Janie Banner reads a letter from Texas death row inmate James Dickerson.

Banner's journey begins with an ad

"Nonviolence is the method which seeks to implement the just law by appealing to the conscience of the great decent majority who through blindness, fear, pride or irrationality have allowed their consciences to sleep."

- Martin Luther King Jr.

What lies within the heart of a convicted death row inmate? Who has the courage to search, and what would one find?

People often assume that all criminals are hardened, remorseless sadists incapable of the same feelings and thoughts as other human beings, and some may display such qualities. But in her own pursuit of the unbiased truth, Janie Banner, church bulletin editor at St. Anthony's Parish, seems to have found at least one man who simply does not fit the stereotypical mold.

"The hardest part is to hear people wish for (inmates) to die quicker and sooner," Banner explained in a letter, referring to many Texans' hard-nosed attitudes toward death row inmates.

In an attempt to "be a channel of truth about the value of human life," Banner's pro-life ties ultimately led her last month to the Ellis One Unit of the Huntsville State Prison. Her journey began with a reply to an ad in the National Catholic Reporter in 1996, asking for people to correspond with inmates sentenced to die in Huntsville. The ad was placed by the late Brother Patrick of the Carmelite Monastery in San Antonio as part of his effort to connect "people outside (the prison) with people inside that no one cares about."

Although she had a feeling that "something was going to happen differently" when she answered the ad, Banner did not expect the in-depth, three-year correspondence.

She also never expected to meet the man on the other side of the letters.

Banner admitted that paying James R. Dickerson a visit was not much of a priority.

"All he ever asked of me was, 'One day can you come and see me?'" Banner said.

With such media blockbusters as the movie "Dead Man Walking" and John Grisham's "The Chamber," Banner remembers feeling compelled to finally make the trip to see Dickerson.

"What really nailed it down for me was that for Mother's Day, he sent me one of the loveliest Mother's Day cards and signed it, 'I love you in Christ, Your son, James,'" Banner said looking over the letter she held.

Upon arrival with friends in Houston, Banner learned of the escape

Coming Sunday

Deaf Smith County has dodged the budgetary bullet this year, but unless the county's tax base expands, that might not be the case in years to come, according to County Judge Tom Simons.

As the county officials put together the budget for Fiscal 2000, Deaf Smith County is dealing with a problem that has plagued it for several years -- a tax base that has remained relatively stagnant and rising costs, particularly health insurance and juvenile justice.

Greenspan manages to surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even after 12 years in the job, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is proving once again that he hasn't lost the ability to surprise.

The nation's top moneyman, in a midyear report to Congress Thursday on the state of the economy, delivered what some economists viewed as a stern message and a possible signal that the Fed is likely to raise interest rates again before the year is out.

While Greenspan declared that the U.S. economy is enjoying an "exceptional year" with almost 1.25 million jobs being created and no increase yet in consumer prices, he also pledged to move "promptly and forcefully" to raise interest rates should inflation flare up.

"It is imperative that we do not become complacent," Greenspan told the House Banking Committee.

Some economists — surprised by what they described as a hawkish anti-inflation tone struck by Greenspan — believed his comments increased the odds that the central bank would move to raise rates again this year.

Vows to fight inflation

"I think Greenspan is saying there's not a question of if there will be another tightening, but a question of how much more," said Tim O'Neill, chief economist for the Bank of Montreal and Harris Bank.

Some analysts said they were looking for the Fed to follow with one or two more rate hikes, beginning in October.

Lawmakers: Idle land aids farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers who want to aid financially strapped farmers by paying them to take more land out of production are getting support from the Clinton administration.

Some 30 million acres nationally are now idled under the Conservation Reserve Program. Some farm-state lawmakers want to add up to 15 million more.

Expanding the 14-year-old program would require lifting an acreage cap and relaxing enrollment restrictions intended to limit the program to environmentally sensitive land that's prone to erosion or adjacent to water.

A bill in the House would allow as much as 45 million acres to be enrolled in the program. The Agriculture Department isn't ready to endorse going that far but does support expanding the program, said Thomas Grau, USDA's deputy undersecretary for natural resources and the environment.

"We all recognize the farm crisis that's going on with these low (commodity) prices today," said Thomas Grau, USDA's deputy undersecretary for natural resources and the environment. He testified Thursday before the House Agriculture's general farm commodities subcommittee.

An expansion to 45 million acres would cost taxpayers up to $500 million a year.

Farmers like the program because of the guaranteed income it gives them, and it's also popular with hunters and conservation groups because of the habitat it provides for ducks, pheasants and other game.

However, the 14-year-old program has taken so much land out of production in some areas that it's blamed for forcing many rural businesses to close.

Expanding the program would take money that could be used to help farmers in other ways, said Texas Rep. Charles Stenholm, the House Agriculture Committee's senior Democrat. "The question is scarce use of funds."

Congress provided $6 billion in emergency assistance to farmers last year and is expected to spend that much or more this year.

