to the dismay of his own political allies, pronounced Clinton "one of our greatest presidents" the day the House impeached him.

Not that he defended Clinton's behavior. He said it was wrong.

He's saying it far more vehemently now that his own campaign is on, calling it inexcusable, saying the impeachment, trial and acquittal wasted time the administration could have spent on other issues.

That's the easy part of his effort to move beyond Clinton; it is more difficult to define policies for change, so as to counter the Republican arguments, already sounded by Texas Gov. George W. Bush, that he represents the status quo.

Gore said he would take his own values to the presidency "to build an America that is not only better off but better."

A new poll tells why Gore needs to promise a new look. A Pew Research Center survey reports that only 43 percent of Americans want the next president to offer policies and programs similar to those of the current administration, 10 percent fewer than five months ago.

No modern president has pushed as Clinton is for the nomination and election of his vice president to succeed him.

Dwight D. Eisenhower kept hands off in 1960, saying he didn't want to be seen as Richard M. Nixon's patron, that it was better for the vice president to be his own man. Ike was no help when asked for a major Nixon idea adopted by the administration. "If you give me a week, I might think of one," he said. "I don't remember."

Eight years later, Nixon was the beneficiary when Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey couldn't break the bond of being No. 2.

Summer means it's salad time

As temperatures get warmer and warmer, I increasingly suffer from hunger pangs brought on by the thought of fresh, crisp salads, vine-ripened garden vegetables and juicy, cool fruits.

Winters seem to drag on as lettuce develops the taste of old warehouses and tomatoes have no taste and even less pleasing texture.

By mid-May, biting into an apple can only be compared to munching on a cardboard box which has been left in the rain, and cucumbers and peppers are a sad disappointment, with soft spots and bruises.

But, now the fruits and vegetables from the Rio Grande Valley arrive daily at grocery stores and roadside markets.

With a little thought, the fine art of creating a perfect salad turns the ho-hum dinner salad into oohs and ahs usually reserved for a thing of beauty.

Just any salad won't do. I'm very particular about salads. They don't have to be fancy — just right.

Don't get me wrong, there is nothing in the world wrong with a simple lettuce and tomato salad. Once again, it has to be done correctly.

Chunks of lettuce — the size of a coffee cup — and tomato wedges dumped on top, just do not a salad make.

Dianna F. Dandridge

For any salad to be just right, lettuce needs to be no larger than half the size of a fork, about 3/4 of inch square. Any larger and it's cumbersome to eat and hard to keep on a fork. Any smaller and it's more like shreds that should be put in a burrito.

Bright red tomato wedges adorning the plate are nice, but also hard to eat. Too often, the diner cuts the tomato and part of it scoots off the plate. Worse, it usually winds up in someone's lap.

Tomatoes should be chopped somewhat smaller than the lettuce and gently tossed. After all chopped tomatoes can be bruised as easily as whole produce.

Topping the salad is just as important.

I know ranch dressing is popular, and so is Catalina, or Thousand Island or Italian, but why cover up the wonderful tastes and textures of fresh vegetables with something so heavy. A little apple cider or red wine vinegar and some olive oil is all that is needed.

Color, flavor and character enhance a fresh salad with the addition of garden favorites. Like the lettuce and tomatoes, other ingredients need to be cut to an appropriate size. Crunchy celery and full-bodied bell peppers in red, green, gold and even purple sparkle with jewel-like brightness and add zing to each bite.

The smooth creamy texture of avocados and the firm tenderness of button mushrooms surprise the palate with a pleasing difference.

Then without warning, moist cucumbers and pungent radishes dance across the tastebuds and disappear nearly before the memory can capture their essence.

Of course, green and black olives, though not really fresh vegetables, perk up the very looks of the salad and add a hint of foreign places.

To get the best from a salad all the ingredients need to be tossed together, so each bite is a little different, but all the flavors meld, leaving just a hint of each individual taste.

Garnishing the vegetable fest with thinly sliced hard-boiled egg is acceptable, if a source of protein is an absolute must, but only a few. Forget the cheese, the bacon, the ham and the turkey. Leave those for a late-night sandwich.

Buchanan said Bush, like Clinton, carefully selects his words to leave room to maneuver around political landmines. Both men seek to bridge the gap between the old rhetoric of the right and left.

"It's irritating to purists, but it's definitely the art of the possible and creative ambiguity. And it is a valued political skill," he said. "Given the way our system works, it's a necessary one."

Ron Fournier covers national politics for The Associated Press.

To complete the effect, serve the salad in either a shiny stainless steel or simple glass bowl.

Then for dessert — a wonderful juicy, fruit salad made from peaches, nectarines, plums, berries and melons. Apples and pears will be better later as the new crops begin to come in.

Bite-size pieces of purple plums, golden peaches and red-tinged nectarines mingle with melon balls of red, green and orange to cool the summer heat.

What can I say? Steaks and chops are great, but they're at hand all year long. The summer fruits and vegetables will only be here for a short time.

I intend, to enjoy them to the fullest, while I can.

Good News About Capital Gains

Congress recently gave investors an attractive gift by simplifying the capital gains provisions passed in 1997. In a nutshell, Congress replaced the former maximum capital gains rate of 28 percent with a maximum rate of 20 percent and made the lower rate retroactive to January 1, 1998.

That means nearly all gains earned on investments held more than one year will now be taxed at a maximum rate of 20 percent. (For investors in the 15 percent tax bracket, long-term capital gains will be taxed at a rate of 10 percent.) Better yet, in a year-and-a-half, the long-term capital gains rate will drop further. Beginning in 2001, investments purchased and held more than five years will be taxed at a maximum rate of 18 percent.

Gains on investments held less than a year, on the other hand, will continue to be taxed as ordinary income, which means tax rates up to 39.6 percent. That makes a powerful case for investing for the long term.

Although stocks should never be sold simply because of changes in tax laws, lower capital gains tax rates provide an excellent opportunity to diversify your portfolio. If your portfolio has become overweighted in a single stock, or if the outlook of a stock you own has deteriorated, you may want to take advantage of the lower capital gains tax.

It's easy to control how long you hold individual stocks, but how do you control buying and selling within your mutual funds? Unfortunately, you can't. However, you can choose mutual funds that practice buy-and-hold investing. To determine how often your mutual fund buys and sells stock, check its turnover rate, which indicates how much trading occurs within the fund. The lower the turnover rate, the better. For example, a fund with a 100 percent turnover rate holds its positions an average of one year before selling. A fund with a 50 percent turnover rate holds its positions an average of two years before selling.

Your mutual fund has a high turnover rate, consider moving your money into a high-quality fund that subscribes to a long-term, buy-and-hold strategy. After all, you're the one paying the price for the fund manager's short-term decisions to buy and sell. And, you may be paying as much as 39.6 percent in taxes, depending on which tax bracket you're in!

It's been said that the best gifts are those that keep giving. Congress has given investors a gift that will allow them to keep more of what they earn and pay less in taxes. Make the most of this gift, and hold your investments for the long term whenever possible.

THE HEREFORD BRAND

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

I find the cartoon by Don Cooper on the Viewpoint page of the Sunday, June 13 issue of the Hereford Brand offensive.

The use of a gun pointed at a head, especially in today's circumstances, is very poor judgment for a cartoon. If children use this kind of poor judgment, they are in trouble with the law. It is called "terrorism."

I also understand from this cartoon that Mr. Cooper is trying to say: "If you want my campaign support money, vote the way I want you to vote."

I also understand from this cartoon that Mr. Cooper is opposed to the 2nd Amendment of our Constitution.

Be assured the National Rifle Association is not the only group pointing (monetary) guns at politicians'

(campaign funds) heads. Also, be assured if the 2nd Amendment is allowed to be trampled, it will only be the beginning of American freedoms that will be lost.

YOUR EYES

ABOUT VIDEO GAMES

Many parents wonder if TV video games are dangerous for their children's eyes. Generally, there is no need to worry, as long as parents insist on the same sensible rules as for regular TV watching. Good TV habits include sitting upright to watch, keeping other lights on in the room while the TV is on, and not sitting closer than three times the diagonal width of the screen.

As long as these precautions are followed, TV video games can actually be quite beneficial in improving hand-eye coordination. And any parents who try to keep up with their children will discover how quick the eyes and hands must be. The swift and constant action the games demand provides helpful exercises in visual coordination—the kind of exercises that the youngsters don't mind repeating again and again. Indeed, some eye professionals are using the games as tools in vision training.

Local economy sags a bit

By Don Cooper

Hereford's economy sagged last month, according to the Texas Comptroller's Office.

The city's sales tax rebate payment for June was $77,323.61, down 11.9 percent from the $87,813.08 received in June 1998.

The city's rebate also was well below the $111,309.73 received in May.

For the year, Hereford has received $526,794.14, down 2.6 percent from the $540,831.37 for the same period last year.

Deaf Smith County received a payment of $26,965.23, down 14.7 percent from the $31,600.15 rebate in June 1998.

The county's payment also was well below the $35,808.90 it received in May 1998.

For the year, the county has received $180,886.38, down 1.4 percent from the $183,494.04 for the same period in 1998.

The comptroller's office delivered a total of $184 million in monthly sales tax payments to 1,097 Texas cities and 118 counties, down slightly from May. However, total payments to cities and counties for the January-June period are running 7.1 percent ahead of the same period last year.

The June rebates include local sales taxes collected by monthly filers in April and reported to the comptroller's office in May.

Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander delivered monthly sales tax rebates totaling $169.4 million to Texas cities. Rebates of $14.5 million went to Texas counties, while another $5.7 million went to 42 special purpose districts around the state.

By law, the state collects sales taxes for Texas cities and counties that have local sales taxes. The comptroller's office then returns the portion of the taxes on a monthly basis.

The state charges a 6.25 percent sales tax and local sales taxes can be up to 2 percent above that.

Around the area: Dimmitt received a rebate of $22,364.44, up almost 4 percent from the $21,512.59 it received in June 1998. However, June's payment was off from the $28,939.97 for May.

Dalhart received $82,146.73, up about 5 percent from the $78,235.48 received in June 1998. June's payment, however, was down from the $127,949.27 received in May.

Pampa received $192,152.27, down 15.1 percent from the $226,301.10 for June 1998. June's payment also was significantly below the $252,214.03 for May.

Plainview received $186,892.48 in June, down 4.7 percent from the previous year. June's rebate also was well below the $302,804.45 the city received in May.

Borger received $175,058.76, down 20.1 percent from the $219,285.75 rebate for June 1998. The June payment also was off from the $233,754.36 it received in May.

Dumas received $120,406.78, a 68.9 percent increase over the $71,272.73 payment for June 1998 and also well above the $160,495.21 for May.

Among the area counties, Castro County received $9,367.76, down 1.6 percent from the $9,524.47 received in June 1998; Hale County received $70,915.72, down 3.4 percent from the $73,420.60 for June 1998.

The comptroller's next sales tax allocation is scheduled for July 9.

Filing service

The comptroller's office has established a service designed to make sales tax filing easier for many Texans.

The new WebFile Internet service, which is similar to the comptroller's TeleFile service, allows taxpayers to file returns via the World Wide Web.

More than 160,000 taxpayers now qualify to use WebFile. The qualified taxpayers are short-form filers with no tax due and long-form filers who had no sales at any of their outlets.

For more information on WebFile, visit the comptroller's Web site at <http://www.window.state.tx.us>.

AMARILLO — A public television document to be aired Tuesday will focus on an Amarillo astronaut.

Rick Husband, who recently served as pilot on NASA's shuttle mission to the international space station, will be the subject of "Rick Husband: Man With a Mission" a documentary airing at 9 p.m. Tuesday on KACV-TV (Hereford Cablevision Channel 2).

Ellen Robertson Neal and the KACV camera crew followed Husband through training to shuttle launch, while making the documentary.

The half-hour broadcast chronicles the final weeks leading up to Husband's journey into space: his personal life-long quest.

Accompanying Neal on the launch trip were Emily Taylor and Dan Bufford, honors students at Crockett Middle School, Husband's alma mater. The students competed with other honors students to attend the May 27 launch.

"It was just amazing, incredible, just to see that go up into space," Bufford said.

Marcella Herrington, honors science teacher at Crockett, escorted the two students to the launch.

Rick Husband

"There's nothing to compare to it...It made me proud to be an American," Herrington said.

"My heart was racing and beating," Taylor said.

The program includes interviews with Husband and fellow Amarillo astronaut, Paul Lockhart, at the Houston Space Center, as well as interviews with Husband's wife, daughter, mother and members of his NASA support team. Additional interviews and footage shot at the Kennedy Space Center in Orlando, Fla., also will be aired.

A trip for four to Houston's Space Center will be given away during Tuesday's airing of the program.

"Rick Husband: Man With a Mission" is made possible through special assistance from Battelle-Pantex and Southwest Airlines. A repeat broadcast is scheduled to air at 5 p.m. June 27.

Satterfield ready to rope away

Corraled — Jordan Satterfield, shown here in action in roping competition, will compete in the National High School Finals Rodeo in July in Gillette, Wyoming. He is one of many Hereford rodeo performers who have succeeded in the sport.

Hereford roper ready for nationals

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

Rodeo roper Jordan Satterfield may be put up there with the likes of Rodey Wilson, Monty Wilson, Amanda Schumacher, and even professional rodeo performer Steve Purcella.

But he doesn't see the comparison. He sees more the difference.

"I guess I feel one of the lucky, blessed ones," Satterfield said.

So blessed that he is going to be part of the Texas High School roping team that will compete at the National High School Finals Rodeo on July 19-25.

He qualified by having the highest average score on the roping competitions.

Satterfield has qualified to compete in the National High School Finals Rodeo team roping competition at Gillette, Wyo., on July 19-25.

"I am really looking forward to and," Satterfield said. "I am really excited and I am glad for the opportunity that I got in."

Satterfield is not only competing for more than $70,000 in prizes, he will also compete for scholarships. The NHRSA is giving more than $150,000 dollars in scholarships.

Satterfield is one of those kids that appreciates his success and credits those around him in the rodeo circuit.

"People like Rodey and Monty, you learn from them," Satterfield said. "You learn how to get along and cope with other people in rodeo."

Satterfield comes from a rodeo family. Pat Padilla, Jordan's father, competed in rodeo competitions and many other family members are involved.

"My sister is involved in pole and barrel racing," Satterfield said.

Another person Satterfield looks up to is Steve Purcella, the professional rodeo performer who currently is one of the money leaders in the team roping (heading) in the National Professional Rodeo Association.

"He is someone I look up to," Satterfield said.

And like Purcella, Satterfield hopes to continue the tradition of successful rodeo performers from Hereford.

Even turn professional like Purcella.

"I hope to make this as a future," Satterfield said.

But for now, Satterfield is focused on one thing. The National High School Finals Rodeo. And, of course, he's expecting nothing but the best.

"I hope to win it all," Satterfield said.

With luck, Satterfield may join a very exclusive club.

Students need to get physicals

All athletes who wish to participate in sports for the 1999-2000 must have a physical in order to participate in sports.

Hereford High school trainer Ed Morrow advises all athletes and parents to make doctor's appointments to receive physicals before July 29.

Athletes will not be allowed to participate without a complete physical.

Duval leads in U.S. Open

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Swirling wind and slick greens even took their toll on David Duval today as Pinehurst No. 2 stiffened to the challenge in the second round of the U.S. Open.

Duval, who hadn't made a bogey all tournament, took a double bogey on the sixth hole and later made two more bogeys as he fell from a two-shot lead. But he had plenty of company on a day when less than a dozen golfers were under par.

Duval's fellow first-round leader, Phil Mickelson, had the lead at 4-under late in his round, with Duval a shot back and a handful of other golfers still under par for the tournament.

Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal, meanwhile, withdrew after breaking a bone in his hand when he punched his hotel wall in anger after a first-round 75, and John Daly struggled to a 77 to fall from contention.

"I'm the only one around here who has a reason to punch a wall," Daly said after finishing two rounds at 5-over-par.

Duval, continuing the seemingly effortless play that gave him a share of the lead with an opening-round 67, birdied the second hole and then ran in a long birdie putt on No. 5 for a rare three on the 482-yard hole.

But on a day when wind dried the greens and most of the field struggled to make par, Duval's streak of 23 holes without worse than a par came to an end when he knocked the ball into a greenside bunker and then hit it over the green on No. 6.

Tiger Woods, meanwhile, had to struggle to remain in contention, shooting a 71 to stand at 1-under 139 after two rounds.

Woods whacked a ball into a tree and then skulled one from a bunker before recovering once again with birdies at Nos. 9-10.

"I'm sure the USGA is liking this a lot," Woods said after a day battling pin placements set up by the United States Golf Association.

Transcendental moments can come while dry fly fishing

Fly fishing might be called a hobby or a pastime—perhaps even a madness—like golf. On rare occasions, when the intensity and awareness are there, fly fishing might even be likened to a transcendental experience.

I am no polished, nor accomplished fly fisherman. Even as a hack fanning the water, though, I have felt a special magic that reading water, timing wrist motion, and concentrating can bring—a couple of times.

My first time to dry fly fish was on the Yellowstone River, in the great national park of the same name. —That is a lot like getting to play in the Super Bowl the first time you ever pick up a football.

My gear was all wrong. The eight foot-six rod was too heavy, the line not well-matched to the rod, and my flies were sinking when they needed to be presented dry.

I was blissfully ignorant of these errors, aware only that nice trout were rising just beyond the reach of my ability to cast to them, farther out in the Yellowstone.

Enthusiasm for what I was about, and some kindly helpful advice from a local angler were enough to overcome all of that. Once the local angler cued-me-in that you had to dope the fly with floatant in order to keep it on top of the water, and treated a couple of my flies for me, a few wonderfully colorful cutthroats succumbed to my elk hair caddis offering. It didn't even hurt all that badly to release these fish, as the park regulations required, after the first one. I became hopelessly hooked.

During that week in the park I often fished this area, my green fly line responding to the urging of the ten and two o'clock motions of the long fly rod to dance out over the waters of the Yellowstone as they slid by, achingly cold and clear.

One special afternoon, in the quietness of my concentration, a moose waded out to feed near me at midstream. The great creature was unperturbed by my presence as he munched on aquatic vegetation.

Later, a curious river otter tooted by, friendly-faced and playful, probably wondering why I didn't just dive in and catch fish practically—like he did.

You don't get moments like those just every day. I am still no real fly fisherman, but with help from friends, I am a bit better equipped now—four weight graphite rod paired with proper line and leaders, and an assemblage of flies and dope for them, so that I can manage to catch the odd trout in the Rockies of Colorado on occasion.—Last summer, having not had a chance to play the game in four years—I threaded-up the rod, tied on a House and Lots, and had a rainbow on with my second cast of the trip...I hadn't forgotten how...

Some years ago I was fishing on a lovely and somewhat isolated stretch of the South Fork of the Rio Grande where a long run is lined by towering blue spruce and studded with huge boulders that create fine rapids, slicks, and pools.

I watched a rainbow leap clear of the water to come down on a floating insect adjacent to one of the huge boulders. A fish worth trying for. I waded toward the pool to do so.

This was a tough spot, the wind whistling down the little canyon into my face, making casting challenging. I needed more line out, but was too rusty to get the job done very effectively.

The fish was holding so tightly against the boulder that a near-perfect cast was called for. I don't make just a whole lot of those.

I cast all around that pool to no avail, but for some reason I wasn't discouraged. This was becoming almost like a chess match. The world melted away as I concentrated on nothing more than the water sliding around the boulder, and the fly rod...Smooth motion...use your wrist, not your whole arm...Ten and two, ten and two...feed out line and strip it back.

Around me was the essence of the river, its flow a gurgling song accompanied by the scream of eagles hovering over cliffs rising nearby. A muskrat swam toward me from the opposite bank, turning in midstream with a swirl of his tail...A pair of mule deer came down to the stream, drank quietly, then stared at me awhile before ghosting back into the trees.

Against the river sounds the line souged softly through the ferrules of the rod, floating in long arcs above the song of the river, shooting breezily toward the boulder. Somewhere in the symphony of motions the House and Lots settled quietly upon the pool just below where water poured around the boulder.

The rainbow's near-instantaneous strike was like an electric shock through the graphite rod and into my arms. I set the hook by instinct alone and the feisty rainbow rocketed up from the water, towering above the boulder in a stunning, spray-showering jump before falling head first back to the river.

The swift rainbow got in the current and I had to go downstream with him...Not a big fish, but what a game fish...

I used the hard-pumping rod to lead the rainbow into the shallows, got him close, slid my hand under the white belly, lifted the dark green and mottled pink-striped fish from the water, slipped the hook from the jaw, and eased the game battler back into the South Fork that had produced him, watching the fish hold in the current, then dart away.

There was a peaceful, satisfying sense of communion... The eagles soaring above the face of the distant, rugged cliffs across the highway to my west screeched their amen.

Rangers win third straight, 4-1 win over Boston

BOSTON (AP) — It took Mike Morgan more than 20 years to beat the Red Sox. When he finally did Friday night, he took it all in stride.

In his first start at Fenway Park since giving up Carl Yastrzemski's 400th career home run, Morgan allowed three hits in 6 1-3 innings to lead the Texas Rangers over Boston 4-1.

The 39-year-old Morgan, a rookie in 1978, last started at Fenway on July 24, 1979, when Yastrzemski homered in Boston's 7-3 win against Oakland.

"I don't really get caught up in what ballpark I pitch in," Morgan said. "I just like to give my team a chance to win."

Morgan (7-5) beat Boston for the first time in seven career decisions. Entering the game, Boston was one of only three teams Morgan had not beaten. Tampa Bay and Arizona are the only teams in the majors he has not defeated.

"I guess he gets to strike another one off that list of 30," Texas manager Johnny Oates said.

But to Morgan — who helps teammates pick up balls after batting practice because he knows he needs their help to win — said he did not care about beating 28 of the 30 major league teams.

"I live for today, give it my best today," Morgan said. "It's no big deal, it means nothing to me."

After losing four straight, Texas has won its last three by three runs or less, including 3-0 and 4-2 victories over the New York Yankees and the win over Boston Friday.

"We won a lot of low-scoring ballgames the last two to three weeks and that's because our pitching has been outstanding," said Lee Stevens, who hit a solo home run in the sixth inning for a 2-1 lead.

Stevens had an RBI single in the eighth after singles by Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez. Todd Zeile drove in another run with a groundout.

Morgan won for the first time since May 13. He struck out two and walked three. He left with a runner on first in the seventh.

Jeff Zimmerman closed for his first major league save, finishing the combined three-hitter.

Stevens' 12th homer landed in the center-field stands and came against Mark Portugal (3-6).