Farm-state Democrats in the Senate, led by Tom Harkin of Iowa, are seeking $10 billion in aid. The National Farmers Union this week asked for nearly $17 billion. And the American Farm Bureau Federation has proposed $9 billion in assistance.

"We're looking at a 3-year period where it's going to be difficult to raise a crop and recover your costs," said Rep. Earl Pomeroy, a North Dakota Democrat who supports expansion of the land-idling program.

Unless Congress lifts the acreage limit, USDA can't add more than a million acres of land a year to the program, Grau said.

Tax-cut battle shifts to Senate

"If the Republicans send me a plan that undermines our ability to reform Social Security and Medicare and abandons the fiscal discipline that has helped fuel our economic growth, I will send it straight back with a veto."

President Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight over what to do with expected huge budget surpluses shifted to the Senate after the House passed a $792 billion tax-cutting plan. One House Republican leader said the hard-won victory showed the GOP was determined to send power "back to the people."

The Senate bill, like the House version, would cut taxes by about $792 billion over 10 years. But it does not include the House's 10 percent across-the-board income tax cut, which was approved Thursday, nor does it repeal estate taxes or cut capital gains taxes. It does address the marriage penalty paid by many two-income couples and modifies the alternative minimum tax.

The Senate bill, sponsored by Finance Committee Chairman William Roth of Delaware, stresses expansion of retirement savings and features a reduction in the bottom income tax bracket from 15 percent to 14 percent.

The House bill split Republicans and Democrats virtually along party lines, with Democrats fighting for a much lower tax cut. The chances for bipartisanship are far greater in the Senate, where Republican leaders intend to bring the tax bill to the floor next week. Already, Democrats John Breaux of Louisiana and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska are supporting the bill, and others clearly want more than modest tax relief.

But President Clinton said he would veto a tax cut of the magnitude Republicans were seeking.

"If the Republicans send me

"It is our mission in this city to ship power, money and influence back to the people."

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio

a plan that undermines our ability to reform Social Security and Medicare and aban-dons the fiscal discipline that has helped fuel our economic growth, I will send it straight back with a veto," Clinton said.

Brushing aside that threat, the House passed the centerpiece of their agenda on a 223-208 vote, with just four Republicans and six Democrats breaking ranks.

Republicans said passage of the massive tax-cut plan sent a message to voters about GOP priorities.

"It is our mission in this city to ship power, money and influence back to the people," House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, said. "The more money we have in our pockets, the more power we have."

Tax bill goes to Senate

Here is a look at some highlights included in House bill H.R. 2488 that passed in the House 223-208.

- Gradually cut income tax rates 10 percent across the board
- Reduce capital gains taxes
- Phase down and repeal estate taxes and the alternative minimum tax
- Ease the marriage penalty affecting many two-income couples
- Numerous tax breaks for education, health care and businesses large and small

Police warn of fraudulent checks

Area merchants need to be aware of fraudulent Manpower and Cargill Inc. checks which have been passed in Amarillo and Dumas. The checks are in the amount of $410-$440. The bad checks are missing the water mark.

Subjects trying to cash the checks are using false Arizona identification and false alien cards. They may be driving a white Ford Van with California plates.

Merchants receiving these checks should contact the Hereford Police Department before cashing them.

Hereford High School registration will be held August 10-12 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Students in grades 9-12 can report to the school library on any day to register and pick up schedules. Books will be picked up in the bookroom and lunch and transportation applications will be available.

Fines must be paid and shots updated before a student is allowed to register.

Students are requested to carry only clear or mesh backpacks. Clear backpacks can be purchased at ALCO. Mesh backpacks will be available through the school office at a cost of $26. Financial assistance will be available.

Parents and students are encouraged to check the school dress code prior to purchasing back to school clothes.

News in brief

Board approves grant program

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials on Thursday approved rules to start the new $100 million Texas Grant Program to help low-income high school students enter colleges and universities.

Under the rules approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, students must be Texas residents and have graduated from a public or accredited high school no earlier than fall 1998. The student must have completed a college-prep high school curriculum.

Eligible students also must show financial need and perform well academically. By the time a student is a college sophomore, he or she must maintain a 2.5 grade point average and have completed 75 percent of their enrolled class hours.

Students attending both public and private colleges and universities can qualify. Students attending independent institutions will receive the statewide average of tuition and fees and public universities, the board said.

"This new program will open the door for thousands more Texas students who otherwise would not have the means to pursue higher education," said Coordinating Board Chair Pam Willeford.

The program will create as many as 11,000 grants for Texas students each year, Ellis' office said.

Suspected serial killer indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities in three states believe they have the evidence to convict Angel Maturino Resendiz of killing nine people, but it will be the slaying of a Houston-area physician that could put him on Texas death row.

Maturino Resendiz is the prime suspect in six Texas killings, two in Illinois and another in Kentucky. He's charged with five murders so far, including Thursday's indictment in the December death of Dr. Claudia Benton.

Prosecutors will decide by the end of next month whether to pursue the death penalty against Maturino Resendiz, a 39-year-old drifter from Mexico, said Assistant Harris County District Attorney Devon Anderson.