"Both pitchers had great tempo," Red Sox manager

Jimmy Williams said. "They changed speeds, hit their spots and stayed in front of the hitters. We lost a close game. Good pitching wins games."

Troy O'Leary gave Boston a 1-0 lead in the second with his 13th homer.

Texas tied it in the fourth when Gregg Zaun singled home Gonzalez from second base.

Boston threatened in the fourth when Brian Daubach, who entered the game with 22 of his 37 hits for extra bases, doubled to left field with one out. O'Leary walked with two outs, then Mike Stanley grounded out.

U.S. Open

Mark O'Meara was among the casualties, with a second-round 79 that put him 10-over, well above the projected 7-over cut.

Greg Norman missed the cut with a 78 that left him at 11-over after two rounds. Norman managed to hit only two greens in regulation all day.

"When it's breezy like this, I doubt you'll see an under-par winner," Norman said. "They've got some nasty places they can put the pins."

There was a six-way tie for the lead at 3-under at one point, as first-round leaders including Duval and Mickelson played the early holes of the front nine.

Among those who moved into contention was Payne Stewart, last year's leader for three rounds who added a second-round 69 to his opening 68 and was 3-under.

"It's not very easy out there," Stewart said. "They have some real cute pins."

Olazabal was trying to become the first golfer since Jack Nicklaus in 1972 to win the Masters and the Open in one year.

Woods bogeyed the par-5 fourth hole after trying to go for the green in two with a 3-wood and having his ball plug in a bunker. He hit a line drive over the green and ended up with a six. Woods also bogeyed the par-3 sixth hole, before rebounding with a 30-footer for birdie on No. 9.

The way Duval strolled so calmly Thursday through the first round of the U.S. Open, it hardly seemed fair to the rest of the field that he didn't have some burden to carry.

The opening round wasn't so notable for the 67 that gave him a share of the lead with Mickelson, Mayfair and Paul Goydos. Rather, it was for how effortless it seemed on a day when fellow competitors were clearly working hard.

"I find it to be less stressful that way," Duval said after never even sniffing a bogey in a nearly mistake-free opening round.

While Mickelson worried about his expectant wife in Scottsdale, Ariz., and seemed always ready to flee the course and be with her, Duval's round Thursday was free of the scrambling and manufactured shots of his playing partner.

It also didn't include a plugged bunker shot Woods couldn't advance, or a wild tee shot into the trees on the 18th hole that cost Daly his own share of the lead.

It was just fairways and greens. Boring, maybe, but for Duval a proven winning formula.

"That's how I try to play," Duval said. "I try to not have to do those types of things."

On a day when Pinehurst's defenses were down slightly after rain softened the greens, Duval was on top of yet another leader board with a round that included 15 pars and three birdies.

But the world's top-ranked golfer had plenty of company, with three others tied for the lead, five more a stroke behind and 26 others lurking within three shots.

Among them were Woods, who birdied his last two holes for a 68, and Daly, who birdied his first three en route to the same score. Stewart, last year's leader for three rounds, was also at 2-under.

Astonishingly, it was the first time either of the world's top two players broke par in the first round of the Open.

"It wasn't a pretty round," said Woods, who was clearly angry at his erratic game on the front nine, but shot a 32 on the back. "But I managed to score, and the name of the game is scoring."

That Woods was in contention wasn't surprising after rain allowed the long hitters to pull out even longer clubs without fear of running the ball through the damp fairways.

What was surprising was the round of Daly, who missed the cut or withdrew in half of his 16 tournaments this year, and withdrew two weeks ago after a six-putt on the final hole gave him an opening-round 82 in the Memorial.

Daly, though, returned to form today by playing his last 13 holes in 7-over-par.

Spurs take 2-0 lead with 80-67 win

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs didn't need a great game to set the record for the longest single-season playoff winning streak and go up 2-0 in the NBA Finals. Tim Duncan and the cold-shooting New York Knicks were the show.

The Spurs broke a tie with the 1988 Los Angeles Lakers for the postseason streak.

The teams were also close to shattering the old record of 145 combined points set by Syracuse and Fort Wayne in 1955. But a 3-pointer by Jaren Jackson with 10 seconds left and a meaningless bucket by the Knicks at the buzzer kept the teams from that dubious distinction.

Other than Duncan and David Robinson, who had 16 points, 11 rebounds and five blocks, no other player had an outstanding night for the Spurs. Nonetheless they have produced the greatest run of playoff success in the NBA's 52-year history.

San Antonio shot just 2-for-12 on 3-pointers, missed

11 of 35 free throws and let the Knicks stick around much longer than they should have.

"We're going to New York with an advantage, but I don't think we've outplayed them," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "We've just knocked down some shots."

There was no secret formula to this victory. All the Spurs had to do was watch the Knicks shoot — or try to.

Whether it was layups, dunks, wide-open jumpers from behind screens or drives into the lane, New York missed plenty of each.

Never was it worse than in the fourth quarter when the Knicks went nearly seven minutes without a field goal, a drought that was epitomized by a shot from Allan Houston hitting the shot clock right as it expired.

Latrell Sprewell finally broke the field-goal drought on a jumper with 1:32 left, but Duncan answered right away with an alley-oop dunk that made it 71-61 and led to chants of "Sweep, Sweep" from the Alamodome crowd of 39,554 — the second-largest in finals history.

Game 3 is Monday night at Madison Square Garden, where the Knicks will be faced with the daunting task of trying to become just the eighth team ever to come back from a 2-0 deficit in a best-of-7 series. It has happened only twice in the finals.

"We never think sweep," Duncan said. "We think one game at a time."

Sprewell led the Knicks with 26 points but shot just 8-for-22 from the field. Larry Johnson pitched in a 2-for-12 effort, Chris Childs was 2-for-8 and Kurt Thomas was 1-for-6.

New York's total was the second lowest in finals history since the advent of the 24-second shot clock in the 1954-55 season. The Utah Jazz scored just 54 against the Chicago Bulls last year.

Mario Elie had 15 and Sean Elliott 10 for the Spurs.

San Antonio didn't paint the prettiest picture with its play, either. The Spurs failed to grab an offensive rebound in the first half and finished with just five — all by Duncan.

"The defense really kept us in there tonight," Robinson said. "To a certain extent, they're thinking about coming to the hole. They understand it's not going to be easy to get to the rim."

New York was within striking distance early in the fourth before their long drought. After Thomas made a jumper to make it 58-53, San Antonio responded with an 11-4 run including five straight points by Robinson — a dunk, a jumper and a free throw — for a 69-57 lead.

Sprewell ended a 51/2 minute scoreless streak by making two free throws with 2:21 left, but by then it was too late for a Knicks team that missed 18 of 19 shots in one stretch and didn't reach 50 points until the final quarter.

New York managed only four fast-break points and committed nearly twice as many fouls as San Antonio — 25-13.

"I think the main focus is settling down and getting that first one," New York's Marcus Camby said. "Guys on this team have a lot of pride. We definitely don't want to get swept, and I don't think that's going to happen."

The Spurs didn't grab their first offensive rebound until 41/2 minutes into the third quarter, and Duncan, who had 33 points and 16 rebounds in Game 1, turned it into a three-point play for a 49-38 lead.

The Knicks got within three late in the period but were stymied on their next three trips downtown. Duncan grabbed the Spurs' third offensive rebound and converted a put-back with seven-tenths of a second left in the quarter to give San Antonio a 56-49 lead entering the fourth.

Late in the second quarter, Duncan had five points in a 10-2 run that helped San Antonio open a 39-30 lead, but New York closed within five at the half.

Duncan and Sprewell led all scorers with 12 points apiece at intermission, and the most interesting stats were the Spurs' offensive rebounds (none) and fouls (five) and the Knicks' shooting percentage (29.8).

The Spurs led 20-15 after a first quarter in which the Knicks missed two layups and a dunk and generally blurred the line between playing recklessly and with intensity, just as coach Jeff Van Gundy had feared.

Avery Johnson hit a running right-handed hook shot just before the first-quarter buzzer, ending a 12-minute period in which the Knicks took 27 shots to San Antonio's 20 and outrebounded the Spurs 17-11 yet never led. The Spurs were not called for any fouls in the first quarter.

Miami and Florida State to play for national title

OMAHA (AP) — Miami beat Florida State five out of six times this season. The Seminoles can make up for it with one victory at the College World Series.

Karl Jernigan's three-run homer in the bottom of the 13th inning gave Florida State a 14-11 victory over Stanford on Friday, sending the Seminoles to the national title game for the first time since 1986.

With runners on first and third and no outs, Jernigan said he wasn't trying for dramatics when he sent a 1-0 pitch into the left-field bleachers.

"All I was trying to do was get a ball to the outfield and bring in a run. The last thing on my mind was a home run," he said.

The victory by the Seminoles made it an all-Florida final today when second-seeded Florida State (57-13) played top-seeded Miami (48-13).

"We're going to be on time and we're going to fight for 27 outs," Florida State coach Mike Martin said. "It's an uphill battle, but thank the good Lord, we're going to play for it all."

The matchup revolves around rest. The Hurricanes have it and the Seminoles don't.

Florida State used seven pitchers to beat Stanford in a game sure to leave some emotional wear on the Seminoles.

The teams combined for eight home runs, 35 hits and countless momentum swings.

"Ho-hum. Just another day at the yard," Martin joked. Miami coach Jim Morris planned to give the ball to right-hander Alex Santos (12-3, 3.00 ERA), who has a 1.35 ERA in the series. Morris also considered unbeaten right-hander David Gil (12-0, 3.19).

"You can choose either of them and not be wrong," Morris said.

Santos and Gil — and the entire Miami lineup, for that matter — are well rested. The Hurricanes won twice on the opening weekend of the series, then played again Thursday.

That's the luxury of staying on the winner's side in the two brackets. Florida State, on the other hand, lost early in the tournament to Stanford, then came back to beat the Cardinal on consecutive days.

The question is, did Florida State have enough recovery time for the championship?

"They've beaten us five out of six this years," first baseman Ryan Barthelemy said.

Miami's success against the Seminoles might stem from Morris being familiar with Martin. Morris served as pitching coach in Tallahassee from 1980-81 the start of Martin's 19-year tenure.

Houston shuts out the Montreal Expos

HOUSTON (AP) — Shane Reynolds is back on track, just in time to boost the Houston Astros.

After a lengthy slump, Reynolds pitched a six-hitter for his sixth career shutout and had an RBI double as the Astros beat the Montreal Expos 5-0 to snap a three-game losing streak Friday night.

Richard Hidalgo hit a three-run homer in the third inning, and Tim Lincecum had a solo homer in the fourth.

"We got Shane some runs and then he was just unbeatable," Bogar said. "That's why you have a No. 1 guy like Shane. We've been struggling the last three nights, and for Shane to go out and pitch like that and give us some confidence, that's what we needed."

Reynolds (8-6) won for the first time since May 24. He lost his next three starts, but was the pitcher of record Sunday when the game was suspended after manager Larry Dierker collapsed in the eighth inning with the Astros leading 4-1.

That game will be completed when San Diego returns to the Astrodome on July 23.

"I credit our offense and defense. I didn't have to nerpick. I could just go after them," Reynolds said. "I felt good my last start, and tonight I was getting my fastball inside and outside."

Reynolds pitched his second complete game of the season and his first shutout since May 21, 1998, at Montreal. Reynolds finished with six strikeouts and walked one.

"I could see during warmups how good his stuff was," Montreal manager Felipe Alou said. "He was very sharp. He got a big lead early and that always helps."