If Maturino Resendiz is convicted of the beating and stabbing death of Dr. Benton, evidence from the other eight cases tied to him so far can be used in the penalty phase to pursue a death penalty.

Compaq chooses unknown manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. prompted surprise and some wariness from industry analysts by picking a relative unknown manager — its own chief operating officer of less than two months — to try to turn around the sprawling computer company's flagging fortunes.

Michael Capellas, 44, previously was Compaq's chief technology officer, and has served as a sales manager at software maker Oracle Corp. Compaq's board approved the choice on Thursday, trying to plug a big management hole that threatened to further hurt shrinking sales and profits.

Wall Street generally had expected Compaq to pick an outside executive with seasoned experience in running a major company.

"It's a surprise because they chose a Mr. Insider instead of a Mr. Outsider," said David Wu, an analyst with ABN AMRO Chicago Corp., in San Francisco. But, he added, "I don't care where he comes from, it's what he does that matters."

By reaching inside its own ranks, Compaq officials say they wanted to tap Capellas' experience, however short-lived, in reorganizing the company into more efficient business units aimed at responding better to customers' needs.

Altered crops threaten organic growers

Cross pollinated crops don't meet Britain's guidelines

WATCHFIELD, England (AP) — As potential enemies go, the one confronting farmer Pete Richardson is largely invisible.

Richardson and other organic farmers warn that pollen from genetically modified food grown nearby is threatening their livelihoods.

The farmers worry that if the modified crops cross-pollinate with their organic counterparts, the resulting produce would no longer meet Britain's strict guidelines for organic food and sales would plummet.

Producers of genetically modified crops say such worries are nonsense. They maintain that because their crops are genetically altered to make them more resistant to insects and viruses, they produce higher yields and better returns for farmers.

In Britain, the argument over organic and genetically modified farming is part of a wider debate about the future of farming.

Farm produce prices have fallen sharply over the past few years, forcing many small and midsize farmers to diversify their crops in an attempt to stave off bankruptcy.

Organic farmers don't use pesticides or other chemicals to farm, instead employing natural fertilizers such as animal manures and crop rotation to keep the soil fertile.

If pollen from genetically modified crops is found in organic food, organic growers can lose their licenses and take a big cut in income, since organic crops sell for prices that are 15 percent to 100 percent higher than non-organic ones.

"Organic is the only way that some small growers can make a livelihood," Richardson said.

While the United States has approved 50 varieties of genetically modified crops, Britain has yet to approve one, although the government is overseeing the test growing of such crops in 100 small-scale and five full-scale fields across the country.

Organic farmers in the western counties of Gloucestershire and Wiltshire have a powerful champion in Prince Charles, who has converted his Gloucestershire farm to organic production.

"On the basis of what we have seen so far, we don't appear to need it at all," Charles wrote in a May article in The Daily Mail. "The benefits, such as they are, seem to be limited to the people who own the technology and the people who farm on an industrialized scale."

Polls of Britons reveal conflicting desires.

After scares with "mad cow" disease, which medical researchers linked to a fatal human brain ailment, many Britons have become wary of food experimentation, and an opinion poll in February indicated that the overwhelming majority did not want genetically altered foods.

But other polls show Britons want research to continue into the practice.

Prime Minister Tony Blair has said that he would be happy eating genetically modified food. Under pressure, however, the government has agreed to tighten labeling on the few imported food products that contain genetically modified organisms.

Producers of genetically modified foods say they are surprised by the outcry and complain some British newspapers have engaged in a campaign against the practice, nicknaming their crops "Frankenstein" foods.

"Scare stuff sells papers," said Desmond D' Souza of AgrEvo, a biotechnology company pushing for genetically modified foods.

In May, just five miles from Richardson's small plot, farmer Fred Barker was forced to uproot the genetically modified oil seed rape he was growing as a test for AgrEvo after a national outcry fueled by the Soil Association, an organic farmers pressure group.

The association warned of a small risk that organic crops being grown nearby could be contaminated. It also threatened to remove Barker's own organic license.

Farmers who grow genetically modified foods dispute claims that pollen from their crops can travel up to six miles to mix with organic crops.

John Nesser, Barker's farm manager, defends the decision to grow genetically modified crops, saying it allows him to use fewer, and weaker, chemical fertilizers on his crops.

"I think it is the future," he said.

Grand jury no bills unlicensed coroner

HOUSTON (AP) — An assistant coroner accused of illegally practicing medicine has been cleared by grand jurors following review of autopsies he performed for Harris County.

Delbert Van Dusen has been fighting to get a license here. The assistant county medical examiner performed more than 200 autopsies in 1997 and early 1998 even though he is not licensed to practice medicine in Texas.

Assistant District Attorney Keno Henderson, who presented the case to grand jurors, told the Houston Chronicle there was apparently "insufficient evidence" to charge Van Dusen with violating Texas' Medical Practice Act. A violation is punishable by a $4,000 fine and up to a year in jail.

Currently, Van Dusen makes $90,000 annually performing administrative duties at the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office. He stopped performing autopsies in 1998 after several employees publicly revealed that Van Dusen did not have a license.

Van Dusen, who is licensed to practice medicine in Georgia and Indiana, could have faced more difficulty receiving a medical license in Texas or any other state if he had been convicted.

A Texas Board of Medical Examiners spokeswoman said Van Dusen has exhausted his opportunities to apply for his license and must now appeal to the State Office of Administrative Hearings. But it could not be determined Thursday whether Van Dusen has made such an appeal.

He has said he did not believe he violated the law because he was being supervised at the time he conducted the autopsies, primarily by Medical Examiner Joye Carter and pathologist Dr. Tommy Brown.

Henderson said he believes that is why the grand jury no-billed Van Dusen. The district attorney has no plans to pursue further charges in the Van Dusen case, said Henderson.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a waitress working full time. I just finished college and will soon be leaving the restaurant business for good, but one thing has been bothering me, and I want to get it off my chest.

The general public does not understand what a decent tip is. It is not uncommon for a family of four or five to sit down to a meal, request numerous items and leave a large mess and a small tip. We are lucky to get 5 percent.

Don't get me wrong, Ann. I love waiting on families. I get a big kick out of the children. They make me smile. But please tell your readers that servers need their tips in order to make ends meet. At the end of the evening, we share our tips with the bus-boys and the men at the bar. A minimal tip for decent service is 10 percent. If the service is good or the restaurant is more upscale, the tip should be between 15 percent and 20 percent.

You've mentioned this before, Ann, but it wouldn't hurt to say it again. We need all the help we can get. — Jill in Evansville, Ind.

Dear Jill: Folks who eat out should count on leaving a 15 percent tip for fair service, 20 percent for excellent service and NO tip for lousy service.

Dear Ann Landers: Can you please tell me if my husband is cheating on me? The reason I am suspicious is because lately "Clyde" has been going to the store and doing other errands but refuses to take any of our four children along. He is also gone longer than I believe is necessary. He has also started to complain about how much gray hair he is getting, and last week, he made some complimentary comments about my housekeeping.

Clyde is almost 40, and I think he may be going through that well-known midlife crisis. I have been trying to take better care of the house and cook his favorite dishes. We have sex as often as he likes. I will say, he never forgets my birthday or our anniversary. Am I just insecure, or is it time to start worrying? — Concerned Wife in Nashville

Dear Nashville: I'd say it's time you stopped worrying. How much trouble can Clyde get into on his way to the grocery store? He probably enjoys that short break away from the kids. Wouldn't you? Keep preparing his favorite dishes, and continue to keep him well fed, literally and figuratively, and enough with the paranoia already.

Dear Ann Landers: Every now and then, you print an inspirational message. I was inspired by this one, and I hope you will print it. I am only 16, but it moved me. I'll bet a lot of other teenagers will be inspired by it, too. — B.R. in Parsippany, N.J.

Dear B.R.: A 16-year-old who thought enough of that piece to send it on is definitely headed in the right direction. We tried to find the author but were unsuccessful. Here it is: Don't Be Afraid to Fail You've failed many times, although you don't remember. You fell down the first time you tried to walk.

You almost drowned the first time you tried to swim.

Did you hit the ball the first time you swung the bat?

Heavy hitters, the ones who hit the most home runs, also strike out a lot.

R.H. Macy failed seven times before his store in New York caught on.

Novelist John Creasey got 753 rejection slips before he published 564 books.

Babe Ruth hit 714 home runs, but he also struck out 1,330 times.

The message is, don't worry about failure.

Worry instead about the chances you miss when you don't even try.

FELLOWSHIP OF BELIEVERS

A group of 20 people gather in a meadow in the middle of Texas. They perform an incantatory rite casting spells for "tolerance and understanding." They belong to a group of 50 or so kindred spirits who assemble regularly at Fort Hood, the largest U.S. military base, in Killeen. They are, in fact, part of a boomerlet in the armed forces of believers who call themselves Wiccans and follow a polytheistic, nature-based religion that centers on an earth goddess. Since Fort Hood gave official recognition to the Wiccans more than two years ago, four more military bases have sanctioned the religion. (Time - July 5, 1999; p. 59)

In "Forum," FOB will use this Time item as a springboard to discuss this "paganism... drawn from pre-Christian European tribal religion that invoke spirits in nature and celebrate the seasons." (Ibid.) "Forum" (9:30-10:15) is an open-discussion-style Sunday school dedicated to thought-provoking subjects about which the church should be properly and accurately enlightened.

On this, the Ninth Sunday after Pentecost, the focus of gathered worship (10:30-11:25) will be Pastor Stone's sermon entitled, "All in a Days Work/Play" (Matthew 13:44).

FOB is an independent, multidominational, inclusive church that champions what might be called "progressive Christianity." FOB invites all sorts and conditions of people to join in our worship and in our common life as full partners, without imposing on them the necessity of becoming like us.

Sunday morning at FOB begins with coffee and delicious goodies provided by some thoughtful and creative FOB-ers.

A supervised nursery is available at all services at the church which is located at 245 N. Kingwood (at Moreman), next door to the Hereford Care Center.