Reynolds retired 14 in a row after giving up a leadoff single in the fifth before Jose Vidro singled with two out in the ninth.

Reynolds doubled with two outs in the second inning for his eighth RBI of the season, giving the Astros a 1-0 lead. Reynolds went 1-for-3 and is hitting .269 this season.

"Shane has done that all year," Galante said. "He knows how to swing the bat and helps himself on the mound. This is probably the best game he's had in a while. Let's hope he's back on track."

Tony Eusebio singled to start the inning, went to second on Dustin Hermanson's (3-7) wild pitch and took third on a groundout before Reynolds' hit to the gap in left-center field.

Hidalgo's three-run homer was his 13th of the season in 231 at-bats while starting in left field. In 273 career at-bats before this season, Hidalgo had nine home runs.

Craig Biggio led off the game with a double, extending his major league lead to 30. Jeff Bagwell walked three times, extending his major league lead in walks to 61.

The Astros are 2-3 under interim manager Matt Galante since Dierker's absence.

Hermanson (3-7) lost his fourth straight decision. He went four innings, allowed five earned runs, walked four and struck out four.

Rules of GOLF

Editor's Note: Upon the suggestion of one of our regular readers, who finds great frustration in playing with those who have ignorance of golf rules sanctioned by both the United States Golf Association and The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, Scotland, we've decided to publish the Rules of Golf each week in our summer sports pages when space permits.

Rule 2. Match Play

2-1. Winner of Hole; Reckoning of Holes
In match play the game is played by holes.
Except as otherwise provided in the Rules, a hole is won by the side which holes its ball in the fewer strokes. In a handicap match the lower net score wins the hole.
The reckoning of holes is kept by the terms: so many "holes up" or "all square," and so many "to play."
A side is "dormie" when it is as many holes up as there are holes remaining to be played.

Bullock & Bush

They were a political odd couple

By Michael Holmes

The Associated Press

They were the odd couple of Texas politics: The fearsome old Democrat and the rookie Republican governor.

But Bob Bullock, who died Friday at age 69, and Gov. George W. Bush became fast friends, confidants and allies in many legislative fights.

They grew so close that Bullock, a Democratic politician for 42 years, endorsed Bush's re-election in 1998. Shunning his own party's nominee, Garry Mauro, was no small thing: Bullock was godfather to Mauro's daughter.

He went a step further, too, backing Bush for national office long before the younger man decided to seek the White House. "I would be proud to call him my president," Bullock said.

"It's hard to put into words how I feel," a somber Bush said Friday. "I feel like I really lost a great friend."

Bullock's career, which started in the Texas House in 1956, had reached its peak when the two men became acquainted. As lieutenant governor, he was presiding over the Senate and controlling the flow of legislation. Little became law without with him, just to get to know him, prior to the end of the campaign," Bush said. "He was very gracious. We sat in his living room for a couple of hours. I listened. He talked. And I learned a lot."

In a "Biography" television show that aired last week, Bullock recalled the meeting. Bullock, a recovering alcoholic, said they tightening welfare and increasing local control of schools.

"I'm sure he was uncertain about me. And I'd heard of his reputation. But our friendship was very deep," Bush said, praising the older man's bipartisan approach to lawmaking and his deep love for Texas.

"I ended up respecting him more than anything," Bush said of the friendship that continued until Bullock's death.

Bush visited Bullock twice this week — the night before he died and on Wednesday, the day after Bush returned from his first presidential campaign trip to Iowa and New Hampshire.

"He loved politics," Bush said. "He wanted to hear all the details. He'd been watching it on TV. He wanted to know how events went, how advance teams performed. So we talked about it a lot."

In the past year, Bullock often said he hoped to watch Bush take the oath of office as president. Bush paused when asked if they discussed that this week.

"We wept together," Bush said. "And I think that is part of what our tears were about."

Bullock's fingerprints somewhere.

They had shaken hands once, at the 1991 swearing-in ceremony of Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco. "He had a huge presence," Bush said, repeating their very short exchange. "Hi, I'm Bullock. Yes sir. I'm George W. Bush."

Their first real meeting occurred two or three weeks before the 1994 election. It was hardly a sure bet that Bush, then 48, would defeat popular Democratic Gov. Ann Richards. But he felt obliged to pay a courtesy call on Bullock.

"I wanted to go touch base discussed that and Bush's decision to stop drinking when he turned 40.

"We talked about that for a bit," Bullock said. "We talked about Texas and what we saw for the future."

To his surprise, Bullock liked what he heard. "He and I saw eye-to-eye on a great deal. ... His views about the state and his issues that he was running on were just parallel to mine."

At the Capitol, they worked hand-in-glove. In 1995, Bullock oversaw passage of the governor's top priorities — limiting civil lawsuits, toughening juvenile crime laws,

Angst over family drives campaigns

Politicians of both parties are in full cry about should be done

By Calvin Woodward

The Associated Press

They speak of frazzled parents stuck in rush-hour traffic, grandparents shunted off to the old folks home, children adrift in an emoral sea.

Politicians of both parties are in full cry about the state of the family.

"Polls show that a majority of Americans think that getting kids off to the right start should be our No. 1 national priority," said Democrat Bill Bradley, who like almost everyone else running for president has raised family values forcefully.

"Politicians like to talk about children," he says. "Just throw in a mention of children and you get an applause line."

Still, more is at work than the verbal equivalent of kissing babies.

The House voted this week to let schools post the Ten Commandments in what the bill's sponsor, Republican Rep. Robert Aderholt of Alabama, called a first step to "promote morality" and stop "children killing children" after the Colorado school shootings.

The family is explicitly at the core of the two campaigns begun this week, those of Democratic Vice President Al Gore ("We must make family life work in America") and Republican Gov. George W.

Bush, the "compassionate conservative" who declares "Some people think it's inappropriate to draw a moral line. Not me."

Republican Lamar Alexander, calling child-rearing his overarching theme, declares: "Families are broken. We've gotten busy. And we're not taking care of the kids."

Bradley asserts "our children are becoming a blur. ... It's not supposed to be this hard."

The family values theme of prior elections has turned into an all-out race to capitalize on people's feelings of inadequacy about the moral authority in their lives. It's not about putting a chicken in every pot, but letting values flourish in every home.

Members of Congress and presidential candidates alike advocate more parental responsibility. Yet families are also getting the message that what has happened is not their fault.

Generally, Republicans say taxes are so high and stacked against married couples that people must work too many hours to get by. Democrats say laws are needed to bypass inflexible employers and give parents the right to stay with an ill child or attend important school meetings.

"I don't think the public believes either party when it says we're going to solve this," says theologian Martin E. Marty at the University of Chicago. But he thinks people are glad it's on the agenda.

Marty is most struck that

Democrats now feel compelled to talk about the traditional family. After years of easy divorce, the growth of single-parent families and the loss of familiar neighborhoods and organizations, the impulse to hold on to remaining old values crosses ideology, he says.

"Today when everything else has collapsed you try to shore up what is only eroded," he said. "That Gore is doing this is neither providing leadership nor dragging his feet. He's part of a force that is out there."

A recent Gallup Poll found the decline of family to be the top worry, followed closely by crime. But experts are divided on whether Americans in fact have less free time.

A new study by the Council of Economic Advisers found families are spending an average of 22 fewer hours per week away from the job than they did 30 years ago. But other studies have found that time actually spent with children has remained fairly steady.

Politicians are doing "a lot of running around but not with a lot of information," says John P. Robinson, head of a 30-year research project at the University of Maryland on the use of time.

It's a holiday. Right?

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Whether he makes a living working behind a desk, sitting on a horse, or driving a tractor and whether he relaxes by watching TV, playing golf, or tinkering with his favorite hobby — he's Father.

The third Sunday of June each year is a day we devote to fathers. It's Father's Day. It's a holiday. Isn't it?

The answer to that question is not clear and research is inconclusive.

While the day is certainly observed as a holiday by most people in this country, some sources say that it's never been declared a national holiday.

However, another source states that in 1972 President Richard M. Nixon signed Father's Day into law, making it a national holiday.

One other reference states that President Lyndon Johnson made the third Sunday in June "Father's Day" across the country when he signed a presidential proclamation in 1966.

Yet another source says the day was "officially approved" by President Woodrow Wilson in 1916 and in 1924 President Calvin Coolidge recommended national observance of the occasion "to establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children, and to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

The origin of the day is unanimously contributed to Sonora Louise Smart Dodd of Spokane, Wash., who got the idea to set aside a special day to honor dads in 1909, after listening to a sermon on Mother's Day.

She wanted to honor her father who had raised six children on his own. Spokane celebrated the first Father's Day on June 19, 1910.

Since that time the day has continued to be observed.

It's a day for gifting Dad with that special something to let him know how much you love him.

It's a day for saying "What do you want to do today, Dad? It's your day."

It's a day for surprises with special treats or a trip to that special place.

Whether Dad wants to spend the day as an amateur outdoor chef, eat at his favorite restaurant or enjoy someone else's home cooking, it's a day for him to choose.

So put the research aside and look at the facts — It's a holiday.

Father's Day

Origin of phrases based on life in 1500s proves interesting

Our language is laced with expressions and sayings that we all use on a regular basis, often without knowing where these sayings originated or even what their original meaning was.

I have often thought I would make a list of expressions I use regularly — some of which my co-workers have never heard before — and attempt to determine how these expressions originated.

Compiling that list is just one of the things I haven't accomplished yet. However, I did come across someone's list of the origin of certain words and phrases based on life in the 1500s.

Maybe some of these are expressions you use or have heard someone else use.

(I don't claim to know if this list is accurate, but it is interesting.)

Baths equaled a big tub filled with hot water. The man of the house had the privilege of the nice clean water, then all the other males, then the women and finally the children. Last of all the babies. By then the water was so dirty you could actually lose someone in it. Hence the saying, "Don't throw the baby out with the bath water."

Houses had thatched roofs. Thick straw, piled high, with no wood underneath. It was the only place for animals to get warm, so all the pets — dogs, cats and other small animals, mice, rats and bugs — lived on the roof,

Becky Thorn

When it rained it became slippery and sometimes the animals would slip and fall off the roof. Hence the saying, "It's raining cats and dogs."

There was nothing to stop things from falling into the house. This posed a real problem in the bedroom where bugs and other droppings could really mess up a nice clean bed, so they found if they made beds with big posts and hung a sheet over the top, it addressed that problem. Hence those beautiful big four-poster beds with canopies.

The floor was dirt. Only the wealthy had something other than dirt, hence the saying, "dirt poor."

The wealthy had slate floors which in the winter would get slippery when wet. So they spread thresh on the floor to keep their footing. As the winter wore on they kept adding more thresh until when you opened the door it would all start slipping outside. A piece of wood was placed at the entry way, hence a "thresh hold."

They cooked in the kitchen in a big kettle that always hung over the fire. Every day they lit the fire and added things to the pot. They mostly ate vegetables and didn't get much meat. They would eat the stew for dinner leaving leftovers in the pot to get cold overnight and then start over the next day. Sometimes the stew had food in it that had been in there for a month. Hence the rhyme: "Peas porridge hot, peas porridge cold, peas porridge in the pot nine days old."

Sometimes they could obtain pork and would feel really special when that happened. When company came over, they would bring out some bacon and hang it to show it off. It was a sign of wealth and that a man "could really bring home the bacon."

They would cut off a little to share with guests and would all sit around and "chew the fat."