First Baptist Church If you see a few folks walking around Sunday who look very tired and very happy you can bet they worked at Vacation Bible School this week. It is a tiring week physically but a huge high (not just from craft glue) emotionally and spiritually. We enrolled over 215 kids and had about 80 workers. Double Playoff Booster

One-hole playoffs decide placing at Booster Club Golf Scramble

From Staff Reports
Ed DeLoiter, Randy Dean, Don Clements and Robert Stow needed a playoff to win the Whiteface Athletic Booster Club Golf Scramble Thursday at John Pitman Golf Course.

The winners had to hold off Clint Coley, Gene King, Ricky Backus and Dwayne Cassells as both teams ended up tied with a score of 29.

That was not the only playoff that needed to be played at the golf scramble. The team of Craig Nieman, Pat McGinty, John Stagner and Fred Lookinbill also needed to play a playoff to take over the third place spot. They outlasted the team of Don Cumpton, J.R. Compton, Jerry Stevens and Paul Mason. Both teams shot 30.

The club raised $300 and signed in an estimated 45 new members.

For the rest of the results, see Page 6.

Rangers survive Angels' offense

Palmeiro's grand slam keys win

ARLINGTON (AP) — Rafael Palmeiro snapped the Texas Rangers' power drought in a big way.

Palmeiro hit his seventh career grand slam to key a six-run third inning as the Rangers won their fifth in a row, 9-7 over the Anaheim Angels on Thursday night.

In their first four victories of the streak, Texas had no homers.

"The way we did it was exciting," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "That home run put a lot of wind in our sails. They kept coming at us and we kept responding."

The Angels took a 3-0 lead in the third, but the Rangers kept up the torrid pace they set during a homestand that closed Thursday night with Texas winning seven of eight.

Lee Stevens got the third underway against Steve Sparks (4-7) with a leadoff single. One out later, Royce Clayton reached on third baseman Troy Glaus' error.

After a walk to Mark McLemore, Ivan Rodriguez hit a two-run single, and Rusty Greer walked to reload the bases. With two outs, Palmeiro lined a 2-1 knuckleball from Sparks into the right-field seats for his 23rd homer and a 6-3 lead.

"You have to sit back and wait and hope it doesn't knuckle too much," Palmeiro said. "That's what happened. It put us in the game and gave us four runs right away."

The Rangers also got another effective outing from their bullpen.

With closer John Wetteland unavailable due to back spasms, heralded rookie right-hander Jeff Zimmerman registered his second save in as many games.

"I try to approach all situations the same," said Zimmerman, who made his 23rd consecutive scoreless appearance, extending the club record. "The difference is the crowd factor. When you're out there with the game on the line, the fans are cheering and you've got to channel your energy. You can't get too pumped up and end up throwing a high fastball."

Zimmerman, who retired the side in order in the ninth for his third career save, also stretched his scoreless streak to 26 1-3 innings, a record for Texas relievers.

"Once again our bullpen came through for us," said Rangers starter John Burkett, who got the victory despite allowing five runs and 12 hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Texas rallied from a 3-0 deficit to win for the seventh time in eight games and send Anaheim to its season-high seventh straight loss.

Burkett (3-4) was the beneficiary of another productive night by the Rangers offense.

"I was struggling with my control," Burkett said. "I was very fortunate we got some big hits when we needed them. That's how our offense is. We score in spurts."

The AL West-leading Rangers completed a two-game sweep of the last-place Angels, who fell 12 1/2 games off the division pace.

Anaheim closed to 8-7 in the eighth on Randy Velarde's RBI single. Tim Crabbtree, Texas' fifth pitcher, then retired Tim Salmon on a popout with two outs and a runner on third.

Salmon's RBI double in the first and solo homers from Troy Glaus in the second and Mo Vaughn in the third gave the Angels a 3-0 lead.

Sparks allowed eight runs — three earned — and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings.

"It was the type of evening when you have to keep the ball low," Sparks said. "I'm very disappointed in how I pitched."

Garret Anderson's RBI single in the fifth reduced Texas' advantage to 6-4.

Anaheim had the makings of a big inning in the fifth, but two baserunning blunders prevented the Angels from scoring more than one run.

Orlando Palmeiro led off the fifth with a single, but Uniform never given to JFK Jr.

Senators jersey, which should have been given to former president's son in 1961, on display at Arlington

ARLINGTON (AP) — As relatives gathered for John F. Kennedy Jr.'s funeral at sea, visitors to the Legends of the Game Baseball Museum at The Ballpark in Arlington admired a tiny Washington Senators uniform among the Hall of Fame artifacts.

The uniform was made for Kennedy when he was less than 1 year old in 1961 and was to have been presented to his late father, President John F. Kennedy.

But it was never delivered.

"It's really sad," Maureen Phillips, who visited the museum from Oklahoma, told the Arlington Morning News in today's editions. "We just came here to look at baseball artifacts and happen to see this uniform made for John F. Kennedy Jr. on the same day he's being buried at sea."