Bread was divided according to status. Workers got the burnt bottom of the loaf, the family got the middle, and guests got the top, or the "upper crust."

Evening wedding held in Frio church

Mrs. Christopher Valdez
...nee Candice Franklin

Franklin, Valdez wed

Candice Franklin and Christopher Valdez, both of Amarillo, exchanged marriage vows on the evening of June 12 in Trinity Fellowship of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Carl and Gerry Ault of Amarillo.

The bridegroom is the son of Raul and Becky Valdez of Hereford.

Raul Valdez, father of the groom, officiated at the ceremony.

Kim Tyson, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridal attendants were Carrie Woodard and Michelle Valdez, sister-in-law of the groom.

Eric Valdez, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen included Tyson Duncan and Thorban Weaver.

Alan Schaaque and Freddie Valdez seated the wedding guests.

Flower girls were Courtney Tyson and Kylie Tyson, daughters of Kim Tyson.

Isaiah Valdez, son of Freddie Valdez, served as ring bearer.

Candle lighters were Daniela Villegas and Raylene Villegas.

Music was provided by organist Deanna Edwards and vocalist Mitszi Mechler.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a long, elegant, white satin dress with a scooped neckline, fully gathered at the waist with little white bows around the waist, and a white tulle shoulder-length veil.

She wore a pair of pearl earrings and a pearl necklace that were her mother's. She carried a bouquet of white roses, white carnations with blue tips, accented with baby's breath and white and blue streamers.

Her bridal attendants wore navy blue floor-length satin a-line dresses with sweetheart neckline, princess seams, empire waist with a satin band and bow. They carried a long-stemmed white rose accented with baby's breath.

After the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception at Trinity Fellowship. Alecia Hall, Carolyn Shugart, Tish Hadley and Elizabeth Clements assisted with the reception.

The tiered wedding cakes were decorated with navy and white flowers and strings of pearls. The groom's cake was an open Bible. Sherbert punch was served with the cake.

A meal was served of brisket, rice, ranchero beans, corn, salad, tortillas, tea and coffee. Servers and helpers were Eva Villegas, Enrique and Teresa Villegas, Donnie Henson, Deanna Edwards, Freddie and Lori Valdez, Patricia Valdez, and Maggie Guerrero.

After the wedding trip to New Orleans and a riverboat cruise on the Mississippi River, the couple will reside in Amarillo.

The bride received a B.B.A. in accounting from W.T.A.M.U. and is employed at Hastings Entertainment as a staff accountant.

The groom is employed at Hastings Entertainment as a database administrator. He is pursuing a degree at W.T.A.M.U. in computer information systems.

Moriah Olson of Hereford and Scott Robert Pohlman of Laramie, Wyo., exchanged marriage vows on the evening of June 12 in Frio Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Steve and Ginger Olson of Hereford.

The bridegroom is the son of Charles and Linda Pohlman of Norfolk, Neb.

Larry Perkins of Frio Baptist church officiated at the ceremony.

Joanna Olson, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bridal attendant was Emily Pohlman, sister of the groom from Norfolk, Neb.

Bryan Pohlman and Garrett Pohlman, brothers of the groom, both of Norfolk, Neb., served as best men. Sy Olson, brother of the bride, served as groomsman.

Matt Perrier of Fort Worth, Bradley Price of Lubbock, Jeff Rhone of Lubbock, and Tim Tatsch of Lubbock, seated the wedding guests.

Flower girl was Laura Mitchell, cousin of the groom and daughter of Rob and Sara Mitchell of Omaha, Neb.

Music was provided by pianist Walter Maynard of Dimmitt and vocalists, Gayle Locke of Lubbock and James Fisher of St. Joseph, Mo.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a white formal gown made of Italian delustered satin. The pearl-edged jewel-neck bodice was overlaid with hand-beaded Alencon re-embroidered lace. The sleeveless armholes were also edged in pearls. A triple pearl trim defined the empire waist, which flowed into an A-line skirt. The square back neckline dropped low and was enhanced with a bouffant bow and long streamers, which draped over the detachable formal train. Her elbow-length veil was double layered white tulle. She carried a hand-tied bouquet of 29 yellow and white roses.

Her attendants wore sleeveless dresses of black crepeback satin, with empire waists, floor length skirts and back bows. They carried bouquets of yellow roses.

After the ceremony, the couple were honored with a reception at the Hereford Country Club. Alora Foster and Erin Foster, both of Wichita Falls, Jill Ruland of El Paso, Heidi Ruland, all cousins of the bride, and Suzanne Berry of Ardmore, Ala. assisted with the reception.

The bride's cake was white tiered, and the groom's cake was German chocolate shaped in a double T.

After a wedding trip to Reno and Lake Tahoe, the couple will be at home in Laramie, Wyo.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School. She

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was 3 years old when my mother left her abusive first husband. A few years later, Mom married my stepfather. He was six years younger than she was when they married in 1953. He was kind and patient, and had a wonderful sense of humor. I was happy to call him "Dad." He and Mom shared 16 great years together, and they had a son before my mother died in 1969. Three years later, my stepfather remarried, and I was thrilled for him. He always said, "Family isn't who you are born to — it's who raises and cares for you."

My stepfather died last year after a difficult battle with cancer. I can vouch for the fact that some wonderful men have provided love and guidance to children who were not their own. I have written a poem about such a man, and I hope you will print it in your column on Father's Day for all the fine stepfathers everywhere. — Grateful to Be One of His Sons in Ontario, Canada

Dear Ontario: What a beautiful sentiment. I am pleased to share it with my readers on Father's Day. Thank you for sending it on. The Heart Behind the Smile

Marriage and a new family with love and respect. A dad who had time to listen and time to share.

Laughter in our home. A kiss on a stubbled cheek before bedtime

And hugs in the night to calm nightmares.

Guidance during stormy teenage years.

The compassionate, understanding coach,

Leading by example in building trust, understanding and relationships,

Teaching self-reliance and responsibility. Accepting your best efforts.

Believing in you. Listening to your dreams and hopes.

I'll remember his laugh and blue eyes,

His confident smile,

The heart that reached out to all of us,

And the special family he built from different bloodlines and names.

We are his legacy and gift to the future.

Dear Readers: Here's one more tribute to fathers that has run in my column before:

Dear Ann Landers: A great man died today. He wasn't a world leader or a famous doctor or a war hero or a sports figure. He was no business tycoon, and you would never see his name in the financial pages. But he was one of the greatest men who ever lived. He was my father.

I guess you might say he was a person who was never interested in getting credit or receiving honors. He did corny things like pay his bills on time, go to church on Sunday and serve as an officer in the PTA. He helped his kids with their homework and drove his wife to do the grocery shopping on Thursday nights. He got a great kick out of hauling his teenagers and their friends around to and from football games.

Dad enjoyed simple pastimes like picnics in the park and pitching horseshoes. He liked country music, mowing the grass and running with the dog. He didn't own a tuxedo, and I'm sure he never tasted smoked salmon or caviar.

Tonight is my first night without him. I don't know what to do with myself, so I am writing to you, Ann. That wonderful man died with a smile on his face and fulfillment in his heart. He knew that he was a great success as a husband and a father, a brother, a son and a friend. I wonder how many millionaires can say that. — His Daughter

Henslee, Richardson united in marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Gray

St. Mary's Church is site of May ceremony

Heather Kleuskens and Matthew Gray, both of Tempe, Ariz., exchanged marriage vows on the evening of May 22 in St. Mary's Catholic Church of Umbarger.

The bride is the daughter of Dale and Tonya Kleuskens of Hereford.

The bridegroom is the son of Ron and Kathy Gray of Flower Mound.

Father Jim Hutzler of Panhandle officiated at the ceremony.

Larissa Kleuskens Bandy, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridal attendants were Taylor Hill, Shannon Wallace and Tiffany Garcia.

Jason Kickham served as best man. Groomsmen included Kyle Hansen, Dave Graham and John Setlak.

Jeremy Landry and Chad Carlile seated the wedding guests.

Readers were Jennifer Gray and Caty Gray.

Music was provided by the First United Methodist Church Bell Choir, and vocalist was Margaret Williams of Hereford.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown made of silk organza with a scoop neck, empire waist, and flowing medieval sleeves the length of her dress. A floor-length veil of flowing silk tulle was attached to the head piece.

She carried a full European hand-tied bouquet of yellow roses and mock orange tied with silk organza ribbon.

The bridal attendants wore buttercup yellow satin dresses with a soft yellow bodice, spaghetti straps and an overlay of sheer organza.

Following the wedding, the bride and groom were honored by a reception at St. Mary's Hall in Umbarger. Diane Hoelscher and John and Pam Wilson assisted at the reception.

The tables were decorated with framed photos of the bride and groom throughout their lives. The bride's cake was displayed on a handmade stand designed by her father.

The groom's cake was in the shape of cards displayed on a blackjack table belonging to Carl and Helen Kleuskens, grandparents of the bride.

After a cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will reside in Tempe, Ariz.

The bride is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School and graduated from Arizona State University in 1999.

The groom graduated from Flower Mound High School in 1993 and a 1997 graduate of Texas Tech University.

Wedding vows were exchanged by Lesli Ann Henslee and Jeremy Wayne Richardson in an afternoon ceremony on June 12 in First Baptist Church of Grapevine.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Henslee of Colleyville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry W. Richardson of Hereford.

Dr. Darold Baldwin, Area Director of Missions of Snyder, officiated. Dr. Baldwin officiated at the groom's parents' wedding in 1971.

Charlyn Gutwein of Colleyville served as maid of honor.

Bret Baldwin of Hereford, the groom's cousin, was best man.

Brides matrons included Jennifer Henslee of Ft. Worth, the groom's sister, and Lynn Swecker of Southlake, the bride's cousin. Bridesmaid was Katie Mauldin of Ft. Worth.

Groomsmen were David Henslee, the bride's brother of Ft. Worth, Richard Hicks of Hobbs, N.M., and David Hicks of Amelia, La.

Escorting guests were Butch Block of Edgefield, S.C., cousin of the groom, and David Hicks of Amelia, La.

Flower girls and cousins of the bride were Amanda Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Linnie Duncan of Haslet, and Lexi Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Blair Rogers of Amarillo.

Jacob Bell, cousin of the groom and son of Mr. and Mrs. Heath Bell of Canyon, was ring bearer.

Organist was Sue Tate. Vocal selections were performed by cousin of the bride, Mrs. Blair Rogers of Amarillo.

The bride chose an Italian satin gown, featuring a sweetheart neckline with a scalloped edge and short cap sleeves. The bodice was overlaid with pearls and sequins. The princess cut gown flowed into a chapel length train banded with Venice lace and enhanced with appliques.

The bride's ring headpiece was made of rosettes and Venice lace and held a detachable two-layer illusion veil.

She carried a cascading bouquet of stargazer lilies and Tinike roses nestled in English ivy, with a white chiffon tulle collar and white piquot ribbon loops and streamers.

Bridal attendants wore teal-length navy blue A-line crepe dresses with a sweetheart neckline and princess seams. The low-cut back was accented with fabric roses.

The honor attendant carried a scepter with a stargazer lily and Tinike roses and a white chiffon tulle bow. The other attendants carried a scepter of fire and ice roses and white chiffon bow.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception catered by Bonnie Baldwin of Hurst and Patsy Sparkman of Hereford, aunts of the groom.

Robin Baldwin-Diller of Hurst, the bridegroom's cousin, invited guests to register.