On Thursday, ashes of Kennedy, his wife, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and her sister, Lauren Bessette, were cast into the Atlantic Ocean off Martha's Vineyard, near where their bodies were recovered. The trio died July 16 when a single-engine Piper Saratoga plane piloted by Kennedy, 38, crashed into the sea about 16 miles from Martha's Vineyard Airport.

A private Mass in memory of Kennedy and his wife was planned today at a New York City church where his mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, formerly prayed.

The uniform was one of several gifts to be presented to President Kennedy, said Charlie Wangner, a retired Texas Rangers executive who was with the team when it was called the Washington Senators.

The late Ed Doherty, who was then-general manager of the Senators and a friend of the Kennedys, convinced the new president to throw out the first pitch in April 1961.

At that time, the tradition was for the president to throw out the first pitch on Opening Day and give the president a gold pass "to get into Major League Baseball games," said Wangner, who was controller of the 1961 Senators and now lives in Arlington.

"Ed also wanted to give him other gifts and called Lefty Gomez, a great pitcher who worked for Wilson Sporting Goods at the time," Wangner said. "He agreed to make a small uniform for the president's son."

When the uniform wasn't ready by Opening Day, the team presented Kennedy with the pass and another gift, a club book for his wife, said Wangner.

At season's end, Doherty was forced out as manager. The uniform wasn't delivered to Kennedy.

"It's a shame it was never presented to him," said Wangner. "Ed's intentions were always to give him the uniform, but the circumstances never presented the right time and then he was gone from the team."

When the uniform was later given to Wangner, he transferred with the team when it moved to Arlington in 1972 and was senior vice president for administration when he retired. He loaned it to the museum when it opened in 1994.

Houston loses to Arizona

HOUSTON (AP) — The Arizona Diamondbacks finished an eight-game road trip with three consecutive victories, which changed the mood of manager Buck Showalter after the trip's 1-4 start.

"We've done a good job the last three nights. To finish this road trip 4-4 is encouraging. It's nice to win three games like these," Showalter said after the Diamondbacks defeated the Houston Astros 2-1 Thursday night.

Andy Benes led Arizona with a solo homer and six strong innings on the mound.

"I've only hit six in 10 years, so I don't have the right to pound my chest," he said. "I'm just happy I hit one when we won."

The Diamondbacks are in their longest winning streak since they won four in a row June 13-16. Houston has lost three straight after winning eight consecutive games.

Benes (6-9) allowed one run and six hits in six innings, striking out six. His homer led off the third against Jose Lima (13-5).

The Astros stranded 12 runners, including the bases loaded in the first, fourth and seventh innings. Matt Mantei pitched the ninth for his 14th save and fourth since being traded to Arizona.

Following Benes' first homer since April 10, 1998, Tony Womack and David Dellucci singled. Womack advanced on a forceout and scored on Matt Williams' sacrifice fly.

Houston scored its only run in the fourth when Derek Bell doubled and scored on Paul Bako's single.

Benes got out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the first when he got Richard Hidalgo to hit into a double play. With two outs and the bases loaded in the fourth, Benes got Bill Spiers to fly out.

Houston loaded the bases again in the seventh off reliever Gregg Olson. But Greg Swindell forced pinch-hitter Matt Mieske to ground out to end the threat.

Lima gave up two runs and seven hits in eight innings. He also struck out seven.

The throw was wild for an error, and when the ball went into short left field, DiSarcina took off for third, which was occupied by Decker. DiSarcina was tagged out in a rundown. Velarde followed with a run-scoring single to cut Texas' lead to 6-5.

In the sixth, Todd Zeile's 12th homer and Mateo's run-scoring single made it 8-5. Mateo had another RBI single in the eighth.

TV looks for one right answer, when there're many — or none

Frazier Moore
The Associated Press

If there's one thing we feel certain about, it's that each of us should strive to be certain about everything. After all, information breeds clarity, doesn't it? And in the information age, answers are ours for the taking. Just do it! Doubt is for wimps.

Our craving for certainty is a hunger that TV shares (doubt is difficult to illustrate and TV is a visual medium). TV stirs that appetite within us.

Of this we have been sadly reminded by the nonstop TV coverage of the death of John Kennedy Jr., his wife and sister-in-law. A plane crashed, people died and their bodies were recovered. Their ashes were carried by the wind to the sea. But beyond that and the gruesome details, we needed, and still need, to satisfy the larger whys.

So this past week we viewers looked to on-air commentators who might identify some cosmic reason, some unified theory to explain these familiar mysteries.

Set aside for a moment even more daunting issues of life and death. What about the question, "Are the Kennedys cursed as a family, or aren't they? Yes or no?" If TV people dwell on it persistently enough, the answer will emerge.

Or so we insist. Our faith in the elucidating powers of TV isn't limited to the news it covers. When we watch most comedies and dramas, we take part in a TV tit-for-tat: By sticking around until the final commercial, we are rewarded with whodunit or a fitting moral or the sight of a reassuring hug.

Thanks in no small part to TV entertainment, "closure" is a buzzword of our time. Sometimes TV throws us a curve.