The three tiered bride's cake was served by Susan Duncan and Sherrian Henslee, aunts of the bride. The cake was three tiers consisting of chocolate rum cake filled with fudge cream, carrot cake, and marble cake, covered with buttercream frosting, and decorated with hearts, fleur-de-lis, and ruffle garlands. Stargazer lilies, fire and ice roses, and greenery spilled from the center tier, cascading down the side of the cake forming a border.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeremy Wayne Richardson

The red velvet groom's cake was served by Christy Benten, aunt of the bride. It was decorated with the couple's monogram and encircled with chocolate-dipped strawberries. Both cakes were made by the mother of the groom.

Following a wedding trip to San Diego, Calif., the couple will be at home in Grapevine.

The bride is a 1997 graduate of Grapevine High School and is currently employed at North County Family Practice in Grapevine.

The bridegroom is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School and is currently employed as an electrician with JB Electric in North Richland Hills.

Wedding Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Hilrey L. Aven

Mr. and Mrs. Hilrey L. Aven are being honored with a 50th wedding reception on June 20 from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Following the reception, the family will gather for an evening meal and time of fellowship at the Country Home Bed and Breakfast in Canyon.

The event will be hosted by their children and grandchildren.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

How employees steal from themselves

"Don, this is a true story," the letter read. "I want to tell you how one of my employees cost himself a $2,000 raise." Then in one page in clear, concise terms the writer of the letter - a savvy business owner, regular reader and friend - told me the story.

It made me think of early work years. Was I guilty of similar indiscretions? As I thought about the jobs I'd held, I remembered several situations where I'd made it easy for my bosses to keep me from being overpaid. No raise or promotion.

The letter I mentioned in the opening paragraph pointed out of the many ways employees can steal from their own success. As I considered turning this thought into a column, I talked with other business owners and managers. Between us we came up with several ways folks can limit their own salaries and success.

Self-limiting actions

- Arrive late and leave early. If you arrive five minutes late every morning and leave just 10 minutes early each evening you've saved yourself more than one and a half week's work each year. It's like getting eight free vacation days. Of course, your employer may view it as you missing more than 60 hours of work.

- Stretch your lunch hour and breaks. If you take an extra-long lunch just once a week - say just an extra 30 minutes - you avoid working another 25 hours each year. When the boss is gone is a great time.

- Spend a lot of phone time on personal business. Call your sister, your spouse and any friends you haven't talked to since yesterday. It does make your day go faster. Your boss probably won't even notice if you make your calls when he or she is on the phone, too.

- One business owner told me about an employee who would spend an hour on the phone calling all over town trying to find the cheapest price. This person often bragged to other employees how easy it was to find bargains. The owner lamented that the employee spent $10 dollars worth of "work" time to save a "personal" dollar.

- Do a little Internet surfing and sharpen up your computer game skills. This will speed up your workday. One company executive said he thought it was healthy for employees to spend time surfing the Internet during work hours. Want to guess what business this executive was in?

- Do only what you're told to do. You can't be blamed for not doing something you weren't told to do can you? No, the safest way to keep your current pay level is to do only what you're told.

- Don't build your skills. Why bother to become a better communicator, no one ever listens to you anyway. Why learn the new computer software, it will be replaced in two years or less. Besides, if you can do more stuff someone may actually expect you to.

- Don't worry about your attitude. If the boss asks you to do something urgent when you're doing something else, let him or her know you dislike the interruption. Usually, a quick scowl and a sigh will do the trick.

- Look like a minimum-wage worker. You can relax about the hair and body piercings. Wear you low-rider jeans and sneakers. You wouldn't want your friends to see you not looking cool and comfortable. Remember, it's a free country.

Follow these tips and I'll guarantee the results. Your boss will not fight so hard for your next raise. In fact, he or she may not fight at all. After all it's no crime to steal from yourself.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Rebecca Walls

Last week Martha gave you a report on the Summer Reading Club and the number of children that are enrolled in that program. As I began to think about the article this week, I wanted to tell you about some of the new programs we have started this summer. For the first time ever, we have had some of the summer schools ask to have a library tour and program. Hereford Jr. High teachers have seen the need to get their students familiar with the public library. As one teacher put it, "These kids need to know there are good things to do in Hereford that don't cost a lot of money." Coming to the library and reading is a very constructive way to spend your time.

We have also started an outreach program for the children in the San Jose Community Center area, with the help of Lydia Villanueva, Lori Coronado, and Tomas Salazar. On last Friday morning, we went to the San Jose Community Center with about 80 books. Twenty children were anxiously waiting for us to arrive. That morning we enrolled all of the children and allowed them to pick out the books they wanted to keep for this week. You should have seen the excitement on each of their faces. We will return every Friday, with a new selection of books and short program. Lydia and Lori have a goal of letting the children know there are other things for them to do in the community outside the block in which they live. Isn't it nice that they wanted to connect them to the library?

On Thursday, the total summer school student body of Walcott School began their weekly trips to the public library to check out books and read for fun. In preparation for their visit, the parent of the students came in and got their children library cards, and some enrolled in the Summer Reading Club. So now the teachers have made it possible for those children to have the means to get to the library and enjoy the library's summer fun.

While our overall numbers of student participation in the Summer Reading Club have decreased over the past four years, teachers still recognize the importance of students reading during the summer. I know how difficult it is for working parents to get their children shuttled to the different activities during the summer. I know how tired the kids are of the competition and demand of reading A.R. books in school. In an effort to help parents meet the time restraints, the County Library is open until 9:00 p.m. on Monday and Thursday evenings and from 10:00 to 1:00 on Saturday mornings. This schedule gives parents an opportunity to come to the library after work, or on Saturdays as a family. Please make the effort to establish a library day with your children. Given them the opportunity to discover the joy of reading free from the competition. Help them to maintain their reading skills over the summer months. Please make it a priority.

While you are in the library with your children, you may even find something you want to read. Like Biting Moon by Martha Grimes. This is one I was looking at last night and could not put down. The introduction on the blurb began, "She does not know who she is, where she's from, how she got here. She wakes up one morning in a bed-and-breakfast alone. She is told by the owner she came in 'dead asleep' with her father." She is not sure how, but she knows that man is not her father. She takes the cash she finds in his coat, his backpack and bedroll, and disappears into the mountains. Months later, she walks down from the mountains and into the life of 14-year-old Mary Dark Hope. The two, bound by their lack of family and their love for animals, set out to find the man that had abducted here. Now does this pique your interest?

In A Man in Full, Tom Wolfe shows us his version of contemporary America, with its networks of illegal Asian immigrants crisscrossing North America, daily life behind bars, shady real-estate syndicates and the cast-off first wives of the elite. And he takes 742 pages to do it.

John LeCarre's Single and Single begins with a lawyer from the London finance house being shot. The name of the house is Single and Single. The killers are persons the lawyer thought were business associates. A magician, who makes his living by entertaining children, is contacted by his bank, and asked to explain the unsolicited arrival of more than five million pounds sterling in his daughter's account. A freighter bound for Liverpool is boarded by the Russian coast guards in the Black Sea. And the celebrated London merchant venturer "Tiger" disappears into thin air. This story of corrupt liaisons between criminals elements in the new Russia and legitimate finance in the west is one of LeCarre's finest.

Wilbur Smith continues the story of Birds of Prey in his new book Monsoon. It is the East Indies at the dawn of the eighteenth century, and the East India Trading Company is suffering great losses at the hands of pirates. Master mariner Sir Hal Courtney is sent on the most dangerous voyage of his career in the service of the crown. Sir Courtney knows the fate of the family lies in the hands of his three sons, Tom, Dorian and Guy. When fate decrees that the family must leave England, the sons are drawn to the new savage land of Africa.

Library dogs—Dr. LaVeta Purdy (center), Joe Nelson (right) and Janet Nelson brought their trained dogs Bailey (above), Widget and Presto, to the Deaf Smith County Library for the Summer Reading Club, "Open a Book-On With the Show!" In addition to getting information about dog health and training, about 270 youngsters were privileged to see the dogs do tricks and, best of all, were allowed to pet the talented canines. The next Summer Reading Club program will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the library. For more information call 364-1206.

Citywide worship set at Community

A citywide worship service to promote unity among congregations in the city is set for 6 p.m. Sunday, June 27 at Community Church and will feature a worship band from Amarillo.

The service will include an extended time of worship and prayer and all congregations are invited to attend.

These interdenominational meetings will continue monthly to promote unity among diverse congregations. The concert is free and childcare for ages 5 and younger will be available at the church.

PICTURE OF COUNTRY LUXURY

Covered Porch To Lure You Outside

FEATURE HOMES
© BY W. D. FARMER, F.A.I.S.D.

Symmetrical features bring a sense of balance to this distinctive country home, which includes a large porch to lure you outside.

The main living areas of the home flow together to envelop its occupants in light, openness and luxury. A dining room is separated from the foyer by twin columns and a tray ceiling adds to the formality. The living space is strategically open to the eating area.

The great room includes a vaulted ceiling, fireplace and rear yard access. The great room flows together with a kitchen that includes enough counter space to prepare a large meal. The oversized breakfast bar enhances your serving options, while the cook top is positioned so as to cook from both sides. A bay window provides elegant light to the breakfast room. Conveniently placed are a half bath and full laundry room.

Stairs up to a bonus room and stairs down to a basement separate the bed room wing of the home. The bonus room includes a shower bath, thus allowing plenty of optional living space.

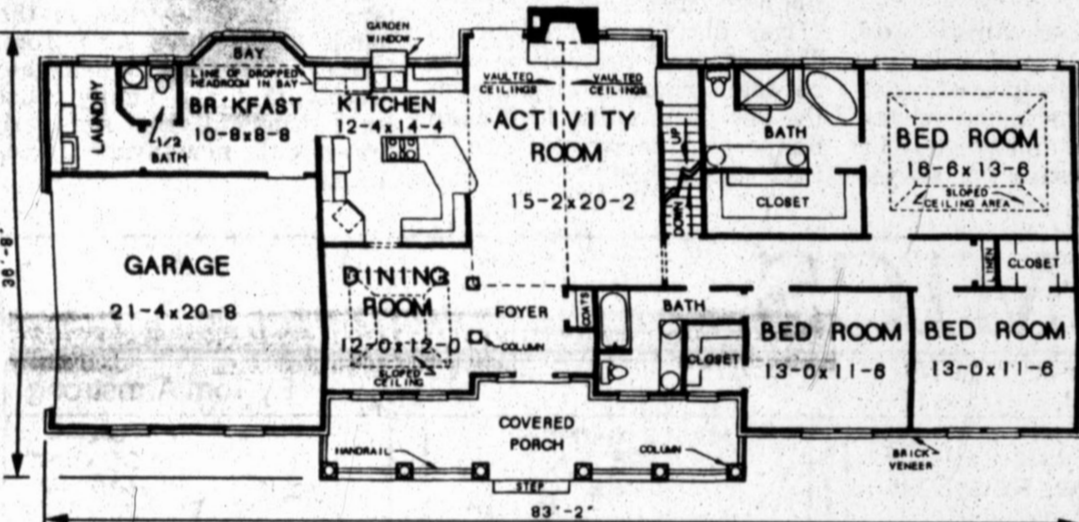

The feature filled master suite includes a tray ceiling in the bed room and an enormous bath with corner garden tub, double vanity and huge walk-in closet.

Both family bed rooms are generously sized and each has a walk-in closet. One of the bed rooms even has a private entrance to the oversized hall bath.