On rare occasions, people on TV flat-out confess they don't know the answer to the riddle. Sometimes a TV show doesn't tie things up by the final fadeout. Sometimes even the most rudimentary closure is denied us.

During a recent seminar at Manhattan's Museum of Television & Radio, producer-writer Edward Zwick disclosed the most inflammatory issue in his TV dramas. It isn't drugs, sex or violence, said the co-creator of "thirtysomething."

Instead, Zwick declared, the hot-button issue "for which we've received as much vitriol as any conversation about abortion," is ambivalence.

The man and woman of Zwick's upcoming ABC drama, "Once and Again," are divorced parents each trying to reconcile feelings of desire, guilt, fear, responsibility — and beginning to suspect that no quick fix is forthcoming. Ambivalence?

"I actually think that that's one of the last great taboo subjects," Zwick said. "I think people are terrified of the inner conflict."

For many of us, the inner conflict raged in the aftermath (and coverage) of the Columbine High School shootings. The only question anyone could phrase was, "Why?" But the available

"because" were maddeningly varied and often at odds.

Many of us shared a yearning to make those deaths in Colorado emblematic of something meaningful, to find in them a lesson to apply to our own lives.

How can we prevent that tragedy in our community, within our family, we asked ourselves? No remedy — better schools, better parents, better laws, better music — seemed likely to find consensus. Not in the country. Not even, perhaps, within each of us. And we were left as haunted by this lack of resolution as we were by the tragedy itself.

We discounted, or tried to dismiss our jumble of thoughts and feelings that were likely to serve us in no clear-cut way, yet still demanded recognition.

"The test of a first-rate intelligence," wrote F. Scott Fitzgerald, "is the ability to hold two opposed ideas in the mind at the same time."

TV overwhelmingly prefers a different style: survival of the fittest. It's one side waging battle with another, as if there were a single correct answer that, belted loud enough, will emerge as the winner.

Just recall a couple of the news-talk programs' titles. On CNBC there's "Hardball" (strike out the opposition!). On CNN there's "Crossfire" (blow the enemy away before he pulls the trigger!).

Maybe it's time someone confronted the final taboo by launching The Ambivalence Channel. It would be a place where more than one answer goes into a solution. Where saying, "I don't know," wouldn't translate as failure.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Bush lags behind in small donations

AUSTIN (AP) — George W. Bush, the runaway leader in the presidential money race, lags behind several competitors in one measure — his percentage of donations from the multitudes who write checks for $25 instead of $1,000.

Some political analysts say small-dollar donors help measure the breadth of a candidate's grassroots support. But small vs. big may also simply reflect differing fund-raising strategies.

Just over 5 percent of Bush's record-setting $37 million haul came from contributions of under $200, according to an analysis by the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonpartisan, non-profit research organization.

As of June 30, 74,000 people had donated to Bush. His campaign said 30,663 or 41.4 percent, gave $200 or less.

Other candidates who raised much less money had a bigger percentage of small contributions, according to the center and campaigns. Since candidates don't have to itemize small contributions by donor, the Associated Press requested the number of donors from campaigns.

Among Republicans, some candidates such as commentator Alan Keyes and conservative activist Gary Bauer had especially high small-donor tallies.

Keyes raised $1.4 million or 73.7 percent of his money in small donations, accounting for 94.5 percent of his donors. Bauer got $857,515 or 24.9 percent in small contributions, accounting for 85.4 percent of his donors.

Among Democrats, Vice President Al Gore got $2 million or 11.1 percent of his money from small contributions. The percentage of donors giving $200 or less was 85.9 percent in the second quarter.

Former New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley got just 2.6 percent of his money — $299,710 — from small donors. Of his estimated 13,335 contributors, 26.6 percent gave $200 or less.

"The idea of the campaign finance laws is you want to encourage small contributions, because people who are giving small amounts aren't going to be the people asking and expecting favors from the elected officials," said Paul Hendrie of the Center for Responsive Politics, which studies the role of money in federal politics.

Banner

from the Estelle Unit of Death Row. Suspicions of future disappointment were confirmed for the next two days as security refused to admit her to see Dickerson. His HIV-positive status and subsequent health problems made Banner's need to see him all the more urgent.

After a third day of wrestling with the jail break, scheduling problems and quarrels with prison security, Banner finally gained a four hour visit with her 'godson,' granted specially for those who travel over 300 miles to visit.

As guards led her through various parts of the Unit, she remembers one razor-wire enclosed courtyard in particular that "reminded me of the movie 'Shawshank Redemption'."

The scene, she said, impressed upon her that prisons are not, in fact, overrun with generic 'young punk' offenders.

"These inmates are not just young people on drugs who went out and killed people for money," Banner pledged. "I saw all these grandpas and great-grandpas walking around." The myriad ages and backgrounds of all the inmates proved to Banner that inmates are "names, and not just numbers."

The emotional visit Banner shared with Dickerson further strengthened her attitude that one should keep an open mind and get informed before making judgments.

"But people don't want their minds changed," she explained, a note of disappointment in her voice. "Revenge feels good to them."