Round top windows in triple dormers on a steeply pitched roof, along with combination brick and siding add to the country charm of this plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include construction details for substituting brick, frame or stucco exterior finish.

Plan number 995 includes 1,983 square feet of space on the first floor and 664 square feet of space in the bonus room. To receive an information packet on our plans, call W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc. at 1-800-225-7526 or 1-800-221-7526 in Georgia. You can write to request the information at P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Georgia 31145. HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

Replacing a broken pane of window glass is a relatively simple task and for most homeowners, an inevitable one. However, if it's performed carelessly, it can result in serious injury.

To make the job easier, it's advisable to remove the window sash from the frame and repair it on a workbench. Lay the sash on the bench with the exterior side up. While wearing heavy-duty work gloves and safety goggles, pull free any loose shards of glass from the shattered windowpane.

Next, remove the old putty from around the pane. If the putty hasn't become too hard, you can pry it off with an old chisel or rigid-blade putty knife. Otherwise, you'll have to first soften the putty with a heat gun and then scrape it off.

Also remove the glazier's points that you'll find under the old putty stuck into the wood sash and muntins. The small metal points secure the window glass to the sash.

After removing the old putty, pull free all of the remaining glass from the broken pane. Now scrape down the sash and muntin rabbets to the bare wood using a chisel held perpendicular to the surface.

Apply a liberal coat of linseed oil to clean the rabbets with a small brush. The linseed oil will prevent the bare wood from absorbing any oil out of the new glazing putty. Oil in the glazing putty helps keep the putty flexible and crack-free longer.

While the linseed oil is soaking into the wood, cut the replacement glass pane. Cut the pane from single-strength glass with a standard glass cutter. Measure the opening and subtract 1/8-inch from the overall width and length.

Nail a straight-edge board to the workbench and butt the replacement glass against it. Lubricate the cut line with kerosene and, while using a framing square as a guide, score the glass with the cutter.

Wearing gloves and goggles, hold the glass with the cut line on the edge of the bench. Push down firmly and the glass will break cleanly on the line. Although glass cutting is very easy, if you'd rather, you can custom-order pre-cut glass from most hardware stores and glass shops.

Next, apply a 1/8-inch-thick bead of glazing compound (not putty) in the rabbets around the opening. Compound is preferred over putty since it doesn't dry brittle and it resists cracking and shrinking.

Position the pane in the opening and press down gently to eliminate any air pockets that may appear in the compound. Then, using a rigid-blade putty knife, push glazier's points in the rabbets to secure the glass. Space the points about 4 inches apart.

Roll glazing compound between your hands to form 1/8-inch-diameter ropes. Lay the ropes around the edges of the pane and press them into place with your fingers. Be sure to conceal all of the glazier's points.

Using a flexible-blade putty knife, compress the compound to form a smooth, triangular-shaped bead. Clean off the excess compound from both sides of the glass.

Allow the compound to dry for about a week before repainting it. Then apply the paint so that it extends about one-sixteenth inch onto the glass to form a moisture seal. This little trick will help to protect the compound and seal the glass from excessive moisture.

Two things determine the expansion capabilities of your home's electrical system. Most important is the amp rating of your service entrance. The other is the amount of circuit space left in your service panel.

To determine the rating of your service panel, open the panel cover and look for the amperage designation near the main disconnect. You should see the amp rating near the panel's brand name.

Your ability to install new circuits will depend on the number of breaker or fuse spaces left in the panel. A home's wiring will seldom need all the breaker slots provided in a 100-amp, or greater, panel. Each vacant breaker slot will hold one new 15- or 20-amp circuit. If you have two vacant slots, your panel will accommodate a new 240-volt circuit.

If you want to expand the service of an older 60-amp system, you'll have to determine how much expansion your system will handle. The first thing to do is to make a map of your home's existing circuitry. While tracing circuits sounds complicated, it need not be. All you'll need is a floor plan drawing of your home and a voltage tester or lamp.

Start by drawing the perimeter of your home on graph paper. Using a simple 1/4-inch to 1-foot scale (each little square on the graph paper equals 1 square foot of living space). Draw in approximate locations of all interior walls and indicate the location of each outlet box and each permanent light fixture.

Begin by removing the fuse or tripping the breaker on the first circuit in the panel. Mark that breaker or fuse No. 1. Then take your voltage tester or lamp and plug it into all outlets near the circuit you've just interrupted. Also, determine which light fixtures do not function. On the map, next to each outlet and light fixture that doesn't work, mark the number 1.

Now restore power to the No. 1 circuit on the panel, and remove the fuse or trip the breaker to the next circuit in the panel, and mark that breaker or fuse No. 2. Repeat the process for all circuits, being sure to number each circuit in the panel. When you are finished, every outlet and fixture on your map should have a number. Tape the map to the inside of the panel cover for future reference.

To determine total circuit amperage, each permanent light and outlet should be rated at 1.5 amps. This means that a 15-amp fuse or breaker (on No. 14 wire) will support 10 outlets. A 20-amp fuse or breaker (on No. 12 wire) will support 13 outlets. If your mapping identifies a circuit that can support additional outlets, you can tap into that circuit at any location to add new outlets.

If your map identifies two circuits with so few outlets that both circuits could be protected by a single fuse or breaker, you can combine those two circuits in the panel, thus freeing one whole circuit for expansion.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Harvesters trek across American bread basket

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Warm summer wind whistles through the fields of waving golden wheat - waiting for the harvesters to reduce it to nothing more than stubble.

The outcome of course is truckload after truckload of sun ripened grain making its way to area elevators for storage.

Kearl and Phyllis Austin of Austin Harvesters are only one of many crews working their way from the Panhandle north through the great American bread basket.

"We normally start about May 17 around the Chattanooga, Okla., area," said Austin. "This year the mud and rain slowed us down. We had to leave some of the wheat until it dries out, because of commitments closer to home."

One of those commitments was a 360-acre plus crop for Ken Irvine in Randall County. "This is some of the best we've cut this season," he said. "It's testing 60-61."

Austin's crew won't have far to go for their next field, just across the way to Irvine's brother's place. After that he's scheduled to cut in Happy, Tulia, and Canyon as well as some Deaf Smith County fields, before moving on to Kansas.

The Austins call Hereford home, but spend most of the time between mid-May and early-December traveling with combines and travel trailers, cutting wheat, silage, corn and finally milo.

Like most harvesters, the Austins follow the crops, readily moving from one crop to the next as they ripen.

Even though Austin had to leave some Oklahoma fields uncut, he still expects to cut more than 20,000 acres before all the crops are in.

"We'll cut lots of acres locally," he said. "And there's always next year."

Austin said he has already contracted with one area feed lot to cut and deliver 80,000 tons of silage.

One of the most important things for a custom harvester is keeping the customers happy.

"These farmers keep us in business," he said, while waiting to empty his holding vat into a nearby truck.

He makes sure his customers get their money's worth by keeping his cutters low - so as to get as much grain as possible from a field. By swinging the auger arm back and forth over the truck, Austin empties any loose kernels to cut down loss.

"You gotta leave a man's field clean and I want him to get as much as he can from what we cut."

Austin uses two new John Deere combines and his own trucks in his business, but it's more than just a business, it's a lifestyle for him and his crew.

"I like doing it," he said. "I started when I was 15 and I'm 72 now. I tried to do it just as a hobby for awhile, but it kept calling me back."

He said he worked his way through grain country for more than 29 years, took a break and got back in four years ago. He's been cutting silage since 1964.

"The worst thing is waiting for the mud to dry. The best thing is seeing old friends year after year."

Looking out across an almost harvested field, Austin said he'll take a vacation when this season is finished, maybe.

Then shaking his head he says "No, I've got work to do," and starts the combine on the way for another load.

A way of life -- Driving a combine, cutting wheat grown in the American bread basket is just part of life for Kearl Austin, above. A steady stream of grain is released from the holding bin of one of Austin's combines into a truck, left. Austin's son, Kevin, empties his grain as his father starts to pull away.

Rail cars waiting for harvest

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A weak export market, coupled with low wheat prices, has left thousands of empty grain cars sitting idle along railroad sidings as the wheat harvest begins in Kansas.

The Burlington Northern-Santa Fe alone has more than 6,000 grain cars sitting idle because of lack of demand, said Jim Sabourin, spokesman for the BNSF in Fort Worth.

BNSF has been adding 2,000 grain cars per year to its fleet, and last fall the company established a 24-hour grain desk at Fort Worth, he said.

"We don't anticipate any problems keeping up with the projected demand," Sabourin said.

Jim Rosacker, who handles transportation issues for the Department of Agriculture in Kansas, said he has checked with other railroads that also have cars sitting idle.

"There seems to be a supply of cars and demand to transport is low because the price of wheat is low," Rosacker said.

Another World soon to be just another memory

By Tony Atherton
©TVData Features Syndicate

When Christopher Goutman joined Another World as executive producer seven months ago, he was determined to turn the show around.

For years, AW had struggled in limbo, going through a series of writers and producers with little continuity. Goutman found himself with a talented cast involved in muddled story lines.

"I was very confused when they brought me on," he says. "I knew if the stories were confusing to me, the viewers were suffering as well. I wanted to bring back the elements that had made the show so great in the mid-'80s when I was directing there. I wanted the characters to do what they did best."

When he streamlined the stories and concentrated on the relationships among the characters, some of the fans' favorite actors were persuaded to return. The 35-year-old soap appeared to be on the comeback trail.

Unfortunately, Goutman arrived too late to save AW. NBC's longest-running serial airs its last episode on Friday, June 25. The network canceled the low-rated daytime drama to make room for a new soap opera, Passions.

In many ways, AW set the standard for daytime serials. "The show has always taken risks," actress Linda Dano (Felicia) says. "It was one of the first daytime dramas to go to 60 minutes. We were also never afraid to tackle important social issues."

"I think one of the running comments about the show is that we have always had the best actors in daytime," Dano says. "A lot of our actors come from stage and Broadway. When Paul Rauch was the executive producer, he would go to a lot of theater. He would find someone in a production he loved, and he'd bring them on. He really helped set the standard for our show."

Anne Heche, Ray Liotta, Morgan

Freeman, Susan Sullivan, Charles Durning, Faith Ford, Thomas Gibson, Kelsey Grammer, Billy Dee Williams, Luke Perry, Marla Maples, Brad Pitt and Kyra Sedgwick are just a few big names who are AW alumni.

"Anyone doubting the popularity of the show's characters need only note that four of them — Jake, Vicky, Cass and Lila (Tom Eplin, Jensen Buchanan, Stephen Schnetzer, Lisa Peluso) — will soon be jumping not only shows, but networks," says Richard Simms, executive editor of Soaps in Depth magazine. "They will be appearing for at least a limited time on CBS' As the World Turns. Ironically, since ATWT airs in the same time slot AW did, characters from the show which NBC canceled could in effect draw viewers to CBS."

Some have speculated that the demise of AW could mean the end of soap operas, but that isn't likely. Two new soap-opera cable networks will launch in January 2000, and USA Network is making its first foray into the genre with The Avenue. The world of soaps may simply be in a transition period.

"There were many folks who believed soaps would never make the transition from radio to television," Simms says. "That was then; this is now. There is no reason to believe that pulling the plug on AW will result in soaps going down the drain."

That said, the goodbyes on AW will still be difficult for fans, as well as members of the cast and crew. But Goutman promises to leave fans with a smile. "I want to celebrate the show in every aspect," he says. "It will be happy endings for everyone, and a sense of completion for fans."

Linda Dano, who plays Felicia on the long-running NBC soap Another World, will remember the show as an innovator among daytime dramas with some of the best actors in the genre. The 35-year-old series airs its farewell episode Friday.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ June 20-26 ★ ★

ARIES – March 21/April 20
Be friendly to an acquaintance whom you meet early in the week. Aries. He or she is nervous and needs someone to trust. Be there for him or her. A loved one asks a favor of you. While you want to help, don't. Getting involved only will cause you a lot of problems.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
Don't be stubborn when dealing with close friends this week. Instead of just forcing your opinion on them, listen to what they have to say. If you pay attention, you'll see that what they're saying is not too different from your own point of view. Leo plays an important role late in the week.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
There's so much going on this week, Gemini, that you just don't know where to turn. Take some time to organize your thoughts and prioritize your schedule. It's the only way that you'll make any progress. A close friend asks to borrow money. Try to help this person out, because you know that he or she is trustworthy.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Don't beat yourself up over a mistake that you make early in the week. Your error doesn't cause any major problems, and it easily is fixed. So, just correct the problem, and continue to work diligently. A loved one asks for your opinion about a personal situation. Be honest with him or her.

LEO – July 23/August 23
An acquaintance confides in you regarding a personal matter. Listen to what he or she has to say, and try to be supportive. Resist the urge to tell anyone else what you've learned. You have no right to spread this news around. The person whom you've been seeing has a surprise for you. Enjoy it!

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Don't worry about a presentation that you have to give this week. Those involved are eager to hear what you have to say. Just stay relaxed, and you'll do fine. That special someone takes you out for a night on the town. Enjoy yourself, because you're sure to have a good time.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Don't let a problem at work get you down early in the week, Libra. Just continue to work diligently, and you will do well. Remember that this is just a job. Your personal life is more important. Spend time with loved ones and close friends this week. You're sure to enjoy yourself.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Try to control your ego this week, Scorpio. While you are talented, you're not the only person who can get things done. Share the spotlight with those who deserve it. A loved one gets angry at you for no apparent reason. Try to find out what is wrong, and help him or her deal with it. Your efforts will be appreciated.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
You really stick your foot in your mouth early in the week when talking with a business associate. Instead of trying to come up with something witty to say to ease the situation, just explain yourself. This will make you look much better. Pisces plays a key role.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Try not to be too harsh with a loved one who gets into trouble. He or she has good intentions; they just backfire. Keep this in mind when talking with him or her. An old friend calls you out of the blue late in the week. Make plans to see him or her. You're sure to learn a lot of interesting information.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
Don't let a business associate force you to do something that you don't agree with. Stand your ground. The higher-ups will be on your side. The person whom you've been seeing stops calling. While you're upset, try to realize that this is for the best. He or she wasn't the one for you.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
You have a lot to do this week, Pisces.

So, don't let your friends distract you from getting things accomplished. A lot of people are counting on you. Don't let them down. Sagittarius plays an important role.

IN FOCUS

Garth Brooks performs on a stage wider than the length of a football field in Garth Brooks: Live From Central Park, airing Sunday, June 20, on Fox Family Channel.

An estimated quarter million fans attended the country music superstar's alfresco concert, which includes the songs "The Thunder Rolls," "Callin' Baton Boogie" and other hits.

Guests include Don McLean and Billy Joel, who joins Brooks for "I Ain't Gonna Go Down (Till the Sun Comes Up)."

Zoboomafoo swings into summer with 10 new episodes featuring brothers Martin (left) and Chris Kratt and their lemur pal, Zoboo, starting Monday, June 21, on PBS (check local listings).

The brothers developed the wildlife series for preschoolers to get a new generation of children as excited about animals as they were at the same age.

In "Pets," a dozen familiar and not-so-familiar household animals drop by, and the Kratts find responsibility for a pet can be fun — and rather tiring.

Change of Heart (1998) Jean Smart, John Terry. A woman's idyllic family life is shattered when she discovers that her husband is having an affair with another man. (CC) 2:00. June 24 12pm.

The Citadel ★★½ (1938) Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell. An impoverished Scottish physician compromises his ideals for the lucrative trade of high society. 2:00. June 22 11am.

Clash of the Titans ★★½ (1981) Laurence Olivier, Harry Hamlin. Ray Harryhausen's special effects highlight this account of Greek hero Perseus' quest to win Andromeda's hand. 2:35. June 20 5:25am.

The Client ★★★ (1994) Susan Sarandon, Tommy Lee Jones. After accidentally learning the location of a murdered senator's body, a boy hires a neophyte attorney to protect him. (In Stereo) (CC) 2:30. June 20 8pm.

Columbo: Butterfly in Shades of Grey (1994) Peter Falk, William Shatner. The detective matches wits with a radio personality whose overprotectiveness of his foster daughter led to murder. (In Stereo) 2:00. June 20 9pm.

Coming to America ★★★ (1988) Eddie Murphy, Anissa Hall. An African prince chooses the crime-infested ghettos of New York City as the logical place to search for a bride. (In Stereo) (CC) 2:30. June 25 10pm; 26 3:30pm.

Confidence Girl ★★ (1952) Tom Conway, Hilary Brooke. A confidence man and his female accomplice swindle successfully until her conscience troubles her. 1:30. June 23 9:30pm.

Conductor Keith Lockhart leads the Boston Pops Orchestra into its 30th televised year. "Brush Up Your Shakespeare" begins the '99 season of Evening of Pops Thursday on PBS (check local listings).

Evening at Pops still snaps, crackles on PBS

Boyish Keith Lockhart couldn't have been out of knee pants when the Boston Pops Orchestra started its summer TV concert series on public television.

Today Lockhart is conductor of the orchestra (only the third in its TV history), leading Evening at Pops into its 30th season on the air. Anyone who wants proof that Pops is still fresh, inventive and a whole lot of fun can check out the season debut, "Brush Up Your Shakespeare," Thursday, June 24, on PBS (check local listings).

Tapping into the zeitgeist of the Bard, Lockhart invited Shakespeare & Company, a Massachusetts repertory troupe, to join the Pops and special guest Claire Bloom for an evening of scenes, songs and silliness. The performers, usually deployed on the apron of the Boston Symphony Hall stage, literally upstage their hosts at times, taking to an elevated platform at the back of the stage.

The dual performance area is put to excellent use during a segment that juxtaposes a scene from Romeo and Juliet with a duet from Leonard Bernstein's score for West Side Story. Other music includes the concert's title tune from Cole Porter's Kiss Me Kate and a selection from Verdi's Otello.

Another highlight is a scene between Macbeth (wonderful Jonathan Epstein) and his lady (regal Corinna May). And Lockhart is pressed into comic service as Wall in a scene from A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Upcoming concerts include "Swingin' at the Pops" Thursday, July 8, featuring singer-songwriter Ann Hampton Callaway (theme for The Nanny).

Thursday, July 15, Nathan Lane (The Birdcage, Timon in The Lion King) joins forces with the Pops in a concert honoring the career of Danny Kaye.

"Strangers in Paradise," on Thursday, July 29, is a collaboration with filmmaker Barry Levinson (Homicide: Life on the Streets) saluting European emigres who composed music for Hollywood films. Violinist Itzhak Perlman and singer Vic Damone perform the music of Max Steiner, Kurt Weill and many others.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Whatever happened to the guy who played dim Mark on Roseanne? I thought he was very funny, and I know from his other roles that he isn't really like that. —Dave in Nashville, Tenn.

Glenn Quinn

A: Irish-born Glenn Quinn will retain his comic edge for his somewhat darker and definitely wiser role in next fall's Angel, the Buffy the Vampire Slayer spinoff in which he plays the wisecracking undead mentor of the title character (David Boreanaz).

Q: One of my co-workers insists that Susan Lucci is the daughter of Phyllis Diller. Is it true? —Can't Stop Laughing in Country Club Hills, Ill.

A: I think your co-worker has been sniffing the Liquid Paper again.

Q: What happened to Brimstone? Vengeance Unlimited? The Magnificent Seven? —Jeffrey B. McKeever, Easton, Pa.

A: Canceled. Canceled. Canceled.

Q: I could swear that was The Breakfast Club star Anthony Michael Hall on the April 25 episode of Touched by an Angel. My boyfriend thinks I am crazy. —Melisa Bridgewater, Macomb, Ill.

A: You win, Melisa. That was Hall, who also stars as Microsoft founder Bill Gates in the new TNT movie Pirates of Silicon Valley.

Q: We've always enjoyed Don Knotts' performances, and we recently saw him in a stage production of On Golden Pond. Can you tell us anything about his personal life? Age, married, children? —Sandy Tan, Emporia, Kan.

A: A native of Morgantown, W.Va., Knotts turns 75 on July 21. He has been married and divorced twice and has two adult children by his second wife.

Q: Who was the child actor who played Eddie on The Courtship of

Eddie's Father*? —Sue Musheno, Pickerington, Ohio

A: Brandon Cruz, who was 7 when his TV series premiered, is now 37, married and the father of a young son, Lincoln Bixby Cruz, named in tribute to Cruz's adored TV dad, Bill Bixby.

In the early 1980s, Cruz sang in a California punk rock group called Dr. Know, a period during which he acquired several tattoos. He appeared in the 1995 independent film Safe but left the business again in 1996 to teach acting to kids.

More recently, he has been working as an associate film editor on the Comedy Central hit South Park.

Q: Whatever happened to character actor Phil Leeds? —Jack M. Short, Fallon, Nev.

A: Leeds died of pneumonia last August at the age of 82. At the time of his death, he had a recurring role as Judge Dennis "Happy" Boyle on Ally McBeal, which paid tribute to his passing this season.

SOAP TALK

One fan's farewell to Another World

By Candace Havens

Another World may be going off the air Friday, June 25, but fans can keep the memories alive with the book Another World 35th Anniversary by Julie Poll.

The foreword, written by Victoria Wyndham (Rachel), sets the tone of the book, taking readers from her first day on the set with Constance Ford (Ada) through her relationships with Mac and Carl (Douglass Watson, Charles Keating).

Out of the hundreds of letters and e-mails received about the demise of AW, this one seemed to say it all:

Dear Candace: I had a hard time believing AW was really being canceled. I find myself surprised by how upset I am. AW has always been there over the years. I work full time and I tape it so I can watch it after everyone else goes to bed.

AW has always been one of the most popular daytime dramas in Canada, but it looks like the American networks and advertisers don't care about anyone over 20.

I'm grateful for the chance to know Rachel and the Cory family. I remember when Cass (Stephen Schnetzer) dressed up as a woman. What a hoot! I'll miss talking to my friends about Joe and Paulina (Joseph Barbara, Judi Evans Luciano) and Jake and Vicky (Tom Eplin, Jensen Buchanan). I will wonder what would have happened if Josie and Gary (Nadine Stenovitch, John Littlefield) had been able to have the family they wanted so desperately.

The great appeal of AW was that there was never a lot of sex, nudity and those sleazy bedroom scenes. Now, it will be replaced by a show called Passions. I'm sure it will be full of sex, but, of course, that's what the network wants.

After 25 years of being a faithful viewer, I won't watch another soap opera when AW leaves the air. To the cast of AW, I want to say a huge thank you for years of enjoyment. And to the executives at NBC, you guys made a big mistake! —Karen Marynuk, Souris, Manitoba, Canada.

THE BUCK STARTS HERE.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise.

It's an integral part of our lives.

Newspaper. It delivers.