So what are her family's opinions on her quest? Well, Banner is not even sure what she thinks herself.

"I'm wondering where all this is going and if I'll be up to it as a follower of Christ," she confessed. Although cautious, her husband, children, pastor, bishop and friends are, overall, supportive.

"Our daughters—well, the whole thing kind of scares them," Banner wrote in a letter. "But I'm not ready to go embrace all those inmates. I'm only called for James."

According to Banner, Dickerson claims full responsibility for his actions and has no dreams of getting off Death Row. She said he is honest and has never been reprimanded for disciplinary reasons while in prison.

"But I'm sure there are many other hardened criminals on Death Row," said Banner, adding, "I don't know them like James, but I (still) couldn't have them put to death."

Banner feels strongly that there is basically one, all-encompassing issue at the heart of her experience: either "you do or you don't believe that all life is sacred."

"Do we stand up for only one stage of life or all of life?" she asked. "All of it should be protected from any form of violence."

Beyond the stacks of illustrated, handwritten letters she has received, Banner believes her relationship with Dickerson has given her something far more valuable. She acknowledges a heightened respect for life's sanctity and a more extensive knowledge of the death penalty issue as two of the many lessons she has drawn from her experience.

"Go meet someone on Death Row. Your mind would be changed," Banner declared.

Another somber memorial for Kennedys

NEW YORK — In public and private, memories of John F. Kennedy Jr. and his wife are being resurrected in the city where they lived.

A day after casting the ashes of Kennedy, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy and Lauren Bessette into the sea, their relatives gathered for a memorial Mass.

An invitation-only group of about 350 people, including President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton, was expected today at the Church of St. Thomas More in Manhattan.

The stately, 126-year-old church is where Kennedy's mother, Jacqueline Onassis, often found solace in her faith.

The privacy of the occasion — and of Thursday's service aboard a Navy destroyer off the Massachusetts coast — contrasted with a public Mass held by New York's Irish com-

Shuttle blasts off despite problems

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With NASA's first female space shuttle commander at the controls, Columbia carried the world's most powerful X-ray telescope safely into orbit today despite an electrical problem on the way up.

Air Force Col. Eileen Collins was barely nine seconds into her flight when she radioed down that she had a fuel cell problem.

Twenty-eight tense seconds later, after scrutinizing the data, Mission Control informed Collins and the four other astronauts the problem appeared to be a short circuit in an electrical system.

The drop in voltage, which lasted only half a second, caused the loss of a controller on two of Columbia's three main engines. Each engine has two controllers, and only one is needed for an engine to operate properly and propel the shuttle into orbit.

Columbia ended up seven miles short of its intended orbit, however, when the engines cut off one second early because of a low supply of liquid oxygen. As it turned out, the gap didn't matter for the release of the $1.5 billion Chandra X-ray Observatory, scheduled for later in the morning.

Gunaker resigns as Bush finance chairman
WASHINGTON — Insisting he doesn't want to become an issue for "anti-gun people," an assault weapons manufacturer quit as presidential hopeful George W. Bush's finance chairman in Maine after inquiries were made about his campaign post.

Richard E. Dyke, a political veteran who has expressed strong pro-gun views, said he resigned voluntarily Thursday after some two months on the job. Don Evans, the Bush campaign's national fund-raising chief, confirmed he accepted the resignation.

"I don't need anti-gun people making an issue out of it when he (Bush) has nothing to do with the business I run," Dyke said in an interview shortly after he resigned from the Texas governor's Republican presidential campaign. "I just don't want to be any baggage."

481 Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of Judges, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

JEPHTHAH
JEPHTHAH, ANXIOUS FOR VICTORY OVER THE AMMONITES, VOWED TO THE LORD: WHOEVER FIRST COMETH FORTH FROM HIS HOUSE TO GREET HIM WOULD BE SACRIFICED TO THE LORD... NOW, HIS ONLY DAUGHTER IS THE FIRST ONE...

OH, MY DAUGHTER, MY DAUGHTER!
THIS DAY AM I DEALT A HARD BLOW, MY DAUGHTER—VICTORY IS TURNED TO SADNESS!
FOR KNOW, NOW...

I HAVE MADE A VOW UNTO THE LORD—AND I CAN NOT GO BACK ON IT!

WHATSOEVER THOU HAST VOWED UNTO THE LORD, FATHER, DO UNTO ME ACCORDING TO THY WORD! ONLY GRANT ME ONE WISH...

AND JEPHTHAH'S DAUGHTER ASKS ONLY TO BE ALLOWED TWO MONTHS TIME IN WHICH TO GO UP INTO THE MOUNTAINS WITH HER FRIENDS AND BEWAIL THE FACT THAT SHE WILL NEVER BE A MOTHER IN ISRAEL.

Next Week THE WAILING VIRGINS!

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCRAPBOOK

THIS DEVOTIONAL & DIRECTORY IS MADE POSSIBLE BY THESE BUSINESSES WHO ENCOURAGE ALL OF US TO ATTEND WORSHIP SERVICES.
